

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

3d Mar 1924

HARVARD LAW LIBRARY

Received Sept 29. 1892

AMERICAN AND ENGLISH RAILROAD CASES.

A complete collection of all the railroad law as decided by the American, English and Canadian courts of last resort.

Elaborate notes to the more important cases. As a means of giving the working lawyer a full collection of all the cases on the subjects treated, together with able and judicious criticism upon the points presented, they are simply invaluable.

AMERICAN AND ENGLISH CORPORATION CASES.

This series presents a full collection of the cases in all the courts of last resort, both in America and England, on the law of private and municipal corporations other than railroad companies.

1.—SCOPE. Among the topics treated of will be the following:

PRIVATE CORPORATIONS.—Agency, Assessments, Building Associations, Dissolution of Corporations, Dividends and Earnings, Ecclesiastical and Religious Corporations, Elections, Mandamus, Officers, Organization, Powers, Stock and Stockholders, Taxation.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.—Assessments, Bonds, Powers, Ordinances, Poor Laws, Streets, Taxes, Intoxicating Liquors, Injuries to Person and Property, etc., etc.

2.—NOTES. The annotations are a special feature, being very full and exhaustive.

These works are issued in monthly Parts, each Part containing not less than 324 pages. Three Parts make a complete volume. When Part 3 is published, the Parts are returned to the publisher by the subscriber, and are bound in best law sheep and returned by mail WITHOUT CHARGE FOR BINDING. The subscription price is $4.50 per volume, including NOTES OF CASES.

EDWARD THOMPSON CO., Publishers,
Northport, Long Island, N. Y.

724 121
+3 CH

THE
AMERICAN AND ENGLISH
ENCYCLOPÆDIA
OF
LAW.

COMPILED UNDER THE EDITORIAL SUPERVISION OF

JOHN HOUSTON MERRILL,

Late Editor of the American and English Railroad Cases and the American and English Corporation Cases.

VOLUME XIX.

80 ✓
NORTHPORT, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.:
EDWARD THOMPSON COMPANY, LAW PUBLISHERS.
1892.

S
US
013
AME

TX
A 51236

Rec. Sept. 29, 1892.

COPYRIGHT, 1892

By EDWARD THOMPSON CO.

MADE BY THE
WERNER PRINTING & LITHO. CO.
AKRON, OHIO.

PARTIAL LIST OF CONTRIBUTORS, VOL. XIX.

Prescription ,	A. B. WEIMER, of the Philadelphia Bar.
Presumptions ,	 {  GEORGE STUART PATTERSON, of the Philadelphia Bar. WILLIAM DRAPER LEWIS, of the Phil- adelphia Bar.
Presumptions of Fact ,
Prisons ,	M. E. ROSSER, of the Editorial Staff Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
Private Ways ,	D. M. MICKEY, of the Editorial Staff Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
Privileged Communications ,	D. M. MICKEY, of the Editorial Staff Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
Probate and Letters of Adminis- tration ,	ALBERT B. WEIMER, of the Philadel- phia Bar.
Production of Documents ,	L. M. BERKELEY, of the Editorial Staff Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
Prohibition ,	D. M. MICKEY, of the Editorial Staff Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
Public Lands ,	H. DENT MINOR, of the Editorial Staff Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
Public Officers ,	FRANK H. BOWLBY, of the Editorial Staff Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
Purchase Money Mortgages ,	M. E. ROSSER, of the Editorial Staff Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
Questions of Law and Fact ,	L. M. BERKELEY, of the Editorial Staff Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
Railroad Pools ,	LOUIS BOISOT, JR., of the Chicago Bar.
Railroad Securities ,	D. M. MICKEY, of the Editorial Staff Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
Railroads ,	H. DENT MINOR, of the Editorial Staff Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
Real Covenants ,	CHAS. CHAUNCEY BINNEY, of the Phil- adelphia Bar.
Real Property ,	PHILIP H. GOEPP, of the Editorial Staff Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
Reasonable Doubt ,	THOMAS J. MICHIE, of the Editorial Staff Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
Recaption ,	LORENZO D. BULETTE, of the Editorial Staff Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
Words and Phrases ,	THOMAS J. MICHIE, of the Editorial Staff Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.

TABLE OF TITLES AND DEFINITIONS.

See index for numerous sub-titles and definitions contained in the notes.

- Practicable—Practicably 1
 Practical, 1
 Practice, 1
 Practicing, 2
PRAYER (IN EQUITY). See Equity
 Pleading, 2
 Precarious, 2
PRECATORY. See Powers; Trusts;
 Wills, 2
 Precept, 2
 Precincts, 2
 Precise, 3
 Predominant, 3
PRE-EMPTION. See Public Lands, 3
 Pre-existing, 3
 Prefer; Preferred; Preference, 3
 Pregnant, 3
 Prejudice, 4
PREMEDITATION; PREMEDITATED, ETC.
 See Homicide; Deliberate, 4
 Premises, 4
 Premium, 6
 Prerogative, 6
PRESCRIPTION, 6
 Presence, 31
 Present, 32
 Presentation, 32
 Presentment, 32
 Preside; Presiding, 32
PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, 32
 Presume, 36
PRESUMPTIONS, 36
PRETENSE. See False Pretenses, 82
PRETERMITTED. See Legacies and Devises; Statutes of Descent and Distribution, 82
 Pretext, 82
 Prevailing Party, 82
 Prevent, 82
 Previous, 82
 Price, 82
 Prima Facie Case or Evidence, 83
 Primage, 83
 Primary Election, 83
 Prime, 83
PRINCIPAL AND ACCESSORY. See Accessory, 83
PRINCIPAL AND AGENT. See Agency, 83
PRINCIPAL AND SURETY. See Surety-ship, 83
 Principles, 83
 Print; Printer, etc., 84
PRINTS AND LABELS. See Labels;
 Trademark, 84
 Priority, 84
PRISONS, 85
 Private, 94
PRIVATE WAYS, 95
 Privilege, 120
PRIVILEGED COMMUNICATIONS, 12
 Privies; Privity, 156
 Prize, 157
 Prize-fight, 157
 Probability, 161
PROBABLE CAUSE. See Malicious Prosecution; Cause; Searches and Seizures, 161
PROBATE AND LETTERS OF ADMINIS-TRATION, 161
 Procedendo, 218
 Procedure, 219
 Proceeding, 220
 Proceed, 221
 Proceeds, 221
PROCESE, 221
 Processioning, 225
 Process Verbal, 225
 Proclamation, 225
 Procure, 226
 Produce; Products, 226
 Production, 227
PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS, 227
PROFANITY. See Blasphemy, 257
 Profession; Professional, 257 Profits, 257
PROFITS A PRENDRE, 259
PROHIBITION, 263
 Promise, 282

TABLE OF TITLES AND DEFINITIONS.

- PROMISSORY NOTE. See Bills and Notes, 283
- PROMOTERS. See Corporations, 283
- Prompt, 283
- Proof, 283
- Proper, 283
- Property, 283
- Proposal, 289
- Proprietary, 289
- Proprietor, 289
- Propriety, 290
- Pro Rata, 290
- Prosecute, 290
- PROSECUTING ATTORNEY. See District Attorney; Public Officers, 290
- Prosecution, 290
- Prosecuting Witness, 291
- Prostitute; Prostitution, 291
- Protect, 292
- PROTEST. 292
- Protestant, 298
- Protestation, 298
- Provided; Proviso, 298
- Provisional, 299
- Provisional Remedy, 299
- Provisions, 299
- PROVISO. See Provided, 299
- Provoke, 300
- Proximate and Remote Cause, 300
- PROXY. See Stockholders, 302
- Prudential, 302
- Public, 302
- Public Administration — Administrator, 305.
- PUBLIC DOCUMENTS. See Books as Evidence; Documents; Elections; Judicial Notice; Records, 305
- Public House, 305
- PUBLIC LANDS. 305
- PUBLIC OFFICERS. 378
- Public Peace, 563
- Public Place, 563
- Public Policy, 565
- PUBLIC PROSECUTOR. See District Attorney; Public Officers, 566
- PUBLIC RECORDS. See Records, 566
- Publication—Publish, 567
- Publisher, 568
- Pueblo, 568
- PUFFER. See Auctions and Auctioneers; Fraudulent Sales, 568
- PUNCTUATION. See Interpretation; Statutes; Wills, 568
- Punishable, 568
- Punishment, 569
- PUNITIVE DAMAGES. See Damages; Exemplary Damages, 570
- PUPIL. See Education; Parent and Child; School, 570
- Purchase, 571
- Purchase Money, 573
- PURCHASE MONEY MORTGAGES. 574
- Purport, 590
- Purposely, 591
- PURPRESTURE. See Nuisances; Interjunctions, 591
- Pursuance, 591
- PUTTING IN FEAR. See Robbery, 591
- PUTS (IN CONTRACTS). See Gambling Contracts, 591
- Qualification, 592
- Qualified, 592
- Qualify, 592
- QUALITY. See Implied Warranty; Indictment; Pleading; Representations; Warranty, 593
- Quando Acciderint, 593
- Quanti Minoris, 593
- QUANTITY. See Indictment; Pleading, 593
- Quantum Damnificatus, 593
- Quantum Meruit, 593
- QUANTUM VALEBAT. See Assumpsit, 593
- Quarantine, 594
- QUAKE CLAUDUM FREGIT. See Trespass, 595
- Quarrel, 595
- Quarry, 595
- Quash, 596
- Quasi, 596
- QUASI CORPORATIONS; QUASI MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS. See Corporations; Franchises; Counties; Municipal Corporations; Municipal Securities; Schools; Township, 596
- Quasi Crimes, 597
- QUASI DEPOSIT. See Deposit, 597
- Quasi Derelict, 597
- QUASI PUBLIC RECORDS. See Records, 597
- Quay, 597
- Question, 597
- QUESTIONS OF LAW AND FACT. 598
- QUIA TIMET. See Bills Quia Timet, 659
- QUICK DISPATCH. See Demurrage; Lay Days, 659
- QUICK WITH CHILD. See Abortion; Big; Child; Medical Jurisprudence; Pregnant, 659
- QUIET ENJOYMENT. See Covenant; Implied Covenant; Lease; Real Covenants, 659
- QUIETING TITLE. See Bill to Remove Clouds, 659
- QUI TAM ACTIONS. See Penalties, 660
- Quota, 660
- QUO WARRANTO. 660
- RACING. See Gaming, 686
- Radius, 686
- RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS. 686
- RAILROAD POOLS. 691
- RAILROAD SECURITIES. 694
- RAILROADS. 775
- RAIN-WATER. See Surface Water, 945

TABLE OF TITLES AND DEFINITIONS.

Raise, 945	Realize, 1027
Rank, 945	REAL PROPERTY , 1028
Ransom, 946	Rear, 1076
RAPE , 946	Reasonable, 1077
RASURE . See Alteration of Instru-	Reasonable Care, 1078
ments, 969	Reasonable Cause, 1079
Rate, 970	REASONABLE DOUBT , 1079
Ratification, 970	Reasonable Time, 1089
Ravine, 970	Rebuttal—Rebutting Evidence, 1093
Read, 970	Rebutter, 1093
Ready, 971	RECAPTION , 1093
Real, 971	RECAPTURE . See Capture; Interna-
Real Actions, 971	tional Law, 1111
REAL COVENANTS , 973	Receptor, 1111
REAL EFFECTS . See Effects, 1027	RECEIPTS , 1111
REAL ESTATE BROKERS . See Brokers,	Receive, 1131
1027

THE AMERICAN AND ENGLISH. ENCYCLOPÆDIA OF LAW.

PRACTICABLE — PRACTICABLY.—The word “practicable” means that which may be done, practiced, or accomplished—that which is performable, feasible, possible; and the adverb “practicably” means in a practicable manner.¹

PRACTICAL.—See note 2.

PRACTICE.—The form, manner and order of conducting and carrying on suits or prosecutions in the courts through their various stages, according to the principles of law and the rules laid down by the respective courts.³ It may include pleading, but is usually employed as excluding both pleading and evidence, and to designate all the incidental acts and steps in the course of bring-

1. Streeter v. Streeter, 43 Ill. 157.
See also State v. Milwaukee Co., 25 Wis. 339; Nast v. Jewett, 61 Vt. 501.
See also NEAREST; POSSIBLE.

Reasonably Practicable.—A direction that a set of affirmative and negative rules shall be observed “so far as is reasonably practicable,” will not, unless under very exceptional circumstances indeed, apply to the negative rules. “It is always possible not to do that which you are forbidden to do.” Wales v. Thomas, 16 Q. B. D. 340; 2 Times Rep. 53; and it was accordingly held in that case that the rule in § 51, English Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1872, 35 & 36 Vict. ch. 76, prohibiting firing a shot in a mine until the men are out of it, is unqualified by the words at the commencement of the section that the rules thereby laid down “shall be observed so far as is reasonably practicable.”

All Practicable Speed.—An English statute provides that every person having in his possession or under his charge an animal affected with a contagious disease shall with “all practicable speed” give notice to the police of the fact. Held, that under any reasonable construction of the words “all practicable speed,” it is necessary that the person shall have knowledge of the animal’s being diseased before it can be said that he neglects to give such notice. Nichols v. Hall, L. R., 8 C. P. 322; 5 Moak’s Eng. Rep. 300.

2. “Practical Location” of a division line is identical in meaning with actual location. Both call for a mutual acquiescence in a known line, and for a long period of time. Hubbell v. McCulloch, 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 287. See also ADVERSE POSSESSION, vol. 1, p. 248.

A “Practical Construction” of a constitution refers to practice sanctioned by general consent. Farmers’ etc. Bank v. Smith, 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 69.

3. Bouvier’s Law Dict.; Burrill’s Law Dict.; Abbott’s Law Dict.; Whart. Law Lexicon; Bowling v. Brier, 87 Ind. 395.

ing matters pleaded, to trial and proof, and procuring and entering judgment on them.¹

PRACTICING.—See note 2.

PRAYER (in Equity).—See EQUITY PLEADING, vol. 6, p. 70.

PRECARIOUS.—See note 3.

PRECATORY.—See POWERS; TRUSTS; WILLS.

PRECEPT.—A command or mandate in writing of equal im with writ or process.⁴

PRECINCTS.—Precinct is a general word and not a technical and indicates any district marked out and defined.⁵

1. Abbott's Law Dict.

The rules adopted by a court to facilitate the transaction of business before it in a proper and orderly manner. Anderson's Law Dict., citing Butler v. Young, 1 Flip. (U. S.) 279; Bowlies v. Brier, 87 Ind. 395.

Practice, in the larger sense, is the mode of proceeding by which a legal right is enforced, as distinguished from the law which gives or declares the right, sometimes convertible with procedure. Payson v. Minors, L. R., 7 Q. B. Div. 333.

2. Practicing Law.—In McCargo v. State (Miss. 1887), 1 So. Rep. 161, it was held that a retired lawyer who tries a single case for a neighbor gratuitously is not a practicing lawyer, liable to a penalty for practicing without having paid the privilege license tax. The court said: "It is only the practicing lawyer who is required by the statute to pay a privilege tax. The term practicing, as used in the statute, implies something more than a single act or effort. Webst. Dict. A retired lawyer who conducts but one suit in court for a friend or neighbor, without fee or reward, is not thereby brought in the classification of a practicing lawyer; and for him to do so without a privilege tax license is no more a violation of law than it would be for a retired dentist to extract gratuitously a tooth for another without first obtaining a privilege tax license, as practicing dentists are required to do."

In State v. Bryan, 98 N. Car. 644, it was held that to constitute a practicing of law within the prohibition of the statute, it is necessary that the person charged with its violation shall have customarily or habitually held himself out to the public as a lawyer, or that he demanded compensation for his services as such; and that that a person on one occasion act as an attorney for a party to an action where there was no evidence that he did so in other cases, or that he received or demanded compensation for his services, is not sufficient evidence to go to the jury to be considered in determining whether he practiced law in the meaning of the statute, but it is not conclusive of fact.

3. The circumstances of an exception are "precarious" only when his conduct and character present evidence of improvidence or recklessness in the management of the estate, or of his own, as, in the opinion of prudent and discreet men, endangers its security. Shields v. Shields, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 56. See also EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, vol. 7, p. 1.

4. Adams v. Vose, 1 Gray (N. H.) 58.

5. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Chey, 113 U. S. 516, 524; and in that case it was held that in the connection in which it stood, it signified a district inferior to a county and superior to a township.

The word "precinct," as used in the officer's return, means the territory within which the officer may be discharged the duties of his office cannot fairly be interpreted as meaning the whole State. Brooks v. N. H., 124 Mass. 172.

Under a Kentucky statute relating to the taxing of railroads, which provides that the rolling stock and estate shall be taxed for the purpose of each county, city, town, or precinct in which any part of the railroad is located, it was held that the "precinct" cannot be construed to mean a common school district.

PRECISE.—See note 1.

PREDOMINANT is understood to be something greater or superior in power and influence to others, with which it is connected or compared.²

PRE-EMPTION.—See PUBLIC LANDS.

PRE-EXISTING.—See note 3.

PREFER, PREFERRED, PREFERENCE.—(See also ASSIGNMENTS FOR THE BENEFIT OF CREDITORS, vol. 1, p. 560; COMPOSITION WITH CREDITORS, vol. 3, p. 398; DEBTOR AND CREDITOR, vol. 5, p. 184; DIVIDENDS, vol. 5, p. 743; INSOLVENCY, vol. 11, p. 212; STOCK).—"Preferred" means that the thing to which it is attached has some advantage over another thing of the same character, which but for this advantage would be like the other.⁴

PREGNANT.—See note 5. (See also ABORTION, vol. 1, p. 30; ASSAULT, vol. 1, p. 821; BASTARDY, vol. 2, p. 137; BIG, vol. 2, p. 191; BILL DE BENE ESSE, vol. 2, p. 289; CHILD, vol. 3, pp. 229, 233; MEDICAL JURISPRUDENCE, vol. 15, p. 211.)

Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Johnson (Ky. 1889), 11 S. W. Rep. 666.

The term "precinct," as used in article IV, § 4, Const. of Wisconsin, which provides that the legislature shall organize assembly districts "consisting of contiguous territory and bounded by county, precinct, town, or ward lines," has reference only to certain districts having similar functions to those of towns in territorial times, and which passed away under the formation of the first legislative districts, after the admission of the State, and the term is no longer used, except, perhaps occasionally interchangeably with election districts. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Oconto, 50 Wis. 196.

By statute provision the warden and deputy warden of the State prison may serve legal processes within the "precincts" of the prison. The "precincts" embrace not only the prison building, but the grounds connected therewith. Hix v. Sumner, 50 Me. 290.

Precinct and Village Distinguished.—A village is a municipal corporation created for the purpose of local government, and may sue and be sued; a precinct is a political subdivision of a county, possessing no corporate powers. Accordingly, it was held that illegal voting at a village election was not punishable under §§ 181, 185, of the Crim. Code of Nebraska, which prohibits illegal voting at a "precinct."

State v. Chichester (Neb. 1891), 47 N. W. Rep. 934.

1. When such terms as "clear, precise, explicit, unequivocal and indubitable," are used by the courts in defining the requisite proof of a particular fact to be made out by verbal testimony, it is meant that a conviction shall be fastened in the minds of jurors as strong as verbal testimony is able to convey. It is meant that the witnesses shall be found to be credible; that the facts to which they testify are distinctly remembered; that details are narrated exactly and in due order, and that their statements are true. Absolute certainty is, of course, out of the question. Spencer v. Colt, 89 Pa. St. 314.

2. Shaw, C. J., in Matthews v. Bliss, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 48.

3. The words "pre-existing debt," in their natural meaning, include all debts, previously contracted, whether they have become payable or not. Fletcher, appellant, 136 Mass. 340.

4. State v. Cheraw etc. R. Co., 16 S. Car. 530.

5. In an indictment, for administering a medicine to a woman with intent to produce a miscarriage, the words "woman with child" are equivalent to "pregnant woman." Eckhardt v. People, 83 N. Y. 462; 38 Am. Rep. 462.

A woman is "pregnant with a quick child" when the child has become

PREJUDICE—(See also BIAS, vol. 2, p. 190, n; JURY AND JURY TRIAL, vol. 12, p. 352; CHANGE OF VENUE, vol. 3, p. 96; JUDGE vol. 12, p. 52; LOCAL, vol. 13, p. 987; REMOVAL OF CAUSES).—I must mean an opinion or judgment in regard to the case, formed beforehand, without examination, or a prepossession.¹

PREMEDITATION, PREMEDITATED, etc.—See HOMICIDE, vol. 9, p. 529; DELIBERATE, vol. 5, p. 520.

PREMISES—(See also DEED, vol. 5, p. 454).—The term premise is, in common parlance, used to signify the land with its appurtenances, but its usual and appropriate meaning in conveyance is the thing devised or granted by the deed.²

quicken in the womb. Evans v. People, 49 N. Y. 89.

Pretended or Alleged Pregnancy.—The uncertainty in point of fact of the precise period of gestation, gives occasion to a proceeding at common law, when a widow is suspected to feign herself with child, in order to produce a supposititious heir to the estate. In this case at common law, the heir, or other person interested, immediately or contingently, may have a writ de ventre inspiciendo, to examine whether she be with child or not; and if she be, to keep her under proper restraint till delivered; which is also entirely conformable to the practice of the civil law; but if the widow be proved not pregnant, the presumptive heir or successor to the estate shall be admitted to the inheritance, though liable to lose it again, on the birth of a child within the legal period.

The writ de ventre inspiciendo, which is said to be of common right, and not in the discretion of the court, directs the sheriff or sergeant to summon a jury of twelve men, and as many women, by whom the female is to be examined (tractari per ubera et ventrem), in the presence of the men, the exigency of the case dispensing at once with common decency and respectful deference to the sex. If this mandate were strictly observed, according to its terms, it would be, as Mr. Hargrave justly observes, an intolerable grievance. It seems, however, that the courts have, sometimes at least, winked at the men's withdrawing themselves during the search. It appears from some of the reports that it was so managed in Willoughby's case, 2 Cro. (Eliz.) 566; although according to Croke, the writ was literally complied with. At all events, for more than a century past, the court have been accustomed to make a previous order that the writ should issue unless by a designated time, and from time to time afterwards, the female shall submit to a satisfactory examination by women of skill, who may report her condition to the court; and that the actual employment of the writ seems to have been avoided. 1 Mino Inst. 409, citing Reg. Brev. Orig. 227 1 Th. Co. Lit. 143-44 and n. (7); 1 Abr. Ventre Inspicio (A); Willoughby's Case, 2 Cro. (Eliz.) 566; Theake Case, 3 Cro. (Jac.) 685; Aiscough Case, 2 P. Wms. 591; Ex parte Willoughby, 4 Bro. C. C. 90.

There is yet another instance of common law which occasions an examination as to a woman's alleged pregnancy. When capitally convicted a woman might plead her pregnancy. The judge directed that a jury of twelve matrons should inquire into the fact; and, if she was found to be pregnant, execution was stayed until she delivered. 4 Bl. Com. 394. In S v. Arden, 1 Bay (S. Car.) 489, the jury found the prisoner not pregnant. The plea was held inadmissible. Holman v. State, 13 Ark. 105, where the prisoner had been sentenced to the penitentiary for a year.

For an interesting account of such an examination, see 9 Cent. L. J. 94. Also JURY AND JURY TRIAL, vol. 12, p. 321.

1. Hungerford v. Cushing, 2405.

2. New Jersey Zinc Co. v. New Jersey Franklinite Co., 13 N. J. Eq. 15 N. J. Eq. 418.

Construed in a city charter requiring owners to keep their premises in repair, etc., as not applying to adjacent sidewalk and street. Amos v. Fond du Lac, 46 Wis. 695.

Definition.PREMISES.*Definition.

The word never describes personalty. Carr v. Fire Assoc., 60 N. H. 520.

The word "premises," as used in an Ohio act regulating the sale of liquor, was held to include both land and tenements. Bowers v. Pomeroy, 21 Ohio St. 188.

In the redelivery covenant of a lease of a factory building and land, the word was held not to include a portable wood cutting machine worked by a belt attached to the factory. Holbrook v. Chamberlin, 116 Mass. 155.

In Fuller v. Davis, 4 Duer (N. Y.) 187, the plaintiff had agreed to rent of the defendant the floor and basement of a building at a certain price, in consideration of which, the defendant agreed that the premises and fixtures should be finished in the same way as the store of "B" in the same street. It was held, that premises, as used in the lease, included the buildings as well as the land, and that the defendant was bound to make the roof of the leased property as good as that of "B."

Intoxicating Liquors.—It has been held that within the meaning of an Illinois statute, prohibiting the sale of liquor to be drank upon premises adjacent to the place of sale, a public street or alley fronting the place is included in the word "premises." Bandalow v. People, 90 Ill. 219.

A Kentucky statute permitted distillers to sell spirits at their residences, provided that the residences were "located upon the distillery premises or premises adjacent." A distiller rented at a nominal rent two or three narrow strips of land, connecting his distillery with his residence, a mile and a half distant. Held, that the residence was not upon the "distillery premises or premises adjacent." Creekmore v. Commonwealth (Ky. 1889), 12 S. W. Rep. 628.

Insurance Policy.—In a policy of insurance upon a vessel, and in a clause which read, "If the premises should be vacated in whole or in part, etc.," the word "premises" means the insured property; in that case the vessel. Reid v. Lancaster F. Ins. Co., 19 Hun (N. Y.) 284.

"Premises" in a policy upon a habitation covers the whole property insured, dwellings, outhouses and appurtenances, which together compose the establishment. Heerman v. Adriatic F. Ins. Co., 45 N. Y. Super. Ct. 394.

A fire insurance policy, on a specifically described steam flour mill and machinery, prohibited the keeping of petroleum on "the premises." The insured kept a barrel of petroleum in the engine house adjoining, but not included in the specific description of the premises. The fire originated in the main building. Held, that the petroleum was not on "the premises," and that, even if it were, the insured had a right to keep petroleum on the premises for the purpose of lubricating the insured machinery. Carlin v. Western Assur. Co., 57 Md. 515; 40 Am. Rep. 440.

And to the same effect see Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Germania F. Ins. Co., 40 Wis. 446; Allemania F. Ins. Co. v. Pittsburg Exposition Society (Pa.), 11 Atl. Rep. 572.

See generally FIRE INSURANCE, vol. 7, p. 1032.

In Wills.—Where a testator gave permission to A to occupy a "mansion, house, garden and premises" rent free, it was held that the word "premises" meant "premises in immediate connection with the mansion and without the occupation of which the mansion could not be conveniently occupied and enjoyed" (per Turner, L. J., Lethbridge v. Lethbridge 31 L. J. Ch. 741; 4 De G. F. & J., 352.) A park of 100 acres adjoining the mansion-house was accordingly in that case, held to be included in the word "premises." Lethbridge v. Lethbridge, 30 L. J. Ch. 388; secus, as regards the home farm, though it was contiguous to the mansion-house, and was in hand at the death of the testator. Lethbridge v. Lethbridge, 31 L. J. Ch. 737. In such a connection "premises" is as nearly as possible synonymous with appurtenances. Read v. Read, W. N. (66) 386; 15 W. R. 165. See further Doe d. Hemming v. Willets, 7 C. B. 709.

The word "premises" means "lands and tenements." State v. French, 120 Ind. 229. See also Winlock v. State (Ind.), 23 N. E. Rep. 15; Hilton's Appeal, 116 Pa. St. 351.

In Deeds.—The word premises in the habendum in a deed may refer to the title and interest intended to be conveyed as well as to the land itself. Cummings v. Dearborn, 56 Vt. 441. See also Holbrook v. Debo, 99 Ill. 372; Trull v. Eastman, 3 Met. (Mass.) 121.

PREMIUM.—See note 1.

PREROGATIVE.—This word can hardly be said to have a place in American law. When found in our judicial opinions, it is used generally, not in its accepted legal sense as understood in England, but rather as indicating a legislative or executive power conferred by or claimed under a constitution. Those powers reserved in the prerogative of the monarch in England, and which have caused so much discussion in the English books concerning its scope, extent and limitations, are distributed in the United States between the executive and legislative branches of the government either by express constitutional provisions, or by those implied, as, for example, the granting of corporate franchises, which formerly in England was a prerogative of the king, but which now there is now vested in the legislature, has been always under the constitutions of the States of the Union, a legislative power. The law appertaining to those powers which, under our system, correspond to the king's prerogative, is to be found under the various titles of this work within which it naturally falls.²

PRESCRIPTION.—(See also ADVERSE POSSESSION, vol. 1, p. 2; EASEMENTS, vol. 4, p. 971; EASEMENTS, vol. 6, p. 139; FERRIES, vol. 7, p. 941; FISH AND FISHERIES, vol. 8, p. 23; HIGHWAYS, vol. 9, p. 362; LATERAL AND SUBJACENT SUPPORT, vol. 12, p. 9; LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, vol. 13, p. 667; WATER AND WATER COURSES; WAYS.)

- | | |
|---|---|
| I. Definition, 7. | 5. Peaceable, 22. |
| II. Presumption of Grant, 7. | 6. Acquiescence and Knowledge of the Owner, 23. |
| III. Distinction Between Prescription and Custom, 10. | 7. Extent of User, 24. |
| IV. Character of the Adverse User, 11. | V. Of What a Prescription May Be Gained, 24. |
| 1. Long Continued, 11. | 1. Pasturage, 25. |
| 2. Adverse, 12. | 2. Fisheries, 25. |
| 3. Exclusive, 17. | 3. Private Ways, 25. |
| 4. Continuous, 18. | |

The premises of a deed are all the foreparts of the deed before the habendum (Touch. 75). See also Berry v. Billings, 47 Me. 416. The word "premises" in fact signifies what has gone before; and therefore may with propriety be used in relation to any preceding subject or subjects. Thus where a testator devised a certain messuage and the furniture in it to A for life, and after his decease he gave "the said messuage and premises" to B, the latter devise was held to carry the furniture as well as the messuage. Sanford v. Irby, 4 L. J., O. S. Ch. 23. See also Doe v. Meakin, 2 East 456; Fitzgerald v. Field, 1 Russ. 427.

1. Premium Distinguished from Wager.—To a "wager" or "bet" there are two parties, to a "premium" or reward there is but one party, until the thing or purpose for which it is offered has been accomplished. A "premium" is a reward or recompense for some act done; a "wager" is a stake upon an uncertain event. In a "premium" it is known who is to give before the event in a "wager" it is not known until after the event. Alvord v. Smith, 63 Ir. 62.

For "premium of insurance" see the various titles on INSURANCE.

2. See 1 Bl. Com., ch. 7, and note thereto in Cooley's edition.

4. Highways, 25.
5. Right of Way Over Railroad, 26.
6. Waters, 27.
7. Light and Air, 27.
8. Lateral Support, 28.
9. Offices, 29.

10. Corporate Franchises, 29.
11. Markets, 29.
12. Ferries, 29.
13. Miscellaneous, 29.
- VI. What May Not be Prescribed for, 30.
- VII. Pleading and Evidence, 30.

I. DEFINITION.—Prescription is a mode of acquiring title to incorporeal hereditaments by immemorial or long-continued use.¹

II. PRESUMPTION OF GRANT.—Anciently a technical prescription was required to be established by proof of use and enjoyment beyond the memory of man. If the beginning of the use was shown, the prescription was defeated.² To obviate the uncertainty as to time, the English courts, in the eighteenth century, adopted the fiction of presuming a grant from twenty years possession or use.³ The presumption of a grant from adverse use differs from the ancient technical prescription, in the fact that it is not conclusive to establish title, but may be rebutted by other evidence.⁴ Thus in an English case where lights have been en-

1. Prescription is where a man claims anything because he, his ancestors or predecessors, or they whose estate he hath, have had or used it all the time whereof no memory is to the contrary. Terms de la Ley, p. 487.

The term prescription is sometimes applied to corporeal hereditaments as well as to incorporeal hereditaments. In Campbell v. Holt, 115 U. S. 620, the court by Miller, J., said: "By the long and undisturbed possession of tangible property, real or personal, one may acquire a title to it, or ownership, superior in law to that of another, who may be able to prove an antecedent and, at one time, paramount title. This superior or antecedent title has been lost by the laches of the person holding it, in failing within a reasonable time to assert it effectively; as, by resuming the possession to which he was entitled, or asserting his right by suit in the proper court. What the primary owner has lost by his laches, the other party has gained by continued possession, without question of his right. This is the foundation of the doctrine of prescription—a doctrine which, in the English law, is mainly applied to incorporeal hereditaments, but which, in the Roman law, and the codes founded on it, is applied to property of all kinds."

Mr. Angell, in his work on Limitations of Actions, says that the word limitation is used in reference to the time which is prescribed by the authority of the law (ab auctoritate legis, 1

Co. Litt. 113) during which a title may be acquired to property by virtue of a simple adverse possession and enjoyment, or the time at the end of which no action at law or suit in equity can be maintained; and in the Roman law it is called prescriptio.

"Prescription therefore," he says, "is of two kinds—that is, it is either an instrument for the acquisition of property, or an instrument of an exemption only from the servitude of judicial process." Angell on Limitations, §§ 1, 2.

In Caldwell v. Copeland, 37 Pa. 427; 78 Am. Dec. 436, the term prescription was restricted to incorporeal hereditaments only. Woodward, J., in commenting upon the effect of a severance of minerals from the surface said: "So entirely is a mineral-right, after severance, a claim to land, and therefore not an incorporeal hereditament, that title to it cannot be acquired by prescription. Prescription lies only for incorporeal rights, not for land. It may confer a right to work a particular mine, as it may confer a right of way across another's estate or a right to fish in another's waters; but the title to the mine itself, like title to land, must be made out by documentary evidence, or under the Statute of Limitations."

2. Washburn's Easements, 110.

3. Washburn's Easements, 110.

4. In Cooper v. Smith, 9 S. & R. (Pa.) 26; 11 Am. Dec. 658, an attempt was made to establish a prejoyed for more than twenty years over land which, during part of the time, had been glebe land, it was held that a grant could not be presumed, inasmuch as the rector, being only tenant for life, was incompetent to grant such an easement.¹

scriptive right to a landing for a ferry. In delivering the opinion of the court, Duncan, J., said: "If the plaintiff in error had given any evidence to show a continued exclusive possession and enjoyment, with the acquiescence of the owner of the inheritance, for twenty-one years, by way of analogy, as to the time of the Statute of Limitations, the court should have left this to the jury as presumptive evidence of a right, by grant or otherwise; and unless contradicted or explained, the jury ought to believe it. Length of time cannot be said to be an absolute bar, like a Statute of Limitations, but is only a presumptive bar to be left to a jury. The presumption of grant from long usage is for the sake of peace and furtherance of justice. It cannot be supposed where there has been a long exercise and possession of such right, that any person would suffer his neighbor to obstruct the light of his windows, or render his house uncomfortable, or to use a way for so long a time with carts and carriages, unless there had been some agreement between the parties to that effect; but this principle must always be taken with the qualification, that a possession from which a party would presume a grant or easement, must be with the knowledge of the person seised of the inheritance."

Goddard in his treatise on the Law of Easements, says: "The whole theory of prescription depends upon the presumption of a grant having been made: If, therefore, it can be shown that no grant could have been legally made, or that any easement lawfully created must have been subsequently extinguished by unity of seisin or otherwise, or if it can be shown to be a very improbable thing that a grant was ever made, the presumption cannot arise, and the title by prescription fails." This passage was quoted with approval by Chief Justice Cockburn, in Angus v. Dalton, L. R., 3 Q. B. D. 85, which was an action by the owners of a factory against the defendants for excavating the soil of an adjoining house in such a manner as to leave part of the factory without sufficient lateral support, and thereby causing it to fall. It appeared that the two buildings had apparently been erected at the same time, and were estimated to be upwards of one hundred years old. Both had been occupied as dwelling-houses until about twenty-seven years before the accident, but the plaintiff's predecessors had then converted his house into a coach factory, removing the internal walls, and erecting a stack of brickwork which both served as a chimney stack, and supported the girders which had to be put up to sustain the floors. The defendants, in taking down the adjoining house and in digging cellars which had not previously existed, left a support for the chimney stack which proved insufficient, and it fell, drawing after it the entire factory. It was held by the majority of the court (Cockburn, C. J., and Mellor, J.), that the defendants were entitled to judgment, for first, no grant of a right of lateral support for the factory by the adjacent land could be presumed from the enjoyment of such support by the plaintiff for twenty years, inasmuch as the owners of this land never had any power to oppose the conversion of the dwelling-house into a factory, and had no reasonable means of resisting or preventing the enjoyment by such factory of lateral support from the adjoining soil, and for the same reason such a support was not an easement which had been enjoyed for twenty years within the Prescription Act (2 & 3 Wm. IV, ch. 71, § 2), as it could not be said to have been enjoyed by a person claiming right thereto and without interruption.

In Parker v. Foote, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 309, it was held that the question of the presumption of right by grant or otherwise, although there has been an uninterrupted enjoyment of an incorporeal hereditament for more than twenty years, must be submitted to the jury; a judge is not justified in telling the jury that they must, but should instruct them that they may presume a grant, except in a plain case where there is no evidence to repel the presumption arising from twenty years' uninterrupted adverse user.

1. Barker v. Richardson, 4 B. & Ald. 578.

If, however, there has been an adverse, continuous and uninterrupted enjoyment of an easement for the period limited by the Statute of Limitations, and the use has been with the acquiescence of the owner of the estate upon which the easement has been conveyed, there arises a conclusive presumption, which cannot be overcome even by proof that there was no actual grant. In this way, by giving effect to the attendant circumstances connected with the use, as well as to the use itself for the statutory period, as good a title is obtained under the doctrine of presumptive grant, as under the ancient technical prescription.¹

1. Washburn in his treatise on Easements, page 114, says: "It may therefore be stated as a general proposition of law, that if there has been an uninterrupted user and enjoyment of an easement, a stream of water for instance, in a particular way, for more than twenty-one or twenty, or such other period of years as answers to the local period of limitation, it affords conclusive presumption of right in the party who shall have enjoyed it, provided such use and enjoyment be not by authority of law, or by or under some agreement between the owner of the inheritance and the party who shall have enjoyed it."

In Rodgers v. Shepherd, 33 W. Va. 307, it was held that where there has been an open and public use of an easement for more than twenty years unexplained, it will be presumed to be under a claim of right and adverse.

In Smith v. Putnam, 62 N. H. 369, it was held that in the absence of evidence showing that the use was permissive, the open, continuous, uninterrupted and unquestioned use of a well and driveway for more than fifty years, establishes an easement thereto.

Where the purchaser of land buys it with the parol understanding that a strip of land adjoining it is to be reserved for an alley, such understanding forming part of the consideration for the purchase, his continued and uninterrupted use of it as an alley, under claim of right, for more than twenty years, gives him a right of way by prescription. McKinzie v. Elliott (Ill. 1890), 24 N. E. Rep. 965.

An adverse possession and user of water for five years continuously and uninterruptedly, with the knowledge of and to the injury of the true owner, will bar his right thereto; but a mere claim of right to the use and enjoyment of water, however long continued, will not ripen into adverse title thereto. Cox v. Clough, 70 Cal. 345.

Where defendant had used a turbine wheel and the same point of depression where the water entered to it for more than twenty years, as a matter of right, he established a right of user thereby. Terry v. Smith, 47 Hun (N. Y.) 333.

A had for more than twenty years maintained an aqueduct over the land of B, and used the water from a spring on B's land, when B conveyed the land to C, containing a covenant that "A is to have the water from a certain spring where it now runs in the aqueduct as long as he or his heirs shall want it." Held, that A had an indefeasible title to the easement, both by prescription and by deed. Keysar v. Covell, 62 N. H. 283.

A grant may be presumed from acts of use and occupation for ten years accompanied by a claim of ownership. And the rule is not affected by the fact that such occupation and acquiescence was the result of an erroneous fixing of a division line by adjoining owners. Burdick v. Heivly, 23 Iowa 511.

In a question of the presumption of a grant it is not necessary that actual possession should always be in the presumptive grantee. Glass v. Gilbert, 58 Pa. St. 266.

An uninterrupted user of an easement on the land of another for a period of twenty years, under a claim of right, while all parties concerned are free from any disability, and seised of estates in fee and in possession, is prima facie evidence of a right to such easement, and of a grant which is not lost or does not exist. French v. Marstin, 24 N. H. 440; 57 Am. Dec. 294.

A user for twenty years, exercised adversely and without anything to qualify it, will afford sufficient ground for the presumption of a grant; but if

III. DISTINCTION BETWEEN PRESCRIPTION AND CUSTOM.—Both prescription and custom apply to incorporeal hereditaments, but prescription is confined to those cases only where one person grants and another may take under the grant. Custom, on the other hand, is applicable to cases where the inhabitants of a particular locality have acquired an easement by long enjoyment without being capable of taking collectively as grantees under a deed.¹

the enjoyment can be referred to the leave or favor of the party over whose lands the right of way is claimed, or can be placed on any other footing than a claim or assertion of right, it will repel the presumption of a grant. Evans v. Dana, 7 R. 1. 306; Hurlbut v. Leonard, Brayt. (Vt.) 201.

The inhabitants of a town, in their corporate capacity, may prescribe for a way, or other easement or incorporeal hereditaments. And a grant may also be presumed from continued occupation, as well in favor of corporations as of individuals. Com. v. Low, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 408.

The existence of a very old deed, alone necessary to complete a perfect title in one in possession of land, will be presumed. Arthur v. Arthur, 2 Nott. & M. (S. Car.) 96.

In order to create the presumption of a grant it is not necessary that the possession, either in its origin or its continuance, should be accompanied by deeds or other writings, and they are only material to extend the boundary where a constructive possession is claimed beyond the actual occupation. Marr v. Gilliam, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 488.

In cases where the Statute of Limitations gives title to land, rules for presuming a conveyance cannot be sustained by the court. Crawford v. Neff, 3 Grant's Cas. (Pa.) 175.

In Virginia, twenty years' adverse user, exclusive undisturbed possession of things incorporeal, affords conclusive presumption of title. Cornett v. Rhudy, 80 Va. 710.

See also in general on the question of presumption of a grant, Summer v. Child, 2 Conn. 607; Griffin v. Foster, 8 Jones (N. Car.) 337; Pue v. Pue, 4 Md. Ch. 386; Donnell v. Clark, 19 Me. 174; Campbell v. Thomas, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 82; Hall v. McLeod, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 98; 74 Am. Dec. 400. And cases cited in subsequent notes.

1. The distinction between prescription and custom was considered by

Tindal, C. J., in Lockwood v. Wood, 10 Ad. & El. N. S. 50. In that case a person who held a market under a crown grant that certain persons styled Inhabitants of E., their heirs and assigns forever, should enjoy the market as freely as the grantor held of the crown. The court held that the grant did not exempt from stall an inhabitant not privy to the grant to such grant. The court said: "And upon referring to the several authorities which have been cited in support of the validity of such a prescription it will be found that the claim by the inhabitants, qua inhabitants, to an easement, wherever it has been allowed, has been invariably vested on the ground of custom, not on that of prescription. A custom which has existed from time immemorial without interruption within a certain place and which is certain and reasonable in itself, obtains the force of a law and is, in effect, the common law within that place to which it extends, though contrary to the general law of the realm. In the case of custom therefore, it is unnecessary to look out for its origin; but in the case of prescription, which founds itself upon the presumption of a grant that has been lost by process of time, no prescription can have had a legal origin where no grant could have been made to support it. Thus a custom for all fishermen within a certain district to dry their nets upon the land of another might well be a good custom, as it was held in 5 Co. 87 (a), and yet a grant of such an easement to fishermen within the district eo nomine might well be void. . . . And further Lord Coke says, that "another difference was taken, and agreed, between a prescription, which always is alleged in the person, and a custom, which ought to always be alleged in the land; for every prescription ought to have by common intendment a lawful beginning, but otherwise it is of a custom; for that

Another distinction between prescription and custom is that the former extends to profits à prendre and the latter does not.¹

IV. CHARACTER OF THE ADVERSE USER.—The adverse use which will give title by prescription to an easement, is substantially the same in quality and characteristics as the adverse possession which will give title to real estate. As in the case of adverse possession it must be continued for a long period; it must be adverse, under a claim of right, exclusive, continuous, uninterrupted and with the knowledge and acquiescence of the owner of the estate out of which the easement is claimed.

1. Long Continued.—The use which will ripen into title by prescription, must be long continued. In modern times the courts understand the long period of adverse use to correspond with the local period of limitation for quieting titles to land.²

ought to be reasonable, et ex certa causa rationabili (as Littleton saith), usitata, but need not be intended to have a lawful beginning; a difference which points out clearly the distinction which ought to govern the present case, viz: that such an easement in the inhabitants on Easingwold as is contended for, although it might be good by custom, if it had existed from time immemorial, yet it cannot be good by prescription, which must rest upon a grant to the inhabitants.

In order to determine whether rights are holden as a custom or as a prescription, it is necessary to advert merely to the manner in which they are holden; whether as a local user or as a personal claim, or dependent on a particular estate. Perley v. Langley, 7 N. H. 233.

1. In Waters v. Lilley, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 145, an attempt was made to establish a custom to take fish in alieno solo in an unnavigable river. The court by Parker, C. J., said: "The custom proposed to be proved is not one that could be sustained in law, even if specially pleaded; for a custom to take anything from another's land, or for a profit à prendre, is not a lawful custom. If such a right is available at all, it must be set up by prescription as belonging to some estate, and should be pleaded with a que estate. So it was decided in Gateward's Case, 6 Co. 60; and Coke says, 'note, reader, the law in this general case well resolved, and no book in the law is adjudged against it.' And in the case of Grimstead v. Marlowe, 4 T. R. 718, Lord Kenyon says the law has been so settled ever since the time of Gateward's Case." See also Pearsall v. Post, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 111; Hardy v. Hollyday, cited in 4 T. R. 718.

A town, however, in its corporate capacity, may gain a right to a profit à prendre by prescription. Hill v. Lord, 48 Me. 98; Grimstead v. Marlowe, 4 T. R. 718; Sale v. Pratt, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 191; Foxhall v. Venables, Cro. Eliz. 180.

2. Hill v. Crosby, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 467; 13 Am. Dec. 448; Barnes v. Haynes, 13 Gray (Mass.) 188; 74 Am. Dec. 629; Campbell v. West, 44 Cal. 646; Miller v. Garlock, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 153; Corning v. Gould, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 531; Nicholls v. Wentworth, 100 N. Y. 455; Perrin v. Garfield, 37 Vt. 304; Worrall v. Rhoads, 2 Whart. (Pa.) 427; 30 Am. Dec. 274; Hazard v. Robinson, 3 Mason (U. S.) 272; Demuth v. Amweg, 90 Pa. St. 181; Rowland v. Wolfe, 1 Bailey (S. Car.) 56; 19 Am. Dec. 651; Nash v. Peden, 1 Spears (S. Car.) 17; Mueller v. Fruen, 36 Minn. 273.

In Richard v. Williams, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 59, the Supreme court of the United States stated that "in general, it is the policy of a court of law to limit the presumption of grants to periods analogous to those of limitations, in cases where the statute does not apply."

The time of use must not be less than the term of limitation to give title by prescription. Haight v. Price, 21 N. Y. 241; Thurston v. Hancock, 12 Mass. 220; 7 Am. Dec. 57; Green v. Chelsea, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 71; Lawton v. Rivers, 2 McCord (S. Car.) 445; 13 Am. Dec. 741; Jeter v. Mann, 2 Hill (S. Car.) 641; Stuyvesant v. Woodruff, 21 N. J. L. 133; 47 Am. Dec. 156; Griffin v.

2. Adverse.—The user to give title must be adverse.¹ be such a specific assertion of right as to expose the par

Foster, 8 Jones (N. Car.) 339; Sherwood v. Vliet, 20 Wis. 441; Gayetty v. Bethune, 14 Mass. 49; 7 Am. Dec. 188; Campbell v. Smith, 8 N. J. L. 140; 14 Am. Dec. 400; Prescott v. Phillips, cited 6 East 213; King v. Taffany, 9 Conn. 162; Gilman v. Tilton, 5 N. H. 231; Dyer v. Depui, 5 Whart. (Pa.) 586.

Evidence that a way was not kept in repair by complainant; that the original road-bed was not used for the length of time prescribed by statute; that trees were allowed to fall across the road and remain there, another way around them being used, will support a finding that the plaintiff was not entitled to the way by prescription. Russell v. Napier, 82 Ga. 770.

In Tennessee, the time limited by the Statute of Limitations has not been followed in cases of adverse user. In Ferrell v. Ferrell, 10 Heisk. (Tenn.) 329, Freeman, J., said: "The rule of presumption of a grant from the State has been settled in Tennessee by several cases to be twenty years, and we think this rule may be as well applied to a right of the character now under consideration, as to grants from the State. It is based on reason of public policy and to quiet titles, and is a presumption of law in favor of a long-continued possession. See Chilton v. Wilson, 9 Hun (N. Y.) 405; Cannon v. Philipps, 2 Sneed (Tenn.) 185. We think, therefore, these cases, recognizing the period for presumption of a grant, furnish a sounder analogy on which to fix the rule of presumption of a deed when it is to be made out solely by the user, than the period of seven years in our Statute of Limitations as to real property."

The following periods of use have been held sufficient to confer title by prescription:

Forty years. Canday v. Lambart, 2 Root (Conn.) 173; Nichols v. Boston, 98 Mass. 39; 93 Am. Dec. 132; Lewis v. San Antonio, 7 Tex. 288; Melvin v. Whiting, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 295; 20 Am. Dec. 524; Kent v. Waite, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 138; Coolidge v. Learned, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 511.

Thirty years. Wilson v. Marshall, 10 La. Ann. 327; Dodeman v. Barrow, 11 La. Ann. 87; Lajoie v. Primm, 3 Mo. 529.

Twenty-one years. Whelan v. Chrisman, 24 Pa. St. 298; 64 657; Okeson v. Patterson, 2 22.

Twenty years. Hill v. C. Pick. (Mass.) 467; 13 Am. I. Brace v. Yale, 10 Allen (M. Morrison v. Chapin, 97 Mass. nett v. Rhudy, 80 Va. 710; C. Lawton, 3 McCord (S. Car.) Kee v. Garrett, 1 Bailey (S. C. Campbell v. Smith, 8 N. J. 1 Am. Dec. 400; Felton v. Sin Ired. (N. Car.) 84; Griffin v. Jones (N. Car.) 339; Manier 4 B. Mon. (Ky.) 514; Stein v. 24 Ala. 130; 60 Am. Dec. 453; v. Rowe, 39 Ala. 722; Wright 38 Ala. 506; 82 Am. Dec. 73; v. Fernald, 26 Me. 436; 46 A. 573; Sargent v. Ballard, 9 Pick 251; Parker v. Foote, 19 W. Y.) 309; Miller v. Garlock, (N. Y.) 153; Webber v. Cha N. H. 326; 80 Am. Dec. 111; man v. Soule, 32 Ill. 278; 83 264; Evans v. Dana, 7 R. I. 30 Fifteen years. Rogers Brayt. (Vt.) 169; Tracy v. 36 Vt. 515; Shumway v. Simo 53; Arbuckle v. Ward, 29 Sherwood v. Burr, 4 Day (C. 4 Am. Dec. 211; Ingraham v. son, 2 Conn. 584.

Ten years. McCullough v. La. Ann. 466; Frederick v. E La. Ann. 383.

Seven years. Harrison v. Ga. 359.

Effect of Change of Statute tions.—Where title by presc not complete, when the law is altering the period, the past ti faced, and the substituted la mines the time which bars a Nickles v. Haskins, 15 Ala. 61 Rep. 154.

1. Examples.—In Sargent lard, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 251, t by Putnam, J., said: "Th tial ingredients were to l out by the owners of th claiming the service. They only prove the claiming fo years, but that it was continu terrupted and adverse—that is claim of right, with the acqu of knowledge of the owner." land v. Wolf, 1 Bailey (S. Ca

Am Dec. 651, Nott, J., said: "Lapse of time is not sufficient to afford such presumption. The use must be adverse to the claim of the owner of the land." In Mitchell v. Walker, 2 Aik. (Vt.) 266, 16 Am. Dec. 710, the court by Skinner, C. J., said: "This possession, it is contended by the plaintiff, and correctly, must be adverse to the claim of the owner or property." He adds, if the occupation be by mistake it will not avail, citing Jackson v. Wilkinson, 3 B. & C. 413, and 2 Sand. 173.

In an action for damages for obstructing an alley, plaintiffs claimed to have such an easement in it, by prescription, as entitled them to the continued and unobstructed use thereof. Held, that to acquire such an easement to land of another, the use must be open, adverse and under claim of right. Dexter v. Tree, 117 Ill. 532.

The laws of California, fixing a time in which a right by prescription shall be acquired, have not changed the common law requirements as to the manner of acquiring such right. It must still be by adverse possession; and one of the requisites of adverse possession being that it shall not be with the consent, express or implied, of the owner of the alleged servient estate, where, in an action to establish a right of way the court finds that the use of the way by plaintiff, claiming title by prescription, was with the implied consent of the owner of the land over which the way passed, a judgment for defendant is proper. Thomas v. England, 71 Cal. 456.

A right of way by prescription implies an adverse use of the way for twenty years; and the party using the way must use it as though he was exercising a right of property in himself, uncontrollable by the owner of the soil over which it runs. Hogg v. Gill, 1 McMull. (S. Car.) 329.

Part of a public highway was obstructed by a rail fence, but no attempt to reopen it was made by the public, and a new road-bed around the obstruction was beaten out by the public on the defendant's land and used continuously and worked as part of the public highway for more than seven years. Upon learning that the new road-bed was upon his land, defendant obstructed public travel. Held, that the public had acquired a right to the road-bed through defendant's land by adverse possession, and that defendant was properly convicted for obstructing it. Patton v. State, 50 Ark. 53.

In establishing a prescriptive right of way over land of another, everything depends upon the character of the user. If exercised uninterruptedly, under a claim of right, and in the face of a proprietor sui juris, it may, in fifteen years, ripen into a right; but if done by the courtesy and license of the proprietor, and subordinately to his right as proprietor it will be otherwise. Pierce v. Selleck, 18 Conn. 321.

When the ditch running along the side of a road is used for over twenty years in draining the surface water of the road, or in confining spring water outside thereof, such user, taken in connection with the user of the road, amounts to a user of the ditch. Dominick v. Hill, 44 Hun (N. Y.) 622.

Where the purchaser of land buys it with the parol understanding that a strip of land adjoining it is to be reserved for an alley, such understanding forming a part of the consideration for the purchase, his continued and uninterrupted use of it as an alley, under claim of right, for more than twenty years, gives him a right of way by prescription. McKinzie v. Elliott (Ill. 1890), 24 N. E. Rep. 965.

Where one has permitted the public to use a road across his land for twenty years, but during that time has kept a gate at each end of the road, the right acquired by the public is a qualified prescription, and the commissioners of roads will be enjoined from removing the gates. Green v. Bethea, 30 Ga. 896.

Examples of User Not Adverse.—Where land is vacant and unoccupied, the mere fact that individuals travel over it and use it as a road for more than fifteen years, is not sufficient to constitute it a public highway. State v. Horn, 35 Kan. 717.

A narrow alley was opened along a lot in a populous part of a city to a business thoroughfare on which the lot abutted. The lot was unfenced and unused, and together with the alley was less than three rods wide. The city levied taxes on the lot as a separate and distinct parcel, and the same were paid. Held, that the public acquired no right to the lot by twenty years' user. In re Hand St. (Supreme Ct.), 5 N. Y. Supp. 158.

Where neither the extent of land inclosed or improved, nor the time when such inclosures or improvements were action, if, as a matter of fact, he had no grant.¹ It must made is shown, no adverse possession is established sufficient to support prescription. Basseron v. McRae, 9 La. Ann. 281.

After a sale under a mortgage executed by a firm, a member of the firm took possession as tenant of a grantee of the purchaser. Held, that such tenant could not allege adverse possession as against a grantee of his landlord. Brunson v. Morgan, 84 Ala. 598.

Mere use of a way overland for twenty years does not constitute it a highway, nor does a permissive use of it imply a dedication. The use must be adverse, as of right, and manifested by some action of the proper public authorities. Stewart v. Frink, 94 N. Car. 487; 55 Am. Rep. 619.

The public has no right to use soil adjoining navigable waters as a landing and place of deposit of property in its transit, against the owner's will, although such use has been continued for more than twenty years. The use cannot be urged as the foundation of a legal presumption of a grant, and thus justify a claim by prescription, nor as evidence of a dedication. Prescription will give no right to the exclusive occupation of another's land, as it may give to the traveler the right to pass over it without the power of halting thereon. State v. Wilson, 42 Me. 9.

The defendants can acquire no right by prescription to use the water of a stream to the injury of the complainants, until they show that the acts which are claimed to constitute the adverse user injured the complainants, and gave to them, or those under whom they claim title, a right of action. Holsman v. Boiling Spring etc. Co., 14 N. J. Eq. 335.

Adverse Use a Question for the Jury.—The question whether a possession is adverse is for the jury, or the court sitting as such, and, in an action to establish a right of way by prescription, the finding of the court on that question, in the absence of the testimony from the record, will be presumed to be correct. Thomas v. England, 71 Cal. 456. See also in general on adverse user, Mebane v. Patrick, 1 Jones (N. Car.) 23; Smith v. Bennett, 1 Jones (N. Car.) 372; Stokes v. Appomattox Co., 3 Leigh (Va.) 318; Stewart v. Frink, 94 N. Car. 497; 55 Am. Rep. 619; State v. Horn, 35 Kan. 717; Patton

v. State, 50 Ark. 53; Colvin v. net, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 564; Carley, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 451, Dec. 637; Sargent v. Ballard, (Mass.) 251; Thomas v. England, Cal. 456; Trask v. Ford, 3 437; Delahoussaye v. Judice, Ann 587; 71 Am. Dec. 521; Bra Sharp, 9 N. J. Eq. 9; Gaye Bethune, 14 Mass. 49; 7 Am 188; Odiorne v. Wade, 5 Pick. (421; Lawton v. Rivers, 2 McC (Car.) 445; 13 Am. Dec. 741; Board v. Edrington, 40 La. An Parish v. Kaspere, 109 Ind. 586. 1. Felton v. Simpson, 11 Ir (Car.) 84.

The Adverse Use Must be Specifically Defined.—Thus in order to gain scriptive right of way across the of another by user, it must be uniform route, and if used over route one year, and another that it would not establish a right of Plimpton v. Coverse, 44 Vt. 16 also Burnham v. McQuesteen, 48 446.

A right of way cannot be acquired by prescription unless the use is confined to a definite line, and is notorious, adverse and continuous. Johnson v. Lewis, 47 Ark. 66; bull v. Rivers, 3 McCord (S. 131; 15 Am. Dec. 622; Oliver v. 47 Md. 301.

To establish a by-road from 1 years' uninterrupted adverse user, there must be a certain well defined line of travel in the same over the entire route for all the South Branch R. Co. v. Parl N. J. Eq. 489.

A right of way in all directions where most convenient to the owner, and least prejudicial to the owner, cannot be prescribed. v. Percival, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 48 Am. Dec. 415.

But the appearance of a worn path with evidence of the user of the for a very long period, will justify finding of a way by prescription. Baker v. Crosby, 9 Gray (421.

The complaint alleged that plaintiff was in possession of a small tract of land which could be reached or crossing defendant's land; that those under whom he claimed had in the habit of thus crossing d any way be permissive; a license is a complete rebuttal to the presumption of adverse user.¹

ant's land for more than twelve years, whereby a right of way had accrued to him. The suit was for damages on account of defendant's action in stopping up the way. Held, that as the way was not described by metes and bounds, and there was no averment that the crossing was by right or license, nor that the way had been open and continuous for the entire period alleged, and it not being alleged from whom either party derived title to their land, the complaint did not sufficiently define such a right of way as would at any time ripen into a vested right. Johnson v. Lewis, 47 Ark. 66.

A highway by user includes only so much land as is used for that purpose, and it cannot be extended upon adjacent lands against the consent of the owner, except under proper condemnation proceedings for that purpose. Scheimer v. Price, 65 Mich. 638.

1. One cannot claim by prescription where his holding has been under an agreement constituting an express license. Dunham v. New Britain, 55 Conn. 378; Crounse v. Wemple, 29 N. Y. 540.

Where for twenty years a way had been open to plaintiff over defendant's land, and he and his grantors had been permitted by defendant and his grantors to uninterruptedly use the way for fifty years, plaintiff obtained thereby but a mere naked license; but where the user is interrupted and under claim of title for more than twenty years, an easement exists, although the original claim was not well founded. Parish v. Raspare, 109 Ind. 586.

Plaintiff and W, his deceased brother, had lived upon adjoining lands. In going to and coming from the nearest highway to a certain town, plaintiff with the implied consent of W was accustomed from September 1, 1874, to February, 1884, to pass over the land of W, plaintiff grading the way, and W placing gates thereon. Plaintiff claimed the right to use such way, but never informed W of such claim, and he was never aware thereof, nor were his heirs until 1883. Held, that in order to perfect an easement by occupancy for five years, the enjoyment must be adverse, continuous, open and peaceable, and not, as in this instance, with the implied permission of the owner of the servient estate. Thomas v. England, 71 Cal. 456.

If the claimant of the easement in any way recognizes the title of the owner, prior to the completion of the period of prescription, the claim is defeated. In Colvin v. Burnet, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 569, Cowen, J., said: "It is well known that a single lisp of acknowledgment by the defendant, that he claimed no title, fastens a character upon his possession which makes it unavailable for ages." See also Watkins v. Peck, 13 N. H. 360; 40 Am. Dec. 156; Betts v. Davenport, 3 Conn. 286; Sumner v. Tileston, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 198; Monmouth Canal Co v. Harford, 1 C. M. & R. 614.

A tenant cannot obtain an easement by prescription against his landlord. In Phillips v. Phillips, 48 Pa. St. 178; 86 Am. Dec. 576, the court by Thompson, J., said: "A tenant cannot acquire any kind of easement by prescription, as against his landlord. As such a right rests upon the presumption of a grant, it would lead to the absurdity of presuming a grant of a man to himself; for the tenant's possession is his possession, and whatever is lawfully done on the premises is presumed to be done with the sanction of the landlord." See also O'Brien's Appeal, 11 W. N. C. (Pa.) 229; Kuhlman v. Hecht, 77 Ill. 570.

An actual, uninterrupted use and enjoyment, as of right, of a well and a way thereto on land of another, with knowledge of such other party existing a sufficient length of time to create the presumption of a grant, establishes such grant, unless rebutted by proof that the use and enjoyment were permissive. Smith v. Putnam, 62 N. H. 369.

And in general if there has been the use of an easement for twenty years unexplained, it will be presumed to be under a claim of right, and adverse. Miller v. Garlock, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 153; Williams v. Nelson, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 141; 34 Am. Dec. 45; Blake v. Everett, 1 Allen (Mass.) 248; Bolivar Mfg. Co. v. Neponset Mfg. Co., 16 Pick. (Mass.) 241; Colvin v. Burnet, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 564; Olney v. Fenner, 2 R. I. 211; 57 Am. Dec. 711; Steffy v. Carpenter, 37 Pa. St.

The user must be adverse to some one in existence capable of asserting title against the user. Thus if the owner of a servitude is incapable, by reason of some disability, to assert his rights, no title can be acquired against him by prescription. A grant arising from the presumption of a grant arises by adverse use by an infant,¹ an insane person² or a married woman;³ nor will 41; Garrett v. Jackson, 20 Pa. St. 331.

A right of way was claimed over certain land by prescription. Held, that in the absence of evidence that the use shown was adverse, it would be presumed to have been permissive. Whalley v. Jarrett, 69 Wis. 613.

In Maine, it has been held that the continuous flowing of another's land for over twenty years will not gain an easement, where no right of action has accrued by reason of an injury done to the land overflowed. Gleason v. Tuttle, 46 Me. 288; Underwood v. North Wayne Scythe Co., 41 Me. 291; Nelson v. Butterfield, 21 Me. 220; Tinkham v. Arnold, 3 Me. 120. The rule is different in Massachusetts. William v. Nelson, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 141; 34 Am. Dec. 45. See Hammond v. Zehner, 21 N. Y. 118.

In the following cases, claims to prescriptive rights were defeated, because the exercise of the rights was held to be permissive. Kilburn v. Adams, 7 Met. (Mass.) 33; 39 Am. Dec. 754; Parker v. Framingham, 8 Met. (Mass.) 360; Marrison v. Creigh, 37 Conn. 462.

1. In Reimer v. Stuber, 20 Pa. St. 462; 59 Am. Dec. 744, the court by Black, C. J., said: "No presumption of a grant arises from the adverse enjoyment of an easement against a minor or feme covert. The presumption operates in strict analogy to the Statute of Limitations, which recognizes the disabilities of infancy and coverture as sufficient excuses for inaction. But a second disability added to one which existed when the adverse enjoyment first began is always disregarded. Thus a coverture which took place during infancy is not taken into account after the infancy has ended."

In Melvin v. Whiting, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 184, it was held, that an easement will be required in the soil of another by adverse use and enjoyment, where the land descends to an infant heir, if the time of the adverse use and enjoyment during the life of the ancestor, added to that after the death of age (there having been no interruption of the use and enjoyment meantime) amounts to the period of twenty years. See also Waite v. Peck, 13 N. H. 360; 40 Am. Dec. 1.

2. In Edson v. Munsell, 10 (Mass.) 557, it was held that a grant in the land of an insane person cannot be acquired by prescription until the expiration of such time as his death or the removal of his disability as would bar an action by his legal representatives for a period of no matter how long such disability might continue. See also McPatrick, v. Jones (N. Car.) 23; 1 (N. Y.) 490.

3. In McGregor v. Wait, 72 (Mass.) 69 Am. Dec. 30, it was held that admissions made by a person are not competent evidence of a grant by prescription over land owned by her own right. Metcalf, J., said: "It is the opinion of the court that the judge declined to admit evidence that the defendant, without her husband's consent, applied to Mrs. Wait for a shop on a part of the ground which the defendants claim a right of way. The evidence was offered for the purpose of proving a right of way owned in fee by Mrs. Hobbs, which her husband and herself seized and possessed in her right. It was admissible for this purpose, as it must have been on the ground of confessing or admitting that the defendant was subject to a servitude. A confession or admission, by her, would not bind either her or her heirs, or the plaintiff, with respect to the grant of her husband and herself. It is certain that she could not have a valid grant of a right of way under coverture, she was not competent to make a grant which would bind either herself or her heirs. At that one may, by acts in the absence of admission, by concealment, in effect do what could be done by deed, would be practicable to dispense with all the limitations."

such presumption arise against a remainderman or reversioner where the user has been during the continuance of a particular estate.¹

3. Exclusive.—Title to an easement cannot be acquired unless the enjoyment of the easement as claimed, excludes all others from participation in it.²

has imposed upon the capacity of infants or married women to alienate their estates." Lowell v. Daniels, 2 Gray (Mass.) 169; 61 Am. Dec. 448.

1. In Wood v. Veal, 5 B. & Ald. 454, it was held that no prescription could be had for a way where the land was in the occupancy of a tenant for ninety-nine years.

Where lights had been enjoyed for more than twenty years contiguous to land, which within that period had been glebe land, but was conveyed to a purchaser, it was held that no action would lie against such purchaser for building so as to obstruct the lights inasmuch as the rector, who was tenant for life could not grant the easement, and therefore no valid grant could be presumed. Barker v. Richardson, 4 B. & Ald. 579.

In Daniel v. North, 11 East 372, lights had been put out, and enjoyed without interruption for over twenty years during the occupation of the opposite premises by a tenant. The court held that such use could not conclude the landlord. Lord Ellenborough, C. J., said: "The foundation of presuming a grant against any party is, that the exercise of the adverse right on which such presumption is founded was against the party capable of making the grant; and that cannot be presumed against him unless there was some probable means of his knowing what was done against him. And it cannot be laid down as a rule of law, that the enjoyment of the plaintiff's windows during the occupation of the opposite premises by the tenant of Sir Geo. Warrender, though for twenty years without the knowledge of the landlord, will bind the latter."

In Parker v. Framingham, 8 Met. (Mass.) 260, an attempt was made to set up title by adverse possession in a portion of the soil of a turnpike road. The court by Shaw, C. J., said: "It was intimated, in behalf of the appellees, that having long occupied part of the soil of the turnpike, lying between their shop and the traveled part of the road, for laying materials, and other like uses, they had acquired a title by possession. But we think it very clear, that such occupation was permissive and not adverse, and therefore constituted no title by possession. It was not adverse to the owner of the soil; because, during the continuance of the turnpike he had no right to the possession. It could be no disseisin of the turnpike proprietors, or of the public; for they had an easement only, and no seisin."

See also in general, Pierre v. Fernald, 26 Me. 436; 46 Am. Dec. 573; Baxter v. Taylor, 4 B. & Ald. 72; Bradbury v. Grimsel, 2 Saund. 175; Wallace v. Fletcher, 30 N. H. 453.

2. In Kilburn v. Adams, 7 Met. (Mass.) 33; 39 Am. Dec. 754, the nature of an exclusive use was discussed by Chief Justice Shaw. In the course of his opinion he said: "The question is whether the plaintiffs, owners of an estate adjoining the academy lot, acquired a right of way over that lot, by the adverse and uninterrupted use of such way, by themselves and the former owners and occupiers of the estate, under the circumstances set forth in the report. The rule we think is, that where a tract of land, attached to a public building, such as a meeting-house, town house, school house and the like, and occupied with such house, is designedly left open and uninclosed, for convenience and ornament, the passage of persons over it, in common with those for whose use it is appropriated, is, in general, to be regarded as permissive, and under an implied license, and not adverse. Such a use is not inconsistent with the only use which the proprietors think fit to make of it; and therefore, until they think proper to inclose it, such use is not adverse, and will not preclude them from inclosing it, when other views of the interests of the proprietors render it proper to do so. And though an adjacent proprietor may make such use of the open land more frequently than another, yet the same rule will apply, unless there be some decisive act, indicating a separate and exclusive use, un-

4. Continuous.—The user must be continuous and maintain for a period long enough to establish the prescription. What constitutes a requisite continuity to establish a prescriptive right, depends largely upon the nature of the easement which is claimed. Thus in some cases the easement might not be used every day, but the continuity would not thereby be broken; while in other cases a single interruption might defeat the claim to a prescriptive right. Thus a right of way might only be exercised at intervals, and yet be established by prescription; while a slight interruption of a claim to flow another's land, or to receive lateral support might imperil the claim to the prescriptive right.¹ under a claim of right. A regular formed and wrought way across the ground, paved, macadamized, or graveled and fitted for use as a way, from his own estate to the highway, indicating a use distinct from any use to be made of it by the proprietors, would, in our opinion, be evidence of such exclusive use and claim of right. So would be any plain, unequivocal act, indicating a peculiar and exclusive claim, open and ostensible, and distinguishable from that of others. But the fact that a particular track or line was a little more worn and marked by travel, than the general surface of the lot, or that the adjacent proprietor had occasionally leveled a spot gullied by the rain, could scarcely be regarded, independently of other proof, as indicative of a claim of right."

"The enjoyment of easement, as claimed, whether it be a limited or more general enjoyment, should exclude others from a participation of it." Davis v. Brigham, 29 Me. 391; Smith v. Higbee, 12 Vt. 113; Day v. Allen, 22 Md. 529; Dodge v. Stacy, 39 Vt. 566; Nash v. Peden, 1 Spears (S. Car.) 17; Thomas v. Marshfield, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 240; Curtis v. Angier, 4 Gray (Mass.) 547; Hamilton v. White, 5 N. Y. 9; First Parish v. Beach, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 60; Bolivar Mfg. Co. v. Neponset Mfg. Co., 16 Pick. (Mass.) 241; Kent v. Waite, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 138; McKenzie v. Elliot (Ill. 1890), 24 N. E. Rep. 965.

In an action for trespass, defendant set up a right of way by prescription over what had formerly been a public highway, which had been discontinued or abandoned by the public. Held, that to acquire such right of way by user, such user might have commenced and continued for the requisite time after the abandonment of the highway; an adverse user by defendant and a right to use as one of the public, could not exist at the same time. Black v. O'Hara, 54 Conn. 17.

A right of way claimed by plaintiff across defendant's farm by adverse user is not defeated by defendant's use of the same lane. Wanger v. H. (Pa. 1888), 13 Atl. Rep. 81.

A way laid out by the owners of land for the use of their tenants and employees, was used also by other persons, owners of adjacent lands. Held, that although the use by the latter of the same character as, and did not interfere with the use of the former, was not necessarily permissive, might be adverse, so that a right of way might be acquired by such use. Webster v. Lowell, 142 Mass. 324.

1. "The time from which the prescription is to be reckoned in computing the duration of a continuous enjoyment, is when the injury or evasion of rights begins, and not the time when the injury causing it began that which first creates the injury." Washburn v. Easements 140; Branch v. Doan (Conn. 402; 18 Conn. 233).

In Pollard v. Barnes, 20 Mass. 191, the character of a continuous use was carefully considered. The court by Wilde, P. J., in concurring opinion said: "The plaintiff introduced evidence to show that from the fall of 1822 to the fall of 1846, the premises in dispute had been used as part of his mill yard, and the purpose of laying logs there for his customers to be sawed at his mill. And contradictory evidence was introduced by the defendants, tending to prove that for six years during the time the premises were not thus used."

Upon this evidence the jury were instructed, "that if the plaintiff had used and occupied the premises for the purpose of laying logs thereon, for the years during that period, exclusive of the year or years omitted, his omission to place logs upon the premises, during one or more years, would not be such an interruption as to prevent the plaintiff from gaining a right of possession, unless the jury believed that the omission took place in consequence of an abandonment of his claim by the plaintiff."

It has been argued in support of these instructions, that although the enjoyment of an easement or privilege, in order to confer a title, must have been uninterrupted during the time required by law, yet, that a mere non-user of such easement or privilege is not to be considered as an interruption. And it is true, as laid down in Gale & Whatley's treatise on easements, "that in those easements which require the repeated acts of man for their enjoyment, as rights of way, it may be sufficient, if the user is of such a nature, and takes place at such intervals, as to afford an indication to the owner of the servient tenement, that a right is claimed against him."

But it is obvious that the non-user in the present case does not come within this rule of law. The evidence tended to prove a total cessation of the enjoyment of the easement, and that for a long time; and the owner had good reason to believe that the claim was abandoned; and if so, it seems immaterial whether the plaintiff had in fact abandoned his claim or not.

We think, therefore, that this is a case within the general rule as laid down in Gale & Whatley, p. 63, and which is supported by the authorities: "The continuity of enjoyment," it is said, "may be broken either by the cessation to use, or by the enjoyment not being had in the proper manner." And so the rule is laid down by Lord Lyndhurst, and by Parke, B., in Monmouth Canal Co. v. Harford, 1 C. M. & R. 614. Parke, B. says: "The issue is whether the occupiers of the closes of right" (that is, claiming a right), "without interruption, have had the use and enjoyment for twenty years, as they insist under this issue; therefore they must show an uninterrupted enjoyment for twenty years. If they had enjoyed for one week, and for the next, and so on alternately, their plea would not be proved." So Lord Lyndhurst says: "The simple question is, whether there has been a continued enjoyment of the way for twenty years; and any evidence negative the continuance is admissible." The same principle of law is recognized in several subsequent cases. 4 Ad. & El. 383; 8 Ad. & El. 161; 2 Bing. & C. 705. These cases were decided on the construction of the Stat. 2 & 3 Wm. IV, ch. 71, which provides that no claim for any right of way or other easement shall be defeated, when such way shall have been actually enjoyed by any one claiming right thereto, without interruption for the full period of twenty years. A similar provision is contained in our Rev. Sts. ch. 60, § 27; that section provides, "that no person shall acquire any right or privilege of way, air, or light, nor any other easement from, in, upon, or over the land of another, by the adverse use thereof, unless such easement shall have been continued uninterrupted for twenty years."

The same continuity of possession was required by the common law, whereby a title by prescription could be acquired. "But both to customs and prescriptions," says Lord Coke, "these two things are incidents inseparable, viz.: possession or usage, and time. Possession must have three qualities: it must be long, continual and peaceable." See also Williams v. Nelson, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 141; 34 Am. Dec. 45; Perren v. Garfield, 37 Vt. 310; Brace v. Yale, 10 Allen (Mass.) 443; Mertz v. Dorney, 25 Pa. St. 519; Carlisle v. Cooper, 19 N. J. Eq. 260; Esling v. Williams, 10 Pa. St. 126; Ingraham v. Hough, 1 Jones (N. Car.) 39; Battishill v. Reed, 18 C. B. 696; Bodfish v. Bodfish, 105 Mass. 317; Stein v. Burden, 24 Ala. 130; 60 Am. Dec. 453; Kirschner v. Western etc. R. Co., 67 Ga. 760; Cave v. Crafts, 53 Cal. 135; Baker v. Pena, 20 La. Ann. 52; Rhodes v. Whitehead, 27 Fed. Rep. 304; 84 Am. Dec. 631; Whaley v. Stevens, 27 S. Car. 549; Levet v. Lapeyrollerie, 39 La. Ann. 210; Turner v. Hart, 71 Mich. 128; Ballard v. Struckman, 123 Ill. 636; Weed v. Keenan, 60 Vt. 74.

Examples.—A use in one year cannot be connected with a use five years after, so as to give a right by prescription. Watt v. Trapp, 2 Rich. (S. Car.) 136; Kilburn v. Adams, 7 Met. (Mass.) 33.

An easement cannot be acquired by adverse possession, while the owner of the servient tenement, as agent of the owner of the dominant tenement, lets the latter to third persons for short and not continuous terms. Holland v. Long, 7 Gray (Mass.) 486.

Where a ditch was dug and used over adjoining lands for over sixteen years, when it was filled, and another dug and used for five years, the time of using the two cannot be tacked together, so as to make out a prescription of twenty years. Totel v. Bonnefoy, 123 Ill. 653.

Where a tanner has thrown his ground bark into a stream for more than twenty years, he acquires no prescriptive right, to the injury of the owner below, on whose land the bark is deposited by the natural action of the water, unless it appears that this deposit has been made on this same land with this same injury annually during the whole term of the twenty years. Crosby v. Bessey, 49 Me. 539; 77 Am. Dec. 271.

Before a highway can be established by prescription, the general public under a claim of right, and not by mere permission of the owner, must have used some defined way, without interruption or substantial change, for twenty years or more, and a gate erected across the way, and maintained and kept closed at certain stated times during a period of four years, by the owner, evincing an intention to exclude the public from the uninterrupted use thereof, destroys any prescriptive right not already fully accrued. Shellhouse v. State, 110 Ind. 509.

The adverse user of an irrigating ditch, through the lands of another, during the cropping season only, the ditch not being needed at other times, constitutes a continuous adverse user. The omission to use a ditch when it was not needed did not break the continuity of the user. Hesperia Land etc. Co. v. Rogers, 83 Cal. 10.

A party claiming a right of way, passed over the land in 1819, and then again in 1824 and 1825, and continued passing until 1843. It was held not to be a continuous use except from 1824. Watt v. Trapp, 2 Rich. (S. Car.) 136.

A right was claimed to carry on an offensive trade in complainant's buildings which had stood more than twenty years, and in which he had carried on the business for eighteen years uninterruptedly. It was held, that the mere suspension of the business for two years, where there had been no interference with the enjoyment of the right, was not an interruption which could affect the right, unless done with the intent to abandon the business. Dana v. Valentine, 5 Met. (Mass.) 8. But see Carlisle v. Cooper, 19 N. J. Eq. 260.

Continued Flowage.—A suspension of a flowage of land during a time that a mill-dam is being repaired, is not such an interruption to the continuity of the user, as to affect the right. Wood v. Kelly, 30 Me. 47; Haag v. Delorme, 30 Wis. 594.

Prescription in the use of running water may be established, although the same quantity was not used each year. Jordan v. Lang, 22 S. Car. 159.

A suspension of flowage owing to low water will not interrupt the right. Gerenger v. Summers, 2 Ired. (N. Car.) 229.

Where a mill owner maintained a dam, and raised the water of his pond to the height of his dam, whenever the water was high enough in the stream, and continued this more than twenty years under a claim of right, it was held that the height of his dam fixed the extent of his easement or right of flowing, although at times the water of the pond was below the top of the dam. Winnipiseogee Lake Co. v. Young, 40 N. H. 436.

There must be no material change in the extent or character of the flowage during the prescriptive period. Thus where one had enjoyed the use of a drain from his land over that on another for more than twenty years, but during the twenty years it had been materially changed in its size, direction and termination, it was held, that no right had thereby been gained. Cotton v. Pocasset Mfg. Co., 13 Met. (Mass.) 429; Stein v. Burden, 24 Ala. 130; 60 Am. Dec. 453; Whittier v. Cocheco Mfg. Co., 9 N. H. 454; 32 Am. Dec. 382; Gerenger v. Summers, 2 Ired. (N. Car.) 229; Wright v. Moore, 38 Ala. 593; 82 Am. Dec. 731; Davis v. Brigham, 29 Me. 391; Stackpole v. Curtis, 32 Me. 383; Belknap v. Trimble, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 577; Bullen v. Rannels, 2 N. H. 255; 9 Am. Dec. 55; Darlington v. Painter, 7 Pa. St. 473.

But one who has acquired, by prescription, a right to water on the public domain, does not lose his right by a change in the stream. Tolman v. Casey, 15 Oregon 83.

A right to flow is usually determined by the height of a dam. In Cowell v. Thayer, 5 Met. (Mass.) 253; 38 Am. Dec. 400, the rule was laid down that where a mill owner "has acquired a prescriptive right to a constant mill privilege by keeping up and using a dam more than twenty years, which dam in its usual operation, would raise the water to a given height, and has used it at his own pleasure, at that height, without any claim of right on the part of any other person, to have it drawn or kept down, for any part of the year, or upon any definite occasion, he has a right to retain it at the same height, although from a former leaky condition of the dam, the rude construction of the machinery, or the lavish use and waste of the stream, the water has not in fact been constantly or usually kept up to that height. If, therefore, he repairs the dam, without so changing it as to raise the water higher than the old dam, when tight and in repair, would raise it, or uses it in a different mode, and thereby keeps up the water more constantly than before, it is not a new use of the stream, for which an adjacent owner can claim damages, but a use conformable to his prescriptive right." See also Alder v. Savill, 5 Taunt. 454; Lacy v. Arnett, 33 Pa. St. 169; Marcy v. Schults, 29 N. Y. 354; Grigsby v. Clear Lake Water Co., 40 Cal. 407; Hynds v. Shultz, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 600; Hall v. Angsbury, 46 N. Y. 622; Vickerie v. Buswell, 13 Me. 289; Ray v. Fletcher, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 200; Bliss v. Rice, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 33.

The continuous user need not be confined to one person, but may be by successive owners of the dominant estate.¹

In New Hampshire the actual height of the water, and not the height of the dam, is the measure of the use. Burnham v. Kempton, 44 N. H. 90. The same rule prevails in Pennsylvania. In Mertz v. Dorney, 25 Pa. St. 519. Knox, J., said: "If therefore, the plaintiff's land was flooded by means of the repairs to the dam to a greater extent than it had been for a period of twenty-one years, the defendant was liable for the easement, although the height of the dam might not have been increased." See also Carlisle v. Cooper, 19 N. J. Eq. 260. In the latter case the court said: "It is the height of the water, as ordinarily and usually kept in the dam when kept in repair as dams are kept for profitable and economical use, that will fix the height acquired by prescription."

Continued Use of Ways.—Plaintiffs acquired a right of way of necessity by prescription over defendant's land. Held that the fact that when the ground was soft plaintiffs had sometimes turned out at one point, and made as many as seven different tracks there, did not affect their right to the way; nor was it material whether the road to which the way led was a country road or a mere by-road. Cheney v. O'Brien, 69 Cal. 199.

After twenty years' uninterrupted use of a way by the public, all presumptions are against the original owner. His occasionally piling things on it, and on one occasion building a calf pen on it are not such acts as will interrupt the running of the statute. Toof v. Decatur, 19 Ill. App. 204.

Encroachments upon a road or changes in the line of travel at other and distant points, do not prevent the road from becoming a public highway by user at points where the line of travel has remained substantially unchanged. Hart v. Red Cedar, 63 Wis. 634.

A road becomes a public highway by prescription by an open and an adverse use for seven years; and this, though the public travel may have deviated slightly from the original tract by reason of obstacles. Howard v. State, 47 Ark. 431.

A public way by prescription is not created by a twenty years' user of land as public highway, where, during half of the time, a railway has occupied a portion of the strip under a license from the owner of the land. Speir v. New Utrecht, 49 Hun (N. Y.) 294.

1. "The time which an ancestor possessed may be extended and allowed to his heirs; and the same rule applies to buyers and sellers. Inter venditorem quoque et emptorem conjungi tempora." Inst. Justinian, lib. 2, tit. 6, § 8. All that would be required by the possessor would be, evidence that the possession had been legally continued from one owner to another." Sargent v. Ballard, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 251.

In Kilburn v. Adams, 7 Met. (Mass.) 43; 39 Am. Dec. 754, the owner of a dominant estate used a way for two years, and then, after some interval, sold his estate to one who used it for eighteen years. The court held that this did not give a prescriptive right to the way. In Sargent v. Ballard, 9

5. Peaceable.—The user must be peaceable.¹ If it appears during the period of the adverse user, the owner of the servient tenement denied the claim or opposed the use, the prescription will fail.²

Pick. (Mass.) 251, a former owner of land had enjoyed an easement for less than twenty years, when the commonwealth confiscated his land and conveyed it to the plaintiff, who likewise enjoyed the easement. The court held, that the time of enjoyment by the former owner could not be added to the time of enjoyment by the plaintiff, in order to make up the twenty years. See also Melvin v. Whiting, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 184; McFarlin v. Essex Co., 10 Cush. (Mass.) 304; Tracy v. Atherton, 36 Vt. 503; Perrin v. Garfield, 37 Vt. 309; Dodge v. Stacey, 39 Vt. 558; Okeson v. Patterson, 29 Pa. St. 22.

1. Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. McFarlan, 31 N. J. Eq. 706; Cave v. Crafts, 53 Cal. 135.

2. A complaint and denial of a right are a sufficient interruption of the peaceable use. Nichols v. Aylor, 7 Leigh (Va.) 546.

Remonstrance and consultation of counsel was so held in Stillman v. White Rock Mfg. Co., 3 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 549.

A complaint addressed to a station agent was held a sufficient remonstrance in Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Hoag, 90 Ill. 339.

A verbal act upon the premises was held a sufficient interruption in Powell v. Bagg, 8 Gray (Mass.) 441; 69 Am. Dec. 262.

In Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. McFarlan, 31 N. J. Eq. 180, the court said: "Resistance by verbal remonstrance or denial is sufficient."

In Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. McFarlan, 43 N. J. L. 605, it was held that a mere complaint was not sufficient. The court by Depue, J., said: "Evidence that the owner of the land forbade the other party to enter and ordered him off, was undoubtedly competent as part of the plaintiff's case. Whether what occurred at that time would amount to an interruption of an easement would depend upon circumstances, upon the conduct of the party when forbidden to enter or when ordered off. If the owner of the servient tenement, being on the premises forbids the owner of the easement to enter for the purpose of enjoying it and orders him off and then on a well grounded apprehension the former means to enforce obedience to his commands, desists and draws, an action on the case, the disturbance of the right would lie in view must have been present in the minds of the court, else why the prohibition to the place land? To give certainty to the purpose? A prohibition elsewhere might be so vehemently emphatic as to leave the denial right equally beyond a doubt. Certain expressions from the case have been quoted as indicating a verbal denial of the right will ipso facto, to determine the right that view be adopted, or the action of Mr. Justice Woodburman v. White Rock Mfg. Co., 3 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 551 the plaintiff and the taking of counsel such encroachments will bar the claim, it is obvious that by prescription will be of little avail. None of the authorities cited learned judge in Powell v. Gray (Mass.) 441; 69 Am. Dec. 262. I have not discovered in English cases any intimations of mere denials of the right, nor remonstrances or prohibition will be considered interruption of user of an easement, or as in that the enjoyment of it was tious. On the contrary, when subject has been mentioned elicited expressions of marked probation of such a proposition. . . . The whole doctrine of prescription is founded on public It is a matter of public interest to property should not remain uncertain and in dispute tests and mere denials of right evidence that the right is in as distinguished from a right. If such protests and unaccompanied by an act of law amounts to a disturbance actionable as such, be permitted the right in abeyance, the prescription law will be defeated and prescriptive rights be placed upon the unstable of foundations: If the easement has been interrupted by any act which places the owner of it in a position to sue and settle his right, if he chooses to postpone its vindication until witnesses are dead or the facts have faded from recollection, he has his own folly and supineness to which to lay the blame. But if by mere protests and denials by his adversary, his right might be defeated, he would be placed at an unconscionable disadvantage. He could neither sue and establish his right, nor could he have the advantage usually derived from long enjoyment in quieting titles. Protests and remonstrances by the owner of the servient tenement against the use of the easement, rather add to the strength of the claim of a prescriptive right; for a holding in defiance of such expostulations is demonstrative proof that the enjoyment is under a claim of right, hostile and adverse; and if they be not accompanied by acts amounting to disturbance of the right in a legal sense they are no interruptions or obstructions of the enjoyment. The instructions of the judge were erroneous in this respect. The jury should have been told that a continuous enjoyment, under a claim of right for twenty years, not obstructed by some suable act, and having the other qualities of an adverse user, confers an indefeasible right."

6. Acquiescence and Knowledge of the Owner.—No title by prescription can be acquired in an easement without the acquiescence and knowledge of the owner of the servient estate. The user must not be clandestine or by stealth, but open, notorious, visible and indisputable. When the user is of such a character and under a claim of right, the owner of a servient tenement is charged with notice, and his acquiescence is implied.¹

In some States it is provided by statute that a person may be prevented from acquiring an easement by the service upon him of a notice on behalf of the owner of the premises of his intention to prevent the acquirement of such easement. Massachusetts, Pub. Stat. (1882), ch. 122, § 3; Maine Rev. Stat. (1883), ch. 105, §§ 13, 14; Connecticut Laws (1881), ch. 161, § 2, R. S. (1888), p. 322; Indiana Rev. Stat. (1881), § 4322; Iowa Rev. Code (1884), § 2034, p. 550; Rhode Island Pub. Stat. (1882), ch. 175, § 7.

1. In Daniel v. North, 11 East 372, Lord Ellenborough, C. J., said: "The foundation of presuming a grant against any party is, that the exercise of the adverse right on which such presumption is founded was against the party capable of making the grant; and that cannot be presumed against him unless there were some probable means of his knowing what was done against him."

In Eaton v. Swansea Waterworks Co., 17 Ad. & El. 267, the court said: "It seems clear that, if the enjoyment is clandestine, contentious, or by sufferance, it is not of right. Enjoyment of a right must be nec clam, nec vi, nec precario."

Under the Iowa Code, § 2031, to entitle a person to title by prescription to a private way over the land of another, the fact of adverse possession must be established, distinct from and independent of evidence showing a mere prior use of the way, and that the person against whom the claim is made had express notice thereof. Zigefoose v. Zigefoose, 69 Iowa 391.

In Carbrey v. Willis, 7 Allen (Mass.) 368, a drain was constructed by the owner of two or more houses which he afterwards conveyed to different purchasers, and the drain remained more than twenty years, but was not known by the owner of either house to exist. It was held that such an enjoyment of the drain did not give the upper estate a right to maintain it through the lower one as a prescriptive easement.

The doctrine of prescription or presumption of grant from lapse of time, can have no application to a case of underground waters percolating, oozing or filtrating through the earth. Frazier v. Brown, 12 Ohio St. 294.

By a contract between the inhabitants of a town, by their selectmen and a railroad corporation by their president, a license was given to the town to make and use a road described, overland belonging to the railroad corporation, "and to maintain the same until the said corporation shall give them notice to discontinue the

7. Extent of User.—An easement acquired by prescription is restricted to the extent of the user.¹

V. OF WHAT A PRESCRIPTION MAY BE GAINED.—Prescription applies only to such rights as an individual or corporation may grant or take under a grant. It applies generally to incorporeal hereditaments, and more particularly to such easements as common of pasture, common of fishery, right of way, various rights connected with the use of waters, right of free and uninterrupted same, reserving to the said corporation the right to give such notice at any time when they shall deem it for their interest to do so; and the said inhabitants accepting said license, hereby agree to the terms and limitations of the same which are herein expressed."

Held, that even if the contract was not authorized by the town, if the selectmen represented to the officers of the railroad corporation that they had authority from the town to enter into the contract, and such corporation relied upon the representation and by reason thereof authorized the building of the road upon its land, the town would acquire no right by prescription to the use of the way over the land as against the railroad company, until the latter was notified that the town was not using it by virtue of the license; provided that the use of the way by the town was not inconsistent with the agreement, and the company believed that the town was using the way in pursuance of the agreement, and this was a reasonable belief under all the circumstances. Deerfield v. Connecticut River R. Co., 144 Mass. 325.

The easement of drainage across a lot cannot be claimed by virtue of an adverse user, where the evidence charges the owner of the servient lot with knowledge of the claim of the right, and of the existence of the drain ten years before he stopped it. Treadwell v. Inslee, 120 N. Y. 458.

Acquiescence, such as sustains a prescriptive right where uninterrupted user has existed twenty-one years, is not presumed against a party who has no choice but to acquiesce. A right by prescription never grows up where private property is taken for public use by authority of the State. Jessup v. Loucks, 55 Pa. St. 350.

1. Polly v. McCall, 1 Ala. Sel. Cas. 246; Wright v. Moore, 38 Ala. 593; 82 Am. Dec. 731; Atkinson v. Bordman, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 291.

Under a prescriptive right to enter upon land, and take herbage the party cannot justify the cutting of grass, the digging of potatoes, nor gathering of apples. Simpson v. 4 N. H. 301.

Plaintiff had a license from the officers of a town to use a reservoir for fishing and sailing during his life. Held, that he cannot by the use of this license obtain an absolute right by prescription to last forever. Ham v. New Britain, 55 Conn. 278.

The dedication of a public highway may be presumed from use, notwithstanding the public travel may deviate at points from the old line. Howard v. State, 47 Ark. 431.

A right of way by prescription is a passage-way which has been established for other purposes, cannot be established by proof of a use which is consistent with the rights of the owner of the soil and of those who were first entitled to use the way. Harper v. Fish of the Advent, 7 Allen (Mass.) 478.

A right of way, claimed by prescription in a particular line, cannot be disproved by evidence that the users were accustomed to cross the land in different courses. Snell v. Lee, 14 Gray (Mass.) 473.

A right of way over the plaintiff's land in all directions, where convenient to the defendant and not prejudicial to the plaintiff, cannot be prescribed for, nor can a non-est grant of such way be prescribed. Jones v. Percival, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 16 Am. Dec. 415. Long practical usage by the grantees will constitute a restraint on the general terms of the grant. Davidson v. Root (Conn.) 358.

To establish a right of way by prescription, across another's land, the line of the way must be defined, its use must have been adverse to the owner and continuous for a specified length of time. Johnson v. Le Ark. 66.

light and air, right to lateral support, right to exercise an office, or to enjoy corporate franchises, or to maintain a market or ferry.¹

1. Pasturage.—A right to pasture cattle on another's land may be acquired by prescription as appurtenant to land.²

2. Fisheries.—The right to fish in another's waters is an incorporeal hereditament, and may be acquired by prescription.³

3. Private Ways.—Where the owner of land has used a way over another's land for a length of time equal to that required by the Statute of Limitations to bar an action to recover land, and the use has been adverse and continuous, a title by prescription is acquired in the way.⁴

4. Highways.—A county, town or township may in its corporate capacity acquire a right of way by prescription.⁵ Where the

1. "Prescriptions can only be for things which are the subjects of grant. And though sometimes the term is loosely applied to titles to corporeal hereditaments, when used with technical accuracy it is predicated of incorporeal hereditaments alone. To constitute a title, therefore, by prescription, there must be a thing claimed which may be granted, and a person to whom a grant may be made, and who may be a party to such grant. And in this consists one great distinction between a proper prescription and a custom, the latter being applicable to rights by way of easement which the public or the inhabitants of a particular locality may acquire by long enjoyment without having been incorporated or capable of collectively becoming grantees in any deed of conveyance." Washburn on Easements, 118.

2. Thomas v. Marshfield, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 240.

In Rose v. Bunn, 21 N. Y. 275, it was held that the inhabitants of a town might gain a right of easement of pasturage by prescription, but in Donnell v. Clark, 19 Me. 174, it was held that one may not prescribe for the exclusive use of the herbage upon another's land as appurtenant to his own land. In that case a person owned land adjoining a beach which he depastured, but there being no fence between his land and the beach, his cattle were accustomed to pass on to the beach, and thence over the adjoining beaches, which were unfenced. The court held that this was not such an adverse enjoyment of a right to run upon these beaches as to gain a prescriptive right thereby, since it was in no way injurious to the rights of the owners of the beaches, nor likely to produce resistance or opposition.

3. The cases are collected in FISH AND FISHERIES, vol. 8, p. 23.

4. Parish v. Kaspere, 109 Ind. 586; Whaley v. Jarrett, 69 Wis. 613; Whaley v. Stevens, 27 S. Car. 549; Wanger v. Hipple (Pa. 1888), 13 Atl. Rep. 81; Barnes v. Haynes, 13 Gray (Mass.) 188; 74 Am. Dec. 629; Nicholls v. Wentworth, 100 N. Y. 455; Barbour v. Pierce, 42 Cal. 657; Chollar-Potosi Min. Co. v. Kennedy, 3 Nev. 361; 93 Am. Dec. 409; French v. Marstin, 24 N. H. 440; 57 Am. Dec. 294; Cuthbert v. Lawton, 3 McCord (S. Car.) 194; Ferrell v. Ferrell, 10 Heisk. (Tenn.) 329; Blake v. Everett, 1 Allen (Mass.) 248; Kuhlman v. Hecht, 77 Ill. 570; Puryear v. Clements, 53 Ga. 233.

The character, nature and extent of the user requisite to acquire title to a way by prescription, is explained in the other sections of this article.

5. In Com. v. Low, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 412, the court by Morton, J., said: "Ways of various kinds may be proved, not only by prescription, but by a continued and uninterrupted use of them for a period much within the memory of man. And it cannot be doubted that public highways may be shown by evidence of a user, as well as by the record of their laying out."

In Connecticut, the existence of a highway may be shown by prescription. Ely v. Parsons, 55 Conn. 83.

Under amended code West Virginia, ch. 43, § 31, every road worked under the direction of a surveyor of roads is in all courts of the State deemed a public road, although it may not appear that the same was formally established by an order of the county court. Ball v. Cox, 29 W. Va. 407.

In Arkansas where the public, with the knowledge of the owner, has public has continuously used a way for the statutory period the presumption is that there was a dedication to the public of the right to use the way.¹

5. Right of Way Over Railroad.—A person can, by open, continuous and adverse use for the statutory period, acquire a right of way by prescription over the location of a railroad, although the road is in actual operation.²

claimed and continuously exercised the right of using land for a public highway, for a period equal to that fixed by the statute for bringing actions of ejectment, their right to the highway, as against such owner, is complete. Howard v. State, 47 Ark. 431.

In Iowa, evidence that a road had been traveled by the public, and improved by the proper authorities, for more than twenty years, is sufficient to submit to the jury the question whether there was a public road or not. Casey v. Tama Co., 75 Iowa 655.

In Nebraska, where a public road laid out by competent authority has been accepted by the public, and traveled for more than ten years, the public acquires an easement therein, and the land owner will be liable if he obstructs it, whether the original proceedings to establish it were valid or not. Langdon v. State, 23 Neb. 509.

In Kansas, a highway may be proved by long usage; but for this, it must be such as to show that the public accommodation requires it to be a highway, and that it is the intention of the owner of the soil to dedicate the way to the public. Cemetery Assoc. v. Meninger, 14 Kan. 312.

To the same effect are the following cases: Kelsey v. Furman, 36 Iowa 614; State v. Tucker, 36 Iowa 485; State v. Green, 41 Iowa 693; Com. v. Old Colony etc. R. Co., 14 Gray (Mass.) 93; Stetson v. Faxon, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 147; 31 Am. Dec. 123; Com. v. Pettitcler, 110 Mass. 62; Speir v. New Utrecht, 121 N. Y. 420; Gould v. Boston, 120 Mass. 300; Patton v. State, 50 Ark. 53; James v. Sammis (Supreme Ct.), 10 N. Y. Supp. 143; Commissioner of Highways v. Riker, 79 Mich. 551; Martin v. People, 23 Ill. 395; Lewiston v. Proctor, 27 Ill. 414; Duncombe v. Power, 75 Iowa 185; State v. Gregg, 2 Hill (S. Car.) 387; Barker v. Clark, 4 N. H. 380; 17 Am. Dec. 428; McCearley v. Lemeunier, 40 La. Ann. 253; Veale v. Boston, 135 Mass. 187; McWhorter v. State, 43 Tex. 666; Harper v. Dodds, 3 Ill. App.

331; Waltman v. Rund, 109 Ind. 366; Bolger v. Foss, 65 Cal. 250; Valentine v. Boston, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 75; 33 Am. Dec. 711; Com. v. Old Colony etc. R. Co., 14 Gray (Mass.) 93; Brownell v. Balmer, 22 Conn. 107; State v. Green, 41 Iowa 693; Chicago v. Wright, 69 Ill. 318; Baldwin v. Herbst, 54 Iowa 168; State v. Boscawen, 32 N. H. 331; Krier's Private Road, 73 Pa. St. 109.

1. Washburn on Easements 180.

The character of the adverse user requisite to give title by prescription to a highway, is explained in other sections of this article, and in HIGHWAY, vol. 9, p. 362.

2. Turner v. Fitchburg R. Co., 145 Mass. 433.

A private right of way may be acquired by prescription across a railroad track, irrespective of the statute making it an offense to walk or stand on a railroad track. Gay v. Boston etc. R. Co., 141 Mass. 407; Turner v. Fitchburg R. Co., 145 Mass. 433.

Defendant having been accustomed from the year 1840 to use several crossings over the plaintiff's railroad where it ran through his land, in 1849 made an agreement allowing it to change location, and providing that he should give up one crossing, but that with that exception plaintiff would make and repair forever "the same number of crossings as they are now required to do over the railroad discontinued," and in 1855 gave plaintiff a deed of the new location "to use as if the road had been originally laid out there," and providing that the land should revert if not used for railroad purposes. There was a crossing on a private road over the original location planked for teams, but the new crossing was not planked, and was used only for foot passengers. In 1887, plaintiff fenced up the crossing; and a suit of trespass quare clausum fregit was brought against the defendant for tearing down the fence. Held, that by the agreement defendant was entitled to the crossing; and further that the facts would justify a

6. Waters.—The right to take or use water from another's land, or to overflow another's land, or to drain water upon another's land, are all easements which may be acquired by prescription.¹

7. Light and Air.—In England the easement of light and air may be acquired by prescription;² but in the United States such prescription is not generally recognized.³

finding that defendant had acquired by prescription a right to cross on foot. Fitchburg R. Co. v. Frost, 147 Mass. 118.

1. See DAM, vol. 4, p. 971; DRAINS AND SEWERS, vol. 6, p. 2; WATERS, and other sections of this article.

2. The use of light has been "enjoyed" with a building within the meaning of the English Prescription Act, which enacts that "when the access and use of light to and for any dwelling-house, work-shop or other building shall have been actually enjoyed therewith for the full period of twenty years without interruption, the right thereto shall be deemed absolute and indefeasible" (§ 3), if the owner of the building has had the amenity or advantage of using the access of light; it is not necessary that there should have been a continuous user. Cooper v. Straker, L. R. 40 Ch. D. 21.

The owner of a building having windows with movable shutters, which are opened at his pleasure, for admission of light, acquires a right to light under the act, at the end of twenty years, if he opens the shutters at any time he pleases for the admission of light during those twenty years, and if also there is no such interruption of the access of the light over the neighboring land "by the owners of the neighboring land acquiesced in for a year," as provided by § 4. Cooper v. Straker, L. R., 40 Ch. D. 21.

In such a case, it is proved that the window openings have remained unchanged for twenty years, and that the shutters were constructed so that they might be opened or closed at the pleasure of the owner of the building; the onus is thrown upon the owner of the neighboring land to prove that the right has not been acquired. Cooper v. Straker, L. R., 40 Ch. D. 21.

In an action for interfering with ancient lights of plaintiff's house, by raising an old party-wall fifteen feet above its original height, defendant pleaded that he had for many years been in the habit of piling up boxes and packing cases against and above the wall, to a height exceeding that of the new wall. The evidence was conflicting as to the height of the pile of packing cases, and as to the time they remained, but it appeared that they were removed from time to time, some to be returned to the owners, the others to be broken up, and none of the witnesses could say how long they remained piled up. Held, that no interruption of plaintiff's enjoyment of light, continuing for one year, within the meaning of the English Prescription Act, was shown, as against plaintiff's prima facie case of enjoyment for twenty years. Presland v. Bingham, L. R., 41 Ch. D. 268.

See in general on the English doctrine for prescription of light and air, Aldred's Case, 9 Co. 58; Bury v. Pope, Cro. Eliz. 118; Lewis v. Price, 2 Saund. 175; Darwin v. Upton, 2 Saund. 175; Moore v. Rawson, 3 B. & C. 332; Kelk v. Pearson, L. R., 6 Ch. 809; City of London Brewery Co. v. Tennant, L. R., 9 Ch. 212.

3. In Parker v. Foote, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 309, Bronson, J., said: "There is, I think, no principle upon which the modern English doctrine on the subject of lights can be supported. It is an anomaly in the law. It may do well enough in England; but I see that it has been recently sanctioned with some qualifications by an act of Parliament; but it cannot be applied in the growing cities and villages in this country, without working the most mischievous consequences. It has never, I think, been deemed a part of our law; and besides, it would be difficult to show that the rule in question was known to the common law previous to the 19th of April, 1775. There were two nisi prius decisions at an earlier day; but the doctrine was not sanctioned in Westminster Hall until 1786, when the case of Darwin v. Upton was decided by the K. B. This was clearly a departure from the old law. See also Haverstick v. Sipe, 33 Pa. St. 368; King v. Large, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 282; Rennyson's Appeal, 94 Pa. St. 147; 39 Am. Rep. 777; Myers v. Gemmel, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 537; Doyle v. Lord, 64

8. Lateral Support.—In some American cases it has been intimated that the right of support can be enlarged by prescription so as to require the adjacent land to uphold the land of the house owner, not only in its natural state, but also in its burdened condition.¹ The weight of authority, however, is against this view.²

N. Y. 432; 21 Am. Rep. 629; Napier v. Bulwinkle, 5 Rich. (S. Car.) 311; Ward v. Neal, 37 Ala. 500; Keats v. Hugo, 115 Mass. 204; 15 Am. Rep. 80; Pierre v. Fernald, 36 Me. 436; Keiper v. Klein, 51 Ind. 316; Cherry v. Stein, 11 Md. 1; Hubbard v. Town, 33 Vt. 295; Mullen v. Stricker, 19 Ohio St. 135; 2 Am. Rep. 379; Powell v. Sims, 5 W. Va. 1; 13 Am. Rep. 629; Turner v. Thompson, 58 Ga. 268; 36 Am. Rep. 297; Lapere v. Luckey, 23 Kan. 534; 33 Am. Rep. 196; Ray v. Sweeney, 14 Bush (Ky.) 1; 29 Am. Rep. 388; Berkley v. Smith, 27 Gratt. (Va.) 892; Hayden v. Dutcher, 31 N. J. Eq. 217; King v. Miller, 8 N. J. Eq. 559; 55 Am. Dec. 246; Guest v. Reynolds, 68 Ill. 479; 18 Am. Rep. 570; Stein v. Hauck, 56 Ind. 65; 26 Am. Rep. 10; Klein v. Gehrung, 25 Tex. Supp. 232; 78 Am. Dec. 565; Ingraham v. Hutchinson, 2 Conn. 584; Morrison v. Marquardt, 24 Iowa 35; 92 Am. Dec. 444.

In Gerber v. Grabel, 16 Ill. 217, decided in 1854, the court thought that the English doctrine should be deemed of force in Illinois; but in Guest v. Reynolds, 68 Ill. 478, 18 Am. Rep. 570, that court adopted the rule laid down by the Supreme Court of New York, in Parker v. Foote, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 309; and pronounced the English doctrine an anomaly in the law, as applied to the growing cities and villages of the United States.

And see 3 Kent's Com. 573; Washburn on Easements (4th ed.) 497.

In Massachusetts the doctrine established by the more recent decisions that the right cannot be acquired by prescription is now recognized by statute. Massachusetts Pub. St. ch. 122, § 1.

In New Jersey, as in Massachusetts, the more recent decisions reject the English doctrine and are in line with that of New York and the States of the Union generally. Hayden v. Dutcher, 31 N. J. Eq. 217. And see Sutphen v. Therkelson, 38 N. J. Eq. 318.

The English doctrine has been upheld in Delaware. Clawson v. Primrose, 4 Del. Ch. 643; and in Louisiana, Taylor v. Boulware, 35 La. Ann. 469.

1. In Lasala v. Holbrook, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 169, the chancellor said: "There is another class of cases, however, where the owner of a building on an adjacent lot is entitled to full protection against the consequences of any new excavation or alteration of the premises intended to be improved, by which he may be in any way prejudiced. These are ancient buildings, or those which have been erected upon ancient foundations, and which by prescription are entitled to the special privilege of being exempted from the consequences of the spirit of reform operating upon the owners of the adjacent lots; and also those which have been granted in their present situation by the owners of such adjacent lots, or by those under whom they have derived their title. Palmer v. Fleshees, 1 Sid. 167; Cox v. Mathews, 1 Ventr. 237; Story v. Odin, 12 Mass. 157; Brown v. Windsor, 1 C. & J. R. 20."

The English rule was upheld in Stevenson v. Wallace, 27 Gratt. (Va.) 87, where Anderson, J., in delivering the opinion said: "If the plaintiff has enjoyed the support of the land or building of the defendant for twenty years, to keep up his house and both parties knew of that support, the plaintiff had a right to it as an easement, and the defendant could not withdraw that support without being liable in damages for any injury which occurs to the plaintiff thereby."

2. The expressions of judicial opinion in both Lasala v. Holbrook, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 169, and Stevenson v. Wallace, 27 Gratt. (Va.) 87, were merely dicta, as the decision of neither case turned upon this question. In the later Virginia case of Tunstall v. Christian, 80 Va. 1, 56 Am. Rep. 581, a directly contrary view was taken. Lewis, P. J., in delivering the opinion said: "The doctrine (i. e., acquisition of a right by adverse user) may well apply to the acquisition of a right of way, or to the use of water and the like, but it is difficult to see how, on principle, it can be held to apply to a

9. Offices.—In England at common law some offices might be acquired by prescription, but in the United States it is not probable that there is any office which can be so acquired. In South Carolina it has been expressly decided that no office exists by prescription.¹

10. Corporate Franchises.—A corporation is said to exist by prescription, if its commencement cannot be shown, but a grant of a charter may be presumed from long-continued user of the corporate franchises.²

11. Markets.—The right to maintain a market may be acquired by prescription.³

12. Ferries.—The right to maintain a ferry may be maintained by prescription.⁴

13. Miscellaneous.—Amongst other easements which may be case like the present; for when a man builds on his own soil to its extremity, he simply exercises a lawful right. How, under the circumstances mentioned, can there be said to be an adverse user of another's property, or how can the acquiescence of one in an act be implied who has neither the right nor the power to prevent it? It is true that in order to prevent the acquisition of the right, the adjoining owner might by excavating on his own soil, bring down his neighbor's building before the right to support could be fully acquired. But such an extraordinary and wrongful act would not only involve labor and expense, but might endanger and perhaps destroy his own house. And how can a man be reasonably required to improve his own property in order to preserve his right respecting it?" See also Richart v. Scott, 7 Watts (Pa.) 460; 32 Am. Dec. 779; Mitchell v. Mayor of Rome, 49 Ga. 19. The opinion in the latter case is quoted at length in LATERAL AND SUBJACENT SUPPORT, vol. 12, p. 936. Additional American cases on the question are Gilmore v. Driscoll, 122 Mass. 199; 23 Am. Rep. 312; Napier v. Bulwinkle, 5 Rich. (S. Car.) 311. Recent English cases are Dalton v. Angus, 6 App. Cas. 740; rev'g 3 Q. B. D. 85; Hunt v. Peake, 1 Johns. 705; 29 L. J. Ch. 785; Partridge v. Scott, 3 M.C. & W. 220; Brown v. Windsor, 1 C. & J. 20; Hide v. Thornborough, 2 C. & K. 250.

1. Jeter v. State, 1 McCord (S. Car.) 233.

2. Greene v. Dennis, 6 Conn. 293; Stockbridge v. West Stockbridge, 12

Mass. 400; All Saints' Church v. Lovett, 1 Hall (N. Y.) 191; White v. State, 69 Ind. 273.

Prescription has been applied more especially to the franchises of municipal corporations. In Jameson v. People, 16 Ill. 257, 63 Am. Dec. 304, Skinner, J., said: "Municipal corporations are created for the public good—are demanded by the wants of the community; and the law, after long continued user of corporate powers, and the public acquiescence, will indulge in presumption in favor of their legal existence." See also People v. Maynard, 15 Mich. 463; Bow v. Allentown, 34 N. H. 351, 69 Am. Dec. 489; Dillingham v. Snow, 5 Mass. 547; New Boston v. Dunbarton, 15 N. H. 201; Sherwin v. Bugbee, 16 Vt. 439; Londonderry v. Andover, 28 Vt. 416; Robie v. Sedgwick, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 319.

In Stockbridge v. West Stockbridge, 12 Mass. 400, where the act incorporating a town could not be found parol evidence tending to show its existence and loss was admitted; and, after more than thirty years' use of the powers and privileges of a town, such evidence was held to be competent evidence of the incorporation.

3. Blackstone defines a market to be a franchise derived from the crown by grant or prescription which presumes a grant. 2 Black. Com. 37.

4. In Georgia, seven years' exclusive possession and enjoyment of a ferry right creates a presumption of a grant. Williams v. Turner, 7 Ga. 348. See also Trotter v. Harris, 2 Y. & J. 285; Blissett v. Hart, Willes 508.

acquired by prescription, are the right to occupy a dock,¹ maintain a wharf,² to dig and carry away ore,³ to hang clothes to dry in another's yard,⁴ to turn teams in plowing upon another's land,⁵ to pile logs on another's land for the use of a mill,⁶ and to support and maintain a division fence.⁷ It may be said in general, that almost any lawful acts, adversely and continuously performed upon another's land for the period required by the Statute of Limitations, will establish an easement by prescription.

VI. WHAT MAY NOT BE PRESCRIBED FOR.—Prescription can not be maintained for an easement of prospect,⁸ for a public nuisance,⁹ for a right to erect buildings on another's land,¹⁰ or for any rights in underground waters.¹¹ Nor can there be any prescription against the rights of a citizen with respect to privileges secured by the constitution.¹²

VII. PLEADING AND EVIDENCE.—The party who pleads prescription is bound to prove the facts necessary to sustain the plea.¹³

1. Sargent v. Ballard, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 251; Nichols v. Boston, 98 Mass. 42; 93 Am. Dec. 132.

2. Gray v. Bartlett, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 186; 32 Am. Dec. 208.

3. Gloninger v. Franklin Coal Co., 55 Pa. St. 9; 93 Am. Dec. 720; Arnold v. Stevens, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 109; 35 Am. Dec. 305; Beatty v. Gregory, 17 Iowa 109; 85 Am. Dec. 546; Grove v. Hodges, 55 Pa. St. 504; Bush v. Sullivan, 3 Green (Iowa) 344; 54 Am. Dec. 506.

4. Drewell v. Towler, 5 B. & Ald. 735.

5. Jones v. Percival, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 485; 16 Am. Dec. 415.

6. Gurney v. Ford, 2 Allen (Mass.) 576; Pollard v. Barnes, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 191.

7. Boyle v. Tamlyn, 6 B. & C. 329; Adams v. Van Alstyne, 25 N. Y. 232.

8. Aldred's Case, 9 Rep. 58 b; Parker v. Foote, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 309; Butt v. Imperial Gas Co., L. R. 2 Ch. App. 161.

9. Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. State, 20 Md. 157; Veazie v. Dwinel, 50 Me. 496; Com. v. Upton, 6 Gray (Mass.) 476; People v. Cunningham, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 536; Davis v. Winslow, 51 Me. 293; 81 Am. Dec. 573; Gerrish v. Brown, 51 Me. 256; 81 Am. Dec. 569; Bainbridge v. Sherlock, 29 Ind. 364; 95 Am. Dec. 644; Morton v. Moore, 15 Gray (Mass.) 576.

10. Cortelyou v. Van Brundt, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 357; 3 Am. Dec. 439.

11. Wheatley v. Baugh, 25 Pa. St. 528; 64 Am. Dec. 721. See WATERS and WATERCOURSES.

12. Baker v. Fales, 16 Mass. 488.

13. Succession of Montamat, 15 La. Ann. 332; Durham v. Holeman, 30 Ga. 619; Yancey v. Stone, 9 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 429; Duggan v. Cole, 2 Tex. 381; Mitchell v. Burdett, 22 Tex. 633; Smith v. Power, 23 Tex. 29; Cunningham v. Fraudtzen, 26 Tex. 34.

To acquire a title by prescription, to an easement, it must, as a general rule, have been enjoyed in the same degree, and to the same extent, as claimed in the suit involving it. Postlethwaite v. Payne, 8 Md. 104.

In Illinois, in an action for obstructing air and light to the windows of a house, the declaration need not prescribe for ancient lights, but the common law prescription for use and enjoyment for a time whereof the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, may be shown in evidence. Gerber v. Grabel, 16 Ill. 217.

A prescriptive right to maintain a bridge across a navigable stream is not shown by proof that it has been maintained in the same place more than fifty years. Arundel v. McCulloch, 10 Mass. 70.

In trespass quare clausum, the defendant pleaded a highway from time immemorial. Held, that such plea was supported by proof of the existence of the way for more than sixty years, there being no evidence as to its commencement. Odiorne v. Wade, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 421.

The averment of a prescriptive right to a way in the owners of a farm is sustained by evidence that such owners, and any other persons having occasion

If the pleadings present a claim for a prescriptive title by one kind of user, evidence of user of another kind is inadmissible.¹ Whether sufficient user is proved to sustain a plea of prescription, is a question for the jury.²

PRESENCE—See note 3. (See also WILLS.)

for the way, have used it for the requisite time, although the same evidence proves a title by custom in other persons. Kent v. Waite, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 138.

An averment of a lost grant from the owner of a beach to the inhabitants of a town in their corporate capacity, to the use of all the inhabitants thereof, to take seaweed for manuring their lands, is not supported by evidence that individuals of the town had been accustomed, from a very early period of time, to take seaweed from the beach for that purpose. Sale v. Pratt, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 191.

Evidence that the grantee, at the time of receiving a deed of land, agreed by parol that the grantor might continue to exercise a right of way over the land, not reserved in the deed, is admissible for the purpose of showing that the grantor's subsequent possession of such easement for twenty years commenced under a claim of right. Ashley v. Ashley, 4 Gray (Mass.) 167.

Where there is substantial conflict in the evidence on the issues of adverse and continuous diversion and use by defendant of water in a stream, relied on by him as giving prescriptive title and right to the same, a finding that there was not such adverse or continuous use and diversion will not be disturbed. Heilbron v. Kings River etc. Canal Co., 76 Cal. 11.

1. Thus if the defendant gives notice, with the general issue, that he will offer in evidence a prescriptive right of fishing in the sea adjoining the locus in quo, and of using and occupying the shore for that purpose, he cannot give evidence of any prescriptive right to erect huts on the shore for the purpose of fishing; such custom or usage must be pleaded or mentioned in the notice. Cortelyou v. Van Brundt, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 357; 3 Am. Dec. 439.

2. Anderson v. Bock, 15 How. (U. S.) 323; Thomas v. England, 71 Cal. 456.

3. A breach of the peace is committed "in the presence of an officer," though done at some distance from him, and in the dark, if he can detect the act, and could see the person doing it if it were light. People v. Bartz, 53 Mich. 493.

Obscene words uttered in the hearing of a female are used in her presence, especially so when addressed to her by name. Brady v. State, 48 Ga. 311.

When Wife Is in the Presence of Her Husband.—As to when the wife is in the presence of her husband, so that the law will presume she is under his control, and so that she may plead his constraint as an excuse for the commission of a crime, it has been held that she must be "near enough to act under his immediate influence and control." Commonwealth v. Burk, 11 Gray (Mass.) 437.

It does not seem to be necessary to show that the act was done literally in his sight, if the husband be near enough for the wife to be under his immediate influence and control, though not in the same room. It is sufficient if he were on the premises and near at hand, a momentary absence from the room or a momentary turning of his back might still leave her under his control. Commonwealth v. Munsey, 112 Mass. 287.

Where a wife went from house to house uttering counterfeit coin, the husband accompanying her but remaining outside, it was held that there was such a presence of the husband as to raise the presumption of coercion. Connely's Cas. 2 Lew. 229. See also Hughe's Cas., 1 Russ. Cr. 21.

But where the wife carried to her husband who was in jail an implement of escape, it was held that she was not excused, though she procured the instrument by his direction. Note to Rex v. Knight, 1 Carr. & P. 116. And see generally State v. Camp, 41 N. J. L. 306; Regina v. Buncombe, 1 Cox. C. C.; Seiler v. People, 77 N. Y. 411; Wagener v. Bill, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 321; State v. Potter, 42 Vt. 495; Commonwealth v. Feeney, 13 Allen (Mass.) 560; Commonwealth v. Butler, 1 Allen (Mass.) 4; Commonwealth v. Murphy, 2 Gray (Mass.) 516. See also HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 9, p. 826; MARRIED

PRESENT.—See note 1. (See also PAROL EVIDENCE, vol. 17, p. 451.)

PRESENTATION.—See note 2.

PRESENTMENT—(See also BILLS AND NOTES, vol. 2, p. 373; INDICTMENT, vol. 10, p. 470; GRAND JURIES, vol. 9, p. 15; CLEARING HOUSE, vol. 3, p. 282).—Producing or tendering, according to the terms of either instrument, first a bill of exchange to the drawee for acceptance or to the acceptor for payment; or second, a promissory note to the maker for payment.³

PRESIDE; PRESIDING.—See note 4.

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

I. His Election, 32.

II. His Powers, 33.

1. Pardoning Power (See PAROL EVIDENCE, vol. 17, p. 317), 33.

2. Treaty-Making Power (See TREATIES), 33.

3. Powers as Commander-in-Chief, 33.

4. Miscellaneous Powers, 35.

I. HIS ELECTION.—Under the constitution of the United States,⁵ Congress determines the time of choosing Presidential electors, WOMEN, vol. 14, p. 649; CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 697.

1. In the sense of "at This Time."—A bequest to a "present attendant physician" refers to the physician attending the testator at the date of the will. Everett v. Carr, 59 Me. 325.

Where a legislature authorized commissioners to negotiate bonds to raise a fund for the payment of a city's "present floating debt," it was held, that sums which became due for work done after the date of the act, could not be included in such debt, although the contract therefor existed prior to that date. State v. Faran, 24 Ohio St. 536.

Present in the sense of to Exhibit—to Give—to Make Known, etc.—The constitution of California requires that every bill that has passed the legislature must "be presented" to the governor before it becomes a law. This does not mean that the bill may be merely exhibited to that officer and immediately thereafter taken away or withdrawn, but he must have time to deliberately consider its provisions and prepare his objections. Harpenden v. Haight, 39 Cal. 109.

In an Indictment.—The word "present" means nothing more than that the jury "represent" or "show" to the court that a certain person has committed a certain offense. Common- wealth v. Keefe, 9 Gray (Mass.) 292. See list of cross-references to PRESENTMENT.

2. "The word 'presentation' may have many meanings according to the context or as circumstances require, and it may mean either 'shewing' or 'delivering over,'" per Jervis, C. J., Bartlett v. Holmes, 13 C. B. 630. In that case the vendor's memorandum of contract was to deliver 1,000 tons of pig iron "on the presentation of this document," and it was held that there "presentation" meant "delivering over."

3. See 1 Daniel Neg. Inst. § 449, as to acceptance; § 571, as to payment. And. Law. Dict.

4. A judge may preside, whether sitting as a sole judge or as one of several judges. Smith v. People, 47 N. Y. 330. "Presiding justice" is equivalent to "chief judge" or "presiding magistrate." Bean v. Loryea (Cal. 1889), 22 Pac. Rep. 513.

A Massachusetts statute directed that the sheriff should "preside" at the trial of a petition for damages to land. Held, that this did not require him to personally keep or attend the jury while they are making up their verdict. That duty being an executive one, while his duty as "presiding officer" was judicial. Tripp v. County Commissioners, 2 Allen (Mass.) 558.

5. Art. 2, § 1.

and the day on which they shall give their votes, the day to be the same throughout the United States; but to the legislatures of the respective States remains the power to direct the mode of appointment of electors.¹ The constitution is silent on the question by whom electoral votes are to be counted and the result declared, but this is now regulated by statute.² The constitution declares that no Senator or Representative, or person holding an office of trust or profit under the United States shall be appointed an elector.³

II. HIS POWERS⁴—1. Pardoning Power.—(See PARDON, vol. 17, p. 317.)

2. Treaty Making Power.—(See TREATIES.)

3. Powers as Commander-in-Chief.—Under the constitution the President is Commander-in-Chief of the army and navy; and of the militia of the several States when called into the actual service of the United States. By virtue of the power to call out the

1. Art. 2, § 1.

2. In determining the result of the election for President in 1841, it was declared, by joint resolution of the two houses of Congress, that one person be appointed teller on the part of the Senate, and two on the part of the House of Representatives, who were, in the presence of the two houses, to make a list of the votes as they should be declared, and the result declared to the President of the Senate, who was to be the presiding officer, and to announce to the two houses the state of the vote and the persons elected. The Vice-President, in that case, broke the seals of the envelopes of the votes, and delivered the same over to the tellers to be counted. The tellers having read, counted and made duplicate lists of the votes, they were delivered over to the Vice-President, and read, and he then declared the result, and dissolved the joint meeting of the two houses. 1 Kent's Com., p. 277, note a.

In 1877, when the election of Tilden or Hayes depended upon whether the votes of Florida, Louisiana and South Carolina should or should not be counted, a temporary act, viz: the Electoral Commission Bill, was passed to meet the case, but it applied only to this particular election (19 Stat. at L. 227). The acts of February 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 373), and of October 19, 1888, supplementary to that of 1887, have provided for the counting of the votes, so that the strain upon constitutional government, caused by the controversy of 1877, is unlikely to recur, at least in that particular form.

19 C. of L.—3

3. The Supreme Court of Rhode Island, in 1876, had before it, in In re Corliss, 11 R. I. 638, the question whether a member of the Centennial Commission held an office of trust under the United States such as made him ineligible as a presidential elector, and it was held that he was ineligible, and further, that ineligibility by reason of holding the office of commissioner at the time of the election could not be removed by a subsequent resignation of the office, and that the effect of such ineligibility in the case of one receiving the highest number of votes for elector was to avoid the election, and to make a new election necessary. In 16 Am. Law Reg. 21 is a learned note by Judge Mitchell of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, then one of the editors of this review, commenting upon the Rhode Island decision, and reviewing the cases wherein analogous questions bearing upon the election of public officers have been discussed. It is said by Judge Mitchell that the question whether persons holding such disqualifying offices can, by resigning them after their election by the people, qualify themselves to act as electors of President and Vice-President has arisen in several States beside Rhode Island, and that many good lawyers have expressed the opinion that this might be done, but that it is difficult to see upon what foundation such an opinion can rest, and that the authority of the courts is clearly against it.

4. It is not the province of this article, in treating of the powers of the President, to go beyond the decisions

33

State militia to suppress insurrection, he possesses the further power of deciding whether such an exigency exists as to require his action.¹ As Commander-in-Chief of the army and navy, he has power to make and repeal rules and regulations for its government.² He may dismiss an officer from the service,³ but may not revoke the order of dismissal and thus restore the dismissed officer to his position,⁴ nor revoke an acceptance of a resignation to the same result.⁵ He may direct a commitment in accordance with the sentence of a naval court-martial, of one convicted of an attempt to desert.⁶ Under the war power and as Commander-in-Chief of the army, he may establish a provisional court⁷ in insur-

of the United States Supreme Court upon points adjudged. For a general discussion of the subject, the reader is referred to the standard treatises on constitutional government.

1. The United States act of February 28, 1795, provided that, "in case of an insurrection in any State against the government thereof, it shall be lawful for the President of the United States, on application of the legislature of such State or of the executive (when the legislature cannot be convened) to call forth such number of the militia of any other State or States as may be applied for, as he may judge sufficient to suppress such insurrection."

It was said in Luther v. Borden, 7 How. (U. S.) 38, "by this act, the power of deciding whether the exigency had arisen upon which the government of the United States is bound to interfere, is given to the President. He is to act upon the application of the legislature or of the executive, and consequently he must determine what body of men constitute the legislature, and who is the governor, before he can act. The fact that both parties claim the right to the government cannot alter the case, for both cannot be entitled to it. If there is an armed conflict, like the one of which we are speaking, it is a case of domestic violence, and one of the parties must be in insurrection against the lawful government; and the President must, of necessity, decide which is the government, and which party is lawfully arrayed against it, before he can perform the duty imposed upon him by the act of Congress.

It was adjudged, in Martin v. Mott, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 19, that the act aforesaid was constitutional, and that, under that act the President is the exclusive judge whether an exigency for the exercise of the authority thereby conferred has arisen.

2. United States v. Eliason, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 291; United States v. Freeman 3 How. (U. S.) 556.

3. Blake v. United States, 103 U. S. 227; Keyes v. United States, 109 U. S. 336. And see 4 A. G. Op. 1; 6 A. G. Op. 4; 8 A. G. Op. 233; 12 A. G. Op. 424; 15 A. G. Op. 421. See also 1 Kent Comm. 309; 2 Story Const. (4th ed.) §§ 1537-1540, and notes; 2 Marshall's Life of Washington 162; Sergeant's Const. Law 372; Rawle Const., 7 ch. 14. It was not the purpose of § 5 of the act of July 13, 1866 (12 St. 92), to withdraw the power. Blake v. United States, 103 U. S. 227; Keys v. United States, 109 U. S. 336. And the power of dismissal may be exercised by the appointment of a successor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Blake v. United States, 103 U. S. 227; Keyes v. United States, 109 U. S. 336; McElrath v. United States, 102 U. S. 426.

4. United States v. Corson, 114 U. S. 619.

5. United States v. Mimmack, 97 U. S. 426.

6. Dynes v. Hoover, 20 How. (U. S.) 65.

7. The Grapeshot, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 129; Mechanics' etc. Bank v. Union Bank, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 276. The court was instituted for the State of Louisiana by executive proclamation after the occupation of New Orleans by the Federal forces in 1862. It was held, that the power was authorized by the constitution. Chase, C. J., in delivering the opinion of the court, cited to the point, Litensdorfer v. Webb, 20 How. (U. S.) 176, in which case the authority of the officer of the army holding possession of conquered Mexican territory to establish a provisional government, was sustained. Jecker v.

gent territory occupied by troops. But it is not within his power to establish a prize court.¹

Congress not being in session and not having acted, the President may recognize the existence of civil war in the United States, and act with reference thereto; as, by instituting a blockade of the ports of rebellious States.²

4. Miscellaneous Powers.—The acts of the President as the executive are not subject to judicial control. He may not be enjoined by the Supreme Court from executing an act of Congress. The remedy in case of an abuse of executive power lies in the process of impeachment, and is not vested in the courts.³ He has power to recover parcels of the public land from sale and to set them apart for public use. His authority, in this respect, is recognized in numerous acts of Congress.⁴ As, in many cases, the President

Montgomery, 13 How. (U. S.) 498; 18 How. (U. S.) 110; Cross v. Harrison, 16 How. (U. S.) 164; United States v. Rice, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 246; Texas v. White, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 700, were also cited by the court in illustration of the principles applicable to military occupation. It was held further, in the Grapeshot, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 129, that Congress had power, upon the close of the war, and the dissolution of the provisional court, to provide for the transfer of cases pending therein to the regular Federal tribunals.

1. So held in Jecker v. Montgomery, 13 How. (U. S.) 498, in relation to a prize court established at Monterey, during the Mexican war, such court consisting of a chaplain attached to a United States ship of war, who, at the request of the naval commander of the station, and under the sanction of the President, assumed to exercise admiralty jurisdiction in cases of capture.

2. The Prize Cases, 2 Black (U. S.) 635. The court, in its opinion in this case, adverted to the fact that two of the battles of the Mexican war had been fought before the passage of the act of Congress of May 14, 1846, which recognized "a state of war existing by the act of the Republic of Mexico."

3. In Mississippi v. Johnson, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 475, this was decided on motion for leave to file an original bill in equity in the United States Supreme Court to enjoin the President from carrying into effect the Reconstruction Acts of 1867. Counsel in arguing in support of the motion, contended that as the duties of the President were clearly defined by the act they were rather ministerial than executive, and might, therefore, be restrained by injunction on the ground relied on for invoking the writ of mandamus or injunction against a subordinate executive officer charged with the execution of a ministerial duty, as in Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 175; Kendall v. Stokes, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 534; United States v. Guthrie, 17 How. (U. S.) 284; State v. Chase, 5 Ohio St. 529; Green v. Mumford, 5 R. I. 472; Ellis v. Grey, 6 Sim. 214, in which latter case it was adjudged that the lords of the treasury in England, though constituting a prominent department of the executive government, might be enjoined by the judicial department; it was argued that the process, when directed against subordinate executive officers, was in effect a process against the head of the executive department; but the argument was deemed by the court, Chase, C. J., delivering the opinion, to be without force.

On grounds substantially similar, the same court, in Georgia v. Stanton, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 50, declined to entertain a suit to enjoin the General of the Army and other officers of the Federal government from carrying the same Reconstruction Acts into execution, the decision, however, in this case, being placed upon the ground that the questions of the constitutionality of the acts and of their tendency to abolish existing State governments were political and not judicial questions, and that the court was without power to interfere.

4. See Grisar v. McDowell, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 363; Wolcott v. Des Moines

acts through the heads of the executive departments, a direction or order by one of such heads may be, in legal intendment, the act of the President.¹ He may reopen, on the ground of fraud the proceedings of a commission which, under a treaty, has passed upon claims against citizens of the respective governments.² Instructions from the President to do an illegal act do not justify an officer acting under them.³ An executive proclamation takes effect when signed and sealed and deposited in the Department of State, irrespective of the date of its actual publication or of the fact that transactions may have been had in ignorance of the proclamation.⁴

PRESUME—(See also PRESUMPTIONS).—See note 5.

PRESUMPTIONS.—See index of cross-references in the notes.

- I. Definition, 38.
- II. Division, 39.
- III. General Rules, 39.
- IV. Conflicting Presumptions, 40.
- V. Conclusive Presumptions of Law, 41.
 1. Infants Under Seven Years Incapable of Matrimony, 41.
 2. Infants Under Seven Years Incapable of Crime, 41.
 3. Adverse Possession for Statutory Period Raises Presumption of Title, 41.
 4. Grant of Incorporeal Hereditament Presumed After Continued User for Twenty Years, 42.

VI. Rebuttable Presumptions of Law, 42.

1. Innocence in Civil Cases, 42.
 - a. General Application of the Presumption, 42.
 - b. Application in Official Acts, 43. [45.]
2. Innocence in Criminal Cases, 43.
3. Love of Life, 45.
4. Contract Presumed Made in View of Law Making It Valid, 45.
5. Sanity in Criminal Cases, 45.
6. Sanity in Civil Cases, 45.
7. Supremacy of Husband Over Wife as to Her Acts Done in His Presence, 45.

Co., 5 Wall. (U. S.) 688; Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 498; Wolsey v. Chapman, 101 U. S. 755. See also PUBLIC LANDS.

1. As a direction by the Secretary of War that a section of land be reserved for military purposes. Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 498; or an order from the Secretary of the Interior that certain public land be reserved from sale. Wolsey v. Chapman, 101 U. S. 755.

2. In Frelinghuysen v. Key, 110 U. S. 63, it was adjudged that the president had power to reopen the proceedings of the Mexican claims commission, on allegations of fraud, notwithstanding that the submission declared that the result of the proceedings should be deemed a full, final, and perfect settlement of every claim, and an award had been made against the Mexican government and the money paid to the United States to be paid over to the claimant.

3. So held in Little v. Barreme, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 170, where the order of the President to a commander of a ship of war, directing seizures for supposed violations of the non-intercourse act, were not authorized by law. And see Otis v. Bacon, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 589.

4. So held in Lapeyre v. United States, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 191, in which case four of the judges dissented on the ground that the date of the proclamation should control. In United States v. Norton, 97 U. S. 164, however, the court reaffirmed the rule laid down in Lapeyre v. United States, and held further, that such a proclamation took effect as of the beginning of the day, fractions of a day not being taken into account.

5. Infer is stronger than presume. The law does not presume, much less infer, fraud. Morford v. Peck, 46 Conn. 385. See also FRAUD, vol. 8, p. 635; DECEIT, vol. 5, p. 347.

8. Infants Between Ages of Seven and Fourteen Incapax doli, 45.
 - a. General Rule, 45.
 - b. When Infant Charged with Committing Rape, 46.
 9. Death After Seven Years' Absence, 46.
 10. Foreign Law Corresponds to the Lex Fori, 46.
 11. Regularity of Marriage, 47.
 12. Regularity of Divorce, 48.
 13. Legitimacy, 48.
 14. Incapacity of Child Bearing, 48.
 15. Regularity of Official and Judicial Proceedings, 49.
 16. Regularity of Legislative Proceedings, 50.
 17. Regularity in Records and Proceedings of Corporations, 50.
 18. Correctness in Dates of Documents, 50.
 19. Regularity as to the Formalities of Documents, 51.
 - a. General Rule, 51.
 - b. Presumption that Document Was Stamped, 51.
 - c. Presumption that Deed Was Sealed and Delivered, 51.
 20. Right to Act, 51.
 - a. In Particular Office, 51.
 - b. As Member of a Particular Profession, 52.
 - c. As Corporation, 52.
 21. Letter in Answer Presumed to be Genuine, 52.
 22. Business Transactions Presumed to Have Ordinary Effect, 52.
 23. Possession Raises a Presumption of Title, 53.
 24. Soil of Highways, etc., Belongs to Adjacent Proprietor, 54.
 25. Easements Presumed from Unity of Grant, 54.
 26. Ancient Documents Presumed to be Genuine, 55.
 27. Presumption of Payment After Twenty Years, 55.
 28. Receipt Raises Presumption of Payment, 55.
 29. Presumption of Execution of Instruments as Between Trustee and Beneficiary, 55.
- VII. Presumptions of Fact, 56.
1. General Principles, 56.
 - a. Definition, 56.
 - b. Strong and Weak Presumptions, 57.
 - c. Accumulative Presumptions, 57.
 - d. Distinction Between Strong Presumptions of Fact, and Rebuttable Presumptions of Law, 57.
 - e. Conflicting Presumptions, 59.
 - f. Mixed Presumptions, 59.
 - g. Presumptions of Fact and Burden of Proof, 61.
 2. Psychological Presumptions, 61.
 - a. Definition, 61.
 - b. Knowledge of Fact — When Presumed, 61.
 - c. Genuineness of Documents Raises Presumption of Truth, 63.
 - d. Prudence in Avoiding Danger — When Presumed, 64.
 - e. Presumptions of Intent, 64.
 - (1) In General, 64.
 - (2) Adequate Purpose, 64.
 - (3) Presumption of Malice in Criminal Cases, 65.
 - (4) Presumption of Malice in Civil Cases, 67.
 - f. Negligence — When Presumed, 67.
 - g. Presumptions from the Alteration of Testimony, 68.
 - (1) Mutilation or Destruction of Documentary Evidence, 69.
 - (2) Presumptions from Holding Back Proof, 70.
 - (3) Presumption from Fabrication of Testimony, 72.
 - h. Presumptions of Guilt from Acts Indicating Fear, 73.
 3. Physical Presumptions, Presumptions of Regularity and Title, 74.
 - a. Continuance of Life, 74.
 - b. Survivorship in a Common Disaster, 75.
 - c. A Relationship Once Established is Presumed to Continue, 75.
 - d. Residence Presumed Continuous, 76.
 - e. Occupancy Presumed Continuous, 76.

- | | |
|--|---|
| f. Habits and Appearance Presumed Unchanged, 76.
 g. Coverture and Cohabitation Presumed Continuous, 77.
 h. Solvency and Insolvency Presumed Continuous, 77.
 i. Constancy of Nature, 77.
 j. Physical Sequences, 77.
 k. Probable Habits of Animals, 78.
 l. Conduct of Men in Emergencies, 78.
 m. Proper Negotiation of Negotiable Paper, 78. | n. Regular Appointment of Officers and Agents, 79.
 o. Regularity of Business Men, 79.
 p. Non-existence of Claim Presumed from Non-claimers, 80.
 q. Letter Posted Presumed to Arrive at Usual Time, 80.
 r. Letter Sent by Special Messenger — Telegrams, 81.
 s. Acquiescence in Possession May Raise Presumption of Grant, 81. |
|--|---|

I. DEFINITION.—Presumptions are either logical inferences or legal assumptions from certain facts as to the existence or non-existence of facts in issue. If logical inferences they are presumptions of fact, if legal assumptions they are presumptions of law.¹

1. There are several so-called presumptions which are not treated in this article, as they are nothing but positive rules of law paraphrased, and are not strictly presumptions. For example, it is said that "every one is conclusively presumed to know the law," which is another way of stating the maxim "Ignorantia legis neminem excusat." So also the statement that every one is presumed to intend the natural consequences of his acts merely means that he will be held equally responsible for them whether he intended them or not. Again the rule of substantive law that a carrier is an insurer and negligence is immaterial is stated thus, that there is a presumption that the loss of goods by a common carrier is a negligent one. One learned writer also puts in this class the presumption of innocence and all the conclusive presumptions of law. Best's Ev. (Am. ed.), p. 304, n.

As to the existence or non-existence of certain presumptions in maritime law, see MARINE INSURANCE, vol. 14, p. 371. See ADVANCEMENTS, vol. 1, p. 218; BONDS, vol. 2, p. 462; CARRIERS OF GOODS, vol. 2, p. 810; CODICILS, vol. 3, p. 299; CORPUS DELICTI, vol. 4, p. 310; JURISDICTION, vol. 12, p. 270; MASTER AND SERVANT, vol. 14, p. 751; MERGER, vol. 15, p. 326; ILLEGAL CONTRACTS, vol. 9, p. 903; IMPLIED TRUSTS, vol. 10, p. 24.

This article is founded on Dr. Whar-

ton's Evidence, and the free use of that book, both in the arrangement and treatment of the subject, is hereby acknowledged.

A presumption may be defined to be an inference affirmative or disaffirmative of the truth or falsehood of a doubtful fact or proposition drawn by a process of probable reasoning from something proved or taken for granted. Best's Ev. (Am. ed.), p. 306.

Presumptions of law consist of those rules which in certain cases either forbid or dispense with any ulterior inquiry. Greenleaf Ev., p. 20; Taylor's Ev., p. 90.

A presumption of law is a juridical postulate that a particular predicate is universally assignable to a particular subject. Wharton's Ev., book 2, p. 406.

In Tanner v. Hughes, 53 Pa. St. 289, the court by Agnew, J., said: "A legal presumption is the conclusion of the law itself of the existence of one fact from others in proof, and is binding on the jury, prima facie till disproved, or conclusively, just as the law adopts the one or the other as the effect of proof."

"A presumption of fact is a logical argument from fact to fact." Wharton's Ev., vol. 2, § 1226.

"A presumption of fact means that a certain fact or set of facts furnishes evidence of another." Prof. Thayer.

Abbot, C. J.: "A presumption of fact

II. DIVISION.—From the above definition it will be seen that presumptions consist of two general classes—presumptions of law and presumptions of fact;¹ and presumptions of law are again subdivided into conclusive and rebuttable presumptions, conclusive presumptions being those presumptions which the law raises from certain facts and forbids any evidence being introduced to contradict them, while rebuttable presumptions of law are those presumptions which the law declares to be true until evidence is introduced to the contrary.²

III. GENERAL RULES CONCERNING PRESUMPTIONS.—Presumptions must be based upon facts and cannot be drawn from other presumptions.³ Presumptions of law may change from time to time,⁴ and such presumptions may be created by either legislative is, properly, an inferring of that fact from other facts that are known; it is an act of reasoning, and much of human knowledge on all subjects is derived from this source. A fact must not be inferred without premises that will warrant the inference; but if no fact could be thus ascertained, by inference in a court of law, very few offenders could be brought to punishment." Reg. v. Burdett, 4 B. & Ald. 161.

"Presumptions of fact are at best but mere arguments, and are to be judged by the common and received tests of the truth of propositions and the validity of arguments. They depend upon their own natural force and efficacy in generating conviction in the mind, and should not be aided by suggestions or intimations from the court as to what they do or do not prove." Lawhorn v. Carter, 11 Bush (Ky.) 7.

1. Dr. Wharton draws the following distinctions between presumptions of law and those of fact:

"(1) A presumption of law derives its force from jurisprudence as distinguished from logic.

"(2) To a presumption of law, probability is not necessary; but probability is necessary to a presumption of fact.

"(3) Presumptions of law relieve, either provisionally or absolutely, the party invoking them from producing evidence; presumptions of fact require the production of evidence as a preliminary.

"(4) The conditions to which are attached presumptions of law are fixed and uniform; those which give use to presumptions of fact are inconstant and fluctuating." Wharton on Ev., vol. 2, § 1237.

2. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th. ed.), §§ 15, 33; 1

Taylor's Ev. (8th ed.), §§ 71, 109; Best's Ev. (Am. ed.), §§ 306, 314.

3. Richmond v. Aiken, 25 Vt. 324; Doolittle v. Holton, 26 Vt. 588; Ellis v. Ellis, 58 Iowa 720; People v. Hensing, 28 Ill. 410; Danley v. Rector, 10 Ark. 211; 50 Am. Dec. 242; Whelton v. Hardisty, 8 E. & B. 232; O'Gara v. Eisenlohr, 38 N. Y. 296; Pennington v. Yell, 11 Ark. 236; 52 Am. Dec. 262; U. S. v. Ross, 92 U. S. 281; Manning v. John Hancock Mut. L. Ins. Co., 100 U. S. 694; Douglas v. Mitchell, 35 Pa. St. 446; McAleer v. McMurray, 58 Pa. St. 126; Philadelphia City Pass. R. Co. v. Henrice, 92 Pa. St. 331.

In Philadelphia City Pass. R. Co. v. Henrice, 92 Pa. St. 431, the question was as to whether there had been negligence on the part of the driver of a street car. The plaintiff offered evidence to show that the driver had to work for eighteen hours daily, and asked the court to direct the jury that from this they might infer that the driver was physically incapable of performing his duties properly, and from this inference they might presume that he was negligent. The lower court so directed the jury, and such direction was held on an appeal by the supreme court to be error, as a presumption could not be based upon a presumption but only upon a fact.

4. Dr. Wharton illustrates this by the following: "That a man cannot be in the same week in Rome and London, was an irrebuttable presumption in the twelfth century; it is no presumption at all in the nineteenth. That information cannot be passed instantaneously from one business center to another was, in the twelfth century irrebuttably presumed; in the nineteenth century or judicial action.¹ Presumptions cannot contradict facts nor overcome facts that have been proved,² but if the evidence on both sides be equal, then the presumption should prevail.³ Presumptions cannot act in futuro,⁴ nor be retroactive,⁵ and "a presumption may be rebutted by a stronger presumption."⁶

IV. CONFLICTING PRESUMPTIONS.⁷—If the presumption of continuance and that of payment conflict, the latter will prevail;⁸ as between the presumption of payment and that of innocence, the latter will prevail;⁹ the presumption of innocence will prevail over the presumptions of continuance of life,¹⁰ continuance of an exist-most of our business contracts are effected by information so received." Wharton on Ev., vol. 2, § 1234.

1. See an article by Professor Thayer, of Harvard, entitled, "Presumptions, and the Law of Evidence" in Harvard Law Review, vol. 3, No. 4.

See ABSENCE, vol. 1, p. 39.

See Opinion of Gray, C. J., and cases cited in Holmes v. Hunt, 122 Mass. 605; 23 Am. Rep. 381.

2. Lawson on Presumptive Evidence, 576; Galpin v. Page, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 364; Whitaker v. Morrison, 1 Fla. 29; 44 Am. Dec. 627; Van Buren v. Cockburn, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 122.

3. Lawson on Presumptive Evidence, 576; Graves v. Colwell, 90 Ill. 615.

4. Lawson on Presumptive Evidence, 579; Covert v. Gray, 34 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 450; Strong v. Strong, 1 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 233. In Covert v. Gray, 34 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 450, the plaintiff brought an action against the defendant for enticing the plaintiff's minor son to enlist in the army. The question was as to the measure of damages; whether the plaintiff could recover only for the loss of service to the date of the trial, or to the end of the war which was then raging, or until the end of the son's term which was three years. Held, that he could only recover for the loss up to the date of the trial, as there was no presumption that the war would continue. The court by Mason, J., said: "The rule is reasonable which presumes the continuance of an existing fact at the time of the trial, for the other party can overthrow it by proof if it be not so; but when it presumes a future continuance the party has no ability to unfold the future and give an answer by his proof."

5. Lawson on Presumptive Evidence 579; Erskine v. Davis, 25 Ill. 228; Barelli v. Lytle, 4 La. Ann. 557; Taylor v.

Cresswell, 45 Md. 422; Murdock v. State, 68 Ala. 567.

If A is a feme covert in 1860 there is no presumption that she was so in 1854. Erskine v. Davis, 25 Ill. 251; Murdock v. State, 68 Ala. 567. If it is officially certified that A is a justice of the peace on June 29, 1848, there is no presumption that he occupied such a position on June 5th of that same year. Barelli v. Lytle, 4 La. Ann. 557.

If A is insane in 1864 there is no presumption that he was so in 1860. Taylor v. Cresswell, 45 Md. 522.

6. Per Heath, J., in Jayne v. Price, 5 Taunt. 328. See also infra, this title, Conflicting Presumptions.

7. See Lawson on Presumptive Evidence 582.

8. See PAYMENT, vol. 18, p. 148; Potter v. Titcomb, 7 Me. 302.

9. Potter v. Titcomb, 7 Me. 302.

10. Rex v. Guyning, 2 B. & Ald. 386; Sharp v. Johnson, 22 Ark. 79; Greensborough v. Underhill, 12 Vt. 604; Cameron v. State, 14 Ala. 546; 48 Am. Dec. 111; Chapman v. Cooper, 5 Rich. (S. Car.) 452; Lockhart v. White, 18 Tex. 102; Yates v. Houston, 3 Tex. 442; Hull v. State, 7 Tex. App. 593; People v. Geilen, 58 Cal. 218; 41 Am. Rep. 258; Murray v. Murray, 6 Oregon 18; Breiden v. Paff, 12 S. & R. (Pa.) 430; Kelly v. Drew, 12 Allen (Mass.) 107; 90 Am. Dec. 138; Montgomery v. Bevans, 1 Sawy. (U. S.) 666; Spears v. Burton, 31 Miss. 555; Wilkie v. Collins, 48 Miss. 496.

In England the rule would seem to be at present that in the case of a conflict between the presumptions of innocence and continuance of life, they both give way, and it is a question of fact for the jury in view of all the circumstances of the case. Reg. v. Harborne, 2 A. & E. 540; Lapsley v. Grierson, 1 H. L. Cas. 500; Reg. v. Lumley, 1 L. R., C. C. 196; Reg. v. Wiltshire, L. R., 6 Q. B. D. 366.

ing state of things,¹ of marriage,² of chastity,³ of regularity of official acts.⁴

V. CONCLUSIVE PRESUMPTIONS OF LAW.—1. Infants Under Seven Years Incapable of Matrimony.—Infants both male and female under seven years of age are irrebuttably presumed to be incapable of matrimony, and a marriage in which either of the contracting parties was under that age would be not merely voidable but absolutely void.⁵

2. Infants Under Seven Years Incapable of Crime.—Infants under seven years of age are irrebuttably presumed to be incapax doli.⁶

3. Adverse Possession for the Statutory Period Raises Presumption of Title.—Possession of land for the period mentioned in the Statute of Limitations, under a claim of absolute title and ownership constitutes against all persons but the sovereign a conclusive presumption of a valid grant.⁷

1. Klein v. Landman, 29 Mo. 259. If however an illicit connection be formed and the parties continue to live under the same roof, a continuance of their immoral relationship will be presumed. Carolti v. State, 42 Miss. 334; 97 Am. Dec. 465; Floyd v. Calvert, 53 Miss. 46. These cases would seem to be based upon the principle that the parties had a chance to form a valid union but preferred a meretricious one, and therefore the continuance of the relationship would be presumed; if however there was a bar to a valid union which subsequently became removed, the principle laid down in the above cases does not hold, and the presumption of innocence prevails. Wilkinson v. Payne, 4 T. R. 468; Lawson on Presumptive Evidence 586.

2. Clayton v. Wardell, 4 N. Y. 230; Case v. Case, 17 Cal. 598; Armstrong v. Hodges, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 70; Willard v. Harmer, 8 C. & P. 697; Catherwood v. Caslon, 13 M. & W. 261; West v. State, 1 Wis. 209; Com. v. Littlejohn, 15 Mass. 163; Morris v. Miller, 1 Wm. Bl. 632.

See also BIGAMY, vol. 2, p. 192; MARRIAGE, vol. 14, p. 521.

3. If A be indicted for seduction under a statute punishing the seduction of "any unmarried female of previous chaste character" the burden of proof is on the prosecution to show the chaste character of the seduced. 2 Wharton's Cr. Law 1751; West v. State, 1 Wis. 209; People v. Roderigas, 49 Cal. 9; Zabriskie v. State, 43 N. J. L. 640; 39 Am. Rep. 610; Oliver v. Com., 101 Pa. St. 218; 47 Am. Rep. 704; Com. v. Whitaker, 131 Mass. 224.

In some of the States the burden of proof is on the defense to show that the seduced was not of a previous chaste character. State v. Andre, 5 Iowa 389; State v. Shean, 32 Iowa 88; State v. Wells, 48 Iowa 671; State v. Higdon, 32 Iowa 262; Crozier v. People, 1 Park. Cr. Rep. (N. Y.) 457; Cook v. People, 2 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 404; Slocum v. People, 90 Ill. 274; People v. Brewer, 27 Mich. 134; People v. Squires, 49 Mich. 487; Wood v. State, 48 Ga. 192; 15 Am. Rep. 664; Wilson v. State, 73 Ala. 527.

4. Weimer v. Bunbury, 30 Mich. 216; Houghton Co. v. Rees, 34 Mich. 481.

5. See authorities cited under MARRIAGE, vol. 14, p. 487. Also see Bishop's Mar. and Div., § 148; Wharton's Ev., vol. 2, § 1270.

6. See authorities cited under INFANTS, vol. 10, p. 697; CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 683.

7. See LIMITATIONS TO ACTIONS, vol. 13, p. 604; 1 Greenleaf on Ev., § 16; 2 Min. Insts. (3rd ed.) 569; Ewing v. Burnet, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 41; Corning v. Troy Iron etc. Co., 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 529; Croxall v. Shererd, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 268; Bicknell v. Comstock, 113 U. S. 149; Knox v. Cleveland, 13 Wis. 245; Moore v. Luce, 29 Pa. St. 260; 72 Am. Dec. 629.

In Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 1, the court by Washington, J., said: "If there be no remedy to recover the possession, the law necessarily presumes a want of right to it."

In Moore v. Luce, 29 Pa. St. 260, 72 Am. Dec. 629, the court by Lewis, C. J., said: "The law never deliberately

There must, however, be an actual occupation of the premises claimed.¹

4. Grant of Incorporeal Hereditament Presumed After Continued User for Twenty Years.—A grant of an incorporeal hereditament will be presumed from an uninterrupted adverse possession thereof for twenty years.²

VI. REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTIONS OF LAW—1. Innocence in Civil Cases—a. GENERAL APPLICATION OF THE PRESUMPTION.—It is a presumption of law that every one has conformed to the law, and the burden of proof is on him who alleges the contrary.³

takes away all remedy without an intention to destroy the right."

A possession, not continuous, but nearly so, for one hundred years, accompanied by a payment of taxes for the last seventy-seven years of the time, was held to justify the presumption of a deed, and that the presumption was based on what might have occurred and not on what the jury might fairly suppose did occur. Fletcher v. Fuller, 120 U. S. 534.

Pennsylvania.—In Pennsylvania, twenty-one years is the time which raises a presumption of title to land, and this presumption unrepelled will defeat any claim that is set up against it. Strimpfler v. Roberts, 18 Pa. St. 283; 57 Am. Dec. 606.

There is a difference of opinion among judges and law writers as to whether the policy of the Statute of Limitations is to raise a presumption of satisfaction or is merely to discourage litigation and to be considered as a statute of repose. The weight of authority at the present day seems to be in favor of holding it to be a statute of repose. 2 Minor's Insts. (3rd ed.) 543; LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, vol. 13, p. 692.

1. Martin v. Jackson, 27 Pa. St. 504; 67 Am. Dec. 489; ADVERSE POSSESSION, vol. 1, p. 252.

2. See EVIDENCE, vol. 7, p. 98; HIGHWAYS, vol. 9, p. 366; INCORPOREAL HEREDITAMENTS, vol. 10, p. 353; PRESCRIPTION.

3. Powell v. Welbank, 2 W. Bl. 852; Ross v. Hunter, 4 T. R. 33; Williams v. East India Co., 3 East 192; Rex v. Hawkins, 10 East 211; Bennett v. Clough, 1 B. & Ald. 461; Rodwell v. Redge, 1 C. & P. 220; Bank of U. S. v. Dandridge, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 69; Hewlett v. Hewlett, 4 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 7; Jackson v. Shaffer, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 513;

Hartwell v. Root, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 345; 10 Am. Dec. 232; Richards v. Kountze, 4 Neb. 201; Lincoln v. French, 105 U. S. 614; Dixon v. Columbus etc. R. Co., 4 Biss. (U. S.) 137; Hall v. Otis, 77 Me. 122; Turner v. Komvenhoven, 100 N. Y. 115.

A man who sells liquor will be presumed to have conformed to the law in reference to having a license, etc. Timson v. Moulton, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 269; Horan v. Weiler, 41 Pa. St. 470.

Fraud will never be presumed; the burden is on the party alleging it. Leete v. Ins. Co., 15 Jur. 1161; Greenwood v. Lowe, 7 La. Ann. 197; Mandal v. Mandal, 28 La. Ann. 556; Jones v. Simpson, 116 U. S. 609; Young v. Edwards, 72 Pa. St. 267; Mead v. Conroe, 113 Pa. St. 220; Marksbury v. Taylor, 10 Bush (Ky.) 519; Vanbibber v. Berne, 6 W. Va. 168; Stewart v. Thomas, 15 Gray (Mass.) 171; Hatch v. Bayley, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 27; Elliott v. Stoddard, 98 Mass. 145; Cooke v. Cooke, 43 Md. 522; Whitfield v. Stiles, 57 Mich. 410; Clements v. Mackeboeuf, 92 U. S. 425; Jones v. McLeod, 103 Mass. 58; Kline v. Baker, 106 Mass. 61; Thomas v. Rembert, 63 Ala. 561; Horan v. Weiler, 41 Pa. St. 470; Huchberger v. Home F. Ins. Co., 5 Biss. (U. S.) 106.

In the case of a devastavit by an executor, it will be presumed that the income was first misappropriated and not the principal. Cook v. Lowery, 95 N. Y. 103.

If it is a servant's duty to collect money for his master, the presumption is that he has handed it over and acted in good faith. Turner v. Komvenhoven, 100 N. Y. 115.

A lessee of mortgaged premises as between him and the owner is simply entitled to be paid out of any surplus

b. APPLICATION IN OFFICIAL ACTS.—This presumption operates in favor of the regularity and validity of official acts.¹ This last presumption of regularity and validity of official acts, however, "will not be extended so as to make it cover substantive independent facts, as distinguished from facts arising on foreclosure sale, the loss resulting to him from the extinguishment of the lease, which is the value of the use of the premises for the remainder of his term less the rents reserved. In the absence of proof the presumption is that the rents reserved are the fair value of the use, and that no damage is sustained by the lessee. Larkin v. Misland, 100 N. Y. 212.

For presumption of good faith in a contracting party, see generally INTERPRETATION. vol. 11, p. 507.

Where a deed or other instrument is susceptible of two constructions one of which the law would carry into effect, while the other would be in contravention of some legal principle or statutory provision, the parties will always be presumed to have intended the former. Best's Ev., § 347; Earl Cairns, L. C., in In re Glasgow Bank, 4 L. R. App. Cas. 337; Erle, J., in Mayor v. R., 4 E. & B. 397; Co. Litt. 42 a and b; Lewis v. Davison, 4 M. & W. 654; Kenton Co. Ct. v. Bank Lick Turnpike Co., 10 Bush (Ky.) 529.

A had commenced an action against B to recover money; he then agreed with C to suspend the proceedings on payment of a specified sum and the delivery of several promissory notes, C promising that if any of the notes were dishonored, and A was to issue a capias or detainer against B, he, C, would surrender him into custody or pay the money due on the notes. Held, binding, the presumption being that the contract was legal and must be construed to mean that C was to procure the surrender of B by lawful means, as by his consent, and not by any attempt to take him forcibly into custody. Lewis v. Davison, 4 M. & W. 654.

1. Rex v. Hinckley, 12 East 361; Rex v. Catesby, 2 B. & C. 814; Gosset v. Howard, 10 Q. B. 452; Rex v. Stainforth, 11 Q. B. 66; Rex v. Broadhempston, 1 E. & E. 155; Ross v. Reed, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 482; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Stimpson, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 448; Minter v. Crommelin, 18 How. (U. S.) 89; U. S. v. Weed, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 62; Campbell v. Laclede Gas Co., 119 U. S. 445; Cofield v. McClelland, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 331; Gonzales v. Ross, 120 U. S. 605; U. S. v. Tichenor, 12 Fed. Rep. 415; U. S. v. Adams, 24 Fed. Rep. 348; Shorey v. Hussey, 32 Me. 579; Wheelock v. Hall, 3 N. H. 310; Kimball v. Lamphrey, 19 N. H. 215; Forsyth v. Clark, 21 N. H. 409; Drake v. Mooney, 31 Vt. 617; 76 Am. Dec. 145; Richardson v. Smith, 1 Allen (Mass.) 541; Jones v. Boston, 104 Mass. 461; Smith v. Hill, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 656; Wood v. Terry, 4 Lans. (N. Y.) 80; Jackson v. Shafer, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 517; Coxe v. Deringer, 82 Pa. St. 236; Wellersburg etc. Plank Road v. Bruce, 6 Md. 457; Davis v. Johnson, 3 Munf. (Va.) 81; Paine v. Tutwiler, 27 Gratt. (Va.) 440; Ward v. Barrows, 2 Ohio St. 241; Titus v. Lewis, 33 Ohio St. 304; Ashe v. Latham, 5 Ind. 435; Banks v. Bales, 16 Ind. 423; Elston v. Castor, 101 Ind. 426; 51 Am. Rep. 754; Niantic Bank v. Dennis, 37 Ill. 381; Todemier v. Aspinwall, 43 Ill. 401; Conwell v. Watkins, 71 Ill. 488; Sinclair v. Learned, 51 Mich. 335; Rowan v. Lamb, 4 Greene (Iowa) 468; Arnold v. Juneau Co., 43 Wis. 627; Kobs v. Minneapolis, 22 Minn. 159; Palmer v. Boling, 8 Cal. 384; Boyd v. Buckingham, 10 Humph. (Tenn.) 434; Jewell v. Porche, 2 La. Ann. 148; Morse v. McCall, 13 La. Ann. 215; O'Hara v. Blood, 27 La. Ann. 57; Webber v. Gottschalk, 15 La. Ann. 376; New Orleans v. Halpin, 17 La. Ann. 185; Trotter v. Board etc. of Public Schools, 9 Mo. 69; Dupuis v. Thompson, 16 Fla. 69; Sadler v. Anderson, 17 Tex. 245.

The mere fact that cotton which had been captured reached the custody of a treasury agent, would not justify the conclusion of fact or the presumption of law that the cotton was sold and the proceeds paid into the treasury.

The dictum that public officers are presumed to have performed their duty is much too general and unrestricted language as enunciating a principle of law. Prior official acts may be inferred from subsequent official acts proven. But no presumption of law or fact that an officer has exewhich are the incidents of official duty."¹ If a public officer be charged with misconduct the only effect of this presumption is to throw the burden of proof on the party so charging him,² and this same rule holds if the conduct of the officer come collaterally in issue.³

cuted all of his duties in relation to a matter in controversy arises from proof of prior circumstances which placed him in the position of obligation and ability to perform the same, unless there be evidence of subsequent facts which might have resulted therefrom. Johnson v. U. S., 14 Ct. of Cl. 276.

Where an officer or party is in the attitude of asserting rights founded on official acts, and when due performance is essential to the right, due performance must be proved and cannot be presumed. Wood v. Terry, 4 Lans. (N. Y.) 80.

Notice of a foreclosure sale is indispensable to its validity, and as it is the act of the party and not of the officer making the sale, the presumption of the performance of official duty does not apply for the purpose of making out a valid foreclosure without actual proof of notice. Sinclair v. Learned, 51 Mich. 335.

A sheriff's deed must be under seal, and the court will not presume such a deed to be sealed against the express admission, in an answer, of the party invoking such a presumption, that the sheriff omitted by mistake to seal the deed. Moreau v. Branham, 27 Mo. 351.

In a prosecution for bigamy, where the marriage was proved by the witness present to have taken place at the parish church, and to have been solemnized by the curate of the parish, it was held unnecessary to prove either the registration of the marriage or the fact of any license having been granted. Rex v. Allison, R. & R., C. C. 109.

1. Wharton on Ev., vol. 2, § 1318; Murphy v. Chase, 103 Pa. St. 260; U. S. v. Ross, 92 U. S. 281.

This presumption has no application to a constable who distrains and sells goods under a landlord's warrant, he being an agent of the landlord and not an officer of the law. Murphy v. Chase, 103 Pa. St. 260.

Because a claimant's property was captured and sent forward by a military officer, and there is an unclaimed fund in the treasury derived from sales of property of the same kind, a court is not authorized to conclude, as matter of law, that the property was delivered by that officer to a treasury agent, that it was sold by the latter, and that the proceeds were paid into the treasury. U. S. v. Ross, 92 U. S. 281.

2. Bruce v. Holden, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 187; Clapp v. Thomas, 5 Allen (Mass.) 158; Phelps v. Cutler, 4 Gray (Mass.) 137; sed confer State v. Melton, 8 Mo. 417; Hartwell v. Root, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 345; 10 Am. Dec. 232.

3. Lea v. Polk Co. Copper Co., 21 How. (U. S.) 493; Sheldon v. Wright, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 39; Allegheny v. Nelson, 25 Pa. St. 332; Kelly v. Green, 53 Pa. St. 302; Jenkins v. Parkhill, 25 Ind. 473; Todemier v. Aspinwall, 43 Ill. 401; Dollarhide v. Muscatine Co., 1 Greene (Iowa) 158; Guy v. Washburn, 23 Cal. 111; Hickman v. Boffman, Hard. (Ky.) 348; Ellis v. Carr, 1 Bush (Ky.) 527; Phelps v. Ratcliffe, 3 Bush (Ky.) 334; Dawkins v. Smith, 1 Hill Eq. (S. Car.) 369.

Dr. Wharton says: "It is sometimes said that the law presumes that police officers do their duty. The law, however, presumes no such thing. If a public officer is sued for misconduct, then the case goes to the jury on the evidence, there being no presumption of virtue in his favor sufficient to outweigh preponderating proof on the other side. What the law says, and all that it in this respect says, is that a public officer is so far assumed prima facie to do his duty that the burden is on the party seeking to charge him with misconduct.

And this is in full harmony with the general rule above given, that on the actor lies the burden. The same reasoning applies in cases where the conduct of the officer comes collaterally in question. The burden is on those assailing such conduct; and so far, but only so far, the conduct of such officer is prima facie presumed to be right. In a suit by a private person against an officer the burden is on the plaintiff to make out his case, just as a similar burden is on the plaintiff in a suit by an officer against a private person. Where

2. Innocence in Criminal Cases.—In all criminal proceedings the accused is presumed to be innocent, and the burden of proof is on the prosecution to show the guilt of the accused beyond a reasonable doubt.¹

3. Love of Life.—Love of life is a rebuttable presumption of law, and the burden of proof is on him who alleges the contrary.²

4. Contract Presumed Made in View of Law Making It Valid.³

5. Sanity in Criminal Cases.—In criminal cases the accused is presumed to be sane,⁴ and the burden of proof is on the defendant to show the contrary.⁵ Where, however, a person has been proved to be insane, the insanity is presumed to continue, and the burden of proof shifts to the prosecution.⁶

6. Sanity in Civil Cases.—In all civil proceedings where the sanity of any one is in issue, the burden of proof is on the party who alleges insanity.⁷ Where, however, a person has been proved to be insane, the insanity is presumed to continue, and the burden of proof shifts to the party alleging sanity.⁸

7. Supremacy of Husband Over Wife as to Her Acts Done in His Presence.—Acts done by a wife in the actual or constructive presence of her husband are presumed to be done under his coercion, but such presumption may be rebutted by evidence to the contrary.⁹

8. Infants Between the Ages of Seven and Fourteen Are Presumed to be Incapax Doli.—a. THE GENERAL RULE.—Infants between the ages of seven and fourteen are presumed to be incapax doli, and the burden of proof is on him who alleges the contrary.¹⁰

the facts go to the jury, there is no more presumption of law in either case that the officer did right than there is a presumption of law that the private person did right. In criminal prosecutions for misconduct in office, the presumption in favor of the officer, when the case goes to the jury, is only the ordinary presumption of innocence." Wharton on Ev., vol. 2, § 1319.

1. See cases cited under BURDEN OF PROOF, vol. 2, p. 657; CRIMINAL PROCEDURE, vol. 4, p. 856; LARCENY, vol. 12, p. 879.

2. See cases cited under LIFE, vol. 13, p. 628; LIFE INSURANCE, vol. 13, p. 644; ACCIDENT INSURANCE, vol. 1, p. 88, note 2.

See also Continental Ins. Co. v. Delpuch, 82 Pa. St. 225; Guardian Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Hogan, 80 Ill. 35; 22 Am. Rep. 180; Way v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 40 Iowa, 341; Morrison v. New York Cent. etc. R. Co., 63 N. Y. 643; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Cragin, 71 Ill. 184.

He who alleges suicide must prove it, and if the evidence on both sides is equal the presumption of love of life will prevail. (Wharton on Ev., vol. 2, § 1247) Continental Ins. Co. v. Delpuch, 82 Pa. St. 225; Guardian Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Hogan, 80 Ill. 35; 22 Am. Rep. 180.

3. See CONFLICT OF LAWS, vol. 3, p. 546; Whart. on Ev., § 1250; Kilgore v. Dempsey, 25 Ohio St. 413; Smith v. Whittaker, 23 Ill. 367.

4. See authorities cited under CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 715; BURDEN OF PROOF, vol. 2, p. 657; INSANITY, vol. 11, p. 159.

5. As to amount of evidence necessary to overcome this presumption, see authorities cited under BURDEN OF PROOF, vol. 2, p. 658.

6. See authorities cited under CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 715; INSANITY, vol. 11, p. 160.

7. See INSANITY, vol. 11, p. 159.

8. See INSANITY, vol. 11, p. 160.

9. See CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 697.

10. See BURDEN OF PROOF, vol. 2, p.

b. WHEN INFANT IS CHARGED WITH HAVING COMMITTED RAPE.—If the crime of which the infant is charged be rape there is an irrebuttable presumption in *England*¹ that he is impotent, but in the United States the presumption of impotency can be overcome in some States² by proof that the infant has reached the age of puberty, but in other States,³ it is irrebuttable.

9. Death After Seven Years' Absence.—The absence of a person for seven years, without his being heard of by those persons who would naturally have heard from him if he were alive, raises a presumption of his death, and throws the burden of proof on the party alleging him to be alive.⁴

This presumption, however, will be rebutted by proof of circumstances which will explain his failure to be heard from,⁵ and there is no presumption as to his having died at any particular period during the seven years, and the burden of proving his death at any particular time is on the party who asserts it.⁶

10. Foreign Law Corresponds to the Lex Fori.—The settled rule is that foreign States whose system of jurisprudence is derived from the same source with our own, are presumed to be governed by law materially the same as our own.⁷ This presumption, however, does not extend to States whose jurisprudence springs from a different source, nor can we impute to a foreign State, idiosyncrasies of the 654; AGE, vol. 1, p. 327; INFANCY, vol. 10, p. 697; CRIMINAL LAW, vol. 4, p. 684; RAPE.

1. Rex v. Eldershaw, 3 C. & P. 396; Rex v. Groombridge, 7 C. & P. 582; Rex v. Phillips, 8 C. & P. 736; Rex v. Jordan, 9 C. & P. 118; Rex v. Brimilow, 9 C. & P. 366.

2. People v. Randolph, 2 Park. Cr. Rep. (N. Y.) 174; Williams v. State, 14 Ohio 222; 45 Am. Dec. 536; Hiltabiddle v. State, 35 Ohio St. 52; 35 Am. Rep. 592; Wagoner v. State, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 352; 40 Am. Rep. 36; State v. Pugh, 7 Jones (N. Car.) 61; Moore v. State, 17 Ohio St. 521; O'Meara v. State, 17 Ohio St. 515; Com. v. Green, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 580; Stephen v. State, 11 Ga. 225.

3. State v. Handy, 4 Harr. (Del.) 566; State v. Sam, Winst. (N. Car.) 300; Williams v. State, 20 Fla. 777.

A boy under fourteen years of age cannot be convicted of an attempt to commit a rape. Rex v. Eldershaw, 3 C. & P. 366; Rex v. Groombridge, 7 C. & P. 582; Rex v. Phillips, 8 C. & P. 736; Rex v. Jordan, 9 C. & P. 118; Rex v. Brimilow, 9 C. & P. 366; State v. Sam, Winst. (N. Car.) 300; Law v. Com., 75 Va. 885; State v. Pugh, 7 Jones (N. Car.) 61; State v. Handy, 4

Har. (Del.) 566. Contra, Com. v. Green, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 380, and Com. v. Underhill, Lewis, Cr. L. (Pa.) 102.

A boy under fourteen years of age, however, may be convicted as a principal in the second degree. R. v. Eldershaw, 3 C. & P. 366; Law v. Com., 75 Va. 885; 40 Am. Rep. 750.

4. See ABSENCE, vol. 1, p. 37.

5. See ABSENCE, vol. 1, p. 39.

6. See ABSENCE, vol. 1, p. 39.

As to the existence of any presumption of fact of survivorship in a common disaster, see ABSENCE, vol. 1, page 44.

As to presumption of loss of vessels, see MARINE INSURANCE, vol. 14, p. 371.

7. See JUDICIAL NOTICE, vol. 12, p. 163; NOTARY PUBLIC, vol. 16, p. 767.

Marsters v. Lash, 61 Cal. 622; Shumway v. Leakey, 67 Cal. 458; Hill v. Wilkes, 41 Ga. 499; 5 Am. Rep. 540; St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Weaver, 35 Kan. 412; Brimhall v. Van Campin, 8 Minn. 13; 82 Am. Dec. 118; Peterson v. Chemical Bank, 32 N. Y. 21; 88 Am. Dec. 298; Harris v. White, 81 N. Y. 532; Cannon v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co., 29 Hun (N. Y.) 470; Peabody v. Carrol, 9 Mart. (N. Car.) 395; 13 Am. Dec. 305; Allen v. Watson, 2 law which we know to be peculiar to our own.¹ It seems to be doubtful whether this rule will apply with regard to statute law,² but the weight of authority seems to hold that it will be presumed that they are the same.³ There is no presumption that the penal statutes of a foreign State are the same as our own.⁴

11. Regularity of Marriage.—If a marriage has taken place it will be presumed to have been valid,⁵ and the burden of proof is on him who alleges the contrary. A marriage will be presumed from cohabitation and reputation and the burden of

Hill (S. Car.) 319; Moore v. Hood, 9 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 311; 70 Am. Dec. 210; Rape v. Heaton, 9 Wis. 328; 76 Am. Dec. 269.

The law of a foreign state is presumed to be the same as our own, though it differ from that held by the Supreme Court of the United States. Cannon v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co., 29 Hun (N. Y.) 470.

In the absence of proof, a foreign Statute of Limitations will be presumed to be similar to that of the forum. Bagwell v. McTighe, 85 Tenn. 616.

In the absence of evidence to the contrary, it will be presumed, in an Iowa court, that the law of another State is similar to that of Iowa in requiring notaries public to use a seal. Goodnow v. Litchfield, 67 Iowa 691.

Crimes Malum In Se.—Acts which are criminal by the law of the forum and are malum in se, will be presumed to be crimes in a foreign state. Cluff v. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co., 13 Allen (Mass.) 308.

Common Law.—In some States the common law will be presumed to be in force in the absence of other proof. Missouri, Meyer v. McCabe, 73 Mo. 236; Alabama, Bradley v. Harden, 73 Ala. 70; Conner v. Trawrick, 37 Ala. 289; 79 Am. Dec. 58; Indiana, Rogers v. Zook, 86 Ind. 237; Robards v. Marley, 80 Ind. 185; New Jersey, Seyfert v. Edison, 45 N. J. L. 393; Michigan, Ellis v. Maxson, 19 Mich. 186; 2 Am. Rep. 81; Maine, Carpenter v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 72 Me. 388; 39 Am. Rep. 340; Oregon, Cressley v. Tatom, 9 Oregon 541.

1. 2 Whart. on Ev. (3rd ed.), § 1292; Flato v. Hulhall, 72 Mo. 522; Sloan v. Torry, 78 Mo. 623. The laws of such States must be offered in evidence. Sloan v. Torry, 78 Mo. 623.

There being no proof in a Missouri court of what the Illinois statute is, it will be presumed to be the same as that of Missouri, Illinois being part of the Louisiana purchase, when the common law was not in force. Silver v. Kansas City etc. R. Co., 21 Mo. App. 5.

2. McCulloch v. Norwood, 58 N. Y. 564; Harris v. White, 81 N. Y. 532. See also Wilcox Silver Plate Co. v. Grun, 72 N. Y. 17; Kefeer v. Mason, 36 Ill. 406.

3. Neese v. Farmers' Ins. Co., 55 Iowa 604; Heckman v. Alpaugh, 21 Cal. 225; Marsters v. Lash, 61 Cal. 622; Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255.

In the absence of any statement to the contrary, it is presumed that the law of New York, with regard to the issuing of letters to one of two or more executors appointed by a will, and his power to act as sole executor, is the same as in California. Brown v. San Francisco Gas Light Co., 58 Cal. 426.

Where the administration in Iowa is but ancillary to the original administration in a foreign State and the law applicable to the case in that State is not shown, it will be presumed to be the same as our own. Hadley v. Gregory, 57 Iowa 157. See Creswell v. Slack, 68 Iowa 110.

4. Cutler v. Wright, 22 N. Y. 472; Harris v. White, 81 N. Y. 532.

In the absence of evidence, it will not be presumed that the usury laws of another State impose the same penalty or forfeiture as those imposed by the laws of Arkansas. Grider v. Driver, 46 Ark. 50.

5. See MARRIAGE, vol. 14, p. 519; Piers v. Piers, 2 H. L. Cas. 331; Sastry v. Lembecutting, 6 App. Cas. 364; Harrod v. Harrod, 1 K. & J. 15; Rex v. Brampton, 10 East 282; Redgrave v. Redgrave, 38 Md. 93; Rex v. Creswell, L. R., 1 Q. B. D. 446; Lasederdale Peerage Case, 10 App. Cas. 602; Wilkie v. Collins, 48 Miss. 496; Sichel v. Lambert, 15 C. B., N. S. 781.

proof is on the person denying it.¹ If the presumption of innocence conflict with that of marriage the former will prevail.² The presumption of marriage can only be shaken by the clearest evidence.³ If, however, a connection has an illicit origin the presumption that it continues is stronger than the presumption of marriage.⁴

12. Regularity of Divorce.—A formal decree of divorce is presumed to be valid, and the burden of proof is on the party who would impeach it.⁵

13. Legitimacy.—The fact that any person was born during the continuance of a valid marriage between his mother and any man, or within such a time after the dissolution thereof and before the celebration of another valid marriage, that his mother's husband could have been his father, raises a presumption that he is the legitimate child of his mother's husband, which can only be rebutted by proof that either his mother and her husband had no access to each other at any time when he could have been begotten, regard being had both to the date of the birth and to the physical condition of the husband; or that the circumstances of their access (if any) were such as to render it highly improbable that sexual intercourse took place between them when it occurred.⁶

14. Incapability of Childbearing.—In England, a woman of fifty-two years of age or over is rebuttably presumed to be incap-

1. See MARRIAGE, vol. 14, pp. 520-21. See also DeTharen v. Attorney Gen'l, L. R., 1 App. Cas. C. L. 686; Piers v. Piers, 2 H. L. Cas. 331; Sastry v. Lembeccutting, 6 App. Cas. 364; Jones v. Reddick, 79 N. Car. 290; Canjolle v. Ferre, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 177; Peck v. Peck, 12 R. I. 485; 34 Am. Rep. 702; Holmes v. Holmes, 6 La. Ann. 463; 26 Am. Dec. 482; Cargile v. Wood, 63 Mo. 501.

2. See supra, this title, Conflicting Presumptions and also MARRIAGE, vol. 14, p. 521. See also Catherwood v. Caslon, 13 M. & W. 261; and confer Rooker v. Rooker, 33 L. J. Mat. Cas. 42.

3. "This presumption of law is not lightly to be repelled. It is not to be broken in upon or shaken by a mere balance of probability." Per Lord Lyndhurst in Morris v. Davies, 5 Cl. & Fin. 163, and approved by Lord Cottenham in Piers v. Piers, 2 H. L. Cas. 332. See also Harrison v. Southampton, 22 L. J. Ch. 722; Bredalbane's Case, L. R. 1 H. L. Sc. 182; Cunningham v. Cunningham, 2 Dow. 507.

The presumption of marriage may be rebutted by proof that the woman formerly lived with another man in such a manner as to raise the same presumption of marriage with him. George v. Thomas, 10 U. C., Q. B. 604.

4. Lapsley v. Grierson, 1 H. L. Cas. 498; Cunningham v. Cunningham, 2 Dowl. 483; Blackburn v. Crawford, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 176; Clayton v. Wardell, 4 N. Y. 230; Canjolle v. Farrie, 23 N. Y. 106; Yardley's Estate, 75 Pa. St. 211; Hunt's Appeal, 86 Pa. St. 204; Reading F. Ins. etc. Co.'s Appeal, 113 Pa. St. 204.

5. See DIVORCE, vol. 5, p. 843; Bonman v. Bonman, 64 Ill. 75; Ayers v. Harshman, 66 Ind. 291; Kirrigan v. Kirrigan, 15 N. J. Eq. 146.

There is no presumption that a court of record in another State has jurisdiction to grant a divorce in a case where no service of process upon the libellee appears by the record to have been made. Com. v. Blood, 97 Mass. 538.

6. Stephen's Digest of the Law of Evidence, art. 98. See authorities cited under BASTARDY, vol. 2 p. 137; LEGITIMACY, vol. 13, p. 224; EVIDENCE, vol. 7, p. 97.

able of childbearing,¹ but in this country the courts have refused to adopt such a presumption.²

15. Regularity of Official and Judicial Proceedings.—When any judicial or official act is shown to have been done in a manner substantially regular, the burden of proof is on those who deny that the formal requisites to its validity have been complied with.³

1. In re Widows' Trusts, L. R., 11 Eq. 408; Taylor's, Trusts, 43 L. T. R., N. S. 795; Davidson v. Kingston, L. R., 18 Ch. Div. 213; Maden v. Taylor, 45 L. R. J. Ch. 569; Leng v. Hodges, Jac. 585; Miles v. Knight, 12 Jur. 666; Brown v. Pringle, 4 Hare 124; Dodd v. Wake, 5 De G. & S. 226; Brandon v. Woodthorpe, 10 Beav. 463; Davis v. Bush, 8 Jur. 1114; Edwards v. Tuck, 23 Beav. 271; Lyddon v. Ellison, 19 Beav. 565; Haynes v. Haynes, 35 L. J. Ch. 303; Forty v. Reay, 1 Dart's V. & P. (4th ed.) 320; Groves v. Groves, 12 W. R. 45; Davidson v. Kimpton, L. R., 18 Ch. Div. 213. See also note to In re Apgar, 37 N. J. Eq. 502.

2. In re Millner's Estate, L. R. 14 Eq. 245, a woman aged forty-nine years and nine months, who had been long married to a husband who was still living, was presumed to be incapable of childbearing.

Some of the earlier authorities deny this presumption. See 2 Black. Com. 125; Coke on Litt., 402, 53; Fraser v. Fraser, Jac. 586; Coke on Litt., 28 a; Reynolds v. Reynolds, 1 Dick. 374; Jee v. Audley, 1 Cox 325; Concut v. Soane, 54 L. T., N. S. 656.

3. In Croxton v. May, L. R., 9 Ch. Div. 388, the court refused to presume a woman to be incapable of childbearing whose age is fifty-four years and six months, and who had never had any children, but who had only been married three years.

4. In re Apgar, 37 N. J. Eq. 501; List v. Rodney, 83 Pa. St. 483.

5. Stephen's Digest of the Law of Evidence, art. 101. See EVIDENCE, vol. 1, p. 98; GRAND JURIES, vol. 9, pp. 8, 11.

"After verdict a court in review will assume that all facts necessary for the support of the verdict were proved, unless the contrary appear in the record duly before the court." Wharton on Ev., vol. 2, § 1305; Speers v. Parker, 1 T. R. 141; Jackson v. Pesked, 1 M. & Sel. 237; Davis v. Black, 1 G. & D. 432; Harris v. Goodwyn, 9 Dowl. 409; Goldthorpe v. Hardman, 13 M. & W. 377; Minor v. Bank, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 68; Dobson v. Campbell, 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 319; Addington v. Allen, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 374; Smith v. Keating, 6 C. B. 136; Vivian v. Shipley, Cro. Car. 384; Thorpe v. Thorpe, Lutw. 253; Pippet v. Hearne, 5 B. & Ald. 634; Wilkinson v. Martin, 2 Cr. & J. 658; Delamere v. Reg., L. R., 2 Eng. & Ir. Ap. 419; Bridge v. Grand Junction R. Co., 3 M. & W. 248; Buckout v. Swift, 27 Cal. 433; 87 Am. Dec. 90; Thatcher v. State, 48 Ark. 60; Woods v. Courtney, (Oregon), 17 Pac. Rep. 745; Brown v. Miner, 128 Ill. 148; Trustees etc. v. Stolly, 26 Ill. App. 389; Ricketts v. Birmingham St. R. Co., 85 Ala. 600; Behymer v. Nordloh (Colo.), 21 Pac. Rep. 37; Chamberlain v. Brown, (Neb.) 41 N. W. Rep. 284.

For the application of this principle in criminal cases see R. v. Waters, 1 Den. C. C. 356; R. v. Bowen, 13 Q. B. 790; Beale v. Com., 25 Pa. St. 11.

Bill of exceptions must show affirmatively error complained of. It will not be presumed. Wagers v. Dickey, 17 Ohio 439; Coil v. Willis, 18 Ohio 28.

"Where a matter is so essentially necessary to be proved that had it not been given in evidence the jury could not have given such a verdict; there the want of stating that matter in express terms in a declaration, provided it contains terms sufficiently general to comprehend it in fair and reasonable intendment, will be cured by a verdict," per Lord Ellenborough in Jackson v. Pesked, 1 M. & Sel. 234.

"The verdict cannot be taken to establish more than is necessarily involved in the proof of the facts alleged," per Lord Denman in Davis v. Black, 1 G. D. 432.

"I have always understood the rule to be, that after verdicts all shall be assumed to have been proven at the trial which is necessary to make out the whole charge or defense, as it appears on the declaration or on the pleadings of the cause," per Tindal, C. J., in Harris v. Goodwyn, 9 Dowl. 409. See also AMEND, vol. 1, p. 553; VERDICT.

When a cause is submitted to a jury upon conflicting testimony, there being

16. Regularity of Legislative Proceedings.—In the absence of proof to the contrary it will be presumed that whatever legislative proceedings are necessary to give validity to an act of the legislature have been complied with.¹

17. Regularity in Records and Proceedings of Corporations.—The records and proceedings of a corporation are presumed to be legal, and the burden of proof is on the party assailing them.²

18. Correctness in Dates of Documents.—When any document bearing a date has been proved, it is rebuttably presumed to have been made on the day on which it bears date; and if more documents than one bear date on the same day, they are presumed to have been executed in the order necessary to effect the object for which they were executed, but independent proof no objections to the instructions of the court, if the verdict is consistent with the line of testimony presented by one of the parties to the suit, an appellate court will presume that the jury adopted the line of testimony which is consistent with the verdict. Cooper v. Hall, 22 Neb. 168.

On a settled case, which stated that plaintiffs showed the truth of their allegations, it must be presumed that they proved that their cause of action arose within three years next before the commencement of the action; defendant not having made objection that there was not such evidence, and that being one of their material allegations. Greer v. Herren, 99 N. Car. 492.

The rule in equity, as at law, is that, in the absence of all the testimony upon which the lower court acted, it will be presumed that everything was established which could have been proved under the pleadings by any reasonable intentment. Smith v. Fletcher (Ark.), 11 S. W. Rep. 824.

As to influence of lapse of time in curing defects in judicial records, see Williams v. Eyton, 4 H. & N. 357; Society for Propagation of the Gospel v. Young, 2 N. H. 310; Brown v. Wood, 17 Mass. 68; Seward v. Didier, 16 Neb. 58.

As to the presumptions of jurisdiction of courts of general and limited jurisdiction, see COURTS, vol. 4, p. 453; JURISDICTION, vol. 12, p. 271.

For operation of this presumption of regularity in military courts, see Slade v. Minor, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 139.

1. Knox v. Vinsant, 27 Ark. 278; English v. Oliver, 28 Ark. 320; Worthen v. Badgett, 32 Ark. 515; Chicot Co. v. Davies, 40 Ark. 200; Coleman v. Dobbins, 8 Ind. 156; Miller v. State, 3

Ohio St. 484; Hunt v. Van Alstyne, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 605; Thomas v. Dakin, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 112; Weyand v. Stover, 35 Kan. 546. The courts can, however, and will, if necessary, look into the legislative record to see if an act was properly passed.

Burr v. Ross, 19 Ark. 250; English v. Oliver, 28 Ark. 320; Knox v. Vinsant, 27 Ark. 278; State v. Little Rock etc. R. Co., 31 Ark. 716; Jones v. Hutchinson, 43 Ala. 723; Purdy v. People, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 390; Warner v. Beers, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 134; Spangler v. Jacoby, 14 Ill. 297; 58 Am. Dec. 571; Prescott v. Board of Trustees of Illinois etc. Canal, 19 Ill. 324; Fowler v. Pierce, 2 Cal. 165; State v. McBride, 4. Mo. 303.

2. Grady's Case, 1 De G. J. & S. 504; Lane's Case, 1 De G. J. & S. 504; Hathaway v. Addison, 48 Me. 440; Mussey v. White, 3 Me. 200; Cobleigh v. Young, 15 N. H. 493; Speer v. Bartholemew, 2 Met. (Mass.) 479; State v. Lime, 23 Minn. 521; Louisville v. Hyatt, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 177; Wilson v. State, 16 Tex. App. 497; Bliss v. Kaweah etc. Canal Co., 65 Cal. 502; Pitts v. Temple, 2 Mass. 538; Com. v. Woelper, 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 29; Taylor v. Taylor, 10 Minn. 107.

In an action against an assessor for an imprisonment of the plaintiff for non-payment of a school district tax, alleged to be illegal for want of legal districts in the town, if the arrest is admitted or approved, the burden is on the defendant to prove that the entire town is legally districted by territorial limits. This burden is not shifted by proof of the existence of districts de facto for more than forty years through the entire town, nor by proof that a town record book, now lost, contained a rec-of the correctness of the date will be required if the circumstances are such that collusion as to the date might be practiced, and would, if practiced, injure any person or defeat the objects of any law.¹

19. Regularity as to Formalities of Documents—a. THE GENERAL RULE.—Documents on their face solemnly executed are prima facie presumed to have been executed in conformity with the local law of the place of execution.²

b. PRESUMPTION THAT DOCUMENT WAS STAMPED.—When secondary evidence of a document required by law to be stamped can be given, the burden of proof is on the party alleging it not to have been stamped, unless it be shown to have remained unstamped for some time after its execution.³

c. PRESUMPTION THAT DEED WAS SEALED AND DELIVERED.—When any document purporting to be and stamped as a deed appears or is proved to be or to have been signed and duly attested, it is presumed to have been sealed and delivered, although no impression of a seal appears thereon.⁴

20. Right to Act—a. IN PARTICULAR OFFICE.—All public officers who are proved to have acted as such, are presumed to have been duly appointed to the office until the contrary is shown.⁵

ord of a districting of the entire town, it not appearing that such record was made after the act of 1789, chapter 16, which required territorial districts. Bassett v. Porter, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 418; Clark v. Wardwell, 55 Me. 61.

The return upon a warrant calling a town meeting must show that an attested copy thereof was posted up in some public and conspicuous place in the town where the meeting was to be held. If a town has appointed by vote in legal meeting a different mode of notifying its meetings, it is incumbent upon the party desiring to establish the legality of the meeting to show that it was called in the mode prescribed by the town. Clayton v. Wardwell, 55 Me. 61.

1. Stephen's Digest of the Law of Evidence, art. 85. See BILL OF SALE, vol. 2, p. 276; DATE, vol. 5, p. 78; EVIDENCE, vol. 7, p. 89.

2. Rex v. Gray, 10 B. & C. 807; Rex v. Ashburton, 8 Q. B. 876; Rex v. Whiston, 4 A. & E. 667; Doe v. Mason, 3 Camp. 7; Rex v. Catesby, 2 B. & C. 814; Rex v. Whitchurch, 7 B. & C. 573; Doe v. Bingham, 4 B. & Ald. 672; Brighton Railway Co. v. Fairclough, 2 Man. & G. 674; Clements v. Macheboeux, 92 U. S. 425; Polk v. Wendal, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 87; Bagnell v. Broderick, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 450;

Minter v. Crommelin, 18 How. (U. S.) 87; Bank of U. S. v. Dandridge, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 70; Van Rensselaer v. Vickery, 3 Lans. (N. Y.) 57; Pringle v. Dunn, 37 Wis. 449; 19 Am. Rep. 772; State v. Lawson, 14 Ark. 114; Sadler v. Anderson, 17 Tex. 245.

3. See EVIDENCE, vol. 7, p. 89. See also Hart v. Hart, 1 Hare 1; Pooley v. Goodwin, 4 A. & E. 94; Rex v. Long Buckley, 7 East 45; Crisp v. Anderson, 1 Stark. N. P. 35.

4. Stephen's Digest of the Law of Evidence, art. 87. See EVIDENCE, vol. 7, p. 89.

5. Parke, B., in M'Gahey v. Alston, 2 M. & W. 211; Radford v. McIntosh, 3 T. R. 632; Bevan v. Williams, 3 T. R. 635; McMahon v. Lennard, 6 H. L. Cas. 970; Rex v. Verelst, 3 Camp. 432; Rex v. Jones, 2 Camp. 131; Butler v. Ford, 1 C. & M. 662; Wotton v. Gairn, 16 Ad. & El. N. S. 48; Doe v. Barnes, 8 Q. B. R. 1037; Rex v. Howard, 1 M. & Rob. 187; Rex v. Newton, 1 C. & K. 480; Bunbury v. Matthews, 1 C. & K. 382; Doe v. Brown, 5 B. & Ald. 243; Pritchard v. Walker, 3 C. & P. 212; Rex v. Murphy, 8 C. & P. 310.

This presumption applies even where the title to the office is in issue. McMahon v. Lennard, 6 H. L. Cas. 970.

Presumption will be applied in trial

b. AS MEMBER OF A PARTICULAR PROFESSION.—Also if a person has exercised a particular profession, proof of his so acting raises a presumption of his being entitled to exercise that profession,¹ except in cases where the issue is directly or indirectly whether the plaintiff is entitled to so act, then he must prove his title.²

c. AS CORPORATION.—So the mere fact of a corporation acting as such is sufficient evidence, until contradicted, of its corporate existence,³ and every reasonable intendment will be presumed in favor of the corporate existence.⁴

21. A Letter in Answer Presumed to be Genuine.⁵

22. Business Transactions Presumed to Have Ordinary Effect.—Business transactions, where proved, are assumed, so far as the burden of proof is concerned, to have been performed with the ordinary object of such transactions.⁶

for murder of constable in discharge of his duty. Rex v. Gordon, 1 Leach C. C. 515.

If a person be indicted for an offense committed in his capacity as a public officer, this presumption will apply. Rex v. Rees, 6 C. & P. 606; Rex v. Barrell, 6 C. & P. 124; Rex v. Townsend, C. & M. 178; The circumstances of the case may reduce it to a presumption of fact. Rex v. Goodwin, 1 Lew. C. C. 100.

1. Rex v. Fordinbridge, E. B. & E. 678; Rex v. St. Marylebone, 4 D. & R. 475; Berryman v. Wise, 4 T. R. 366; Greemaire v. Valon, 2 Camp. 143.

2. Collins v. Carnegie, 1 A. & E. 695; Sellers v. Tell, 4 B. & C. 655; Pickford v. Gutch, 8 T. R. 305 (a) sed confer. Tindal, C. J., in Cannell v. Curtis, 2 Scott 379.

3. Rex v. Langton, L. R., 2 Q. B. D. 296; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Sherman, 30 Gratt. (Va.) 602; Calkins v. State, 18 Ohio St. 366; 98 Am. Dec. 121; Oakland Gas Light Co. v. Dameron, 67 Cal. 663; Brown v. Scottish-American Mortgage Co., 110 Ill. 235; Hudson v. Green Hill Seminary, 113 Ill. 618.

Dr. Wharton states the following exceptions to this general rule: 1. Where the question at issue is the due organization of the corporation, when it sues on a debt conditioned on such organization. (See Cook v. Pearce, 23 S. Car. 239). As in Nelson v. Blakey, 54 Ind. 30; Rigelow v. Gregory, 73 Ill. 197; Gent v. Manufacturers' etc. Ins. Co., 107 Ill. 652; as where assessments or subscriptions were conditioned on such organization. 2. Where it claims as against third parties, penalties or forfeitures dependent on its corporate character. 3. Where the question is whether it comes up to a description in a will; where its title is contested by the sovereign; where it asserts the rights of eminent domain."

With the exceptions above mentioned it is enough for a corporation to show by parol, de facto existence; nor is it any reply that the corporation does not exist de jure. Douglass Co. v. Bolles, 94 U. S. 104; New Orleans etc. R. Co. v. Ellerman, 105 U. S. 173; Bank of Manchester v. Allen, 11 Vt. 302; First Parish v. Stearns, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 148; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Glendon, 120 Mass. 97; Trustees etc. v. Hills, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 23; 16 Am. Dec. 429; National Dock R. Co. v. Central R. Co., 32 N. J. Eq. 755; Jersey City Gaslight Co. v. Consumers' Gas Co., 40 N. J. Eq. 427; Thompson v. Cander, 60 Ill. 247; Darst v. Gale, 83 Ill. 136; Miami Powder Co. v. Hotchkiss, 17 Ill. App. 622; Sprague v. Cutler etc. Lumber Co., 106 Ind. 242; Toledo etc. R. Co. v. Johnson, 55 Mich. 456; Stockton etc. G. R. Co. v. Stockton etc. R. Co., 45 Cal. 680; Page v. Bank, 20 Kan. 440; Williams v. Hintermeister, 26 Fed. Rep. 889.

4. See CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 287.

5. See LETTERS, vol. 13, p. 260.

6. Wharton on Ev., vol. 2, § 1239.

"If an old lease expire, and rent is afterwards received, the landlord is presumed to continue a tenancy from year to year, though this might be rebutted by proving that the payment was made under circumstances inconsistent with it; as, for example, under the impression that an old lease was still subsisting." Wharton on Ev., vol. 5, § 1259;

23. Possession Raises a Presumption of Title.—Possession of real or personal property raises a presumption of title in favor of the party in possession.¹ Possession in order to be the ground of Bishop v. Howard, 2 B. & C. 100; Doe v. Taniere, 12 Q. B. 998; Ecclesiastical Comrs. v. Merril, L. R., 4 Ex. 162; Doe v. Crago, 6 C. B. 90; Trent v. Hunt, 9 Ex. R. 24, per Alderson, B.

Under this heading is also put the so-called presumption of fact, that in actions of trover the jury may infer a conversion from unexplained evidence of a demand and refusal. Canuce v. Spanton, 7 Man. & Gr. 903; Stancliffe v. Hardwick, 2 C. M. & R. 1. See CONVENTION, vol. 4, p. 115.

The presumptions under this heading, however, would seem rather to be positive rules of law paraphrased than strictly technical presumptions.

1. ADVERSE POSSESSION, vol. 1. p. 303; LEASE, vol. 12, p. 1036; EJECTMENT, vol. 6, p. 234.

Succession of Alexander, 18 La. Ann. 337. LIMITATIONS OF ACTIONS, vol. 13, p. 694, and see note 1.

Real Property.—Finch v. Alston, 2 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 83; Currier v. Gale, 9 Allen (Mass.) 522; Magee v. Scott, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 148; 55 Am. Dec. 49; Wendell v. Blanchard, 2 N. H. 456; Ward v. McIntosh, 12 Ohio St. 231; Burke v. Hammond, 76 Pa. St. 172; Austin v. Bailey, 37 Vt. 219; 86 Am. Dec. 703.

Personal Property.—Goodwin v. Garr, 8 Cal. 616; Baxter v. Ellis, 57 Me. 178; Vining v. Baker, 53 Me. 544; Millay v. Butts, 35 Me. 139; Linscott v. Trask, 35 Me. 150; Vastine v. Wilding, 45 Mo. 89; 100 Am. Dec. 347; Bordine v. Combs, 15 N. J. L. 412; Wickes v. Adirondack Co., 4 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 250; Fish v. Skut, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 333; Clifton v. Lilley, 12 Tex. 130.

See Weston v. Higgins, 40 Me. 102.

The payment of taxes procuring a policy of insurance describing the premises and naming the person to be insured, the act of giving a promissory note to insure against losses, and the payment of assessments to meet losses are all proper tests of ownership, not conclusive, but competent to be submitted to and weighed by the jury. Hodgson v. Shannon, 44 N. H. 572.

The filing of a will in the probate office and proving the instrument is good prima facie evidence of the right of the devisees named in such will to hold under it. Hodgson v. Shannon, 44 N. H. 572.

Possession of land for nine years, under a claim of title in fee, is prima facie sufficient to support a petition for damages thereto, sustained by reason of the discontinuance of a highway. Hawkins v. Berkshire Co., 2 Allen (Mass.) 254.

Negotiable Instruments.—An illustration of this principle is found in the decisions which hold that possession of a negotiable instrument indorsed in blank is prima facie evidence of title. Wickes v. Adirondack Co., 4 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 250; Crandall v. Schroepel, 1 Hun (N. Y.) 557; James v. Chalmers, 6 N. Y. 209; Ruby v. Culbertson, 35 Iowa 264; Collins v. Gilbert, 94 U. S. 753; Dugan v. U. S., 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 172.

The possession by the plaintiff of a promissory note sued on and its production by him upon the trial, is presumptive of his title or right to sue upon it, and that such right existed when the suit was commenced, and the plaintiff need not be the real or beneficial owner to entitle him to recover. Hovey v. Sebring, 24 Mich. 232; 9 Am. Rep. 122.

Where a promissory note is found in the maker's hands, canceled, his indebtedness thereon is presumptively discharged, and proof that no payment has been made, nor offset surrendered in respect thereof, does not destroy the presumption. Gray v. Gray, 2 Lans. (N. Y.) 173.

The possession of a vessel by persons claiming it as owners, is presumptive evidence of their ownership, and it is only when their title is impeached by contradictory proof that the production of the vessel's register can be necessary. Stacey v. Graham, 3 Duer (N. Y.) 444; Bailey v. Steamer New World, 2 Cal. 370.

While the fact that a widow has possession of bonds which belonged to her husband may be presumptive evidence of her ownership of them, her declarations may reduce her ownership to a life interest; and the fact that on one occasion the claimant of the interest in remainder spoke of the bonds as the widow's, should not necessarily be deemed a bar of his right to maintain his claim. Comer v. Comer, 120 Ill. 420.

such presumption must be such as will give color of title.¹ A mere tortious possession obtained by violence is not possession within the meaning of the rule.² The possession must be such as is consistent with an unqualified ownership.³

24. Soil of Highways, etc., Belongs to the Adjacent Proprietor.—It is a prima facie presumption of law that the title of the soil of a highway is in the adjoining proprietors.⁴ If the land on each side is owned by different proprietors they each own to the middle of the road.⁵

25. Easements Presumed from Unity of Grant.—Upon the principle that the grant of property carries with it all things which are within the power of the grantor to confer and which are necessary to the use and enjoyment of the same, an easement may be presumed from the granting of property to the use and enjoyment of which the easement is necessary.⁶

Continued possession by the grantor for a considerable time after the deed has been recorded supports a presumption of possession under a claim of right. Stevens v. Hulin, 53 Mich. 93.

1. Nieto v. Carpenter, 21 Cal. 455; Magee v. Scott, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 148; 55 Am. Dec. 49; Waldron v. Tuttle, 3 N. H. 340.

Factors, Brokers.—The presumption of ownership resulting from possession, is not applicable to factors, brokers, and other avowed agents, with respect to money or property intrusted to them for the special purposes of their vocation. Succession of Boisblanc, 32 La. Ann. 109.

2. Weston v. Higgins, 40 Me. 102; Clifton v. Lilley, 12 Tex. 130.

3. Nieto v. Carpenter, 21 Cal. 455; Wilson v. Atkinson, 77 Cal. 485; Colvin v. Warford, 20 Md. 357; Linscott v. Trask, 35 Me. 150.

The possession of a servant in the right of the master is such possession as will not raise a presumption of title. Linscott v. Trask, 35 Me. 150.

The fact that a constructive possession only has been held does not change the presumption in favor of a person who has had actual possession during part of the time. Glass v. Gilbert, 58 Pa. St. 266; Hastings v. Wagner, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 216.

4. See HIGHWAYS, vol. 9, p. 375; 2 Smith's L. C. (8th. Am. ed.) 145; Cooke v. Green, 11 Price 736; Hillam v. Headley, Holt 463; Read v. Leeds, 19 Conn. 182; Johnson v. Anderson, 18 Me. 76; Winter v. Peterson, 24 N. J. L. 524; 61 Am. Dec. 678; Cox v. Freedley, 33 Pa. St. 124; 75 Am. Dec. 584; Paul

v. Carver, 26 Pa. St. 223; 67 Am. Dec. 413; Harris v. Elliott, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 25; Morrow v. Willard, 30 Vt. 118.

The presumption of law is that the owner of land abutting on a street is the owner of the fee in the street. Rich v. Minneapolis, 37 Minn. 423.

5. 1 Minor's Insts. (3rd. ed.) 137; Champlin v. Pendleton, 13 Conn. 23; Johnson v. Anderson, 18 Me. 76; Winter v. Peterson, 24 N. J. L. 524; 61 Am. Dec. 678; Paul v. Carver, 26 Pa. St. 223; 67 Am. Dec. 413; Cox v. Freedley, 33 Pa. St. 124; 75 Am. Dec. 584; Morrow v. Willard, 30 Vt. 118.

A conveyance of land bounded by the side of a street gives the grantee a title to the center of it if the grantor had title to that extent, and did not expressly, or by clear implication, reserve it; although the distances set forth in the deed bring the line only to the side of the street; and if such street be vacated, the grantee will have a right to extend his line to the middle of it. Cox v. Freedley, 33 Pa. St. 124; 75 Am. Dec. 584.

6. See EASEMENTS, vol. 6, p. 143.

Broom's Legal Max., p. 478; 2 Minor's Insts. (3rd. ed.), p. 21; Washburn on Easements and Servitudes (4th. ed.) 41; Prescott v. Williams, 5 Met. (Mass.) 429; 39 Am. Dec. 688; Prescott v. White, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 341; 32 Am. Dec. 266; Nichols v. Luce, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 102; 35 Am. Dec. 302; McGuire v. Grant, 25 N. J. L. 356; 67 Am. Dec. 49; Blakely v. Sharp, 9 N. J. Eq. 9; Brakely v. Sharp, 10 N. J. Eq. 206; McMillin v. Cronin, 57 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 53; Lasala v. Holbrook, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 169; 25 Am. Dec. 524; Thompson v. Uglow, 4 Oregon 369; Humph-

26. Documents Over Thirty Years of Age Are Presumed to be Genuine.—When instruments are over thirty years of age, free from suspicion on their face, and come from the proper custody, they are presumed to be genuine and are admissible in evidence without other proof of their authenticity.¹

27. Presumption of Payment After Twenty Years.—In the absence of evidence explaining the delay, the payment of a debt will be presumed after the expiration of twenty years.²

28. Receipt Raises Presumption of Payment.³

29. Presumption of Execution of Instruments as Between Trustee and Beneficiary.—"Where a person in possession of any property is shown to be entitled to the beneficial ownership thereof, there is a presumption that every instrument has been executed which it was the legal duty of his trustees to execute in order to perfect his title."⁴ reys v. Brogden, 12 Ad. & El., N. S. 747.

The grantee of a lot, which fronts on the principal thoroughfare in the city, is not entitled to a way, of necessity, across adjoining lots, to a street on the east. Fischer v. Laack, 76 Wis. 313.

When the only way of access to the plaintiff's land was over the land of strangers or over a tract called "The Factory Field," which was the property of the parties under whom the plaintiff held his land, and which was owned by them when his land was conveyed to him, it was held that he had a way of necessity over the Factory Field. Kimball v. Cochecho R. Co., 27 N. H. 448; 59 Am. Dec. 387.

A building contained two stores below and a hall above, which was used independently, and to which the only mode of access was by a stairway in the south store. The owner of the building conveyed the store to different persons, no mention being made of the hall and stairway. The grantees became tenants in common in the hall. Held, that the owner of the north store had the right to use the stairway in the south store. Galloway v. Bone-steel, 65 Wis. 79; 56 Am. Rep. 616.

A mortgagee of a lot with a house and appurtenances resting partly on another strip of land belonging to the mortgagor and fenced in with the mortgaged lot but not described in the mortgage, was held to take on foreclosure an easement to the use of so much of said strip as is reasonably necessary. John Hancock Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Patterson, 103 Ind. 582; 53 Am. Rep. 550.

1. See ANCIENT DOCUMENTS, vol. 1, p. 565; EVIDENCE, vol. 7, p. 90.

2. See PAYMENT, vol. 18, p. 207; LIMITATIONS OF ACTIONS, vol. 13, p. 669.

3. See PAYMENT, vol. 18, p. 200; RECEIPTS.

4. See EVIDENCE, vol. 7, p. 99; Stephen's Digest of the Law of Evidence, art. 101; Lawson on Presumptive Evidence, p. 403.

See also Mathews on Presumptive Evidence; Sugden on Vendors; 1 Greenl. on Ev., § 46; Doe v. Sybourn, 7 T. R. 2; Doe v. Staple, 2 T. R. 696.

This presumption may be applied, although it be not founded on a belief that such a conveyance was actually made. Hillary v. Waller, 12 Ves. 252.

As between trustee and cestui que trust, mere length of time alone will not raise the presumption. Goodright v. Suynnuer, 1 Ld. Ken. 385; Goodson v. Ellison, 3 Russ. 588; Hillary v. Waller, 12 Ves. 252; Flournoy v. Johnson, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 694; Doe v. Langdon, 12 A. & E., N. S. 719; Langley v. Smyd, 1 S. & S. 45; Keene v. Deardon, 8 East 363.

The jury may be directed to presume a conveyance in less time than twenty years. England v. Slade, 4 T. R. 682.

No conveyance will be presumed as long as the trustees have any duties to perform. Beach v. Beach, 14 Vt. 28; 39 Am. Dec. 204; Doe v. Steaple, 2 T. R. 684; Keene v. Deardon, 8 East 248; Flournoy v. Johnson, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 694. "A conveyance may be presumed where the estate has been dealt with by the beneficial owner in a manner in which reasonable men do not deal with their estates unless they are the legal as well as the beneficial owners." Perry on Trusts, § 354. Ganard v. Tuck, 8 C. B. 248; Cottrell v. Hughes, 15 C. B. 532; Wilson v. Allen, 1 Jac. & W. 611.

This presumption of law is necessary for the quieting of titles.¹

VII. PRESUMPTIONS OF FACT.—1. General Principles.—a. DEFINITION.—A presumption of fact is an inference from a fact to a fact—the strength of the inference for the logical reason. It derives no additional force from positive law.²

The presumption will only be made in favor of the person in whom the beneficial title is clearly vested. Doe v. Cooke, 6 Bing. 179; Tenny v. Jones, 10 Bing. 75; Bartlett v. Downes, 3 B. & C. 616; Noel v. Bewley, 3 Sim. 103; Wilson v. Allen, 1 Jac. & W. 611.

If the defendant shows no title but a mere naked possession, the presumption will not arise. Doe v. Cooke, 6 Bing. 179.

1. Perry on Trusts, § 349.

2. Definitions.—"A presumption of fact is a logical argument from a fact to a fact or, as the distinction is sometimes put, it is an argument which infers a fact otherwise doubtful, from a fact which is proved." Wh. on Ev. (3rd ed.), par. 1226.

"A presumption of fact is properly an inference of that fact from other facts that are known. It is an act of reasoning." Phil. on Ev., C. & H. notes, vol. 1, p. 598 (4th Amer. ed.).

Illustrations.—The malicious intent to kill from the deliberate use of a deadly weapon. Aquatic habits in an animal found with web feet. That goods which disappeared under circumstances which indicate larceny, were stolen by him in whose possession they were found a short time afterwards. The possible illustrations are innumerable. . . . "they are coextensive with the facts, both physical and psychological, which may under any circumstances whatever become evidentiary in courts of justice." Best's Ev. (Am. ed.), § 316.

The one fact being proved or ascertained, the other, its uniform concomitant, is universally and safely presumed. It is this uniformly experienced connection which leads to its recognition by law without other proof; the presumption, however, having more or less force in proportion to the universality of the experience." Greenleaf's Ev., vol. 1, par. 14, 4th ed. (1883).

The fact from which the presumption is to be made must have been proved. Wh. on Ev. (3rd ed.), par. 1226, n. 3.

Must be Made Directly from a Fact Proved.—"In the first place, as the very foundation of indirect proof is the establishment of one or more facts from which the inference is sought to be made, the law requires that the latter shall be established by direct evidence in the same manner as if they were the very facts in issue."

Stark. on Ev., p. 80 (10th Amer. ed.).

The presumption must be directly drawn from a fact in proof, not from a fact presumed from a fact in proof.

In U. S. v. Ross, 92 U. S. 283, the court by Strong, J., said: "No inference of fact or of law is reliable drawn from premises which are uncertain. Whenever circumstantial evidence is to be relied on to prove a fact, the circumstances must be proved, and not themselves presumed."

In McAleer v. McMurray, 58 Pa. St. 126, the plaintiff attempted to prove that he was induced to buy certain stock by showing from facts offered in evidence that he was presumed to have seen and inspected the certificate of organization of the company, and by its false representations it was further presumed that he was induced to buy the stock. The court held that this last was not a presumption of law or fact to be submitted to the jury. The court by Thompson, C. J., said: "I cannot well conceive of a case where a presumption of fact can ever be drawn from presumptions of the same kind."

See also Douglass v. Mitchell, 35 Pa. St. 446.

Wheelton v. Hardisty, 8 El. & Bl. 232; Philadelphia City Pass. Co. v. Henrice, 92 Pa. St. 431; 39 Am. Rep. 699; People v. Hessing, 28 Ill. 410; Pennington v. Yell, 11 Ark. 212.

The Probative Force of Presumptions of Fact Rest on Logic.—It is clear that presumptive evidence and the presumptions to which it gives rise, are not in-

b. STRONG AND WEAK PRESUMPTIONS.—The inference from a fact to a fact is either strong or weak according to the frequency with which, in our experience, the fact in proof proceeds or succeeds the fact inferred. It is a strong presumption of fact, for instance, that one who strikes and kills a defenseless man has done so with malice in his heart, but it is a weak presumption that goods lost were stolen by the person in whose possession they were found a long time after the loss.¹

c. ACCUMULATIVE PRESUMPTIONS.—There is often a single presumption of fact arising from several distinct facts in proof. There are many presumptions which, standing alone, would be of little or no weight, but when considered in connection with other facts, form a link in the chain of evidence and render complete a body of proof which would otherwise be imperfect.²

d. DISTINCTION BETWEEN STRONG PRESUMPTIONS OF FACT AND REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTIONS OF LAW.—There is apparently debited for their probate force to positive law. Best's Ev. (Am. ed.), § 303. Thus the presumption that an estate is situate in a certain place arising from the fact that a written contract to convey is dated at that place, is one of fact and may be rebutted by oral evidence. Mead v. Parker, 115 Mass. 413.

Character of Presumptions of Fact.—

When inferring the existence of a fact from others, courts of justice (assuming the inference properly drawn) do nothing more than apply under the sanction of the law a process of reasoning which the mind of any intelligent being would under similar circumstances have applied for itself; and the force of which rests altogether on experience and observation of the course of nature, the constitution of the human mind, the springs of human action and the usages and habits of society." Best's Ev. (Am. ed.), § 303.

Presumptions of fact belong rather to a treatise on logic than a legal treatise. A discussion of such presumptions would be wholly out of place here if it were not for the fact that under our method of trial by jury the neglect of the judge to point out a presumption of fact, and to show on whom the burden of dispelling such presumptions lies, are grounds for a new trial; as is also the refusal of a jury to find as a fact the presumptions called to their attention by the judge who presided at the court.

1. Sir Edw. Coke divides presumptions of fact into violent, probable, and light or temperate. Co. Litt. 6 b. Best divides them with reference to their effect on the burden of proof. In this he follows the commentators on the civil law. Huberus, Prael. Jur. Civ., lib. 22, tit. 3, n. 15; Matth. de Prob. ch. 2 notes 1 and 5; Westenbergius, Principia Juris., lib. 22; tit. 3, § 26. 27. Cited in Best's Ev. (Am. ed.), § 319. By the burden of proof is here meant rather the effect on the weight of the evidence. See for a distinction between the "weight of the evidence" and burden of proof, BURDEN OF PROOF, vol. 2, p. 655.

2. The following from Pothier is quoted by Mr. Best: "A sister was charged with the payment of a sum of money to her brother; after the death of the brother, there was a question whether this was still due to his successor. Papinian decided that it ought to be presumed that the brother had released to his sister; and he founded the presumptions of such release on three circumstances: 1st. From the harmony which subsisted between the brother and sister; 2nd. From the brother having lived a long time without demanding it; 3rd. From a great number of accounts being produced, which had passed between the brother and sister, upon their respective affairs, in none of which was there any mention of it. Each of these circumstances, taken separately, would only have formed a simple presumption, insufficient to establish that the deceased had released the debt; but their concurrence appeared to Papinian to be sufficient proof of such release." Quoted from Best's Ev. (Am. ed.), § 320, who cites the law "Procula," which will be found great similarity between strong presumptions of fact and rebuttable presumptions of law. The former always and the latter frequently are the result of our long experience of their truth. The distinction lies in the fact that the neglect of the judge to call the attention of the jury to a strong presumption of fact, from a fact or facts in proof, affords ground on which it may be urged that the verdict should be set aside. When, however, from the evidence, there is a presumption of law, the neglect of the judge to tell the jury that, as a matter of law, certain facts being proved, they must assume certain other facts to be true, or their refusal to do so is ground for a new trial as a matter of right. When from the evidence there is a strong presumption of fact, the judge can only tell the jury that they should make the presumption. If the jury do not choose to do so, the verdict is not set aside as a matter of right; but in many cases the result is practically the same, as the court will invariably set aside a verdict in which the jury has ignored a strong presumption of fact, on the ground that the verdict is against the weight of the evidence.¹

Dig., lib. 22, tit. 3, l. 26, and 1 Ev. Poth., art. 816.

1. The Distinction.—"The resemblance between inconclusive presumptions of law, and strong presumptions of fact, cannot have escaped notice—the effect of each being to assume something as true until it is rebutted; and, indeed, in the Roman law, and in other systems where the decision of both law and fact is intrusted to a single judge, the distinction between them becomes in practice almost imperceptible. But it must never be lost sight of in the common law, where the functions of the judge and jury are usually kept distinct. Best's Ev. (Am. ed.), § 323.

The same author marks the true theoretic difference in the following sentence: "It has been already stated, as a characteristic distinction between presumptions of law and presumptions of fact, either mixed or simple, that, where the former are disregarded by a jury, a new trial is granted as a matter of right, but that the disregard of any of the latter, however strong or obvious, is only ground for a new trial at the discretion of the court." Best's Ev. (Am. ed.), § 327.

The Distinctions Frequently Lost Sight of.—Practically, however, we find the same presumption often spoken of as a presumption, first of fact, and then of law. As, for instance, in the following: "Whether or not a payment by a trader is made in contemplation of bankruptcy, while being left to the jury, has been considered so much a question of law, that though two juries have decided it in the negative, the court if satisfied that their conclusion is erroneous, will send the case down for a third trial." Gibson v. Musket, 3 Scott, N. R., p. 434. Coltman, J., remarked: "Though the question in this case is one that must be presented to a jury, it is in reality a question of law."

This confusion between law and fact which apparently makes the court judge the fact as well as the law of the case has been condemned; and the wisdom in the action of the court in the above case in sending the case down for a third trial doubted. Hilliard, New Trials, ch. 2, par. 2. State v. Farish, 23 Miss. 483; Best Ev. (Am. ed.), § 327.

Disregard of the Obvious Presumptions of Fact by a Jury Ground for a New Trial.—The reason for the power on the part of the court to grant a new trial in cases is that, though questions of fact are the peculiar province of the jury, the courts, by virtue of their general controlling power over everything which relates to the administration of justice, will usually grant a new trial when an important presumption of fact, or an important mixed presumption, has been disregarded by the jury. But new trials will not always be granted when successive juries disregard such a presumption." Best's Ev. (Am. ed.), § 327.

As to how many new trials will be

e. CONFLICTING PRESUMPTIONS.—Since, from the proof of any fact, some presumption, either strong or weak, is sure to arise in the trial of every case, there are always conflicting presumptions. The rules for determining their relative weight are rules for the practical reason only, not rules of law, and while much discussed by the civilians, have been little considered by common law judges.¹

f. MIXED PRESUMPTIONS.—There is a class of presumptions of law which are treated as presumptions of fact. Where it is evident to the judge at the trial of the cause that great injustice will be done if the strict technical proof of rights required by law is required, he may allow the jury to presume, or even instruct them to presume that as proved which the evidence offered, while it does not contradict, is nevertheless wholly inadequate to establish. The cases where the courts will do this usually arise where long established rights would otherwise be defeated by lack of granted when a presumption of fact has been disregarded, see Foster v. Steele, 3 Bing. N. Cas. 892; Foster v. Allenby, 5 D. P. C. 619; Davies v. Roper, 2 Jurist, N. S. 167.

As a general rule no more than two trials will be granted. "Even if on nicely scrutinizing all the evidence, we have a doubt whether the verdict was right, it could never be right for us to make no weight of two verdicts by a jury, in order to take the chance of a third." Per Lord Mansfield, in Swinerton v. Marquis of Stratford, 3 Taunt. 233. See also NEW TRIAL, vol. 16, p. 554, n. 7. For cases in which three trials were granted, see Gibson v. Mirskett, 3 Scott 419.

Failure of the Court to Call Attention to Strong Presumptions of Fact.—A new trial will also be granted on the failure of the trial judge to instruct the jury as to their duty to make the strong presumptions of fact which appear from the evidence. Thus the corporation of Truso in 1795 made a lease of the office of Meter, with all fees, emoluments, etc., arising from the measuring of coal imported. It was proved that the corporation had been accustomed for nearly sixty years to receive these payments upon all coal imported into the port. The judge at the trial told the jury that he was not aware that there was any rule of law to prevent them from presuming the immemorial existence of the right from the modern usage; but he did not expressly advise them that they ought to make such a presumption, unless some evidence to the contrary appeared. The court granted a new trial. Parke, B., said: "It is difficult to say, after looking at the report of the learned judge, that there was any misdirection;" but he adds, "The correct mode of presenting the point to them would have been, that, for uninterrupted modern usage they should find the immemorial existence of the payment, unless some evidence is given to the contrary. That is the ordinary mode in which such questions are left to the jury, and it is very important that the rule should be observed . . ." Jenkins v. Harney, 4 C. M. & R. 894.

1. Best's Ev. (Am. ed.), §§ 331, 332, 333, 334, has laid down the following general rules:

1. "Special presumptions take precedence of general" Menochius de Præsumptionibus, lib. 1, quæst. 29, notes 7 & 8; 2 Ev. Poth. 332. This rests on the general principle that all general inferences are capable of being easily rebutted by direct proof of specific facts negating the applicability of the general presumption to the particular case. Mr. Best cites, as an example of this, Rowe v. Brenton, 8 B. & C. 737, where the general presumption that the owner of the surface of the land owns the minerals under it (Rowbotham v. Wilson, 8 H. L. Cas. 348) was rebutted by the presumption arising from the fact of the use of those minerals by others. See also Rowe v. Grenfel, R. & M. 396; Jayne v. Price, 5 Taunt. 326; Miles v. Rose, 5 Taunt. 705; Reg. v. Montague, 4 B. & C. 508; Mayor of Lynn v. Turner, Cowp. 86.

2. "Presumptions derived from the course of nature are stronger than proof of their origin.¹ A mixed presumption is therefore similar to a presumption of law, in that, unlike other presumptions of fact, it is not founded on man's experience of its truth in fact, but on expediency. On the other hand, it is treated as a presumption of fact. The refusal of the jury to adopt a presumption of this character is not ground for a new trial as a matter of right.

casual presumptions." See infra, this title, Physical Presumptions.

3. "Presumptions are favored which give validity to acts." See supra, this title, Innocence in Criminal Cases.

4. "The presumption of innocence is favored in law." See supra, this title, Innocence in Criminal Cases.

1. Besides the mixed presumptions mentioned in the text there are three other distinct classes of cases which have been considered by text writers under the term of "mixed presumptions." See cases cited in Best's Ev. (Am. ed.), §§ 324, 325.

First, Cases where the court has instructed the jury to find as a fact that which is evidently not a fact. Illustrations of this class serve to show the danger of such artificial presumptions. In Powell v. Milbanke, Cowp. 103 (n), Lord Mansfield advised a jury to presume a grant from the crown on the strength of enjoyment under two presentations stolen from the Crown. Lord Eldon condemned this case in Harmood v. Oglander, 8 Ves., 130, n. (a). See also Gibson v. Clark, 1 Jac. & W. 159, 161, n. (a), where Eyre, C. B., spoke of it as "presumption run mad."

Second. Where the court has refused to grant a new trial, though the jury under permission from the judge at the trial has presumed that which is evidently contrary to fact. Eldridge v. Knott, Cowp. 214, per Lord Mansfield, citing, Mayor of Hull v. Horner, Cowp. 102.

"In the case of new trials," says Lord Kenyon, Ch. J., in Wilkinson v. Payne 4 T. R. 468, "it is a general rule that in a hard action where there is something on which the jury has raised a presumption agreeably to the justice of the case, the court will not interfere by granting a new trial, where the objection does not lie in point of law."

He then mentions the following illustration which indicates the absurdities resulting from allowing the sympathies of the jury to find that as a fact which reason shows is not a fact. In an action on the game laws it was suggested that the gun was not charged with shot, but that the bird might have died in consequence of fright; and the jury having given a verdict for the defendant the court refused to grant a new trial.

The case of Wilkinson v. Payne, 4 T. R. 468, was one in which the jury had found a legal marriage, though it appeared in evidence that the marriage was not a legal one, because neither party was of age at the time the marriage relations commenced, and when the husband came of age, and a legal marriage ceremony could have been performed, the wife was on her death-bed, in extremis. See the criticism on this case by Sir W. D. Evans, 2 Ev. Poth. 330.

"The power of directing the jury to what length they may venture, has often been stated beyond due limits, by the judges, for, in cases of hardship they have urged the juries to presume facts which are manifestly incredible." Gresley Evid. in Equity, p. 484.

Presumptions of the Second Kind Condemned.—Presumptions of this kind have been generally condemned. Cockburn, C. J., in Angus v. Dalton, 3 Q. B. D. 105, said, speaking of presumptions as to the existence of grants: "Juries were directed so to find in cases in which no one had the faintest belief that any grant had ever existed, and where the presumption was known to be a mere fiction. Well might Sir W. D. Evans, while admitting the utility of this doctrine, say that its introduction was 'a perversion of legal principles and an unwarrantable assumption of authority.'" But see contra remarks of Lord Blackburn in Dalton v. Angus, 6 App. Cas. 812.

For examples in which the jury have not been allowed to make such presumptions, see Fenwick v. Reed, 5 B. & Ald. 232; Wright v. Smithies, 10 East 409; Reg. v. The Chapter of Exeter, 12 A. & E. 512.

The cases leave it almost doubtful whether the law recognizes this class of presumptions. They simply illus-

g. PRESUMPTIONS OF FACT AND BURDEN OF PROOF.—The weight of evidence depends upon facts which are proved directly, and the facts which can be presumed from what is proved. Every presumption of fact has more or less effect on the weight of the evidence. Presumptions of fact, unlike presumptions of law, do not affect the burden of proof; but the result of strong presumptions of fact is to compel the party who would dispel them to introduce testimony to alter the weight of the evidence.¹

2. Psychological Presumptions.—a. DEFINITION.—A psychological presumption is one which infers the existence of a particular mental state; such as knowledge, ignorance, love, hatred, malice, pleasure, pain, etc. From their subjective nature the thoughts and feelings which form the conscious existence of our fellow-men must always be a matter of inference.²

b. KNOWLEDGE OF FACT—WHEN PRESUMED.—In performing any act it is a presumption of fact that the actor, if not totally bereft of his reason, knew more or less perfectly the conditions which surrounded him. How far we may infer this knowledge, as also its definiteness and accuracy depends upon the particular circumstances of each case.³

trate the unwillingness of judges in particular instances to set aside the judgment of juries. In the words of Mr. Gresley each case "but adds one to the many thousand of absurd and unwarrantable decisions, which juries will venture upon during their brief and irresponsible authority."

Mixed Presumptions Proper.—The only distinctly recognized class of presumptions are those spoken of in the text, viz: that class of cases where the jury is allowed or recommended to make presumptions which, while not contrary to fact are greater than is warranted by the facts directly shown in evidence. " . . . It is the every day practice for judges to advise juries to presume without proof the most solemn instruments, such as charters, grants, and other public documents, as likewise all sorts of private conveyances." Best's Ev. (Am. ed.), § 324. Thus, evidence of adverse possession for more than twenty years warrants the presumption that the possessor had a deed of the property possessed, and all things necessary to give the deed effect were duly done. Brattle Square Church v. Bullard, 2 Met. (Mass.) 363. For other instances see Melvin v. Locks and Canals, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 255; Ryder v. Hathaway, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 298; Valentine v. Piper, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 85; White v. Loring, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 319; Mc-

Nair v. Hunt, 5 Mo. 300; Hepburn v. Auld, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 262; Ma-verick v. Austin, 1 Bailey (S. Car.) 59. Also supra, this title, Adverse Possession, etc., Raises a Presumption of Title to Real Estate; EVIDENCE, vol. 7, p. 98.

1. BURDEN OF PROOF, vol. 2, p. 655.

2. Wh. Evid. (3rd ed.) par. 1240: "Psychological facts are those which have their seat in an animate being by virtue of the qualities by which it is constituted animate, as, for instance, the sensations or recollections of which he is conscious, his intellectual assent to any proposition, the desires or passions by which he is agitated, his animus or intention in doing particular acts, etc." Best's Ev. (Am. ed.), § 12.

3. Wharton on Ev. par. 1243.

Distinguished from the Doctrine of Estoppel.—Presumptions of this kind, while closely connected, must not be confused with the irrefutable presumptions of law arising from acts which form the basis of the doctrine of estoppel. See supra, this title, Conclusive Presumptions of Law.

Knowledge of Notorious Facts.—Besides a knowledge of heat and cold, the existence of states of war and peace, and public events of importance, men may be presumed to know of events much discussed at the time, and especially when they are indirectly interested in such events, thus:

During the legal-tender controversy, A to avoid litigation, agreed to pay B in notes for a bond and mortgage payable in "money," and if at any time thereafter it should be decided by the Supreme Court of the United States that this was not a good legal tender, on return of the notes he would pay "B" in gold. Held, that the jury could presume the parties knew of the case of Heburn v. Griswold, then before the Supreme Court involving the constitutionality of the legal-tender act, and that they referred to this specific case when they said: "If any time hereafter it should be decided by the Supreme Court etc," Woodruff v. Woodruff, 52 N. Y. 53.

Knowledge of Business Men as to Facts Connected with Their Business.—A man in a particular business may be presumed to know the general customs of the trade in which he is engaged.

Thus it is a reasonable presumption that those who are dealing in articles of commerce, especially those who purchase by the wholesale from importers, are acquainted with the different names by which such articles are known to the commercial world. Moore v. Des Arts, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 636.

An underwriter can be presumed to have read Lloyd's Shipping List. Mackintosh v. Marshall, 11 M & W. 116. In this case the weight of the presumption was avoided by showing that the underwriter had received a letter sent for the purpose of deceiving him and stating a false time for the vessel's sailing.

A and B were both brokers. A ordered B to sell shares for him. Held, that the jury could presume that the seller knew the usages of trade for brokers to become responsible to each other in such dealings: viz, that if he did not deliver the shares to the broker, who acted as agent in contracting for their sale, the agent could go into the market and buy shares to fulfill his contract with third parties, charging the difference to the delinquent broker. Bayliffe v. Butterworth, 1 Ex. Rep. 424. See also Sutton v. Tatham, 10 A. & E. 27; Graves v. Legg, 11 Ex. R. 642.

Contracts between brokers must be interpreted according to the rules of the stock exchange.

Taylor v. Staay, 2 C. B., N. S. 175; Bayley v. Wilkins, 7 C. B. 886; Dun- can v. Hill, L. R., 6 Exch. 255; Grissell v. Bristowe, L. R., 4 C. P. 36.

See BY-LAWS, vol. 2, p. 710; LIS PENDENS, vol 13, p. 709.

One engaged in the Bombay trade may be presumed to know that it is the custom to compress bales of cotton before shipment and that freight is measured on the bales so compressed. Buckle v. Knoop, 36 L. J. Exch. 49.

Kelly, C. B., delivering an opinion in this case, said: "I think the jury may presume, and the jury were bound to presume, that any one who enters into a contract of a nature commonly and frequently entered into amongst persons dealing in a particular commodity or engaged in a particular trade to which that contract relates knows, as he is bound to know, of every usage bearing upon the interpretation of a contract of such a nature."

Insurers may be presumed to know the custom of vessels in dealing with freight insured.

An underwriter insured cargoes to the coast of Labrador. Held, he could be presumed to know the custom of trade for vessels not to discharge their cargoes for three or four weeks after the arrival off the coast. Noble v. Kennoway, 2 Dougl. 510.

In DaCosta v. Edmunds, 4 Camp. 141, Lord Ellenborough left it to the jury to say whether it was usual to store carboys of vitriol on deck, and told them if there was a usage to that effect they were bound to take notice of it.

One may be presumed to know the effect of that which he does in the course of business thus: An attorney who draws the articles of copartnership may be presumed to know the liability of those who form the partnership.

Burritt v. Dickson, 8 Cal. 113; but all the employees of a railroad cannot be presumed to know the schedule for trains, but only such as are directly connected with them. Georgia R. Co. v. Rhodes, 56 Ga. 645.

Regularity in Business.—A clerk indorsed on the back of a bill: "March 4th delivered a copy to C. D." It being shown that it was his duty, after delivering copies of bills so to indorse the original, it may be presumed that the bill was duly delivered. Champneys v. Peck, 1 Stark 404. See also Patteshall v. Turford, 3 B. & Ad. 890; Pritt v. Fairclough, 3 Camp. 305.

On relevancy of all recitals of facts

c. GENUINENESS OF DOCUMENTS RAISES PRESUMPTION OF TRUTH.—This means that when it is found that a document in documents to prove those facts, see EVIDENCE, vol. 7, pp. 75, 76.

Knowledge of Facts Bearing on Contract.—One who enters into a contract may be presumed to know all the material facts bearing on that contract.

See Burton v. Blinn, 23 Vt. 151. See CONTRACTS, vol. 3, pp. 867, 868.

Knowledge of the Contents of Papers.—Men may be presumed to have read and to know the contents of the papers which they sign. In fact when such paper is offered in evidence against them they are estopped from denying such knowledge.

See McKenzie v. Hesketh, L. R., 7 Ch. Div. 675, and cases cited in Wharton's Evidence, § 1243.

When, however, a document is offered in evidence by those not parties to it, the fact that one has read what he has signed is a mere presumption of fact.

Rule as to Wills.—It is for the jury to say whether the document signed by the testator, and purporting to be his will, is his will.

To be his will, the testator must as a matter of fact intend at the time of signing, the particular distribution of his property provided for in the document. The fact that he has signed it is only strong presumptive evidence that it is his will.

These propositions were at one time doubted by Sir Creswell Cresswell.

See Middlehurst v. Johnson, 30 L. J. 14; and Cunliffe v. Cross, 3 S. & T. 37; 32 L. J. 68.

In Attler v. Atkinson, L. R., 1 P. & D. 670, Lord Penzance, Sir J. P. Wilde thus addressed the jury: "The question of fact is, did Mrs. Newcome really ever read the contents of this document? If you are satisfied that she read it, then, as a proposition of law, I feel bound to direct you that she must be taken to have known and approved of its contents." But Lord Chancellor Cairns, in case of Fulton v. Andrew, L. R., 7 H. L. Cas. 448, in commenting on the above said in substance that there was no unvarying rule of law on the matter, and that if the jury were satisfied that the instrument though read over to the testator was not fully comprehended by him, they should presume that it was not his will.

In Fulton v. Andrew, L. R., 7 H. L. Cas. 448, Lord Hatherley, speaking of the existence of the supposed rule of law, that when a testator of sound mind had a will read over to him, and then signed it, that all further inquiry concerning his intention was at an end, said: "No doubt those circumstances afford a very grave and strong presumption that the will has been duly and properly executed by the testator, still, circumstances may exist which may require that something further shall be done in the matter than the mere establishment of the fact of the testator having been a person of sound mind and memory, and also having had read over to him that which had been prepared for him and which he executed as his will."

Continuing and speaking of the strength of the presumption, he says: "One is strongly impressed with the consideration that, according to the natural habits and conduct of men in general, if a man signs any instrument, he being competent to understand that instrument, and having had it read over to him, there is a strong presumption that it has been duly executed, and that very strong evidence is required in opposition to it in order to set aside an instrument so executed."

See also Hastilow v. Stobie, 1 L. R. P. 64.

Presumption as to Knowledge of Condition on Railway Tickets.—A jury should not be instructed to infer from the fact that a man buys a railway ticket that he has read the conditions in small type on the back. Parker v. South-Eastern R. Co., 25 W. R. 97 (Weekly Reporter, London).

The defendant asked the judge to rule that if the plaintiff had read part of the directions on the ticket he had read them all. The judge declined so to rule, and instructed the jury "That there was no such presumption, but that the question whether the notice of such limitation was brought home to the plaintiff was one of fact to be decided by them on all the evidence, and the inferences to be by them drawn and that the said reading of a part of the conditions on the ticket was a circumstance to be by them weighed in passing upon this question."

is written or executed by the person who purports to write or execute it, there is a presumption of fact that such person believed the truth of the statements which he set down as facts. The proof of the genuineness of a document reciting certain events is therefore evidence, from which may be inferred their actual occurrence.¹

d. PRUDENCE IN AVOIDING DANGER—WHEN PRESUMED.—It is usual for one who perceives danger to avoid it, and therefore the jury may presume that one in a dangerous situation will use more than ordinary care.² The degree of care which one may be presumed to exercise depends on the intelligence of the person. With adults the presumption of care is strong, but only a slight amount of prudence will be attributed to children.³

e. PRESUMPTIONS OF INTENT—(1) In General.—The intent with which one performs an act must be inferred from the act itself and from the surrounding circumstances. Like other presumptions of fact, the strength of such a presumption varies with each case.⁴ Intents can never become subject of presumptions of law, either rebuttable or irrebuttable. When it is said that from certain acts the law presumes an intent, what is meant is that the intention with which the act is done is immaterial.⁵

(2) Adequate Purpose.—Men, or bodies of men who are acting in concert, may be presumed to have a purpose in their acts. This purpose may be inferred from their situation and from their acts. Acts in business may be presumed to have their ordinary

On appeal exceptions to charge overruled. Malone v. Boston etc. R. Co., 12 Gray (Mass.) 388; 74 Am. Dec. 598.

1. Paley's Evid. Introd. Chap.; Wharton's Evid., par. 1251.

The genuineness and the truth of the facts recited in the document are two distinct things. The latter is simply a logical inference from the former. Quinct. V. 5; L. 4, D. xxii, 4; L. 26, § 2, D. xvi. 3; Endemann 258.

2. Clinton v. Root, 88 Mich. 182; 55 Am. Rep. 671.

The jury may presume that one stopped, looked, and listened before crossing a railroad track. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Weber, 76 Pa. St. 157; Whitford v. Southbridge, 119 Mass. 564. In the Pennsylvania case this was spoken of by Williams, J., as a presumption of law.

That the presumption is not absolute is shown by the case of Wilcox v. Rome Sch. R. Co., 39 N. Y. 358; 100 Am. Dec. 440, where one having been struck by a train at a crossing of a country road, where the track could be seen for a long distance, was presumed not to have stopped, looked, and listened.

See also Whar. on Ev., § 1255 and cases cited; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, vol. 4, p. 91; NEGLIGENCE, vol. 16, p. 448.

3. Wharton's Negligence, §§ 310, 315, 322; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, vol. 4, p. 42.

4. For an example of a logical inference of an intent, see Knapp v. White, 23 Conn. 529. See also Wharton on Ev. 1258.

5. A good illustration of the above is found in the distinction between fraud in fact and fraud in law to which intent is immaterial. It is sometimes said that from certain facts fraud will be presumed. This is misleading. The practical disregard of the intent is shown in Foster v. Charles, 7 Bing. 105, where the judge having explained to the jury the distinction between fraud in fact and fraud in the legal acceptance of the term, the jury found for the plaintiff, and added that there was no fraudulent intention on the part of the defendant, but that he had committed a fraud in object.¹ In an action of trover, demand and refusal are evidence of a conversion.²

From the passing of a new statute the legislature may be presumed to have intended to repeal all laws which conflict with or hinder the enforcement of its provisions.³

(3) Presumption of Malice in Criminal Cases.—From certain facts, such as the deliberate use of a deadly weapon, the presence of malice, or a wicked and corrupt heart can be presumed.

the legal acceptance of the term. The court refused a motion for new trial.

1. Wharton on Ev., § 1259.

2. Caunce v. Spanton, 7 M. & Gr. 903, action of trover for converting a cart. Refusal to deliver a cart on demand on the ground that a third person was part owner was considered evidence to go to a jury of conversion. On what is not evidence for which a jury may presume a conversion, see, Towne v. Lewis, 7 C. B. 608.

3. A subsequent act making a different provision on the same subject is not to be construed as explanatory but as an implied repeal of the former act. Columbian Mfg. Co. v. Vanderpoel, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 556.

Of two repugnant statutes the last operates as a repeal of the other, so far as the repugnancy exists but no further. Harrington v. Rochester, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 547; Bowen v. Lease, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 221; Williams v. Potter, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 316; People v. Deming, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 271; Van Rensselaer v. Snyder, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 302.

When a new statute is evidently intended to cover the whole of the subjects to which it relates, it repeals by implication all prior statutes. U. S. v. Barr, 4 Sawy. (U. S.) 254; Red Rock v. Henry, 106 U. S. 596; U. S. v. Clafilin, 97 U. S. 546; Dowdell v. State, 58 Ind. 333; State v. Rogers, 10 Nev. 319; Tafoya v. Garcia, 1 N. Mex. 480; Campbell v. Case, 1 Dakota 17; Andrews v. People, 75 Ill. 605; Clay Co. v. Chickasaw Co., 64 Miss. 534; Lyddy v. Long Island City, 104 N. Y. 218; Stingle v. Nevel, 9 Oregon 62; State v. Studt, 31 Kan. 245.

Repeals by implication are not favored in law, and are only allowed where inconsistency and repugnancy are plain and unavoidable.

Potters Dwaris, p. 156. See also, Cooley on Const. Lim., p. 182; Cape Girardeau Co. Ct. v. Hill, 118 U. S. 68; Henderson v. Tobacco, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 652; McCool v. Smith, 1 Black (U.

S.) 459; Tohen v. Texas Pac. R. Co., 2 Woods (U. S.) 346; Towle v. Marrett, 3 Me. 22; 14 Am. Dec. 206; Naylor v. Field, 25 N. J. L. 287; Evernham v. Hulit, 45 N. J. L. 53; Kilgore v. Com., 94 Pa. St. 495; Rounds v. Waymart, 81 Pa. St. 395; Somerset etc. Road, 74 Pa. St. 61; Lehman v. McBride, 15 Ohio St. 573; Dodge v. Gridley, 10 Ohio 173; Hirn v. State, 1 Ohio St. 20; Jeffersonville etc. R. Co. v. Dunlap, 112 Ind. 93; Water Works Co. v. Buckhart, 41 Ind. 364; Branham v. Lange, 16 Ind. 497; Spencer v. State, 5 Ind. 41; Connors v. Carp River Iron Co., 54 Mich. 168; In re Ryan, 45 Mich. 173; Swartwout v. Michigan A. L. R. Co., 24 Mich. 389; People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 481; East St. Louis v. Maxwell, 99 Ill. 439; Covington v. East St. Louis, 78 Ill. 548; Shields v. Bennett, 8 W. Va. 74; State v. Cain, 8 W. Va. 720; Home Ins. Co. v. Taxing District, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 644; Greeley v. Jacksonville, 17 Fla. 174; Parker v. Hubbard, 64 Ala. 203; Iverson v. State, 52 Ala. 170; Hearn v. Brogan, 64 Miss. 334; Swann v. Buck, 70 Miss. 268; New Orleans v. Southern Bank, 15 La. Ann. 89; State v. Bishop, 41 Mo. 16; State v. Smith, 44 Tex. 443; Scales v. State, 47 Ark. 476; 58 Am. Rep. 768; Baum v. Raphael, 57 Cal. 361; Denver Circle R. Co. v. Nestor, 10 Colo. 403; Sheridan v. Salem, 14 Oregon 328; State v. Wright, 14 Oregon 365; Fleischner v. Chadwick, 5 Oregon 152; State v. Berry, 12 Iowa 58; Attorney-Gen'l v. Brown, 1 Wis. 513; Attorney-Gen'l v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 35 Wis. 425; State v. Cross, 38 Kan. 696.

A law which merely re-enacts a former one does not repeal an intermediate act. Cooley Const. Lim. (6th ed.) p. 182, (n.) 4.

See Gaston v. Merriam, 33 Minn. 271.

A construction contrary to reason will not be presumed, unless the intention is indicated in express terms. Neenan v. Smith, 50 Mo. 525.

Like all other presumptions of intent, where there is a strong presumption of malice in fact, it has often been treated as a presumption of law. Malice, however, is a state of the mind. We can never positively assert that an act, such as killing after time for deliberation, was done after the actor had debated the matter with himself, or with malice, though from the facts in evidence it is extremely probable that both deliberation and malice were present. Again it is against the policy of the law for the judge to direct the jury to find the guilt of the accused from certain facts in evidence even if he fail to put in evidence other facts tending to shake the weight of the evidence against him. Neither in logic nor in the policy of the law, therefore, is there any call for treating presumptions of malice in criminal cases as presumptions of law either rebuttable or irrebuttable.¹

And it will not be presumed when another construction can be given that the legislature intended to pass unconstitutional laws. Farnum v. Blackstone Canal Corp., 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 46.

Or to have discharged the public rights. Bennett v. McWhorter, 2 W. Va. 441.

1. See HOMICIDE, vol. 9, p. 725; MALICE, vol. 14, p. 5; INTENT, vol. 11, p. 377. For a full discussion of the fallacy in treating presumption of malice and other presumptions of intent, as presumption of law, see Wharton Crim. Ev., § 738. For opposite opinion see Taylor's Ev., p. 71.

Confusion in English Judicial Opinions.

—Great confusion has undoubtedly existed in the minds of the English judges on this question. In Reg. v. Wallace, 3 Tr. Com. L. R. 38, which was an indictment for publishing a libel, one of the jury asked the chief justice whether the word "malice" being in the indictment they were not to be satisfied that the traverser was actuated by a malicious intention toward the persons referred to in the publication, and the chief justice replied by stating that undoubtedly the jury must find the publication was malicious, but that prima facie it was a presumption of law; that if a man published a libel on another it was malicious. It is doubtful whether the learned judge thought that it was a presumption of law in the sense that if the jury had refused to adopt it a new trial would have been had as a matter of right. The subject is not made any clearer in the appellate court. Crampton, J., commenting on the ruling said: "Now I do not mean to say that malice is not a question for the jury; undoubtedly it is a question for the jury; but what we are now considering is, how is that question to be maintained in evidence? And if the primary evidence establish that the act is libelous and injurious, the jury are bound under the direction of the judge, to presume malice in the first instance."

See also the opinion of Cresswell, J., in Reg. v. Noon, 6 Cox C. C. 137.

Of late years the presumption of malice has been treated as one of fact, in Reg. v. Labouchere, 14 Cox C. C. 419.

Presumptions of Malice in the Act of Killing.—In the United States this presumption has been treated uniformly as one of fact to be left to the jury. Thus an instruction which practically took the question whether the accused acted in self-defense from the jury has been declared erroneous. Brown v. State, 9 Neb. 157. See also Hawthorne v. State, 58 Miss. 788. In the latter case it was held that on a trial for murder, where homicide is conceded, and all attending circumstances appear in evidence, and no excuse or justification is shown, the burden of proving malice is still on the commonwealth.

In U. S. v. Armstrong, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 446, the court by Curtis, J., said: "In the case U. S. v. Mingo, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 1, this court, after careful consideration laid down the rule, that whether the crime be murder or manslaughter is not to be decided upon any presumption arising from the mere fact of killing, but that the government having the burden of proving the homicide, must offer sufficient evidence that the killing was malicious." See, however, Murphy v. Com., 23 Gratt. (Va.) 960, where the pre-

(4) Presumption of Malice in Civil Cases.—The presumption of malice in civil as in criminal cases, is a presumption of fact. The existence of ill-will towards a particular individual or set of individuals, whether considered on the criminal or civil side of the court, can only be the result of a logical inference.¹

f. NEGLIGENCE—WHEN PRESUMED.—Whether an accident occurred as the result of the careless and negligent conduct of an individual or individuals is a fact to be determined by the jury. But the jury have been allowed and even advised to presume such negligence from the mere happening of an accident whose real cause is unexplained except in so far as any explanation which does not presume negligence appears impossible.²

sumption that a man intended to kill from the deliberate use of a deadly weapon, was treated as a presumption of law. Also the charge to the jury in State v. Hessenkamp, 17 Iowa 27.

1. See INTENT, vol. 11, p. 377; MALICE, vol. 14, p. 5. Confusion frequently arises from the fact that the intent with which an act is performed is often spoken of as necessary to constitute an injury to the plaintiff, when in strictness the intent has nothing to do with the right of the plaintiff to recover.

In an action for libel the judge left it to the jury to say whether the defendant intended to injure the plaintiff. Held, that the direction was wrong, inasmuch as the tendency of the libel was injurious to the plaintiff and the defendant must be taken to have intended the consequences of his own act. Haire v. Wilson, 9 B. & C. 643. Also Fisher v. Clement, 10 B. & C. 472.

In these cases a libel was considered as a publication which was injurious to the plaintiff. The intention of the defendant was treated as immaterial. It was therefore necessary to state that it would be presumed. Whether the intention to injure the plaintiff is a necessary constituent of a libel in law need not here be discussed or decided. See LIBEL and SLANDER, vol. 13, pp. 426-431.

If a necessary constituent, it is undoubtedly a question for the jury; therefore, where in privileged communications actual malice must be found it is treated as a presumption of fact.

Whart. Crim. Ev., § 739; Bromage v. Prosser, 4 B. & C. 247; Spill v. Maule, L. R., 4 Ex. 232; Taylor v. Hawkins, 16 A. & E., N. S. 308; Somerville v. Hankin, 10 C. B. 583; Toogood

v. Spyrring, 1 C. M. & R. 181; 4 Tyr. 582; Gilpin v. Fowler, 9 Exch. 615.

Presumptions of Fraud.—The intent to defraud should not be imperatively inferred when one tells an untruth to another for the purpose of obtaining his goods. Whart. Crim. Ev., § 739.

For an opposing opinion concerning presumptions and of intent, see Taylor's Ev., § 71.

2. That juries should be allowed to infer negligence from the mere happening of an accident has been severely criticised by Dr. Wharton (Wh. Evid. Par. 1263), though if they are not imperatively directed to make such a presumption as a rule of law, there seems to be no valid reason why they should not be allowed and even advised to make such a presumption of fact when, from the peculiar nature of the accident, it could not have occurred if due care had been used. Thus where the plaintiff was traveling in the defendant's train which left the rails resulting in injury to the plaintiff, and the defendant did not offer any evidence of its cause, it was held that the mere happening of such an accident, unexplained by the defendant, was evidence from which a jury might infer negligence. Flannery v. Waterford etc. R. Co., 11 C. L. 30. See also Skinner v. London etc. R. Co., 5 Exch. 786, and the remarks of Denman, C. J., in Carpue v. London etc. R. Co., 5 Ad. & E. 751.

Byrne v. Boadle, 2 H. & C. 722; 33 L. J. Ex. 13, was a case in which a bag of flour fell from the defendant's warehouse and struck the plaintiff as he passed by on the sidewalk. Pollock, C. J., said: "We are all of the opinion that the rule must be made absolute to enter the verdict for the plaintiff. The learned counsel was quite right in say-

g. PRESUMPTIONS FROM THE ALTERATION OF TESTIMONY.—It is a presumption of fact drawn from the general experience of mankind, that one who fabricates or attempts to fabricate evidence on his own behalf, or attempts to injure his adversary's case by destroying evidence which might be used in favor of such adversary, has a knowledge that his adversary's contention is, as a matter of fact, true, and, therefore, the jury may presume from such a circumstance that it is true.¹ To show that one party has ing that there are many accidents from which no presumption of negligence can arise, but I think it would be wrong to lay down as a rule that in no case can negligence arise from the fact of the accident."

The law is very clearly set forth by Erle, C. J., in the following: "There must be reasonable evidence of negligence." But he continues, "where the thing is solely under the management of the defendant and his servants, and the accident is such as, in the ordinary course of things, does not happen if those who have the management use proper care, it affords reasonable evidence, in the absence of explanation by the defendants, that the accident arose from want of care." Opinion in Scott v. London etc. Dock. Co., 34 L. J. Exch. 222; 3 H. & C. 596.

Cases in Which Mere Happening Was Not Sufficient to Raise a Presumption of Negligence.—In Moffatt v. Bateman, 3 L. R., P. C. 115, the defendant was gratuitously driving the plaintiff in his wagon when the king-bolt broke and the plaintiff was thrown out and injured. Held, that in the absence of any explanation there was not sufficient evidence from which the jury could presume gross negligence.

Higgs v. Maynard, 1 H. & R. 581. The defendant was owner of a house. One of the windows, in an upper story, looked into a passage or alley way. The plaintiff was lawfully in the passage, when a ladder inside a room on the second story of the defendant's house from some unexplained cause fell against, and broke the window pane. A piece of the glass fell into the plaintiff's eye. Held, that there was no prima facie evidence of negligence.

For another example of where the evidence of the accident was held not sufficient for negligence to be inferred, see Welfare v. London etc. R. Co., 38 L. J., Q. B. 241; 4 L. R., Q. B. 493.

Limit of the Presumption.—A case which is an example of how far the courts have gone in allowing juries to presume negligence is: Kearney v. London etc. R. Co., 5 L. R., Q. B. 411; 39 L. J., Q. B. 200; affirmed on appeal in Exch., 6 L. R., Q. B. 759; 40 L. J. Q. B. 285.

The jury were allowed to presume, and did presume, negligence on the part of the plaintiff from the unexplained falling of a brick in a perpendicular wall supporting the railroad bridge of the defendants.

Negligence Not Strictly a Psychological Presumption.—Negligence from its very nature is seldom intentional. Its very definition implies absence of any intention and a carelessness as to results. Care is not forethought, but consists in acts which guard against danger and which are usually the result of such forethought. Thus to prove negligence, as in the case cited, the jury need not infer the specific intent. Some negligence, however, does involve an intent, as where one seeing his duty purposely fails to act through fear.

The presumption of negligence may be made a presumption of law by statute. Wh. Ev., § 1263.

See NEGLIGENCE, vol. 16, p. 448; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, vol. 4, p. 76; FIRES BY RAILWAYS, vol. 8, p. 9; CARRIERS OF PASSENGERS, vol. 2, p. 768.

1. In Com. v. Webster, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 316, the court by Shaw, C. J., said: "All attempts on the part of the accused to suppress evidence, to suggest false and deceptive explanations and to cast suspicion, without just cause, on other persons . . . tend somewhat to prove consciousness of guilt, and, when proved, exert an influence against the accused."

It would seem, however, that in criminal cases the willingness of the accused to stand trial, coupled with his refusal to embrace an opportunity to escape, raises no presumption of fact in his favor. People v. Rathbun, 21 destroyed documentary evidence is not subsidiary proof of what such documents contain, or of the particular facts which would have been testified to by the witnesses who have been detained or made away with.¹

The several ways in which one can benefit his own case, whether it be on the legal or criminal side of the court, by tampering with the evidence, are as follows:

(1) Mutilation or Destruction of Documentary Evidence.—Though not an absolute presumption, the destruction of documentary evidence forms often the strongest kind of a presumption of fact that the destroyed documents would have failed to support the destroyer's contention.² But the mere fact of such de-

Wend. (N. Y.) 509. Infra, this title, note 1, p. 71.

1. Wharton on Ev., par. 1268.

"To say that, if you once prove spoliation, you will take it for granted that the contents of the thing spoliated are what they have been alleged to be, may be, in a great many instances, going a great length. It is a question of vast importance to decide, upon what grounds and upon what principles you are to take upon yourself to say what are the contents of a written will, . . . if there be one case upon which I should lay my finger and say that a new trial ought to be refused, where it was asked only upon the ground that some evidence had not been given which might have been given, I think it would be where you are obliged in the verdict to look for that which at best can be but a matter of guess and conjecture." Per Lord Eldon in Baker v. Ray, 2 Russ. 63.

If upon notice to produce books of account, they are not produced, this circumstance affords no legal inference respecting their contents, and merely entitles the opposite party to prove their contents by parol evidence. Cooper v. Gibbons, 3 Camp. 363; Hanson v. Eustace, 2 How. (U. S.) 653.

The admission of secondary evidence has nothing to do with our present purpose. If a document is destroyed or lost intentionally or unintentionally, secondary evidence of its contents can be given. This fact is treated elsewhere. See EVIDENCE, vol. 7, pp. 87, 88.

Many of the presumptions of fact, arising from the destruction of documents, form the basis for admission of secondary evidence. See Bell v. Hearne, 10 La. Ann. 515; Leeds v.

Cook, 4 Esp. 256; Grimes v. Kimball, 3 Allen (Mass.) 518.

One rule as to the admission of secondary evidence should be borne in mind in connection with any presumption of fact from such destruction—namely, that secondary evidence of a note or other document on which a claim is made cannot be introduced if the plaintiff has deliberately destroyed such document, unless he satisfactorily explains the destruction by showing that it was not intentional. Blade v. Noland, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 173; 27 Am. Rep. 126; Blake v. Flash, 44 Ill. 302; Price v. Tallman, 1 N. J. L. 447.

On Defective Evidence as a ground for new trial, see NEW TRIAL, vol. 16, p. 554; Wharton & S. Med. Juris. par. 167.

2. Destruction in Civil Cases.—The presumption against a party who destroys evidence by which his claim or title may be impeached is a strong but not a conclusive presumption. Thompson v. Thompson, 9 Ind. 323; 68 Am. Dec. 638; Winchell v. Edwards, 57 Ill. 41.

Destruction of Accounts.—When an accounting party destroys the accounts before they have been finally adjusted, and especially when he destroys them pending litigation, the court will presume everything most unfavorable to him, consistent with the established facts. Gray v. Maig, 20 Beav. 219; Bell v. Frankis, 4 M. & G. 446.

Destruction of Wills.—Where an heir at law destroys a will, it raises a presumption in favor of one who claims as a legatee under it. Manhood v. Manhood, Ir. L. R., 8 Eq. 359.

Destruction of Evidence as to Trusts.—A trustee who voluntarily and without mistake or accident, destroys the written evidence of his trust, places struction, even if unexplained, is not conclusive evidence that the document which was destroyed contained the specific statements which the other party chose to assert it contained;¹ and of course the destroyer is always at liberty to explain the circumstances of the destruction so as to remove the presumption raised against him.² What is true of the destruction of documents may also be affirmed of their alteration. He who deliberately alters documentary evidence is presumed to do so in his own interest.³

(2) Presumptions from Holding Back Proof.—The effectiveness of any proof to sustain the contention of the party producing it always, in a measure, depends on the proof which it was in the power of the party to produce. He who withholds some evidence, while introducing proof of a less satisfactory character, raises a presumption that the part which he has withheld would not himself in a position where the court is bound to make every presumption against him. Shortz v. Unangst, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 45.

Destruction in Criminal Cases.—A, when arrested for forgery, destroyed the notes alleged to be forgeries. This raised a strong presumption against him. State v. Chamberlain, 89 Mo. 129. See also Pomeroy v. Benton, 77 Mo. 64; Henderson v. Hope, 1 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 119.

The presumption of innocence may be overthrown and the presumption of guilt raised by the misconduct of the party in suppressing or destroying evidence which he ought to produce, and to which the State is entitled. Greenleaf on Ev., § 37.

1. Presumption from Destroying Ship Papers.—In the Pizarro, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 241, the court by Story, J., says: "Concealment, or even spoliation of papers, is not itself sufficient ground for condemnation in a prize court. It is, undoubtedly, a very awakening circumstance, calculated to excite the vigilance and justify the suspicions of the court," and adds, "it is a circumstance, open to explanation."

Destruction of Wills.—A will was destroyed by the universal legatee under it. One who claims to be a legatee must show that the universal legatee concealed or destroyed it for the purpose of defeating the bequests, in order to raise a presumption against him.

Lucas v. Brooks, 23 La. Ann. 117; Jones v. Knauss, 31 N. J. Eq. 609, the refusal to produce books, etc., does not warrant the presumption that if they were produced they would show the facts to be as alleged by the party giving notice to produce them. It simply raises an unfavorable presumption and admits secondary evidence. Life etc. Ins. Co. v. Mechanics' F. Ins. Co., 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 31.

By the law of European Maritime courts spoliation of papers not only excludes further proof, but is conclusive evidence of the truth of the contention of the other party. This harsh rule, however, is modified to the extent, that if all the other circumstances are clear, this circumstance alone will not be mandatory. The Hunter, 1 Dod. Adm. 480.

Where, however, the plaintiff brought an action for libel against the defendant it was in proof that the plaintiff had burnt the document which he contended was libelous, and he offered no explanation of such burning, the presumption was so strong against him, that the court refused to allow him to introduce secondary evidence of its contents. The Count Joannes v. Bennett, 5 Allen (Mass.) 169; Blake v. Flash, 44 Ill. 302.

2. Lynch v. Coffin, 131 Mass. 311.

3. In Shiels v. West, 17 Cal. 324, it was proved that an alteration had been made in an account from credit to debit. The alteration was unexplained. Held, that the jury might presume that the original entry was correct, especially as it was made at the time of the transaction, and it was against the parties' interest to make it.

As to alteration of public records see Hommel v. Devinney, 39 Mich. 522.

What Is an Alteration.—Entering on the margin or between lines, words which are simply inserted to fill up the sense, is not an alteration; but anything which incorporates new matter sustain, but would rather tend to contradict, the evidence which he has offered. A case, therefore, which would be otherwise strong, may be rendered weak and practically unproven, by the fact that proof of a higher grade, which might have been produced, was withheld.¹ The principles here enunciated apply equally to withholding documentary evidence,² or preventing a or alters the sense is an alteration. Wh. on Ev., par. 621.

Criminal Cases.—Alterations of situs after the alleged crime.

The case of State v. Knapp, 45 N. H. 148, was an indictment for rape. The jury viewed the premises which had been altered by the State. Held, that the burden was on the State to show that the alteration did not prejudice the defendant. The trial was set aside on this ground.

"No person is to be required to explain or contradict, until enough has been proved to warrant a reasonable and just conclusion against him in the absence of explanation or contradiction; . . . "when such proof has been given, and the nature of the case is such as to admit of explanation or contradiction, if the conclusion to which the proof tends be untrue, and the accused offer no explanation or contradiction, can human reason do otherwise than adopt the conclusion to which the proof tends?" Remarks of Abbott, C. J., in Reg. v. Burdett, 4 B. & Ald. 314.

1. In Wallace v. Harris, 32 Mich. 394, the court by Graves, C. J., said: "Lord Mansfield forcibly observed in Blanch v. Archer (Cowp. 65.), that it is certainly a maxim that all evidence is to be weighed according to the proof which it was in the power of one side to have produced, and in the power of the other to have contradicted." See also Mordecai v. Beal, 8 Port. (Ala.) 529.

The nonproduction of proof when in the power of the party to do so creates a strong presumption against him. Heffleblower v. Detrick, 27 W. Va. 16. See also Clifton v. U. S., 4 How. (U. S.) 242, which supported the doctrine in 2 Ev. Pothier, that the presumption will be against him who produces the weakest evidence.

Where a party neglects to produce proof that may justly be presumed to be within his reach, and which is needed to make a satisfactory case, he cannot complain if the court refuse to extend his showing, by construction, to meet the defense. Ruffe v. Steinbach, 48 Mich. 465.

When withholding testimony raises a violent presumption that a fact not clearly proved or disproved exists, it is not error in the court to allude to the withholding as a circumstance strengthening the proof. Frick v. Barbour, 64 Pa. St. 120.

2. Suppression of Documents.—See Attorney Gen'l v. Windsor, 24 Beav. 679; Paige v. Stephens, 23 Mich. 357. The suppression of a series of documents admitted to be in the possession of the party who produces others, is evidence that the documents withheld contained proof unfavorable to that party. Owen v. Flack, 2 Sim. & St. 600. See also Bate v. Kinsey, 1 C. M. & R. 38; Reg. v. Arundel, Hob. 109.

Lord Mansfield, speaking of one who claimed land under a lease which withheld evidence, said that "it was an unfair attempt to recover, contrary to the real merits, and being a deliberate refusal, by the advice of counsel, contrary to the recommendation of the judge, warranted the strongest presumption that the deed would show that neither of the lessors of the plaintiff had any title. Holdane v. Harney, 4 Burr. 2487.

When in an action of ejectment by the heir against the devisee, testator's competency was disputed, and the defendant, after proving that the testator had given a reasonable account of the real property left to him by his father's will which was in court, but which was withdrawn on account of an objection to its admissibility on the part of the plaintiff, it was held that it was not error in the judge in his charge to tell the jury that they might infer from the plaintiff's objecting to the will being put in that it was in accordance with the statement made by the testator. Sutton v. Davenport, 27 L. J., C. P. 54.

Where a party, after notice, refuses to produce an agreement, the jury may presume that the agreement was properly executed. Crisp v. Anderson, 1 Stark. 35. And the inferences as to the contents of such document may be taken most strongly against the party witness from giving his testimony as to facts within his special knowledge.¹

(3) Presumption from the Fabrication of Testimony.—The attempt to fabricate evidence either by bribing witnesses or otherwise fabricating evidence, raises the strongest kind of presumption of fact against the justice of the party's claim in civil suits, or his innocence of the charge against him in criminal.²

withholding them. Barber v. Lyon, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 622.

In Crescent City Ice Co. v. Ermann, 36 La. Ann. 842, the court by Manning, J., says: "The presumption is always inevitably against a litigant who fails to furnish evidence within his reach, and it is stronger when the documents, writings, etc., would be conclusive in establishing his case."

It is error for the judge to refuse to instruct the jury, that the refusal of the plaintiff, who is also a witness, to produce the account books on which the claim or statement is made, is a presumption against him. Davie v. Jones, 68 Me. 393.

1. The refusal of a party to testify or his want of candor, raises a strong presumption against him. Little v. Marsch, 2 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 18; Cross v. Bell, 34 N. H. 82; McDonough v. O'Neil, 113 Mass. 92.

Withholding Witnesses.—A bark was run into at night by a vessel entering the harbor of New York. The officers of the vessel claimed that they saw no light on the bark. Held, that the failure, on the part of the bark, to call the persons whose duty it was to attend to the lights was sufficient to raise the presumption that no lights had been shown. The Ville du Havre, 7 Ben. (U. S.) 328. See also Brown v. Schock, 77 Pa. St. 471; Rice v. Conn., 102 Pa. St. 408.

Where a prisoner charged with murder prevented his wife, who was an eye witness to the affray, from testifying, an unfavorable presumption is justified, and the submission of the fact to the jury for their consideration is not error. People v. Hovey, 92 N. Y. 554.

The attempt to throw a charge of murder on a witness or a claimant can be shown as indicating a fear of the testimony which he will give on the trial of the cause. Craig v. Anglesea, 17 How. St. Trials 1139.

But the failure to call a witness will not justify an arbitrary presumption of suppression. Wharton on Ev., par. 1267.

In a conflict of testimony the non-introduction by either party of a witness who, if he was called, could shed light on the matter in controversy, does not warrant a presumption in favor of either plaintiff or defendant. It only warrants a presumption against both. The Fred. M. Lawrence, 15 Fed. Rep. 635. In Scovill v. Baldwin, 27 Conn. 318, the court by Hinman, J., said: "The circumstance that a particular person, who is equally within the control of both parties, is not called as a witness, is too often made the subject of comment before the jury. Such a fact lays no ground for a presumption against either party."

The refusal to allow a solicitor to testify as to matters which were discussed or occurred during his professional relation to the party who refuses does not raise a presumption against such party. Wentworth v. Lloyd, 10 H. L. Cas. 589.

Where a person is prevented from testifying by circumstances beyond his control, no presumption arises concerning the nature of his testimony. Cramer v. Burlington, 49 Iowa 213.

The failure to make a claim, when it might have been successfully asserted, often operates to create a presumption unfavorable to such a claim.

A, who claimed to have been the lawful wife of B, deceased, showed by her own statement that she had failed to make such a claim in 1852, at the time of a marriage of her alleged husband to another woman, and when the alleged witnesses of her own marriage were living. In a suit brought long after the witnesses were deceased this fact raised such a strong presumption against the claimant that the House of Lords concluded the alleged marriage never took place. Dysart Peerage Cases, 6 App. Cas. 489.

2. Bribing Witnesses.—Moriarty v. London etc. R. Co., L. R., 5 Q. B. 314.

In Chicago City R. Co. v. McMahon, 103 Ill. 485, the plaintiff was injured on defendant's railway. The supreme court held that the testimony of a

The presumption, however, is by no means conclusive. The reminiscences of the courts contain many instances of suitors who have prosecuted just claims by unjust means, and of innocent persons charged with crime, who, fearful of their conviction, often under the unwise advice of counsel or friends, have manufactured evidence to break the force of accusing circumstances.¹

The presumption that a witness has been bribed from his offers of false testimony, is one which, while it may be legitimately made, should be made guardedly, and with a knowledge of all the circumstances of the case. The history of the courts prove that many men who would scorn to tell an untruth for their own ends, will be willing so to support a friend without any solicitation on his part.²

h. PRESUMPTIONS OF GUILT FROM ACTS INDICATING FEAR.

—Acts which indicate a consciousness of guilt may be introduced in evidence as a groundwork from which the guilt of the accused may be presumed. Such presumptions should be made with the same reservations as those which arise from the fabrication of testimony. The guilty do not always run away or turn pale when accused of their crime, neither are all those who flee from charges guilty.³

servant of the company that he had been offered $300 to testify falsely was rightly received in evidence, as tending to raise a presumption that the defendants felt convinced of their own negligence.

In Lyons v. Lawrence, 12 Ill. App. 531, it was held to be error to refuse to admit evidence that an attempt had been made to suborn witnesses.

On the same principle a similar adverse presumption arises from the fact that a party has engaged a witness to testify, or persuaded him to refrain from so doing. Snell v. Bray, 56 Wis. 156; Reg. v. Justices of Cornwall, 20 W. R. 669.

On the same principle giving refreshment to juries though with apparently innocent intent, is sufficient ground for a new trial. Knight v. Freeport, 13 Mass. 218. See NEW TRIAL, vol. 16, p. 529, note 4.

1. On the guards to be placed to this kind of evidence, see Coke 3rd Inst. 104, p. 232; Turner v. Com., 86 Pa. St. 54; 27 Am. Rep. 683; Fitler's Case, cited Ann. Reg. (1834), p. 115; Reg. v. Westcombe, Ann. Reg. (1829), p. 142; 3 Bush Jud. Ev. 39; Wh. Crim. Ev., §§ 743, 749.

2. Luhrs v. Kelly, 67 Cal. 289, Lord Cockburn in his reminiscences notes several cases in which witnesses have told an untruth to help the accused, even in some cases without his knowledge. Celebrated Trials, p. 591; Bush Jud. Ev. 255.

3. "Flight."—In Revel v. State, 26 Ga. 275, the court by Lumpkin, J., says: "Flight has always been considered an admission of guilt, and he asks when culprits thus recklessly destroy human life in order to get away, is not the confession of conscious guilt greatly thereby strengthened." Undoubtedly such flight or any acts of fear on the part of the accused is always admissible in evidence against him. State v. Williams, 54 Mo. 170.

But when an escape by the prisoner is put in evidence to raise the presumption of conscious guilt, it is competent for the accused to rebut it showing that it was attributable to fear of personal violence. Golden v. State, 25 Ga. 527.

The interval, however, between the perpetration of the crime and the flight of the accused may be so short that it can raise no presumption of an apprehension of personal violence. State v. Phillips, 24 Mo. 475.

And until the government introduces evidence of flight, it is not competent for the accused to explain a flight. Welch v. State, 104 Ind. 347.

It seems that evidence that the accused refused to escape when he had ample opportunity to do so is inad-

3. Physical Presumptions, Presumptions of Regularity and Title.—

a. CONTINUANCE OF LIFE.—A state once shown to have existed is presumed to continue;¹ so that after proof of existence there is a presumption of a continuance of life.² This presumption must, however, give way to the stronger presumption in favor of innocence.³ Usually, the absence of a party for seven or more years without his being heard of creates a presumption of death.⁴ But this rule is subject to various modificamissible. People v. Rathbun, 21 Wend. (N.Y.) 509.

1. Greenleaf on Ev., (14th ed.), § 41; Russell on Crimes, p. 218; State v. Wilner, 40 Wis. 304; 1 Wharton on Ev., § 1284; Brown v. Burnham, 28 Me. 38; Brown v. King, 5 Met. (Mass.) 173; Farr v. Payne, 40 Vt. 615; Saxon v. Whittaker, 30 Ala. 237; Titlers v. Titlow, 54 Pa. St. 216; Eames v. Eames, 41 N. H. 177; INSANITY, vol. 11, p. 160; Kidder v. Stevens, 60 Cal. 414; People v. Feilen, 58 Cal. 218; Eaton v. Woydt, 26 Wis. 383.

But the nature of the circumstances may create a presumption which will overcome this one of continuance. See Scott v. Wood, 81 Cal. 398.

2. 1 Greenleaf on Ev. (14th ed.), § 41 and cases cited; Stevens v. McNamara, 36 Me. 176.

All the authorities on this point are collected in ABSENCE, vol. 1, pp. 40, 41.

In the case of Scott v. Wood, 81 Cal. 398, the jury were instructed that this presumption existed. But on appeal it was said "we think this was error. There is no such presumption regardless of the nature of the fact. Suppose a man were shown to be living at a certain time; would it be presumed that he continued to live for a hundred years? Or suppose a man was shown to be insolvent at a particular time; would it be presumed that the insolvency continued through several years?" California Code Civ. Proc., § 1963, par. 32; Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 418.

3. In re Nesbit, 3 Dem. (N. Y.) 329; Murray v. Murray, 6 Oregon 18; Rex v. Twynning, 2 B. & Ald. 386; 1 Greenleaf on Ev. (14th ed.), § 41; Reg. v. Willshire, 62 Q. B. D. 118; 29 Moake's Rep. 660.

These questions arose upon the question as to whether certain marriages were bigamous; it was held that the presumption that the first wife continued to live must yield to the presumption of defendant's innocence. A somewhat different view is taken in Com. v. McGrath, 140 Mass. 296. See the whole subject discussed in MARRIAGE, vol. 14, p. 521.

4. See ABSENCE, vol. 1, p. 37; DEATH, vol. 5, p. 140; Henderson v. Bonar (Ky. 1889), 11 S. W. Rep. 809; Ferry v. Sampson, 112 N. Y. 415; In re Tobin's Estate (Supreme Ct.), 4 N. Y. Supp. 59; French v. McGinnis, 69 Tex. 19; Stockbridge, Petitioner, 145 Mass. 517; Whiteley v. Equitable L. Assur. Soc., 72 Wis. 170; 30 Solic. J. 247, 263, 280; Bank of Louisville v. Board of Trustees, 83 Ky. 219; Chapman v. Kimball, 83 Me. 389; Davie v. Briggs, 97 U. S. 628.

A law relating to escheats is not invalid merely because it authorizes a presumption of death after an absence of seven years. Louisville School Board v. Bank of Kentucky, 86 Ky. 150; Bank of Louisville v. Board of Trustees, 86 Ky. 742.

There is no presumption that death did not occur until the end of the seven years. Whiteley v. Equitable L. Assur. Soc., 72 Wis. 170; Waite v. Coaracy, 45 Minn. 159; Cambreling v. Purton, 58 610; aff'd 125 N. Y. 610; Davie v. Briggs, 97 U. S. 628.

It is incompetent, in order to establish the death of a person who long since disappeared, to show the common belief of the people of his town as to his death, and the general opinion of his family on the subject. Vought v. Williams, 46 Hun (N. Y.) 638.

Evidence to Rebut.—To rebut the presumption of death from absence for more than seven years without being heard from, evidence of a general report among the missing person's friends and acquaintances that he is alive, and in the United States army, is admissible. So also of evidence by a witness that he had been informed by another that he had seen the missing person, and that he was alive. Dowd v. Watson, 105 N. Car. 476.

As to evidence to support the pretions and restrictions.¹ Other circumstances may also create a presumption of death in particular cases.²

b. SURVIVORSHIP IN A COMMON DISASTER.—There is properly no presumption in such a case; the fact of survivorship is to be proved by the party alleging it and from the evidence.³

c. A RELATIONSHIP ONCE ESTABLISHED IS PRESUMED TO CONTINUE.—A relationship once proved to have existed between parties is presumed to continue until some change is shown to have occurred.⁴

sumption, see Williams v. State (Ga. 1891), 12 S. E. Rep. 743.

1. Thus in the case of In re Miller's Estate, 9 N. Y. Supp. 639, it is said that where a woman eighteen years of age, illiterate, with vicious propensities, and abandoned by her parents when quite young, escapes from an orphan asylum in which she is confined, no presumption of death arises from the fact that she has failed to answer advertisements inserted in various papers, and that for more than seven years since her escape all trace of her whereabouts has been lost.

In Watson v. England, 14 Sim. 28, the vice-chancellor remarked of this presumption that it was "daily becoming more and more untenable."

The Kentucky statute creates a presumption of death after seven years' continuous absence when the party has left the State. Where it is not shown that he left the State, the presumption does not apply, but in such case the statute does not exclude all presumptive evidence of death. Bank of Louisville v. Board of Trustees, 83 Ky. 219.

Under this same statute it is held that the fact that a man has not heard from his brothers and sisters for fifty years does not raise the presumption of their death if they were young when last heard from by him. Falkner v. Williams (Ky. 1891), 16 S. W. Rep. 352.

2. In one case a party attempted to commit suicide by jumping overboard, and when arrested offered his captor $25 if he would allow him to jump. The next day he disappeared and was never heard of afterward. It was held that a presumption would arise that he died about the day of his disappearance. In re Ketcham's Estate, 5 N. Y. Supp. 566.

In another case a woman sixty-seven years old, and infirm in mind and body, disappeared from her house near the North river, on a stormy night. Every effort was made for several months to ascertain if she was living, but nothing could be learned. According to the medical testimony she could not, in all probability, have survived under the most favorable circumstances the period that had elapsed since her disappearance. It was held that her death would be presumed. In re Buckingham's Will, 5 N. Y. Supp. 565.

See also for similar cases In re Stewart's Will, 3 N. Y. Supp. 284; 1 Con. Sur. (N. Y.) 86; Chapman v. Kimball, 83 Me. 389; Cambreleng v. Purton, 58 Hun (N. Y.) 610; aff'd 125 N. Y. 610.

3. See ABSENCE, vol. 1, p. 42, where this doctrine is reviewed and numerous authorities collected. See also Newell v. Nichols, 12 Hun (N. Y.) 604; Johnson v. Merithur, 80 Me. 111; 1 Greenleaf on Ev. (14th ed.), §§ 29, 30; Cowman v. Rogers (Md. 1891), 21 Atl. Rep. 64, (member of a benefit association perished in a flood with his wife and children—no presumption of survivorship).

2 Wharton on Ev., § 1180-81.

Compare Ehle's Will, 73 Wis. 445.

A different rule prevails by statute in California. Code Civ. Proc., § 1963, par. 40; Hollister v. Cordero, 76 Cal. 649; ABSENCE, vol. 1, p. 44.

4. Eames v. Eames, 41 N. H. 177; 1 Greenleaf on Ev. (14th ed.), § 41, note; Smith v. Smith, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 432; 27 Am. Rep. 75 (adulterous relations); Caujolle v. Ferrie, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 177; aff'd 23 N. Y. 90; Lepout v. Todd, 23 N. J. L. 124 (relation of landlord and tenant); Body v. Jewsen, 33 Wis. 402; 2 Wharton on Ev., § 1284; Sullivan v. Goldman, 19 La. Ann. 12.

A party elected to an office is presumed to continue in it, unless the contrary is shown. Steward v. Dunn, 12 M. & W. 655.

A seisin once proved is presumed to continue. Brown v. King, 5 Met. (Mass.) 173.

The relation of partnership once established is presumed to continue.

d. RESIDENCE PRESUMED CONTINUOUS.—It is presumed that the residence of a person continues to be in the place where it is proved to have been, until the contrary is shown; the same is true as to domicile.¹

e. OCCUPANCY PRESUMED CONTINUOUS.—Occupancy once proved is presumed to continue until the contrary is shown.² So also of dispossession.³

f. HABITS AND APPEARANCE PRESUMED UNCHANGED.—Proof having been made as to the habits and general personal appearance of any person, it is presumed that such habits and appearance continue the same unless proven to be otherwise.⁴

Eames v. Eames, 41 N. H. 177; Cooper v. Dedrick, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 516; Clark v. Alexander, 8 Scott N. R. 147; Alderson v. Clay, 1 Stark. 121; 2 E. C. L. 157; 2 Starkie's Ev. 590; Greenleaf on Ev. (14th ed.), § 42.

In the case of Barelli v. Lytle, 4 La. Ann. 557, it was held that a certificate by proper authority that a certain individual "is" a justice of the peace raises no presumption whatever that the individual was such an officer before the date of the certificate. A contrary principle is upheld in Rex v. Burdett, 4 B. & Ald. 124; 6 E. C. L. 404; Doe v. Young, 8 A. & E. 63; 55 E. C. L. 63; Smelt v. Fuchan, 15 East 286; Russell on Crimes, p. 219.

1. See DOMICILE, vol. 5, p. 865.

Mitchell v. U. S., 21 Wall. (U. S.) 350; Randolph v. Easton, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 242; Killum v. Bennett, 3 Met. (Mass.) 109; Prather v. Palmer, 4 Ark. 456; 2 Wharton on Ev., § 1285, and cases cited; DOMICILE, vol. 5, p. 870; Church v. Rowell, 49 Me. 367; Greenfield v. Camden, 74 Me. 56; Nixon v. Palmer, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 175; Daniels v. Hamilton, 52 Ala. 105; Walker v. Walker, 1 Mo. App. 404.

The same is true of a pauper settlement. Randolph v. Easton, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 242; Rex v. Budd, 5 Esp. 230; POOR AND POOR LAWS.

But continuity of residence is not presumed in case of a wandering tramp. Ripley v. Hebron, 60 Me. 379.

Non-residency once proven is presumed to continue. State Bank v. Seawell, 18 Ala. 616.

A resident is presumed to be a citizen of the United States. Zantzen v. Arizona Copper Co., (Ariz. 1889), 20 Pac. Rep. 93; Blight v. Rochester, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 535.

2. 2 Wharton on Ev., § 1286; Mars-ton v. Rowe, 43 Ala. 271; Currier v.

Gale, 9 Allen (Mass.) 523; Hanson v. Chiatorich, 13 Nev. 395; Armstrong v. Hinds, 8 Minn. 254; Rhone v. Gale, 12 Minn. 54; Smith v. Stapleton, Plowd. 103; Magee v. Scott, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 148; 55 Am. Dec. 49; Hood v. Hood, 2 Grant's Cas. (Pa.) 229.

3. Sanders v. Springsteen, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 429.

4. 2 Wharton on Ev., § 1287; IDENTITY, vol. 9, p. 863 et seq.; Eureka Ins. Co. v. Robinson, 56 Pa. St. 256; 94 Am. Dec. 65 (habit of giving receipts); Ashe v. De Rosset, 8 Jones (N. Car.) 240; Vaughn v. Raleigh etc. R. Co., 63 N. Car. 11 (habit of marking cotton for shipment); Smith v. Clark, 12 Iowa 32; Meighen v. Bank, 25 Pa. St. 288; Shore v. Wiley, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 558; Lawson on Presumptive Ev. 184 et seq.; Wood v. Matthews, 73 Mo. 482 (bad character).

Thus a habit of prompt payment of taxes is presumed to continue. Coxe v. Deringer, 82 Pa. St. 236. So of habits of negligence. Pittsburg etc. R. Co. v. Ruby, 38 Ind. 294; 10 Am. Rep. 111; Mobile etc. R. Co. v. Ashcraft, 48 Ala. 15. Compare, however, NEGLIGENCE, vol. 16, p. 455, et seq. So of the habit of a writer to use certain words in particular senses. 2 Wharton on Ev., § 962. So of an attorney's peculiar methods. Hine v. Pomeroy, 39 Vt. 211, and of the habit of gambling. McMahon v. Harrison, 6 N. Y. 443.

See generally IDENTITY, vol. 9, p. 863; Stebbins v. Duncan, 108 U. S. 32. But in Delano v. Goodwin, 48 N. H. 205; 97 Am. Dec. 601, it is said that "the fact that a person has once or many times in his life done a particular act in a particular way does not prove that he has done the same thing in the same way upon another and different occasion." See also Hollingham v. Head, 4 C. B., N. S. 388; 93 E. C. L. 387;

g. COVERTURE AND COHABITATION PRESUMED CONTINUOUS.

—In pursuance of the general presumption of continuity, the law presumes that the marriage relation once entered into by certain parties continues to exist between them.¹ The same is true of adulterous or other illicit intercourse.²

h. SOLVENCY AND INSOLVENCY PRESUMED CONTINUOUS.—

A presumption exists of the continuance of solvency when it is proven to have existed.³ So also of a state of insolvency.⁴

i. CONSTANCY OF NATURE.—There is a presumption in favor of the constancy of nature.⁵

j. PHYSICAL SEQUENCES.—Where experience has shown that certain sequences follow from certain actions or states of fact it is presumed whenever such actions or states of fact are shown that such sequences follow.⁶

Jackson v. Smith, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 177.

The opinions of individuals once entertained and expressed presumed to continue unchanged. 1 Greenleaf on Ev. (14th ed.), § 42; Attorney Gen'l v. Baruther, 3 Bro. Ch. Cas. 443.

1. Erskine v. Davis, 25 Ill. 251; MARRIAGE, vol. 14, p. 520; 2 Wharton on Ev., § 1289; Yardley's Estate, 75 Pa. St. 207.

See also Blackburn v. Crawford, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 176.

But in the absence of proof that coverture once existed, it is not presumed. Erskine v. Davis, 25 Ill. 251; unless created by the presumption in favor of innocence. Blanchard v. Lambert, 43 Iowa 228; 22 Am. Rep. 245. MARRIAGE, vol. 14, p. 520-521 (where the whole subject of presumptions in regard to coverture is discussed); 2 Wharton on Ev., § 1297; Williams v. Williams, 63 Wis. 68; 53 Am. Rep. 253; Foster v. Hawley, 8 Hun (N. Y.) 68; Clayton v. Wardell, 4 N. Y. 230.

2. Smith v. Smith, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 432; 27 Am. Rep. 75; Foster v. Hawley, 8 Hun (N. Y.) 68; Hunt's Appeal, 86 Pa. St. 294; Appeal of Reading F. Ins. etc. Co., 113 Pa. St. 204; 57 Am. Rep. 448; Clayton v. Wardell, 4 N. Y. 230; People v. Squires, 49 Mich. 487 (reformation of a loose woman not presumed); State v. Worthingham, 23 Minn. 528.

3. Wallace v. Hull, 28 Ga. 68; Walrod v. Ball, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 271.

As to circumstances creating a presumption of solvency or insolvency, see Ansley v. Carlos, 9 Ala. 979; Beeson v. Wiley, 28 Ala. 575; Bilberry v. Mobley, 20 Ala. 260.

4. Mullen v. Pryor, 12 Mo. 307; Body v. Jewsen, 33 Wis. 402; Donahue v. Coleman, 49 Conn. 464.

In Coghill v. Boring, 15 Cal. 219, it is said, however, "it does not follow because a man is insolvent on one day that he was insolvent at any subsequent or antecedent period."

See also Safford v. Gront, 120 Mass. 20; Brown v. Brooks, 25 Pa. St. 210; 1 Whart. on Ev., § 834.

But the presumption is one of fact, and its effect depends upon the extent to which the quality of permanency enters into the nature of the matter in question; so that where a debtor went into bankruptcy the presumption of continued bankruptcy five months afterward is very slight. Donahue v. Coleman, 49 Conn. 464.

5. 2 Whart. on Ev., § 1293; Brooks v. Acton, 117 Mass. 204.

Thus if ice always forms over ponds in a certain locality the burden of proof is upon a party alleging that during a certain year no ice formed. 2 Whart. on Ev., § 1293.

6. Thus it is presumed that the extinguishment of a fire will follow the abundant application of water. Metallic etc. Casting Co. v. Fitchburg R. Co., 109 Mass. 277; 12 Am. Rep. 689.

So also the spread of fire once started in the midst of inflammable material is presumed. Perley v. Eastern R. Co., 98 Mass. 414; 96 Am. Dec. 645; Higgins v. Dewey, 107 Mass. 494; 9 Am. Rep. 63; Calkins v. Barger, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 424; Collins v. Groseclose, 40 Ind. 414; Gagg v. Vetter, 41 Ind. 228; 13 Am. Rep. 322; Cleland v. Thornton, 43 Cal. 437; Filliter v. Phippard, 11 A. & E. 346.

There is a presumption that the shock

k. PROBABLE HABITS OF ANIMALS.—The presumption exists that the actions of animals are in conformity with what common observation and experience have shown to be their habits.¹

l. CONDUCT OF MEN IN EMERGENCIES.—That men placed in positions of sudden and unexpected danger will act instinctively and convulsively will be presumed.²

m. PROPER NEGOTIATION OF NEGOTIABLE PAPER.—A presumption always exists in favor of the validity of negotiable instruments.³

caused by a railway train's meeting an obstacle is proportioned to the momentum of the train. 2 Whart. on Ev., § 1294 and cases cited; Reg. v. Pargeter, 3 Cox C. C. 191.

See also Caswell v. Boston etc. R. Co., 98 Mass. 194; 93 Am. Dec. 151.

1. Thus it is presumed that certain animals when unrestrained will stray. Lawrence v. Jenkins, L. R., 8 Q. B. 274. That a dog accustomed to kill sheep or to be vicious will continue to do and be so when opportunity affords. Marsh v. Jones, 21 Vt. 378; 52 Am. Dec. 97; Read v. Edwards, 17 C. B., N. S. 245; 112 E. C. L. 244; Swift v. Applebone, 23 Mich. 252; Woolf v. Chalker, 31 Conn. 121; 81 Am. Dec. 175. Compare Rowe v. Bird, 48 Vt. 576; Carlton v. Hiscox, 107 Mass. 410. That a cow will go through an opening in a fence rather than jump over the fence. Quare as to a goat in such a case. Jantzen v. Wabash etc. R. Co., 83 Mo. 171.

That horses will take fright at unusual or extraordinary sights and noises. Jones v. Housatonic R. Co., 107 Mass. 261; Lake v. Milliken, 62 Me. 240; Mooreland v. Mitchell Co., 40 Iowa 401; Darling v. Westmoreland, 52 N. H. 401; 13 Am. Rep. 55. Compare Hawks v. Charlemount, 110 Mass. 110; NEGLIGENCE, vol. 16, p. 457.

In Gilbert v. Flint etc. R. Co., 51 Mich. 488; 47 Am. Rep. 592, judicial notice was taken of the fact that a certain obstruction, a freight car, would frighten horses.

So also the presumption exists that shying horses will continue to shy. Chamberlain v. Enfield, 43 N. H. 356; Maggi v. Cutts, 123 Mass. 535.

"When the character of an animal comes into question, the general inference is that he will follow the natural bent of the species to which he belongs." 2 Wharton on Ev., § 1295, note; Wharton on Neg., §§ 923-5.

But evidence of general reputation as to character and habits is not evidence of the value of a horse. Heath v. West, 26 N. H. 191. See also Caldwell v. Snook, 35 Hun (N. Y.) 73.

2. This presumption usually arises in cases of willful or negligent injury. See Colter v. American etc. Express Co., 5 Lans. (N. Y.) 67; Frink v. Potter, 17 Ill. 406; Sears v. Dennis, 105 Mass. 310; Greenleaf v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 29 Iowa 47.

The conduct of men in a mass, in certain situations may be presumed. Guille v. Swann, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 381; 10 Am. Dec. 234; Fairbanks v. Kerr, 70 Pa. St. 86.

3. Bank of Orleans v. Barry, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 116; 1 Greenleaf on Ev. (14th ed.), § 38.

Therefore it is presumed that they were regularly issued. 2 Whart. on Ev., § 1301.

See BILLS AND NOTES, vol. 2, pp. 381-395, 416.

And the holder of an unimpeached promissory note is presumed to be a bona fide holder for value. Scott v. Williamson, 24 Me. 343; Earbee v. Wolfe, 9 Port. (Ala.) 366; Ellicott v. Martin, 6 Md. 509; Curtiss v. Martin, 20 Ill. 557; Lathrop v. Donaldson, 22 Iowa 234.

But where the consideration is illegal or fraudulent the onus is upon the holder to show that he holds bona fide and for value. Paton v. Coit, 5 Mich. 505; Ellicott v. Martin, 6 Md. 509; Perrin v. Noyes, 39 Me. 384; 63 Am. Dec. 33; Tucker v. Morrill, 1 Allen (Mass.) 528; Perkins v. Prout, 47 N. H. 387; 93 Am. Dec. 449.

A valuable consideration is presumed both for the execution and the indorsement. Clark v. Schneider, 17 Mo. 295; 3 Kent's Com. 77; 4 Minor's Insts. (2nd ed.), p. 24-5; Leonard v. Vrendenburg, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 37; 5 Am. Dec. 317;

n. REGULAR APPOINTMENT OF OFFICERS AND AGENTS—(See also PUBLIC OFFICERS).—It is a presumption of fact that officers and agents are presumed to have been regularly appointed.¹

o. REGULARITY OF BUSINESS MEN.—It is a presumption of fact that the transactions among business men will be conducted with business regularity.²

Miller v. McIntyre, 9 Ala. 638; Goodman v. Simonds, 20 How. (U. S.) 343; Witte v. Williams, 8 S. Car. 590; 28 Am. Rep. 294; Bank of Orleans v. Barry, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 116; Fuller v. Hutchings, 10 Cal. 523; 70 Am. Dec. 746, (presumption in case of a check); Lathrop v. Donaldson, 22 Iowa 234.

This presumption of a valuable consideration is prima facie as between the original parties and conclusive as to subsequent holders for value. 4 Minor's Insts. (2nd ed.), 24-5; Peasley v. Boatright, 2 Leigh (Va.) 198; Garland v. Lacombe, L. R., 8 Ex. 216; Phelan v. Moss, 67 Pa. St. 59.

1. OFFICERS AND AGENTS, vol. 17, p. 39; public officers, 2 Whart. on Ev., § 1315, and cases cited; Lawson on Presumptive Ev. 60; Bank of U. S. v. Dandridge, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 64.

It is a presumption of fact determining the burden of proof. It lacks one essential of a presumption of law, viz., universal equality of application to all cases. 2 Whart. on Ev., § 1315.

See also Hilliard v. Gould, 34 N. H. 230; 66 Am. Dec. 765; Alexander v. State, 56 Ga. 478; Cabot v. Given, 45 Me. 144; Hutchins v. Van Bokkelen, 34 Me. 126 (officer presumed to have been properly appointed and to have qualified in all cases in which he is a party to the record).

The presumption does not apply, however, to private special agents. Short v. Lee, 2 Jac. & W. 468; Whart. on Agency, §§ 42-44; 2 Whart. on Ev., § 1316; Best on Ev., § 357.

Nor to executors and administrators. Hathaway v. Clark, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 490.

The presumption also exists that a public officer has been duly sworn. Nelson v. People, 23 N. Y. 293.

2. 2 Whart. on Ev., § 1320; Lawson on Presumptive Ev., p. 69, et seq.

Thus a party is presumed to have read a paper to which his signature is attached. Hartford L. Ins. Co. v.

Gray, 80 Ill. 28; Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co. v. Pendleton, 115 U. S. 339.

Where a bond is in the name of a company by its agent with a scrawl for its seal, it will be presumed that the seal was the proper and only seal of the company. Miller v. Superior Mach. Co., 79 Ill. 450. See also Leckart v. Bell, 90 N. Car. 499. A note indorsed is presumed to have been indorsed while current. Leland v. Farnham, 25 Vt. 553. A bill of exchange is presumed to have been accepted within a reasonable time after its date, and before its maturity. Roberts v. Bethell, 12 C. B. 778; 74 E. C. L. 778.

Partnership.—It is presumed that two men doing business together are partners. McMullan v. Mackenzie, 2 G. Greene (Iowa) 368; Ferris v. Kilmer, 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 411.

Partnership books produced in evidence are presumed to be correct. Rousten v. Bostwick, 59 Ala. 360; Desha v. Smith, 20 Ala. 747.

A note executed by B, a member of the firm of A and B, is presumed to be a firm note and will bind the firm. Jones v. Rives, 3 Ala. 13.

The members of a partnership are presumed to be equally interested. Farrar v. Beswick, 1 M. & R. 527; Brewer v. Brown, 68 Ala. 210; Moore v. Bare, 11 Iowa 198.

Letters written by a person in the name of a firm and entries made by him in the firm books—held, presumptive evidence that such person was a member of the firm in a particular case. Lewis v. Post, 1 Ala. 65.

See also 1 Greenleaf on Ev. (14th ed.), § 42.

Other Cases.—Mr. Lawson, in his excellent work on Presumptive Evidence, furnishes a great number of other illustrative cases, some of which may be mentioned.

Notes and accounts past due are received by an attorney. It is presumed that he receives them for collection. Mardis v. Shackelford, 4 Ala. 493.

p. NON-EXISTENCE OF CLAIM PRESUMED FROM NON-CLAIMER.
—See LACHES, vol. 12, p. 533, et seq.

q. LETTER POSTED PRESUMED TO ARRIVE AT USUAL TIME
—(See also LETTERS, vol. 13, p. 260).—The posting of a letter duly addressed and stamped creates a prima facie presumption of its receipt by the party addressed within the usual time.¹ The strength of the presumption must, of course, depend greatly upon circumstances of time, place, and the character of the mail routes.²

A sells goods to B. The presumption is that the goods are to be paid for on delivery. Roberts v. Wilcoxson, 36 Ark. 364.

A accepts a draft drawn on him by B. It is presumed that A at the time had funds of B's in his hands with which to pay it. Trego v. Lowery, 8 Neb. 238; Kendall v. Galvin, 15 Me. 131; 32 Am. Dec. 141.

Freight earned by a vessel is presumed to belong to the owners of the vessel. Williams v. Insurance Co., 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 345.

A sells goods to B on credit. It is presumed that A believed B to be solvent at the time of the sale. O'Brien v. Norris, 16 Md. 122; 77 Am. Dec. 284.

Where two persons sign a note it is presumed that they are equally bound. Orvis v. Newell, 17 Conn. 97.

In a bill for relief it was alleged that a certain agreement was in writing. The presumption is that it was signed. Rist v. Hobson, 1 Sim. & Stu. 543.

Where it is proved that there are unsatisfied judgments against A personally it raises the presumption of his insolvency. Ansley v. Carlos, 9 Ala. 973; Lawson v. Orear, 7 Ala. 784; Beason v. Wiley, 28 Ala. 575.

So where a man cannot collect his debt from a person, a presumption of such person's insolvency arises. Dilberry v. Mobley, 20 Ala. 260.

For many other instances, see Lawson on Presumptive Evidence, p. 69 et seq.

An account tendered or sent to a merchant who keeps it without any objection being made for a long time, is presumed to be correct. And the same doctrine applies in the case of any person between whom there are accounts current, or accounts in the ordinary course of business. Shepard v. Bank of Missouri, 15 Mo. 143; Freeland v. Heron, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 147. Com- pare Robertson v. Wright, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 524.

Where a lease is to take effect in presenti and possession under the lease is covered, the presumption is that the lease and possession under it were delivered on the day of the date of the lease. Rhone v. Gale, 12 Minn. 54.

1. Hastings v. Brooklyn L. Ins. Co., 53 Hun (N. Y.) 631; McCoy v. Mayor etc. of N. Y., 46 Hun (N. Y.) 268; Oregon Steamship Co. v. Otis, 100 N. Y. 446; 53 Am. Rep. 221 (addressed to party at his place of residence); Steiner v. Ellis (Ala. 1890), 7 So. Rep. 803 (same); Rosenthal v. Walker, 111 U. S. 185; Breed v. First Nat. Bank, 6 Colo. 235; Huntley v. Whittier, 105 Mass. 391; 7 Am. Rep. 536; Munn v. Baldwin, 6 Mass. 316; Groton v. Lancaster, 16 Mass. 110; Stocken v. Collen, 7 M. & W. 515; Lawson on Presumptive Ev. 69; 1 Greenleaf on Ev. (14th ed.), § 40; 2 Whart on Ev., §§ 1323, et seq.; Powell on Ev. (4th ed.) 81; 1 Taylor on Ev. § 179.

A postmark is presumptive evidence of the mailing of a letter, and this rule is not affected by showing that envelopes not mailed have been stamped with a given postmark. U. S. v. Noelke, 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 554.

But it is said that there is no presumption that a letter reached its destination within two weeks after it was mailed in the absence of any proof as to the place where it was mailed. Boon v. State Ins. Co., 37 Minn. 426; Wiggins v. Burkham, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 129.

2. U. S. v. Babcock, 3 Dill. (U. S.) 571; Boon v. State Ins. Co., 37 Minn. 426; Greenfield Bank v. Crafts, 4 Allen (Mass.) 447 (no presumption at all existing).

Proof of addressing and posting a letter raises no legal presumption that it came into the hands of the party addressed so as to make secondary evidence of its contents admissible. Freeman v. Morey, 45 Me. 50; 71 Am. Dec. 527.

The presumption is not rebutted by the affidavit to the contrary of the party addressed.¹ The post-mark and date of a letter afford prima facie evidence of the time and place at which it was mailed.²

r. LETTER SENT BY SPECIAL MESSENGER—TELEGRAMS.—The same presumption, though perhaps not so strong, applies to these as to letters posted.³

s. ACQUIESCENCE IN POSSESSION MAY RAISE A PRESUMPTION OF GRANT.—Acquiescence by the person against whom the title is to be established, in the possession of property by the person endeavoring to show title in himself, together with other circumstances, will raise a presumption of a grant.⁴

In U. S. v. Babcock, 3 Dill. (U. S.) 571, the court by Dillon, J., said: "It is not a conclusive presumption; it does not even create a legal presumption that such letters were actually received; it is evidence tending, if credited by the jury, to show the receipt of such letters."

In some cases it is said there is no presumption at all. Greenfield Bank v. Crafts, 4 Allen (Mass.) 447; Walter v. Haynes, Ry. & M. 149; 21 E. C. L. 402 (in correct address); Allen v. Blunt, 2 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 121; Tanner v. Hughes, 53 Pa. St. 289.

And no presumption arises where there is no mail delivery, or where the sender has no business address. Freeman v. Morey, 45 Me. 50; 71 Am. Dec. 527; First Nat. Bank v. McMaingh, 69 Pa. St. 156; 8 Am. Rep. 236; Billgerry v. Branch, 19 Gratt. (Va.) 393.

1. Steiner v. Ellis (Ala. 1890), 7 So. Rep. 803; Snider v. Burks, 84 Ala. 53.

2. New Haven Co. Bank v. Mitchell, 15 Conn. 206; U. S. v. Noelke, 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 554.

3. 2 Whart. on Ev., § 1328; Crandall v. Clark, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 169; Hetherington v. Kemp, 4 Camp. 193; Thalhimer v. Brinckerhoff, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 96.

See also Dana v. Kemble, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 112, a case in which a letter was deposited in an urn in a hotel office from which it was customary to distribute letters to guests.

As to telegrams, see Oregon Steamship Co. v. Otis, 100 N. Y. 446; 53 Am. Rep. 221; 2 Whart. on Ev., § 1329; Gray on Telegraphs, § 76; U. S. v. Babcock, 3 Dill. (U. S.) 573.

As to telephones see Sullivan v. Kuykendall, 82 Ky. 403; 56 Am. Rep. 901; Hawley v. Whipple, 48 N. H. 488.

4. Hughes v. Hughes, 72 Ga. 173; Carter v. Tinicum Fishing Co., 77 Pa. St. 310.

In Georgia, exclusive possession of lands of the father by the son for seven years is conclusive presumption of a gift, in the absence of a disclaimer, or evidence showing a loan, or claim of dominion by the father acknowledged by the son. Hughes v. Hughes, 72 Ga. 173.

Title to a fishery was in Sanderlin in 1748; partition of his estate was had, James, the husband of Mary, one of his heirs, deceased, being a party; it was adjudged in 1754 to "the representatives of Mary, late wife of James," subject to a ground-rent, the whole estate being divided into five shares. Elizabeth and others, reciting that they were heirs of "James, who was an heir of Sanderlin," conveyed in 1805 to Carter; the deed also recited the proceedings in partition, also, prior deeds reciting the partition, and that the grantors were heirs of other heirs of Sanderlin, and conveying to Carter their interest in two-fifths of the fishery. There was no other evidence of the pedigree of the grantors, nor of any claim by the descendants of Sanderlin for the fishery. Held, sufficient to raise a presumption of any grant, etc., to make a good title to Carter of the fishery. Carter v. Tinicum Fishing Co., 77 Pa. St. 310.

PRETENSE.—See FALSE PRETENSES, vol. 7, p. 699.

PRETERMITTED.—See LEGACIES AND DEVISES, vol. 13, p. 138; STATUTES OF DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION.

PRETEXT.—An ostensible reason or motive assigned or assumed as a color or cover for the real reason or motive; false appearance; pretense.¹

PREVAILING PARTY.—He is the prevailing party within the meaning of a statute entitling such party to costs, who prevails on the main issue to a greater extent than admitted by his adversary, though not to the full extent of his claim.²

PREVENT.—See note 3.

PREVIOUS.—Compares an act or state named to another act or state subsequent in order of time for the purpose of asserting the priority of the first.⁴

"PRICE" generally means the sum of money which an article is sold for, but is often used as the equivalent of compensation, in whatever form received, for property sold. The Latin word from which price is derived sometimes means "reward," "value," "estimation," "equivalent," and Webster shows that "price" is sometimes used in the same sense.⁵

1. Webster's Dict. followed in State v. Ball, 27 Neb. 601.

2. Anderson's Law Dict. Weston v. Cushing, 45 Vt. 537.

To be a prevailing party does not depend upon the degree of success at different stages of the suit, but whether at the end of the suit or proceeding the party who has made a claim against the other has successfully maintained it. Bangor etc. R. Co. v. Chamberlain, 60 Me. 286; Hawkins v. Nowland, 53 Mo. 330. See also New Haven etc. R. Co. v. Northampton, 102 Mass. 120; Henry v. Miller, 61 Me. 105; Rogers v. St. Charles, 54 Mo. 229.

When a party wrongfully enters upon the docket of an appellate court what purports to be an action appealed from a lower court, and a motion for dismissal is sustained, upon the ground that no appeal has been duly taken, and the action dismissed, the party obtaining the dismissal must be regarded as the "prevailing party" entitled to costs. Pomroy v. Cates, 81 Me. 377. See also COSTS, vol. 4, p. 315.

3. The word "prevent" as used in the Arkansas statute of limitations was held to mean, following Webster's Dict., to hinder; to obstruct; to intercept. Promises to pay, though broken, appeals to the sympathies of the creditor for indulgence, or untrue statements, are not such acts on the part of the debtor as can be said to have "prevented" the commencement of an action within the meaning of the statute. Burr v. Williams, 20 Ark. 185.

Where plaintiff alleged that defendant "prevented and discharged" plaintiff from fulfilling his contract to supply certain goods, it was held that "prevent" in such a case does not mean "an obstruction by physical force," and that the allegation is sufficiently sustained by proof that defendant gave notice that he would not accept the goods if delivered. Cort v. Ambergate etc. R. Co., 17 Q. B. 145.

4. Lebrecht v. Wilcoxon, 40 Iowa 94.

Previous Demand.—Means a demand made on a substantially different occasion. Tyler v. Bland, 9 M. & W. 340.

"Previous Chaste Character."—See CHARACTER, vol. 1, p. 110; CHASTE, vol. 3, p. 156; SEDUCTION.

5. Hudson Iron Co. v. Alger, 54 N. Y. 177. So, it was held, in State v. Sparks, 30 W. Va. 101, where an indictment charged the larceny of a horse of the "price" of $100, that the word "price" was equivalent to the word "value" as used in a statute providing that if a person commits simple larceny

PRIMA FACIE CASE OR EVIDENCE.—A prima facie case or evidence is that which is received or continues until the contrary is shown.¹ It is such as, in judgment of law, is sufficient to establish the fact; and if not rebutted, remains sufficient for the purpose.²

PRIMAGE.—The word primage denotes a small payment to the master, by the owners of merchandise shipped upon his vessel, for his care and trouble, which he is to receive to his own use, unless he has otherwise agreed with his owners.³

PRIMARY ELECTION.—A popular election held by members of a particular political party for the purpose of choosing delegates to a convention empowered to nominate candidates for that party to be voted for at an approaching election.⁴

PRIME.—See note 5.

PRINCIPAL AND ACCESSORY.—See ACCESSORY, vol. 1, p. 61.

PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.—See AGENCY, vol. 1, p. 331.

PRINCIPAL AND SURETY.—See SURETYSHIP.

PRINCIPLES.—(See also PATENT).—The term principle is equivocal. It may denote either the radical elementary truths of a of goods, "of the value of $20 or more." he shall be deemed guilty of grand larceny.

"Price," the value which a seller places upon his goods for sale. Scott v. People, 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 62.

Cost Price.—Defendant agreed to pay in merchandise a certain sum to the plaintiff, "said merchandise to be sold and delivered at not above 25 per cent. of the cost price." Held, that the words "cost price" obviously meant the price paid for the goods by the defendant. Buck v. Burk, 18 N. Y. 337.

1. Troy v. Evans, 97 U. S. 3.

2. Kelly v. Johnson, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 622.

3. Peters v. Speights, 4 Md. Ch. 381; citing, Abbott on Shipping 492.

Primage is no longer a gratuity to the master, unless specially stipulated, but it belongs to the owners or freighters, and is nothing but an increase of the freight rate. Carr v. Austin etc. R. Co., 14 Fed. Rep. 421.

4. Rap. & Law. Law Dict., followed in State v. Hirsch, 125 Ind. 207, where it was held that a prohibition against the sale of intoxicating liquors "on the day of any election," applied as well to a primary election as to a legal election. The court said: "The words any election clearly include primary elections." And in Strasburger v. Burk, 13 Am. L. Reg. 607, it was held that the principles of public policy which make void all contracts tending to the corruption of elections held under authority of law apply equally to what are called "primary or nominating elections."

But see Commonwealth v. Wells, 17 W. N. C. (Pa.) 164, where it was held that a "primary election" was not within the meaning of the Pennsylvania statute prohibiting wagers upon the result of "any elections." See also Leonard v. Commonwealth, 112 Pa. St. 622. And see generally ELECTIONS, vol. 6, p. 372.

5. "Prime," in a contract for the delivery of "prime barley," will be understood according to its use among merchants. Whitmore v. Coates, 14 Mo.

9. See generally Spring v. Cockburn, 19 U. C. C. P. 63; Yates v. Pym, 16 Taunt. 445.

"Prime Cost," as used in a revenue act, was held to be equivalent to "actual cost" and "real cost," and means the true and real price paid for goods upon a genuine bona fide purchase. United States v. Sixteen Packages of Goods, 2 Mason (U. S.)

science, or those consequential axioms which are founded on radical truths, but which are used as fundamental truths by those who do not find it expedient to have recourse to first principles.¹

PRINT, PRINTER, ETC.—(See also MANUFACTURING CORPORATIONS, vol. 14, p. 270; NEWSPAPER NOTICE, vol. 16, p. 822; WRITING).—A print is a mark or form made by impression; anything printed; that which, being impressed, leaves its form, as cut in wood or metal, to be impressed on paper; the impression made; a picture; a stamp; the letters in a printed book; an impression from an engraved plate; a picture impressed from an engraved plate, etc.²

PRINTS AND LABELS.—See LABELS, vol. 12, p. 531; TRADE-MARK.

PRIORITY—(See also DEBTOR AND CREDITOR, vol. 5, p. 204; DEBTS OF DECEDENTS, vol. 5, p. 236; EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, vol. 7, pp. 165, 308, 315; LIENS, vol. 13, p. 574; MECHANICS' LIENS, vol. 15, p. 86; PREFERENCES; RECORDING ACTS).—A legal precedence or preference; as in saying that certain debts are paid in priority to others, or that certain incumbrances of an estate are allowed priority over others; that is, they are to be allowed to satisfy their claims out of the estate before the others can be admitted to any share therein.³

53. See also Tappan v. United States, 2 Mason (U. S.) 399.

1. Boulton v. Bull, 2 H. Bl. 478.

The words "principles of justice and good faith" in a special act authorizing the complainant to file a bill, as in chancery, against the State, and requiring the cause to be decided upon principles of justice and good faith, were construed as intending to relieve complainant from all technical objections that might arise in a proceeding according to the known usages of law and chancery. Seely v. State, 11 Ohio 501.

Conscience and Principle Distinguished.

—See CONSCIENCE, vol. 3, p. 661.

2. Webster's Dict. followed in Yuenling v. Schile, 20 Blatchf. (U. S.) 463, 464; Wood v. Abbott, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 325; Arthur v. Moller, 97 U. S. 365.

"It means, apparently, a picture, something complete in itself, similar in kind to an engraving, cut or photograph." Rosenbach v. Dreyfuss, 2 Fed. Rep. 217, 221.

Print, undoubtedly, in its broadest sense may be an impression of either figures, characters or letters. United States v. Harman, 38 Fed. Rep. 829.

Although the law recognizes a distinction between a "painting" and a "print," a copyright for the former will protect its owner in the sale of copies hereof, even though they may appropriately be called prints. Schumacher v. Schwencke, 30 Fed. Rep. 690.

It cannot be contended that a "print" is any the less a "print" because struck off in different colors; and it has been held that playing cards printed in colors are "p-rints." Richardson v. Miller, 3 Law & Eq. R. (Am.) 614; 12 Pat. Off. Gaz. 3.

Printer.—The word printer in a statute may include the publisher of a newspaper. Bunce v. Reed, 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 350. See also Quivey v. Porter, 37 Cal. 458; Reynolds v. Schmidt, 20 Wis. 381. See also MANUFACTURER, vol. 14, p. 267.

3. Abbott's Law Dict.

PRISONS.—(See also ARREST, vol. 1, p. 719; BAIL, vol. 2, p. 1; ESCAPE, vol. 6, p. 844; IMPRISONMENT, vol. 10, p. 197; IMPRISONMENT FOR DEBT, vol. 10, p. 212; SHERIFFS.)

- | | |
|--|---|
| I. Definition, 85.
 II. Authority to Erect and Maintain Prisons, 86.
 III. Care of Property of Convicts, 88.
 IV. Convict Labor System, 88.
 V. Prison Keepers, 90. | VI. Maintenance of Prisoners, 90.
 VII. Prison Bounds or Rules of Prison, 91.
 1. Definition, 91.
 2. How Bounded, 91.
 3. Persons Entitled, 92.
 4. Bond for Prison Bounds, 93. |
|--|---|

I. DEFINITION.—A general term for all the various buildings maintained for the confinement of persons in judicial custody.¹

1. Abbott's L. Dict., p. 314.

Other Definitions.—A public building in which may be confined persons charged with or convicted of a crime, and persons who can give important testimony on the trial of criminal cases. Anderson's L. Dict. 811.

A public building for confining persons either to insure their production in the courts as accused persons and witnesses, or to punish as criminals. Originally it was distinguished from jail, which was a place for confinement, not for punishment, but at present there is no such distinction. Bouvier's L. Dict. 462.

Penitentiary.—A prison or place of punishment. Any place designed for the confinement of convicts. A State prison. Anderson's Law Dict.

Jail.—A house or building used for the purposes of a public prison or where persons under arrest are kept. State v. Bryan, 89 N. Car. 533.

Meaning in Statutes.—By the Penal Code of Texas the word "jail" means "any place of confinement used for detaining a prisoner." Texas Penal Code, art. 226.

The words "State jail or penitentiary," used in § 5543 of the U. S. Rev. Sts., refer to the jails and penitentiaries within a State, whether State, city or county institutions, which are permitted by the State to be used for the confinement of the prisoners of the United States. U. S. v. Schroeder, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 344. See also Ex parte Brooks, 29 Fed. Rep. 83.

Imprisonment as Cause for Divorce.—Among the causes of divorce enumerated in the New Hampshire statutes is: "Conviction of crime and actual imprisonment in the State prison." In this statute, the term "the State prison" is limited in meaning to the prison established and maintained by this State at Concord, and does not include a prison in another State though called there "the State prison." Conviction and imprisonment in another jurisdiction is not a cause of divorce in this State. Martin v. Martin, 47 N. H. 52. See also Leonard v. Leonard, 151 Mass. 151.

Alternative Sentence.—A sentence to the "State penitentiary or State prison" in Florida is not ambiguous or in the alternative, there being but one institution for the confinement of convicts, and the statute uses both forms of words to indicate the same place of confinement. Potsdamer v. State, 17 Fla. 895.

A "State prison" in its general sense means a place of confinement for State prisoners, that is, for persons charged with political offenses and confined for reasons of State; but in some States, the term designates the penitentiary maintained by the State for the confinement of prisoners convicted of certain crimes, in distinction from other prisons maintained and used by counties and cities. Anderson's L. Dict., p. 811; Martin v. Martin, 47 N. H. 52.

What Constitutes Question for Jury.—

Where the evidence on an indictment for carrying instruments and arms into a jail with intent to facilitate the escape of a prisoner, showed that the instruments and arms were carried inside a wall which was constructed about the house in which the prisoners were confined, it was a question for the jury to decide whether the inclosure between the house and wall constituted a part of the jail under the definition contained in the Penal Code of Texas, art. 226. Welch v. State, 25 Tex. App. 580.

II. AUTHORITY TO ERECT AND MAINTAIN PRISONS.—The authority to erect and maintain prisons is conferred by statute in the various States, or by State constitutions.¹ A county is not liable in the absence of statutory provisions, for injuries to pris-

Origin of Penitentiaries.—The system of confinement of persons convicted of crime in public prisons, penitentiaries, or workhouses, was the result of the attempt to do away with the stupid common law doctrine of benefit of clergy. It originated in the statute of 5 Anne, ch. 6, and was carried to perfection by a series of statutes including 4 Geo. I, ch. 11; 6 Geo. I, ch. 23, and was finally perfected in 19 Geo. III, ch. 74, which statute was the work of Sir William Blackstone and John Howard.

This statute provided that all offenders liable to transportation might, in lieu thereof, at the discretion of the judges, be employed, if males, except in the case of petty larceny, at hard labor for the benefit of some public navigation, or, whether males or females, might, in all cases, be confined at hard labor in certain penitentiary houses to be erected by virtue of the same act for the several terms therein specified, but in no case exceeding seven years, with the power of subsequent mitigation and even of reward in case of their good behavior. 4 Bl. Com. (3 Cooley's ed.) 370.

There are two systems of penitentiaries in the United States, each of which is claimed to be the best by its partisans; the Pennsylvania system, and the New York system.

By the former, convicts are lodged in separate, well lighted, and well ventilated cells, where they are required to work during stated hours during the whole time of their confinement; they are never permitted to see or speak with each other; their usual employments are shoemaking, weaving, winding yarn, picking wool, and such like business. The only punishment to which convicts are subject are the privation of food for short periods and confinement without labor in dark but well aired cells, and this discipline has been found sufficient to keep perfect order. The whip and all other corporal punishment is prohibited.

The New York system adopted at Auburn, which was probably copied from the penitentiary at Ghent in the Netherlands, is founded on the system of isolation and separation, as well as that of Pennsylvania, but with this difference; that in the former the prisoners are confined to their separate cells during the night only, during the working hours in the daytime they labor together in workshops appropriated to their use. The discipline of the prison is enforced by stripes inflicted by the assistant keepers, though this punishment is rarely exercised. Bouvier's L. Dict. 399.

Arson.—A jail is an inhabited dwelling house, and a house within the statutes against arson. People v. Cotteral, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 118; Childress v. State, 86 Ala. 77. See also People v. Van Blaricum, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 105. In some States this is expressly provided. Code Alabama, 1886, § 3780.

1. Felts v. Mayor etc. of Memphis, 2 Head (Tenn.) 650; Mississippi Constitution, 1868, art. 12, § 16; De Witt v. San Francisco, 2 Cal. 290; Sharp v. Wike (Pa. 1887), 9 Atl. Rep. 454; V. C. 73, ch. 50, § 12; 1 Minor's Insts. (3rd ed.), vol. 1, p. 114; 1 Rev. Stat. Indiana, 1876, p. 601; Marion Co. v. Reissner, 58 Ind. 260.

In Tennessee, jails are usually built by the county courts out of funds from the county treasury, but the legislature may authorize them to be constructed by the towns and cities, and unless they are by law restricted to the confinement of a particular class of offenders, they will become upon common law principles, the public prisons of the State, and no county, town, or city can exclude the city officers therefrom. Felts v. Mayor etc. of Memphis, 2 Head (Tenn.) 650.

The authority by act of the legislature to erect a court house and jail, would necessarily embrace the authority to purchase the land on which to erect them. De Witt v. San Francisco, 2 Cal. 296. See Sharp v. Wike (Pa. 1887), 9 Atl. Rep. 454.

Ohio.—In Ohio a county is liable to make good a damage sustained by the sheriff for an escape, by reason of the oners in its jail, caused by the insalubrious condition of the jail.¹ This is only an application of a well settled principle of the law, that counties partake of the governmental functions of the State and enjoy a like immunity from actions, without the consent of the legislature.² If a person has been maltreated he must sue personally those who have mistreated him.³ Provision is made by the U. S. Rev. Stat. for the confinement of prisoners in such State penitentiaries or jails as may be allowed by the legislatures of those States, and in case such use is not permitted then the marshal is empowered under the direction of the judge of the district to hire or otherwise procure within the limits of such State a convenient place to serve as a temporary jail, and to make any other provision that he may deem necessary for the safekeeping of the prisoners until permanent provision may be made for their keeping. When a convict is confined according to the provisions of these statutes in any State jail or penitentiary such convict shall be subject to the rules established for the government of State prisoners, and shall be under the exclusive control of the State officers having charge of the State jail or penitentiary.⁴

insufficiency of the jail, or by imprisoning a debtor in the same apartment with criminals—it being the duty of the county to furnish a sufficient jail. Campbell v. Hampson, 1 Ohio 119; Brown Co. v. Butt, 2 Ohio 349; Richardson v. Spencer, 6 Ohio 13. But see Kepler v. Barker, 13 Ohio St. 177. Hamilton Co. v. Mighels, 7 Ohio St. 109, in which the above doctrine was virtually overruled.

Constitutional Law.—Ch. 74 of the laws of Kansas of 1886, entitled, "An act authorizing and directing the county commissioners of Shawnee County to levy an assessment to build a jail and jailer's residence" is constitutional and valid. Washburn v. Shawnee Co., 37 Kan. 217.

Indiana.—It is the duty of every county in Indiana to provide a common jail. Huber v. Robinson, 23 Ind. 137.

Cases Adjudicating this Question.—The following cases have been decided with regard to the erection and maintenance of prisons: Ransom v. Gentry Co., 48 Mo. 341; Marion Co. v. Reissner, 58 Ind. 260; Marion Co. v. Reissner, 66 Ind. 568; Bynum v. Greene Co., 100 Ind. 90; Schenck v. Mayor etc. of N. Y., 40 N. Y. Super. Ct. 165; Roach v. O'Dell, 33 Hun (N. Y.) 320; State v. Board of Freeholders (N. J. 1888), 13 Atl. Rep. 173; State v. Justices of Lenoir, 4 Hawks. (N. Car.) 194.

1. Pfefferle v. Lyon Co., 39 Kan. 342; Manuel v. Cumberland Co., 98 N. Car. 9.

See also Curran v. Boston, 151 Mass. 505; Moffit v. Asheville, 103 N. Car. 237; LeClef v. Concordia, 41 Kan. 323.

The county is not responsible in damages for the tort of one of the guards in unlawfully beating a convict in the chain gang, nor for the negligence of the rest of the guards in not protecting the convict from the unlawful beating. Hammond v. Richmond Co., 72 Ga. 188. Cases cited in that case: 2 T. R. 667; 15 Ga. 316; 18 Ga. 475; 19 Ga. 100; 20 Ga. 346.

2. 1 Minor's Insts. (3rd ed.) 636.

COUNTIES, vol. 4, p. 359.

3. Wilson v. Fannin Co., 74 Pa. St. 818.

4. U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 5542, 5537, 5538, 5539, 5540, 5541, 5543 and 5536.

The State officers of Michigan having charge of any penal institution may contract with the United States for the confinement in such institution of persons committed or sentenced to confinement by the circuit or district courts of the United States. Pub. Acts, 1889, No. 172, p. 198.

A similar provision exists in New York. Birdseye's Rev. Stats. p. 2324.

Where a prisoner is sentenced to confinement in a penitentiary outside the limits of the State in which he was

III. CARE OF PROPERTY OF CONVICTS.—Provision is made by statute in some of the States for the appointment of committees or trustees to take charge of the property of persons confined in the State prison.¹

IV. CONVICT LABOR SYSTEM.—The State acquires an ownership in the services of convicts sentenced to confinement in the penitentiary under the clause of the various constitutions abolishing involuntary servitude except as a punishment for crime.² In some States the leasing or farming out of convicts is forbidden either by the constitution³ or by statute.⁴ Where a State has leased the tried, it is not necessary that the record of his conviction should show that there was no penitentiary within that State suitable for the confinement of prisoners from the Federal courts, or that the attorney-general had designated the penitentiary in question for such purposes. In re Wilson, 18 Fed. Rep. 33.

State Jailer United States Officer.—For the purpose of safely keeping, properly caring for, and humanely treating prisoners committed to his custody by a court of the United States, the keeper of a county jail of the State who received such prisoners and is paid for their maintenance, is an officer of the United States court. In re Birdsong, 39 Fed. Rep. 599.

By the Penal Code of California, §§ 1601, 1602, the sheriff is required to receive and keep in the county jail any prisoner committed by authority of the United States, "provision being made by the United States for the support of such prisoner." Held, that the amount per diem fixed by the board of supervisors of the county for the support of State prisoners must be presumed to be a reasonable compensation, and for a refusal of the sheriff to receive a United States prisoner upon being tendered such amount, he is liable for contempt. In re Kays, 35 Fed. Rep. 288.

If a debtor escape from a State jail to which he has been committed under process from the courts of the United States, the marshal is not liable. Randolph v. Donaldson, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 76.

Where a prisoner is committed to a State jail, the use of which is permitted to prisoners committed by authority of the United States courts, a copy of the writ of commitment showing the grounds thereof should be left with the jailer. Erwin v. U. S., 37 Fed. Rep. 470.

1. Provision is made by the New York statutes for the appointment of trustees to take charge of the property of convicts when said convicts are imprisoned in a State prison for a less term than for life, or in a penitentiary or county jail for a criminal offense for a longer term than one year. Bliss's New York Ann. Code, vol. 3, §§ 2219-2229.

Place of Imprisonment.—Under this general head the following cases may be consulted:

Illinois.—Keedy v. People, 84 Ill. 569; Dyer v. People, 84 Ill. 624; Mullinix v. People, 76 Ill. 212.

Indiana.—Tippecanoe Co. v. Lafayette, 7 Ind. 614.

South Carolina.—State v. Welch, 29 S. Car. 4.

New York.—See Bliss' Ann. C., §§ 122-3.

Ohio.—Campbell v. Hampson, 1 Ohio 119.

Wisconsin.—Davies v. State, 72 Wis. 54.

California.—Ex parte Flood, 64 Cal. 251; Ex parte Moon Fook, 72 Cal. 10.

2. U. S. Const., art. 13, § 1; Const. Alabama, 1875, art. 1, § 33; Const. Mississippi, art. 1, § 19; Comer v. Bankhead, 70 Ala. 493.

3. California.—Stimson's Stat. Law, § 141.

4. Birdseye's Rev. Stats. New York, p. 2319. See Jones v. Lynds, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 301.

North Carolina.—In North Carolina no convict sentenced for murder, manslaughter, rape, or arson shall be farmed out. North Carolina Constitution, art. 11, §§ 1-2; Stimson's Stat. Law, § 141.

Under the proviso to Code of North Carolina, § 3448, that it shall not be lawful to farm out convicts unless the court before whom the trial is had shall in its judgment so authorize, the court

State prison and its inmates, it can resume possession of the State prison and control of the convicts, only by compensation, as is required in all cases where private property is taken for public use.¹ The lessee, however, holds his lease subject to the right of the governor to pardon and release the prisoners, and to the power of future legislatures to modify the punishment.²

at a term other than that at which the conviction was had cannot authorize the farming out of a convict. State v. Pearson, 100 N. Car. 414.

The statute of Michigan 1842, p. 130, requires the agent of the State prison to give notice in a newspaper for sealed proposals for letting the convicts. The agent of the prison without giving such notice, hired convicts to defendant for a term of years, the contract was held to be void, the mode of letting prescribed by the statute being a limitation on the power itself, and not merely directory to the agent of the prison. Agent of the State Prison v. Lathrop, 1 Mich. 438. See also In re South Western Car Co., 9 Ind. 76; Reed v. Seymour, 24 Minn. 273; Holland v. State, 23 Fla. 123; Trusk v. State, 32 N. J. L. 478.

Massachusetts.—Under the Massachusetts Stats. of 1827, ch. 118, providing "that all contracts on account of the State prison shall be made with the warden, and when approved by the inspectors, shall be binding in law," the contracts are not required to be in writing. Austin v. Forest, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 341.

Alabama.—Under the Alabama statute, the order of the commissioners' court for the hiring of convicts sentenced to hard labor for the county, is not impaired by a failure to transcribe the order on the final record of the court. The order need not recite the fact that the interest of a county requires a hiring of the prisoners to work outside of a county, nor need it recite in what manner or on what particular works the convicts shall be employed. Ex parte White, 81 Ala. 80; Ex parte Small, 81 Ala. 85. See Wynn v. State, 83 Ala. 55.

New York.—Where judgment was rendered against contractors for convict labor, they cannot restrain a suit brought for collection of such judgment on the grounds that the contract is not in conformity with law, where they themselves violate the contract by neglecting to pay for the services of the convicts the amounts coming due from time to time subsequent to giving of the judgment. Young v. Beardsley, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 93.

Discipline of Convicts.—Under the statutes of Tennessee, convicts in the penitentiary cannot be punished except as authorized by statute, except by authority of the board of inspectors of the prison. The warden of the penitentiary has no power to inflict corporal punishment, unless the board in its discretion authorizes such punishment in each particular case. The board has no authority to delegate to the warden this discretion to inflict such punishment. Boone v. State, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 739; Smith v. State, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 744. See also Werner v. State, 44 Ark. 123.

State Prison Directors.—For cases governing the powers and duties of State prison directors, see Porter v. Haight, 45 Cal. 631; People v. Chapman, 61 Cal. 262; Chapman v. Stoneman, 63 Cal. 490; 78 N. Car. 464; State v. Directors etc., 5 Ohio St. 234.

1. McCauley v. Brooks, 16 Cal. 11. Where the defendant made a contract with the warden of the State prison for the labor of some of the convicts, and his shop within the prison yard was willfully set on fire by convicts, whereby materials belonging to the defendant were injured more than the services of the hired convicts were worth, the loss not being occasioned by the fault or negligence of the officers of the prison, it was held that the defendant was liable to pay for the labor at the price stipulated. Austin v. Foster, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 341.

2. State v. McCauley, 15 Cal. 429; Hancock v. Ewing, 55 Mo. 101.

If parties contracting with the State sustain loss by such action of the legislature, they have a claim against the State, but such is not in the province of the courts to allow. Hancock v. Ewing, 55 Mo. 101.

A prayer in a petition for a mandamus against the penitentiary commissioners to compel the performance of a contract with them for convict labor that they be compelled to assign to the

The lessee of a penitentiary with the prisoners therein confined, has no authority to sublet the contract to another person.¹

V. PRISON KEEPERS.²—At common law the sheriff was ex-officio the jailer of his county.³ In some States it is provided by statute that the sheriff shall have the keeping of the jail.⁴

VI. MAINTENANCE OF PRISONERS.—The State is bound to support all prisoners convicted of crimes.⁵ And persons to be tried for crime must also be maintained at the public expense pending their trial.⁶ At common law, however, a person imprisoned for relator two hundred convicts of the "kind and quality" called for and specified in the agreement, renders the petition uncertain and indefinite, as it cannot be told what specified act is sought to be coerced. People v. Dulaney, 96 Ill. 503.

1. State v. Neel, 48 Ark. 283; compare Horner v. Wood, 23 N. Y. 350.

Where a lessee of convicts has sublet them to another person, his successor may reclaim their custody by habeas corpus. State v. Neel, 48 Ark. 283.

2. Jailer.—A keeper of a jail, formerly a servant of the sheriff. He keeps safely persons committed to him by lawful authority. Anderson's Law Dict. 571.

Warden.—A guardian or keeper. 2 Bouvier's Law Dict. 798.

3. Broom & Had. Blackstone, vol. 1, 266; 1 Minor's Insts., vol. 1 (3rd ed.), 113; Felts v. Memphis, 2 Head (Tenn.) 650.

4. Rev. Code Mississippi, 1880, § 342; New York Code of Civil Proc. §§ 120, 121.

Rev. Stats. Idaho, § 8503.

The following cases defining the rights and powers of prison keepers as established by the statutes of the various States, may be consulted:

Minnesota.—State v. McIntyre, 25 Minn. 383.

Connecticut.—Burr v. Norton, 25 Conn. 103.

Tennessee.—Felts v. Mayor etc. of Memphis, 2 Head (Tenn.) 650.

New Jersey.—Daubman v. Smith, 47 N. J. L. 200; Stiles v. Union Co., 50 N. J. L. 9.

Indiana.—Sate v. Mayne, 68 Ind. 285; Wood v. Selly, 24 Ind. 183; Boaz v. Tate, 43 Ind. 60.

California.—Sacramento v. Hardy, 18 Cal. 412.

Massachusetts.—Bradford v. Rowe, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 17.

Compensation of Prison Keepers.—The compensation which prison keepers are to receive is regulated by statute. The following cases are adjudications on the statutes of the various States:

Hare v. Sebastian Co., 35 Ark. 90; Randall v. Lyon Co., 20 Nev. 35; State v. McIntyre, 25 Minn. 283; Adams v. Hampden Co., 15 Gray (Mass.) 439; Commissioners of Sinking Fund v. Theobald, 17 B. Mon. (Ky.) 459.

In Indiana, a sheriff is entitled to no compensation in addition to the amount allowed by law for the boarding of prisoners, for services rendered by him in keeping the county jail and taking care of the prisoners confined therein. Bynum v. Greene Co., 100 Ind. 90.

5. State v. McCauley, 15 Cal. 429. See McCauley v. Brooks, 16 Cal. 11.

In State v. McCauley, 15 Cal. 429, the court by Field, C. J., said: "The support of the convicts is as much the duty of the State as to provide for the salaries of her officers. It constitutes one of the ordinary sources of the State's expenditures."

The support of a woman sentenced to the reformatory prison for women and removed to a State lunatic hospital, is not a commonwealth charge within the Pub. Sts. of Massachusetts 1883, ch. 148, § 1, making the support of a State prison convict committed to a State lunatic hospital a commonwealth charge to the expiration of his term of sentence to the State prison, though under Pub. Sts., p. 215, § 15, women cannot be sent to the State prison for offenses for which men would be sent there, but may be sent to the reformatory prison. Beard v. Boston, 151 Mass. 96. See Tippecanoe Co. v. Chissom, 7 Ind. 688.

See Atchison Co. Judge v. Lucas, 83 Ky. 451; People v. Columbia Co., 67 N. Y. 330; Sheriff v. Taylor, 2 Brev. (S. Car.) 482; Harris v. Sullivan Co., 15 N. H. 81.

6. People v. Green, 47 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 382; Brian v. Ellis, Dudley (S.

debt was not entitled to any other support than that which his own private property or exertions would supply him;¹ but this doctrine has been held to be repugnant to the institutions and customs of this country,² and the plaintiff has been held bound to support a person imprisoned at his suit if such person is unable to support himself.³ At present provision is usually made by statute for the support of prisoners confined on civil process, by the party at whose suit they are confined in case of their inability to support themselves.⁴ A nursing infant of a woman imprisoned is not a commonwealth's charge, but must be supported by the town in which the mother is imprisoned.⁵ The commonwealth, however, is liable for any extra expenses incurred for articles furnished the mother on account of her condition.⁶

VII. PRISON BOUNDS OR RULES OF PRISON—1. Definition.—A district around a prison within which a debtor released from confinement under bond may go at large.⁷

2. How Bounded.—It is only necessary to describe the prison limits by mathematical lines. Monuments are not necessary to de-

Car.) 71; Thomasson v. Kerr, 2 McMull. (S. Car.) 340; State v. Shropshire, 4 Yerg. (Tenn.) 52.

1. Dive v. Maningham, 1 Plowd. 60; People v. Green, 47 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 382; McLain v. Hayne, 3 Brev. (S. Car.) 291.

2. Moore v. Benbow, 3 Brev. (S. Car.) 390.

3. Moore v. Benbow, 3 Brev. (S. Car.) 390.

4. See generally POOR DEBTORS.

Virginia.—In Virginia, it is provided by statute that the expense of providing for prisoners is to be defrayed by the party at whose suit the prisoner is confined, i. e., if confined at the suit of the commonwealth, by the State; if at the suit of an individual in a civil cause, by such person. Virginia Code 1873, ch. 50, §§ 16-19; 1 Minor's Insts. (3rd ed.) 114.

New York.—It is provided in New York by statute that if a prisoner confined in jail makes oath before the sheriff, jailer, or deputy jailer, that he is unable to support himself during his imprisonment, his support shall be a county charge. Bliss's Ann. Code, § 112.

South Carolina.—See Thomasson v. Kerr, 2 McMull. (S. Car.) 340; Brian v. Ellis, Dudley (S. Car.) 71; Furth v. Deloach, 2 Spears. (S. Car.) 400; Black v. Hyams, 4 M'Cord (S. Car.) 508.

Pennsylvania.—Apple v. Crawford Co., 105 Pa. St. 300; Peeling v. York Co., 113 Pa. St. 108.

Montana.—Lloyd v. Silver Bow Co., 7 Mont. 562.

Michigan.—Dorsey v. People, 37 Mich. 382; Humphrey v. People, 39 Mich. 207.

Oregon.—Kelly v. Multnomah Co., 18 Oregon 356.

Massachusetts.—Taunton v. Westport, 12 Mass. 355; Adams v. Wiscasset, 5 Mass. 328.

Maine.—Scammon v. Wells, 50 Me. 584.

The account of the United States marshal for the care and subsistence of territorial prisoners sentenced to the penitentiary is a public account and one that the territory ought to pay. Nelson v. Clayton, 2 Utah 299.

5. Watson v. Cambridge, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 470; Adams v. Hampden Co., 13 Gray (Mass.) 439.

6. Watson v. Cambridge, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 470.

7. Anderson's Law Dict., p. 811.

Jail Limits.—A limited region of liberty for a person imprisoned for debt. Equivalent expressions are "prison bounds" and "rules of the prison." Anderson's L. Dict., p. 571.

Jail liberties are but an enlargement of the limits or outer walls of the jail. Chamberlain v. Campbell, 39 N. Y. 642; Peters v. Henry, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 121.

fine them.¹ No change which may be made in the original boundaries to which jail liberties were extended, will affect the original extent of the jail liberties, unless provision had been made in assigning the original limits, for such change.² Where certain boundaries have been considered as the bounds of the prison for a sufficient length of time to establish a usage with regard to them, a prisoner keeping within those boundaries will not be held to have committed an escape, although they are not the true boundaries of the prison limits;³ but where the bounds have not been long established, no evidence of usage will be admitted as a defense.⁴

3. Persons Entitled.—A party who is committed to jail for the non-payment of costs or other sums of money is entitled to the jail liberties.⁵ Where a party is committed for the non-pay-

Jail limits are to be deemed a part of the jail itself. Wemple v. Glavin, 57 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 109.

1. Lucky v. Brandon, 1 Ohio 49; Allen v. Smith, 12 N. J. L. 159.

In requiring the court of common pleas to "mark and lay out the bounds and rules of the prisons in their several counties," the legislature of New Jersey did not intend to use the word "mark" in a literal sense; they meant by it to point out and settle, to define, to describe; and the bounds, therefore, may be sufficiently marked and laid out by course and distances without fixing any visible marks or boundaries on the ground. Allen v. Smith, 12 N. J. L. 159.

An order of the county court, fixing the limits of the prison, and making the line of a street one of the boundaries, must be construed to mean the practical line, in contradistinction to an air line specified in the laying out or alteration of the street. Ely v. Parsons, 2 Conn. 382.

See Cowden v. Kerr, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 280.

Under the act of 1875, the board of supervisors has power to fix jail liberties as a purely administrative act, or by the exercise of its legislative functions, as provided for in § 18 of subdivision 1 thereof. In acting upon the subject of jail liberties in the exercise of its legislative functions, the board is subject to the limitations contained in § 147, of the Code of Civil Procedure, and cannot establish liberties exceeding five hundred acres in quantity. But in exercising legislative power conferred upon it by said § 18, of sub-division 1, of ch. 482 of 1875, it is not subject to the said limitations, and may establish jail liberties exceeding five hundred acres in extent. Roach v. O'Dell, 33 Hun (N. Y.) 320.

2. Bolton v. Cummings, 25 Conn. 410; Chamberlain v. Campbell, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 642.

Act of Congress.—The act of Congress of May 19, 1828, gives the debtors imprisoned under execution from the courts of the United States the privilege of jail limits in the several States as they were fixed by the laws of the several States at the date of that act. U. S. v. Knight, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 301; U. S. Rev. Stats., § 992.

An act of the legislature either establishing, enlarging or contracting the prison bounds, does not impair the obligation of contracts, and is therefore constitutional, and the prisoner must conform to the new limits although not the same that existed when he was first imprisoned. Reed v. Fullum, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 158; Locke v. Dane, 9 Mass. 360; Holmes v. Lansing, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 73.

3. Downer v. Dana, 19 Vt. 338.

If the jail limits in a county are capable of being ascertained by a resort to the records of the county court as is ordinarily the case, then such resorts must be had. If not proof of general understanding and acquiescence of all concerned for thirty years and probably for fifteen years in certain recognized and well defined boundaries is equivalent to record proof. Downer v. Dana, 19 Vt. 338.

4. Trull v. Wheeler, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 240.

5. People v. Bennett, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 282; Jackson v. Billings, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 252; In re Watson, 3 Lans. (N. Y.)

ment of a fine imposed upon him by the court for a breach of an injunction or other contempt, he must be confined by the sheriff within the walls of the prison.¹

4. Bond for Prison Bounds.—When the limits have been defined, the sheriff is bound to take the bond from the prisoner without any precept to that effect from the court committing the prisoner,² but the sheriff is not compelled to take the bond until they have been well defined.³ A person who has given bond for the liberties is bound to take notice at his peril of the extent of those liberties, and to keep within them.⁴ Any, even the slightest overstepping of the limits, is equivalent to an escape.⁵

408; Patrick v. Warner, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 397. See also Levy v. Kaim, 55 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 136.

1. People v. Bennett, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 282; Allen v. Allen, 58 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 381; State v. Gee, 1 Bay. (S. Car.) 163; In re Clark, 20 Hun (N. Y.) 551; In re Watson, 3 Lans. (N. Y.) 408.

Before the prisoner can be deprived of the privilege of giving bond for prison liberties, the order of commitment must show that he was convicted of a contempt. People v. Bennett, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 282.

See also Warren v. Russel, 1 D. Chip. (Vt.) 193.

The surety of a person who has been confined on civil process and has given bonds for the jail liberties, is not liable where the prisoner has afterwards been arrested on a charge of felony, committed to close confinement and has broken jail. Bradford v. Conanslus, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 128.

2. Kip v. Brigham, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 168; Ford v. Ford, 10 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 74; 41 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 169; Holmes v. Lansing, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 73; See also Dole v. Moulton, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 205.

The security required by the South Carolina prison bounds act, is a bond. Cantey v. Duren, Harp. (S. Car.) 434.

Compare Ward v. Ward, 6 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 79; Ex parte Bradley, 4 Ired. (N. Car.) 543.

3. Bissell v. Kip, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 89.

A bond given for prison bounds by a debtor who has been arrested is not invalid because the records of the inferior court did not show at the time that a plan of the bounds had been returned by the sheriff or that a survey of them had been made under the direction of said court as required by law. Galloway v. Camp, 31 Ga. 586.

On the admission of a prisoner to the liberties of a prison who is confined under process from a court of the United States, the bond must be taken payable to the marshal of the district; if taken payable to the sheriff of the county, it is void and no action can be maintained upon it. Warren v. Russel, 1 D. Chip. (Vt.) 193.

4. Kip v. Brigham, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 168.

After the several jail limits were extended to the boundaries of the counties in which the jails were respectively situated in regard to debtors committed in execution for debts contracted after April 2, 1834, a debtor imprisoned on execution for a debt contracted before that date gave bond conditioned that he would remain within the precincts of the prison. It was held that such debtor by going without the original jail limits but not without the county had committed a breach of the condition for which his surety was liable, although the limits were not set out in the bond or the time when the debt was contracted noted on the execution, and although the jailer upon being inquired of by the obligors when the bond was executed had informed the debtor that he might go anywhere within the county without breaking the condition of the bond. Farley v. Randall, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 146.

Compare Rondolph v. Simon, 29 Kan. 406.

5. Bissell v. Kip, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 89; Downer v. Dana, 19 Vt. 338.

See also Trull v. Wheeler, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 241.

Where a judgment debtor enlisted into the army of the United States and was afterwards committed to prison in execution, and having obtained the liberty of the yard by giving bond according to the statute was forcibly carried without the limits of the prison by a party of soldiers, he was holden to have committed an escape within the condition of his bond. Cargill v. Taylor, 10 Mass. 206. See Patterson v. Philbrook, 9 Mass. 151; Baxter v. Taber, 4 Mass. 360.

To support an action for an escape from prison bounds, the fact that the prisoner was off the limits must be affirmatively and specifically proved. Nothing will be left to inference.¹ A bond for jail liberties may be good as a common law bond, though it does not conform to the statutes upon the subject.² The bond for prison liberties is merely for the indemnity of the sheriff.³ If the debtor is in custody of an officer, a bond for prison liberties is good, though the debtor be not actually imprisoned;⁴ but if the bond contain a condition not authorized by statute or varies materially from the one prescribed, it is void.⁵ A joint bond for prison limits, where the prisoner is confined in several separate suits, is void.⁶

PRIVATE.—(Compare PUBLIC.) See note 7.

1. Visscher v. Gansevoort, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 496; Cosgrove v. Bowe, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 353.

2. Burroughs v. Lowder, 8 Mass. 372; Clap v. Cofran, 7 Mass. 98; Freeman v. Davis, 7 Mass. 200; Pratt v. Gibbs, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 82.

See also Thacher v. Williams, 14 Gray (Mass.) 324.

3. Dole v. Moulton, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 205; Holmes v. Lansing, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 73.

A sheriff may permit a prisoner under execution to go within the liberties of the jail without taking security, and if the prisoner without his knowledge goes beyond the limits but returns again before suit brought, he is not liable for an escape. Peters v. Henry, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 121.

The jailer is liable for an escape if he permit a prisoner committed to jail on execution, to go at large without giving a bond approved as required by Rev. Stats. of Maine, ch. 113, § 24-42.

The mere sending by the plaintiff's attorney for a bond in accordance with the statute and its retention without suit upon it or any action in regard to it, is not a waiver of its want of legal approval. Hotchkiss v. Whitten, 71 Me. 577.

A bond for jail liberties which has been forfeited, is assignable. Kellogg v. Manro, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 300.

To an action of debt for the penalty of a bond given to a sheriff as security for the liberties of the jail non damnificatus is not a good plea. Woods v. Rowan, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 42; Camp v. Allen, 12 N. J. L. 1.

An imprisoned debtor being dangerously sick, the creditor gave a writing addressed to the jailer in these words: "We hereby consent that H (the debtor) be removed from the jail limits during such time as may be necessary to his recovery in the opinion of his physicians, you being answerable for his return whenever he shall be deemed in a suitable situation as relates to his health." H was removed, and in an action afterwards brought on the bond given for the liberties of the prison, it was held that such writing was not a license to depart the prison—the language of it importing a condition according to which the jailer was not authorized to suffer the departure of H without at the same time making himself responsible for his return. Seymour v. Harvey, 11 Conn. 275.

4. Doyle v. Boyle, 10 Kan. 168.

Compare Lytle v. Davies, 2 Ohio 277.

5. Lyon v. Ide, 1 D. Chip. (Vt.) 46; Camp v. Allen, 12 N. J. L. 1; Sullivan v. Alexander, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 233.

Where the penalty of a bond for the jail liberties was taken for more than double the debt and costs for which the prisoner was committed, but the excess consisted of the officer's fees on the execution, this was held a good bond within the statute. Smith v. Jansen, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 111.

6. Lytle v. Davies, 2 Ohio 277.

Compare Smith v. Jansen, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 111.

7. Private bankers are persons or firms

PRIVATE WAYS.—(See also EASEMENTS, vol. 6, p. 139; WAYS.)

- I. Definition, 96.
- II. Classification, 96.
- III. Ways of Necessity, 96.
- IV. Ways Created by Grant, 99.
- V. Ways Acquired by Prescription, 103.
- VI. Rights to Locate Way, 105.
- VII. When a Private Way Becomes Public, 106.
- VIII. How Ways May be Used, 107.
- IX. Rights of the Parties, 110.
- X. Repairs, 111.
- XI. Obstructions, 111.

1. Generally, 111.
2. Erecting Gates, 114.
- XII. Right to Go Extra Viam, 115.
- XIII. How Right of Way Lost or Extinguished, 115.
- XIV. Revival of Lost Right of Way, 116.
- XV. Statutory Private Ways, 118.
1. In General, 118.
2. Establishment, 118.
3. Petition or Application, 119.
4. Notice, 120.
5. Damages, 120.

engaged in banking without having any special privileges or authority from the State. People v. Doty, 80 N. Y. 225, 228; Perkins v. Smith, 116 N. Y. 441.

Private Conveyance.—See TRAVEL.

Private carrier is one who, without being engaged in such business as a public employment, undertakes to deliver goods in a particular case, for hire or reward. Pennemwill v. Cullen, 5 Harr. (Del.) 242. See also CARRIERS OF GOODS, vol. 2, p. 775.

Private Chapels.—See CHAPELS, vol. 3, p. 109, n.

Private Dwelling-house.—A covenant requiring a house to be used as a "private" dwelling-house only, is broken by its being used as a school or dancing academy, Wickenden v. Webster, 6 E. & B. 387, or as an institution for educating the daughters of missionaries, or as a club, German v. Chapman, 7 Ch. D. 271; or as an hotel or lodging-house, Rolls v. Miller, 27 Ch. D. 71; or by using it as an office for receiving orders, putting a trade-blind in one of the windows, e. g., "Coal Office," Wilkinson v. Rogers, 2 De G. J. & S. 62; and in Wickenden v. Webster, 6 E. & B. 387, it was held that the use of the dwelling as a school was a violation of a like covenant. See also Evans v. Davies, 10 Ch. D. 747. But a public auction of the furniture of the house is not a breach of such a covenant. Reeves v. Cattell, 24 W. R. 485.

An art studio erected away from the house in such a way as not to be an adjunct thereto is a breach of a covenant that only "private dwelling-houses" shall be erected. Patman v. Harland, 17 Ch. D. 353; so is the erection of a wall. Bowes v. Law, L. R., 9 Eq. 636; secus, of a stable with a bedroom over it. Russell v. Baber, 18 W. R. 1021.

See also DWELLING HOUSE, vol. 6, p. 101.

Private House; Public House.—A public house is for the entertainment of all who come lawfully and pay regularly. A boarding-house is for the accommodation only of those who are accepted as guests by the proprietor. Such an establishment is as much a private house as if there were no boarders. Commonwealth v. Cuncannon, 3 Brews. (Pa.) 344. But see Gannett v. Albree, 103 Mass. 372. See also LEASE, vol. 12, p. 1025.

Private Room.—A Texas statute provides that a "private room" in an inn or tavern shall not be within the meaning of public places unless such room is commonly used for gaming. It was held in Comer v. State, 26 Tex. App. 509, that a room in a tavern that was engaged by a party, not for the purposes of lodging or abode, was not a "private room." The court said: "To make a 'guest room' in a hotel—that is, one appropriated to public use as such—a 'private room,' it must have been taken by a guest or a lodger seeking rest for a night or day, or a residence for a time, or one desiring to use it for a temporary habitation—that is 'a place of abode.' Until so appropriated by a guest, it is part of the public house known as 'tavern or inn.'"

Private institutions are those which are created or established by private individuals for their own private purposes. Toledo Bank v. Bond, 1 Ohio St. 643.

"Private person" (as used in 2 R. S. of New York 678, § 59, relative to embezzlement) does not include a person holding moneys in an official capacity; e. g., a county superintendent of poor. Coats v. People, 22 N. Y. 245.

I. DEFINITION.—A private way is an incorporeal hereditament; an easement; a right of way over the land of the owner of the soil.¹ The law of the subject is a branch of the law of easements.

II. CLASSIFICATION.—Rights of way may be classified into those arising from necessity, and those created by grant, or by a reservation in a grant, or by prescription, which pre-supposes a grant.² Rights of way, again, are in gross, where they are purely personal and not assignable, nor descendable,³ and appurtenant or appurtenant to an estate, in which case they may pass by assignment when the land is sold to which the right of way is appurtenant.⁴ There is a class of private ways, so called, which is not related especially to the law of easements, but which are thus named in the various statutes, which, in many of the States, authorize and regulate their laying out. Strictly speaking, these statutory ways are public ways of a character more limited than common highways.⁵

III. WAYS OF NECESSITY.—A way of necessity arises where the owner sells land to another which is wholly surrounded by the

1. 2 Blackstone's Com. 35; 3 Kent's Com. 419; Washburn on Easements 160, 161; Kister v. Reeser, 98 Pa. St. 5; 42 Am. Rep. 608.

It is simply an easement or a privilege conferring no interest in the land. 1 Crabb's Real Property; Garrison v. Rudd, 19 Ill. 563; Cook Co. v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 35 Ill. 460; Snyder v. Warford, 11 Mo. 513; 49 Am. Dec. 94. "Road" and "way" are not synonymous terms. The former is used to mean the land over which a public or private way is established. Chollar-Potosi Min. Co. v. Kennedy, 3 Nev. 361; 93 Am. Dec. 409.

The old authorities classified ways as foot-ways, horse-ways, foot, horse, and carriage ways, and drift-ways. See Co. Litt. 56 a; Woolr. Ways 1. A carriage-way includes a foot-way. Davies v. Stephens, 7 C. & P. 570. So a carriage-way includes a horse-way. Ballard v. Dyson, 1 Taunt. 279. A drift-way is said to be a common way for driving cattle, and to intend a way for the passage of teams. Smith v. Ladd, 41 Me. 320. A carriage-way does not include a drift-way. Ballard v. Dyson, 1 Taunt. 279; and a foot-way, or a way for horses, oxen, cattle and sheep, has been held not to include a right to carry manure in a wheelbarrow. Brunton v. Hall, 1 Q. B. 792.

Under the civil law, the division of ways was into; iter, a way on foot or horseback; actus, a right of walking or riding, driving cattle or a cart, although not always the latter, and via or aditus, equivalent to a highway. Ayl. Pand. 307; Inst. 2, 3. As to the various classes of ways under the law of France, and the mode of use, see 1 Fournel, Traite Du Voisinage.

2. Washburn on Easements, p. 158, et seq.; 3 Kent's Comm. 419, et seq.; 2 Bl. Comm. 35, et seq.

3. 3 Kent's Comm. 420. See Garrison v. Rudd, 19 Ill. 563; Moore v. Crose, 43 Ind. 30; Junction R. Co. v. Ruggles, 7 Ohio St. 1. Compare White v. Crawford, 10 Mass. 183; Sauxay v. Hunger, 42 Ind. 44; Huffman v. Savage, 15 Mass. 130.

A granted to B a right of way to be held so long as B should occupy the building for the grocery business then carried on by him. B failed, and a corporation purchased B's stock and employed him as chief manager in the grocery business. Held, that the right of way ceased to exist on B's failure. Hall v. Armstrong, 53 Conn. 554.

So an agreement by the owner of land that another may use a way over the same during the latter's life, confers no rights upon the latter's heirs. Hill v. Hagaman, 84 Ind. 287.

4. Moore v. Crose, 43 Ind. 30; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Koelle, 104 Ill. 455; Dennis v. Wilson, 107 Mass. 591; Wagner v. Hanna, 38 Cal. 111; 99 Am. Dec. 354; Kuecken v. Voltz, 110 Ill. 264; Moore v. Crose, 43 Ind. 30.

5. See infra, this title, Statutory Private Ways.

land of the grantor,¹ or partly by land of the grantor, and partly by land of a stranger,² in which case purchaser has the right of way through the grantor's land to arrive at his own.³ The same rule will apply if the grantor retains the interior and grants away the exterior land,⁴ or if a judgment creditor extends his execution on a part of his debtor's land so as to leave him no passage from the remainder of the land to the highway.⁵ A way of necessity derives its origin from a grant.⁶ It is an implication from

1. Taylor v. Warnaky, 55 Cal. 350; Collins v. Prentice, 15 Conn. 39; 38 Am. Dec. 61; Kuhlman v. Hecht, 77 Ill. 570; Lore v. Stiles, 25 N. J. Eq. 381; New York L. Ins. etc. Co. v. Milnor, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 353; Brigham v. Smith, 4 Gray (Mass.) 297; 64 Am. Dec. 76; Snyder v. Warford, 11 Mo. 513; 49 Am. Dec. 99.

2. Bass v. Edwards, 126 Mass. 445; New York L. Ins. etc. Co. v. Milnor, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 353.

If a person owning a lot of land fronting on a highway conveys the rear part of the lot, which is entirely surrounded by land of persons other than the grantee, the latter has a right of way by necessity to the highway over the main land of the grantor. Wheeler v. Gilsey, 35 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 139; Bass v. Edwards, 126 Mass. 445; Sonyles v. Hastings, 22 N. Y. 217; Kimball v. Cochecho R. Co., 27 N. H. 448; 59 Am. Dec. 387; Brown v. Berry, 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 98; Osborn v. Wise, 7 C. & P. 761; Kawika v. Paklokeo, 5 Hawaiian R. 293.

A right of way of necessity may be acquired over the land of another, although the road to which the way leads is not a country road, but a mere by-road open to the public. Cheney v. O'Brien, 69 Cal. 199.

The lessee of an inner close has by necessity a right of way suitable to the business for which the lease was made, over an outer close which belongs to the same landlord. Gayford v. Moffat, 4 L. R. Ch. 133.

Where one as a trustee conveys land to another, to which there is no access but over the trustee's land, a right of way passes of necessity as incidental to the grant. Howton v. Frearson, 8 T. R. 50. See Collins v. Prentice, 15 Conn. 39; 38 Am. Dec. 61.

But if the owner of land bounded on one side by a highway, and on all other sides by lands of other owners, has a prescriptive right of way over one of the adjoining lots, by which he can reach the highway, and sells that portion of his land which is next to the highway, he retains no right of way by necessity over the same. Leonard v. Leonard, 2 Allen (Mass.) 543.

3. Collins v. Prentice, 15 Conn. 39; 38 Am. Dec. 61; Bass v. Edwards, 126 Mass. 445.

4. Ogden v. Grove, 38 Pa. St. 487; Brigham v. Smith, 4 Gray (Mass.) 297; 64 Am. Dec. 76; Seymour v. Lewis, 14 N. J. 444; 78 Am. Dec. 108; Clark v. Cogge, Cro. Jac. 170; White v. Boss, 7 H. & N. 732; Alley v. Carleton, 29 Tex. 74; 94 Am. Dec. 260; Pingree v. McDuffie, 56 N. H. 306.

5. Pernam v. Wead, 2 Mass. 203; Taylor v. Townsend, 8 Mass. 411; 5 Am. Dec. 107; Russell v. Jackson, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 574; Schmidt v. Quinn, 136 Mass. 575.

Where by a levy on part of a debtor's land, the remainder was divided into two lots, one of which, lying north, was thereby shut out from the highway, but the other, lying northerly as well as westerly, was bounded on the highway, it was held that a way reserved in the levy from the land "north of the land extended on, adjoining the same," was appurtenant to the north lot only. Russell v. Jackson, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 574.

G extended an execution on the land of K, taking the whole front of his farm, except a strip of five rods in width on one side, connecting the back land with the county road, but which could not be made passable for carriages at an expense less than from $250 to $300. Held, that this did not create a way of necessity over any part of the land levied on. Allen v. Kincaid, 11 Me. 155.

6. Stewart v. Hartman, 46 Ind. 331; Proctor v. Hodgson, 24 N. J. Exch. 195.

Numerous cases favor the idea that a right of way may be created by the necessity, irrespective and independent of any grant or reservation, either express a grant, and an application of the principle that whenever one conveys property he also conveys whatever is necessary for the beneficial use of that property.¹ As to what constitutes a necessity, sufficient to raise an implied grant of a right of way, some courts have been inclined to hold that it need not be an absolute and irresistible necessity, and that a mere inconvenience may be so great as to raise such an implication.² But in most instances, mere convenience or usefulness is held not sufficient;³ there must be an absolute indispensable necessity to give the right.⁴ As a or implied; but in most instances, however, it has been upheld on the ground of a grant or reservation implied from the necessity. Woodworth v. Raymond, 51 Conn. 70; Tracy v. Atherton, 25 Vt. 52; 82 Am. Dec. 621.

1. Collins v. Prentice, 15 Conn. 39; 38 Am. Dec. 61; Nichols v. Luce, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 105; 35 Am. Dec. 302; Snyder v. Warford, 11 Mo. 513; 49 Am. Dec. 99; Tracy v. Atherton, 35 Vt. 52; 82 Am. Dec. 621; Bullard v. Harrison, 4 M. & S. 387; New York L. Ins. etc. Co. v. Milnor, 1 Barb. Ch. (N.Y.) 353.

2. Wash. on Eas. 259; Lawton v. Rivers, 2 McCord (S. Car.) 445; 13 Am. Dec. 741; Morris v. Edgington, 3 Taunt. 24; Dodd v. Burchell, 1 H. & C. 122; Peysey v. Vicary, 16 M. & W. 484; Alley v. Carleton, 29 Tex. 78; 94 Am. Dec. 260.

Lord Mansfield seems to favor the view that a way from necessity can arise from convenience and the better use of the property. And in Morris v. Edgington, 3 Taunt. 24, he says: "That it would not be a great stretch to call that a necessary way, without which the most convenient and reasonable mode of enjoying the premises, could not be had." So in Pettingill v. Porter, 8 Allen (Mass.) 1; 85 Am. Dec. 671, it was held, that the right arises though there is no insuperable physical obstacle to prevent access by another way if the construction of such a way would involve unreasonable expense as compared with the value of the property. See Cihak v. Klekr, 117 Ill. 643.

3. Carey v. Rae, 58 Cal. 159; Anderson v. Buchanan, 8 Ind. 133; Nichols v. Luce, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 102; 35 Am. Dec. 302; Parker v. Bennett, 11 Allen (Mass.) 392; Turnbull v. Rivers, 3 McCord (S. Car.) 131; 15 Am. Dec. 622; Ogden v. Grove, 38 Pa. St. 487; Screven v. Gregorie, 8 Rich. (S. Car.) 158; 64 Am. Dec. 747; Alley v. Carle- ton, 29 Tex. 78; 94 Am. Dec. 260; Woodworth v. Raymond, 51 Conn. 70; Wiswell v. Minogue, 57 Vt. 666; White v. Bradley, 66 Me. 255; Martin v. Patine, 16 La. 57; Cooper v. Maupin, 6 Mo. 624; 25 Am. Dec. 456; Trask v. Patterson, 29 Me. 499; Stuyvesant v. Woodruff, 21 N. J. L. 134; 47 Am. Dec. 156.

The necessity from which a grantee derives a right of way is when the lands purchased are surrounded on all sides by the lands of the grantor. If the land can be reached by water, or by a distant or difficult road, the grantee is not entitled to a way across lands of the grantor; for it is necessity, and not inconvenience, that gives the right. Turnbull v. Rivers, 3 McCord (S. Car.) 131; 15 Am. Dec. 622.

4. Hall v. McLeod, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 98; 74 Am. Dec. 400; Gayetty v. Bethune, 14 Mass. 49; 7 Am. Dec. 188; Ward v. Farwell, 6 Col. 66; O'Rourke v. Smith, 11 R. I. 259; 23 Am. Rep. 448; McDonald v. Lindall, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 492; Ogden v. Grove, 38 Pa. St. 487; Plimmons v. Frisby, 1 Winst. (N. Car.) 201.

In McDonald v. Lindall, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 492, the court said: "The right of way from necessity over the land of another is always of strict necessity, and this must not be created by the party claiming the right of way. It never exists where a man can get to his own property through his own land. That the way through his own land is too steep or too narrow, does not alter the case. It is only where there is no way through his own land that the right of way over land of another can exist. That a person claiming a way of necessity has already one way, is a good plea, and bars the plaintiff." See Morgan v. Meuth, 60 Mich. 238; Alley v. Carleton, 29 Tex. 78; 94 Am. Dec. 260; Screven v. Gregonie, 8 Rich. (S. Car.) 158; 64 Am. Dec. 749; Jeter v. Mann, 2 Hill (S. Car.) 641; Hyde v. Gamaica, 27 Vt. 457.

way of necessity is founded on a grant, it cannot exist where neither the party claiming under the grant, nor the owner of the land over which the right of way is claimed, nor the predecessor of either, was ever seised at the same time of both tracts.¹ A way of necessity is limited by the necessity which creates it, and ceases when that necessity no longer exists. So where the owner of such a way acquires, by purchase of other land or otherwise, a way of access from a highway over his own land to the land to which the way belongs, the way of necessity is at an end.²

IV. WAYS CREATED BY GRANT.—A way created by grant is a right of way granted by express mention in a conveyance, or arising by

So in Smyles v. Hastings, 22 N. Y. 223, the court by Wright, J., said: "There can be no implication of a grant of a right of way of necessity where the grantees have the means of obtaining access to the lands granted without trespassing on the adjoining lands of the grantor, or the property of a stranger. If they can be approached from a public highway, or by passing through adjoining lands of the grantee, no right of way of necessity will be implied."

1. Proctor v. Hodgson, 10 Exch. 822; Woodworth v. Raymond, 51 Conn. 70; Oliver v. Hook, 47 Md. 301; Tracy v. Atherton, 35 Vt. 52; 82 Am. Dec. 621.

One cannot have a right of way of necessity over land which the grantor never owned, except as tenant in common. Collins v. Prentice, 15 Conn. 39; 38 Am. Dec. 61; Gayetty v. Bethune, 14 Mass. 49; 7 Am. Dec. 188; Marshall v. Trumbull, 28 Conn. 183; 73 Am. Dec. 667; Brice v. Randall, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 349; 1 Wms. Saund. 323, note; Crippen v. Morss, 49 N. Y. 63.

2. Collins v. Prentice, 15 Conn. 39; 38 Am. Dec. 61; Pierce v. Selleck, 18 Conn. 321; Holmes v. Seely, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 507; Morris v. Edgington, 3 Taunt. 23; Viall v. Carpenter, 14 Gray (Mass.) 126; Lawton v. Rivers, 2 McCord (S. Car.) 445; 15 Am. Dec. 741; Holmes v. Goring, 2 Bing. 76; Nichols v. Luce, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 102; 35 Am. Dec. 302; New York L. etc. Co. v. Milnor, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 333; Staple v. Heydon, 6 Mod. 1; Seely v. Bishop, 19 Conn. 128; White v. Leeson, 5 H. & N. 53; Screven v. Gregorie, 8 Rich. (S. Car.) 158; 64 Am. Dec. 747; Gayetty v. Bethune, 14 Mass. 49; 7 Am. Dec. 188; Woolr. Ways 72; Alley v. Carleton, 29

Tex. 78; 94 Am. Dec. 260; Pin-gree v. McDuffie, 56 N. H. 306; Baker v. Crosby, 9 Gray (Mass.) 421; Wheeler v. Gilsey, 35 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 139; Pheysey v. Vicary, 16 M. & W. 484; Wissler v. Hershey, 23 Pa. St. 333; Abbott v. Stewartstown, 47 N. H. 230; Schmidt v. Quinn, 136 Mass. 577; Pearson v. Spencer, 1 B. & S. 571.

It is a fallacy to suppose that a right of way of necessity is a permanent right and the way a permanent way attached to the land, and which may be conveyed by deed irrespective of the continuing necessity of the grantee. Alley v. Carlington, 29 Tex. 74; 94 Am. Dec. 260.

A being the owner of a certain tract of land, conveyed it, except a small wood lot to B, under whom the plaintiff claimed. After its conveyance, A had no other means of access to such wood lot only over the locus in quo. He then sold the wood lot to C, under whom the defendant claimed did not reside in the vicinity of A. A new public highway was afterwards laid out across the wood lot, by means of which the defendant could conveniently transport his wood therefrom to market, but it was not convenient for him to use it in conveying the wood to his dwelling-house, as the distance that way would be greater than across the locus in quo; but still he had, by means of such highway, free access at all times to the wood lot from his dwelling-house. Held, that upon the laying out of the new highway, the defendant's necessity ceases and with it his right of way over the locus in quo. Pierce v. Selleck, 18 Conn. 322.

A right of way by necessity ceases when the owner acquires a new way by a judgment in partition. Such judgment is binding on all parties to implication.¹ The grant of an estate with "ways heretofore used," or "ways in use," or the like, passes all existing ways in actual possession at the time, whether used by the grantor over other parts of his own estate and so not properly appurtenant to such granted parcel, or appurtenant to the same by having been in use over the land of another.² But a mere reference in a deed to an intended way without an express grant will not pass such way.³ A way held by grant will pass by a conveyance of the land with which it is used and enjoyed as an appurtenance,⁴ but a mere license to use a right of way, which has not ripened into a right, but which may be revoked, is not an appurtenance and will not so pass to the grantee of the land.⁵ A way over other land of the grantor in a deed may pass as appurtenant to the land granted, although there are no insuperable physical obstacles to prevent access by another way, if such other way cannot be made without unreasonable labor and expense; and, in determining this question, a jury may consider the comparative value of the land and the probable cost of such a way.⁶

If the way granted is not definitely located, the practical location and use of such way by the grantee, under his deed, acquiesced in by the grantor at the time of the grant, and for a long time subsequent thereto, may operate as an assignment of the right, and may be deemed that which it was intended to convey, and the same in legal effect as if fully described by the terms of the grant.⁷ And when a way is thus located by usage for a length of time, it cannot afterwards be changed by the grantor.⁸

it, and their legal representatives and all persons claiming from them, and is not the subject of collateral impeachment. Carey v. Rae, 58 Cal. 159.

1. Taylor v. Dyches, 69 Ga. 455; Collins v. Prentice, 15 Conn. 39; 38 Am. Dec. 61.

2. Washburn on Easements 264; Plant v. James, 5 B. & A. 791; Harding v. Wilson, 2 B. & C. 96; Staple v. Heydon, 6 Mod. 1. Compare Thompson v. Waterlow, L. R., 6 Eq. Cas. 36.

3. Washburn on Easements 265; Harding v. Wilson, 2 B. & C. 96; Roberts v. Carr, 1 Taunt. 495; Hopkinson v. McKnight, 31 N. J. L. 427.

4. Kuhlman v. Hecht, 77 Ill. 573; Junction R. Co. v. Ruggles, 7 Ohio St. 8; Randall v. Chase, 133 Mass. 210; Kent v. Waite, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 138; see Townsend v. Bissell, 6 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 1565.

A, being the owner of a tract of land, conveyed a portion thereof to B, granting also to the said B the free use and privilege of a road through the remaining part of said tract. Held, that the right of way granted as aforesaid was appendant or annexed to the land conveyed, and that it might be used and enjoyed by all owning or lawfully occupying said tract, for any purpose to which it might from time to time be legitimately applied. Gunsong v. Healy, 100 Pa. St. 42.

5. Kuhlman v. Hecht, 77 Ill. 573.

6. Pettingill v. Porter, 8 Allen (Mass.) 1; 85 Am. Dec. 671.

7. Bannon v. Angier, 2 Allen (Mass.) 128; French v. Hayes, 43 N. H. 32; 80 Am. Dec. 127; Osborn v. Wise, 7 C. & P. 761. See Krant's Appeal, 71 Pa. St. 64.

8. Wynkoop v. Burger, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 222; Bannon v. Angier, 2 Allen (Mass.) 128; Jennison v. Walker, 11 Gray (Mass.) 426; Jones v. Percival, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 487; 16 Am. Dec. 415; Warner v. Railroad Co., 39 Ohio St. 70; Bangs v. Parker, 71 Me. 458; Marsh v. Haverhill Aqueduct Co., 134 Mass. 106.

Where the grantor of a lot reserves in his deed of it, for the use of his adjoining lot, "a free passage to and from the well" on the land granted, and the

If it be uncertain from the words of the grant which of two ways was meant, parol evidence may be introduced to remove the doubt.¹ Or if the words in a deed creating or reserving a right of way be ambiguous as to the extent of the right, the acts and uses of the parties are admissible in evidence to explain the language of the deed.² But the apparent intention is not to be controlled, nor the terms of the grant contradicted by parol testimony, where the deed granting the way defines its course.³ If the grant of a right of way be general and unlimited, parol evidence that the parties understood or even agreed at the time, that the way should be used only for some particular purpose, is not competent to control or limit the words of the grant.⁴ A convey-particular way to the well has been fixed by agreement and use, or by use so exclusive and continued as to afford presumptive evidence of agreement, neither the grantor nor his successor in the title, can, without consent of the owner of the servient lot, change the way thus fixed, or by blocking up the old way by an addition to his house, acquire a right to open a new way to the well. Garraty v. Duffy, 7 R. I. 476.

In Jennison v. Walker, 11 Gray (Mass.) 426, the court by Bigelow, J., said: "Where an easement in land is granted in general terms, without giving definite location and description to it, so that the point of the land over which the right is to be exercised cannot be definitely ascertained, the grantee does not thereby acquire a right to use the servient estate without limitation as to the place or mode in which the easement is to be enjoyed. When the right granted has been once exercised in a fixed and defined course, with the full acquiescence and consent of both parties, it cannot be changed at the pleasure of the grantee. If it be admitted that he has the right originally to select the place in which the easement is to be enjoyed, he cannot afterwards alter it. Convenience and justice both require this limitation on the right; otherwise, it would be open to questions of great doubt and difficulty, and would make the servient estate in great measure subject to the unrestrained control of the owner of the easement. It has therefore been held that the course of a way, when once established, cannot be altered by either party without the consent of the other (Com. Dic. Chemin, D. 5. Jones v. Percival, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 485; 16 Am. Dec. 415; Wynkoop v. Burger, 12

Johns (N. Y.) 222). This rule rests on the principle that where the terms of a grant are general or indefinite, so that its construction is uncertain and ambiguous, the acts of the parties, contemporaneous with the grant, giving a practical construction to it, shall be deemed to be a just exposition of the intent of the parties."

1. Osborn v. Wise, 7 C. & P. 723; French v. Hayes, 43 N. H. 32; 80 Am. Dec. 127. See O'Brien v. Schayer, 124 Mass. 211.

2. Choate v. Burnham, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 274.

3. Shepherd v. Watson, 1 Watts (Pa.) 35; Ballard v. Dyson, 1 Taunt. 279.

In Comstock v. Van Deusen, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 165, it is said that parol evidence cannot be admitted to explain the intention of the parties or the terms of the deeds conveying the right of way. If a deed be defective or ambiguous on its face it may be void for uncertainty, but the defect cannot be supplied or the ambiguity removed by parol evidence. Facts and circumstances existing at the time of a conveyance may become important and may be proved by parol evidence, but evidence offered to show the agreement of parties and the intention of the grant as to the location of the way, is clearly inadmissible. See Osborn v. Wise, 7 C. & P. 761.

4. Wateman v. Johnson, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 261; Bond v. Fay, 12 Allen (Mass.) 88; Miller v. Washburne, 117 Mass. 371.

A deed contained the following reservation, "The right of way over my land as usually occupied." The land referred to in this reservation had been usually occupied for the purpose of getting hay and other crops therefrom, but hay had never been carried ance of a lot, made in reference to a map designating a strip as an alley, gives the grantee a right of way over the alley to the rear of the lot, as against his grantors and their subsequent grantee of the alley.¹ So where one sells land bounding on a highway, whereof the fee is in him and the highway is afterwards discontinued by act of law, so that the ownership reverts, the grantee is not thereby deprived of his right to use it for a private way.² If the highway has never been dedicated to the public and the lots conveyed are described as bounded on such highway, it is held, that such conveyances create an easement in the land in favor of the grantees of the lots abutting thereon.³ A conveyance of land bounded by a private way, of a defined width, carries the title to the middle of the strip described as a way, with an easement of across the granted premises, though the way had been used for agricultural purposes, such as carting manure and potatoes. It was held that the grantor had a right to cart hay over the way in loads not of unusual size or shape, and to cut down the limb of a tree which obstructed the use of the way for that purpose. Sargent v. Hubbard, 102 Mass. 380.

1. Cox v. James, 45 N. Y. 562. See Rhea v. Forsyth, 37 Pa. St. 503; 78 Am. Dec. 441; Walker v. Gerhard, 9 Phila. (Pa.) 116.

"A right of way of an alley" included in a deed implies ex vi termini a passage leading away from the land conveyed." McConnell v. Rathbun, 46 Mich. 303.

The extent of the grantee's rights beyond the limits of his land will depend, however, upon the nature and character of the way and its connection with the public streets as affording a convenient outlet from his land. Langmaid v. Higgins, 129 Mass. 356.

The mere fact that the grantor had for a long time used a particular route to the rear land will not justify the implication that he intended to convey a right to this way, and exclude him from assigning any other practical and convenient way to the highway. Bass v. Edwards, 126 Mass. 445.

2. Parker v. Framington, 8 Met. (Mass.) 260.

3. In re Eleventh Avenue, 81 N. Y. 436; Storey v. New York El. R. Co., 90 N. Y. 122.

A tract of land was surveyed and laid out into streets and squares for building lots, and some of the lots were leased according to the map of this survey. The lots were bounded on one side by a street, as described on the map, though not actually opened, but the plan of these streets was never accepted nor approved by the city. The commissioners appointed under an act of the legislature, laid out this tract in a different manner, and their act was declared to be conclusive. The defendant, who had, after giving a lease, partially opened the street proposed by him and mentioned in the lease, after the report of the commissioners, shut up the street by a fence. Held, that the lessee could not maintain an action against him for obstructing his right through the proposed street, there being another reasonable and convenient way left open from the premises to an old established public highway or street; especially as by an act of the legislature no streets in the city laid out by individuals, could be established as public streets until they were approved and accepted by the corporation. Underwood v. Stuyvesant, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 181. See Billinger v. Burial-Ground Soc., 10 Pa. St. 135.

A conveyance of land by a deed bounding it on a private way not defined in the deed, but shown upon a plan referred to therein and recorded in the registry of deeds, estops the grantor to deny the existence not only of that way, but of any connecting ways, represented on the plan, which will enable the grantee to reach public ways in any direction, as far as the grantor's title extends. Fox v. Union Sugar Refinery, 109 Mass. 202. See also Boston Water Power Co. v. Boston, 127 Mass. 374.

It can make no difference that the way is called by another name. The question is whether the thing intended as a boundary was in fact a way; if it was, it is immaterial whether it is way in the other half, and subject to a like easement reserved to the grant or in the half conveyed as well, as to whatever rights of way existed in others at the time.¹

V. WAYS ACQUIRED BY PRESCRIPTION.—A right of way may be acquired by prescription. This mode of acquisition of the right depends on principles which are not in any sense peculiar to ways, but which constitute a branch of the law of easements generally. These principles are defined, discussed, and illustrated at length elsewhere.² It may be said generally that a claim by prescription is founded on the supposition or presumption of an ancient grant, and of immemorial usage, adverse, uninterrupted, and continuous. The term prescription is applied to incorporeal hereditaments, as the term adverse possession is applied to the land itself as distinguished from an easement claimed therein. At the present day, the length of time sufficient to create a right of way founded on prescription is frequently, if not always, defined by statute, or fixed in analogy to the length of time sufficient to confer a title to land by adverse possession. Usually the period is twenty years.³ In some of the States of the Union a shorter period suf-called a way or a street, avenue, lane, road, place, or court. Franklin Ins. Co. v. Cousens, 127 Mass. 258; Gaw v. Hughes, 111 Mass. 296; Stetson v. Dow, 16 Gray (Mass.) 372.

If one grants land as bounded on a street and owns a strip of land so described as a street, he cannot be compelled in equity, at the suit of the grantee, to grade and make it fit for travel. Hennesey v. Old Colony etc. R. Co., 101 Mass. 540.

When Grantor Is Estopped from Denying Existence of Way.—In Stetson v. Dow, 16 Gray (Mass.) 372, the court by Merrick, J., said: "When a grantor conveys land bounded on a street or way, he and his heirs are estopped to deny the existence of such a street or way, and the grantee acquires, by the deed, a perpetual easement to a right of passage upon and over it from the full enjoyment, of which he can never afterwards be excluded." See Loring v. Otis, 7 Gray (Mass.) 563; Thomas v. Poole, 7 Gray (Mass.) 83; Rodgers v. Parker, 9 Gray (Mass.) 445; Dawson v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co., 15 Minn. 136; 2 Am. Rep. 109.

1. Lewis v. Beattie, 105 Mass. 410; Winslow v. King, 14 Gray (Mass.) 323; Walker v. Worcester, 6 Gray (Mass.) 548. See Harding v. Wilson, 2 B. & C. 96. Compare Howe v. Alger, 4 Allen (Mass.) 206.

Where one sells property lying within the limits of a city, and in the conveyance bounds such property by streets designated as such in the conveyance or on a map made by the city or by the owner of the property, such sale implies a covenant that the purchaser shall have the use of such streets. Moale v. Mayor etc. of Baltimore, 5 Md. 314; 61 Am. Dec. 276; White v. Flannigin, 1 Md. 540; 54 Am. Dec. 668.

But in Hopkinson v. McKnight, 31 N. J. L. 422, where a lot of land was described as being bounded a certain length along an eight foot alley, and certain additional length along a continuation of said alley or street, the street being thirty feet wide, which alley and street if opened would have been on the land of the grantor, but which in fact were not opened and used, it was held that it did not amount to a grant of a way, nor to a covenant that the grantee shall have a right of way along the alley and street referred to.

So in Howe v. Alger, 4 Allen (Mass.) 206, it is held that if land be conveyed as bounding on a street and the land owner has no interest in the adjacent land so described, this does not amount to an implied covenant, that there is such a street legally laid out. Howe v. Alger, 4 Allen (Mass.) 206.

2. See PRESCRIPTION.

3. Turnbull v. Rivers, 3 McCord (S. Car.) 131; 15 Am. Dec. 622; Lansing v. Winsall, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 213; Miller

fices.¹ The only difficulty in the subject consists in the application of the rules of law to the facts of particular cases in determining, for example, whether, as matter of fact, the user has been adverse, uninterrupted, and continuous.²

v. Garlock, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 153; Hill v. Crosby, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 466; 13 Am. Dec. 448; Cuthbert v. Lawton, 3 McCord (S. Car.) 194; Blake v. Everett, 1 Allen (Mass.) 248; Sibley v. Ellis, 11 Gray (Mass.) 417; Gibson v. Durham, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 85; Townsend v. Bissell, 6 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 565; 4 Hun (N. Y.) 297; Boyden v. Archenbach, 86 N. Car. 397; Cox v. Forrest, 60 Md. 74; Jeter v. Mann, 2 Hill (S. Car.) 641; Butt v. Napier, 14 Bush (Ky.) 39; Com. v. Low, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 408; Barnes v. Haynes, 13 Gray (Mass.) 188; 74 Am. Dec. 734; Bowman v. Wickliffe, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 84; Denning v. Roome, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 651; Driscoll v. Newark etc. Co., 37 N. Y. 637; 97 Am. Dec. 761; Day v. Allender, 22 Md. 512; Hill v. Hagaman, 84 Ind. 287; McElhorne v. McManes, 118 Pa. St. 600; Garrett v. Jackson, 20 Pa. St. 458; Pierce v. Cloud, 42 Pa. St. 102; 82 Am. Dec. 496; Dare v. Heathcote, 25 L. J. Exch. 245; Wright v. Rattray, 1 East 377; Parker v. Mitchell, 3 P. & D. 655; Dodd v. Burchall, 31 L. J. Exch. 364; Street v. Griffiths, 50 N. J. L. 656; Tracy v. Atherton, 36 Vt. 503; 82 Am. Dec. 621; Puryear v. Clements, 53 Ga. 233; Aaron v. Gunnells, 68 Ga. 526.

In Pennsylvania the time required is twenty-one years. Worrall v. Rhoades, 2 Whart. (Pa.) 427; Krier's Private Road, 73 Pa. St. 109; Workman v. Curran, 89 Pa. St. 226; Steffy v. Carpenter, 37 Pa. St. 41.

1. In California, five years. Thomas v. England, 71 Cal. 460. So in Nevada, Chollar-Potosi Min. Co. v. Kennedy, 3 Nev. 361; 93 Am. Dec. 409. In Connecticut to entitle one to a private right of way by prescription over an abandoned public road, fifteen years of adverse user dating from the abandonment is necessary. Black v. O'Hara, 54 Conn. 17. In Georgia, in the case of improved lands, the time required is seven years. Brown v. Marshall, 63 Ga. 657; in the case of wild lands, twenty years. Georgia Code, 731, 2235. In Iowa ten years may be enough, but the adverse use must be proved independently of the possession. Iowa Code 2031. And consult generally the statutes of the various States.

2. User Must be Adverse.—The universal custom of traveling over unclosed woodland without asking permission of the owners, will tend to repel the presumption of a grant of a right of way, which otherwise might attach. Bowman v. Wickliffe, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 84.

Proof of an adverse and uninterrupted use of a way for twenty years, with the knowledge and acquiescence of the owner of the land, is sufficient to establish an incumbrance upon land, without proof of an express claim of the right by the persons using the way, or of an express admission of the right by the owner of the land. Blake v. Everett, 1 Allen (Mass.) 248.

Evidence that the party claiming the right of way at one time removed some saplings that had been felled across the road, is not sufficient evidence that the use was adverse. Gibson v. Durham, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 85.

Where A's enjoyment of a way over B's land began under a contract, and was continued under a claim of right for the statutory period without objection by B, it was held that A's right was perfect. House v. Montgomery, 19 Mo. App. 170.

And see generally on the question of adverse user, Cuthbert v. Lawton, 3 McCord (S. Car.) 194; Connor v. Sullivan, 40 Conn. 26; 16 Am. Rep. 10; Kana v. Bowlen, 36 N. J. Eq. 21; Lawton v. Rivers, 2 McCord (S. Car.) 445; 13 Am. Dec. 741; Golding v. Williams, Dudley (S. Car.) 92; Zigefoose v. Zigefoose, 69 Iowa 391; Garrett v. Jackson, 20 Pa. St. 331; Pierce v. Cloud, 42 Pa. St. 102; 82 Am. Dec. 496; Reimer v. Stuaer, 20 Pa. St. 458; 59 Am. Dec. 744; Barry v. Lowry, 11 Ir. R. C. L. 483; Johnson v. Lewis (Ark. 1885), 14 S. W. Rep. 466; Howard v. O'Neill, 2 Allen (Mass.) 210; Curtis v. Angier, 4 Gray (Mass.) 547.

Nature of Use Generally.—Where it is shown that a party claiming a way by prescription has not kept such way in repair, has not used the road-bed for the length of time prescribed by statute, and has allowed the way to become blocked by fallen trees, using another way, he is not entitled to a way

VI. RIGHTS TO LOCATE WAY.—Where one is entitled to a right by prescription. Russell v. Napier, 82 Ga. 770.

To acquire a right of way over land of another by use, the way must be definite. Golding v. Williams, Dudley (S. Car.) 92.

The use of a way for more than twenty years over an academy common, with occasional repairs of the way, does not, as a matter of law, establish a right by prescription. Burnham v. McQuesten, 48 N. H. 446.

Acquisition of a right of way by prescription is not affected by the fact that occasionally, when the ground was soft, the adverse users turned out of the way at a certain point, and made several distinct tracks there. Cheney v. O'Brien, 69 Cal. 199.

Mere frequency of passage across one's land, not continuing in the same track for the requisite time, and with no repairs or work done on the alleged way will not suffice. Aaron v. Gunnels, 68 Ga. 528.

In Arnold v. Gorman, 50 Pa. St. 367, it was held that a right of way by adverse user could not be acquired by passing over the land in a loose and rambling way; sometimes in one way and then in another. See Johnson v. Lewis (Ark. 1885), 14 S. W. Rep. 466.

Permissive Use.—If the use has been permissive, prescription does not attach. See generally on this head Ingraham v. Hough, 1 Jones (N. Car) 39; Burnham v. McQuesten, 48 N. H. 446; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Godfrey, 71 Ill. 500; 22 Am. Rep. 112; Morrissey v. Eastern R. Co., 126 Mass. 377; 30 Am. Rep. 686; Nicholson v. Erie R. Co., 41 N. Y. 525; Sweeney v. Old Colony etc. R. Co., 10 Allen (Mass.) 373; 87 Am. Dec. 644; Gillis v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 59 Pa. St. 129; 98 Am. Dec. 317; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Hummel, 44 Pa. St. 375; Hickey v. Boston etc. R. Co., 14 Allen (Mass.) 429; Bowman v. Wickliffe, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 84; Medford v. Pratt, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 222; Gloucester v. Beech, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 60; Kirk v. Smith, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 241; Tracy v. Atherton, 36 Vt. 503; 82 Am. Dec. 621.

Interruption of User.—The fact that the owner of the close had within twenty years plowed up the way, declaring that the person claiming the use had no right, although such person was not present, will rebut the presumption of a grant from the uninterrupted use of the way through such close for more than twenty years. Barker v. Clark, 4 N. H. 380; 17 Am. Dec. 428.

A plea of twenty years' right of way is not defeated by proof of an agreed alteration of the line of way, nor by a temporary non-user under an agreement of the parties. Payne v. Shedden, 1 M. & R. 382.

In order to prevent the perfecting of a right of way by adverse user for twenty years, there must be an actual and substantial suspension of the use by intervention of the owner, either by adverse occupancy or suit. Ferrell v. Ferrell, 10 Heisk. (Tenn.) 329.

And see generally on this head, Deerfield v. Connecticut River R. Co., 144 Mass. 325; Thomas v. England, 71 Cal. 460; Powman v. Wickliffe, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 84; Brinck v. Collier, 56 Mo. 160; Ward v. Farwell, 6 Col. 66; Dodge v. Stacy, 39 Vt. 558.

Continuity of User.—In Leonard v. Leonard, 7 Allen (Mass.) 277, it was urged that the rule that the disseisin of an heir, devisee, or grantee may be tacked to that of an ancestor, deviser or grantor to create title by adverse possession, did not apply to the adverse use of easements; but the court held that there was no reason for making any difference, and that privity of user should be deemed to tend as strongly to prove the presumed grant as privity of seisin, and cited 3 Kent's Com. 443, where the doctrine is stated as follows: "To render the enjoyment of any easement for twenty years a presumption juris et de jure, or conclusive evidence of right, it must have been continued, uninterrupted or pacific, and adverse, that is, under a claim of right, with the implied acquiescence of the owner. The term of enjoyment requisite for the prescription is deemed to be uninterrupted, when it is continued from ancestor to heir, and from seller to buyer."

In Lamb v. Crosland, 4 Rich. (S. Car.) 536, it was declared that if, during a part of the time of the adverse use for twenty years, the land was owned by infants, though after the commencement of the adverse use, that period must be deducted in the computation of time, and if twenty years do not remain, the right is not established.

of way over the land of another, the owner of the land may lay off the way in such a manner as is least inconvenient to himself;¹ if he refuses, the party having the right to use the way may select a suitable route for the same, having regard to the interest and convenience of the owner of the land.² The location of ways arising from necessity may be made and changed by the concurrence of the parties.³ Such location or change need not be in writing or agreed to formally. It may be inferred from the acts or acquiescence of the parties.⁴ Where a change is thus made, the owner of the dominant estate cannot claim greater rights in the new way than he had in the old way.⁵ The course of the way, when once established, cannot be altered by either without the consent of the other.⁶ Where the owner of land, and a person having a right of way over it, have changed the route or location of the way by mutual consent or agreement, it may be left to the jury to determine whether such change or location was intended to be permanent, and for the purpose of substituting the new way for the old, or whether it was for a temporary purpose, and by the mere permission of the owner of the land; and in the latter case, the party using the new way would be a trespasser, if he should continue to use it after having been forbidden to do so; but in the former case it would be otherwise.⁷ If a right of way is reserved by grant and the grantor opens it in a direction not authorized by the reservation, he may be required to make a new designation of the way.⁸

VII. WHEN A PRIVATE WAY BECOMES PUBLIC.—In England, there may be a dedication of a private way to the public by throwing it open and permitting the public to use it as a public way, without putting up a bar or the like to signify that the owner retains his

1. Capers v. Wilson, 3 McCord (S. Car.) 170; Russell v. Jackson, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 573; Holmes v. Seely, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 507; Hart v. Conner, 25 Conn. 331; Littlejohn v. Cox, 15 La. Ann. 67; Kupp v. Curtis, 71 Cal. 62.

2. The defendant owned a farm, who leased small parcels to laboring men for cultivation. The plaintiff, a child of one of the tenants, was injured while passing over one of these parcels to reach his father's estate. Upon the question whether he was a trespasser, the court held that the defendant had the right to make out the line on which the right of way should run, and on his failure to do so, the right of defining it passed to his tenant. When it was once defined, both parties would be bound by the line so fixed. Powers v. Harlow, 53 Mich. 507; 51 Am. Rep. 154.

3. Rumill v. Robbins, 77 Me. 193; Garraty v. Duffy, 7 R. I. 476; Bangs v. Parker, 71 Me. 458; Jennison v.

Walker, 11 Gray (Mass.) 426. The defendants had acquired by prescription a right of way over land of the plaintiff; the latter closed it up, for his own convenience, and opened another for the use of the former, to which they assented, and used the new way for ten years or more. Held, that the defendants were entitled to the use of the new way until the old way was restored to its former condition. Hamilton v. White, 5 N. Y. 9.

4. Lawton v. Tison, 12 Rich. (S. Car.) 88; Miller v. Garlock, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 153. See infra, this title, Ways Created by Grant.

5. Bean v. Coleman, 44 N. H. 539.

6. Jennison v. Walker, 11 Gray (Mass.) 427; Jones v. Percival, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 485; 16 Am. Dec. 415; Wynkoop v. Buerger, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 222.

7. Hamilton v. White, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 60.

8. Hart v. Conner, 25 Conn. 331.

right over it.¹ This is the rule in some of the States,² while in others, a private way cannot be converted into a public highway by the use thereof by the public, no matter how long that use may be continued,³ but, there must be a dedication⁴ and acceptance.⁵

VIII. HOW WAYS MAY BE USED.—The purposes for which a private way, created by grant, may be used, depend upon the terms of the grant. If it is in general terms, it gives the grantee free use of the whole and every part of the way,⁶ and it may be used in any manner and for any purpose reasonably necessary;⁷ and where the way is granted for all purposes; it cannot be restricted to one purpose because the owner thereof has had occasion for a long series of years to use it for that purpose only.⁸ If the way is granted for particular purposes, its use would be confined

1. Lade v. Shepherd, 2 Str. 1004; Woodyer v. Hadden, 5 Taunt. 125; Rugby Charity v. Merryweather, 11 East 376; Wood v. Veal, 5 B. & A. 454; Rex v. Wright, 3 B. & A. 681; Jarvis v. Dean, 3 Bing. 447; Rex v. Leake, 2 N. & M. 583; 5 B. & A. 469; British Museum v. Finnis, 5 C. & P. 460; Hinckley v. Hastings, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 164.

2. Commonwealth v. Newbury, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 57; Hinckley v. Hastings, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 164.

If a way is constructed and kept in repair by a private corporation upon its own land for its own use and convenience, and the use and convenience of tenants occupying its houses on both sides of the way, opening into a public street, with a sign "private way" upon the corner, it will not become a public way by prescription, although left open to public travel for more than twenty years without interruption. Durgin v. Lowell, 3 Allen (Mass.) 398.

3. Hall v. McLeod, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 98; 74 Am. Dec. 400; Davis v. Ramsey, 5 Jones (N. Car.) 236.

Proof that a way was used for forty years will not render it a common way. Bordeau v. Williamson, 2 Hayw. (N. Car.) 301.

In New York a private way opened by the owners of the land through which it passes, for their own use, does not become a public highway merely because the public are also permitted for many years to travel over it. Speir v. New Utrecht, 121 N. Y. 420.

4. Where the issue before the court was whether a road was public or private, and it was proved that it was laid out by the owner and opened to public use some time before, and the court instructed the jury that "if this strip of land so thrown out was dedicated to the public use without any intention of resuming the exclusive right to the use of the ground, and if, from that time to this, the public has used the same as a public road, then it has become public," it was held not to be error. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Dunn, 56 Pa. St. 280.

5. See Nute v. Boston etc. Bldg. Co., 149 Mass. 465.

6. Cousens v. Rose, L. R., 12 Eq. 366; 24 L. T. 820; South Metropolitan Cemetery Co. v. Eden, 16 C. B. 42.

7. Abbott v. Butler, 59 N. H. 317; Dand v. Kingscote, 6 Mees. & W. 174; Senhouse v. Christian, 1 T. R. 560; Watts v. Kelson, L. R., 6 Ch. 166; 40 L. J. Ch. 126; 24 L. T. 209. See Springer v. McIntire, 9 W. Va. 196; Sargant v. Hubbard, 102 Mass. 380; South Metropolitan Cemetery Co. v. Eden, 16 C. B. 42; French v. Great Western R. Co., 19 Am. Law Rev. 470.

Proof that a right of way, which exists only by adverse enjoyment, was used for a variety of purposes, covering every purpose required by the dominant estate, in its then condition, is evidence from which may be inferred a right to use the way for all purposes which may be reasonably required for the use of that estate, while substantially in the same condition. Parks v. Bishop, 120 Mass. 340; 21 Am. Rep. 519.

8. Holt v. Sargant, 15 Gray (Mass.) 97.

When in a deed relating to mines there is a grant of "a free and con-strictly to those purposes.¹ Under a grant of a right of way across a parcel of land, the grantee has not a right to enter at one place, go partly across, and then come out at another place on the venient way," as in Senhouse v. Christian, 1 T. R. 560, or of a sufficient way-leave" as in Dand v. Kingscote, 6 M. & W. 174, or probably, of a "necessary wayleave" or the like "to convey coals" as in Bishop v. North, 11 M. & W. 418, the grantee prima facie may for his better accommodation, make wagon roads or tram roads on the site over which such a right of way extends. He may even make a railroad if in the deed, there be a clause requiring him to compensate for damage, and if such a road would not be a nuisance or a source of danger. Bishop v. North, 11 M. & W. 418.

Under the words "sufficient way-leave" a party is not confined to such description of way as was in use at the time of the grant. Dand v. Kingscote, 6 M. & W. 174.

1. Myers v. Dunn, 49 Conn. 71; Seeley v. Bishop, 19 Conn. 128; Emans v. Turnbull, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 313; Cowling v. Higginson, 7 L. J. Ex. 265; Burton v. Hall, 10 L. J., Q. B. 258.

In French v. Marstin, 24 N. H. 440; 57 Am. Dec. 294, the court by Bell, J., said: "The grantee of a right of way is limited to the use of the way for the purpose and the manner specified in his grant. He cannot go out of the limits of the way, nor use it to go to any other place for any other purpose than that specified, if the use in this respect is restricted." See Washb. on Easements 283; Reg. v. Pratt, 4 E. & B. 860; Knight v. Moore, 3 Bing. N. Cas. 3; Bakeman v. Talbot, 31 N. Y. 366; 88 Am. Dec. 275; Colchester v. Roberts, 4 M. & W. 774.

"Foot-Way."—A grant of way on foot or for horses, oxen, cattle and sheep does not authorize the grantee to carry manure over the way in a wheelbarrow. Brunton v. Hall, 1 Q. B. 792.

A "carriage-way" always includes a "foot-way." Davis v. Stephens, 5 C. & P. 570, and a "horse-way." Ballard v. Dyson, 1 Taunt. 284.

"Drift-way."—A drift-way is a common way for driving cattle, and also a way for the passage of teams. Smith v. Ladd, 41 Me. 314.

Way Granted for Carting Wood.—The owner of land between two highways granted a tract near the west road to A, reserving a right of way across it "for the purpose of carting wood, etc.," and subsequently granted a center lot to B, with the right of way across A's lot, as previously reserved. Held, that the right of way through A's lot was limited to the purpose of carting wood, and was not enlarged by the "etc." Myers v. Dunn, 49 Conn. 71.

A right of way, used for the purpose of taking away wood only, cannot be extended to other purposes, upon the dominant estate being occupied by dwellings and cultivated. Atwater v. Bodfish, 11 Gray (Mass.) 150.

For Repairing Mill Dam.—A right of way to repair a race and dam is confined to the use necessary for repairing the race and dam, and not for ordinary purposes. McTavish v. Carroll, 7 Md. 352.

So a deed of a right of way from a highway to the grantee's mill gives him the right to the free and unobstructed use of the road as a way for the accommodation of his mill privilege, but not to be used as the place of deposit for lumber or other materials. Kaler v. Beaman, 49 Me. 208.

Ways Granted for Agricultural Purposes.—The grant of a way for agricultural purposes was held not to include the right to transport coals over such a way. Cowling v. Higginson, 4 M. & W. 245.

Nor to transport lime from a quarry. Jackson v. Stacy, Holt, N. P. 455. Nor does it give a right of way for mineral purposes generally. Bradburn v. Morris, L. R., 3 Ch. D. 812.

So in Parks v. Bishop, 120 Mass. 340; 21 Am. Rep. 519, it was held, that where a way is by prescription appurtenant to an agricultural estate, for general purposes of agriculture, and the condition and character of the dominant estate is substantially altered, as in the case of a way to carry off wood from wild land which is afterwards cultivated and built upon, or of a way for agricultural purposes of a farm which is afterwards turned into a manufactory or divided into building lots—the right of way cannot be used for new purposes required by the altered condition of the property and imposing same side.¹ So a right of way through certain premises, reserved to the grantor of a portion of them, cannot be enlarged, as against the first grantee, by a reference, contained in a subsequent deed of another portion, to the effect that the right extends to a certain point, which is, in fact, beyond that fixed in the reservation.² If no dimensions or purposes are expressed, the extent and nature of the right of way may be inferred from the terms of the grant, interpreted in the light of surrounding facts and circumstances. The necessities, conveniences, and usages incidental to a way are always presumed to have been contemplated by the parties in making the grant.³ The grant of "a right of passage" over agricultural lands passes nothing but what is requisite to its fair enjoyment. The way, in point of width and height, is such as is reasonably necessary and convenient for the purposes for which it is granted.⁴ But a grant of a way, "as now laid out," a greater burden upon the servient estate.

Article 595 of the Louisiana Civil Code, giving to a proprietor whose lands are inclosed, a right of way to the public roads through the estate of his neighbors, for the cultivation of his estate, does not restrict the right of the owner of lands so situated, to claim the servitude of passage only for planting purposes. Littlejohn v. Cox, 15 La. Ann. 67.

For Carting Timber.—A right to cart timber will not sustain a plea of a general right of way on foot, or with horses, carts, wagons, and other carriages. Higman v. Rabbelt, 5 Bing. N. Cas. 622.

For Drawing Water.—A right to draw water from a river will not sustain a plea of a right to draw goods and water. Knight v. Woore, 3 Bing. N. Cas. 3.

1. Comstock v. VanDeusen, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 163.

A right of way over land in all directions where most convenient to the defendant, and least prejudicial to the plaintiff, cannot be prescribed for, nor can a non-existing grant of way be presumed. Jones v. Percival, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 485; 16 Am. Dec. 415.

2. Brossart v. Corlett, 27 Iowa 288.

The rule is well settled that if a man has a right of way over another's land to a particular close, he cannot enlarge it and extend it to other closes. Davenport v. Lamson, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 74; Howell v. King, 1 Mod. 190; Senhouse v. Christian, 1 T. R. 569; Springer v. McIntire, 9 W. Va. 196; Schroder v. Brennehan, 23 Pa. St. 348; French v.

Marstin, 32 N. H. 316. But one who has a right of way over his neighbor's land as appurtenant to a parcel of his own land is not a trespasser, because he erroneously claims the right to exist as appurtenant to another parcel as well. Hayes v. Di Vito, 141 Mass. 233.

3. Long v. Gill, 80 Ala. 410.

4. Atkins v. Boardman, 2 Met. (Mass.) 457; 37 Am. Dec. 100; Bateman v. Talbot, 31 N. Y. 371; 88 Am. Dec. 275. See Gerrish v. Shattuck, 132 Mass. 235.

Where a lease of premises described them as abutting on "an intended way of thirty feet wide" which was not then set out, on the soil which was the property of the lessor, and an underlease was granted describing the premises as abutting on "an intended way" not mentioning the width, it was held that the underlease was entitled to a convenient way only, and could not maintain an action against the owner of the soil for narrowing the road to twenty-seven feet, no actual injury having been sustained. Harding v. Wilson, 2 B. & C. 96.

A description in a deed of land granted as bounded "westerly on Park street one hundred and fifty feet," does not amount to a covenant of the existence of a street of the same width as the street of that name, if such a street, though graded and laid down upon the plan published by a former owner, has since been closed and plowed up; but only to a covenant of the existence of a way of reasonable width. Walker v. Worcester, 6 Gray (Mass.) 548.

gives the owner of the land over which it passes no right, in the absence of evidence of a contrary usage, to narrow or erect a gate at the entrance of the way.¹

IX. RIGHTS OF THE PARTIES.—A private way appurtenant or appurtenant to land conveyed, passes with the dominant estate as an incident thereto.² But the title to the soil remains in the owner of the land and he may maintain trespass against persons using it without right;³ or ejectment against those making erections upon or over it.⁴ A right of way appurtenant to land is appurtenant to the whole and to every part of it; and, if such land be divided, and conveyed in separate parcels, a right of way thereby passes to each of the grantees.⁵ The question who may use a way depends upon the law under which it is created. The private way established by statute in many of the States is not the private way or right of way known to the common law.⁶ Such a way is open to the use of the public, especially when opened with the indication that it is a way for public use.⁷ In New York, a citizen has not the right to use a private road as he does a public highway. He can only use it when he has business with the road-owner, or some other lawful occasion for going to the land intended to be benefited by the road. He can only justify an entry on the road when he could justify an entry on the land on account of which the road was laid out. Even the owner of the land over which the road passes, unless he is given notice of such an inten-

1. Welch v. Wilcox, 101 Mass. 163.

The grant of a right of way for horses, carts, and other vehicles contained the following description: "To a street forty feet wide, and in, over, and through said forty feet street." The street was owned by the grantor and laid out by him between his lots, and was so situated that there was much passage over the same. Held, that such a grant gave a right of way in the entire space of that width, and the grantee could maintain an action for damages if those claiming under him afterwards obstructed his convenient use and enjoyment of any part of it. Tudor Ice Co. v. Cunningham, 8 Allen (Mass.) 139.

2. Boatman v. Lasley, 23 Ohio St. 618; Moore v. Crose, 43 Ind. 30; Canon v. Boyd, 73 Pa. St. 179.

A right of way, devised in express terms, is appurtenant to the dominant estate, and passes by a conveyance of such estate without express mention of the appurtenances. It is a charge upon the servient premises, and continues such when they are in the hands of any subsequent purchaser, and it is not impaired by the fact, that the owner of the dominant estate has a mere permission, revocable at any time, to pass over the land to a third party in order to reach the dominant estate. Lide v. Hadley, 36 Ala. 627; 76 Am. Dec. 338.

3. Hollenbeck v. Rowley, 8 Allen (Mass.) 476; Hart v. Chalker, 5 Conn. 315; Peck v. Smith, 1 Conn. 103; Jamaica Pond etc. Corp. v. Chandler, 9 Allen (Mass.) 159; Wilson v. Wilson, 2 Vt. 68.

For all purposes not inconsistent with the grantee's paramount right to use the way as a "free and open road," the soil and the beneficial use thereof remains in the grantor. Kaler v. Beaman, 49 Me. 208; Perley v. Chandler, 6 Mass. 454; Atkins v. Boardman, 2 Met. (Mass.) 457; 37 Am. Dec. 100; Shroder v. Brennehan, 23 Pa. St. 348.

4. Codman v. Evans, 5 Allen (Mass.) 308; 81 Am. Dec. 748.

5. Underwood v. Carney, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 285; Whitney v. Lee, 1 Allen (Mass.) 198; 79 Am. Dec. 727; Watson v. Bisren, 1 S. & R. (Pa.) 227; 7 Am. Dec. 617; Miller v. Washburn, 117 Mass. 371.

6. Perrine v. Farr, 22 N. J. L. 356.

7. Metcalfe v. Bingham, 3 N. H. 459;

tion before the damages are assessed, has no right to use the road for his own purposes; if he does so, or if his fences encroach upon the road, the owner of the road may have an action against him.¹

X REPAIRS.—The owner of a private way may do any work upon its surface which is necessary, fit, and proper to be done to enable him to use and enjoy his right in a manner beneficial and advantageous to himself, provided he does not thereby make any material change in the state and condition of the soil, or disturb or interfere with the estate or privileges of other persons therein.²

XI. OBSTRUCTIONS—1. Generally.—The grantee of a private way may maintain an action for damages,³ or resort to the remedy by

Nudd v. Hobbs, 17 N. H. 524; Denham v. Bristol Co., 108 Mass. 202; Danford v. Durell, 8 Allen (Mass.)

244.

1. Taylor v. Porter, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 140; 40 Am. Dec. 274; Lambert v. Hoke, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 383. See Com. v. Low, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 408.

In Michigan it has been held that where a tenant is obliged to cross his landlord's premises in going to and from those he occupies and is allowed to do so without objection, the arrangement being for the benefit of both parties, his children or members of his family may also go upon such premises to help him. Powers v. Harlow, 53 Mich. 507; 51 Am. Rep. 154.

2. Brown v. Stone, 10 Gray (Mass.) 61; 69 Am. Dec. 303; Appleton v. Fullerton, 1 Gray (Mass.) 186; McMillen v. Cronin, 57 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 55; Lyman v. Arnold, 5 Mason (U. S.) 195; Gerrard v. Cooke, 2 B. P., N. R. 109; Baker v. Dedham, 16 Gray (Mass.) 393; Walker v. Pierce, 38 Vt. 95; Osborn v. Wise, 7 C. & P. 761; Wynkoop v. Burger, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 222.

In McMillen v. Cronin, 57 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 55, the court by Miller, J., said: "The very existence of a right of way precludes the idea that the party who has the right cannot repair or keep the way in order. Suppose the way should be partially impaired by a storm or in some manner become obstructed and impassable, can it be claimed that there is no power to repair it and put it in order? Clearly not, for the right to repair is incident to the easement, and without it the way might become useless and of no benefit. Having the easement carries with it the right to make necessary repairs."

In Nugent v. Wann, 1 McCrary (U.

S.) 439, the court by McCrary, J., said: "A proprietor of land who opens a private way upon his own premises is under no obligation to keep the same in repair for the safety of persons who may pass over it uninvited; and even when such proprietor permits persons generally to pass over such way he does not make himself liable for accidents or injuries which may result from the fact that the way is not a safe one or not in repair. The proprietor of such a way owes no duty to the public to keep it in repair for their use, and whoever uses it does so at his own risk, provided only that the proprietor, knowing that the public are in the habit of using the way, has no right to place therein anything that he knows will endanger the safety of persons passing over it, without giving warning of the danger."

Where a private way is established at the instance and expense of a person, he is not bound to keep it in repair through his own land for the benefit of those who may have acquired a prescriptive right to use it. Puryear v. Clements, 53 Ga. 233.

The owner of a private way by prescription, over another's land, has no right to cut ditches for the improvement of his way without the consent of the owner of the soil, unless he has acquired such right also by a prescriptive use. Capers v. McKee, 1 Strobb. (S. Car.) 164.

3. O'Brien v. Schayer, 124 Mass. 211; Tudor Ice Co. v. Cunningham, 8 Allen (Mass.) 139; Smiles v. Hastings, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 44; Phillips v. Bowers, 7 Gray (Mass.) 21; Gerrish v. Shattuck, 128 Mass. 571; Bagley v. People, 43 Mich. 355; 38 Am. Rep. 192; Common Council v. Croa, 7 Ind. 9; Haynes v. Thomas, 7 Ind. 38; Tate v. Ohio etc. R. Co., 7 Ind. 479; Richardson v.

Pond, 15 Gray (Mass.) 387; Longendyck v. Anderson, 59 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 1; Shewsmith v. Byerby, 28 L. T., N. S. 553.

A turnpike company having the right to use a certain highway, placed a tow-house in the highway at a point where plaintiff's private way entered the highway, thereby obstructing the plaintiff's convenient entrance to the highway. It was held that plaintiff could maintain an action therefor. Stratton v. Elliott, 83 Ind. 425.

The owner of a farm built a cider-mill abutting upon a right of way owned by D, and allowed his customers to station their wagons across the way. Held, that D could recover of him for the obstruction. Dennis v. Cipperly, 17 Hun (N. Y.) 69.

So where a party having a right of way licenses the owner of the soil to build an arch over a way and such owner unnecessarily and unreasonably obstructs the way in building the arch, an action on the case will lie for abuse of the license. Cushing v. Adams, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 110.

Cutting Down Grade.—Under a deed of a fee to the center of a private way laid out on a plan, and of a right of way over it, subject to a like right in the grantor, the latter has no right to cut down the grade of the way to the injury of the grantee. Kelley v. Saltmarsh, 146 Mass. 585.

Action for Obstruction.—Any person owning a right of way may bring an action for its obstruction. Tudor Ice Co. v. Cunningham, 8 Allen (Mass.) 139; Gerrish v. Shattuck, 128 Mass. 571; Burke v. Wall, 29 La. Ann. 38; 29 Am. Rep. 316; Hill v. Hagaman, 84 Ind. 287; Oakley v. Adamson, 1 M. & S. 510; Lide v. Hadley, 36 Ala. 627; Richardson v. Pond, 15 Gray (Mass.) 387; Lansing v. Wiswall, 5 Dem. (N. Y.) 213; Okeson v. Patterson, 29 Pa. St. 22.

But the owner of a reversion who occupies merely the position of life tenant, cannot maintain an action against one for obstructing the right of way appurtenant to the estate. Kimball v. McIntosh, 134 Mass. 362; Hopwood v. Scholfield, 2 M. & R. 34. Compare Kidgill v. Moore, 9 C. B. 364.

A party, who has not been in constant and uninterrupted use of a private way for seven years, cannot maintain, under Georgia Code, §§ 737-740, a petition to an ordinary to order the removal of obstructions thereon. Brown v. Marshall, 63 Ga. 657.

An action for damages will not lie for the obstruction of a right of way, alleged to have arisen from an implied covenant contained in a reference in a deed to a street as a boundary, where possession of such street was never given or taken under the deed, and the owner had built thereon and had exclusive possession thereof for more than twenty-one years before suit brought, without any denial of title. Spackman v. Steidel, 88 Pa. St. 453.

Notice of Action.—Where the plaintiff has a temporary use of a right of way, the defendant is entitled to reasonable notice that the plaintiff may use the way before being liable to an action for obstructing it. Mansfield v. Shepard, 124 Mass. 520.

The plaintiff had a right of way to repair his mill race. The defendant put a fence across with bars easily removed, and informed the plaintiff that he might remove them himself when he had occasion to pass, and that upon notice the defendant would cause them to be taken down. Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the damages for the obstruction of the way. McTavish v. Carroll, 17 Md. 1.

Pleading.—In a case for obstructing a private way "onto and into a certain highway which lies near where the said plaintiff resides" is a sufficient description of a terminus ad quem in a declaration in a case for the obstruction of a private way. At any rate, it is good after verdict. Frather v. Owen, Cheves (S. Car.) 236; Collier v. Farr, 81 Ga. 749. But "a certain lot of land in N" is an insufficient description whether the way is set forth as dependent to land, or the land is intended as a terminus of the way. Lamphier v. Worcester etc. R. Co., 33 N. H. 495.

Evidence.—In an action for obstructing a private road, notice from plaintiff to defendants in which he spoke of it as a public road is admissible to show that he did not regard it as a private road. Turner v. Williams, 76 Mo. 617.

So an award may be given in evidence to establish the plaintiff's right of way, not as conveying the right but as estopping the defendant from denying it. Prince v. Wilbourn, 1 Rich. (S. Car.) 58.

So a verdict for damages that the plaintiff determine the right of way is conclusive evidence against the defendant in a subsequent action between the injunction for any obstructions that interfere with its convenient use or enjoyment.¹ So if a way be limited to particular purposes, and there yet be a covenant that the same shall be open and free of incumbrances, the grantor has no right to obstruct the way.² If the way belongs to owners in common, one of them can maintain an action against another for obstructing it.³ Each owner may make reasonable repairs which do not injuriously affect his co-owners,⁴ but he cannot make alterations in the course of the way, or changes in its grade or surface, which make the way less convenient and useful, to any appreciable extent, to any one who has an equal right in the same.⁵

One of the owners in common of a way who erects an obstruction on his part, beneficial to himself, and which does not tend to incommode one who has an equal right of way, cannot be compelled to remove such obstruction.⁶ And whether such acts di-same parties. Prather v. Owens, Cheves (S. Car.) 236.

Damages.—The plaintiff, in an action for the obstruction of a way, will not be limited to the recovery of merely nominal damages. Smiles v. Hastings, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 44.

In an action for damages for the obstruction of an alley, it is competent for defendant to prove, by way of mitigation of damages, that it was not plaintiff's only means of access to the rear of his property. Demuth v. Amweg, 90 Pa. St. 181.

Proof of Actual Damages Unnecessary.—An action will lie for an obstruction of a private way, without proof of actual damages. Tuttle v. Walker, 46 Me. 280.

When Action Unnecessary.—Where one who has covenanted for a right of way, places an obstruction therein, the covenantee may remove the obstruction, and need not resort to an action for a breach of the covenant. And it is not necessary that, at the time he removed the obstruction, he should have been passing upon the road for the purpose of going to the place to which the way led. Quintard v. Bishop, 29 Conn. 366.

1. Lide v. Hadley, 36 Ala. 505; 76 Am. Dec. 338; Gerrish v. Shattuck, 128 Mass. 571; McConnell v. Rathbun, 46 Mich. 303; Devore v. Ellis, 62 Iowa 505; Collins v. Slade, 23 W. R. 109; Wells v. London etc. R. Co., 5 L. R., Ch. Div. 126. See State v. Randall, 1 Strobh. (S. Car.) 110; Brightman v. Chapin, 15 R. I. 166; Bean v. Coleman, 44 N. H. 539.

A land owner is entitled to an injunction to restrain the shutting up of a private way which furnishes the only convenient egress from his land to the public highway. Lakenan v. Hannibal etc. Co., 36 Mo. App. 363.

A party whose easement in another's land is disturbed by an incorporated company, authorized by law to make a public improvement, cannot maintain a bill in equity against the owner of the land, to oblige him to restore the easement to its primitive condition. Mulvany v. Kennedy, 26 Pa. St. 44.

2. Brownell v. Dyer, 5 Mason (U. S.) 227.

3. Hall v. McCaughey, 51 Pa. St. 43. See McCarty v. Kitchenman, 47 Pa. St. 239.

4. Killion v. Kelley, 120 Mass. 47; People v. Jackson, 7 Mich. 432; 74 Am. Dec. 729; Carlin v. Paul, 11 Mo. 32; 47 Am. Dec. 139; Nash v. New England Mut. L. Ins. Co., 127 Mass. 91; Walker v. Gerhard, 9 Phila. (Pa.) 116.

5. Thomas v. Poole, 7 Gray (Mass.) 83; Richardson v. Pond, 15 Gray (Mass.) 387; Meehan v. Barry, 97 Mass. 447; Killion v. Kelley, 120 Mass. 47; Phillips v. Bowers, 7 Gray (Mass.) 21; Nute v. Boston etc. Bldg. Co., 149 Mass. 465.

Where, under grants, an alley is made appurtenant to each of two estates, neither owner can alter the character of the alley without the consent of the other. Ellis v. Academy of Music, 120 Pa. St. 608.

6. Meehan v. Barry, 97 Mass. 447; Jackson v. Allen, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 320; Dempsey v. Kipp, 61 N. Y. 462; Craven v. Rose, 3 S. Car. 72.

The owner of a fee in the land over which is a right of way, may erect a minish the convenience of those using the way may be a question of fact for the jury, unless the undisputed facts make it clear beyond all reasonable controversy.¹

2. Erecting Gates.—The grantor of a right of way may erect gateways at the termini of the way where the grant is general.² So where the grantor places a gate at the end of a way where it enters a public highway, and the grantee is not entitled to an open way, he is bound to close the gate as often as he opens and passes through it.³ But where the grantee has a right to an open way, the grantor cannot erect a gate or fence across the way.⁴ If one's right of way over another's land is subject to gates, and he removes the gates, the land-owner is not thereby justified in forcibly preventing him from using the way.⁵

building over said way, if in so doing he does not interfere with the right of way. Sutton v. Groll, 42 N. J. Eq. 213. See Gerrish v. Shattuck, 132 Mass. 235; Atkins v. Bordman, 2 Met. (Mass.) 457; 37 Am. Dec. 100.

1. Meehan v. Barry, 97 Mass. 447.

2. Maxwell v. AcAtee, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 20; 48 Am. Dec. 409. Stevens v. Allen, 29 N. J. L. 68; Brooke v. Connery, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 193; Baker v. Frick, 45 Md. 337; 24 Am. Rep. 506; Short v. Devine, 146 Mass. 119; State v. Jefcoat, 11 Rich. (S. Car.) 529; Whaley v. Jarrett, 69 Wis. 613.

Compare Allen v. Stevens, 29 N. J. L. 509; Welch v. Wilcox, 101 Mass. 162; Houpes v. Alderson, 22 Iowa 160.

The grant of a private right of way over the land of the grantor does not prevent his erection of such gates upon the road, at its termini, as are necessary for the beneficial occupation of his land. In an action by the grantee for obstructing the way, his necessity, as regards the situation of the grantor's property, is a question for the jury. Baker v. Frick, 45 Md. 337; 24 Am. Rep. 506.

The grantor of the easement of a passage-way over his land for a foot-passage, has a right to build over the alley or passage-way, provided he does not obstruct it. Stevenson v. Stewart, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 293.

Owners in Common.—The owners of several parcels of land, through which was a private way having a gate across it, entered into an indenture containing the following memorandum: "The gate above mentioned is to be kept up, except by the consent of the parties." Held, that it was their intent that the gate should be upheld until by agreement it should be taken down; and then it was to remain down forever. Fowle v. Bigelow, 10 Mass. 379.

3. Amondson v. Severson, 37 Iowa 602; Brill v. Brill, 108 N. Y. 511.

One passing over a road obstructed by movable bars does not become a trespasser ab initio by his neglect to replace the bars, but is liable in case for the injury arising from such neglect. Hinks v. Hinks, 46 Me. 423.

4. Devore v. Ellis, 62 Iowa 505; Joyce v. Conlin, 72 Wis. 607.

One to whom is granted a right of way through a farm lane "for the convenient occupation of" his premises, may object to the putting up of a gate across the lane. Dickinson v. Whiting, 141 Mass. 414.

The fact that a fenced way has been in constant use for the purposes of a way by the purchaser of the right thereof, though the writing has not been recorded, constitutes valid notice to a subsequent purchaser, and is good ground for a perpetual injunction upon its obstruction. McCann v. Day, 57 Ill. 101.

Enforcement of Contract.—A bill to enforce a specific performance of a contract between coparceners for keeping open a lane through their lands, filed nearly twenty years after the contract was made, against a purchaser holding under one of the parties without actual notice, the lane having been shut up for a number of years, and the plaintiff having stood by when the land was twice sold without making any claim to the lane, and having parted with the land to which the lane was said to have given value, was dismissed on appeal. McCue v. Ralston, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 430.

5. McMillen v. Cronin, 57 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 53.

XII. RIGHT TO GO EXTRA VIAM.—Where the right to a way of necessity is clear and unquestionable and the owner of the servient estate obstructs or closes such way, the owner of the dominant estate has a right to deviate from the usual way and go over other parts of the land, doing no unnecessary damage.¹ But if it is the duty of the grantee, and not that of the land owner, to protect such easement and make necessary repairs, it seems that he cannot depart from the way and go upon adjoining land if the way becomes impassable.² If, however, the way becomes impassable through the fault of the owner of the land, one entitled to use the way may go extra viam.³ This is said to have been the rule for many years in England; and although in some cases it is held that the owner of a private way cannot justify passing over the adjoining land in any case,⁴ yet the law seems to be clear and unquestionable that if the owner of land, which is subject to a private right of way, obstructs the way, a person entitled to use the same may lawfully enter upon and go over the adjoining land.⁵

XIII.—HOW RIGHT OF WAY LOST OR EXTINGUISHED.—A private right of way may be lost by abandonment,⁶ by non-user,⁷ by

1. Bass v. Edwards, 126 Mass. 445; Haley v. Colcord, 59 N. H. 7; 47 Am. Rep. 176; Leonard v. Leonard, 2 Allen (Mass.) 543; Holmes v. Seely, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 507; Farnum v. Platt, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 339; 19 Am. Dec. 330. See Taylor v. Whitehead, 2 Dougl. 475.

Compare Williams v. Safford, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 309; Miller v. Bristol, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 550.

2. Farnum v. Platt, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 339; 19 Am. Dec. 330; Leonard v. Leonard, 2 Allen (Mass.) 543; Miller v. Bristol, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 550.

3. Kent v. Judkins, 53 Me. 160; 87 Am. Dec. 544; Henn's Case, W. Jones 296; Greenleaf's Cruise, tit. 24, §§ 17, 18; Tudor's Leading Cases, 127.

Way Made Impassable by Slough.—The impassability of a road gives no right to an easement over the land of another. It confers a personal temporary right, but not one which is appurtenant to his estate. Carey v. Rae, 58 Cal. 159.

4. Williams v. Safford, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 309; Newkirk v. Sabler, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 655; Pomfert v. Ricroft, 1 Saund. 321; Bullard v. Harrison, 4 M. & S. 387. See Taylor v. Whitehead, 2 Dougl. 475.

5. Kent v. Judkins, 53 Me. 160; 87 Am. Dec. 544; Farnam v. Platt, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 339; 19 Am. Dec. 330;

Leonard v. Leonard, 2 Allen (Mass.) 543; Bass v. Edwards, 126 Mass. 445; Holmes v. Seely, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 507.

The defendant had a private right of way over the plaintiff's land, which the latter plowed up and fenced. Defendant thereupon passed over the plaintiff's land in a different place. Plaintiff then obstructed that place. Defendant then entered at still another place. Plaintiff also obstructed this. Defendant then selected and used a fourth place of entrance. Plaintiff thereupon sued the defendant in an action of trespass. The court declared the defendant's right to pass over the adjoining land of the plaintiff to be clear and unquestionable. Leonard v. Leonard, 2 Allen (Mass.) 543.

6. Fox v. Forrest, 60 Md. 74.

Mere non-user for less than twenty years will not prove an abandonment of a right of way. Williams v. Nelson, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 141; 34 Am. Dec. 45.

7. Yeakle v. Nace, 2 Whart. (Pa.) 123; Clarke v. Gaffaney, 116 Ill. 362; Thompson v. Meyers, 34 La. Ann. 615; Street v. Griffiths, 50 N. J. L. 656.

In an action for obstructing a private way, it appeared that a part of the alleged private road, as once traveled, had not been lately used, although the place where the obstruc-merger of the dominant and servient estates,¹ or when the necessity of a way ceases.² When there are facts to show clearly an intention to abandon a way as such, it is sufficient, though the obstruction be not of a more permanent character than that created by a board or rail fence. So, too, it is enough that the way is plowed up and cultivated for agricultural purposes, if there be evidence of an intention to make the occupation perpetual, or of a purpose inconsistent with the enjoyment of the easement.³ A right of way abandoned reverts to the owner of the soil.⁴

XIV. REVIVAL OF LOST RIGHT OF WAY.—If a right of way which has been extinguished by the union of the title, and possession of the dominant and servient estates in one owner, is kept open after tion was located had been continually made use of by the plaintiff down to the time of placing the obstruction. Held, that the plaintiff's ceasing to use the road through a swamp, which was the part as to which the use had been discontinued, would not prevent his recovering. Crounse v. Wemple, 29 N. Y. 540.

The eviction and continuance for more than twenty years of a gate across a neighborhood road, by the owner of the soil, during all which time no one was hindered from passing through it, does not amount to an extinguishment of the public easement in the road, though it may modify it. State v. Pettis, 7 Rich. (S. Car.) 390.

In Longendyck v. Anderson, 59 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 1; Riehle v. Hennings, 38 N. J. Eq. 20, it is held that a right of way existing in favor of a party by grant cannot be lost by mere non-user.

1. Mott v. Mott, 8 Hun (N. Y.) 474; Jacocks v. Newby, 4 Jones (N. Car.) 266; Du Val v. Du Val, 21 Md. 149.

Acquiring the fee simple title to the dominant tenement by the owner of the servient tenement over which a right of way exists extinguishes the right of way. Pearce v. McClenaghan, 5 Rich. (S. Car.) 178; but it is not extinguished by the vesting of both estates in the same person as mortgagee until the mortgage is foreclosed. Ritger v. Parker, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 145; 54 Am. Dec. 744.

2. Hancock v. Wentworth, 5 Met. (Mass.) 446. See also infra, this title, Ways of Necessity.

3. Crain v. Fox, 16 Barb. (N. Y.)

184; Jamaica Pond etc. Corp. v. Chandler, 121 Mass. 3; Bombaugh v. Miller, 82 Pa. St. 203; Boyden v. Ach-enbach, 86 N. Car. 397.

In Corning v. Gould, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 531, Cowen, J., said "that a fence erected in the center of a way enjoyed in common by two parties is an unequivocal act which manifested an intention on the part of him who erected the fence to regard the right of way in common as extinguished."

Bars kept up in the place of swinging gates, across a private or by-road, for thirty or forty years, by the owner of the land through which the road passes, without complaint on the part of those using the road, creates no presumption that the right of use of the road has ceased. Van Blarcom v. Frike, 29 N. J. L. 516.

Evidence that for many years the whole close over which the right of way is claimed, has been plowed and cultivated almost every year, without the objection of the claimant of the right of way is competent. So evidence of an executed oral agreement between the owners of a dominant and servient tenement to discontinue an old way and substitute a different one is competent evidence of the surrender of the old right of way. Pope v. Devreux, 5 Gray (Mass.) 409.

The rule that the discontinuance of the use of one way merely by reason of the party's having a more convenient way is no evidence of abandonment, has been held to apply, even where a close board fence had been maintained across the way for seven years. Hayford v. Spokesfield, 100 Mass. 491.

4. Cincinnati etc. R. Co. v. Mims, 71 Ga. 240.

the unity of the title and possession as before, it may be revived and pass with the dominant estate when sold to several purchasers.¹ Ways extinguished by unity of title generally do not revive upon severance of the title, unless they are apparent and obviously continuous.² And they must be necessary to the enjoyment of the estate granted.³

1. Kiefer v. Imhoff, 26 Pa. St. 438; Phillips v. Phillips, 48 Pa. St. 185; Fetters v. Humphrey, 18 N. J. Eq. 262.

2. Kieffer v. Imhoff, 26 Pa. St. 438. See Overdeer v. Updegraff, 69 Pa. St. 119; Cannon v. Boyd, 73 Pa. St. 179. See Payne v. Williams, 2 Spears (S. Car.) 15; Pearson v. Spencer, 1 B. & S. 571.

3. Brown v. Berry, 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 98; Fetters v. Humphrey, 18 N. J. Eq. 262.

In Kieffer v. Imhoff, 26 Pa. St. 438, the right to an alley-way through the servient in favor of the dominant portion of land, which two portions had formerly belonged to one proprietor and had been sold at sheriff's sale, with no mention of the right of way, was sustained, although it was not a way of necessity. The court by Lewis, C. J., said: "It is obvious, therefore, that if the dominant and servient tenements become the property of the same owner, the exercise of the right, which in other cases would be the subject of an easement, is, during the continuance of his ownership, one of the ordinary rights of property only, which he may vary or determine at pleasure. The inferior right of easement is merged in the higher title of ownership. Holmes v. Gering, 2 Bing. 83; 9 Moore 166; 3 Bulst. 340. . . . Upon a subsequent severance of the estate by alienation of part of it, the alienee becomes entitled to all continuous and apparent easements which have been used by the owner, during the unity of the estate and without which the enjoyment of the several portions could not be fully had. . . . The owner may, undoubtedly, alter the quality of the several parts of his heritage, and if he does so and afterwards aliens one part, it is but reasonable that the alterations thus made, if palpable and manifest and obviously permanent in their nature, shall go to the purchaser in the condition in which they were placed and with the qualities attached to them by the previous owner." The learned judge also approved of the rules of the civil law with reference to servitudes, and cited Pardessus, Traite des Servitudes, § 288, which (as given in Gale, p. 50) is: "If afterwards these heritages should become the property of different owners, whether by alienation or division amongst his heirs, the service which the one derived from the other and which was simple 'destination du pue de famille,' as long as the heritages belonged to the same owner, becomes a servitude as soon as they pass into the hands of different proprietors."

In Phillips v. Phillips, 48 Pa. St. 186, the court by Thompson, J., said: "In this, although we do not recognize a way of necessity, we see the reason for the creation of this private way (i. e., that it was the only convenient way), why it was opened, kept open and used by the owner and his family until his death, and the same condition of things, as regards the surroundings continuing, we may presume that it must have been the intention of the owner that it should remain permanent, inasmuch as he made a final disposition by will of both the dominant and servient portions, without the slightest hint of a wish that their relations to each other should be changed." It will be noticed that the court gave a different face to the devise in fee from that given by the Rhode Island court, and as its opinion is derived from a consideration of the whole will, it would seem to be in better accord with the usually received principles of interpretation.

England.—In Whalley v. Thompson, 1 B. & P. 371 (1799) it was held that a way extinguished by unity of possession did not revive on severance. In Plant v. James, 5 B. & A. 791 (1833) Lord Denman said: "If the grantor wishes to revive or create such a right he must do it by express words or introduce the words therein used and enjoyed, in which case easements existing in point of fact though not existing in point of law would be transferred to a grantee."

XV.—STATUTORY PRIVATE WAYS.—1. In General.—There is a class of so-called private ways provided for and laid out under the statutes of some of the States. As to these the term "private" is rather a misnomer and is used to distinguish these ways from highways proper. Though called private ways and though not required, as are highways, by the public at large, they are public in the sense that the general public may use them.¹ It is under this view of the matter that condemnation of the necessary land is lawful notwithstanding constitutional inhibitions against the appropriation of private property to private use.²

2. Establishment.—The object of the legislation regulating the establishment of private ways is to enable petitioners to get access into established highways, so that they may not be shut out from

1. Sherman v. Buick, 32 Cal. 241; 91 Am. Dec. 577; Monterey Co. v. Cushing, 83 Cal. 507; Denham v. Bristol Co., 108 Mass. 202; Jones v. Andover, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 59; Parks v. Boston, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 218; Metcalf v. Bingham, 3 N. H. 459; Perrine v. Farr, 22 N. J. L. 356; Flagg v. Flagg, 16 Gray (Mass.) 175; Hall v. County Commr's, 62 Me. 327.

In Flagg v. Flagg, 16 Gray (Mass.) 179, the court by Bigelow, C. J., said: "The term 'private or particular way' is used in the statute, not to designate or define the use or purpose for which it was laid out, or the nature or extent of the easement which it created, but in contradistinction to a highway or public road, which was not confined within the boundaries or territory of a town, but extended from town to town or place to place, and which could be laid out only by the court of sessions. Nor was it intended by the phrases 'for the use of such town only,' or 'for the use of one or more individuals thereof or proprietors therein,' to limit the easements or rights created by the way to the inhabitants of the town or the owners of land therein, or to particular individuals, but to describe it as a road for local accommodation and convenience, which the selectmen were empowered to lay out at the expense of the town or the persons who would receive the greatest benefit from the establishment of the way."

To the point that, on the ground of necessity, land may be taken for private ways, see Steele v. County Commr's, 83 Ala. 304; Monterey Co. v. Cushing, 83 Cal. 508; Ayres v. Richards, 38 Mich. 217; Pocopson Road, 16 Pa. St. 15; Barr v. Flynn, 20 Mo. App. 383; Schehr v. Detroit, 45 Mich. 626;

People v. Pitkin Co. Ct., 11 Colo. 147.

In Ayres v. Richards, 38 Mich. 216, the court by Campbell, C. J., said: "It is hardly needful for us to say that nothing but a clear practical necessity can, under our constitution, justify the taking of private property of one person to be used as a private road by another. It is not to be taken for mere convenience. The taking is only justifiable where no other way of access to the lands of the applicant can be found. And both constitution and statute require that its use shall be only commensurate with the necessity of the applicants, and confined to them and the owner."

2. Sherman v. Buick, 32 Cal. 241; 91 Am. Dec. 577; Monterey Co. v. Cushing, 83 Cal. 507; Denham v. Bristol Co., 108 Mass. 202. In this last case the doctrine is expounded and the cases reviewed. Taylor v. Porter, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 140; 40 Am. Dec. 274, relied on as authority for the statement that condemnation is unconstitutional, being distinguished on the ground that the ways provided for by the statute there under review were strictly private ways, paid for and owned by the applicants, and in which the general public had neither title nor interest. On grounds similar to that of Taylor v. Porter, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 140; 40 Am. Dec. 274, rest Osborn v. Hart, 24 Wis. 89; 1 Am. Rep. 161; Sadler v. Langham, 34 Ala. 311; Dickey v. Tension, 27 Mo. 373; Nesbitt v. Trumbo, 39 Ill. 110; 89 Am. Dec. 290; Crear v. Crossly, 40 Ill. 175; White v. Clack, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 230; Witham v. Osburn, 4 Oregon 318.

And see further EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 529.

connection therewith.¹ The formalities required for laying out private ways, which, in many respects, are similar to those required for laying out public roads, must be pursued strictly.² And persons locating a private way must determine its expediency, or necessity, and the damage thereby done to the land owner, and what would be a reasonable compensation for such damage. These are judicial acts requiring disinterestedness on the part of those making the adjudication.³

3. Petition or Application.—The statutes generally require that a petition or application for a private road should be made in writing, specifying its width and location, courses and distances, and the names of the owners and occupants of the land through which the road is proposed to be laid out;⁴ and the petition must show that the way is "necessary, reasonable and just."⁵

The definite points where a private road shall begin and end ought to be set out with reasonable certainty.⁶ A way which is too indefinite for a determinate description is too indefinite to be established and protected by the court,⁷ and the commissioners are bound to lay out the road as described in the application. They have no discretion either to refuse to lay it out, to change its location, or to depart in any respect from the road proposed by the applicants.⁸

Proceedings to open a private road are invalid, unless the landowner has personal notice of the time and place of the meeting

1. In re Sandy Lick Creek Road, 51 Pa. St. 94; Hall v. County Comm'rs, 62 Md. 325.

2. Douglas Co. v. Clark, 15 Oregon 3. A way may not be laid out for a portion of the year only, the statute not so providing. Holcomb v. Moore, 4 Allen (Mass.) 529.

3. Lyon v. Hamor, 73 Me. 58.

In proceedings to lay out a private way, the jury must find that there is a necessity for it; it is not enough to certify that they "adjudge and determine that a private highway be established." Rundell v. Blakeslee, 47 Mich. 575.

4. Satterly v. Winne, 101 N. Y. 221.

Return of Surveyors.—Although an application for the laying out of a private road must state that it is to run to and from the land of the applicant, the surveyors need not repeat these words in their return. A return that they "think and adjudge the said private road to be necessary, and do lay the same," is sufficient. Powell v. Hitchner, 32 N. J. L. 211.

5. Colville v. Judy, 73 Mo. 651; Burwell v. Sneed, 104 N. Car. 118; Warlick v. Lowman, 104 N. Car. 403.

North Carolina Code, § 2056, provides that "if any person be settled upon or cultivating any land to which there is leading no public road, and it shall appear necessary, reasonable, and just that such person should have a private way to a public road over the lands of other persons, he may file his petition before the board of supervisors of the township, praying for a cartway to be kept open across such other person's lands, leading to some public road," etc. Held, that while it is essential that the petition shall state sufficient facts to show that the road asked for is "necessary, reasonable, and just," and that there is no public road to answer the purpose, yet the petition is not required to be so formal and precise as ordinary pleadings, and it is sufficient if enough is stated to show with reasonable certainty the existence of the state of facts mentioned in the statute. Warlick v. Lowman, 101 N. Car. 403.

6. Keeling's Road, 59 Pa. St. 358.

7. Fox v. Pierce, 50 Mich. 505.

8. Satterly v. Winne, 101 N. Y. 221.

of the viewers, and of the time and place fixed for the assessment of damages.¹

4. Notice.—The time of notice should be long enough to allow the summoning of witnesses, or for such examination and legal counsel as are necessary to enable the parties to defend their rights; and where the statute does not provide for any particular time of notice, the time of such notice may be governed by the analogy of similar cases, such as a notice required under the highway laws.² So, in like manner, must the land owner have an opportunity of being heard on the assessment of damages, and it is not sufficient to state in the report that application was made to him for a release thereof.³ Though persons interested, opposing a petition for a private way, have not been legally notified, yet if they appear and contest the petition, without objecting for want of notice, the right to object, on that ground, is waived.⁴

5. Damages.—The damages payable are ascertained by methods similar to those obtaining in case of highways.⁵

PRIVILEGE—(See also ARREST, vol. 1, p. 719; compare FRANCHISES, vol. 8, p. 584; LICENSE, vol. 13, p. 514).—Exemption from such burdens as others are subjected to.⁶ A right peculiar to the person on whom conferred, not to be exercised by another or others.⁷ "The word privilege may be defined as a right peculiar to an individual or body."⁸

1. In re Plum Creek Township Road, 110 Pa. St. 544; Hoagland v. Culvert, 20 N. J. L. 387.

2. Ayers v. Richards, 38 Mich. 217; In re Redstone Private Road, 112 Pa. St. 183.

Time of Notice is regulated by statute. See Rout v. Mountjoy, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 302; Green v. Reeves, 80 Ga. 805.

3. In re Redstone Private Road, 112 Pa. St. 183.

4. Woods v. Skinner, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 76.

Where a statute provides twenty days' notice to the land owner to entitle the applicant to have commissioners appointed to review and lay out the road, the owner of the land over which the way is to be laid out, who files no objection to the order and is present and assists in the appointment of the commissioners, though he is served with no notice of the time and place of meeting, is stopped from complaining of the action of the ordinary appointing the commissioners. Green v. Reeves, 80 Ga. 805.

5. Ex parte Craig, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 585.

In Clowes Private Road, 31 Pa. St. 12, it was held that the order for opening the way should not be made until the amount was paid or tendered and brought into court.

In Stewart v. Hartman, 46 Ind. 331, it was held that the receipt of damages assessed in proceedings before a county commissioner for the opening of a private way would not stop the person receiving the same from resisting the opening of the way over his land, where the money was accepted on a mistake as to the amount of work that would be done in opening the way by the person for whose benefit it was proposed to be opened.

In Chatterton v. Parrott, 46 Mich. 432, it was adjudged that one taking compensation for land condemned for a private way could not object afterwards to the validity of the proceedings on the ground of a juror's incompetency.

6. State v. Betts, 24 N. J. L. 557.

7. Brenham v. Brenham Water Co., 67 Tex. 542.

8. Ripley v. Knight, 123 Mass. 519.

It means something which cannot be enjoyed without legal authority, which is generally evidenced by license. Cate v. State, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 120.

A privilege is a right or immunity by way of exemption from the general

PRIVILEGED COMMUNICATIONS.—(See also ARBITRATION, vol. 1, p. 691; EVIDENCE, vol. 7, p. 103; GRAND JURIES, vol. 9, p. 17; HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 9, p. 806; JURY AND JURY TRIAL, vol. 12, p. 378; LIBEL AND SLANDER, vol. 13, p. 292; MALICIOUS PROSECUTION, vol. 14, p. 16; MERCANTILE AGENCIES, vol. 15, p. 280; WITNESSES.)

I. Definition, 122. [123.]

II. Political Matters; State Secrets, 123.

III. Judicial Matters, 123.

1. Proceedings in the Jury Room (See JURY AND JURY TRIAL, vol. 12, p. 318), 123.

2. Proceedings in the Grand Jury Room (See GRAND JURIES, vol. 9, p. 17), 123.

3. Testimony of Judges (See also JUDGE, vol. 12, p. 2), 124.

4. Testimony of Arbitrators (See also ARBITRATION, vol. 1, p. 691), 124.

5. Sources of Information in Criminal Prosecutions (See also INFORMERS, vol. 7, p. 711), 127.

IV. Professional Communications, 127.

1. To Attorney, 127.

a. In General, 127.

b. Retainer Not Essential, 130.

c. Willingness to Testify, 131.

d. Importance of Communication, 131.

e. Enjoining Secrecy Unnecessary, 131.

f. Communications Through Attorney's Representatives, 131.

g. Who May Claim the Privilege, 133.

h. When Privilege Waived, 133.

i. Attorney Acting for Several Clients, 134.

j. Negotiations Respecting the Sale or Mortgage of Property, 135.

k. Admissions, 135.

l. Professional Advisers of Strangers to the Suit, 136.

m. Defective Memory, 136.

n. Communications Not Privileged, 136.

(1) Generally, 136.

(2) Compromises and Agreements, 141.

(3) Disclosures for Protection of Attorney, 142.

(4) Cross-examination of Attorneys, 142.

(5) Communications with Third Persons, 142.

(6) Testamentary Communications, 142.

(7) Collateral Matters, 143.

(8) Disclosing Address of Client, 143.

o. Documents, 144.

(1) In General, 144.

(2) Correspondence Between Attorney and Client, 146.

(3) Documents in the Hands of Third Persons, 146.

(4) Where Attorney and Client Are Co-defendants, 147.

2. To Physician, 147.

a. Nature of the Privilege, 147.

b. How Waived, 150.

3. To Spiritual Adviser, 151.

V. Social Matters, 152.

1. Communications Between Husband and Wife, 152.

2. Evidence Impeaching the Legitimacy of Children (See BASTARDY, vol. 2, p. 129), 154.

3. Evidence Offensive to Public Morals, 154. [155.]

VI. Communications Not Privileged, [155.]

1. Telegraphic Dispatches, 155.

2. Miscellaneous Communications, 155.

law. Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Gaines, 3 Fed. Rep. 278. See also State v. Betts, 24 N. J. L. 557; Tennessee v. Whitworth, 117 U. S. 146.

Privilege is a right of franchise created by legislative grant that cannot be exercised by any citizen without some statutory provision conferring upon some one or more individuals the right of doing some particular thing. Languille v. State, 4 Tex. App. 317.

The exercise of mental power cannot be a privilege. It is not derived from a law granting a special prerogative contrary to common right. Lawyer's Tax Cases, 8 Heisk. (Tenn.) 649.

As used in Tennessee constitution permitting the legislature to tax "privileges," the word is defined to

I. DEFINITION.—It is designed here to treat of that evidence which, on grounds of public policy, courts decline to receive, for the reason that its admission would entail greater mischief than its rejection because of some collateral evil to third persons or to society. The rule requiring the rejection of such evidence is independent of questions of the relevancy of the evidence to the matters in dispute. Questions of the incompetency of witnesses by reason of inability to understand the nature of an oath, disregard for its sanctity, disqualifying interest, infamy, and other causes are related to the subject of witnesses and are there treated.¹ A learned and logical writer,² whose classification is here adopted, divides the matters thus excluded on grounds of public policy into political, judicial, professional, and social. Under the first come all secrets of State, such as State papers, and all communications between the government and its officers—the privilege in such cases not being that of the person who is in possession of the secret, but under the second, viz: judicial, fall the secrets of the jury room³ and of the grand jury room,⁴ so far as such secrets are protected from publicity, consultations of judges in matters before them for judicial action, and their testimony, so far as it may be inadmissible under the circumstances, and the testimony of arbitrators, so far as the same may be incompetent to impeach their verdict. To this branch of the subject belongs the rule upholding the secrecy of the sources of the information on which criminal prosecutions are founded. Under the third class, viz: professional, are included disclosures of client to counsel, of patient to physician, of penitent to priest or clergyman.

mean "any occupation which was not open to every citizen, but could only be exercised by a license from some constituted authority"—e. g., the business of a wholesale grocer. French v. Baker, 4 Sneed (Tenn.) 193. Secus a livery stable. Mayor, etc. of Columbia v. Guest, 3 Head (Tenn.) 413.

The word privilege as used in the constitution of Minnesota, prohibiting the legislature from enacting any private law granting any special or exclusive privilege, etc., means generally a right or immunity granted to a person either against or beyond the course of the common or general law, and the passage of an act providing for the adjustment and determination of two alleged claims, is not a violation of the prohibition. Dike v. State, 38 Minn. 366.

Privileges and Immunities.—See CITIZENSHIP, vol. 3, p. 252; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 3, p. 670.

Special or Exclusive Privilege.—Any particular or individual authority or exemption existing in a person or class of persons, and in derogation of common right; as, the grant of a monopoly. Anderson's L. Dict., citing Elk Point v. Vaughn, 1 Dak. 118; 1 Utah 111; 1 Bl. Com. 272.

Within the meaning of the prohibition in the constitution of New York against granting to private corporations "any exclusive privilege," describes grants in the nature of monopolies, of such inherent or statutory character as to make impossible the co-existence of the same right in another. Trustees of Exempt Firemen's Fund v. Roome 93 N. Y. 328.

1. See WITNESSES.

2. Best on Evidence, § 578. In Greenleaf on Ev., § 236 et seq., the classification is substantially similar.

3. See JURY AND JURY TRIAL, vol. 12, p. 378.

4. See GRAND JURIES, vol. 9, p. 17.

The fourth class, viz : social, embraces those communications between husband and wife concerning which neither may testify, such testimony by the one against the other as, under the common law or under statutes modifying the rule of the common law, is incompetent,¹ such evidence of non-access as is held incompetent for the purpose of impeaching the legitimacy of children presumably legitimate,² and evidence which, by reason of its indecency or offensiveness to public morals, may be rejected, if not absolutely required by its relations to the matter in hand.

II. POLITICAL MATTERS; STATE SECRETS.—On the ground of public policy, the executive department of the government cannot be interrogated in a judicial proceeding concerning official transactions with its subordinates.³

III. JUDICIAL MATTERS—1. Proceedings in the Jury Room.—See JURY AND JURY TRIAL, vol. 12, p. 318.

2. Proceedings in the Grand Jury Room.—See GRAND JURIES, vol. 9, p. 17.

1. See HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 9, p. 806.

2. See BASTARDY, vol. 2, p. 129.

3. 1 Greenleaf on Evidence, § 251; 1 Wharton on Evidence, § 604 a; Best on Evidence, § 578; U. S. v. Six Lots of Ground, 1 Woods (U. S.) 234.

Thus, communications between a provincial governor and his attorney-general, on the state of the colony, or the conduct of its officers, has been held incompetent. Wyatt v. Gore, Holt N. P. Cas. 299; and so a communication between such a governor and a military officer under his authority; Cooke v. Maxwell, 1 Stark. 183; and the report of a military commission of inquiry made to the commander-in-chief. Home v. Bentinck, 2 B. & B. 130; and correspondence between an agent of the government and a secretary of State. Anderson v. Hamilton, 2 B. & B. 156 n.; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch. (U. S.) 144.

It is said that the executive and his cabinet officers are the sole judges of the propriety of a refusal to testify, or to produce papers in such case. Beatstone v. Skene, 5 H. & N. 538; Anderson v. Hamilton, 2 B. & B. 156; Gray v. Pentland, 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 23; Yoter v. Sanno, 6 Watts (Pa.) 164; Thompson v. German Valley R. Co., 22 N. J. Eq. 111. But see Dickson v. Wilston, 1 F. & F. 425 for an intimation by Lord Campbell, that, where a head of a department sends papers called for, the judge may examine the papers himself and determine whether they are such as should be excluded on the ground of public policy.

On the trial of Aaron Burr, a subpoena was asked for, to compel the attendance of President Jefferson. His reply was that, as head of the executive department, it was for him to determine what executive proceedings could be disclosed with safety. The matter ended here, an attachment not being asked for. 2 Robertson's Burr's Trial, p. 501, et seq.

In Gray v. Pentland, 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 23, a subpoena to the governor of Pennsylvania, requiring him to produce a paper filed with him and alleged to be libelous, was refused.

In Hartranft's Appeal, 85 Pa. St. 433, an order of attachment against the governor, the secretary of State, and certain other officers, to compel them to testify before a grand jury in an investigation, relating to a certain riot, was set aside by the supreme court, it being held that the witnesses were privileged.

In Thompson v. German Valley R. Co., 22 N. J. Eq. 111, the governor of New Jersey was sustained in his refusal to obey a subpoena, requiring him to produce before a court an engrossed copy of a private bill.

Totten v. U. S., 92 U. S. 107, was an action brought in the court of claims, to recover compensation from the United States for secret services rendered under a contract with the President, during the war, in the examination of fortifications, &c., within the rebel territory, etc. The court declared that the nature of the services precluded the maintenance of the action, because of the secrecy imposed by the contract.

3. Testimony of Judges.—The consultations of judges are privileged.¹ It is said that the judge presiding at a trial may not be made a witness in the case,² though this rule, perhaps, admits of some qualification.³ A judge may, however, testify as to what took place before him in open court.⁴ As to matters coming before him for purely judicial action, the rule of privilege applies.⁵

4. Testimony of Arbitrators.⁶

1. 1 Wharton on Evidence, § 600.

2. People v. Miller, 2 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 197. See Morss v. Morss, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 510; McMillen v. Andrews, 10 Ohio St. 112; Dabney v. Mitchell, 66 Ala. 495; Ross v. Buhler, 2 Mart., N. S. (La.) 313.

3. If the judge does testify without objection, it is not ground of error. People v. Dohring, 59 N. Y. 374; 17 Am. Rep. 349.

It was held in Sigourney v. Sibley, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 100; 32 Am. Dec. 243, that a judge of probate whose decision was appealed from, on the ground of his disqualification by reason of interest, was a competent witness on the appeal, to prove his want of interest.

In Taylor on Evidence, § 1244, it is noticed that, on State trials before the House of Lords, peers who have been examined as witnesses have nevertheless joined in rendering the verdict.

4. For the purpose, for example, of identifying the case, or showing to what a witness testified, Jackson v. Humphrey, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 498; In re Heyward, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 701.

In Rex v. Gazard, 8 C. & P. 895, the grand jury were advised not to examine the chairman of the quarter sessions as to what a witness testified to on a trial in the quarter sessions. And see People v. Miller, 2 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 197.

But see a contrary ruling of Byles, J., in Rex v. Harvey, 8 Cox C. C. 99. And see Agan v. Hey, 30 Hun (N. Y.) 591, where it was held error to allow a judge to testify as to the ground on which he decided a case.

It is said in Welcome v. Batchelder, 23 Me. 85, that the judge's privilege, when not touching matters of public policy, may be waived by him.

In Ex parte Gillebrand, L. R., 10

Ch. 52, the county court judge's verified notes of the evidence were used as evidence, to the exclusion of other evidence of what was testified to at the trial which is the subject of inquiry.

5. 1 Wharton on Evidence, § 600; 1 Greenleaf on Evidence, § 249. And see generally, JUDGES, vol. 12, p. 31.

6. It is said on this head in Wharton on Ev. 6, § 599, that it is not permissible to examine an arbitrator as to the reasons which led him to particular conclusions, for this would be collaterally to review his acts, citing Johnson v. Durant, 4 C. & P. 327, nor to prove by him his own misconduct, citing Claycomb v. Butler, 36 Ill. 100; Ellison v. Weathers, 78 Mo. 115; but that, as to matters of fact coming to his knowledge, there is no reason why they should not be examined, citing Woodbury v. Northy, 3 Me. 85; 14 Am. Dec. 214; Pulliam v. Pensoneau, 33 Ill. 375; Mayor etc. of N. Y. v. Butler, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 325; Buccleugh v. Metropolitan Board of Works, L. R., 3 Exch. 306. See also ARBITRATION, vol. 1, p. 691.

The language of Gray, J., in Worthington v. Scribner, 109 Mass. 487; 12 Am. Rep. 736, a leading case on this subject, clearly states this rule of law. In this case, which was an action of tort, charging defendant with maliciously and falsely representing to the Treasury Department that plaintiff had violated the revenue laws, plaintiff filed interrogatories designed to elicit information as to whether defendants had given such information. The court held that these interrogatories should not be answered, and used the following language: "It is the duty of every citizen to communicate to his government any information which he has of the commission of an offense against its laws. To encourage him in performing this duty without fear of consequences, the law holds such information to be among the secrets of State, and leaves the question how far and under what circumstances the names of the informers and the channel of communication shall be suffered to be known, to the absolute discretion of the government, to be exercised according to its views of what the interests of the public require. Courts of justice, therefore, will not compel or allow the discovery of such information, either by the subordinate officer to whom it is given, by the informer himself, or by any other person, without the permission of the government. The evidence is excluded, not for the protection of the witness or of the party in the particular case, but upon general grounds of public policy, because of the confidential nature of such communications." The court then proceeded to review the authorities as follows: "The earliest case upon the subject, is Rex v. Akers, 6 Esp. 125, in which on an indictment for obstructing a custom-house officer in the execution of his duty, Lord Kenyon said: 'The defendant's counsel have no right, nor shall they be permitted, to inquire the name of the person who gave the information of the smuggled goods.' All the English authorities agree that the rule has ever since been held in revenue cases to prevent a witness from answering questions that would disclose the informer, if a third person; and in Attorney-General v. Briant, 15 M. & W. 169, it was held that a witness could not be asked on cross-examination whether he was himself the informer. The rule has been nearly as long established in prosecutions for high treason. Rex v. Hardy, 24 How. St. Tr. 199; Rex v. Watson, 32 How. St. Tr. 1; 2 Stark 116. and it has been often applied in civil actions.

"In Robinson v. May, 2 Smith 3, which was an action for a libel in a letter by the defendant to the lords of the admiralty, charging the plaintiff with unlawfully pretending to be a magistrate and granting protections to vessels to the prejudice of the royal service, the lords of the admiralty had given up the letter and directed the action to be brought, so that no question whether it could otherwise have been put in evidence arose; the only question argued was whether the letter could be held to be a libel; and Lord Ellenborough in delivering judgment against the defendant on that question, expressed a significant doubt 'whether the board of admiralty did right in suffering the paper to go out of their hands, since it might tend to discourage the giving of information concerning abuses'—thus distinctly implying that, but for the course taken by the board of admiralty, the plaintiff could not have proved his case.

"In Home v. Bentinck, 2 B. & B. 130, it was held by Chief Justice Abbot, and affirmed in the exchequer chamber, in an action for libel by an officer of the army against the president of a military court of inquiry, that neither their report to the commander-in-chief, nor an office copy of it, should be admitted in evidence. In the very recent case of Dawkins v. Rokeby, L. R., 8 Q. B. 255, the same court held the statements, oral or written, of an officer, examined before such a military tribunal, to come within the same principle. And in Beatson v. Skene, 5 H. & N. 838, an action of slander against one military officer for speaking defamatory words of the military conduct of another, it was held that the Secretary of War, who objected to produce in evidence the minutes of a court of inquiry, and letters written to the War Department by the plaintiff himself, on the ground that their production would be prejudicial to the public service, was not bound to produce either.

"In Earl v. Vass, 1 Shaw 229, which was an action for a libel alleged to be contained in a letter to the board of customs before which the nomination of the plaintiff as a custom-house officer was pending, the House of Lords, upon the opinion of Lord Eldon, after conference with Chief Justice Abbott, held that the board could not be compelled to produce the letter, 'because it is against public policy that you should be compelled to produce instruments and papers, which, if persons are compelled to produce, it must shut out the possibility of the public receiving any information as to a person's fitness to be appointed to an office;' and 'it would be a very dangerous thing indeed, if this were permitted.'

"In Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137, the Supreme Court of the United States compelled the acting Secretary of State to testify whether certain commissions from the executive had ever been in his office, only because 'that could not be a confidential fact;' and declared, that if there was anything confidential, or the Secretary thought anything was communicated to him in confidence, he was not obliged to disclose it.

"The ruling of Chief Justice Marshall upon the trial of Aaron Burr, cited for the plaintiff, was merely that a subpœna

duces tecum might be issued to the President of the United States for a letter addressed to him by a military officer who was to be a witness against the defendant; leaving the question of the production of the letter, if containing any matter which in the judgment of the President could not be disclosed without injury to the public, to be considered on the return of the subpoena. 1 Burr's Trial 177-189. And he never had occasion to decide that question. See 2 Burr's Trial 533-539.

"In U. S. v. Moses, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 726, upon the trial of an indictment for counterfeiting, it was ruled that the officer who apprehended the defendant was not bound to disclose the name of the person from whom he received the information which led to the detection and arrest, Mr. Justice Washington saying that such disclosure might be highly prejudicial to the public in the administration of justice by deterring persons from making similar disclosures of crimes which they knew to have been committed.

"In State v. Soper, 16 Me. 293; 33 Am. Dec. 665, a like ruling was made upon the cross-examination of the owner of stolen goods, when called as a witness for the government upon the trial of an indictment for larceny.

"In Pennsylvania, it has been determined in an action for a libel contained in a deposition made and sent to the governor by a private citizen, charging the plaintiff with misconduct in office, that it was within the discretion of the governor to produce or withhold the letter, and that parol evidence of its contents was inadmissible. Gray v. Pentland, 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 23; Yoter v. Sanno, 6 Watts (Pa.) 166.

"In White v. Nicholls, 3 How. (U. S.) 266, and Howard v. Thompson, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 319; 34 Am. Dec. 238, cited for the plaintiff, the original letters to the President and Secretary of the Treasury, which were relied on as containing libelous matter, were produced by the plaintiff, who must have obtained them by permission of the government, so that no question of compelling a disclosure arose; and in Howard v. Thompson, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 319; 34 Am. Dec. 238, the court said that if the letters had not been surrendered by the Secretary of the Treasury, he could not have been compelled to produce them, and secondary evidence of their contents could not have been admitted.

"The only cases which afford any color for the plaintiff's position are of rulings at nisi prius, of very little weight, as compared with so many well considered judgments rendered upon full argument.

"In one case before Lord Kenyon and another before Baron Rolfe, a witness who appeared on his direct examination by the government to be an informer was permitted, without objection, to testify on cross-examination that no other person gave information upon the subject; but in such a case, Baron Rolfe remarked, 'The principle was rather followed than violated.' Rex v. Blackman, 1 Esp. 95; Reg v. Candy, cited 15 M. & W. 175.

"The ruling of Chief Justice Cockburn, upon an indictment for administering poison, in Reg. v. Richardson, 3 F. & F. 693, compelling a policeman to answer on cross-examination from whom he had received the information in consequence of which he found the poison in a place used by the defendant, must be maintained, if at all, upon the ground that the witness had already been examined by the government as to part of the conversation between him and the informer, and might, therefore, for the protection of the defendant against any unjust inference which might be drawn from the result of such examination, be required to state the whole of that conversation.

The ruling of Lord Campbell in Dickson v. Wilton, 1 F. & F. 419, that a communication sued on as a libel, held by the secretary for war in behalf of the crown, should be produced from his office and read in evidence, was, as observed by Chief Baron Kelly in delivering the judgment of the exchequer chamber in Dawkins v. Rokeby, L. R. 8 Q. B. 255, directly at variance with the previous judgment of that court in Home v. Bentinck, 2 B. & B. 130, above cited.

"In Blake v. Pilfold, 1 M. & Rob. 198, in which Mr. Justice Taunton admitted in evidence to support an action for libel, a letter to the chief secretary of the Postmaster General from a private individual, complaining of the misconduct of a guard, the objection was made by the defendant's counsel on the ground that it was a privileged communication made to a public officer, and that such public officer ought not to be allowed to produce it; the Post-Office Department had evidently suffered the letter to pass into the plaintiff's

5. Sources of Information in Criminal Prosecutions.—In cases in which the government is immediately concerned, no witness can be compelled to answer any question, the answer to which would tend to discover the names of persons by or to whom information was given as to the commission of offenses.¹

IV. PROFESSIONAL COMMUNICATIONS—1. To Attorney.—a. IN GENERAL.—All communications made by a client to his counsel for the purpose of obtaining professional advice or assistance are privileged.²

hands, for the report states that the handwriting was proved before the objection was made; and the whole attention of the judge seems to have been directed to the question whether the letter could be deemed a privileged communication upon which no action would lie. This last question was the only one touched by the other authorities cited for the plaintiff. Fairman v. Ives, 5 B. & Ald. 642; Dawkins v. Paulet, L. R., 5 Q. B. 94; O'Donaghue v. McGovern, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 26; 2 Kent Com. (6th ed.) 22.

"The question now before us is not one of the law of slander or libel, but of the law of evidence; not whether the communications of the defendants to the officers of the Treasury are so privileged from being considered as slanderous, as to affect the right to maintain an action against the defendants upon or by reason of them; but whether they are privileged in a different sense, so that courts of justice will not compel or permit their disclosure without the assent of the government to whose officers they were addressed. The reasons and authorities already stated conclusively show that the communications in question are privileged in the latter sense, and cannot be disclosed without the permission of the Secretary of the Treasury. And it is quite clear that the discovery of documents which are protected from disclosure upon grounds of public policy cannot be compelled, either by bill in equity or by interrogatories at law. McElveney v. Connellan, 17 Ir. C. L. 55; Wilson v. Webber, 2 Gray (Mass.) 558."

1. Stephen's Dig. of the Law of Evidence, art. 113.

2. Milan v. State, 24 Ark. 346; Andrews v. Simms, 33 Ark. 771; Hallenbach v. Todd, 119 Ill. 543; King v. Barrett, 11 Ohio St. 261; Babo v. Fryson, 21 Ark. 387; 76 Am. Dec. 407; Bigler v. Reyher, 43 Ind. 112; Oliver v. Pate, 43 Ind. 132; Holmes v. Barbin, 15 La. Ann. 553; Higbee v. Dresser, 103 Mass. 523; State v. Hazleton, 15 La. Ann. 72; Bank of Utica v. Merseureau, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 528; 49 Am. Dec. 189; Bacon v. Frisbie, 80 N. Y. 394; 36 Am. Rep. 627; Britton v. Loring, 45 N. Y. 51; Williams v. Fitch, 18 N. Y. 546; Brand v. Klien, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 335; Graham v. People, 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 468; Yordan v. Hess, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 492; Sleeper v. Abbott, 60 N. H. 162; People v. Sheriff, 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 622; State v. Dawson, 90 Mo. 149; Vogal v. Gruaz, 110 U. S. 311; Snow v. Gould, 74 Me. 540; 45 Am. Rep. 604; Rhoades v. Selin, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 718; Heister v. Davis, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 4; Chirac v. Reinicker, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 280; Parker v. Carter, 4 Munf. (Va.) 273; 6 Am. Dec. 513; Rogers v. Dare, Wright (Ohio) 136; Crawford v. McKissack, 1 Port. (Ala.) 433; Jenkinson v. State, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 465; Causey v. Wiley, 27 Ga. 444; Scales v. Kelley, 2 Lea (Tenn.) 706; Benedict v. State, 44 Ohio St. 679; Brown v. Rome etc. R. Co., 45 Hun (N. Y.) 439; Chahoon v. Com., 21 Gratt. (Va.) 822; Orton v. McCord, 33 Wis. 205; Maxham v. Place, 46 Vt. 434; Whetherbee v. Ezekiel, 25 Vt. 47; Rex v. Dixon, 3 Burr. 1687; Woolley v. R. R., 4 C. P. 602; Skinner v. R. R., L. R. 9 Exch. 298; Jenner v. R. R., 7 Q. B. 767; Chant v. Brown, 9 Hare 790; Greenough v. Gaskell, 1 Myl. & K. 101; Carpmael v. Powis, 1 Ph. 692; Cromack v. Heathcote, 2 B. & B. Hernandez v. State, 18 Tex. App. 134; 51 Am. Rep. 295; Peters v. Walkins, 4 Scott 155; Stephens v. Mattox, 37 Ga. 289; Turton v. Barber, 17 L. R. Eq. 329; Minet v. Morgan, 8 L. R. Ch. 361; Turquand v. Knight, 2 M. & W. 98; Desborough v. Rawlins, 3 My. & C. 515; Oliver v. Pate, 43 Ind. 132; Foster v. Hahl, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 89; 22 Am. Dec. 400; Beltzhoover v. Bleakstock, 3 Watts (Pa.) 20; 27 Am. Dec.

Such is the rule at common law.¹ The common law rule has been substantially affirmed by statute in the various States.²

Communications made to an attorney in the course of any personal employment, relating to the subject thereof, and which may be supposed to be drawn out in confidence of the relation in which the parties stand to each other, are under the seal of confidence and entitled to protection as privileged communications.³ They are entitled to protection whether they relate to a suit pending or contemplated,⁴ or to any other matter, which is the 330; Stratford v. Hogan, 2 Ball & B. 164; Richards v. Jackson, 18 Ves. 474; Morgan v. Shaw, 4 Madd. 57; Pearse v. Pearse, 1 DeG. & Sm. 12; Chant v. Brown, 7 Hare 79; Turton v. Barber, 17 L. R. Eq. 329; Walker v. Wildman, 6 Madd. 47; Shellard v. Harris, 5 C. & P. 592; Andrews v. Simms, 33 Ark. 771; Hughes v. Boone, 102 N. Car. 137.

An attorney will be prevented from communicating his client's secrets even after he is struck off the roll. Cholmondeley v. Clinton, 19 Ves. 268.

1. Balton v. Corporation of Liverpool, 3 Sm. 467; 1 Myl. & K. 88; Woods v. Woods, 4 Hare 83; Vent v. Pacey, 4 Russ. 193; Hughes v. Biddulph, 4 Russ. 190; Clagett v. Phillips, 2 Y. & C. 82; 1 Greenlf. Ev., § 240; Foster v. Hall, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 89; 22 Am. Dec. 400; Beltzhoover v. Blackstock, 3 Watts (Pa.) 20; 27 Am. Dec. 330.

2. Arizona Rev. Stat. 1887, p. 818; Arkansas Stat. 1883, p. 625; California Code C. P. 1885, § 1881; Colorado Gen. Stat. 1883, pp. 1062-63; Georgia Code 1882, p. 987, § 3797; Idaho Rev. Stat. 1887, p. 679; Indiana Rev. Stat. 1881 (ed. of 1888), § 1796; Iowa Rev. Code 1884, p. 860, § 3643; Kansas Comp. Laws 1885, p. 645, § 323; Minnesota Gen. Stat. 1881, p. 792, ch. 73; Missouri Rev. Stats. 1879, p. 690, § 4017; Montana Comp. Stat. 1887, p. 230; Nebraska Comp. Stat. 1885, § 328; Nevada Gen. Stats. 1885, p. 833, § 3404 sec. 382; New York Code Civ. Proc., § 835; Ohio Rev. Stat. 1884, p. 1096, § 5241; Oregon Gen. L. 1872, p. 251; Pennsylvania L. 158, §§ 2-5; Tennessee Code 1884, § 4748, p. 897; Texas Rev. C. 1888, p. 219, § 2439; Utah Comp. L. 1876, p. 506; Washington Code 1881, p. 102; Wisconsin Rev. Stat., § 4074, p. 292; Wyoming Rev. Stat. 1887, p. 590, § 2589.

3. Sharon v. Sharon, 79 Cal. 633; Avery v. Mattice, 56 Hun (N. Y.) 639; State v. Dawson, 90 Mo. 149; Williams

v. Fitch, 18 N. Y. 546; Bacon v. Frisbie, 80 N. Y. 394; 36 Am. Rep. 627; Chirac v. Reinicker, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 280; Yordan v. Hess, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 492; Aiken v. Kilburne, 27 Me. 252; Whetherbee v. Ezekiel, 25 Vt. 47; King v. Barrett, 11 Ohio St. 261; Crisler v. Garland, 11 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 136; 44 Am. Dec. 49; Rogers v. Dare, Wright (Ohio) 136; Parker v. Carter, 4 Munf. (Va.) 273; 6 Am. Dec. 513; Kaut v. Kessler, 114 Pa. St. 603; Rhoades v. Selin, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 718; Heister v. Davis, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 4; Crawford v. McKissack, 1 Port. (Ala.) 433; Millers v. Weeks, 22 Pa. St. 89; Wilson v. Rostall, 4 T. R. 735; Hughes v. Boone, 102 N. Car. 137; People v. Hillhouse, 80 Mich. 580; People v. Gilon (Supreme Ct.), 9 N. Y. Supp. 243.

See ANSWER, vol. 1, p. 601.

4. Bacon v. Frisbie, 80 N. Y. 394; Jones v. State, 65 Miss. 179; Vent v. Pacey, 4 Russ. 193; Woods v. Woods, 4 Hare 83; Johnson v. Sullivan, 23 Mo. 474; Pierson v. Steortz, 1 Morr. (Iowa) 136; Foster v. Hall, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 89; 22 Am. Dec. 400; Beltzhoover v. Blackstock, 3 Watts (Pa.) 20; 27 Am. Dec. 330; McMannus v. State, 2 Head (Tenn.) 213; Cromack v. Hathcote, 4 Moore 357; Clark v. Clark, 1 M. & Rob. 3; Durkee v. Leland, 4 Vt. 615; People v. Barker, 56 Ill. 299; Parkhurst v. McGraw, 24 Miss. 134; Miller v. Weeks, 22 Pa. St. 89; Swift v. Perry, 13 Ga. 138; Whetherbee v. Ezekiel, 25 Vt. 47; McClellan v. Longfellow, 32 Me. 494; 54 Am. Dec. 599; Sargent v. Hampden, 38 Me. 581; Parker v. Carter, 4 Munf. (Va.) 273; 6 Am. Dec. 513; Whiting v. Barney, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 393; Johnson v. Sullivan, 23 Mo. 474; Bigler v. Reyher, 43 Ind. 112; Young v. State, 65 Ga. 525.

Compare Bluck v. Galsworth, 2 Giff. 1153.

proper subject of professional advice.¹ But the relation of attorney and client must exist in order that the communications between them may be privileged.² The communication, however, need not necessarily relate to litigation.³ The rule is not limited in its application to advice given, or opinion stated; it extends to facts communicated by the client and attorney in the course and for the purpose of the business.⁴ Where com-

1. Root v. Wright, 84 N. Y. 72; 38 Am. Rep. 495. See also Williams v. Fitch, 18 N. Y. 550; Johnson v. Sullivan, 23 Mo. 474; Aikin v. Kilborne, 27 Me. 252; March v. Ludlum, 3 Sand. Ch. (N. Y.) 46; Graham v. People, 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 482; Clark v. Richards, 3 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 95; Moore v. Bray, 10 Pa. St. 524; Beltzhoover v. Blackstock, 3 Watts (Pa.) 20; 27 Am. Dec. 330; Foster v. Hall, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 89; 22 Am. Dec. 400; Parker v. Carter, 4 Munf. (Va.) 273; 6 Am. Dec. 513; Britton v. Lorenz, 45 N. Y. 57; Carnes v. Platt, 15 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 337; Bigler v. Reyber, 43 Ind. 112; Bobo v. Bryson, 21 Ark. 387; 76 Am. Dec. 407; McClellan v. Longfellow, 32 Me. 494; 54 Am. Dec. 599; Bank of Utica v. Mersereau, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 528; 49 Am. Dec. 189; Hugh v. Biddulph, 4 Russ. 193; Holmes v. Bad-dely, 1 Ph. 476; Wigram, V. C. in Ld. Walsingham v. Goodricke, 3 Hare 124, citing Bolton v. Corp. of Liverpool, 3 Sim. 467; 1 Myl. & K. 88; Thompson v. Falk, 1 Drew. 21; Goodall v. Little, 1 Sim. N. S. 155; Combs v. Corp. of London, 1 Y. & C. Ch. R. 631; Claggett v. Phillips, 2 Y. & C. Ch. R. 82; Vent v. Pacey, 4 Russ. 193. See also Woods v. Woods, 4 Hare 83; Knight v. Mayor of Waterford, 2 Y. & C. Ex. R. 38; Reese v. Trye, 9 Beav. 316; Adams v. Barry, 2 Y. & C. Ex. R. 167; Curling v. Perring, Myl. & K. 38; Nias v. Northern etc. R. Co., 3 Myl. & Cr. 355; these cases overrule Preston v. Carr, 1 Y. & J. 175; and Newton v. Beresford, 1 You. 376; 1 Taylor Ev., §§ 845, 924; Claggett v. Phillips, 2 Y. & Coll. C. C. 82; Higbee v. Dresser, 103 Mass. 523; Swenk v. People, 20 Ill. App. 111.

Compare In re O'Donohue, 3 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 245; Riggs v. Denniston, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 198; 2 Am. Dec. 145; Whiting v. Barney, 30 N. Y. 330.

2. Cotton v. State, 87 Ala. 75; Sharon v. Sharon, 79 Cal. 633; Brown v. Matthews, 79 Ga. 1; House v. House, 61 Mich. 69; 1 Am. St. Rep. 510; Rom- berg v. Hughes, 18 Neb. 579; Flack v. Neill, 26 Tex. 273; Parkhurst v. McGraw, 24 Miss. 134; Meysenbergh v. Engelke, 18 Mo. App. 346; Pulford's Appeal, 48 Conn. 247; Brayton v. Chase, 3 Wis. 456; Beeson v. Beeson, 9 Pa. St. 279; Granger v. Warrington, 8 Ill. 299; Gillard v. Bates, 6 M. & W. 547; Rex v. Brewer, 6 C. & P. 363; Hill v. Elliott, 5 C. & P. 363; Farquind v. Knight, 2 M. & W. 100; Annesley v. Anglesea, 10 How. St. Tr. 1221; Bramwell v. Lucas, 4 D. & R. 367; Bogert v. Bogert, 2 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 399; Riley v. Johnston, 13 Ga. 260; Branden v. Gowing, 7 Rich. (S. Car.) 459; Parker v. Carter, 4 Munf. (Va.) 273; 6 Am. Dec. 513; Coon v. Swan, 30 Vt. 6; Rockford v. Falver, 27 Ill. App. 604. Compare Bean v. Quimby, 5 N. H. 94.

The rule applies only to licensed attorneys. Holman v. Kimball, 22 Vt. 555.

If, after the relation of attorney and client has ceased, the client voluntarily repeat to the attorney what he had communicated while that relation existed, the attorney is a competent witness as to this communication. Yordan v. Hess, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 492.

Communications made by a client to one whom he supposed to be an attorney, and whom he employed as such, but who, although doing business as a member of the bar, was not in fact admitted at that time, are not privileged. Sample v. Frost, 10 Iowa 266.

In Benedict v. State, 44 Ohio St. 679, communications made to one not an attorney of record but whose regular business had long been that of practicing before a justice of the peace, were held privileged communications. It was so held as to cases where the relation of attorney and client do not exist in fact. Sargent v. Hampden, 38 Me. 581.

3. Carnes v. Platt, 36 N. Y. Super. Ct. 361; 15 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 337; Herring v. Cloberry, 1 Phi. 91. See Whiting v. Barney, 30 N. Y. 330.

4. Lengsfeld v. Richardson, 52 Miss. 443; Bacon v. Frisbie, 15 Hun (N. Y.)

munications are made to an attorney of either of two or more parties in the presence of the others, while he is employed as their common attorney in matters in which they are mutually interested and in which their interests are adverse, such communications are privileged, in a suit between them or either of them and a third person.¹ It makes no difference in regard to the rule as to privileged communications, that the client is not a party to the cause before the court.² So the communications between a party or his legal adviser and his witnesses are privileged.³ The rule applies in criminal as well as in civil cases. An attorney in a criminal case cannot be compelled to disclose anything in evidence against his client either before the grand jury or the court, which has been communicated to him in the course of his employment as the professional adviser of the party. He is bound by the same rules as to confidential communications as in civil procedure.⁴

b. RETAINER NOT ESSENTIAL.—It is not essential that any fee or compensation be actually paid, or even that there should be a general retainer,⁵ and although the attorney is not actually employed at the time of the conversation, yet, if the same is had 26; Causey v. Wiley, 27 Ga. 444. See DeWitt v. Perkins, 22 Wis. 473; Jupp v. Andrews, Cowp. 845; Brown v. Foster, H. & N. 736.

In Andrews v. Thompson, 1 Houst. (Del.) 522, it was held that one who has been attorney and counsel for the plaintiff in an action on trial is incompetent to testify as to any fact coming to his knowledge during his connection with the action, although such connection has ceased with the leave of the court.

The fact of the retainer of counsel or attorney is not a privileged communication. Forshaw v. Lewis, 1 Jur., N. S. 263.

But see Rundle v. Foster, 3 Tenn. Ch. 658; Allen v. Harrison, 30 Vt. 219; Bramwell v. Lucas, 4 D. & R. 367.

Words used by an attorney, in detailing a statement of a case to a person to whom he applies to become security on the bringing of a writ of error, are to be deemed made in the course of judicial proceedings, and privileged, as it seems. Blunt v. Tunts, Anth. (N. Y.) 180.

1. Root v. Wright, 84 N. Y. 72; 38 Am. Rep. 495 (reversing 21 Hun (N. Y.) 344); Hull v. Lyon, 27 Mo. 570; Eadie v. Addison, 52 L. J. Ch. 81; In re Ubsdell, 27 L. T., N. S. 460.

2. Rex v. Wethers, 2 Camp. 578. See Allen v. Harrison, 30 Vt. 219.

3. Story v. Lennox, 1 Myl. & C. 525; Llewellyn v. Baddeley, 1 Hare 527; Curling v. Perring, 2 Myl. & K. 380; Ross v. Gibbs, L. R., 8 Eq. 522; Preston v. Carr, 1 Y. & J. 175; Grandee v. Stamford, 4 De G. & J. 1; Lafoyne v. Falkland Island Co., 4 Kay & J. 34; Hamilton v. Nott, L. R., 16 Eq. 112; Wilosn v. Northampton etc. R. Co., L. R., 14 Eq. 477; Phillips v. Routh, L. R., 7 C. P. 289; Daw v. Eley, 2 Hem. & M. 725; Scranton v. Stewart, 52 Ind. 68.

4. Weeks on Atty's, § 180; Anonymous, 8 Mass. 370; Rex v. Duchess of Kingston, 2 How. St. Tr. 612; State v. Squires, 1 Tyler (Vt.) 147; Rex v. Hawkins, 2 C. & Kir. 823; Rex v. Dixon, 3 Burr. 1687; Rex v. Hayward, 2 C. & Kir. 234; Rex v. Jones, 1 Den. 166; Rex v. Brown, 9 Cox 281; McLellan v. Richardson, 13 Me. 82; Clark v. Field, 12 Vt. 485. Compare Reg. v. Avery, 8 C. & P. 596; White v. Fox, 1 Bibb (Ky.) 369; 4 Am. Dec. 643.

On trial for stealing silver coin, defendant's attorney may not testify that his retainer was paid in silver. State v. Dawson, 90 Mo. 149.

The fact that an attorney's client accused of a crime, turns State's evidence does not entitle the attorney to testify concerning confidential communications. Sutton v. State, 16 Tex. App. 490.

5. Andrews v. Simms, 33 Ark.

in anticipation of employing him, it will come within the letter; the reason, and the spirit of the law.¹

c. WILLINGNESS TO TESTIFY.—It is immaterial that the witness is ready and willing to testify as to confidential communications which are privileged. They are protected as a rule of law, and the courts will interpose and determine from the facts whether the witness was acting in a professional capacity when the communications were made.²

d. IMPORTANCE OF THE COMMUNICATION.—The question, what may be privileged communications does not depend upon their importance or materiality in the prosecution or defense of the suit, but on the character of the communications.³

e. ENJOINING SECRECY UNNECESSARY.—To entitle a client to this protection, it is not essential that he be apprised of it, or that he enjoin secrecy.⁴

f. COMMUNICATIONS THROUGH ATTORNEY'S REPRESENTATIVES.—Communications made through a third person from a client to a solicitor are privileged, if otherwise entitled to be so.⁵ So whoever represents a lawyer in conference or correspondence with the client, is under the same protection as the lawyer himself.⁶

771; Bacon v. Frisbie, 80 N. Y. 394; Cross v. Riggins, 50 Mo. 335; Earle v. Grout, 46 Vt. 113; March v. Ludlum, 3 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 35; Reed v. Smith, 2 Ind. 160; Foster v. Hall, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 89; 22 Am. Dec. 400; Beltzhoover v. Blackstock, 3 Watts (Pa.) 20; 27 Am. Dec. 330; Ross v. Gibbins, L. R. 8 Eq. 522; Thayer v. Thayer, 101 Mass. 111; 100 Am. Dec. 110; McManus v. State, 2 Head (Tenn.) 213.

Compare Thompson v. Kilborne, 28 Vt. 750.

The rule has been held to embrace a case where one seeking counsel pays no fee and employs other attorneys in the prosecution of the business, and even where the lawyer consulted is afterwards employed on the other side. Cross v. Riggins, 50 Mo. 335.

An attorney, however, has been compelled to testify as to non-confidential statements made to him before retainer by one who afterwards became his client. Cutts v. Pickering, 1 Vent. 197; Weeks on Attys., § 154.

1. Young v. State, 65 Ga. 525; Bacon v. Frisbie, 80 N. Y. 394; 36 Am. Rep. 627; Thorp v. Goewey, 85 Ill. 611; Orton v. McCord, 38 Wis. 205; Cross v. Riggins, 50 Mo. 335; Bean v. Quimby, 5 N. H. 94.

2. Bank of Utica v. Mersereau, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 528; 49 Am. Dec.

189; People v. Atkinson, 40 Cal. 284; Foster v. Hall, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 89; 22 Am. Dec. 400; Bacon v. Frisbie, 80 N. Y. 394; 36 Am. Rep. 629.

3. Aiken v. Kilburne, 27 Me. 252.

4. McLellan v. Longfellow, 32 Me. 494; 54 Am. Dec. 599; Wheeler v. Hill, 16 Me. 329.

And declarations made to an attorney with reference to his employment in the cause, fall under the same privilege, although the attorney declines the engagement. Sargent v. Hamden, 38 Me. 581.

5. Bunbury v. Bunbury, 2 Beav. 173; Reid v. Langlois, 1 M. & G. 627; Russell v. Jackson, 9 Hare 387; Lafone v. Falkland Islands Co., 4 K. & J. 34; Original Hartlepool Collieries Co. v. Moon, 30 L. T., N. S. 585; Hooker v. Gumm, 2 John. & H. 602; Page v. Ward, 17 W. R. 435.

Letters relating to the subject-matter of a suit written by the defendant's solicitor to the defendant's agent are not protected from production unless they were written with reference to the dispute between the parties to the suit, and with a view to the defense of the suit. Original Hartlepool Collieries Co. v. Moon, 30 L. T., N. S. 585. Compare Wilson v. Northampton etc. R. Co., 14 L. R. Eq. 477.

6. Steele v. Stewart, 1 Ph. 471; 14

The privilege extends to the attorney's clerk,¹ interpreter,² assistant attorney, or other agent, while in the discharge of his duty; and it covers confidential communications made to him or in his presence or hearing, if made for the purpose of advice or assistance, by the client of the attorney or counselor, as where it is made to an attorney's clerk to enable him to prepare a complaint or other paper.³ The privilege has also been held to extend to a scrivener appointed to raise money,⁴ or a conveyancer employed to draw deeds.⁵ So counsel consulted as to family or other arrangements without reference to litigation are placed under the same restrictions.⁶ A lawyer's executor has also been considered privileged;⁷ but not an ordinary business agent whom the client consults, and who is neither a lawyer nor represents a

L. J., N. S. Ch. 34; Weeks on Attys. 161; Chant v. Brown, 9 Hare 790; Lafone v. Falkland Islands Co., 4 K. & J. 34; Mills v. Oddy, 6 C. & P. 731; Taylor v. Forester, 2 C. & P. 195; Goodell v. Little, 1 Sim., N. S. 155; Walker v. Wildman, 6 Madd. 47; Ross v. Gibbs, L. R., 3 Q. B. 91; Brand v. Brand, 39 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 193; Jackson v. French, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 337; 20 Am. Dec. 699; Fenner v. R. R., L. R., 7 Q. B. 767; Bunbury v. Bunbury, 2 Beav. 173; Parker v. Hawkshaw, 2 Stark. 239; Du Barre v. Livette, Peake R. 77; Carpmeal v. Powis, 9 Beav. 16; Sibley v. Waffle, 16 N. Y. 180; Burtros v. White, L. R., 1 Q. B. 423; Walsham v. Stainton, 9 L. T., N. S. 603; Jenkins v. Bushby, 35 L. J. Ch. 820; Churton v. Frewen, 2 D. & Sm. 390; Hooker v. Gumm, 2 J. & H. Eng. Ch. 662.

The agent of defendant's attorney cannot be examined as to communications with the defendant on the subject of the action in order to prove his identity. Parkins v. Hawkshaw, 2 Stark. 239.

1. Foster v. Hall, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 93; 22 Am. Dec. 400; Du Barre v. Livette, Peake R. 77; Taylor v. Foster, 2 C. & P. 195; Wilson v. Rastall, 4 T. R. 756; Jackson v. French, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 337; 20 Am. Dec. 699; Andrews v. Solomon, Pet. (C. C.) 356; Chant v. Brown, 9 Hare 790; Wheatley v. Williams, 1 M. & W. 553; Mills v. Oddy, 6 C. & P. 731; Rex v. Upper Bodington, 8 D. & R. 725; Bowman v. Norton, 5 C. & P. 177; Landsberger v. Grorham, 5 Cal. 450; Brayton v. Chase, 3 Wis. 458; Sibley v. Waffle, 16 N. Y. 180.

Communications made by a person to an attorney in ignorance of his professional character and without any purpose of securing his professional aid, or to a clerk of an attorney, but of which fact the one making them was ignorant, are not privileged. Hawes v. State, 88 Ala. 37.

2. Jackson v. French, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 339; 20 Am. Dec. 699; Andrews v. Solomon, Pet. (C. C.) 356; Parker v. Carter, 4 Munf. (Va.) 273; 6 Am. Dec. 513; Brayton v. Chase, 3 Wis. 456; Goddard v. Gardner, 28 Conn. 172; Fountain v. Young, 6 Esp. 113; Taylor v. Foster, 2 C. & P. 195; Du Barre v. Livette, Peake 77. See INTERROGATORIES, vol. 11, p. 526.

3. Brand v. Brand, 39 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 193; Jackson v. French, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 337; 20 Am. Dec. 699; Taylor v. Foster, 2 C. & P. 195; Port & Hayne, 1 C. & P. 545; Boman & Norton, 5 C. & P. 177.

But an attorney's clerk is not privileged from answering whether he has received a particular paper from the client. Eicke v. Nokes, M. & M. 303.

4. 1 Whart. Ev., § 581; Turquand v. Knight, 2 M. & W. 100; Harvey v. Clayton, 2 Swan 221. Compare Coon v. Swan, 30 Vt. 6; De Wolf v. Strader, 26 Ill. 225; 72 Am. Dec. 571.

5. Cromack v. Heathcote, 2 B. & B. 4; Carpmeal v. Powis, 1 Ph. 687; Doe v. Seaton, 2 A. & E. 171; Clay v. Williams, 2 Munf. (Va.) 105; 5 Am. Dec. 453; Getzlaff v. Seliger, 43 Wis. 297. See Tarquand v. Knight, 2 M. & W. 100. Compare Matthews' Estate, 1 Phila. (Pa.) 292.

6. 1 Whart. Ev., § 581.

7. Fenwick v. Reed, 1 Mer. 114; Wharton on Ev., § 582.

lawyer.¹ A law student does not come under the category of clerks, and should a client consult a mere student who is not admitted, even though he erroneously thought the student a practicing attorney, the communications are not privileged.²

g. WHO MAY CLAIM THE PRIVILEGE.—The privilege is that of the client and not of the attorney.³ The client may consent to the admission of the testimony or he may waive the privilege by not claiming it, and when the attorney is called upon to testify by the client, or the consent of the latter is shown, the attorney may be compelled to testify.⁴ A sheriff is entitled to the same privilege in his communication with his attorney as other persons.⁵

h. WHEN PRIVILEGE WAIVED.—At common law as well as under the statutes, the protection given to privileged communications continues forever unless waived by the client.⁶ The client may waive the privilege⁷ but such waiver must be distinct and

1. Weeks on Attys., § 161; In re Bellis, 3 Ben. (U. S.) 386; Sample v. Frost, 10 Iowa 266.

It has been held to reach cases in which a person has been consulted under the belief that he was a professional lawyer, although he was not. Calley v. Richards, 19 Beav. 401. And also to cases where the communications were made under the erroneous belief that the party consulted had consented to act as counsel. Smith v. Fell, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 667.

2. Schubkagel v. Dierstein, 131 Pa. St. 46; Holman v. Kimball, 22 Vt. 555; Andrews v. Solomon, Pet. (C. C.) 356; Sibley v. Waffle, 16 N. Y. 180; Landsberger v. Gorham, 5 Col. 450; Barnes v. Harris, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 576; 54 Am. Dec. 734; Fountain v. Young, 6 Esp. 113.

Where a person goes to the office of an attorney at law to obtain professional advice, and there consults a student at law in the office, the communications made by him to the student in the course of such consultation, are not protected from disclosure in court, even if he supposes the student to be an attorney. Barnes v. Harris, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 576; 54 Am. Dec. 734.

3. Parkhurst v. Lowten, 2 Swanst. 216; Gresley v. Mousley, 2 K. & J. 288; Rowland v. Plummer, 50 Ala. 182; Bacon v. Frisbie, 80 N. Y. 394; 36 Am. Rep. 627; Nave v. Baird, 12 Ind. 318; Sleeper v. Abbott, 60 N. H. 162; Tate v. Tate, 75 Va. 522; Bank of Utica v. Mercereau, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 528; 49 Am. Dec. 189; Wilson v. Rastall, 4 L. R. 753; Herring v. Claberry, 11 L.

J., N. S., Ch. 149; Greenland v. King, 1 Beav. 137; In re Cameron's Coalbrook R. Co., 25 Beav. 1.

4. Benjamin v. Coventry, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 353; Riddles v. Aikin, 29 Mo. 453; Wood v. Thornby, 58 Ill. 464; Rowland v. Plummer, 50 Ala. 182; Fossler v. Schriber, 38 Ill. 172; Hamilton v. People, 29 Mich. 175; Wilson v. Rostall, 4 T. R. 759; Herring v. Claberry, 1 Ph. 96; Sandford v. Remington, 2 Ves. Jr. 189; Lea v. Wheatley, 20 How. St. Tr. 574; Baillie's Case, 21 How. St. Tr. 341; Merle v. Moore, R. & M. 390.

5. Paxton v. Steckel, 2 Pa. St. 93.

6. Hutton v. Robinson, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 416; 25 Am. Dec. 415; Bank of Utica v. Mercereau, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 528; 49 Am. Dec. 189; Yordan v. Hess, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 492; Chase's Case, 1 Bland's Ch. (Md.) 206; 17 Am. Dec. 277; Bacon v. Frisbie, 80 N. Y. 394; 36 Am. Rep. 627; Wilson v. Rastall, 4 T. R. 759; Parker v. Yates, 12 Moore 520; Calley v. Richards, 19 Beav. 401; Marriott v. Anchor Reversionary Co., 8 Jur., N. S. 51. See Moxhay v. Liederwick, 9 Jur. 343.

Compare Charlton v. Combes, 32 L. J. Ch. 284.

7. Alberti v. New York etc. R. Co., 118 N. Y. 77; Thompson v. Ish, 99 Mo. 160; In re Coleman's Will, 111 N. Y. 220; Hunt v. Blackburn, 128 U. S. 464; Jones v. State, 65 Miss. 179; Passmore v. Passmore, 50 Mich. 626; 45 Am. Rep. 62; Hamilton v. People, 29 Mich. 184; Chase's Case, 1 Bland Ch. (Md.) 206; 17 Am. Dec. 177; Foster v. Hall, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 89; 22 Am. Dec. 400; Benjamin v. Coventry, 19

unconditional.¹ It is not extinguished by agreement or compromise² or by becoming a witness and testifying in his own behalf.³ Where a party gives evidence in his own behalf, he cannot, on cross-examination, be compelled to divulge statements made by him when consulting, as a client, an attorney at law.⁴ But he may waive the privilege by calling upon the attorney to testify.⁵ Not claiming the privilege may amount to a waiver.⁶

i. ATTORNEY ACTING FOR SEVERAL CLIENTS.—Where the privilege belongs to several clients, it seems that neither one of them, nor even a majority, contrary to the express will of the others, can waive the privilege so as to warrant the attorney in giving testimony in relation to such privileged communications.⁷ So an attorney cannot testify as to what transpired between such Wend. (N. Y.) 353; Fossler v. Schriber, 38 Ill. 172; Rowland v. Plummer, 50 Ala. 182; Duttenhofer v. State, 34 Ohio St. 91; 32 Am. Dec. 362; Hatton v. Robinson, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 416; 25 Am. Dec. 415; McLellan v. Longfellow, 32 Me. 494; 54 Am. Dec. 599; Sleeper v. Abbott, 60 N. H. 162; Oliver v. Cameron, 4 McArthur (D. C.) 237; Merle v. Moore, R. & M. 390; Baile's Case, 2 How. St. Tr. 341; Sea v. Wheatley, C. B. Pav. 30; Blenkinsop, 17 L. J. Ch. 343; Chant v. Brown, 7 Hare 79.

It is a rule for the protection of the client, that he may present his case to his counsel in the fullest confidence. If the client waive the privilege, the attorney may testify; otherwise it never ceases. 1 Phil. Evid. 108; 1 Greenl. Evid., § 243; Bacon v. Frisbie, 80 N. Y. 394; 36 Am. Rep. 627.

The client may waive the obligation, and the heir of the client is entitled to the same privilege. Fossler v. Schriber, 38 Ill. 172.

Counsel professionally consulted may be required to testify, if the privilege be waived by the party who consulted him, although the interest in the subject-matter of the confidential communication has passed to a third person, who objects to the disclosure. Benjamin v. Coventry, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 353.

1. Tate v. Tate, 75 Va. 522.

2. Hughes v. Garnous, 6 Beav. 252; Turney v. Bailey, 34 Beav. 105.

3. Jones v. State, 65 Miss. 179. See Bigler v. Reyher, 43 Ind. 112; Duttenhofer v. State, 34 Ohio St. 91; 32 Am. Dec. 362; Barker v. Kuhn, 38 Iowa 395; Bobo v. Bryson, 21 Ark. 387; 76 Am. Dec. 407; State v. White, 19 Kan. 445; 27 Am. Rep. 137.

4. Duttenhofer v. State, 34 Ohio St. 91; 32 Am. Dec. 362; Baker v. Kuhn, 38 Iowa 392; Alderman v. People, 4 Mich. 414; 69 Am. Dec. 321; Oliver v. Pate, 43 Ind. 132; Bigler v. Reyher, 43 Ind. 112; Hemenway v. Smith, 28 Vt. 701; Bobo v. Bryson, 21 Ark. 387; 76 Am. Dec. 407. In Massachusetts the rule is otherwise. See Woburn v. Henshaw, 101 Mass. 193; 3 Am. Rep. 333; and so in Ohio. King v. Barrett, 11 Ohio St. 261; though, in Ohio, the statute governs the case. But when one jointly indicted with others, turns State's evidence and attempts to convict others by testimony which also convicts himself, he cannot claim that communications made by himself to his attorney are privileged. Jones v. State, 65 Miss. 179.

5. Smith v. Crego, 54 Hun (N. Y.) 22; Fassler v. Schriber, 38 Ill. 172; Benjamin v. Coventry, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 353; Riddles v. Alkin, 29 Mo. 453; Crittenden v. Strother, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 464.

If the client examines his attorney as to the communications, he waives his privilege and the attorney is bound to testify upon cross-examination. Vailant v. Dodemead, 2 Atk. 524; Waldron v. Ward, Style 449; Bate v. Kinsey, 1 C. M. & R. 38.

6. Weeks v. Attys., § 177; Hunter v. Capron, 5 Beav. 93; Thomas v. Rawlings, 27 Beav. 140; Walsh v. Trevannion, 15 Sim. 577; Dartmouth v. Holdsworth, 10 Sim. 476.

7. Bank of Utica v. Mercereau, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 528; 49 Am. Dec. 189; Whiting v. Barney, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 393; Chahoon v. Com., 21 Gratt. (Va.) 822; Root v. Wright, 84 N. Y. 72; 38 Am. Rep. 495; Robson v. Kemp, 4 Esp. 233; McLellan v. Longfellow, 32 parties and a third person, unless all the parties for whom he acted consent.¹ Nor can an attorney be permitted to testify what his client told him before action brought that he intended to waive the forfeiture on which the action is founded.²

j. NEGOTIATIONS RESPECTING THE SALE OR MORTGAGE OF PROPERTY.—The privilege of communications between solicitor and client extends to all matters within the scope of the ordinary duties of a solicitor, and the sale of estates being of such matters, a solicitor is not at liberty to disclose what passed in conversations which he had either with the client or the agent of the client, relative to the amount of the bidding to be reserved upon the sale of an estate in which he had been concerned for him, or to other matters connected with such sale.³ But the privilege does not extend to declarations made to one employed merely to prepare a mortgage.⁴ So what a mortgagor in a treaty to raise money says to the attorney is not a privileged communication.⁵

k. ADMISSIONS addressed to an attorney in order to elicit a legal opinion from him touching the rights of the parties, as between themselves, are entitled to the protection accorded to com-

Me. 494; 54 Am. Dec. 599; Strode v. Seaton, 2 A. & E. 171; People v. Barker, 56 Ill. 299.

1. Micheal v. Foil, 100 N. Car. 178.

2. Goodlight v. Bridge; Laff 27.

3. Carpmacel v. Powis, 1 Ph. 687; Mynn v. Joliffe, 1 M. & Rob. 326. See Barry v. Coville, 53 Hun (N. Y.) 620.

4. Machette v. Wanless, 2 Colo. 169; Prouty v. Eaton, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 409.

Statements by the purchaser of mortgaged property to an attorney whom he had employed to draw the conveyance, and whom he wished to retain "to keep the mortgage alive," but who declined that employment, are not privileged. Theisen v. Dayton (Iowa 1891), 47 N. W. Rep. 891.

5. Marston v. Downs, 4 N. & M. 861.

A took a forged will to B, a solicitor, and asked him to advance money on a mortgage of the property mentioned in the will. B made no charge for the interview, and did not advance the money. Held, not a privileged communication. Reg v. Farley, 1 Den. C. C. 197; 2 C. & K. 313.

Assignment of Mortgage.—Communications of the object for which an assignment of a mortgage was made, to a counsel concerned for the assignee, on the distribution of the proceeds of the mortgaged premises, are privileged although no question then arose as to the object of the assignment, and the counsel considered the communications in the light of a casual conversation. Moore v. Bray, 10 Pa. St. 519.

An attorney-at-law employed to draw an assignment of a mortgage, acts as an attorney and not as a notary merely; and the court should not permit him as a witness to testify against his client as to disclosures made to him by the latter in the course of such employment. Getzlaff v. Seliger, 43 Wis. 297.

Ejectment.—A applied to B, an attorney, to raise money upon certain property, and enabled him to obtain an abstract of the title and compare it with the original, but the money was never raised. In an ejectment, B was called upon to produce the abstract as secondary evidence of an original deed stated therein. Held, that A's communication was confidential, and that B's evidence was therefore inadmissible. Doe v. Watkins, 4 Scott 155.

Foreclosure of Mortgage.—Where a solicitor who had been employed to foreclose a mortgage was asked as a witness before an examination, whether he had received any instructions from the complainants, his clients, as to the sale thereunder and the amount to be bid, he was excused from answering. Stuyvesant v. Peckham, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 579.

munications made to an attorney in professional confidence, and are therefore privileged.¹

l. PROFESSIONAL ADVISERS OF STRANGERS TO THE SUIT.—The rule extends to the professional advisers of strangers to the suit,² as for instance to disclosures in regard to the contents of title-deeds of strangers when the deeds are confidentially deposited.³

m. DEFECTIVE MEMORY.—Privileged communications made to counsel should not be allowed to be disclosed on the grounds that owing to defective memory of the witness, he cannot positively state whether they were privileged or not.⁴

n. COMMUNICATIONS NOT PRIVILEGED.—(1) Generally.—Communications made by a client where the relation of attorney and client does not exist, are not privileged.⁵ So with communications that do not come within the peculiar scope of the lawyer's

1. Bowers v. Briggs, 20 Ind. 139; Borum v. Fouts, 15 Ind. 50; Pearsall v. Elmer, 5 Redf. (N. Y.) 181.

A, who was a foreigner unacquainted with the English language, being about to sue B for a debt, engaged C to act as her agent and interpreter in stating the case to attorneys, in order to employ them to bring the suit. Suit having been brought and C having sworn to an admission made to him by B of his indebtedness to A, B (having first laid the proper foundation for the question), offered to prove by said attorney that C in his statement of the case to them had said that he had never heard such admission. The attorney having declined to answer the question, held that the evidence was inadmissible. Maas v. Bloch, 7 Ind. 202. Where by the admissions of a party, a champertous contract was established between him and his attorney, it was held that such attorney was not a competent witness to prove the falsity of his client's statements, and that no such contract was entered into. Dowell v. Dowell, 3 Head (Tenn.) 502.

2. Soloman v. Horne, 2 Esp. 696; Merle v. Moore, R. & M. 390; Bowman v. Norton, 5 C. & P. 177; Rex v. Withers, 12 Camp. 578. See Chant v. Brown, 12 Eng. L. & E. 299; Higgs v. Taylor, 1 C. & K. 85.

3. Weeks on Atty's, § 172.

4. People v. Atkinson, 40 Cal. 284.

5. Sharon v. Sharon, 79 Cal. 636; Althouse v. Wells, 40 Hun (N. Y.) 336; Wilson v. Godlove, 34 Mo. 337; Lynde v. McGregor, 13 Allen (Mass.) 172; 90 Am. Dec. 188; Fulton v. Macracken, 18 Md. 528; 81 Am. Dec. 620;

Pitchard v. Roe, 8 C. & P. 99; Shore v. Bedford, 5 M. & G. 271; Brayton v. Chase, 3 Wis. 456; Williams v. Benton, 12 La. Ann. 91; Tucker v. Finch, 66 Wis. 17; Sharman v. Morton, 31 Ga. 34; Clark v. Richards, 3 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 89; Hall v. Rixey, 84 Va. 790; State v. Gleason (Oregon 1890), 23 Pac. Rep. 817; Martin v. Platt, 51 Hun (N. Y.) 429; Piano Mfg. Co. v. Frawley, 68 Wis. 577.

The employment of an attorney in an action will not exempt him from testifying to any communication made to him by his client previous to the employment. Harris v. Daugherty, 74 Tex. 1.

Communications voluntarily made to counsel after he has refused to be employed by the party making them are not privileged. Setzar v. Wilson, 4 Ired. (N. Car.) 501.

Where an attorney is applied to as a friend and acts as a friend, he may be required to disclose the communications made to him. Goltra v. Wolcott, 14 Ill. 89; Hoffman v. Smith, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 157; Borum v. Fouts, 15 Ind. 50; Thompson v. Kilborne, 28 Vt. 750; Cady v. Walker, 62 Mich. 157; and where the attorney for a county official sues his principal for money paid to his use in satisfying his bond to the public, the testimony of the prosecuting attorney is not privileged if he obtained his information as the law officer of the county, and as a member of a committee appointed to obtain a surrender of the principal's property in settlement of his liabilities to the public. Lange v. Perley, 47 Mich. 352.

So where disputes arise between two cestuis que trustent in respect of the duty and profession,¹ where they have no element of confidence in them of which the attorney is competent to testify,² where no trust matters and the trustee acts as solicitor for one, communications between such solicitor and cestui que trust, are not privileged as against the other. Tugwell v. Hooper, 10 Beav. 348; Pritchard v. Foulkes, C. P. C. 14.

1. Brown v. Jewett, 120 Mass. 215; Johnson v. Davenport, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 134; 10 Am. Dec. 108; Bramwell v. Lucas, 2 B. & C. 86; Rex v. Leveson, 11 Cox C. C. 152; Carpmeal v. Powis, 1 Ph. 687; Brown v. Foster, 1 H. & N. 736; Goodall v. Little, 20 L. J. Ch. 132; Wheatley v. Williams, 1 M. & W. 533; Jones v. Goodrich, 5 Moore P. C. 16; Desborough v. Rawlins, 3 Myl. & C. 515; Smith v. Daniel, L. R., 18 Eq. 649; Clark v. Richards, 3 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 89; Pierson v. Steortz, Morr. (Iowa) 36; Studdy v. Sanders, 2 D. & R. 347; Doe v. Andrews, 2 Cowp. 846; Hurd v. Moring, 1 C. & P. 372; Ramsbotham v. Senior, L. R., 8 Eq. 575; Ex parte Campbell, L. R., 5 Ch. App. 703; Gillard v. Bates, 6 M. & W. 547; Annesley v. Anglesea, 11 How. St. Tr. 1220.

2. Chapman v. Peebles, 84 Ala. 283; Johnson v. Patterson, 13 Lea (Tenn.) 626; Milan v. State, 24 Ark. 346; Rogers v. Dare, Wright (Ohio) 136; Rhoades v. Selin, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 718.

Wills.—An attorney who drew a will may testify on its probate to what transpired between the testator and himself in the course of its preparation and publication. In re Austin, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 516.

Communications Relating to Contracts.—Directions by a client to his attorney to make a certain contract, were held after its execution not to constitute a privileged communication. Burnside v. Terry, 51 Ga. 186. See Northampton etc. R. Co., 20 W. R. 938.

Where two contracting parties employ an attorney to draw up their contract, and make their communications to him in the presence of each other, each thereby waives as against the other his right to treat those communications as confidential, and each is entitled in asserting his rights under the contract to a disclosure of its stipulations from the attorney. Parish v. Gates, 29 Ala. 254; Whiting v. Barney, 30 N. Y. 330; Warde v. Warde, 5 Eng. L. & Eq. 217.

Deeds.—Communications made to an attorney in the course of his employment as a scrivener to draw a deed, are not privileged. Caldwell v. Davis, 10 Colo. 481. See Brazee v. Fair, 26 S. Car. 370; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Corey, 54 Hun (N. Y.) 493; Sheldon v. Sheldon, 58 Hun (N. Y.) 601.

Whether a deed drawn by an attorney for his client was written subsequent to the day of its date and after a certain suit, was held to be a question of fact and not privileged. Rundle v. Foster, 3 Tenn. Ch. 658.

Instructions by a grantor to an attorney drawing a deed are not ordinarily privileged communications. If the grantor had instructed the attorney to make the conveyance to the grantee in trust, it would be competent for the attorney to testify to that fact. Todd v. Munson, 53 Conn. 579.

In Hebbard v. Haughian, 70 N. Y. 54, it was held that an attorney who was employed to draw a deed is competent to testify as to the directions received by him from the parties and as to the transactions between them at the time, and that knowledge acquired under such circumstances is not within the class of privileged communications. Compare Gruber v. Baker, 20 Nev. 453; Barry v. Coville, 53 Hun (N. Y.) 620.

An attorney for a trust estate was employed to draw a deed from the trustee to the cestui que trust and a mortgage back. Held, that the statements made in his presence by one to the other, were not privileged. Moffatt v. Hardin, 22 S. Car. 9.

Garnishment.—See GARNISHMENT, vol. 8, p. 1205.

Impeachment of Witness.—For the purpose of impeaching a witness, a prosecuting attorney may be compelled to testify as to a statement made by the witness before the grand jury. This is not a privileged communication. State v. Van Buskirk, 59 Ind. 384.

Indorsement of Drafts.—A and B employed an attorney to prepare a paper authorizing C to indorse their drafts and receive the money. In a suit brought by A against C to recover the proceeds of a draft, it was held that the attorney might testify that in a conversation had in his office between A and legal advice is given,¹ or where they do not relate to the subject-matter of the consultation.² Communications made by one party to a mutual attorney for the purpose of being forwarded to the other party, are not privileged,³ and where persons employ an

B, C not being present, it was agreed to give C the drafts as his own. House v. House, 61 Mich. 69; 1 Am. St. Rep. 570; Cady v. Walker, 62 Mich. 157.

Interrogatories.—The statute, by which attorneys were prohibited from giving testimony for or against their clients, does not include proving service of notices, interrogatories and such matters which could be proved by the client himself. Rogers v. Hoskins, 15 Ga. 270; Collins v. Johnson, 16 Ga. 458.

Where interrogatories were addressed to an attorney, to ascertain who was his client, when that relationship commenced and ended, and what money had been received, and what paid over, and to whom paid, it was held that none of these matters were privileged communications within the meaning of article 2262 of the Louisiana Civil Code. Shaughnessy v. Fogg, 15 La. Ann. 330.

The service of a copy of interrogatories upon an attorney is not such "a matter or thing acquired from his client, or during the existence and by reason of the relationship of client and attorney," under the St. of 1850, as to be regarded as a confidential communication. McDougald v. Lane, 18 Ga. 444.

Non-feasance of Officer.—So an attorney of record in a former suit is competent to testify, in an action against an officer for not seizing goods on an execution, that he delivered the execution to the officer within thirty days after rendition of judgment in the suit in which he was attorney. Phillips v. Bridge, 11 Mass. 242.

Note.—An admission made by a party to an attorney relative to his liability on a note, is not privileged. Plano Mfg. Co. v. Frawley, 68 Wis. 577.

1. Marsh v. Howe, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 649; Alderman v. People, 4 Mich. 414; 69 Am. Dec. 321; Flack v. Neill, 26 Tex. 273; Lynde v. McGregor, 13 Allen (Mass.) 172; 90 Am. Dec. 188; Bramwell v. Lucas, 4 D. & R. 367; DeWolfe v. Strader, 26 Ill. 225; 72 Am. Dec. 371; Hatton v. Robinson, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 416; 25 Am. Dec. 415; Chew v. Farmers' Bank, 2 Md. Ch. 231; Milan v. State, 24 Ark. 346; Pierson v. Steortz, 1 Morr. (Iowa) 136; Rogers v.

Dare, Wright (Ohio) 136; Beeson v. Beeson, 9 Pa. St. 279; Braden v. Gowling, 7 Rich. (S. Car.) 459.

An attorney who is merely employed to draw up the necessary papers to consummate a contract to which the parties had agreed, no legal advice being asked or required, is not privileged, and may testify as to what comes to his knowledge in connection with the transaction. Smith v. Long, 106 Ill. 485; Borum v. Fouts, 15 Ind. 50.

An attorney who is merely employed to draw a deed or mortgage without giving any legal advice in regard thereto, cannot decline to testify to statements made by his employer, on the ground that they are privileged communications. De Wolf v. Strader, 26 Ill. 225; 72 Am. Dec. 371.

A debtor requested an attorney at law to draw up a mortgage of his personal property, and disclosed the purpose of the transaction, but neither asked nor received any legal advice as to its effect. Held, that the attorney's testimony as to such disclosure was admissible. Hatton v. Robinson, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 416; 25 Am. Dec. 415.

2. State v. Mewherter, 16 Iowa 88; Riggs v. Denniston, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 198; 2 Am. Dec. 145; Pierson v. Steortz, 1 Morr. (Iowa) 136; Mandeville v. Guernsey, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 225; De Witt v. Perkins, 22 Wis. 473; Cobden v. Kendrick, 4 T. R. 431; Gillard v. Bates, 6 M. & W. 547.

Statements made by an attorney are not privileged, merely because the attorney has at different times transacted business for the party making the statements, they not being made in reference to any business that he was then transacting, nor in connection with professional employment. Carroll v. Spragne, 59 Cal. 655; Rice v. Rice, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 335; De Witt v. Perkins, 22 Wis. 473; Com. v. Goddard, 14 Gray (Mass.) 402; Waldo v. Beckwith, 1 N. Mex. 97.

3. White v. State, 86 Ala. 69; Hughes v. Boone, 102 N. Car. 137; Michael v. Foil, 100 N. Car. 178; Perry v. Smith, 9 M. & W. 681; Spencely v. Schulenburg, 7 East 357; Baugh v. Pradocke, 1 M. & R. 182; Desborough v. Raw- attorney in the same business, communications made by them in pursuance of such common retainer are not privileged inter sese.¹ So the attorney is bound to testify, like any other witness, to statements made by the client to other persons, or by other persons to the client, or to each other in his presence.² Where both parties are present declarations to an attorney are not privileged communications.³ Nor does the rule of privilege, protecting confidential communications, extend to communications between the solicitors of opposite parties.⁴

Communications made by a party to a suit to an attorney to be communicated to the adverse party are not privileged.⁵ So communications made by persons other than the client, are not lins, Myl. & C. 515; Cady v. Walker, 62 Mich. 157; Bartlett v. Bunn, 56 Hun (N. Y.) 507.

Compare Eadie v. Addison, 52 L. J. Ch. 81.

Communications made by the plaintiff's assignor in trust for creditors, in the presence of the defendant, to the attorney employed to draw the papers between them were held not privileged. Britton v. Lorenz, 45 N. Y. 52.

1. Gulick v. Gulick, 39 N. J. Eq. 516; Sherman v. Scott, 27 Hun (N. Y.) 331; Cady v. Walker, 62 Mich. 157; Haulon v. Doherty, 109 Ind. 37; Goodwin Gas Stove etc. Co.'s Appeal, 117 Pa. St. 514; Doe v. Watkins, 3 Bing. N. Cas. 421; Reg. v. Farley, 2 C. & K. 318; Rex v. Boddington, 8 D. & R. 726; Baugh v. Cradocke, 1 M. & Rob. 182; Cleeve & Powell, 1 M. & Rob. 228; Perry v. Smith, 9 M. & W. 681; Sael v. Carr, C. & M. 123; In re Ubadell, 27 L. T., N. S. 460; Carr v. Weld, 19 N. J. Eq. 319; Greenl. Ev., § 239 a; 1 Whart. on Ev., § 587; Warde v. Warde, 3 M. & G. 365; Rice v. Rice, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 335; Robson v. Kemp, 4 Esp. 235.

Compare Reg. v. Avery, 8 C. & P. 596; Fylney, 18 L. J., M. C. 37.

Where an attorney is the legal adviser of both the parties to an action, communications from each received in the presence of the other in reference to papers being prepared at the instance of both, are not privileged. Goodwin Gas etc. Co.'s Appeal, 117 Pa. St. 514; Parish v. Gates, 29 Ala. 254; Warde v. Warde, 5 Eng. L. & Eq. 217; Whiting v. Barney, 30 N. Y. 330; Shore v. Bedford, 5 M. & G. 271; Reynolds v. Sprye, 10 Beav. 51; Earle v. Grout, 46 Vt. 113; Hatton v. Robinson, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 416; 25 Am. Dec. 415; Corbett v. Gilbert, 24 Ga. 454.

A lawyer was employed by the defendant to draw a deed for lands from him to a third party, and one from the third party to defendant's wife, and also a declaration of trust from her to the defendant. The first deed and the declaration of trust were duly executed on the same day, but the second deed was not executed until some time afterwards. The lawyer then advised that a new declaration of trust should be given by the wife, which was done. In a controversy between the husband and his wife over the new declaration of trust, the lawyer was called as a witness by the wife to testify as to what was said by the parties to those transactions, and objection was made to his testimony on the ground that what was said to him by the husband was privileged. Held, that the objection could not be maintained. Gulick v. Gulick, 39 N. J. Eq. 516.

2. Hughes v. Boone, 102 N. Car. 137; Gallagher v. Williamson, 23 Cal. 331; Griffith v. Davis, 5 B. & A. 503; Repon v. Davis, 2 N. & M. 210; Turner v. Bailton, 2 Esp. 274; Desborough v. Rawlins, 3 Myl. & C. 515; Jackson v. French, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 337; 20 Am. Dec. 699; Goddard v. Gardner, 28 Conn. 172; Mobile etc. R. Co. v. Yeates, 67 Ala. 164; House v. House, 61 Mich. 69; 1 Am. St. Rep. 570.

3. Colt v. McConnell, 116 Ind. 249; In re Bauer's Estate, 79 Cal. 304; Cady v. Walker, 62 Mich. 157; Smith v. Crego, 54 Hun (N. Y.) 22; Dikeman v. Arnold, 78 Mich. 455; Goodwin's Gas etc. Co.'s Appeal, 117 Pa. St. 514.

4. Gore v. Harris, 2 Eng. L. & Eq. 147.

5. Henderson v. Terry, 62 Tex. 281; Ripon v. Davies, 2 N. & M. 310.

privileged.¹ Professional communications are not privileged when such communications are for an unlawful purpose, having for their object the commission of a crime.² So a witness may be asked whether he had been retained by a party as counsel or attorney.³ He may prove matters which occurred on the trial in open court against his client, as for instance, what title was in question therein.⁴ So he may testify as to acts which have come to his knowledge by being done in his presence, though he was present in consequence of his engagement as counsel.⁵ And an at-

1. Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Reynolds, 36 Mich. 502; Randolph v. Quidnick Co., 23 Fed. Rep. 278; Perkins v. Guy, 55 Miss. 153.

This is the rule even where the client has given the same information. Marsh v. Keith, 1 D. & S. 342; Lewis v. Pennington, 20 L. J. Ch. 670; Davies v. Waters, 9 M. & W. 611; Follett v. Jefferyes, 1 Sim., N. S. 3; Greenough v. Gaskell, 1 Myl. & K. 104; Mackenzie v. Yeo, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 866; Crosby v. Berger, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 377; 42 Am. Dec. 117; Howard v. Copely, 10 La. Ann. 504; Chillicothe Ferry etc. Co. v. Jameson, 48 Ill. 281; Thompson v. Wilson, 29 Ga. 539; Hatton v. Robinson, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 416; 25 Am. Dec. 415.

2. Hughes v. Boone, 102 N. Car. 137; People v. Van Alstine, 57 Mich. 69; Dudley v. Beck, 3 Wis. 274; Bank of Utica v. Mersereau, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 528; 49 Am. Dec. 189; Graham v. People, 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 483; People v. Sheriff, 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 622; People v. Mahon, 1 Utah 205; Orman v. State, 22 Tex. App. 604; 58 Am. Rep. 662; Coveney v. Fannahill, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 33; 27 Am. Rep. 287; People v. Blakeley, 4 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 176; Reg. v. Brewer, C. & P. 363; Charlton v. Coombs, 32 L. J. Ch. 289; Rex v. Farley, 1 Den. C. C. 197; Reg. v. Jones, 1 Den. C. C. 166; Bank v. Rich, 32 L. J., Q. B. 300; Blight v. Goodliffe, 18 C. B., N. S. 757; Goodman v. Holroyd, 15 C. B., N. S. 839; Gore v. Bowser, 5 De G. & S. 30; Mornington v. Mornington, 2 Johns. & H. 697; Annesley v. Angelsea, 17 How. St. Tr. 1139; State v. Douglass, 20 W. Va. 770; Russell v. Jackson, 9 Hare 387; Reg. v. Avery, 8 C. & P. 596; Clay v. Williams, 2 Munf. (Va.) 105; 5 Am. Dec. 453. See also Tyler v. Tyler, 126 Ill. 525; 9 Am. St. Rep. 642.

An attorney may be ordered to be examined against his client in case of fraud. Cutts v. Pickering, 3 Ch. Rep.

66; Gore v. Bowser, 5 De G. & S. 30; Gore v. Harris, 21 L. J., N. S. Ch. 10; Hawkins v. Gathercole, 1 Sim., N. S. 150; Gresley v. Mousley, 2 K. & J. 288; Reynell v. Sprye, 11 Beav. 618; Kelley v. Jackson, 13 Ir. Eq. R. 129; Gartside v. Outram, 3 Jur., N. S. 39; Flaver v. Williams, 11 Jur., N. S. 902; Russell v. Jackson, 9 Hare 389.

Communications for an unlawful purpose "partake of the nature of a conspiracy, or attempted conspiracy, and it is not only lawful to divulge such communications, but under certain circumstances it might become the duty of the attorney to do so. The interest of public justice require that no such shield from merited exposure shall be interposed to protect a person who takes counsel how he can safely commit a crime. The relation of attorney and client cannot exist for the purpose of counsel in concocting crimes. The privilege does not exist in such cases." People v. Van Alstine, 57 Mich. 69.

3. White v. State, 86 Ala. 69; Hampton v. Boylan, 46 Hun (N. Y.) 151; Mobile etc. R. Co. v. Yeates, 67 Ala. 164; Chirac v. Reinicker, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 280; Sattilee v. Bliss, 36 Cal. 489; Reindecker v. Waldron, 52 Ill. 283; Gower v. Emery, 18 Me. 79; Brigham v. McDowell, 19 Neb. 407; Levy v. Pope, M. & M. 410; Forshaw v. Lewis, Jur., N. S. 263.

It is not an error to permit an attorney, as a witness, to answer a question, the object of which was merely to ascertain whether the relation of attorney and client actually existed, not what was disclosed to him in that relation. Such question calls for no breach of professional confidence. Leindecker v. Waldron, 52 Ill. 283.

4. Chirac v. Reinicker, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 280.

5. Patten v. Moor, 29 N. H. 163. See Hunter v. Watson, 12 Cal. 363; 73 Am. Dec. 543.

torney may testify as to the handwriting of his client, if a knowledge thereof is acquired without any communication from him.¹ He may be asked to supply the predicate for secondary evidence of a deed, whether he or the client has the deed.² An attorney may be asked whether his client signed a bail bond,³ whether a note put into his hands for collection was indorsed or not,⁴ and whether he has a paper in court relating to the cause, in order that a notice to produce it immediately may be a sufficient and reasonable notice.⁵ An attorney who has appeared for a party without authority is a competent witness to prove that fact.⁶ And also to prove the execution of a power to himself, where he appears under a power.⁷

(2) Compromises and Agreements.—A party may call an attorney to prove an offer of compromise by him on the part of his client.⁸ So agreements made in the presence of an attorney between his client and the opposite party, are not privileged communications.⁹

If an attorney were present when his client was sworn to answer, he might be a witness on an indictment for perjury, to prove the fact of taking the oath, it not being a fact peculiarly within his knowledge as an attorney, and not communicated to him in secrecy. Jupp v. Andrews, Cowp. 846. See Duffin v. Smith, Peake 108. So the attorney may testify as to the identity of parties, though except from his intercourse with them professionally, he would know nothing of them. Hurd v. Moring, 1 C. & P. 372; Beckwith v. Benner, 6 C. & P. 681; Eicke v. Nokes, M. & M. 303; Study v. Sanders, 3 D. & R. 347; Rex v. Watkinson, 2 Strange 1122.

1. Johnson v. Daverne, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 134; 10 Am. Dec. 198; Chant v. Browne, 12 Eng. L. & Eq. 299; Hurd v. Moring, 1 C. & P. 372; Coates v. Birch, 2 Q. B. 252; Bevans v. Waters, M. & M. 235.

An attorney cannot be compelled to testify whether or not a certain guaranty written above the payee's name and in a different handwriting on the back of a note, was there when placed in his hands for collection. Dietrich v. Mitchell, 43 Ill. 40; 92 Am. Dec. 99.

2. Zabel v. Schroeder, 35 Tex. 308; Weeks on Atty's, § 171. See Cutts v. Pickering, 1 Vent. 197.

3. Hurd v. Moring, 1 C. & P. 345.

4. Baker v. Arnold, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 258; Weeks on Atty's, § 171.

5. Weeks on Atty's, § 171; Rhoades v. Selin, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 718.

6. Cox v. Hill, 3 Ohio 411.

7. Caniff v. Myers, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 246.

8. Turner v. Railton, 2 Esp. 474. See Burchall v. Spottiswoode, 3 C. & K. 302; M'Tavish v. Denning, Anth. (N. Y.) 113; Yordan v. Hess, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 492; Baugh v. Cradock, 1 M. & Rob. 182; Reynell v. Sprye, 10 Beav. 57; Perry v. Smith, 9 M. & W. 681; Cleve v. Powell, 1 M. & Rob. 228; Gulick v. Gulick, 39 N. J. Eq. 402; Gainsford v. Grammar, 2 Camp. 9; Chickering v. Brooks, 61 Vt. 554.

A witness may be called upon by the plaintiff to state a conversation, in which the defendant proposed a compromise to the plaintiff, although the witness attended on that occasion as attorney for the defendant. Griffith v. Davies, 5 B. & Ad. 502.

A letter from one of the parties, proposing a compromise, is not a privileged communication, if tendered as evidence that a compromise had actually been effected. Collier v. Nokes, 2 C. & K. 1012.

Attorney's Clerk.—Where the clerk of the plaintiff's attorney went to the defendant's attorney for the object of effecting a compromise, and what he said was said with the wish of effecting it—held, that all that passed was privileged as being a negotiation to bring about a compromise. Jardine v. Sheridan, 2 C. & P. 24.

9. Hughes v. Boone, 102 N. Car. 137; Carr v. Weld, 19 N. J. Eq. 319; Thayer v. McEwen, 4 Ill. App. 416; Parish v. Gates, 29 Ala. 254; Whiting v. Barney, 30 N. Y. 330; Warde v. Warde, 5

(3) Disclosures for Protection of Attorney.—The general rule that an attorney cannot, as a witness against his client, disclose confidential communications, does not apply where the client sues the attorney for disobeying instructions alleged to have been given in such consultations, and for unskillfully managing a cause upon information given by the client in them.¹

(4) Cross-Examination of Attorneys.—Where an attorney is offered as a witness by his client, he cannot claim his privilege on cross-examination.² So an attorney may be compelled on cross-examination by interrogatories, to produce letters relating to the subject-matter, if he does not state that they are confidential.³

(5) Communications with Third Persons.—A third person who overhears a confidential communication between an attorney and his client may testify of it.⁴ Or in a dispute between A and B, if the attorney of A has communications with B they are not privileged.⁵

(6) Testamentary Communications.—The privilege does not apply to testamentary communications.⁶ In the case of a testamentary disposition, the very foundation upon which the rule

Eng. L. & Eq. 217. See Weeks v. Argent, 16 M. & W. 817.

1. Nave v. Baird, 12 Ind. 318; Mitchell v. Bromberger, 2 Nev. 345; 90 Am. Dec. 550.

2. Crittenden v. Strother, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 464; Vailliant v. Dodemead, 2 Atk. 524.

3. Atkinson v. Atkinson, 2 Adams 469; Weeks on Attys., § 157.

4. Cotton v. State, 87 Ala. 75; House v. House, 61 Mich. 69; 1 Am. St. Rep. 570; Hoy v. Morris, 13 Gray (Mass.) 519; 74 Am. Dec. 650; Greer v. Greer, 58 Hun (N. Y.) 251; Mobile etc. R. Co. v. Yeates, 67 Ala. 164; Weinstein v. Reid, 25 Mo. App. 41; Perkins v. Guy, 55 Miss. 153; 30 Am. Rep. 510; Ford v. Tenant, 9 Jur., N. S. 292; Bramwell v. Lucas, 2 B. & C. 743; Allen v. Harrison, 30 Vt. 219; Heaton v. Findlay, 12 Pa. St. 304; Sawyer v. Birchmore, 3 Myl. & K. 572; In re McCarthy, 55 Hun (N. Y.) 7.

An attorney's mother-in-law being present at a time when professional communications were made to the attorney, overheard them. Held, that she could be required to testify concerning them. Walker v. State, 19 Tex. App. 176.

5. Ford v. Tenant, 9 Jur., N. S. 292; Marsh v. Keith, 6 Jur., N. S. 1182; Wheeler v. Le Merchant, 17 L. R., Ch. D. 675; Page v. Ward, 20 L. T., N. S. 518.

A communication was made by a client to an attorney, in the office of the latter, which was in his dwelling house, and in the presence of a son of the attorney, who lived in his family, but who had no connection with the professional business of his father. Held, that the communication was not in relation to the son, a privileged one, and that it might be disclosed by his testimony. Goddard v. Gardner, 28 Conn. 172.

6. Russell v. Jackson, 9 Hare 387; Scott v. Harris, 113 Ill. 447; Blackburn v. Crawford, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 186; Sheridan v. Houghton, 6 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 234; Graham v. O'Fallon, 4 Mo. 338; In re Austin, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 516; Follett v. Jefferyes, 1 Eng. L. & Eq. 172.

Compare Bennett's Estate, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 331; Loder v. Whelpley, 111 N. Y. 239, overruling Whelpley v. Loder, 1 Dem. (N. Y.) 368; Mason v. Williams, 53 Hun (N. Y.) 398.

On a question of marriage and legitimacy, an attorney who drew a will for the alleged husband now deceased, in which the children of the connection set up as wedlock are described as the "natural children" of the testator, may, without violating professional confidence, testify what was said by the testator about the character of the children and his relations to their mother, in interviews between the testator and himself preceding and connected with the preparation proceeds seems to be wanting; and, in the absence of any illegal purpose entertained by the testator, there does not seem to be ground for applying it.¹

(7) Collateral Matters.—As to collateral matters, the knowledge of which the attorney has acquired by personal observation, and which were not communicated as a secret, or as to such collateral facts which may be material for the other party, and the answer to which does not betray any confidential communication between them, the attorney may be compelled to answer.²

(8) Disclosing Address of Client.—The court may compel an attorney bringing suits on behalf of a number of persons as plaintiffs, against one defendant to disclose the names and residences of his clients.³ They may also require him to exhibit his authority to bring the suits.⁴

of the will. (Clifford, J., dissenting.) Blackburn v. Crawfords, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 175.

In a suit by next of kin of a testator, challenging a residuary gift made by his will to his executors, on the ground that it was made on a secret trust, for an illegal purpose, which the executors had promised to perform, the court held, that communications had between the testator and the solicitor employed by him to prepare the will, with reference to the will and the trusts thereof, were not privileged; but that communications with reference to the will and the trusts thereof had after the death of the testator, between the solicitor, and the executors who had continued to employ him as their solicitor were privileged. Russell v. Jackson, 8 Eng. L. & Eq. 80.

But in Loder v. Whelpley, 111 N. Y. 239, it was held that the privilege of physicians and attorneys, given by the code of New York Civil Proc., §§ 834, 835, as to information received in the course of their professional employment applied to proceedings to probate a will could not be waived, after the patient's or client's death, by her executor or any one else.

1. 1 Whart. Ev., § 591.

2. Wheatley v. Williams, 2 G. & D. 140; 1 M. & W. 533; Brandt v. Klien, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 335; Johnson v. Davenport, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 134; 10 Am. Dec. 198; Coates v. Birch, 2 Q. B. 252; Bevans v. Waters, M. & W. 235; Hurd v. Moring, 1 C. & P. 372; Bramwell v. Lucas, 4 D. & R. 367; 2 B. & C. 745; Levy v. Pope, M. & M. 410; Chillicothe Ferry etc. Co. v. Jameson, 48 Ill. 281; Morgan v. Shaw, 4 Madd. 57.

As where the question is about the rasure in a deed or will, the attorney may be asked whether he had ever seen such deed or will in other plight; for that is a fact in his own knowledge; though he is not to discover any confessions made by his client on such head. Brandt v. Klien, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 335.

In Kingston v. Gale, Finch 359; 8 Vin. Abr. 548, where there was a bill for a discovery of a deed and the contents of it, in the custody of the defendant who was attorney, and the defendant demurred to the bill, for that he was an attorney at law, and was intrusted by his client with the deed, the court were of the opinion that there ought to be a discovery whether there was such a deed, where the same then was, to whom delivered, and when the defendant last saw the same, and in whose custody; but that he was not to produce the deed, or discover the date or contents of it.

3. Ninety-nine Plaintiffs v. Vanderbilt, 1 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 193; McKierman v. Patrick, 4 How. (Miss.) 333; West v. Houston, 3 Harr. (Del.) 15; Johnston v. Bixby, 4 B. & Ald. 540; Gynn v. Kirby, 1 Strange 402; Ramsbotham v. Senior, 8 L. R. Eq. 575; Worten v. Smith, 6 J. B. Moore 110; Com. v. Bacon, 135 Mass. 521; Martin v. Anderson, 21 Ga. 301; Brown v. Payson, 6 N. H. 443; Foster v. Hall, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 189; 22 Am. Dec. 400; Beltzhoover v. Blackstock, 3 Watts (Pa.) 20; 27 Am. Dec. 330.

Compare Braceby v. Dalton, 2 Strange 681.

4. Ninety-nine Plaintiffs v. Vanderbilt, 1 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 193.

o. DOCUMENTS.—(1) In General.—The privilege of an attorney or counselor extends to written instruments held by counsel or attorney on behalf of clients,¹ or to information derived from books or papers shown to the attorney by his client, or placed in his hands in his character of attorney or counsel by such client.² He may testify to the existence of a paper, and that it is in his own possession;³ but not as to its situation or appearance,⁴ in order to enable the opposite party to give parol proof of its contents;⁵ nor is he obliged to produce them, in order that they may be exhibited to a grand jury, or prosecuting officer, on a charge

1. Dover v. Harrell, 58 Ga. 572; Neal v. Patten, 47 Ga. 73; Philadelphia Fire Assoc. v. Fleming, 78 Ga. 738; In re Caleman's Will, 111 N. Y. 220; Wilson v. Troup, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 25; Jackson v. Burtis, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 391; Kellogg v. Kellogg, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 116; Lynde v. Judd, 3 Day (Conn.) 499; Anonymous, 8 Mass. 370; Crosby v. Berger, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 377; 42 Am. Dec. 117; People v. Benjamin, 9 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 419; Hawkins v. Howard, R. & M. 64; Blant v. Soyer, 13 C. B. 231; Laing v. Barclary, 3 Stark. 42; Doe v. James, 2 M. & Rob. 47; Selden v. State, 74 Wis. 271; Burnham v. Roberts, 70 Ill. 19.

2. Crosby v. Berger, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 377; 42 Am. Dec. 117; Jackson v. Burtis, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 391; Lynde v. Judd, 3 Day (Conn.) 499; Durkee v. Leeland, 4 Vt. 612; State v. Hazeton, 15 La. Ann. 72; Laring v. Barclay, 3 Stark. 42; Voylant v. Soyer, 13 C. B. 231; Bargaddie Coal Co. v. Wark, 3 Macq. Scotch Cas. 468; Mills v. Oddy, 6 C. & P. 728; Mars-ton v. Downes, 6 C. & P. 381; Bottomley v. Usborne, Peake Ad. Cas. 99; Bate v. Kinsey, 1 C. M. & R. 38; Walker v. Wildman, 6 Madd. 47; Robson v. Kemp, 5 Esp. 53; Jackson v. Denison, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 558; Cook v. Hearn, 1 M. & R. 201; Peter v. Watkins, 3 Bing. (N. Cas.) 421; Taylor v. Blacklow, 3 Bing. N. Cas. 235; Beard v. Ackerman, 5 Esp. 120; Crawford v. McKissack, 1 Port. (Ala.) 433; Heister v. Davis, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 4; Gray v. Fox, 43 Mo. 570; 97 Am. Dec. 416; Com. v. Moyer, 15 Phila. (Pa.) 397; Newton v. Chaplin, 10 C. B. 356; Hughes v. Biddulph, 4 Russ. 190; Walsh v. Trevanion, 15 Sim. 577; Arnold v. Chesebrough, 41 Fed. Rep. 74; Goodall v. Little, 1 Sim. N. S. 155; Bluck v. Galsworthy, 2 Giff. 453. See also Moats v. Rymer, 18 W. Va. 642; 41 Am. Rep. 703; Lawrence v. Campbell, 4 Drew. 485.

The court will not order the production of confidential communications between solicitor and client which took place either in the progress of the suit or with reference to the suit at its commencement. Confidential communications between attorney or counsel and client anterior to the suit and without reference thereto are not privileged. Flight v. Robinson, 8 Beav. 22. See Thompson v. Falk, 1 Drew. 21.

3. Coveney v. Tannahill, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 33; 27 Am. Dec. 287; Coates v. Birch, 2 Ad. & E., N. S. 252; Bevan v. Waters, M. & W. 235; Allen v. Root, 39 Tex. 589. See Turquand v. Knight, 2 M. & W. 98.

The right of an attorney to refuse to disclose matters with which he had become acquainted in the course of his employment as such, does not extend to matters of fact which he knows by any other means than confidential communication with his client, though, if he had not been employed as attorney he probably would not have known them; therefore an attorney of a party to a suit is bound to answer, on a trial, whether a particular document belonging to his client is in his possession, and is then in court. Dwyer v. Collins, 7 Exch. 639.

In Cotman v. Orton, 9 L. J., N. S. Ch. 268, it was held that a solicitor would not be allowed to disclose in whose possession or custody a particular document is, or when or where he saw the same if he came to the knowledge of the fact inquired after in the course of confidential communications with his client in his professional capacity.

4. Driggs v. Rockwell, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 504; Wheatley v. Williams, 1 M. & W. 533.

5. Coveney v. Tannahill, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 33; 27 Am. Dec. 287; Rhoades v. Selin, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 718; Brandt v. Klein, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 335; Jackson of forgery or fraud against the client.¹ An attorney is neither bound to produce a document nor to answer a question with respect to its nature.² The names, times, or dates contained in a written instrument, though not known from the communication of the client, yet come to the knowledge of the attorney from the delivery of the instrument by his client, are privileged.³ Where it is sworn that documents are confidential communications, relating to the particular suit or to another suit, which though not actually in the matter of the same litigation, involves or embraces the same issue, they are privileged, although they do not directly relate to the particular suit.⁴ An attorney who has in his possession papers which his client could be compelled to produce or disclose, can also be compelled to produce them or testify as to their contents.⁵ But he cannot against the will of his client be compelled to produce them even by a person who has an equal interest in them with the client.⁶ He may be asked whether he has papers of his client in court, and if by his answer,

v. M'Vey, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 330; Dwyer v. Collins, 7 Ex. 639; Phelps v. Prew, 3 El. & B. 430; Wharton on Ev. § 585.

1. State v. Squires, 1 Tyler (Vt.) 147; Anonymous, 8 Mass. 370.

2. Volant v. Soyer, 16 Eng. L. & Eq. 426; Dover v. Harrell, 58 Ga. 572; Vent v. Pacey, 4 Russ. 193; Harvey v. Kirwin, 7 L. J., N. S. Exch. Eq. 50. An attorney cannot be compelled to produce a will which he holds as attorney for a devisee claiming under it. Carter v. Larnes, 2 Moody & R. 47; nor is the attorney for a party bound to state the contents of a document of which he first obtained a knowledge by having read it at the suggestion of his counsel in the course of a consultation in the cause. Davies v. Water, 9 M. & W. 608.

An attorney or counsel who, as the attorney or counsel of one of the parties in a cause, has been intrusted with papers by a third person, cannot be called upon by the opposite party to produce these papers in evidence. Jackson v. Burtis, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 391.

But the privilege does not extend to a combination between attorney and client to prevent the court from compelling the production of important papers at the trial. People v. Sheriff, 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 622.

3. Beard v. Ackerman, 5 Esp. 119; Bate v. Kinsey, 6 M. & R. 42; Jones v. Fugh, 12 Sim. 470.

4. Thompson v. Falk, 15 Eng. L. &

Eq. 56; Lynde v. Judd, 3 Day. (Conn.) 491; Jackson v. Denison, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 558; Walsingham v. Goodricke, 3 Hare 122.

5. Andrews v. Ohio etc. R. Co., 14 Ind. 169; Ex parte Maulsby, 13 Md. 625; Dwyer v. Collins, 12 Eng. L. & Eq. 532, and note 537. See Courtall v. Thomas, 9 B. & C. 288; Egremont v. Langdon, 18 L. J., N. S., Q. B. 17.

6. Wharton on Ev., § 585; Weeks on Attys. § 163; Bargaddie Coal Co. v. Mark, 3 Macq. S. C. 668; Volant v. Soyer, 13 C. B. 231; Crosby v. Berger, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 377; 42 Am. Dec. 117; Lanig v. Barclay, 3 Stark. 42; Newton v. Chaplin, 10 C. B. 356.

Where a practitioner held a paper delivered to him by his client which the grand jury were desirous of seeing, the court held him not bound to produce it. Anonymous, 8 Mass. 370.

Deed.—An attorney is not allowed to produce a deed which has been deposited with him confidentially in his professional character; and if the deed has been obtained out of his hands for the purpose of being produced in evidence by another witness, it cannot be received, nor is a copy of such deed so obtained good secondary evidence. Fisher v. Hemming, 1 Phil. Ev. 132.

Lease.—A solicitor to a third person is bound to produce his client's lease executed by the defendant, provided the production will not operate to the prejudice of his client. Copeland v. Watts, 1 Stark. 95.

which is compulsory, he admits the fact, secondary evidence of their contents may be given if the originals are not produced.¹

(2) Correspondence Between Attorney and Client.—The court will not order a defendant to produce letters which passed between himself and his solicitor in the professional relation in the progress of the cause or with reference to it, before it was instituted, or which contained legal advice; as, for an example, a letter having for its object to direct the solicitor to take the opinion of counsel upon the question in dispute.² Copies of telegrams as well as letters sent by clients to their solicitors ante litem motam, are privileged.³

(3) Documents in the Hands of Third Persons.—If a legal adviser permits his client's papers to pass out of his hands into those of strangers, or if such papers are in any way extracted from his custody, they may be put in evidence by the party by whom they are held as against the client.⁴ If an attorney permits a witness

1. Wharton on Ev., § 585; Weeks on Attys., § 163; Brant v. Klein, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 335; Phelps v. Prew, 3 El. & B. 430.

2. Philadelphia F. Assoc. v. Fleming, 78 Ga. 733; Garland v. Scott, 3 Sim. 396; Arnold v. Cheesborough, 41 Fed. Rep. 74; Vent v. Parcey, 4 Russ. 193. See Hamilton v. Nott, 16 L. R. Eq. 112; Harvey v. Kirwin, 7 L. J., N. S., Exch. Eq. 50; Walsingham v. Loodriche, 3 Hare 122; Goodall v. Little, 1 Sim., N. S. 155; Knight v. Waterford, 2 Y. & Coll. 37; Hughes v. Garnous, 6 Beav. 352; Boyd v. Petrie, 17 W. R. 903; Call v. Tourle, 19 W. R. 56; Hampson v. Hampson, 26 L. J. Ch. 612; Follett v. Jefferyes, 1 Sim., N. S. 3; Snow v. Gould, 74 Me. 540; 43 Am. Rep. 604; Jenkyns v. Bushby, L. R., 2 Eq. 547; In re U. S. v. Six Lots of Ground, 1 Wood (U. S.) 234; In re Whittock, 51 Hun (N. Y.) 351.

So as to letters written before suit; but after the dispute arose. Bushnell v. Bushnell, 2 Jur. 774; Minet v. Morgan, 8 L. R. Ch. 361. Compare Page v. Warde, 17 W. R. 435.

Letters which passed between an architect and the solicitor to one of the parties to a suit with regard to building premises, the subject of the suit, are not privileged from production. Page v. Ward, 20 L. T., N. S. 518.

An attorney may be ordered to produce letters received from his client in cases of fraud. Hawkins v. Gathercole, 1 Sim., N. S. 150; Reynell v. Sprye, 11 Beav. 618; Charlton v. Coombs, 4 Giff. 372.

A letter from a client to an attorney, complaining that the latter has betrayed his trust in certain matters, and stating that these facts have been communicated to another lawyer for the purpose of obtaining a settlement with the dishonest attorney, is not one of those confidential communications which the law forbids the attorney to disclose. Laffin v. Herrington, 1 Black (U. S.) 326.

Attorney Acting for Trustee.—In a suit to which trustees were defendants, production was sought of letters which had passed between the trustees and their solicitors with reference to the trust, and of memoranda and instructions to counsel prepared by the solicitors on behalf of the trustees. Some of these documents related to a former suit which had sought to set aside a deed of release impeached in the present suit. None of the documents had been charged to the trust estate. Held, that all these documents were privileged. Bacon v. Bacon, 34 L. T., N. S. 349.

In an action by cestuis que trustent against their trustees to compel them to make good a breach of trust, held, that the trustees must produce letters and copies of letters from and to their solicitors in relation to matters in question in the action ante litem motam. Talbot v. Marshfield, 2 D. & S. 549, followed In re Mason, Mason v. Cattley, 22 L. R., Ch. D. 609.

3. Macfarlan v. Rait, 14 L. R. Eq. 580.

4. Weeks on Attys., § 163; Lloyd v. Mostyn, 10 M. & W. 481; Fisher v.

to see such writings, such witness not being a clerk of the attorney or legal adviser of the client may be called to give secondary evidence of the writings, due notice being first given to produce them on the trial.¹ It is otherwise as to papers passing into the hands of the attorney's agents or representatives, the papers in such hands being entitled to the same protection they enjoyed when in the hands of the attorney.²

(4) Where Attorney and Client Are Co-defendants the attorney cannot refuse to produce documents belonging to his client.³

2. To Physician.—a. NATURE OF THE PRIVILEGE.—At common law, confidential communications made by a patient to a physician are not privileged;⁴ but by statutes in the various States, communications made by a patient to his physician or surgeon, and information acquired by him while attending a patient in a professional capacity, and which were important to enable him so to act are protected.⁵ The privilege extends to facts necessary to enable the physician to prescribe, and which are communicated to him for the purpose of enabling him to perform his professional duties.⁶ Such facts are privileged whether learned directly Henning, 1 Ph. Ev. 170. See Glyn v. Caulfield, 3 Macn. & G. 468; Enthoven v. Coff, 15 Eng. L. & Eq. 277.

1. Weeks on Attys., § 163; Lloyd v. Mostyn, 10 M. & W. 481.

2. Wharton on Ev., § 586; Weeks on Attys., § 163; Fenwick v. Reed, 1 Mer. 114; Hooker v. Gumm, 2 John & H. 602.

3. Lockett v. Cary, 3 N. R. 405; Gaskell v. Chambers, 26 Beav. 303. See Blenkinsopp v. Blenkinsopp, 2 Ph. 607.

4. Duchess of Kingston's Case, 20 How. St. Tr. 643; Rex v. Gibbons, 1 C. & P. 97; Baker v. R. Co., L. R., 3 C. P. 91; Mahoney v. Ins. Co., L. R., 6 C. P. 252; Board v. Pitt, 3 C. & P. 518; Campau v. North, 39 Mich. 606; 33 Am. Rep. 433; Butler v. Moore, 1 McNally, 253; Baker v. Arnold, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 258. Compare Coopey v. R. R., L. R. 5 C. & P. 146; Skinner v. R. R., L. R., 9 Ex. 398.

5. Arkansas Stat. 1883, p. 625, § 2862; California Code C. P. 1885, § 1881; Colorado G. S. 1883, p. 1062, § 4; Dakota Comp. Laws 1887, p. 910, § 5313; Idaho R. S. 1887, p. 679; Indiana R. S. 1887, p. 679, § 497; Iowa Rev. Code, 1884, p. 860; Kansas Comp. Laws, 1885, p. 645, § 323; Michigan G. S. 1882, p. 1889, § 7516, § 86; Minnesota Gen. Stat. 1881, p. 792, ch. 73, tit. 1, §

10; Missouri R. S. 1879, p. 690, § 4017; Montana Comp. Stat. 1887, p. 230, Civ. Code, § 650; Nevada Gen. Stat. G. S. 1885, p. 833, § 3406, § 84; New York Code of Civ. Proc. (4 Rev. Stat., p. 164), § 834; Ohio Rev. Stat. 1884, p. 1096, § 5241; Oregon Gen. Laws 1872, p. 251; Utah Comp. Laws 1876, p. 506; Washington Code, 1881, p. 102, § 392; Wisconsin Rev. Stat. 1878, p. 992, § 4075; Wyoming Rev. Stat. 1887, p. 590, § 2589.

It was said in Masonic Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Beck, 77 Ind. 203; 40 Am. Rep. 295; Edington v. Mutual L. Ins. Co., 5 Hun (N. Y.) 1, that the object of these statutes seems to be to place the communications made to physicians in the course of their professional employment, upon the same footing with communications made by clients to their attorneys in the course of their employment.

6. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Union Trust Co., 112 U. S. 250; Sloane v. New York Cent. R. Co., 45 N. Y. 125; Dileber v. Home L. Ins. Co., 69 N. Y. 256; 25 Am. Rep. 182; Cahen v. Continental Ins. Co., 41 N. Y. Super. Ct. 296; Johnson v. Johnson, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 460; Norton v. Moberly, 18 Mo. App. 457; Briggs v. Briggs, 20 Mich. 34; In re Coleman's Will, 111 N. Y. 220; Corbett v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 26 Mo. App. 621; from the patient himself,¹ or acquired by the physician through his own observation or examination.² Further, it does not extend.³ (See EXPERT AND OPINION EVIDENCE, vol. 7, p. 508.)

Streeter v. Breckenridge, 23 Mo. App. 244.

It is proper for plaintiff's physician to testify that when called in professionally he was told by plaintiff that she had sued defendant, and would want him as a witness, since such testimony has no reference to plaintiff's condition. Cooley v. Foltz (Mich. 1891), 48 N. W. Rep. 176.

1. Edington v. Mutual L. Ins. Co., 67 N. Y. 185; Corbett v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 26 Mo. App. 621; Streeter v. Breckenridge, 23 Mo. App. 244; Linz v. Massachusetts Mut. L. Ins. Co., 8 Mo. App. 363; Gartside v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co., 76 Mo. 446; 43 Am. Rep. 765; Briggs v. Briggs, 20 Mich. 34; Heuston v. Simpson, 115 Ind. 62; 7 Am. St. Rep. 409; Williams v. Johnson, 112 Ind. 273; Masonic Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Beck, 77 Ind. 203; 40 Am. Rep. 295; In re Darragh, 52 Hun (N. Y.) 591; Grattan v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co., 92 N. Y. 274; 44 Am. Rep. 372; Dilleber v. Home L. Ins. Co., 69 N. Y. 256; 25 Am. Rep. 182; Norton v. Moberly, 18 Mo. App. 457; Johnson v. Johnson, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 460; Hanford v. Hanford, 3 Edw. (N. Y.) 468; Casey v. L. B. & S. C. R. Co., L. R., 5 C. P. 146; Skinner v. Great Northern R. Co., L. R., 9 Ex. 298; Excelsior Mut. Aid Assoc. v. Riddle, 91 Ind. 84; Campau v. North, 39 Mich. 606; 33 Am. Rep. 433; Hunn v. Hunn, 1 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 499.

2. Squires v. Chillicothe, 89 Mo. 226; Dilleber v. Home L. Ins. Co., 69 N. Y. 256; 25 Am. Rep. 182; Masonic Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Beck, 77 Ind. 203; 40 Am. Rep. 295; Linz v. Massachusetts Mut. L. Ins. Co., 8 Mo. App. 363; Grattan v. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 24 Hun (N. Y.) 43; Cahen v. Continental L. Ins. Co., 69 N. Y. 300; Edington v. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 13 Hun (N. Y.) 543; 67 N. Y. 185; Corbett v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 26 Mo. App. 621; Gartside v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co., 76 Mo. 446; 43 Am. Rep. 765; Johnson v. Johnson, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 460; Hanford v. Hanford, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 468; People v. Stout, 3 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 670; 45 N. Y. 125; 5 Hun (N. Y.) 1; Masonic Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Beck, 77 Ind. 203; 40 Am. Rep. 295.

Section 4019 Revised Statutes of Missouri, declares that a physician or surgeon shall be incompetent to testify "concerning any information which he may have acquired from any patient while attending him in a professional character, and which information was necessary to enable him to prescribe for such patient, or do any act for him as a surgeon." Held, that the word "information," as here used, includes not only communications made by the patient, but knowledge obtained by the physician or surgeon through his own observation or examination while attending the patient in a professional capacity. All such he is forbidden to disclose. Gartside v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co., 76 Mo. 446. In Briggs v. Briggs, 20 Mich. 34, the court said: "Nor do we think the physician's evidence admissible. He had no knowledge upon the subject, except what he obtained in the course of his professional employment, and the case appears to be directly within the statute. . . . We do not understand the information here referred to, to be confined to communications made by the patient to the physician, but regard it as protecting with the veil of privilege whatever, in order to enable the physician to prescribe, was disclosed to any of his senses, and which in any way was brought to his knowledge for that purpose."

On a trial for murder, where the defense was insanity, the physician of the jail wherein defendant had been confined for six months was asked a hypothetical question based on facts which had occurred before defendant came to the jail. The physician stated that he thought it a practical impossibility for him to eliminate from his mind knowledge obtained while defendant was in jail. He was permitted to answer that, on the hypothetical facts propounded to him, defendant was sane. Held, that the answer was properly received. [Rappallo and Andrews, JJ., dissenting.] People v. Schuyler, 106 N. Y. 298.

3. Feeney v. Long Island R. Co., 116 N. Y. 375; 39 Am. & Eng. R. Cas.

The privilege is not necessarily terminated by the death of the patient.¹ It is held in New York that the seal of secrecy is not removed by the fact that, in a contest over the patient's will, the physician's testimony might throw light upon the point of testa-

639; Wiel v. Cowles, 45 Hun (N. Y.) 307; Brown v. Rome etc. R. Co., 45 Hun (N. Y.) 439; Stowell v. American Co-operative Relief Assoc., 52 Hun (N. Y.) 613; Babcock v. People, 15 Hun (N. Y.) 347; Cooley v. Foltz (Mich. 1891), 48 N. W. Rep. 176; Henry v. New York etc. R. Co., 57 Hun (N. Y.) 76; In re Darragh, 52 Hun (N. Y.) 591; In re Freeman, 46 Hun (N. Y.) 458; Guptill v. Verbeck, 58 Iowa 98; People v. Schuyler, 106 N. Y. 208; Renihan v. Dennin, 103 N. Y. 573; 57 Am. Rep. 770; Brown v. Rome etc. R. Co., 45 Hun (N. Y.) 439; Linz v. Massachusetts Mut. L. Ins. Co., 8 Mo. App. 363; Hewit v. Prime, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 79; Campau v. North, 39 Mich. 606; 33 Am. Rep. 433; Collins v. Mach, 31 Ark. 684; Hoyt v. Hoyt, 112 N. Y. 493; People v. Brower, 53 Hun (N. Y.) 217; In re Darragh, 52 Hun (N. Y.) 591.

In Edington v. Aetna L. Ins. Co., 77 N. Y. 571, Earl, J., said: "Before information can be excluded under this statute it must appear that it was such as the physician acquired in some way while professionally attending a patient; and it must also be such as was necessary to enable him to prescribe as a physician, or to do some act as a surgeon. It is not sufficient to authorize the exclusion that the physician acquired the information while attending the patient; but it must be the necessary information mentioned. If the physician has acquired any information which was not necessary to enable him to prescribe, or to act as a surgeon, such information he can be compelled to disclose, although he acquired it while attending the patient; and before the exclusion is authorized, the facts must in some way appear upon which such exclusion can be justified.

In Masonic Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Beck, 77 Ind. 203; 40 Am. Rep. 295, Wood, J., referring to the above opinion, said: "But the language of the opinion in that case upon which stress is laid, does not express the opinion of the court, but only of the judge who wrote it, the other judges concurring in the result only." And Earl, J., himself, in delivering the opinion of the court in the recent case of Renihan v. Dennin, 103 N. Y. 573, 57 Am. Rep. 770, said: "It is also claimed that the statute should be so construed as only to prohibit the disclosures by a physician of any information of a confidential nature obtained by him from his patient while attending him in a professional capacity. Such was the view of the statute taken by me in my opinion in Edington v. Aetna L. Ins. Co., 77 N. Y. 564; but my brethren were then unwilling to concur with me in that view. When the same question again came before the court, in Grattan v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co., 80 N. Y. 281, 36 Am. Rep. 617, I again attempted to enforce the same view upon my brethren, and again failed, and it was then distinctly held that the statute could not be confined to information of a confidential nature, and that the court was bound to follow and give effect to the plain language without interpolating the broad exception contended for." See In re Darragh, 52 Hun (N. Y.) 591.

The privilege may attach notwithstanding the presence of third persons in the sick room, where the consultation is had. Cahen v. Continental etc. Ins. Co., 41 N. Y. Super. Ct. 296.

If the attending physician calls in another physician for consultation, the communications made to the latter are privileged. Renihan v. Dennin, 103 N. Y. 573; 67 Am. Rep. 770; Aetna L. Ins. Co. v. Deming, 123 Ind. 384; Raymond v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 65 Iowa 152.

But where one applies to a physician for medicine to be administered to an absent third party, the physician is not precluded from testifying as to the applicant's statements against the latter's objection. Babcock v. People, 15 Hun (N. Y.) 347.

1. Grattan v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co., 80 N. Y. 281; 86 Am. Rep. 617; Pierson v. People, 18 Hun (N. Y.) 247; Edington v. Aetna L. Ins. Co., 77

mentary capacity.¹ Whether the statutes protecting confidential communications between physician and patient extend to criminal cases is not well settled. The provision in the California Code is expressly limited to civil actions,² but in New York, the decisions seem to hold that the statute applies to criminal cases.³

b. HOW WAIVED.—The patient may waive the privilege.⁴ Whether, after his death, his executor or administrator may, can-

N. Y. 564; Dreier v. Continental L. Ins. Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 670; Cuptill v. Verback, 58 Iowa 98; Edington v. Mutual L. Ins. Co., 67 N. Y. 185; Westover v. Aetna L. Ins. Co., 99 N. Y. 56; 52 Am. Rep. 1; Cahen v. Continental etc. Ins. Co., 41 N. Y. Super. Ct. 296; Brigham v. Gott, 51 Hun (N. Y.) 636; Renihan v. Dennin, 103 N. Y. 573; 57 Am. Rep. 770; Masonic Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Beck, 77 Ind. 203; 40 Am. Rep. 295; Groll v. Tower, 85 Mo. 249; 55 Am. Rep. 358; Pennsylvania L. Ins. Co. v. Wiler, 100 Ind. 92; 50 Am. Rep. 769; Fraser v. Jennison, 42 Mich. 206; In re Coleman's Will, 111 N. Y. 220; Heuston v. Simpson, 115 Ind. 62; 7 Am. St. Rep. 409; Loder v. Whelpley, 111 N. Y. 239.

In Westover v. Aetna L. Ins. Co., 99 N. Y. 59; 52 Am. Rep. 1, the court by Earl, J., said: "The purpose of the law would be thwarted, and the policy intended to be promoted thereby would be defeated, if death removed the seal of secrecy from the communications and disclosures which a patient should make to his physician, or a client to his attorney or a penitent to his priest. Whenever the evidence comes within the purview of the statutes, it is absolutely prohibited, and may be objected to by any one, unless it be waived by the person for whose benefit and protection the statutes were enacted. After one has gone to his grave, the living are not permitted to impair his fame and disgrace his memory by dragging to the light communications and disclosures made under the seal of the statutes. An executor or administrator does not represent the deceased for the purpose of making such a waiver. He represents him simply in reference to rights of property, and not in reference to those rights which pertain to the person and character of the testator."

1. It has been urged that the statutory privilege should be deemed not to extend to this class of cases. There are earlier decisions of inferior courts of the State to the contrary. See Whelpley v. Loder, 1 Dem. (N. Y.) 368; Allen v. Public Administrator, 1 Bradf. (N. Y.) 221; Staunton v. Parker, 19 Hun (N. Y.) 55; but the law is now settled finally by the court of appeals, as stated in the text. See Westover v. Aetna L. Ins. Co., 99 N. Y. 56; 62 Am. Rep. 1; Renihan v. Dennin, 103 N. Y. 573; 17 Am. Rep. 770; Loder v. Whelpley, 111 N. Y. 239. And see also In re Darragh, 52 Hun (N. Y.) 591; Van Orman v. Van Orman, 58 Hun (N. Y.) 606.

2. California Code Civ. Proc., § 181, subdiv. 4.

3. People v. Stout, 3 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 670; People v. Brower, 53 Hun (N. Y.) 217; People v. Murphy, 101 N. Y. 126; 54 Am. Rep. 661.

But in Hewit v. Prime, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 74, it was held that a physician consulted by the defendant as to the means of producing an abortion is not privileged from testifying. And in Pierson v. People, 79 N. Y. 424; 35 Am. Rep. 524, it was held that on a trial for murder, by poison, a physician is not prohibited from testifying to the results of his examination of the deceased, and to the statements of the deceased during such examination while attending him in his last illness.

4. Morris v. Morris, 119 Ind. 341; Pennsylvania Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Wiler, 100 Ind. 92; 50 Am. Rep. 769; Territory v. Corbett, 3 Mont. 50; Blair v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 89 Mo. 334; Carrington v. St. Louis, 89 Mo. 209; 58 Am. Rep. 108; Allen v. Public Administrator, 1 Bradf. (N. Y.) 221; Grand Rapids etc. R. Co. v. Martin, 41 Mich. 669; Gantside v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co., 76 Mo. 446; Johnson v. Johnson, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 637; Squires v. Chillicothe, 89 Mo. 226; Blair v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 89 Mo. 385; Groll v. Tower, 85 Mo. 249; 55 not be stated with certainty. In New York he may not, and it would seem upon principle that this should be so.¹ Where the patient desires to claim the privilege and objects to the admission of the incompetent testimony, he should do so when it is offered at the trial. A neglect to object then may operate as a waiver.² If the privilege is once waived it is waived for all time, and in any subsequent proceedings.³

3. To Spiritual Adviser.—According to the weight of authority communications made to spiritual advisers are not protected from disclosure in courts of justice.⁴ The question has arisen more frequently in relation to communications made under the seal of the Roman Catholic confessional. Under the Roman law such communications are inviolable, subject to certain exceptions with which it is not here necessary to deal, and in England, before the reformation, there is but little doubt that the same rule obtained.⁵ The current of public opinion is opposed to requiring such disclosures to be made public, and in many of the States this opinion is voiced by statutes.⁶ Even in the absence of statutes, Am. Rep. 358; Cahen v. Continental etc. Ins. Co., 41 N. Y. Super. Ct. 296; Williams v. Johnson, 112 Ind. 273; Staunton v. Parker, 19 Hun (N. Y.) 55; Fraser v. Jennison, 42 Mich. 206; Renihan v. Dennin, 38 Hun (N. Y.) 270.

It was held in Andreveno v. Mutual Reserve F. L. Assoc., 34 Fed. Rep. 870, that the waiver might consist of a provision to that effect in a life insurance policy.

Where there are two physicians the patient does not, by calling one of his physicians as a witness, waive his privilege to object to the testimony of the other. Mellor v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. (Mo. 1890), 14 S. W. Rep. 758; Record v. Saratoga Springs, 46 Hun (N. Y.) 448.

On indictment for rape of a child of seven the privilege may be waived by the implied consent of her parents, and the fact that the prosecution was instituted by them, who, with the child, were the principal witnesses, and testified to the nature of the complaint for which the physician prescribed, warrants such implication. Bigelow, J. dissenting. State v. Depoister (Nev. 1891), 25 Pac. Rep. 1000.

1. Westover v. Aetna L. Ins. Co., 99 N. Y. 56; 52 Am. Rep. 1; Lodger v. Whelpley, 111 N. Y. 239; Renihan v. Dennin, 103 N. Y. 573; 57 Am. Rep. 770.

The following cases assert or have a tendency to assert, the doctrine that the personal representative may waive the privilege. Masonic Mut. B. Assoc. v. Beck, 77 Ind. 203; 40 Am. Rep. 295; Pennsylvania Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Wiler, 100 Ind. 92; 50 Am. Rep. 769; Morris v. Morris, 119 Ind. 341; Fraser v. Jennison, 42 Mich. 206; Groll v. Tower, 85 Mo. 249; 55 Am. Rep. 358. It may be stated, however, that in each of these cases the doctrine is rather assumed than distinctly asserted.

2. Hoyt v. Hoyt, 112 N. Y. 493.

3. McKinney v. Grand St. etc. R. Co., 104 N. Y. 352.

4. Butler v. Moore, 1 McNally 253; Du Barre v. Livette, Peake R. 161; Com. v. Drake, 15 Mass. 161; Broad v. Pitt, 3 C. & P. 519; State v. Bostick, 4 Harr. (Del.) 563; Wilson v. Rastall, 5 T. R. 753; R—v. Griffin, 6 Cox 219; R—v. Hoggs, 2 F. & F. 4; Anonymous, Skinner 404.

5. See Best on Evidence, §§ 583, 584, for a discussion of this subject.

6. Arizona Rev. Stat. 1887, p. 818, § 2039; Arkansas Stat. 1883, p. 625, § 2861; California Code of Civ. Proc. 1885, § 1881; Colorado Gen. Stat. 1883, p. 1063, § 9; Dakota Comp. Laws 1887, p. 910, § 5313; Idaho Rev. Stat. 1887, p. 679; Indiana Rev. St. 1887, p. 679, § 497; Iowa Rev. Code 1884, p. 860, § 3643; Kansas Laws 1885, p. 645, § 323; Michigan Gen. Stat. 1882, p. 1890, § 7515, § 85, ch. 262; Minnesota Gen. Stat. 1881, p. 792, ch. 73, tit. 1, § 10; prosecuting officers and courts are reluctant to compel the production of such evidence.¹

V. SOCIAL MATTERS.—1. Communications Between Husband and Wife.—In view of the high importance of preserving intact the confidence and security of the marriage state, the law regards confidential communications between husband and wife as privileged, and refuses to permit either to be interrogated as to what occurred in their confidential intercourse during their marital relations.² The legislatures of the various States in extending the competency of husband and wife to testify for or against each other have generally reserved or affirmed the common law rule that they shall not be allowed to testify as to private conversations with each other.³ And the protection is not confined to cases where the communication sought to be given in evidence is of a strictly confidential character, but the seal of the law is placed upon all communications of whatever nature which pass Missouri Rev. Stat. 1879, p. 690, § 4017; Montana Comp. Stat. 1887, p. 230, Civ. Code, § 650; Nebraska Comp. Stat. 1885, § 328; Nevada Gen. Stat. 1885, p. 833, § 4405; New York Code Civ. Proc. (4 Rev. Stat. 1882), p. 164, § 833; Ohio Rev. Stat. 1884, p. 1096, § 5241; Oregon Gen. Laws 1872, p. 251; Utah Comp. Laws 1876, p. 506; Washington Code 1881, p. 102; Wisconsin Rev. Stat. 1878, p. 992, § 4074; Wyoming Rev. Stat. 1887, p. 690, § 2589.

And the law of France is similar.

In Gillooley v. State, 58 Ind. 182, it was adjudged that communications received by a priest, otherwise than in the course of any discipline enjoined by the church, were properly testified to by the priest.

1. "I, for one," so Best, J., is reported to have said, in Broad v. Pitt, 3 C. & P. 519, "will never compel a clergyman to disclose communications made to him by a prisoner; but if he chooses to disclose them, I will receive them in evidence." So it was declared by Alderson B. in Rex v. Griffin, 6 Cox C. C. 219, a case where it appeared that a chaplain in a work-house had frequent conversations, in his pastoral capacity, with the inmates, that it was better that the chaplain should not be called as a witness to prove confessions so received by him.

2. Castello v. Castello, 41 Ga. 613; Goodrum v. State, 60 Ga. 509; French v. Wade, 35 Kan. 391; Succession of Wade, 21 La. 343; Waddans v. Humphrey, 22 Ill. 661; Drew v. Tarbell, 117 Mass. 90; Raynes v. Bennett, 114 Mass. 424; Baldwin v. Parker, 99 Mass. 79; 96

Am. Dec. 697; Dexter v. Booth, 2 Allen (Mass.) 559; Highan v. Vanosdol, 101 Ind. 160; U. S. v. Guiteau, 1 Mackey (D. C.) 498.

A husband who contests the probate of his wife's will on the ground of undue influence cannot testify to a conversation of a confidential character had with his wife during marriage. Maynard v. Vinton, 59 Mich. 139; 60 Am. Rep. 276.

On bill filed by a wife for moneys received by her for her husband, she cannot be a witness to prove the admissions of her husband. Gray v. Gray, 39 N. J. Eq. 511.

The wife's evidence that her husband gave her money to take up certain notes was held inadmissible and properly rejected as facts coming to her knowledge by reason of the marital relation. Washington v. Bedford, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 246.

3. The statute in New Jersey, after making the husband and wife competent and compellable to give evidence as other witnesses, provides "that nothing herein shall render any husband or wife competent or compellable to give evidence for or against the other in any criminal action or proceeding, or in any action or proceeding for divorce on account of adultery, except to prove the marriage, or in any action for criminal conversation, nor shall any husband or wife be compellable to disclose any confidential communication made by one to the other during the marriage." New Jersey Revision, p. 378; Wood v. Chetwood, 27 N. J. Eq. 311.

between husband and wife.¹ It extends also to cases in which the interests of strangers are solely involved, as well as to those in which the husband and wife are parties on the record. It is, however, limited to such matters as have been communicated during the marriage, and, consequently, a man who made a most confidential statement to a woman before he married her and it afterwards became of importance in a civil suit to know what that statement was, the wife, on being called as a witness and interrogated with respect to the communication, could, as it seems, be bound to disclose what she knew of the matter.² But if a confidential statement is made by either party after the marriage, it is privileged, even though the marriage relation has ceased by death or divorce.³ In England, this rule is extended to any conversation which happens between the husband and wife.⁴ But in the United States, the disqualification of the wife continuing after the death of her husband seems to be limited to private conversations,⁵ and non-confidential information is not privi-

So in Michigan a statute provides explicitly that neither the husband nor wife shall, during the marriage or afterwards, without the consent of both, be examined as to any communication made by the one to the other during the marriage. Howe Stat. § 7546.

The statutes of Massachusetts contain similar provisions. Drew v. Tarbell, 117 Mass. 90. See Brown v. Wood, 121 Mass. 137; Dexter v. Booth, 2 Allen (Mass.) 559. And so in Missouri. Moore v. Wingate, 53 Mo. 398; Chesley v. Chesley, 54 Mo. 347. So in Kansas, Civil Code, § 323. See French v. Wade, 35 Kan. 391.

Mr. Wharton says: "Under special statutes husband and wife in several jurisdictions have been made competent witnesses in suits affecting each other. These statutes, it may be generally remarked, in conferring competency, do not preclude the party from taking advantage of the right of withholding privileged communications which occur during coverture, and not in the presence of third parties; nor do they strip the parties of the right to decline to answer criminating questions. Privilege as it exists at common law can be asserted in all cases in which it is not specifically prohibited by statute." 1 Whart on Ev. (3d. ed) § 431. And see cases cited.

1. O'Conner v. Marjoribanks, 4 M. & Gr. 445.

2. 1 Taylor's Evidence, § 909. See Otis v. Spencer, 102 Ill. 622; 40 Am. Rep. 617.

3. Stein v. Bowman, 13 Pet. (U. S.)

209; Coffin v. Jones, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 444; Barnes v. Camack, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 392; Cornell v. Venartsdalen, 4 Pa. St. 364; Robb's Appeal, 98 Pa. St. 501; Griffin v. Smith, 45 Ind. 366; Stanley v. Montgomery, 102 Ind. 102; Crose v. Rutledge, 81 Ill. 266; Lingo v. State, 29 Ga. 470; Patton v. Wilson, 2 Lea (Tenn.) 101; Collins v. Mack, 31 Ark. 684; Williams v. Baldwin, 7 Vt. 503; State v. Phelps, 2 Tyler (Vt.) 374; Gray v. Cole, 5 Harr. (Del.) 418; Dexter v. Booth, 2 Allen (Mass.) 559; O'Conner v. Majoribanks, 4 M. & Gr. 435, overruling Beveridge v. Minter, 1 C. & P. 364, and confirming Monroe v. Twistleton, Pea. Add. Cas. 219.

The husband of his deceased wife is not a competent witness to testify in any suit against the interest of her succession to any fact which took place during her lifetime. Succession of Wade, 21 La. Ann. 343. So where the plaintiff caused the deposition of one of the defendants to be taken prior to the trial, in which the witness gave testimony concerning communications had with her husband during the marriage and prior to his death, it was held that such testimony fell within the prohibition of the Kansas Code, which forbids husband or wife "to testify concerning any communication made by one to the other during marriage, whether called while that relation subsisted or afterwards." French v. Wade, 35 Kan. 391.

4. Monroe v. Twistleton, Pea. Add. Cas. 219.

5. Robinson v. Talmadge, 97 Mass. 171; Dexter v. Booth, 2 Allen (Mass.)

leged.¹ While the law will not permit husband and wife to testify as to their confidential communications with each other, yet a third person hearing the conversation between husband and wife may give evidence of it;² though a third person cannot be admitted to repeat what one of them said to him as to their confidential communications.³ So a wife is a competent witness as to the declarations and statements made by her husband to third persons in her presence,⁴ and the correspondence of husband and wife which is in the custody and control of a third person may be used as evidence in the case.⁵ So conversations between husband and wife in the presence of third persons are not privileged.⁶ But if the conversation is had in the presence of persons who are not shown to have taken any part in or paid any attention to the conversation, it will be incompetent evidence.⁷

2. Evidence Impeaching the Legitimacy of Children.—See BASTARDY, vol. 2, p. 129.

3. Evidence Offensive to Public Morals.—A learned text writer observes that there is no direct authority for the proposition that evidence is incompetent on the ground that it is indecent, offensive to public morals, or injurious to the feelings of third persons.⁸ But it has been held that evidence respecting sex of a third person, offered in action on a wager as to the sex, should not be received;⁹ nor evidence on the question whether a certain unmarried woman had borne a child.¹⁰ In each of these cases, the decision seems to have turned on the fact that the 559; Kelley v. Drew, 12 Allen (Mass.) 107; Coffin v. Jones, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 441; Litchfield v. Merritt, 102 Mass. 524. See Schmied v. Frank, 86 Ind. 250; Tracy v. Kelly, 52 Ind. 535; Holts v. Dick, 42 Ohio St. 26; 51 Am. Rep. 791; Nolan v. Harden, 43 Ark. 307.

Confessions of Crime.—In Stein v. Bowman, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 209, it was held that A, after the death of her husband could not be allowed to prove that her husband had confessed to her that he had committed perjury in a deposition read in the cause. See People v. Mullings, 83 Cal. 138.

1. Haugh v. Blythe, 20 Ind. 24; Hanks v. Van Garder, 59 Iowa 179; Dickerman v. Graves, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 308; 53 Am. Dec. 41; Litchfield v. Merritt, 102 Mass. 524; Succession of Ames, 33 La. Ann. 1317; Stein v. Weidman, 20 Mo. 17; Stober v. McCarter, 4 Ohio St. 513; Gaskill v. King, 12 Ired. (N. Car.) 211; Elswick v. Com., 13 Bush (Ky.) 155; Robb's Appeal, 98 Pa. St. 501.

Husband's Cruelty.—The privilege does not exclude a wife from testifying in divorce proceedings to her husband's cruelty. Burdett v. Burdett, 2 Mackey (U. S.) 469.

2. Gannon v. People, 127 Ill. 518.

3. Brown v. Wood, 121 Mass. 137.

4. Mercer v. Patterson, 41 Ind. 444.

5. State v. Buffington, 20 Kan. 599; 27 Am. Rep. 193. See Tays v. Carr, 37 Kan. 142.

6. Floyd v. Miller, 61 Ind. 224; Pratt v. Delavan, 17 Iowa 307; Fay v. Guynon, 131 Mass. 31; Keator v. Demmick, 46 Barb. (N. Y.) 158; Allison v. Borrow, 3 Coldw. (Tenn.) 414; 91 Am. Dec. 291; State v. Center, 35 Vt. 379. See Westerman v. Westerman, 25 Ohio St. 500.

7. Jacobs v. Hessler, 113 Mass. 160. See Ayers v. Ayers, 28 Mo. App. 97.

8. Best on Evidence, § 537, citing Lord Mansfield, who said, in Da Costa v. Jones, Cowp. 729: "Indecency of evidence is no objection to its being received where it is necessary to the decision of a civil or criminal right."

9. Da Costa v. Jones, Cowp. 729.

10. Ditchburn v. Goldsmith, 4 Campb. 152.

parties to the action had officiously, voluntarily, and impertinentlly interested themselves in what was no affair of theirs.
Where, on the other hand, the reception of the evidence is necessary for the purposes of civil or criminal justice, as, for example, on a trial for rape, bastardy, or seduction, on the question of the legitimacy of a claimant, or in an action for criminal conversation, there is no rule of law or practice justifying its exclusion.¹

VI. COMMUNICATIONS NOT PRIVILEGED—1. Telegraphic Dispatches.—

Telegraphic dispatches are not privileged communications, though it has been urged that the same rule could be applied as that which precludes postmasters from disclosing the contents of letters passing through the mails. The exemption in the case of such letters depends on the Federal statute; and in the absence of a statute relating to telegrams, the courts have declined to recognize the analogy.²

2. Miscellaneous Communications.—The foregoing constitute the principal exceptions to the general rule admitting evidence relevant to the matter in hand. Secrets disclosed in the ordinary course of business, or the confidence of friendship are not protected,³ nor confidential communications to parents from their children,⁴ nor to servants from their masters.⁵ Nor does the

1. In Greenleaf on Evidence, § 253, this view of the subject is elaborated thus: "The mere indecency of disclosures does not, in general, suffice to exclude them where the evidence is necessary for the purposes of civil or criminal justice; as, in an indictment for a rape, or in a question upon the sex of one claiming an estate entailed, as heir male or female; or upon the legitimacy of one claiming as lawful heir; or in an action by the husband for criminal conversation with the wife. In these and similar cases the evidence is necessary, either for the proof and punishment of crime, or for the conviction of rights existing before, or independent of, the fact sought to be disclosed. But where the parties have voluntarily and im-pertinentlly interested themselves in a question tending to violate the peace of society by exhibiting an innocent third person to the world in a ridiculous or contemptible light, or to disturb his own peace and comfort, or to offend public decency by the disclosures which its decision may require, the evidence will not be received."

2. See on this point, Com. v. Jeffries, 7
Allen (Mass.) 548; 83 Am. Dec. 712;
National Bank v. National Bank, 7 W.
Va. 544; Ex parte Brown, 7 Mo. App.

494; 72 Mo. 83; 37 Am. Rep. 426;
State v. Litchfield, 58 Me. 267; U. S.
v. Babcock, 3 Dill. (U. S.) 566.

In the American Law Register for February, 1879, is an article by Judge
Cooley, urging that, upon principle, telegraphic dispatches should be privileged. An argument to the same effect will be found in 20 Albany L. J.
108.

In 1 Wharton on Evidence, § 595 n., is cited an English case where, in 1878, the court declined to order the production, by the post-office, by which telegrams are communicated, of a telegram.
Mr. Wharton explains this ruling on the ground that, in England, the government undertakes the forwarding of telegrams, and that the judicial department cannot compel an executive department to produce papers.

3. Best on Evidence, § 586; Hoffman
v. Smith, 1 Cal. (N. Y.) 157; Smith v.
Daniel, L. R., 18 Eq. 649; Cady v.
Walker, 62 Mich. 157. And see the judgment of Lord Kenyon in Wilson v.
Rastall, 4 T. R. 758, and the cases from the State trials there referred to.

4. Wharton on Evidence, § 607.

5. State v. Isham, 6 How. (Miss.)
35; State v. Charity, 2 Dev. (N. Car.)
543.

privilege extend to communications to the clerk,¹ banker,² or steward.³ By the law of nations, diplomatic agents may not be compelled to testify, and sometimes treaties protect consuls.⁴ Communications made by one defendant to another to enable him to defend the suit are not privileged;⁵ nor communications between an applicant for a patent and a patent officer touching an unissued patent.⁶

PRIVIES—PRIVITY—(See also JUDGMENTS, vol. 12, p. 92; PARTIES TO ACTIONS, vol. 17, p. 518).—The term "privity" denotes mutual or successive relationships to the same rights of property; and privies are distributed into several classes according to the manner of this relationship. Thus there are privies in estate, as donor and donee, lessor and lessee, and joint tenants; privies in blood, as heir and ancestor, and co-parceners; privies in representation, as executors and testator, administrators and intestate; privies in law, where the law, without privity of blood or estate, casts the land upon another as by escheat.⁷

A privy is a person who has an interest in an estate created by another; a person having an interest derived from a contract or conveyance, to which he is not himself a party. Thus, an heir is privy to the conveyance of his ancestor, an executor to the contract of his testator, and the assignee of a lessor to the contract of the original parties.⁸

Privy is also used in the sense of private, as privy seal, privy verdict, etc.⁹

1. Lee v. Birrell, 3 Camp. 337; Webb v. Smith, 1 C. & P. 337.

2. Loyd v. Freshfield, 2 C. & P. 325.

3. Vaillant v. Dodemead, 2 Atk. 524; Falmouth v. Moss, 11 Price 455.

4. Wharton on Evidence, § 607 a. And see In re Dill, 7 Sawy. (U. S.) 761.

5. Betts v. Menzies, 3 Jur., N. S. 885; Whitbread v. Gurney, Younge 541; Sankey v. Alexander, 8 Ir. R., Eq. 241.

6. Edison's Electric Light Co. v. U. S. Electric Light Co., 44 Fed. Rep. 294.

7. 1 Greenl. Ev., § 189, quoted in Coan v. Osgood, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 588.

A derivative kind of interest founded upon or growing out of the contract of another, as that which subsists between an heir and his ancestor, between an executor and testator, and between a lessor or lessee and his assignee. Burrill's L. Dict., quoted in Coan v. Osgood, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 588.

8. Burrill's L. Dict., quoted in Coan v. Osgood, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 588.

Privies are persons who are parties to, or have an interest in, any action or thing, or any relation to another; they are of several kinds—privies in blood, as heir and ancestor, privies in representation, as the executor or administrator to the deceased; privies in estate, as the relation between donor and donee, lessor and lessee; privies in respect to contract; and privies on account of estate and contract together. Gourad v. Gourad, 3 Redf. Surr. Rep. (N. Y.) 267; Lord v. G. N. & P. S. Co., 4 Sawy. (U. S.) 300, quoting Bouv. L. Dict.

Privy of Estate.—See ESTOPPEL, vol. 7, p. 4; LEASE, vol. 12, p. 1034; REAL COVENANTS.

Privy of Contracts.—See CONTRACTS, vol. 3, p. 863; NOVATION, vol. 16, p. 884; PARTIES TO ACTIONS, vol. 17, p. 518; LIVERY STABLE KEEPERS, vol. 13, p. 942; LOGS AND LUMBER, vol. 13, p. 1042.

Privies in Representation.—There is no privity between different administrations. See FOREIGN EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, vol. 8, p. 427, JUDGMENTS, vol. 12, p. 91.

9. Privy Verdict is one given out of PRIZE.—a. A prize is ordinarily some valuable thing, offered by a person for the doing of something by others, into the strife for which he does not enter.¹

b. A prize is properly something taken on the high seas from a common enemy against whom war is declared.²

c. In marine insurance, a capture, any taking or seizing, even unlawfully, by force.³

PRIZE-FIGHT.—(See also AFFRAY, vol. 1, p. 315; ASSAULT, vol. 1, p. 807).—The act of prize-fighting is the act of fighting for a prize or reward.⁴

Prize-fighting was not a distinctive offense at common law; but the combatants together with their aiders and abettors were indictable and punishable for assault, affray or riot, according to circumstances.⁵ And, if one of the principals died from injuries re-court, before one of the judges thereof; and it is called privy, being to be kept secret from the parties until it is affirmed in court. Jacob's L. Dict., tit. Verdict, quoted in Com. v. Heller, 5 Phila. (Pa.) 124.

A privy verdict is when the judge hath left or adjourned the court; and the jury, being agreed, in order to be delivered from their confinement, obtain leave to give their verdict privily to the judge out of court, which privy verdict is of no force, unless afterwards affirmed by a public verdict given openly in court; wherein the jury may, if they please, vary from the prior verdict. Jacob's L. Dict., tit. Verdict, quoting Willard v. Shaffer, 6 Phila. (Pa.) 520. See also VERDICT.

1. Harris v. White, 81 N. Y. 539.

2. See INTERNATIONAL LAW, vol. 11, p. 484; Beek v. Tryall, Carthew 32.

Property taken from an enemy; any goods the subject of marine capture. Groning v. Union etc. Ins. Co., 1 Nott. & M. (S. Car.) 539.

3. Anderson's L. Dict., citing, Dole v. New England Mut. etc. Ins. Co., 6 Allen (Mass.) 373.

4. Sullivan v. State, 67 Miss. 352.

In that case John L. Sullivan was indicted under the Mississippi Acts of 1882, p. 142, which prohibits "prize-fighting," but does not define the offense. The court by Cooper, J., said: "It thus appears that while these two lexicographers" (Worcester and Webster) "define a prize-fighter to be one who fights publicly for a reward, Worcester defines prize-fighting as the act of fighting for a prize, while Webster defines it as fighting in public for a reward or wager, and prize-fight to be a contest in which the combatants fight for reward or wager. According to the lexicographers, it would seem to be left doubtful whether to constitute a prize-fight there must be a fighting in public." And it was held that the Mississippi statute was directed against prize-fighting which is public in character, and tends to disturb the peace and quiet of the community in which it occurs, and to debase not only the participants, but others who are admitted as spectators. (See this case also cited infra, this title.)

5. Rex v. Perkins, 4 C. & P. 537; 19 E. C. L. 515; Reg. v. Brown, C. & M. 314; 41 E. C. L. 175. See also Rex v. Billingham, 2 C. & P. 234; 12 E. C. L. 105; Reg. v. Coney, 8 Q. B. D. 534; Sullivan v. State, 67 Miss. 350; 2 Bishop on Crim. Law, § 35.

Spectators.—As to what constitutes a spectator of a prize fight, an aider and abettor, is a question upon which there has been some conflict of authority.

In Rex v. Murphy, 6 C. & P. 103, 25 E. C. L. 301, the court by Littledale, J., said: "My attention has been called to the evidence of those witnesses who have said that the prisoner did nothing; but I am of opinion that persons who are at a fight, in consequence of which death ensues, are all guilty of manslaughter, if they encourage it by their presence. I mean, if they remain present during the fight; I say that if they were not causally passing by, but stayed at the place, they encouraged it by their presence, although they did not say or do anything."

And in Rex v. Perkins, 4 C. & P. 537, 19 E. C. L. 515, the court by Patterceived in the fight, his opponent and the other parties to the fight were guilty of manslaughter.¹

In most of the States, prize-fighting is now a statutory offense.² A party to a prize-fight may recover damages from his opponent for an assault and battery. The prize-fight being unlawful, the son, J., said: "There is no doubt that prize fights are altogether illegal. . . . If all these persons went out to see these men strike each other and were present when they do so, they are all, in point of law, guilty of assault; there is no distinction between those who concur in the act and those who fight".

Mr. Russell states the doctrine thus: "There is no doubt that prize fights are altogether illegal; indeed, just as much so as that a person should go out to fight with deadly weapons, and it is not at all material which party strikes the first blow; and all persons who go to a prize fight to see the combatants strike each other, and who are present when they do so, are, in point of law, guilty of assault." 1 Russ. on Cr. 854. See also Rex v. Bellingham, 2 C. & P. 234; 12 E. C. L. 105; Rex v. Hargrave, 5 C. & P. 170, 24 E. C. L. 260.

But it appears that these cases have been overruled by a late English case, Reg. v. Coney, 8 Q. B. D. 534, where it was held that to prove a defendant to have been voluntarily at a fight and looking on, without other evidence, is not enough to justify a conviction for aiding and abetting the fight. See also Spectators at Prize Fight, 15 Central L. J. 217. And this view of the law is sustained by an eminent American authority, who uses the following language: "It may be said in a sort of general way, that all who by their presence countenance a riot or prize fight or any other crime—especially if ready to help should necessity require—are liable as principal actors. But this statement needs to be made more exact. A mere presence is not sufficient, nor is it alone sufficient in addition, that the person present, unknown to the other, mentally approves what is done. There must be something going a little further, as, for example, some word or act. The party to be charged 'must' in the language of Cockburn, C. J., 'incite or procure, or encourage the act.'" 1 Bishop. Cr. Law, §§ 632-633, and cases there cited.

The case in the opinion to which Lord Cockburn used the words quoted by Mr. Bishop in the above paragraph, was as follows: Upon a quarrel two men agree to fight, and place in the hands of a third party a sum of money to be paid to the winner; beyond holding the stakes the third party had nothing to do with the fight, and was not present at it. The men fought and one of them received injuries from which he died. The stake-holder paid the winner the wager. Held, upon trial, that the stake-holder is not accessory before the fact to the manslaughter. Queen v. Taylor, L. R., 2 Cr. C. Res. 147; 12 Moak's Eng. Rep. 636.

Sparring Match.—The spectators of a sparring match are not participes criminis, so that their evidence, touching what occurred at the match, requires corroboration. There is nothing unlawful in sparring unless, perhaps, the men fight on until they are so weak that a dangerous fall is likely to be the result of the game. Therefore, except in the latter case, death caused by an injury received during a sparring match, does not amount to manslaughter. Reg. v. Young, 10 Cox's Cr. Cas. 371.

1. Rex v. Hargrave, 5 C. & P. 170; 24 E. C. L. 260. See the preceding note. See also HOMICIDE, vol. 9, p. 588.

2. New York Pen. Code, § 458; Mississippi Acts of 1882, p. 142; Idaho Code of 1887, § 6957; Massachusetts Gen. Stat. ch. 160, § 17.

Sufficiency of the Indictment.—An indictment against two persons, under Massachusetts Gen. Stat., ch. 160, § 17, which avers substantially in the words of the statute, that being inhabitants of the State, they, on a certain day, by a previous appointment made within the State, did leave the State and engage in a fight with each other without its limits, was held to be sufficiently certain. Com. v. Barrett, 108 Mass. 302. And see also Com. v. Welsh, 7 Gray (Mass.) 324.

But in Sullivan v. State, 67 Miss. 346, under Mississippi Acts 1882, p. 142, which in general terms provides "that it shall be unlawful for any person to engage in prize-fighting," without further definition of the offense, it was consent of the plaintiff to fight is no bar to his action;¹ but his consent may be given in evidence in mitigation of damages.²

The maxim volenti non fit injuria, or what is commonly called leave and license, constitutes one of the general exceptions to the principles of liability for civil wrongs; but, the defense of consent, whether in criminal prosecution or in civil suit, has very distinct limitations. According to an eminent English writer, consent is not enough to justify bodily harm, unless there is some kind of just cause, such as extirpation of disease in the case of surgery; willful hurt is not excused by consent if it has no reasonable object. On this ground it is plain that prize fights are illegal "even when entered into by agreement and without anger or mutual ill-will."³ It is thus easy to distinguish prize fighting from other cases of consent, where while there is an intent to do bodily harm, there is a just cause (as in surgery); and, on the other hand, from all such pastimes as boxing with padded gloves, or playing at foils, where intent to do bodily harm is absent or specially negatived.⁴ By some writers, the illegality held not sufficient to indict by using the statutory words. It must be charged that there was a fight for a reward or wager in a public place, or where the public were admitted as spectators; and, it was also held, that the offense can only exist where two persons engaged in the unlawful act, and it must be alleged and shown that they contended against each other.

1. Matthew v. Ollerton, Comb. 218; Boulter v. Clark, Bull N. P. 16; Bell v. Hansley, 3 Jones (N. Car.) 131; Stout v. Wren, 1 Hawks. (N. Car.) 420; 9 Am. Dec. 653; Logan v. Austin, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 476; Adams v. Waggoner, 33 Ind. 534; 5 Am. Rep. 231. See also Dole v. Erskine, 35 N. H. 503; Com. v. Collberg, 119 Mass. 350; 20 Am. Rep. 328; ASSAULT, vol. 1, p. 784.

2. Adams v. Waggoner, 33 Ind. 531; 5 Am. Rep. 231; Logan v. Austin, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 476.

3. See Pollock on Torts, ch. 4, where leave and license is considered as No. 10 of general exceptions to principles of liability for civil wrongs—conditions which, when present, prevent an act from being wrongful which in their absence would be a wrong. (The author shows how the maxim volenti non fit injuria on the one hand is not universally true, and, on the other hand, that it fails to cover cases where there is no consent specifically to suffer harm, but to abide the chances; as the case of a spectator at a game). See also CONSENT, vol. 3, p. 663, 665.

See Com. v. Collberg, 119 Mass. 350; 20 Am. Rep. 328. See also Reg. v. Coney, 8 Q. B. D. 534.

4. "The distinction," says Sir Frederick Pollock, "seems to be, that agreement will not justify the willful causing or endeavoring to cause appreciable bodily harm, for the mere pleasure of the parties, or others." Reg. v. Lewis, 1 C. & R. 421. See Foster's Crown Law.

So fencing, or playing with blunt sabers is lawful, because the players mean no hurt to one another, as is shown by the use of masks and pads, but a duel with sharp swords, "after the manner of German students" is not lawful, "though the conditions be such as to exclude danger to life or limb.

... It seems to be what is called a question of mixed law and fact, whether a particular action or contest involves such intention to do real harm, that consent or assent will not justify it." See Reg. v. Coney, 8 Q. B. D. 534, where the court by Cave, J., said: "The true view is, I think, that a blow struck in anger, or which is likely or is intended to do corporal hurt, is an assault, but that a blow struck in sport and not likely or intended to cause bodily harm is not an assault, and that an assault being a breach of the peace and unlawful, the consent of the person struck is immaterial. If this view is correct, a blow struck in a prize fight is clearly of prize fighting is put on the ground of breach of the public peace, where the defense of assault is of no avail as an excuse based on a breach of the law.¹ But this view seems unsatisfactory for lack of distinctness.² While differing, however, as to grounds, all writers agree that prize fighting is unlawful.³

an assault; but playing with single sticks or wrestling do not involve an assault; nor does boxing with gloves in the ordinary way." (See Reg. v. Orton, 39 L. T. 293.) So the opinion of Stevens, J., in Reg. v. Coney, 8 Q. B. D. 534, where he says "in cases where life and limb are exposed to no serious danger in the common course of things, I think that consent is a defense to a charge of assault, even when considerable force is used; as, for instance, in cases of wrestling, single stick, sparring with gloves, base ball and the like; but in all cases the question whether consent does or does not take from the application of force to another its illegal character, is a question of degree depending upon circumstances." See Stevens Dig. of Crim. Law.

1. See Cooley on Torts, pp. 162 & 263, where he says, that while "consent is generally a full and perfect shield, when that is complained of as a civil injury which was consented to . . . ; in the case of a breach of the peace, it is different. The State is wronged by this and forbids it on public grounds. . . . There are three parties here, one being the State which of its own act does not suffer the others to deal on a basis of contract with the public peace." See Adams v. Waggoner, 33 Ind. 531; 5 Am. Rep. 231; Com. v. Collberg, 119 Mass. 350; 20 Am. Rep. 328. See also State v. Beck, 1 Hill (S. Car.) 363; Champer v. State, 14 Ohio St. 437. See Bishop on Crim. Law, § 35: "No concurrence of wills can justify a public tumult and alarm; therefore persons who voluntarily engage in a prize-fight and their abettors are all guilty of assault." See Duncan v. Com., 6 Dana (Ky.) 295.

2. The term "breach of the peace" has a wide scope and is used in several senses. In strict pleading, every application of force, even the slightest is vi et armis and contra pacem. Bac. Abr. Trespass (I), 2, 1. The term, therefore, in this sense cannot add more than is contained in any action of trespass and cannot constitute a separate ground. See Pollock on Torts, p. 139.

Further, breach of the peace, in the sense in which it is actually meant, necessarily involves and depends upon assault, and while the majority of authorities agree that a prize-fight is assault, still in so far as authorities differ on this point, breach of the peace offers no separate ground for the illegality.

Thus, the definition of Addison (see Addison on Torts, § 787) is: "An assault must be done against the will of the person assaulted, and, therefore, it cannot be said that a person has been assaulted by his own permission. If the act is done in the course of sport between persons taking liberties with each other by mutual consent, there is no assault." See Christopherson v. Bare, 11 Q. B. 477; Reg. v. Martin, 9 C. & P. 214; 38 E. C. L. 37; Reg. v. Johnson, 34 Law J. M. C. 192. See also Addison on Torts, § 835: "If the act complained of has been done by the leave and license or permission of the plaintiff, it is not an assault, and the leave and license may consequently be given in evidence under the plea of not guilty. If two persons agree to play cricket together and the one strikes the other with a ball in the course of the game, this is not an assault; for 'it is a contradiction in terms to say that the defendant assaulted the plaintiff by the leave and license or permission of the latter.'" Christopherson v. Bare, 1 Q. B. 477.

Finally if breach of the peace be taken as the ground for the illegality of prize-fighting, instead of the question of intent, as stated in the text, there is no clear rule of distinction between prize-fighting and other pastimes where the intent to do bodily harm was wanting.

3. 2 Bishop on Crim. Law, § 35; vol. 1, § 535. See Reg. v. Brown, C. & M. 314; 41 E. C. L. 175. See Cooley on Torts 163; Washburn Manual of Crim. Law: "A fighting with the fists is assault and battery, though the parties agree thus to fight, and have no ill-will towards each other."

PROBABILITY.—See note 1.

PROBABLE CAUSE.—See MALICIOUS PROSECUTION, vol. 14, pp. 24, 63; CAUSE, vol. 3, p. 45; SEARCHES AND SEIZURES.

PROBATE AND LETTERS OF ADMINISTRATION.—(See also CONFLICT OF LAWS, vol. 3, p. 499; COURTS, vol. 4, p. 477; DOMICILE, vol. 5, p. 857; EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, vol. 7, p. 165; FOREIGN EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, vol. 8, p. 414; INSANITY, vol. 11, p. 105; JOINT EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, vol. 11, p. 1016; JUDGE, vol. 12, p. 2; REVOCATION; WILL.)

I. Probate, 162.

1. Probate Jurisdiction, 162.

a. Courts Exercising Jurisdiction, 162.

(1) American, 162.

(2) English, 162.

b. Judicial Interest as Affecting Jurisdiction, 163.

c. Domicile as Affecting Jurisdiction, 164.

d. Situs of Property, 166.

(1) Personal Estate, 166.

(2) Real Estate, 172.

e. Foreign Wills, 173.

2. What Papers Require Probate, 174.

a. Papers Testamentary in Character, 174.

b. Papers Not Testamentary in Character, 176.

c. Extraneous Papers Referred to in a Will, 176.

d. Paper Appointing Executor, 178.

e. Paper Appointing Guardian, 178.

3. Duty of the Executor or Custodian of the Will to Produce it for Probate, 178.

4. Time Within Which Will Should be Produced for Probate, 178.

5. Procedure, 179.

a. The Petition, 179.

b. Probate in Common Form, 180.

c. Probate in Solemn Form, 180.

6. Effect of Probate, 181.

7. Proof of the Will, 183.

8. Partial Probate, 183.

9. Nuncupative Wills, 184.

10. Probate of Lost Wills (See LOST PAPERS), 184.

II. Letters of Administration, 184.

1. Intestacy Necessary to Grant of Administration, 184.

1. Probability.—A committee of viewers found that a tract of land would, "in

2. Death Necessary to Grant of Administration, 184.

3. Limitation as to the Value of the Estate in Certain States, 187.

4. Time Within Which Administration May be Granted, 187.

5. Appointment of Administrators. Construction of 31 Edw. III, ch. 11 and Derivative and Analogous Statutes, 188.

a. Husband, 188.

b. Widow, 190.

c. Next of Kin, 192.

d. Creditors, 193.

e. General Considerations Affecting the Choice of Administrators, 195.

(1) Suitableness, 195.

(2) Residence, 198.

(3) Age, 198.

(4) Corporations, 199.

(5) Illegitimates, 199.

(6) Amount of Interest, 199.

(7) Renunciation and Nomination by the Persons Entitled to Administration, 199.

f. Public Administration, 201.

6. Procedure, 204.

7. Effect of Decree, 206.

8. When Administration May be Dispensed With, 208.

9. Secondary and Limited Administration, 209.

a. Appointment of Administrators Cum Testamento Annexo, 209.

b. Appointment of Administrators de Bonis Non, 212.

c. Administration During Minority, 215.

d. Administration During Absence, 216.

e. Administration Pendente Lite, 216.

f. Special Administration, 218.

all probability," continue to be held and used for railroad freight purposes.

I. PROBATE—1. Probate Jurisdiction.—In Great Britain, the United States, and other countries subject to institutions of English origin, where a man dies leaving personal property, his estate is administered and distributed under the supervision of a local court, whose jurisdiction is confined in whole or in part to such matters.

a. COURTS EXERCISING JURISDICTION.—(1) American.—In many of the United States there are special courts whose jurisdiction is confined wholly to matters of probate, and to the administration of decedents' estates. In New England, and many of the Western States, each county has a court of probate;¹ in Pennsylvania and various other States there is an orphans' court in each county;² in Kentucky, and in some Western and Southern States, the county court has probate jurisdiction.³ In North Carolina, the powers and jurisdiction of a probate judge are now exercised by the clerk of the superior court as an independent tribunal of original jurisdiction.⁴ In other States clerks have a certain probate jurisdiction in vacation.⁵

2. English.—In England prior to 1857, probate jurisdiction was in the ecclesiastical courts, and by local custom, in certain of the

Held, that a mere probability was not sufficient to affect the case under consideration, and that if a degree of probability, which amounted to a practical certainty was intended, the facts on which the conclusion was based should have been found, so that the court might see on what it rested. New York etc. R. Co. v. New Britain, 49 Conn. 40.

Probability Distinguished from Proof.—"It seems to us that there is a difference between probability and proof. The object of both words is to express a particular effect of evidence, but proof is the stronger expression. All the dictionaries give different definitions of probability. That of Worcester is 'Likelihood of the occurrence of an event in the doctrine of chance, or the quotient obtained by dividing the number of favorable chances by the whole number of chances,' and one in Webster is 'Likelihood, appearance of truth, that state of a case or question of fact which results from superior evidence or preponderation of argument on one side, inclining the mind to receive it as the truth, but having room to doubt.' 'Demonstration produces certain knowledge, proof produces belief, and probability opinion.'" McGowen, J., in Brown v. Atlanta etc. R. Co., 19 S. Car. 39; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 487.

1. Tompkins v. Tompkins, 1 Story

(U. S.) 547; Graham v. O'Fallon, 3 Mo. 507. The name "Probate" is applied to such courts in the statutes of Alabama, California, Connecticut, Illinois, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, and New Hampshire.

2. So also in Delaware, Maryland and New Jersey.

3. In Kentucky the county courts have jurisdiction to grant letters of administration. Briscoe v. Brady, 6 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 134; Renfro v. Trent, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 604; Gray v. Gundry, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 133; Thomas v. Tanner, 6 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 58; Hyatt v. James, 8 Bush (Ky.) 9.

County courts have jurisdiction over probate matters in Colorado, Florida and Illinois.

In Arkansas, the county and probate courts are distinct tribunals, although the same person is judge of both. Letters of administration granted by the county judge and issued by the clerk of the county court, are therefore invalid. Hynds v. Imboden, 5 Ark. 385.

In Georgia, probate courts are called Courts of Ordinary. In New York, Surrogate Courts. In New Jersey, Prerogative Courts.

4. Clerks.—Edwards v. Cobb, 9 N. Car. 4.

5. By the Revised Statutes of Indiana 506, the clerk of the probate manorial courts. By the statute of 20 and 21 Vict., ch. 77 (1857) a new tribunal, known as the court of probate, was erected, and the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical and manorial courts over decedents' estates was superseded.¹ By the Judicature Act of 1873, § 21, the Court of Probate was merged in the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division of the High Court of Justice.

b. JUDICIAL INTEREST AS AFFECTING JURISDICTION.—If a judge of probate has any interest in the estate, or has been appointed executor thereof, he cannot assume jurisdiction to probate the will or grant letters of administration.²

court has authority to grant letters of administration in vacation, when the right to administration is not controlled, and the court is bound to ratify such appointment, unless some valid objection be made to it. Brown v. King, 2 Ind. 520. See also Drake v. Sigafos, 39 Minn. 367.

The Louisiana act of January 17, 1838, No. 8, amending C. C. art. 1178, and conferring on probate judges the right to appoint administrators to estates under $500 in value, does not embrace clerks. Wilson v. Imboden, 8 La. Ann. 140.

Letters of administration cannot be granted by a deputy clerk in his own name. Stewart v. Cave, 1 Mo. 752.

1. Schouler gives the following account of the early Probate Jurisdiction in England: "Jurisdiction over wills and their probate in England belonged, before ecclesiastical functions were exercised in such cases, to the county court or to the court baron of the manor where the testator died; and before these county tribunals all other matters of civil dispute were determined. This power of the probate existed down to a quite recent period in certain English manors, and so as to preclude the interference of the ordinary. The earl formerly presided over this county court; though subsequent to the introduction of Christianity the bishop sat with the earl. Soon after the Norman invasion, however, the ecclesiastical and temporal jurisdictions were separated; and gradually the bishops became invested with plenary authority as to matters which pertained to the estates of the dead. Some English writers appear to have regarded this authority as in fact usurped by the ecclesiastics. But Blackstone ascribes it rather to the crown's favor to the church, citing the observation of Perkins that the law considered spiritual men of better conscience than laymen, and thought that they had more knowledge as to what things would conduce to the benefit of the soul of the deceased. And according to the great English commentator, the disposition of intestates' effects once granted in confidence by the crown to the ordinary, the probate of wills followed as of course; for it was thought just and natural that the will of the deceased should be proved to the satisfaction of the prelate, whose right of distributing his chattels for the good of his soul was effectually superseded thereby. This ecclesiastical or spiritual jurisdiction attended as it was with flagrant abuses at which the papacy seems to have connived doubtless inspired dread and disaffection in the temporal courts and among the English laity; for restraints were put repeatedly, by statute or judicial construction, upon the ordinary authority, even in cases where he strove to enforce justice, and the necessity of probating wills was reduced to the narrowest limits." Schouler's Executors and Administrators, 14.

2. Thus in Alabama, if the probate judge has a claim against an insolvent estate, he is incompetent to assume jurisdiction, and the register must perform the judicial duty. Thornton v. Moore, 61 Ala. 347.

In Massachusetts, a probate judge is not disqualified from probating a will, by reason of the fact that one of the creditors of the estate is his father-in-law, if such creditor is not a party to the proceedings before him. Alldrich's Appeal, 110 Mass. 189.

In Hall v. Thayer, 105 Mass. 219; 7 Am. Rep. 513, it was decided that the judge of the probate court could not act upon an application for the appointment of his own brother-in-law as administrator de bonis non cum testamento annexo.

c. DOMICILE AS AFFECTING JURISDICTION.—As a general rule a court of probate has jurisdiction over the administration of an estate, if the decedent, at the time of his death, had his domicile within the limits of the jurisdiction of the court.¹ What was the decedent's last domicile is to be inferred from all the facts and cir-

The distinction between Aldrich's Appeal and Hall v. Thayer, is that in the latter the applicant was a near kinsman of the judge; while in the former the person interested in the estate was a creditor who had not as yet become a party. The court held, in Aldrich's Appeal, that the mere possibility of such a person becoming a party was not sufficient to disqualify the judge. Wells, J., said: "Whenever he does so become a party, the judge who is his near connection cannot act in the matter. But his remote and contingent interest for the protection of which the law gives him the right to become a party to proceedings before the court, does not of itself make him such, unless he sees fit to exercise that right."

In Glavecke v. Tijirina, 24 Tex. 663, it was held that a judge who owned jointly with the decedent, a tract of land, was not disqualified from appointing an administrator of the estate, approving accounts, or making other orders not referring to the tract of land.

If a probate judge refuses to assume jurisdiction on account of interest and the will is probated in an adjoining county, the probate judge of the latter county has jurisdiction to hear and determine all other proceedings necessary to a final administration of the estate. Gregory v. Ellis, 82 N. Car. 225.

See also COURTS, vol. 4, p. 447; JUDGE, vol. 12, p. 2.

1. Domicile.—The last domicile affords the suitable principal forum for procuring credentials of authority and settling the estate of a deceased person. But inasmuch as the collection of credits and effects, the payment of debts, the distribution of the residue, and the final settlement of the estate, are of universal convenience, the courts of one country or State do not feel compelled to wait until those of another have acted, nor to submit domestic claims to foreign jurisdiction; but, aside from the deceased person's last domicile and a principal probate appointment, a competent local and ancillary appointment is procurable, on the suggestion that property requiring administration lies within the local jurisdiction. In other words, locality, with personalty belonging to the estate of a deceased person, may confer a local probate jurisdiction, regardless of the consideration of his last domicile. This general doctrine is amply recognized in the statutes of England and the several United States which relate to probate jurisdiction." Schouler's Executors and Administrators 34. In re Delaplaine, 45 Hun (N. Y.) 225; Carroll v. Hughes, 5 Redf. (N. Y.) 337; Goodlett v. Anderson, 7 Lea (Tenn.) 286; Wood v. Matthews, 73 Mo. 477; St. John v. Hodges, 9 Baxt. (Tenn.) 334; Hatchett v. Berney, 65 Ala. 39; Estate of Gavin, 18 N. Y. St. Rep. 399; Holyoke v. Haskins, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 20; 16 Am. Dec. 372; Stevens v. Gaylord, 11 Mass. 256; Wilson v. Frazier, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 130; Johnson v. Corpenning, 4 Ired. (N. Car.) 216; Collins v. Turner, 2 Tayl. (N. Car.) 105; McBain v. Wimbish, 27 Ga. 259; McCampbell v. Gilbert, 6 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 592; Estate of Harlan, 24 Cal. 182; 85 Am. Dec. 58; Watson v. Collins, 1 Ala. Sel. Cas. 515; Succession of Williamson, 3 La. Ann. 261; Ex parte Barker, 2 Leigh (Va.) 720; Moore v. Philbrick, 32 Me. 102; 52 Am. Dec. 642; Armstrong v. Bakewell, 18 La. Ann. 30; Providence Rubber Co. v. Goodyear, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 788; Atkinson v. Hasty, 21 Neb. 663; Holmes v. Oregon etc. R. Co., 6 Sawy. (U. S.) 262; Tant v. Wigfall, 65 Ga. 412; Patillo v. Barksdale, 22 Ga. 356.

In Sommerville v. Lord Sommersville, 5 Ves. Jr. 786, the rule is laid down that succession to the personal estate of an intestate is to be regulated by the law of the country in which he was domiciled inhabitant at the time of his death; without any regard whatsoever to the place either of the birth or the death, or the situation of the property at that time.

In Talbot v. Chamberlain, 149 Mass. 57, it appeared that, pending proceedings for the appointment of a guardian for an insane person, the latter moved to Iowa. The guardian was appointed cumstances of the case;¹ but the rule prevails that "though one may have two domiciles for certain purposes, he can have only one for the purpose of succession."²

Where a person dies in itinere, the foreign country should not assume jurisdiction except, perhaps, as to property locally situated in that country.³ Where a person has left one domicile with the intention of settling in another, but dies on the journey, the cases vary as to which jurisdiction should grant letters of administration. In some States it has been held that letters should be granted in the place of destination,⁴ while others favor the old domi-notwithstanding and assented to the change of residence. The insane person resided in Iowa until he died. Held, that the Iowa court had original jurisdiction of the probate of his will.

Indiana.—In New York an Indian of the Six Nations, is incapable of acquiring a domicile so as to confer probate jurisdiction. Dole v. Irish, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 639; in Alabama, an Indian who died before his nation had become subject to the laws of the State, was held capable of acquiring a domicile so as to give jurisdiction to a probate court. Brashear v. Williams, 10 Ala. 630.

1. What Constitutes Residence.—In Texas, a mere temporary residence in any county does not give the court of that county exclusive jurisdiction to grant administration on the estate of a decedent under the statute. (Hart. Dig., art. 1030); it must have been a fixed domicile or residence. George v. Watson, 19 Tex. 354.

In Harvard College v. Gore, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 370, the decedent resided many years in the county of Middlesex, purchased and furnished a house in the county of Suffolk, and afterwards resided with his family during the summer season in Middlesex, where he paid his taxes, and in Suffolk during the winter season, and died while so residing in Suffolk. Held, that he was an inhabitant of Middlesex, and that the judge of that county rightfully took the probate of his will.

Burden of Proof.—In Master v. Bienker, 87 Ky. 1, the plaintiff averred that testatrix died a resident of Campbell county, Ky., the county wherein the will was probated and suit brought. Defendants denied this, and alleged affirmatively that her domicile was in Louisiana, and that the Kentucky court had no jurisdiction in the matter of probate and administration. Held, that the burden was on defendants to show that said court had transcended its authority.

2. In Sommerville v. Lord Sommersville, 5 Ves. Jr. 750, the Master of the Rolls said: "The next rule is, that though a man may have two domiciles for some purposes, he can have only one for the purpose of succession. That is laid down expressly in Denisart under the title "Domicil," that only one domicile can be acknowledged for the purpose of regulating the succession to the personal estate. I have taken this as a maxim and am warranted by the necessity of such a maxim; for the absurdity would be monstrous if it were possible that there should be a competition between two domiciles as to the distribution of the personal estate. It could never possibly be determined by the casual death of the party at either. That would be most whimsical and capricious. It might depend upon the accident whether he died in winter or in summer, and many circumstances not in his choice, and that never could regulate so important a subject as the succession to his personal estate."

3. Death in Itinere.—In Aspinwall v. Queen's Proctor, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 241, it appeared that Hammond, a citizen of the United States, was killed in consequence of a fall from a coach while traveling from London to Liverpool in order to embark for the United States. The deceased left property in England to the amount of about £1,000. The American consul-general took possession of some of the effects, but Bearing Bros. declined to pay £627 due to the estate of the deceased, until an administration was obtained. An application was accordingly made to the court to grant administration to the consul-general. Administration was refused.

4. In Burnett v. Meadows, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 277; 46 Am. Dec. 517, a person who had a domicile in one State, started with his family to settle cile.¹ In England and some of the United States, it has been held that if the domicile abandoned was an acquired domicile, then the domicile of origin would be the proper place in which to take out letters of administration.²

d. SITUUS OF PROPERTY.—(1) Personal Estate.—Where a person dies, leaving personal property elsewhere than at the place of his domicile, the probate court of the place where the property lies may assume probate jurisdiction without regard to the in another State, and died on the journey. His family continued the journey with the property belonging to the decedent. The court held that letters of administration might be granted where the family settled.

The court said: "Inasmuch, however, as this property was in transitu, when he died, and afterwards reached its destination, and as many inconveniences would result from the absence of power in our county courts to regulate its administration, it should be regarded as being at the time of his death constructively in this State, under the circumstances here presented; solely, however, for the purpose of enabling a county court in this State to grant administration thereon." See Schoul. on Exrs. & Adms., pt. 1, § 23.

In Olson's Will, 63 Iowa 145, the testator, being in poor health, left his place of residence in Illinois, with the intention of making his future home elsewhere, and after staying a short time at each of several places in quest of health and business, he despaired of regaining his health, and finally settled down with his mother, who was a widow in Taylor county, Iowa, intending to remain there an indefinite time. Here he was married, made his will and soon afterward died. The court held that Taylor county, Iowa, was his domicile at the time of his death; that the circuit court of that county had jurisdiction of the probate of his will, and that the court would not entertain a motion to dismiss the proceedings by alleged creditors resident in Illinois, who claimed that the testator had his domicile in that State, and that the will should be probated there.

In North Carolina it has been held that where a decedent has no fixed residence, administration on his estate may be granted by the courts of the State where he died. Leake v. Gilchrist, 2 Dev. (N. Car.) 73. In Missouri the same rule prevails. Bartlett v. Hyde, 3 Mo. 490.

1. In Cummings v. Hodgdon, 147 Mass. 21, a minor's father was domiciled at the time of his death in Suffolk county. In the month following the father's death, the minor's mother took him with her to another county, where she lived until she died, but whether she changed her domicile in that county was not stated. The guardian of the minor never changed the latter's domicile, but always intended that he should return to Suffolk. The court held that letters might be granted by the probate court of Suffolk county. See also Embry v. Miller, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 300; 10 Am. Dec. 732; State v. Hallett, 8 Ala. 159.

In George v. Watson, 19 Tex. 354, it was held that an allegation that the decedent, on whose estate administration was opened under the act of 1840, in Red River county, resided at the time of his death in Lamar county, and that his last place of residence was in Lamar county, was not a sufficient allegation of fact to show that the court of Red River county did not have jurisdiction, the court suggested that it should have been alleged that the residence in Lamar county was "fixed," that being the language of the act.

2. In Somerville v. Lord Somerville, 5 Ves. Jr. 786, the Master of the Rolls said: "The third rule I shall extract is, that the original domicile, or, as it is called, the forum originis, or the domicile of origin is to prevail until the party has not only acquired another, but has manifested and carried into execution an intention of abandoning his former domicile, and taken another as his sole domicile. I speak of the domicile of origin rather than that of birth; for the mere accident of birth at any particular place cannot in any degree affect the domicile. I have found no authority or dictum that gives for the purpose of succession any effect to the place of birth. If the son of an Englishman is born upon a journey in foreign parts, his domicile would follow that of question of domicile.¹ There must, however, be a showing of his father. The domicile of origin is that arising from a man's birth and connections." See also Udney v. Udney, L. R. 1 H. L. 458; Lyall v. Paton, 25 L. J. Ch. 746.

1. Miller v. Jones, 26 Ala. 247; Broughton v. Bradley, 34 Ala. 694; 73 Am. Dec. 474; Watson v. Collins, 37 Ala. 587; Ikelheimer v. Chapman, 32 Ala. 676; Jeffersonville R. Co. v. Swayne, 26 Ind. 477; Grimes v. Talbert, 14 Md. 169; Smith v. Munroe, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 345; Royston v. Royston, 21 Ga. 161; Weaver v. Norwood, 59 Miss. 665; Wright v. Smith, 19 Nev. 143; St. Jurjo v. Dunscomb, 2 Bradf. (N. Y.) 105; Isham v. Gibbons, 1 Bradf. (N. Y.) 69; Plummer v. Brandon, 5 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 190; Willing v. Perot, 5 Rawle (Pa.) 264.

Situs of Personal Property.—In Florida, a grant of administration to a husband for the estate of his wife, who died in Georgia, and left property in Florida, was held to be valid, and to entitle him to sue in that capacity in Florida. Blewitt v. Nicholson, 2 Fla. 200.

The Mississippi statute (H. & H. 395 § 35) provides that the granting of letters of administration on the estate of any intestate, and the hearing and determining the right of the same, shall pertain to the orphans' court of the county in which the intestate had, at the time of his death, a mansion, house, or known place of residence; and if he or she shall have no such known place of residence, then the orphans' court of the county where the intestate shall die, or of that wherein his or her estate, or the greater part thereof, shall be. Held, that the statute is to be construed to relate to the county where the estate may be at the time of the decease of the intestate. Wright v. Beck, 10 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 277. See also Cocke v. Finley, 29 Miss. 127.

In the Estate of Scott, 15 Cal. 220, a person died out of the State, leaving property in Santa Clara county, where an administrator was appointed. The widow of the decedent afterwards applied for the revocation of the letters on the ground that they should have been issued from San Francisco county. At the request of the widow and the administrator, the case was transferred to San Francisco county, where the papers were filed, and the administrator applied for leave to sell real estate, but the court declined to take jurisdiction. Held on mandamus, that the Santa Clara court had jurisdiction and could not divest itself of it, and that the estate must be settled in that court. See also People v. White, 11 Ill. 341.

In Kentucky, it has been held that, though a probate court has no jurisdiction to grant probate of the will of a party not domiciled in Kentucky, who died in another State, unless assets are found in the county in which the court is established, yet the assumption of jurisdiction is prima facie evidence of the fact that such court had authority, and throws the burden of proof on the party denying it. Fletcher v. Weir, 7 Dana (Ky.) 345.

Where an act provides that if the testator had no place of residence in the State, probate shall be had in the district where the greater part of his estate is situated, exclusive jurisdiction is conferred upon the court so designated, and this jurisdiction cannot be affected by the consent of any or all of the parties. Gallman v. Gallman, 5 Strobb. (S. Car.) 207.

Administration may be granted in the State where the deceased left property, although no administration has been taken out in the State where he was domiciled. Wood v. Matthews, 73 Mo. 477.

"As between the several courts within the same State or sovereignty, jurisdiction attaches primarily to that tribunal which is invested with probate powers for the county or territorial district which includes the domicile of the testator or intestate at the time of his death, without regard to the place of his death or situs of his property." Woerner's Am. Law of Administration, p. 439, citing McBain v. Wimbish, 27 Ga. 259; Johnson v. Beazley, 65 Mo. 250; McCampbell v. Gilbert, 6 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 592; Succession of Williamson, 3 La. Ann. 261; Holyoke v. Haskins, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 20; 16 Am. Dec. 372; Wilson v. Frazier, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 30.

In Massachusetts, where a decedent leaves personal property in two or more counties, the county probate court which first takes cognizance of the estate has exclusive jurisdiction.

property or debts to justify the appointment of an administrator.¹ But the character of the property is immaterial.²

Massachusetts Pub. Sts., ch. 156, § 3. See People v. White, 11 Ill. 341.

1. Wright v. Smith, 19 Nev. 143.

2. Nature of the Property.—A folding-chair is property sufficient to confer jurisdiction. White v. Nelson, 2 Dem. (N. Y.) 265.

A claim against an insurance company on a policy of insurance upon the life of the decedent, is an asset, and sufficient to confer on a surrogate's court of the county, where the principal office of such company is situated, jurisdiction to grant letters of administration upon decedent's estate (New York Code Civ. Pro., § 2478), notwithstanding decedent died in another State, and was at that time a non-resident, and the policy is outside of the State. In re Miller, 5 Dem. (N. Y.) 381. See also In re Butson, 9 L. R. Ir. 21; Holyoke v. Union Mut. L. Ins. Co., 22 Hun (N. Y.) 75; Johnston v. Smith, 25 Hun (N. Y.) 171.

Debts.—For the purposes of administration all simple contract debts are assets at the domicile of the debtor. In Wyman v. Halstead, 109 U. S. 654, Mr. Justice Gray said: "The general rule of law is well settled, that for the purpose of founding administration, all simple contract debts are assets at the domicile of the debtor; and that the locality of such a debt for this purpose is not affected by a bill of exchange or promissory note having been given for it, because the bill or note does not alter the nature of the debt, but is merely evidence of it, and therefore the debt is assets, where the debtor lives, without regard to the place where the instrument is found or payable." See also Sullivan v. Fossdick, 10 Hun (N. Y.) 173; Yeomans v. Bradshaw, Carth. 373; Attorney Gen'l v. Bouwens, 4 M. & W. 191; Vaughn v. Barret, 5 Vt. 333; Pinney v. McGregory, 102 Mass. 186; Goodlett v. Anderson, 7 Lea (Tenn.) 286; Mondel v. Steel, 1 Dowl. (N. S.) 155; Slocum v. Sanford, 2 Conn. 533; Chapman v. Fish, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 554; Owen v. Miller, 10 Ohio 136; 75 Am. Dec. 502; Emery v. Hildreth, 2 Gray (Mass.) 231; Wilkins v. Ellett, 108 U. S. 256; Arnold v. Arnold, 62 Ga. 627; Ives v. Jacksonville Nat. Bank, 28 Ill. App. 563; Swaney v. Scott, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 327; Grant v. Reese, 94 N.

Car. 720; Fox v. Carr, 16 Hun (N. Y.) 434.

In Robinson v. Epping, 24 Fla. 237, it was held that administration might be granted in the county wherein the intestate had a suit pending for an unliquidated claim, this constituting "goods" within the meaning of the act regulating the appointment of administrators, and that the fact that the suit afterwards resulted unfavorably to intestate's estate should not render the letters void.

The Claim Against an Administrator who, knowing of the existence of a paper purporting to be the will of the alleged intestate, distributes the property to the next of kin, is assets sufficient to justify the issue of letters of administration with the will annexed after the admission of such will to probate. In re Nesmith (Supreme Ct.), 1 N. Y. Supp. 343.

Debt.—In Pennsylvania, where the estate within the commonwealth consists of only one item, and that a debt, letters of administration should be granted in the county where the debtor resides. Sayre v. Helme, 161 Pa. St. 299. See Harberger's Will, 37 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 246.

In Iowa, administration may be taken out when there are debts due from the estate, although there is nothing but real property left by the deceased, and although he may have been a non-resident of the State. But in such case it must be averred in the petition and appear that there are debts for which the real estate is liable, or no administration can be granted. Little v. Sinnett, 7 Iowa 324.

Debts Due by the State.—In Virginia, the circuit court of the county wherein is the seat of government has jurisdiction to grant administration on the estate of an intestate who resided and died in another State, having no estate in Virginia except a claim on the State for money. Com. v. Hudgin, 2 Leigh (Va.) 248.

In Ex parte Dautherau, 2 Brev. (S. Car.) 459, where the State was indebted to the intestate, it was held, that any judge of a court of ordinary within the State might grant administration, if there was within the State no other property of the intestate whereon to administer, and that the administration which was first granted in such case should hold good.

United States Bonds deposited by citizens of another State, in Pennsylvania, for safekeeping, upon a special certificate of deposit, transferable by indorsement with the approval of the company, and upon the surrender of which the bonds are to be returned to the depositor, do not constitute, upon the depositor's death, a part of his assets in Pennsylvania. Shakespeare v. Fidelity Ins. etc. Co., 97 Pa. St. 173.

A bond, certificate of stock, or other instrument ordinarily transferable will confer a probate jurisdiction wherever it may be found. In Beers v. Shannon, 73 N. Y. 292, it was held that a debt upon a bond has its situs where the bond is, not where the obligor resides; and when, therefore, a non-resident owner of a bond dies out of the State in which he resided, leaving the bond in the State, and leaving a will of personal property executed according to the laws of the State where he resided, which is duly remitted to probate there, the bond is assets in the county where it is; and, although the obligor resides out of the county, the presence of the bond gives to the surrogate of the county jurisdiction to issue letters testamentary, upon production of a copy of the will duly authenticated as provided by the statute.

Debts by Specialty.—In the old case Byron v. Byron, Cro. Eliz. 472, it was held that debts by specialty are goods of the deceased in that diocese where they happen to be at the time of his death. The case is reported as follows: "Debt as administrator of Byron upon an obligation. The case was, that the intestate died in Lancashire, but the obligation was at London at the time of his death; and the bishop of Chester in whose diocese the intestate died, committed administration to F. S. who released to the defendant; and the archbishop of Canterbury committed the administration to the plaintiff; and this release was pleaded in bar, and it was thereupon demurred.—Warberton. Every debt follows the person of the debtor; and Chester is within the province of York, where the archbishop of Canterbury has nothing to do.—Anderson. Where one dies who has goods in divers dioceses in both provinces there Canterbury shall have the prerogative; otherwise there would be two administrations committed, which is res inaudita. The debt is where the bond is, being upon a specialty; but debt upon a contract follows the person of the debtor; and this difference has been oftentimes agreed, vide Dyer 305. And if the archbishop of Canterbury hath not any prerogative in York, but that several administrations ought to be committed; yet at leastwise administration for this bond ought to be committed by the archbishop of Canterbury. Wherefore this release is not any bar."

Shares.—In Georgia shares in the capital stock of a railroad corporation are bona notabilia in the county where the stock books are kept, transfers made, and dividends paid. Arnold v. Arnold, 62 Ga. 627.

Promissory Notes.—See St. John v. Hodges, 9 Baxt. (Tenn.) 334; Goodlet v. Anderson, 7 Lea (Tenn.) 286; Eppeng v. Robison, 21 Fla. 36; Owen v. Miller, 10 Ohio St. 136; 75 Am. Dec. 502.

Claim of Damages for Death.—A right of action created by statute merely, and contrary to the common law, will not confer probate jurisdiction beyond the limits of the State which has passed the statute. In Illinois R. Co. v. Cragin, 71 Ill. 177, it was held that the right of action created by statute in Illinois, in favor of the administrator of a person whose death was caused by the wrongful act or negligence of a railroad company in Illinois, could not be regarded as property in the State of Iowa, in such sense as to confer jurisdiction in that State to grant letters of administration upon the estate of the deceased.

In Kansas, a claim for damages, under the statute, to be recovered by the administrator of one whose death is caused by another, is prosecuted for the benefit of the widow and next of kin, and, therefore, is not "estate" of the deceased. If, under such circumstances, an administrator is appointed and it appears that the decedent was a non-resident and left no property in the State except the claim for damages, such appointment is void. Perry v. St. Joseph etc. R. Co., 29 Kan. 420.

See also generally, CONFLICT OF LAWS, vol. 3, p. 521.

Miscellaneous Cases in Which Administration Has Been Refused.—Where the right to grant administration upon the estate of a deceased member of a partnership depends on whether there was the required amount of property in the county which could be legally

If the goods of an intestate are brought into a county in good faith, after the death of the decedent, the probate court may assume jurisdiction, and grant letters of administration upon the estate.¹ The same rule applies where a debtor of a decedent used as assets of the deceased, and it appears that all the personal property belonged to the firm, and with its real estate, was insufficient to pay the debts of the firm, the deceased had no interest in the personal property which could be administered upon as his estate; and this, although there was sufficient real estate in the county, the record title of which was in the name of the deceased, but which had been purchased with partnership funds and for partnership purposes. In re Shaw, 31 Me. 207.

A resident of Arkansas died there, intestate, owning property there and personal effects in Louisiana. Held, that the heirs, who were in possession of the Louisiana property, and the Arkansas administrator, could resist successfully the appointment of the public administrator to administer in Louisiana. Succession of Smith, 40 La. Ann. 105.

A resident of Maine died there, leaving a yacht. The Maine administrator took possession of the yacht in Massachusetts and sold it. Except the yacht, there were no assets of the estate in Massachusetts. Held, that there was no estate on which to found an ancillary administrator in Massachusetts. Allen, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "We think that there was no estate of the decedent to be administered upon in this commonwealth. The yacht was in Maine at the time of his decease, and the appointment of the appellate related back and gave him a title and right of possession to it from that time, which will be recognized and enforced in other jurisdictions. Bullock v. Rogers, 16 Vt. 294; Valentine v. Jackson, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 302; Holcomb v. Phelps, 16 Conn. 127. Even if the property had never been in the State of Maine, it seems that the taking possession and sale of it here by the appellant, would have been valid, there being no creditors of the intestate here. Hutchins v. State Bank, 12 Met. (Mass.) 421; Luce v. Manchester etc. R. Co., 63 N. H. 588; Petersen v. Chemical Bank, 32 N. Y. 1; Trecothick v. Austin, 4 Mason (U. S.) 16; Doolittle v. Lewis, 7

Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 45; 11 Am. Dec. 389. It is contended in behalf of the appellee, that where chattels of a person are at his decease in the hands of his bailee, in another State from that of his domicile, the administrator of the place of domicile cannot sell them in the other place without taking possession, and cannot take possession without the consent of the bailee. We need not consider the proposition because it does not apply to the case at bar. It appears that the property was in the place of the intestate's domicile at the time of her decease, and it does not appear that it was in the hands of her bailee."

1. In Pinney v. McGregor, 102 Mass. 186, Judge Gray carefully considered this question as follows: "By the law of England, simple contract debts due to the deceased are bona notabilia in the diocese where the debtor resides. It is said indeed in the text books of approved authority, that the debtor must have resided there at the time of the intestate's death, though we do not find that this has been expressly adjudged. 1 Williams on Executors 279, and authorities cited. The canons of 1 James I (1603) upon the subject, however, speak of the deceased being 'at the time of his death' possessed of goods and chattels or good debts in any other diocese or peculiar jurisdiction than that in which he died. 1 Williams on Executors, 267, 268; but it is observable that, in the leading cases in the courts of common law, in which the administration granted in one county was declared void, the allegation was that the debtor resided in another county, not only at the time of his death, but also ever since, or at the time of the grant of administration. Yoemans v. Bradshaw, Carth. 373; 3 Salk. 70; 12 Mod. 107; Comb. 392; Holt 42; Hillard v. Cox, 1 Salk. 37; 2 Salk. 747; 1 Ld. Raym. 562; 3 Ld. Raym. 313. And in the case of Yockney v. Foyster, cited and approved by Sir John Nichol in Scarth v. Bishop of London, 1 Hagg. Eccl. 636, in which the only effects within the province were brought there after the death of the party, Sir William Wynne held that, if the court of chancery had held a grant of probate there to be necessary in order to file a bill in equity to recover the property, the ecclesiastical court 'in aid of justice' might grant letters of administration.

"Our statute declares that 'the probate court for each county shall have jurisdiction of the probate wills, granting administration of the estates of persons who at the time of their decease were inhabitants of or resident in the county, and of persons who die without the State, leaving estates to be administered within such county.' Gen. Stats., ch. 117, § 2. It does not in terms say 'leaving estates in such county at the time of their decease.' The section embodies the Rev. Sts., ch. 64, § 3, and ch. 83, § 5, which were substantial re-enactments of the St. of 1817, ch. 190, §§ 1, 16. In Pickquet Appellant, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 65, the court held that the earliest of these statutes should receive a liberal construction, to enable the representatives of deceased foreign creditors to collect the debts of the deceased here in the only way in which by our laws they could be recovered, that is to say, through the power of administration granted by the laws of this commonwealth; and that a debt due from a citizen of this commonwealth to a foreign subject at the time of his death should therefore be deemed estate left by him in this commonwealth, within the meaning of that statute. The same rule of construction must be applied to this case."

"Before that statute, the probate courts of the commonwealth exercised the jurisdiction of granting administration on property belonging or debts due to persons residing abroad, in order to enable them to be collected in this State, because, without any such appointment, no suit could be brought in Massachusetts for the assets or debts of the deceased, either in the courts of the commonwealth or of the United States. Goodwin v. Jones, 3 Mass. 514; 3 Am. Dec. 173; Stevens v. Gaylord, 11 Mass. 256; Picquet v. Swan, 3 Mason (U. S.) 469; Noonan v. Bradley, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 394. In Dawes v. Borlston, 9 Mass. 337, and Wheelock v. Pierce, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 288, it seems to be assumed that a debtor or goods of the intestate coming or being brought into the commonwealth after the death of the testator would give jurisdiction to support an administration. The dictum of Mr. Justice Bigelow in Bowdoin v. Holland, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 18, that 'it is undoubtedly true that if the deceased had at the time of his death neither domicile nor assets within the commonwealth, the judge of the probate had no jurisdiction in the premises,'—is not to be taken in its strictest sense. It was there held that prima facie evidence that a deceased non-resident had conveyed real estate in this commonwealth in fraud of his creditors was sufficient to warrant the grant of administration here, even if no similar grant had been made in the State of his domicile; and the question asked by the learned judge upon that point is equally applicable to this. 'If the will is never proved in the place of the testator's domicile, and is purposely withheld from probate, have creditors in this State no means of procuring administration on their deceased debtor's estate, and thereby reaching his property here. To limit the power of granting administration to cases in which the goods are, or the debtor resides in the commonwealth at the time of the death of the intestate, would be to deny the creditors and representatives of the deceased, whether citizens of this or another State, all remedy whenever goods are brought into this State, or a debtor takes up his residence here, after the death of the intestate. The more liberal construction of the statute is necessary to prevent a failure of justice.'

"In Borer v. Chapman, 119 U. S. 587, it was held, that an administration of the assets of a decedent situated in a State other than that of his domicile, under the laws and the courts of such other State, is merely ancillary; and although the statutes of such State and the proceedings under them may purport to bar all claims against the estate of the decedent, assets finally distributed there, and brought into the State of the domicile of the deceased by his executor or legatee, remain assets in the State of the domicile for the payment of any unpaid creditors choosing that forum; and such assets are impressed with a trust which such a creditor has a right to have administered for his benefit. Mr. Justice Matthews, in delivering the opinion said: "The administration of the estate of Gordon, in California, under the orders of the probate court of settles in another jurisdiction than that in which he lived during the decedent's lifetime.¹

(2) Real Estate.—In some of the United States, the situs of real estate confers jurisdiction upon the local probate court, to grant letters of administration. The object of such a policy is to give local creditors an opportunity to assert their rights against the real estate of the decedent, in case they should be unable to secure payment of their debts in other ways.²

San Francisco, was merely ancillary; the primary administration was that of the testator's domicile, Minnesota. Chapman was not a citizen of California, nor resident there; he was no party to the administration proceedings; he was not bound to make himself such. If he had chosen he could have proved his claim there and obtained payment, but he had the right to await the result of the settlement of that administration, and look to such assets of Gordon as he could subsequently find in Minnesota, whether originally found or brought there from California by the executors or legatees of Gordon's estate. The assets in California finally distributed there, and brought into Minnesota by the executor or by any legatee, remained assets in Minnesota for the payment of any unpaid creditors choosing that forum. Such assets were impressed with a trust which such creditor had a right to have administered for his benefit."

In Carroll v. Hughes, 5 Redf. (N. Y.) 337, a person domiciled in Pennsylvania died, leaving creditors there, but no next of kin except in New York and Ireland. His brother J, residing in New York State, took possession of most of the personal property, about $30,000, brought it to New York and obtained letters in New York on the ground of assets arriving there after the death. C was afterwards appointed administrator in Pennsylvania, and on J's accounting charged fraud, and prayed an order of return of the property. J denied any fraudulent intent. Held, that the validity of J's appointment could not thus be questioned, and, having rendered services, he was entitled to his expenses and commissions.

In New York, the coming into a county of the State after decedent's death, of a promissory note held by him executed in another State and secured by a mortgage on land in that State, gives the surrogate of such county jurisdiction of proceedings for the probate of decedent's will; such note being "personal property." New York Code Civ. Pro., § 2473, subd. 3; In re Hooper, 5 Dem. (N. Y.) 242.

If, however, property has been brought from elsewhere to give merely a colorable jurisdiction the court should refuse to grant letters. Schouler's Executors and Administrators 36.

Property legally situated within one State, at the time of the death, and already disposed of and administered in its courts by its laws, cannot be affected by administration or the want of it, in another State to which a legatee carries property delivered to him by order of the probate court. Wells v. Wells, 35 Miss. 638; Suarez v. Mayor etc. of N. Y., 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 173.

1. Fox v. Carr, 16 Hun (N. Y.) 434.

2. Real Estate.—In Hart v. Coltrain, 29 Wend. (N. Y.) 378, Bronson, J., said: "Although the letters are granted with a primary reference to the personal assets, and do not per se confer any authority on the administrator over the lands of the deceased, yet when the personalty proves insufficient for the payment of the debts, the administrator may have an order for the sale of the real estate.

Under the act of 1813, although it should appear affirmatively that there was no personal estate, I think the judge of surrogate might grant administration with a direct view to the sale of the real estate of the deceased. If he could not, then there would be no remedy for a creditor in a case where the heir at law resided out of the State, although there might be an abundance of real property to satisfy all claims upon the intestate."

In Alabama, the word "assets," as used in the provision of the code authorizing the grant of letters of administration on the estate of a non-resident who dies intestate, includes lands situated in the county in which the let-

c. FOREIGN WILLS.—The proper place to probate the will of a decedent, is in the probate court of the county where the decedent was last domiciled, and this is the case irrespective of the place where the will was made, or the country or State where the decedent happened to die.¹ If administration is granted in the jurisdiction of the decedent's last domicile, this is the principal administration, and an appointment granted elsewhere, on account of local assets, is ancillary merely.²

Where a person has made a will, valid under the laws of his domicile, and subsequently changes his domicile to a State or country where the will does not comply with the local requirements of a valid will, and then dies, the will cannot, in the absence of legislation to the contrary, be admitted to probate in the place of the last domicile.³ To remedy this defect, statutes ters are granted; and the statute applies to the estate of a non-resident alien, who dies intestate owning such lands. Nicrosi v. Giuly, 85 Ala. 365. This rule was also applied in Bishop v. Lalouette, 67 Ala. 197, where a resident of France died there, leaving no other property in Alabama than land.

See also Temples v. Cain, 60 Miss. 478; Lees v. Wetmore, 58 Iowa 170; Posenthal v. Reinck, 44 Ill. 202; Sheldon v. Rice, 30 Mich. 296.

The "proper county," in cases of non-residents dying and leaving lands in the State, is the county where such lands, or a part of them lie, and in such county, administration should be granted. Bowles v. Rouse, 8 Ill. 409; Sprayberry v. Culberson, 32 Ga. 299; Rutherford v. Clark, 4 Bush (Ky.) 27.

In Slatter v. Carroll, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 573, it was held that, where there are real assets of the estate of a deceased person within its jurisdiction, although no administration has been taken within the State, a court of equity will not hesitate to administer them.

1. Stark v. Parker, 56 N. H. 481; Converse v. Starr, 23 Ohio St. 491; Carpenter v. Denoon, 29 Ohio St. 379; Campbell v. Sheldon, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 8; Hood v. Lord Barrington, L. R., 6 Eq. 218.

Under the New York Code of Civil Procedure, if a testamentary paper is shown to have been executed in conformity with the laws of New York, it is, so far as regards the formalities of execution, entitled to probate whatever and by whomsoever executed, whatever the nature of the property whose disposition it seeks to effect, and wherever such property may be situated. In re McMulin, 5 Dem. (N. Y.) 295.

2. Merrill v. New England L. Ins. Co., 103 Mass. 245; 4 Am. Rep. 548; Childress v. Bennett, 10 Ala. 751; 44 Am. Dec. 503; Goodall v. Marshall, 11 N. H. 88; 35 Am. Dec. 472; Ordonaux v. Helie, 3 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 512; Fay v. Haven, 3 Met. (Mass.) 109; Adams v. Adams, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 177; Spraddling v. Pipkin, 15 Mo. 117; Clark v. Clement, 33 N. H. 563; Green v. Rugely, 23 Tex. 539; McCord v. Thompson, 92 Ind. 565; Dial v. Gary, 14 S. Car. 573; 37 Am. Rep. 737; Reynolds v. McMullen, 55 Mich. 568; 54 Am. Rep. 386; Collins v. Bankhead, 1 Strobb. (S. Car.) 25; Perkins v. Stone, 18 Conn. 270.

The reason that the administration of the last domicile is regarded as the principal administration, is based on the international doctrine that the law of the domicile of the owner of personal property governs in regard to the right of succession, whether such owner dies testate or intestate. Crispin v. Doglioni, 9 Jur., N. S. 653; L. R., 1 H. L. 301; Wilkins v. Ellett, 108 U. S. 256.

The principal letters need not precede the ancillary. Bowdoin v. Holland, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 17; Burnley v. Duke, 1 Rand. (Va.) 108; Shepherd v. Rhodes, 60 Ill. 301; Stearns v. Gaylord, 11 Mass. 256; Pinney v. McGregory, 102 Mass. 192; Rosenthal v. Renick, 44 Ill. 202; Cosly v. Gilchrist, 7 Dana (Ky.) 206.

3. "If the testator, having made a will in accordance with the law of his domicile, subsequently changes his residence and acquires a new domicile in another State, the will becomes void, have been enacted in England, and in several of the United States which provide that if a will is valid under the laws of the State or country where it was made, or where the testator was last domiciled, it may be admitted to probate, although it does not comply with the requirements of the law of the local jurisdiction.¹

2. What Papers Require Probate.—a. PAPERS TESTAMENTARY IN CHARACTER.—All papers which are testamentary in character unless it conforms to the law of his last domicile." Woerner's Am. Law of Administration 495; Story Conf. of Laws, § 473; Schouler's Ex. & Adm. § 17.

In Missouri, it has been held that a will made in another State by a person then a resident of such State, but who afterwards returned to Missouri, and died there, was invalid if not made according to the laws of Missouri. Nat v. Coons, 10 Mo. 543; Stewart v. Petrus, 10 Mo. 755.

In Moultrie v. Hunt, 23 N. Y. 394, it was decided that the validity of the execution of a will of personal property depends upon the law of the place where the testator was domiciled at the time of his death, not at the time of the execution of the will. See also Dupuy v. Wurtz, 53 N. Y. 556. In the latter case the facts were as follows: The testatrix, a resident of and domiciled in New York, went abroad with her husband in 1859, on account of her health. She spent her winters at Nice, occupying rooms at a hotel; one room for storing her property she hired by the year; the summers she spent traveling. She made her will at Nice in 1868, executed in accordance with the laws of New York, but not according to the requirements of the French law. Up to that time she kept her house in New York city unoccupied, intending and expecting to return as soon as her health would admit. About that time she began to abandon the hope of restored health and of a return, still claiming, however, in her letters and in her will, her residence in New York. Afterward she rented her house in New York, retaining one room to store her effects, and declared in letters and orally that she did not expect to return to her home in New York. In other respects she continued to live as before. She retained her investments in New York and made none abroad. Held, that the evidence failed to establish an intention to adopt a foreign domicile, and it not appearing that the testatrix had acquired a new domicile as respects her succession, she did not lose by her relinquishment of her plan of return, her domicile in New York, and that the will was valid.

1. In England, by the statute 24 and 25 Vict. 114, 1861, 1862, it is provided that a will of personal estate made out of the United Kingdom by a British subject, shall be deemed well executed, whatever may be the domicile of the testator at the time of making the will, or of his death if made according to the forms required by the law of the place where made, or of the place of the domicile of the testator at the time of making the will, or of the laws then in force in that part of her majesty's dominions where he had his domicile of origin. Also that no subsequent change of domicile shall affect the validity or construction of the will. See In re Reid, L. R., 1 P. & D. 74.

In Massachusetts, a similar statute has been passed. Massachusetts Pub. Stats., ch. 127, § 4. This statute protects a nuncupative will, valid in the place where it was made, though invalid in Massachusetts. Docomb v. Docomb, 13 Allen (Mass.) 88.

See also Matter of Gilleran, 50 Hun (N. Y.) 399; Estate of Gavin, 18 N. Y. St. Rep. 399; Dickey v. Vann, 81 Ala. 425.

In re Delaplaine, 45 Hun (N. Y.) 225, an Austrian holographic unattested will was held admissible to probate in New York.

A will executed and proved according to the law of the domicile of the testator, upon a filing of a copy of the record of the probate containing a copy of the will, in the State of New Hampshire, pursuant to the laws of that State, may operate to transmit real property situated in that State, although not executed according to the requirements of the New Hampshire statute of wills. Kennard v. Kennard, 63 N. H. 303.

The validity of a will executed and duly proved in another State cannot be attacked collaterally in the State of Oregon. Wells v. Neff, 14 Oregon 66.

and contain provisions relating to the disposition of real or personal property should be probated.¹ In England, prior to the Court of Probate Act of 1857, a distinction was made between wills of real and personal property. It was held, that the former must always be presented to a probate court, while probate of the latter was unnecessary and improper. If, however, the will disposed of both real and personal property, it was required to be proved entirely in a court of probate, though such probate was without prejudice to the heirs. Under the act of 1857, probate of all papers of a testamentary character is made in the court of probate, and where a will contains a disposition of real estate, the heirs and devisees are required to be cited, and where this is

In Helme v. Sanders, 3 Hawks. (N. Car.) 566, Henderson, J., said that the object of taking letters testamentary, in order to collect a debt due to the testator, in another State, after probate of the will in the State of his domicile, is to furnish the court with the documentary proof, which it can recognize as genuine, of the original probate. The will is not to be proved anew, but the fact of the former probate is to be made matter of record in the probate court of the State where the suit is to be brought.

A provision is usually made by statute for filing an authenticated copy of a will, in case of a deceased non-resident, if the will has been duly probated in the State or country of the testator's last domicile. See Keith v. Keith, 97 Mo. 223; Winslow v. Donnelly, 119 Ind. 565; Slavi v. Parker, 56 N. H. 481; Converse v. Starr, 23 Ohio St. 491; Pennsylvania act of April 23, 1889, P. L. 48; Texas Stat. March 23, 1887; Gen. L. 1887, ch. 56, p. 38; New York act of June 4, 1888, L. 1888, ch. 495, p. 786; New Jersey Statute of April 23, 1888, acts 1888, ch. 318, p. 473; Kirby v. Lake Shore etc. R. Co., 120 U. S. 130.

1. Codicills should be probated, even though the codicil contains nothing but a revocation of a former will. Laugh-ton v. Atkins, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 535.

Execution of Power.—Where a will is made in execution of a power, it must be probated. See Sugd. on Pow. (6th ed.) 21; Tattnall v. Hankey, 2 Moore P. C. C. 342; Goldsworthy v. Crossley, 4 Hare 140.

Power of Attorney.—A paper, in the form of a power of attorney, may be admitted to probate, if intended to operate as a testamentary disposition of property. Rose v. Quick, 30 Pa. St.

225. So also may a deed. Frew v. Clarke, 80 Pa. St. 171; or bill of exchange; Jones v. Nicholay, 2 Rob. (La.) 288. A promissory note. Cover v. Stem, 67 Md. 449. Entries in check book, containing testamentary words in the stub part relating to the check executed on the check side, were held to be admissible to probate, although there was no signature except that on the check, the stub and check being separated by perforated lines. Lambaert's Estate, 48 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 187. In general, if a writing shows an intent to dispose, in whole or in part of a person's estate upon his decease, a probate is proper. Patterson v. English, 71 Pa. St. 454; Clingan v. Micheltree, 31 Pa. St. 25; Succession of Echrenberg, 21 La. Ann. 280; Wood's Estate, 36 Cal. 75; Robinson v. Schly, 6 Ga. 515; Johnson v. Yancey, 20 Ga. 707; Symmes v. Arnold, 10 Ga. 506; Walker v. Jones, 23 Ala. 448; Mosser v. Mosser, 32 Ala. 551; Dunn v. Bank of Mobile, 2 Ala. 152; Means v. Means, 5 Strobb. (S. Car.) 167; Ragsdale v. Booker, 2 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 348; Brown v. Shand, 1 McCord (S. Car.) 409; Wheeler v. Durant, 3 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 452; Jackson v. Jackson, 6 Dana (Ky.) 657; Allison v. Allison, 4 Hawks (N. Car.) 14; Carey v. Dennis, 13 Md. 1; Rohrer v. Stehman, 4 Watts (Pa.) 442; Millege v. Lamar, 4 Desaus. (S. Car.) 617; M'Gee v. M'Cants, 1 McCord (S. Car.) 517; Wilbar v. Smith, 5 Allen (Mass.) 194; Lyles v. Lyles, 2 Nott & M. (S. Car.) 531; Millican v. Millican, 24 Tex. 426; Masterman v. Maberly, 2 Hagg. 247; Goods of Morgan, L. R., 1 P. & D. 214; Moye v. Kittrell, 29 Ga. 677; Edwards v. Smith, 35 Miss. 197; Thorncroft v. Lashmar, 2 Sw. & Tr. 794; Taylor v. D'Egville, 3 Hagg. 206; Bright v.

done, the decree establishing the will is valid against all parties.¹

In the United States, no discrimination is made between wills of real and personal property.²

b. PAPERS NOT TESTAMENTARY IN CHARACTER.—Papers which do not pretend to be testamentary, such as a letter, not executed and attested according to law, do not require to be probated.³

c. EXTRANEOUS PAPERS REFERRED TO IN A WILL.—Where a will, properly executed and witnessed, refers to a paper not so executed and witnessed, containing directions as to the disposition of the executor's estate, such paper, if in existence at the date of the will and clearly identified as the paper referred to, is a part of the will, and should be admitted to probate as such.⁴

Adams, 51 Ga. 239; Frew v. Clarke, 80 Pa. St. 171; Daniel v. Hill, 52 Ala. 430; In re Marsden, 1 Sw. & Tr. 552. See also WILLS.

In In re Beebe, 19 N. Y. St. Rep. 833, the following paper was admitted to probate: "After my mother's death, my cousin A is my heir. This writing is instead of a formal will which I intend to make B executrix."

In accordance with provisions of the charter of a savings fund society, a depositor therein, by writing in its books, appointed and directed that all moneys so deposited by him, with the interest thereon, should be paid after his death to a person named, if not otherwise disposed of by will. Held, that this writing was testamentary in character. Armstrong's Estate, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 166.

1. 1 Williams on Executors 388; Schouler's Executors and Administrators 74.

2. In Tennessee, a will insufficiently attested as to realty, may be probated as to personalty. Davis v. Davis, 6 Lea (Tenn.) 543. In some of the Southern States more witnesses are required for a will of realty than for one of personalty.

3. Letters.—Thus a writing bearing even date with a paper having the form of and purporting to be the last will and testament of the party, and disposing clearly and absolutely of all his estate—which writing refers to the paper as the party's "will" and speaks of itself as "a letter" written for the information and government of the executors, so far only as they see fit to carry out the testator's present views and wishes—has no testamentary obligation, even though it direct the persons to whom it is written to allow such and such persons to have specific benefits named in specific items of property. Lucas v. Brooks, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 436.

A paper which disposes of no property has, generally speaking, no testamentary character and need not be probated. Van Straubenzee v. Monck, 3 Sw. & Tr. 6.

4. Extraneous Papers.—In Allen v. Maddock, 11 Moore, P. C. 427, a codicil headed "This is a codicil to my last will and testament," was duly executed and attested in 1856; upon search among the papers of the testatrix after her death, there was found, inclosed in a sealed envelope, on which were written the words: "Mrs. Ann Foote's will," a will executed by her in 1851, but not so attested as to have any validity as a will, and no other testamentary paper of any description was found. The court held that this will was sufficiently identified as the last will referred to by the codicil of 1856, and was incorporated with and made valid by that codicil, and that the two should be admitted to probate as together constituting the last will and codicil of the testatrix.

In Newton v. Seaman's Friend Soc., 130 Mass. 91, the testator by a codicil expressly revoked a part of his will which gave directions for the payment of a legacy, and ordered and directed his executors to pay the legacies mentioned in his will and codicils, as nearly as might be, according to the directions written in a book by Melvin W. Pierce, signed by the testator and witnessed by Pierce. The book referred to contained such directions, so written, signed, and witnessed, specifying the property out of which the legacy was to be paid. The court held that the book should be admitted to probate.

In Goods of Durham, 1 Notes of Cases 365; 3 Curt. Eccl. 57, a widow made a will devising and bequeathing all her real and personal estate upon the trust expressed in the will of her late husband, which she described by its date and as having been afterwards revoked. It was held that the revoked will of her husband should be admitted to probate as part of her will.

In Goods of Dickens, 1 Notes of Cases 398; 3 Curt. Eccl. 60, a testator left property to his eldest son, in trust for himself and the other children as expressed in an indenture of settlement made between him and the testator two years before. The court held that the indenture was part of the will, and that a notarial copy should form part of the probate.

In Goods of Willesford, 1 Notes of Cases 404; 3 Curt. Eccl. 77, a testator left a will and codicil, and, on the first page of the will, referred to "the paper hereunto annexed, as a further distribution of my effects." At his death the will and codicil were found in a sealed packet, and attached to the will by a pin was a paper containing such a disposition and stated by the testator to be the paper referred to in the will. This paper was admitted to probate as part of the will.

Testatrix bequeathed certain articles to her executor, "to dispose of the same in the manner specified in my letter to him of this date." At the date of the execution of the will the letter was not written, but was afterwards dictated by testatrix. Held, that the letter was properly excluded from probate as a part of the will; and that, although the bequests were void for uncertainty, yet, as they formed but a small part of the estate, the will was properly admitted to probate. Estate of Shillaber, 74 Cal. 144.

Testatrix, the day before undergoing an operation which ended fatally, wrote two letters; the first, which was addressed to a personal friend, gave directions as to certain articles of plate to which testatrix had affixed the names of various donees; in the second, which was addressed to her executor, and, which was only attested as a codicil, she mentioned having written the first letter. Held, that the second letter, which constituted a valid codicil, incorporated the first letter, and that the first letter incorporated the papers therein referred to. Symes v. Appelbe, 57 L. T., N. S. 599.

Where, however, the extraneous paper referred to is the property of another person, who refuses to surrender it, the court will not order its production, but will direct probate of the will without the incorporation of the paper. In the goods of Sibthorp, L. R., 1 P. & D. 105, Wilde, J., said: "The court is not justified in seeking to elucidate a testator's intentions by compelling third persons to produce private deeds which may form part of the title to estates in which the testator had no concern. If the result be that the probate is imperfect, it arises from the necessity of the thing, and the fault lies with the testator, or with those who advised him to make a will in such a form. The court does at times insist on a document other than the testamentary instrument forming a part of the probate, and the reason for its doing so is two-fold. First, those interested under the will are interested in having set out in the probate, under the sanction of the court, any document which is referred to in the will in such a way as to be incorporated with it, and it may be that if that was not done the court of construction might hold that such document was not part of the will. Secondly, it is convenient that the ultimate destination of the residue should be on record in the registry, in order that if the chain of representation should be broken, the court may have before it means of ascertaining who is entitled to a grant for the further distribution of the estate. In this case, as regards the first reason, the parties applying for the probate do not wish to have the document set out in it; and as regards the second reason, although no doubt it is desirable that the destination of the residue should, if possible, appear upon the probate, yet if that can only be done by forcing on people who do not desire it the production of an instrument in which third persons only are interested, the court will not insist upon it. If it can be done otherwise, the court ought to require it. If an affidavit is made showing that the persons who have the custody of the deed refuse to allow that portion of it which concerns the distribution of the residue to be copied and inserted in the probate, then the probate must go without it. Very likely it may turn

d. PAPER APPOINTING EXECUTOR.—A paper containing a mere nomination of an executor, without any disposition of property, is a will, and should be admitted to probate.¹

e. PAPER APPOINTING GUARDIAN.—A paper executed as a will which simply appoints a guardian for minor children, is not entitled to probate.²

3. Duty of the Executor or Custodian of the Will to Produce it for Probate.—After the death of a testator it is the duty of the executor to propound the will for probate,³ but any other person interested in the will may propound it,⁴ and any other person in whose custody it is, may be compelled to produce it in order that it may be proved by some person entitled to probate it.⁵ If any one is interested in the estate, or supposes that he is entitled to a legacy or devise under the will, he may petition for a citation to have the will produced.⁶ A person who suppresses a will may be committed for contempt by the probate court,⁷ or he may be punished as for a criminal offense.⁸

4. Time Within which Will Should be Produced for Probate.—In the absence of legislation there seems to be no fixed limit of time within which a will may be admitted to probate. In England and the United States, statutes have been passed which require the production of the will within a reasonable time after the death of the decedent.⁹ If for any reason the will has not been pro-out on examination of the deed that a portion of it sufficient to ascertain the ultimate disposition of the residue may be extracted and incorporated in the probate without hurting those to whom the deed belongs. But it is for them to say what they will do. It is their deed, and the court will not force them to produce it. I decree probate of the will and codicils subject to the production of the affidavit I have mentioned."

1. Schouler's Executors and Administrators 76. Goods of Jordan, L. R., 1 P. & D. 555; Goods of Lancaster, 1 Sw. & Tr. 464; O'Dwyer v. Geare, 1 Sw. & Tr. 465; Miller v. Miller, 32 La. Ann. 437. See Goods of Barden, L. R., 1 P. & D. 325.

2. Goods of Morton, 3 Sw. & Tr. 422. But Schouler questions whether this holds true in States where the probate court has original jurisdiction in the appointment of guardians as well as executors. See Schoul. Wills, § 294; Schouler's Executors and Administrators 76.

3. 3 Redfield on Wills (3rd ed.) 8; Schoul. Exrs. & Adms., § 53; 2 Minor's Insts. (3rd ed.) 1044.

4. 2 Minor's Insts. (3rd ed.) 1044;

Stone v. Huxford, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 452; Bliss' Ann. Code (N. Y.), § 2614.

An agent of a party interested may apply for probate. Russell v. Hartt, 87 N. Y. 19.

5. Schoul. Exrs. & Adms., § 53; 3 Redfield on Wills, p. 14; Massachusetts Gen. Stats., ch. 92, § 16.

6. "The application for probate of a will of personal estate may be made either by an executor or by any other person interested in the estate under the will. And where the executor institutes proceedings in his own name only, any other person who has an interest in establishing the will, and who would be precluded if the decision was against the validity, has an unquestionable right to intervene, and thus make himself a party to the proceeding, if he is unwilling to trust the protection of his rights to the party by whom such proceedings were instituted." Foster v. Foster, Paige (N. Y.) 48.

7. Brick's Estate, 15 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 12.

8. Stebbins v. Lathrop, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 33.

9. In Massachusetts, a statute requires every custodian of a will within duced for a number of years after the death of testator, it is proper to admit it at any time upon due proof of its validity.¹

5. Procedure—a. THE PETITION.—In the United States, the executor usually presents the will to the probate court with the petition setting forth the circumstances of the death, the place of the last domicile of the deceased, and praying for the probate of the paper or papers presented, and for letters testamentary. Affidavit is made as to the truth of the facts set forth in the petition.²

thirty days after the notice of the death of the testator, to deliver it in the probate court which has jurisdiction of the case, or to the executor named in the will. Massachusetts Gen. Stats. ch. 92, § 16.

1. In Massachusetts, a will may be admitted to probate at any time in order to establish title to real estate. Shumway v. Holbrook, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 115; 11 Am. Dec. 153. In Waters v. Stickney, 12 Allen (Mass.) 1, it was held that the probate court, fourteen years after admitting a will to probate, might admit to probate a codicil written upon the same leaf, which had escaped attention and was not passed upon at the time of the probate of the original will. Mr. Justice Gray said: "It has been directly, adjudged by this court that a will may be proved even thirty years after the death of the testator, though original administration could not by statute be granted after twenty years;" and again, "if no will had been proved, the lapse of time would not prevent both will and codicil from being proved now."

In the recent case of Haddock v. Boston etc. R. Co., 146 Mass. 155, a will was admitted to probate in 1885, the testatrix having died in 1822. Devens, J., after discussing the earlier cases, said: "While it is true that in neither of these cases has it been decided that a will disposing of lands can be admitted to probate after sixty years, yet there is no suggestion in any of them that there is any limitation of time to such proof, and the language used is quite explicit to the contrary. In view of the decisions made, and the repeated expressions directly relevant to the cases considered used in argument by judges of this court, we cannot treat this inquiry as the defendant desires we should, as practically a new question. We must deem it one that has been fairly passed upon and decided. It may be that the inconveniences which might arise from the probate of a will many years after the death of the testator are such that a statute limiting the period might be properly enacted. That course has in some States been adopted. Connecticut Gen. Stats. 1875, tit. 18, ch. 11, § 11; Maine Rev. Stats. ch. 64, § 1. But Statutes of Limitation are arbitrary, and the considerations which apply to positive laws of this character are legislative rather than judicial. In every instance where a great length of time has elapsed after the death of the testator, possessory titles may have been acquired which will prevail against the record. What is due to the just rights of the devisees is to be considered with reference to other rights of property, or to the repose of the community, but such considerations belong to the domain of legislation. So long as one can produce the evidence necessary to obtain the probate of a will, we can see no legal reason why one who relies upon it should not be allowed to prove it as he would be permitted to prove a deed, however ancient, under which he claimed title. The fact that he could not offer in evidence a will not admitted to probate, as he might an ancient deed, would certainly afford no reason why its authority should not be established in the probate court by its regular course of procedure."

2. In Philadelphia the blank form of petition is as follows: "The petition of _____ respectfully sheweth that is the executor named in the last will and testament of _____ dated the _____ day of _____ A. D. 18 ____ That said _____ was a resident of Philadelphia county, State of Pennsylvania, and departed this life at number _____ in the county of _____ and State of _____ on the _____ day of _____ A. D. 189 ____ at _____ o'clock _____ M.

The said testator was possessed of personal property to the value of $ _____ and real estate (less incumbrance) to the value of $ _____. Therefore the said _____ respectfully applies for

b. PROBATE IN COMMON FORM.—The probate of a will in common form is made, when the executor presents it to the probate court without having cited any of the parties interested, and produces witnesses who testify to its validity. In England and some of the United States, wills are usually probated in common form, upon the oath of the executor, and this is done upon the presumption that the writing presented is valid in all respects.¹

Probate of a will in common form is conclusive until overturned by direct proceedings.²

c. PROBATE IN SOLEMN FORM.—A will is probated in solemn form when all parties in interest are cited or notified to appear at probate of the said last will and testament and for letters testamentary thereon."

1. Wms. Exrs. (6th ed.) 320; Brett v. Brett, 2 Add. 224; Goods of Hare, 3 Curt. 54; Goods of Edmonds, 1 Hagg. 698; Goods of Tolcher, 2 Add. 16; Goods of Gibbs, 1 Hagg. 376; Goods of Taylor, 1 Hagg. 642; Palmer v. Dent, 2 Robt. (N. Y.) 284; Armstrong v. Baker, 9 Ired. (N. Car.) 109; Kinard v. Riddlehoover, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 258; Jones v. Moseley, 40 Miss. 261; Martin v. Perkins, 56 Miss. 204; George v. George, 47 N. H. 27; Noyes v. Barber, 4 N. H. 408.

Probate in Common Form.—In a recent case in Arkansas, the clerk of the probate court, to whom a will was presented for probate in vacation, took the depositions of the subscribing witnesses thereto, and admitted the will to record as duly probated. At the next term of the court, the will with such depositions was presented to the court, which thereupon found that the will "duly witnessed and regular in all things," and declared it to be the last will of the testatrix, and confirmed the action of the clerk. The supreme court held that, as the court had jurisdiction to take probate in common form without causing parties interested to be summoned, its judgment not stopping with confirmation of the act of the clerk, but admitting the will to record on proofs submitted, was not void. Petty v. Ducker, 51 Ark. 281.

2. In England and in those of the States of the Union which follow the English practice, the executor who has proved a will in common form may be compelled by any one interested to prove it again in solemn form. In Satterthwait v. Satterthwait, 3 Phill. 1, a probate of a codicil, granted in common form in 1808, was upon the citation of the executor by a next of kin to prove it in solemn form revoked in 1818; and in Finucane v. Gayfere, 3 Phill. 405, a will probated in common form in 1807, was revoked by a probate in solemn form in 1820. Williams in his work on Executors, says: "The difference between the common form and the solemn form, with respect to citing the parties interested, works this diversity of effect, viz: that the executor of the will proved in common form may, at any time within thirty years, be compelled, by a person having an interest, to prove it per testes in solemn form."

In some of the States, statutes provide a limited time within which a probate in common form may be contested. Roy v. Segrist, 13 Ala. 810; Nalle v. Fenwick, 4 Rand. (Pa.) 285; Parker v. Brown, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 554.

In Martin v. Perkins, 56 Miss. 204, it was held that probate in common form could not be pleaded as res judicata in a direct proceeding to determine the validity of the will.

In Ward v. Glenn, 9 Rich. (S. Car.) 127, a married woman executed a will, disposing of her separate estate, which was admitted to probate in common form. More than four years having elapsed, the husband applied for letters of administration, which the ordinary refused to grant. It was held that the refusal was proper; that the will of a feme covert is not absolutely void, there being exceptions to the general rule, and the ordinary having exclusive and general jurisdiction to admit to probate the wills of all persons, the grant of probate without appeal admitted her capacity, which could not be questioned, nor letters of administration granted while the probate was unrevoked.

the time of probate, and the will is then duly proved by witnesses.¹ In many of the United States, there is no personal service of the citation, but only a publication of a copy in a newspaper circulating in the county of the testator's last domicile.² In some States, notice must be personally served on each party in interest or mailed to their address.³ If, however, all parties in interest sign a waiver of notice, publication and service may be dispensed with.⁴

6. Effect of Probate.—The effect of probate is merely to ascertain the original validity of the will. It is not in any particular the foundation of the executor's title, for that is derived solely from the will itself at the moment of the testator's death.⁵ After

1. In Noyes v. Barber, 4 N. H. 409, Richardson, C. J., said: "We understand a probate in solemn form to be a probate made by a judge, after all persons whose interests may be affected by the will have been notified, and had an opportunity to be heard on the subject."

2. Notice.—Under the Iowa statute admitting wills to probate upon notice upon publication (Code § 2341), the court acquires jurisdiction without proof of actual notice to any of the parties interested. In re Middleton, 72 Iowa 424.

Under the requirements of the Montana statutes, that notice of hearing of a petition for probate of a will shall be published at least three times when published in a weekly newspaper (Rev. Stat., p. 195, §§ 13, 16), where such notice is published on two days only, an order made thereon admitting a will to probate is void. A recital in the order that such notice was published according to law was not conclusive, when the record shows the contrary. In re Charlebois, 6 Mont. 378.

The published notice of an application to admit a will to probate fixed July 24 as the time for the hearing, but the record showed that the hearing was, in fact, had on Aug. 7. Held, that it would be presumed, in the absence of proof to the contrary, that other business prevented the hearing on the day named, or that it was postponed for the convenience of the parties, to the subsequent day. Field v. Apple River Log Driving Co., 67 Wis. 569.

A notice of an application for admission to probate of a will was published for the length of time and in the manner prescribed by statute. Held, that mere failure to file proof of such publication, until after the time set for hearing, did not oust the court of jurisdiction, nor render its judgments void. Roberts v. Flanagan, 21 Neb. 503.

3. Cobb's Est., 49 Cal. 600; Bartell's Est., Myr. Prob. (Cal.) 130.

4. A Massachusetts statute provides that, when it appears to the court by the written consent of the heirs at law, or other satisfactory evidence, that no person interested in the estate intends to object to the probate of the will the court may grant probate thereof upon the testimony of one only of the subscribing witnesses. Massachusetts Gen. Stat., ch. 92, § 19.

5. In Ex parte Fuller, 2 Story (U. S.) 327, STORY, J., in discussing a statute of Maine which provided that no will should be effectual to pass real or personal estate, unless it should have been duly proved and allowed in the probate court, said: "The argument is, that under this clause, a will is a mere nullity before probate; that the probate gives it life and effect from that time, and not retroactively. It appears to me that this section is merely affirmative of the law, as it antecededly stood. The will before probate is, in no just juridical sense, a nullity. The very language of the section prohibits such an interpretation. The will must still be the foundation of the whole title, inchoate and imperfect, if you please, until its validity is ascertained by the probate, but still a will, and not a nullity."

It would be an anomaly in the use of language to speak of the probate of a nullity. The probate ascertains nothing but the original validity of the will as such. The act of the testator gave it life; his death consummated the title, derivatively from himself; and the probate only ascertains that the instrument in fact is what it purports on its face to be. It might as well be said that a will of real estate, at the common law, is a nullity until a jury has ascertained its validity, whereas the verdict ascertains only the fact that the title under the will is perfect, because it was duly executed by a competent testator, and therefore took effect by relation from the time of his death."

a will has been duly probated, the decree of the court of probate unappealed from, is conclusive, and cannot be inquired into collaterally.¹

"The probate operates back, by relation, to the death of the testator, and all the property of the testator in his hands must, I think, be considered as assets in his hands for that purpose, whether it be money, stock, or debts due to the testator, which he had recovered, and it is the same whether he has recovered the debt or owed it. There is no time at which it can be said that the debt was gone, except at his death. If he had died without proving the will, I think it could not have been recovered after six years had elapsed. One person, it is true, cannot create the relation of trustee and cestui que trust between himself and another, except with the consent of such other person, but when such person consents and proves the will, I am of the opinion the act must have reference back to the death. I cannot find any case on the point, and it must therefore be determined on general principles; and I am of the opinion that whenever the executor takes probate it refers back to the testator's death, and that any property in his hands becomes assets to be administered." Ingle v. Richards, 28 Beav. 366.

See also Willard v. Hammond, 21 N. H. 385; Hartnett v. Wandell, 60 N. Y. 349; 19 Am. Rep. 194; Succession of Vogel, 20 La. Ann. 81; Wilson v. Wilson, 54 Mo. 213; Strong v. Perkins, 3 N. H. 517; Hall v. Ashby, 9 Ohio 96; 34 Am. Dec. 424; Dixon v. Ramsay, 3 Cranch (U. S.) 319; Hill v. Tucker, 13 How. (U. S.) 458; Fleeger v. Poole, 1 McLean (U. S.) 189; Rex v. Netherseal, 4 T. R. 258; Wood v. Mathews, 53 Ala. 1; Pitts v. Melser, 72 Ind. 469.

Upon the probate of a will in which no executor is named, and the appointment of the administrator cum testamento annexo, the personal property vests in the administrator by relation from the death of the testatrix. Drury v. Natick, 10 Allen (Mass.) 169.

The doctrine that letters testamentary, when issued, relate back to the death of the testator, and legalize all intermediate acts of the executor, must be understood to cover those acts only which might have been done had he been executor at the time. Bellinger v. Ford, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 311.

In Willamette Falls etc. Co. v. Gordon, 6 Oregon 175, it was held that a will not regularly probated could not be used to establish title to lands devised.

In some of the States a different rule seems to prevail. Thus in Arkansas, rights may be protected under an unprobated will by showing the validity of the will in any court. Arrington v. McLemore, 33 Ark. 759.

In Richards v. Pierce, 44 Mich. 444, it was held, that the fact that a will has not yet been proved does not prevent a devisee of lands or his assignee from bringing ejectment.

1. Strong v. Perkins, 3 N. H. 518; Tompkins v. Tompkins, 1 Story (U. S.) 547; Cassels v. Vernon, 5 Mason (U. S.) 334; Patten v. Tallman, 27 Me. 17; Hess v. Hess, 5 Watts (Pa.) 187; Holliday v. Ward, 19 Pa. St. 485; 57 Am. Dec. 671; Lovett v. Mathews, 24 Pa. St. 330; Shinn v. Holmes, 25 Pa. St. 142; Cochran v. Young, 104 Pa. St. 333; McCay v. Clayton, 119 Pa. St. 133; Taylor v. Tibbatts, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 177.

In Judson v. Lake, 3 Day (Conn.) 318, in a trial in the common law court in an action of ejectment, one of the parties relied upon a title by devise by the will of a married woman that had been allowed and approved by the probate court. The opposing party objected to its validity as a will, upon the ground that the testatrix was a married woman, but it was held by the supreme court that the decree of the court of probate establishing a will containing a devise of real estate by a feme covert, was conclusive upon the heirs at law of the testatrix, until disapproved on appeal or set aside in due course of law.

In Poplin v. Hawke, 8 N. H. 124, the court held that the decree of the probate court, allowing the probate of the will of a married woman, was conclusive as to the validity of the will, and

7. Proof of the Will—Matters relating to the proof of the testator's signature, the publication of the will, the mode of attestation by witnesses, the character of the attestation clause, and other kindred subjects, are treated in the article WILLS. The subject of testamentary capacity is treated under INSANITY, vol. 11, p. 105; and TESTAMENTARY CAPACITY.

8. Partial Probate.—In England, a will may be in part admitted to probate, and in part refused. This is the case where the probate court is satisfied from the evidence that a clause has been inserted by fraud without the knowledge of the testator in his lifetime, or where he has been fraudulently induced to insert it in his will; and the same rule applies where a clause has been forged after the testator's death.¹

In the United States, the whole will is usually admitted to probate without any reservation of the void or illegal parts. Thus in Pennsylvania it has been decided that the register's that the matter could not be questioned collaterally. A similar conclusion was reached in Parker v. Parker, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 519.

A judgment of the probate court, granting letters of administration, cannot be impeached collaterally on the ground that the decedent resided in a different county. Tant v. Wigfall, 65 Ga. 412.

Letters of administration will not be revoked on an infant's estate if he, in fact, left property. Wheeler v. St. Joseph etc. R. Co., 31 Kan. 640.

1. In Allen v. McPherson, 1 H. of L. 191, which was an appeal from the Lord Chancellor, dismissing a bill for want of jurisdiction, which set up that a particular clause in the will had been inserted through a fraud practiced upon the testator, the House of Lords held that it was exclusively within the province of the ecclesiastical court to determine what was the will of the testator, and whether the clause in question formed a part of it, and that the determination by that court of that and by the admission of the paper to probate, with or without that clause, was not open to be re-examined in any other court or proceeding.

In Barton v. Robins, 4 Phill. 455, a clause was rejected which had been fraudulently inserted in the testator's lifetime. In Plume v. Beale, 1 P. Wms. 388, a forged clause was rejected. In Goods of Duane, 2 Sw. & Tr. 500, a clause introduced without instructions. In Billinghurst v. Wickerns, 1 Phill. 187, a part of the will executed at a time when the testator was incapacitated.

In the Goods of Wartnaby, 4 Notes of Cases 476, a scurrilous imputation on the character of another man was excluded from the probate. See also the Goods of Honeywood, L. R., 2 P. & D. 251; Marsh v. Marsh, 1 Sw. & Tr. 528.

Where there is a variance between the will, as finally drawn, and the instructions, if the testator has had an opportunity to see the will and examine it before execution, the probate court will make no correction, but will allow the whole to be proved. In Harter v. Harter, 3 L. R. P. & D. 11, the testator gave oral instructions for a will to his attorney, who made a memorandum of them in his presence. The residuary clause was as follows: "And the residue equally amongst all the sons, including the eldest son for the time being, on attaining twenty-one." From the memorandum a draft will was drawn, which disposed of the residue in the following terms: "The trustees to stand possessed of all the residue and remainder of my real estate in trust to divide the same, etc." The draft will was left with the testator, and on his suggestion certain alterations were made in it, but not in reference to the words of the residuary clause above given. The will with such words, was executed by the testator. It was held that the court of probate could not correct the mistake, if mistake there was, either by the omission of words, or by the insertion of other words.

In Guardhouse v. Blackburn, L. R., 1 P. & D. 100, specific words had been inserted by an attorney in a codicil jurisdiction is confined to the question whether the paper has been legally executed, and is the will of the testator. Other questions are left for subsequent decision.¹

9. Nuncupative Wills.—Nuncupative wills are not favored by courts of probate, and the strictest proof as to the facts of such a will is required.²

10. Probate of Lost Wills.—See LOST PAPERS, vol. 13, p. 1059.

II. LETTERS OF ADMINISTRATION.—1. Intestacy Necessary to Grant of Administration.—Before a valid grant of general administration can be made, it must appear to the court that the decedent died intestate.³ If letters of general administration are granted during the pendency of a contest over a will, or after a will has been probated, they are null and void.⁴

2. Death Necessary to Grant of Administration.—Letters of administration, granted upon the estate of a living person, are absolutely void, and it makes no difference if, through long continued absence, he is presumed to be dead. In such a case the presumption may be overthrown, and a decree granting the letters may be impeached collaterally.⁵

by mistake and without instructions. It appeared, however, that the codicil had been brought to the attention of the testatrix. The court refused to reject the codicil.

1. In Baxter's Appeal, 1 Brews. (Pa.) 451, it was said, "Though a writing propounded as a will may contain one or more dispositions of property unlawful or void for any reason, it by no means follows that it is not to be admitted to probate. It may contain other useful provisions not at all affected by the cause of the alleged invalidity." See also Hegarty's Appeal, 75 Pa. St. 503; George v. George, 47 N. H. 27; Bent's Appeal, 35 Conn. 523; 38 Conn. 26.

2. Haus v. Palmer, 21 Pa. St. 296; Leamann v. Bonsall, 1 Add. 389; Parsons v. Parsons, 2 Me. 298; Welling v. Owings, 9 Gill. (Md.) 467; Bronson v. Burnett, 1 Chand. (Wis.) 136; Woods v. Ridley, 27 Miss. 119; Rankin v. Rankin, 9 Ired. (N. Car.) 156.

"So little are nuncupative wills favored with the ecclesiastical courts, that not only must all the provisions of the Statute of Frauds be strictly complied with to entitle such a will to probate; but added to this, and independent of that statute altogether, the factum of a nuncupative will is required to be proved by evidence more strict and stringent than that of a written one, in every single particular." 1 Wms. on Executors 158. See also NUNCUPATIVE WILLS, vol. 16, p. 1006.

3. Bulkley v. Redmond, 2 Bradf. (N. Y.) 281.

4. Slade v. Washburn, 3 Ired. (N. Car.) 557; Ryno v. Ryno, 27 N. J. Eq. 522; Landers v. Stone, 45 Ind. 404; Watson v. Glover, 77 Ala. 323.

5. In the leading case of Jochumsen v. Suffolk Sav. Bank, 3 Allen (Mass.) 87, it was held that a depositor in a savings bank may maintain an action to recover the amount of his deposit, although the bank had previously paid the deposit to a person who had been appointed administrator of the depositor, after the depositor had been absent from home for more than seven years without having been heard from. Dewey, J., in delivering the opinion of the court said: "It was further urged as a ground for sustaining the appointment of the administrator, that upon the case as it existed at the time of granting letters of administration, the facts would well warrant the decree making such appointment, and give jurisdiction to the court of probate. The position taken is, briefly, that seven years' absence, upon leaving one's usual home or place of business, without being heard of, authorizes the judge of probate to treat the case as though the party were dead. The error consists in this, that those facts are only presumptive evidence of death, and may always be controlled by other evidence showing that the fact was otherwise. The only jurisdiction is over the estate of the dead man. When the presumption arising from the absence of seven years is overthrown by the actual personal presence of the supposed dead man, it leaves no ground for sustaining the jurisdiction."

In Devlin v. Commonwealth, 101 Pa. St. 273, 47 Am. Rep. 101, it was held that the grant of letters of administration by the register of wills upon the estate of a person who had been absent for fifteen years and was presumed to be dead, but who was really alive was absolutely void. See also D'Arusment v. Jones, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 251; 40 Am. Rep. 12; Hooper v. Stewart, 25 Ala. 408; Burns v. Van Loan, 29 La. Ann. 560; Griffith v. Frazier, 8 Cranch (U. S.) 23; Fisk v. Newell, 9 Tex. 13; Plume v. Howard Sav. Institution, 46 N. J. L. 211.

A contrary rule is laid down in Roderigas v. East River Sav. Bank, 63 N. Y. 460. In this case it was held that where letters of administration are issued upon the estate of one supposed to be dead, and proof of death is made, and the defendant, upon demand and presentation of the letters, pays over in good faith to the administrator the amount of a deposit made by the supposed decedent, an action cannot be maintained to recover the amount of the deposit, although it appears that the supposed decedent was not dead at the time the letters were issued. Earle, J., in delivering the opinion of the court said: "The claim is that, if death has not occurred, although the surrogate may have been satisfied by the clearest proof before him that death had occurred, his proceedings are a nullity for want of any jurisdiction to act. The consequence is that they furnish no protection to any one. The surrogate, who has in good faith ordered the sale of property and the distribution of money, may, in after years, be made liable for the whole estate. After many years it may be a question whether the intestate died in one month or in another month, earlier or later; and shall the jurisdiction of the surrogate and the validity of his proceedings and his protection against liability depend upon how this question may be determined by a jury upon disputed evidence. If the surrogate's proceedings are to be held null and void in case he errs as to the fact of death, the same must follow if he errs as to the place of death, and as to the other facts mentioned in § 23, above cited. The fact of inhabitancy is frequently one difficult to be determined. It is one the surrogate must determine before he can issue letters, and its determination frequently depends upon disputed and fallible evidence; and if error as to the fact of death will leave him with no jurisdiction, so will error as to the fact of inhabitancy, and the consequence will be that in such a case his proceedings will give no protection to any one. A construction of the statutes which will lead to such results will make the laws as to the jurisdiction and proceedings of the surrogates' courts difficult and hazardous to execute, and should not be tolerated unless the language used will admit of no other construction. I am of opinion, taking into consideration the various provisions of the statutes, that it was the intention of the legislature to confer upon surrogates' courts sole and exclusive jurisdiction over the subject of granting letters of administration; and as part of the jurisdiction to determine the facts, upon sufficient evidence, upon which their action must rest. . . . As my conclusion in this case is based upon the construction of the statutes of this State regulating the jurisdiction and proceedings of the surrogates' courts, decisions from other States made under statutes not the same can furnish us little aid; but the following authorities tend somewhat to sustain the conclusion I have reached. Bumstead v. Read, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 661; Bolton v. Brewster, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 389; Morrell v. Dennison, 8 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 401; Holcomb v. Phelps, 16 Conn. 127; Roborg v. Hammond, 2 Har. & G. (Md.) 429; Parhan v. Moran, 4 Hun (N. Y.) 717.

There is a dictum adverse to my conclusion in Allen v. Dundas, 3 T. R., 125, and also in Griffith v. Frasier, 8 Cranch (U. S.) 9. In Jochumsen v. Suffolk Sav. Bank, 3 Allen (Mass.) 87, the precise question involved in this case, of the payment by the savings bank to an administrator of a depositor appointed in his lifetime, was decided under the Massachusetts statutes adversely to the views I have expressed. It was held that the depositor could recover notwithstanding the prior payment by the bank to the administrator. In Bolton v. Jacks, 6

Robt. (N. Y.) 166, there is a learned discussion of the question of the jurisdiction of courts, and it was there held that if a surrogate admitted to probate a will of a testator not at the time of his death an inhabitant of his county, he acted without jurisdiction, and that his proceeding was void and could be attacked collaterally. I believe the decision to be unsound in this respect.

A further criticism of cases to which our attention has been called would not be useful. The question for our decision is not free from doubt; a decision either way would be confronted with some authority and meet with some logical difficulties."

The case of Roderigas v. East River Sav. Institution, 63 N. Y. 460; 20 Am. Rep. 55, has been severely criticised. Judge Redfield, in 15 Am. Law Reg. 212, says that it is perhaps without precedent in America or England. In concluding his review he says: "When we come to find all this set aside and ignored by one of the ablest courts in the country, and the opposite views maintained and applied to a state of facts where no court could possibly claim jurisdiction any more than it could obtain jurisdiction of one who was never born, we must confess to a new sense of the uncertainty of the law." The case was also severely criticised by a writer in 10 Am. Law Rev. 787.

In a later decision in the same case in 75 N. Y. 316, the court held that the letters were void, but simply on the ground that they had been issued by a clerk and not by the surrogate, and that no proof of death had been offered or made.

In Lavin v. Emigrant Industrial Sav. Bank, 18 Blatchf. (U. S.), Choate, J., said: "In the case of Roderigas v. East River Sav. Institution, 63 N. Y. 460; 20 Am. Rep. 55, one of the learned judges (Miller, J.) who concurred in the decision of the majority of the court, expressed the opinion that the statutes under consideration as applied in that case, could not be regarded 'as divesting a person of his property, or interfering with rights, without due process of law, in violation of a constitutional right.' Although it does not appear, in the opinions given, that the judges especially referred to the prohibitory provisions in the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, yet, as the provision in the constitution of the State of New York is substantially the same, it must be assumed, since otherwise the judgment rendered could not have been given, that, in the opinion of the four judges who concurred in the decision, the plaintiff was not deprived of his property without due process of law. But, whether the three dissenting judges dissented on this or some other ground does not appear. The weight of this case as an authority, on a point on which it is not controlling, is however, greatly impaired by the dissent of three out of seven judges constituting the court, there being nothing to show that they did not dissent on this very ground.

"In considering this question, the first inquiry is, whether by force of the laws of New York, and of the proceedings under them, if they are held valid, the plaintiff has been "deprived of his property" by the State of New York, within the meaning of the constitutional provision. For, if he has not been deprived of his property, or, if he has not been so deprived by the State of New York, it necessarily follows, that the constitutional provision has not been violated, and it need not be further considered whether the means employed in doing what has been done are properly described as 'due process of law.' An examination of the opinion of the case of Roderigas v. East River Savings Institution shows that the court did not hold that, for all purposes, and in favor of all persons, as against the supposed decedent, the title to his property vested in the administrator, but only that it so vested in favor of innocent third persons who had dealt with the administrator on the faith of the letters. The case before the court did not call for anything further than this, and I think it is entirely consistent with the opinions delivered, that, if the defendant had not paid the deposit to the administrator, and the supposed decedent had himself demanded it, the proceedings in the surrogate's court, and the issue of the letters, would not have been held to be a defense. In other words, the decision was not strictly that, by virtue of the appointment of the administrator and the issue of the letters, the title passed, as it undoubtedly does in the case of a deceased person, but that, for the protection of the defendant, and for equitable reasons, the supposed decedent was estopped to deny, as against the

A person sentenced to imprisonment for life as a punishment for crime is not civilly dead, and letters of administration cannot be granted on his estate.¹

A grant of letters of administration is prima facie evidence of the death of the person on whose estate the administration is granted.²

3. Limitation as to the Value of the Estate in Certain States.—In some of the States of the Union it is provided by law, that administration shall not be granted upon the estate unless it amounts to a certain specified sum.³

4. Time Within which Administration May be Granted.—In some States there are statutes which limit in express terms the time within which original administration may be granted. Thus, in Massachusetts, an original administration is void, if made more than twenty years after the decedent's death.⁴ In Tennessee, administration cannot be granted after twenty years from the death of the intestate, except to distributees who were infants or married women at his death.⁵ In Texas, no administration can be granted after four years from the death of intestate.⁶ In Con- defendant, that the letters were valid, that the fact of death was as found by the surrogate, and that the title had passed."

1. Frazer v. Fulcher, 17 Ohio 260; Graham v. Adams, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 408; O'Brien v. Hagan, 1 Duer (N. Y.) 664; Cannon v. Windsor, 1 Houst. (Del.) 148; Avery v. Everett, 110 N. Y. 317; but the rule is different in Kansas, Maine and Missouri, where by express statute it is provided that the estates of convicts under imprisonment for life are to be administered as if they were naturally dead.

2. Siebert v. True, 8 Kan. 52.

A supposed loss of life, as the basis of a grant of letters of administration, by reason of shipwreck, an earthquake, a war, a plague, an explosion, and like perils, is within the sound discretion of the judge to determine, founded on the facts of each particular case. Succession of Vogel, 16 La. Ann. 139.

In New York it has been held that, in the absence of proof, it will be assumed that the surrogate made the proper examination as to the manner of the intestate's death; and this is so, although the petition does not affirmatively show the fact. The statute which requires the surrogate to examine the applicant for the letters, as to the time, etc., of death is merely directory. Farley v. McConnell, 7 Lans. (N. Y.) 428.

3. Bean v. Bumpus, 22 Me. 549; Pinney v. McGregory, 102 Mass. 89; Pace v. Oppenheim, 12 Ind. 533.

4. Wales v. Willard, 2 Mass. 120. Under Massachusetts Gen. St., ch. 94, §§ 3, 4, providing that original administration may be granted more than twenty years after the death of an intestate on any property belonging to the estate which thereafter first comes to the knowledge of a person interested therein, if administration is applied for within five years after the property becomes known, knowledge is not necessarily to be imputed to the person applying for administration from the fact that he was the brother of the intestate and knew of his death, nor from the fact that the property consisted of a mortgage of land and a note secured thereby, which mortgage was duly recorded. Parsons v. Spaulding, 130 Mass. 83.

5. Where the distributees were infants or married women at the intestate's death, thirty years are allowed, and letters testamentary, or of administration granted after that period are void. Townsend v. Townsend, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 70.

6. Loyd v. Mason, 38 Tex. 212. In general, a grant of administration, after a lapse of fourteen years from the death of the intestate, should be regarded as a nullity. But there may be special reasons which would even support a grant, as, for instance, necticut, the limitation is seven years,¹ and in Pennsylvania, twenty-one years.²

In the absence of statutory regulation, a reasonable time within which to apply for letters, is in general allowed.³

5. Appointment of Administrators—Construction of 31 Edw. III, ch. 11 and Derivative and Analogous Statutes.—The Statute 31 Edw. III, ch. 11, provides that in cases of intestacy, "the ordinaries shall depute of the next and most lawful friends of the dead person intestate to administer his goods." The statute 21 Hen. VIII, ch. 5, § 3, provides, that in case any person die intestate, or that the executors named in any testament refuse to prove it, the ordinary shall grant administration, "to the widow of the deceased, or to the next of his kin, or to both, as by the discretion of the same ordinary shall be thought good."

Later legislation in England and the United States has followed the policy of the statutes of Edward III and Henry VIII, the general rule being that administration shall be granted according to the beneficial interest in the estate.

a. HUSBAND.—At common law a husband, being entitled to all of his wife's personal estate, was deemed the proper person to whom the administration of her effects should be granted.⁴ The right of the husband to administer upon his wife's estate, has been confirmed by statute in England, and in most of the United States.⁵ In some States, however, if a husband has deserted his a money demand or claim of the estate lately fallen due. Cochran v. Thompson, 18 Tex. 652.

A grant of administration in 1850 upon the estate of a Texas volunteer killed in 1836, was held to be without authority, there being no clear proof that any debts existed against the estate. Duncan v. Veal, 49 Tex. 603.

1. Lawrence's Appeal, 49 Conn. 411.

2. Although the act of March 15, 1832, prohibits the registers from granting original letters of administration on the estates of persons who have been dead twenty-one years, unless ordered by a register's court, yet such letters are not absolutely void. Foster v. Commonwealth, 35 Pa. 148.

3. Todhunter v. Stewart, 39 Ohio St. 181. In England a delay of more than three years must be explained satisfactorily. "In every case where probate or administration is for the first time applied for after the lapse of three years from the death of the deceased, the reason of the delay is to be certified to the registrars, and should the certificate be unsatisfactory, the registrars are to require such proof of the alleged cause of the delay as they may see fit." Rule 45 P. R., Non-Contentious Business.

In North Carolina, where a man dies intestate, and, there being no administration on his estate, the next of kin takes possession of it, no legal estate vests in them, however long they may possess it. If an administrator is appointed even ten years afterwards, the legal title then vests in him, and relates back to the death of the intestate. The possession of the next of kin, in the meantime, though claiming it as their own, is no bar to his recovery of the property. Whit v. Ray, 4 Ired. (N. Car.) 14.

4. Schouler's Executors and Administrators 127; Williams on Executors 410; Fairbanks v. Hill, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 732; Shumway v. Cooper, 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 556; Clark v. Clark, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 85; Weaver v. Chace, 5 R. I. 356.

5. Schouler's Husband and Wife, § 405. In North Carolina, the statute of distribution does not apply to the estates of femes covert dying intestate; in such a case, the husband may administer and recover the property for his own use; and if any other person administers, he will be a trustee for the husband. Hoppiss v. Eskridge, 2 Ired. Eq. N. Car.) 54.

wife, or misconducted himself, he may be excluded from administration;¹ and where a marriage has been absolutely void, or an absolute divorce has been obtained, the husband has no right to administer.² The husband's right to administer may also be de-

The New York acts of 1848 and 1849, to protect married women, do not affect the husband's right to administer the personalty, in case of intestacy; he has the right to administer, and retain the estate, after payment of debts, to his own use. McCosker v. Golden, 1 Bradf. (N. Y.) 64. And see Lush v. Albutis, 1 Bradf. (N. Y.) 456; Valance v. Bausch, 8 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 368; 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 633; Shumway v. Cooper, 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 556; Dewey v. Goodenough, 56 Barb. (N. Y.) 54.

In Rhode Island a husband, though not resident within the State, is entitled to administration of his deceased wife's estate. Weaver v. Chace, 5 R. I. 356. See also Robins v. McClure, 100 N. Y. 328; 53 Am. Rep. 184.

In Tennessee, a husband is not deprived by § 2206a of the Code of his right to administer upon the estate of his deceased wife. Fairbanks v. Hill, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 732.

See also Goodrich v. Treat, 3 Colo. 408; Byrd v. Gibson, 1 How. (Miss.) 568; Hubbard v. Barcas, 42 Md. 422; Clark v. Clark, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 85; Willis v. Jones, 38 Md. 175; Hart v. Soward, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 391.

In Alabama a husband is not entitled to administration on his wife's estate, to the exclusion of her children, or one appointed at their request. Randall v. Shrader, 17 Ala. 333. See also Succession of Williamson, 3 La. Ann. 261; Goodrich v. Treat, 3 Colo. 408.

The husband of a woman who is entitled to administer upon an intestate, does not, by the marriage, succeed to her right. Richards v. Mills, 31 Miss. 450. Ellmaker's Estate, 4 Watts (Pa.) 34.

In Alabama, on the marriage of the administratrix, her husband is invested with all the rights of administration. Dowty v. Hall, 83 Ala. 165; Pistole v. Street, 5 Port. (Ala.) 64. See Ferguson v. Collins, 8 Ark. 241.

1. Cooper v. Maddox, 2 Sneed (Ky.) 135.

But in Coover's Appeal, 52 Pa. St. 427, a different rule prevailed. There a husband charged with adultery left home with his wife's knowledge, there being no evidence of desertion; she died about two months afterwards, he being still absent, and administration of her estate was granted to another. Held, that the husband was entitled to administration. See also Nusz v. Grove, 27 Md. 391; Altemus's Case, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 49.

2. The nullity of a marriage, voidable merely, must first be pronounced by a court of competent jurisdiction, before the fact of its invalidity can be taken advantage of in any proceeding. If not declared void, it remains good and legal for all purposes; and either party surviving the other has a prior right, under the statutes, to letters of administration. In Elliott v. Gurr, 2 Phill. 16, Sir John Nicholl, in the prerogative court of Canterbury, said in reference to a voidable marriage: "The marriage was within the prohibited degrees; for the husband was the sister's son of the woman's former husband, that is, her nephew by affinity; but the marriage was declared void in the lifetime of the parties. Now, the difference between void and voidable is so clear that no person who ever looked into any elementary book on the subject is ignorant of it. The canonical disabilities, such as consanguinity and affinity, and certain corporal infirmities, only make the marriage voidable, and not ipso facto void, until sentence of nullity be obtained; and such marriages are esteemed valid unto all civil purposes, unless such sentence of nullity is actually declared during the lifetime of the parties. Civil disabilities, such as a prior marriage, want of age, idiocy and the like, make the contract void ab initio, not merely voidable; these do not dissolve a contract already made; but they render the parties incapable of contracting at all; they do not put asunder those who are joined together, but they previously hinder the junction; and if any persons under these legal incapacities come together, it is a meretricious and not a matrimonial union, and, therefore, no sentence of avoidance is necessary. The present is not a void, but a voidable marriage, and, therefore, not having been defeated by a settlement or agreement made during the lifetime of his wife.¹

b. WIDOW.—The widow's right to administer upon the estate of her deceased husband is not co-extensive with the right of the husband to administer upon his wife's estate. Under the statute of 21 Henry VIII, the court has discretion to grant administration "to the widow, or the next of kin, or to both." As a general rule the courts, both in England and the United States, in the exercise of their discretion, grant letters to the widow in preference to the next of kin;² but in some States it is expressly provided clared void in the lifetime of the parties, is valid to all civil purposes; and to all such purposes the deceased died the wife of William Gurr, and he was her husband, and their issue are legitimate; one of the civil rights of the husband is, that of administration to his wife, which is held to be within the statute 29 Car. 2, ch. 3, both the administration and the property belonging exclusively to the husband,—it is not an ecclesiastical, but a civil right, though it is a right administered in this court." See also White v. Lowe, 1 Redf. (N. Y.) 376; Browning v. Reane, 2 Phill. 69.

A divorce a mensa et thoro does not deprive the husband of the right of administration on his wife's estate. Nor will a written agreement for separation, in contemplation of a divorce, with covenants as to property, be presumed to have intended a relinquishment of the right to administer in case the husband survives, nor will such construction be given, no divorce having been decreed. Willis v. Jones, 42 Md. 422; Altemus's Case, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 49.

1. Where the personal property of the wife was so settled, by a deed executed before marriage and duly recorded, that, upon her dying intestate in her husband's lifetime, the trustee was to convey the same to her legal heirs—held, that her nearest blood-relation was entitled to the administration of her estate, in the event of her thus dying in preference to her husband. Bray v. Dudgeon, 6 Munf. (Va.) 132.

A husband is in general entitled to administer upon his deceased wife's estate; but where, by ante-nuptial agreement between them, he is not entitled to any share therein, but the same goes to her child by a former marriage, the guardian of the child will be entitled to administer upon her estate in preference to the husband. Fowler v. Kell, 14 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 68.

A and B in contemplation of marriage, agreed that all the property of the intended wife, B, and estate of every description to which she was then entitled or might thereafter become entitled, should be conveyed to a trustee, for the use and benefit of the wife, her heirs and assigns forever, without impeachment of waste, said property to be under exclusive control of said B, her heirs, etc., without the interference, in any manner, of said A; the said B, her heirs, etc., to receive and enjoy the rents, etc., with power to B to sell and dispose of said estate by last will, as if she was feme sole. After marriage, and the death of the wife, without a will, held, that such contract was not a temporary surrender only of the marital rights, but an entire abandonment of them; and that A was not entitled to administration upon her estate. Ward v. Thompson, 6 Gill & J. (Md.) 349.

Under the 29th section of the statute of 1797, of Kentucky, a husband was held to be entitled to the administration of his deceased wife's estate, who had died intestate, although, by an ante-nuptial settlement, she was to hold her estate separate. Hart v. Soward, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 391.

2. Goods v. Browning, 2 Sw. & Tr. 634; Goods of Newbold, L. R., 1 P. & D. 285.

In Iowa a widow's right to administer is not absolute, even though the statute imposes no limitations on the right. O'Brien's Estate, 63 Iowa 622.

If a widow or any other party applying for administration, is evidently unsuitable to discharge the duties of the trust, they are not entitled thereto. Stearns v. Fiske, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 24.

The widow, if suitable, is exclusively entitled to administration, unless among the next of kin there is some fit person whom the judge of probate may think by statute that the widow shall be preferred to children and other kindred.¹ The widow must, however, be actually the widow should be joined with her. M'Gooch v. M'Gooch, 4 Mass. 348.

In Tennessee the court has a discretionary power as to the appointment of a widow. Wright v. Wright, Mart. & Y. (Tenn.) 43; Wilson v. Frazier, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 30; Swan v. Swan, 3 Head (Tenn.) 163; Phillips v. Green, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 350. See also as to the discretion of the court, Cobb v. Newcomb, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 336; McClellan's Appeal, 16 Pa. St. 110; Gyger's Estate, 65 Pa. St. 311.

A non-resident widow failed to apply to be appointed administratrix of her husband's estate, and his father (the next in order) was appointed. Held, that his letters would not be revoked on the widow's application. Ehlen v. Ehlen, 64 Md. 360.

In California the Civil Code, § 1389, which renders a non-resident surviving wife incompetent to serve as the administratrix of her husband's estate, does not take away the right to nominate the administrator given her by § 1365, the latter section being in no respect in conflict with § 1383, revoking letters of administration. In re Stevenson, 73 Cal. 164.

A non-resident widow may be objectionable, even though a statute imposes no absolute limitation upon her. O'Brien's Estate, 63 Iowa 622; Ehlen v. Ehlen, 64 Md. 360.

1. In Mississippi, the statute (H. & H. 395) gives the widow of an intestate the preference of administering on his estate; nor will that preference be taken away by the fact of her having once administered on the estate and then renounced her administration, or of her claiming causes of action against the estate which were resisted by the heirs. Pendleton v. Pendleton, 6 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 448.

A died November 28, 1844, and, at the December term of the probate court, in the same year, his son applied for and obtained letters of administration upon his estate. At the January term, 1845, and within sixty days of the death of her husband, the widow of A applied for letters of administration, and for the removal of her son. Held, that the widow was entitled to take out letters of administration in preference to the son, and that the probate court was right in removing the son and conferring the appointment on the widow. Muirhead v. Muirhead, 6 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 451. • In Pennsylvania, as between a widow and a child of a deceased son of a decedent, the widow is entitled to administration. Gyger's Estate, 65 Pa. St. 311. And illiteracy and poverty will not deprive her of her statutory preferred right. Bowersox's Appeal, 100 Pa. St. 434; 45 Am. Rep. 387.

In Louisiana, the widow was preferred. Dietrich Succession, 32 La. Ann. 127; Burton v. Burgier, 30 La. Ann. 478; Succession of Sutton, 20 La. Ann. 150; Sears v. Wilson, 5 La. Ann. 689.

In Georgia, in a contest for the administration between the widow and the sole heir-at-law, and a creditor of the intestate, whose debt is disputed, or who sets up a claim to property of which the intestate died seised (and a fortiori, where he claims in both characters), the widow will be preferred, notwithstanding the alleged insolvency. Lynch v. Lively, 32 Ga. 575.

In South Carolina, the widow is first entitled to letters of administration on the estate of her deceased husband; but it does not follow that she may transfer her right to a stranger, and that the ordinary is bound to appoint her nominee, though the wishes and preferences of those having the greatest interest in preserving the estate are entitled to great weight. McBeth v. Hunt, 2 Strobh. (S. Car.) 335.

A judge of probate granted letters of administration to the sister of an intestate, in ignorance of the fact that he had left a widow. Within five weeks from the time of her husband's death, the widow, who had been absent, applied for letters. Held, that the judge was justified in revoking the letters granted, and in appointing the widow administratrix. Rollin v. Whipper, 17 S. Car. 32.

See also in general on the widow's preference, Munsey v. Webster, 24 N. H. 126; English v. McNair, 34 Ala. 40; Rambo v. Wyatt, 32 Ala. 363; 70 Am. Dec. 544; Libbey v. Mason, 112 N. Y. 525, rev'd 42 Hun (N. Y.) 470; Lathrop v. Smith, 24 N. Y. 417; Shropshire v. Withers, 5 J. Marsh. (Ky.) 210; Feustmann v. Gott, 65 of the decedent. If there has been no valid marriage, or if there has been an absolute divorce from her husband, she has no right to administer upon his estate.¹ And an ante-nuptial agreement may defeat the right to administer.²

c. NEXT OF KIN.—As a general rule the right of administration follows the right of property, and persons are usually selected for administration in the order of their preference in distribution. In England, the order in which next of kin are entitled to administer is, first, children and their lineal descendants to the remotest degree; second, the parents of the deceased; third, brothers and sisters; fourth, grandfathers and grandmothers; fifth, uncles or nephews, great-grandfathers and great-

Mich. 592; Sharpe's Appeal, 87 Pa. St. 163; Goddard v. Goddard, 3 Phill. 638; Goods of Rogerson, 2 Curt. 656; Goods of Newbold, L. R., 1 P. & D. 285; McClellan's Appeal, 16 Pa. St. 110; Pendleton v. Pendleton, 6 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 448; Lathrop v. Smith, 24 N. Y. 417; McBeth v. Hunt, 2 Strobb. (S. Car.) 335; Curtis v. Williams, 33 Ala. 570.

1. Where a wife leaves her husband and renounces all conjugal intercourse a considerable time before his death, she becomes not such a widow, after his death, as was contemplated by an act authorizing the widow to administer upon her husband's estate and to appropriate $300 of it to her own use. Odiorne's Appeal, 54 Pa. St. 175; 93 Am. Dec. 683.

The cohabitation from which the fact of marriage may be presumed must be matrimonial, and not illicit, in its inception. Thus, one's petition for letters as B's widow was refused; her statements as to the character and conduct of the parties being contradictory, and she not controverting suspicious circumstances in evidence against her. Byrnes v. Dibble, 5 Redf. (N. Y.) 383.

In O'Gara v. Eisenlohr, 38 N. Y. 296, letters of administration were refused to a woman where it appeared that, at the time she was married to the decedent, he had another wife living. But see Smith v. Smith, 1 Fed. Rep. 621; 46 Am. Dec. 121.

Where a wife was divorced a mensa et thoro on account of her adultery, she was refused administration in Goods of Davies, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 628. See also Wells v. Brook, 25 W. R. 463.

Where a decree of divorce had been vacated and annulled after the death of the husband—held, that the wife was thereby restored to her rights under the marriage, and that a decree of the register and the register's court, annulling letters of administration which had been previously granted to a stranger, and granting them to the widow, was properly made. Boyd's Appeal, 38 Pa. St. 246.

Neither the fact of a separation by mutual consent between husband and wife, extending from a few months after marriage to the husband's death, nor of the inability of the wife to read or write, disqualifies her from acting as administrator of his estate. Nusz v. Grove, 27 Md. 391. S. P. Altemus's Case, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 49.

Where a marriage was duly solemnized in Texas according to law, while Texas was subject to the laws of Mexico, but the husband had a former wife living in Missouri, of which fact the second wife was ignorant until after the death of the husband, such second wife was held entitled to administration, in exclusion of the son of her husband by the first marriage. Smith v. Smith, 1 Tex. 621; 46 Am. Dec. 121.

Where an uncle married his niece in 1856, and the marriage, not being made public, remained undissolved until his death in 1861, the widow was held entitled to letters of administration on his estate. Parker's Appeal, 44 Pa. St. 309.

Where a man marries again after divorce, his second wife is entitled to administration on his estate. Ryan v. Ryan, 2 Phill. 332; Nusz v. Grove, 27 Md. 391.

2. A widow, who has relinquished her rights to her husband's estate, in virtue of her marriage, by an ante-nuptial agreement, has no right to the administration of his estate, nor to object to the validity of the probate of grandmothers, and, sixth, cousins. In the United States, the same order is usually maintained.¹

d. CREDITORS.—In most of the United States where the widow, next of kin, and others who have a prior right and are suitable, neglect, within the time allowed by law, to apply for administration, a creditor, having right of action against the deceased, may be appointed administrator.² In some of the States, the first his will. Maurer v. Maurer, 5 Md. 324.

1. See NEXT OF KIN, vol. 16, p. 703.

2. Where administration cannot be granted to the nearest of kin, it should be granted to the next after him, and if any of them claim the administration within the time prescribed by law, a creditor should be postponed. Carthey v. Webb, 2 Murph. (N. Car.) 268.

In Nebraska, during the first thirty days after the death of an intestate, the right of administration is conferred upon the next of kin (or widow if there is one), or such person as they may select, if suitable and competent to discharge the trust. After the expiration of that time the right is conferred upon the principal creditors of the estate. If no such persons are competent or willing to accept the trust, it is the duty of the county judge to select such other person or persons as he may think proper. And for this purpose the discretion is vested in the county judge, to be exercised for the best interest of the estate and those interested therein. Alkinson v. Hasty, 21 Neb. 663.

The next of kin of one deceased intestate suffered thirty days to elapse after his death, without taking any measures to obtain administration of his estate. A creditor of the intestate then applied, by petition to the judge of probate, to be appointed administrator, and the judge ordered public notice to be given (which was done) to all persons interested in the estate of the intestate, to appear and show cause why the prayer of the petition should not be granted. At the time and place appointed by the notice, the father of the intestate appeared for the purpose of objecting to the petition, and being inquired of by the judge whether he wished to take the administration, replied that he would have nothing to do with it. The judge of probate thereupon proceeded and granted administration to the petitioner, and the father appealed. Held, that the declaration of the appellant, not being recorded, was not an effectual renunciation, and that such public notice, especially as the appellant had actual notice and appeared, was sufficient. Arnold v. Sabin, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 525.

In Michigan a probate court is a court of record (ch. 248 How. St. Michigan), and will take judicial notice that, at the time of filing the petition by a creditor, more than thirty days after the decease of the intestate, the widow or next of kin has neglected to apply for administration, such period being required by How. St. Michigan, § 5849, to elapse before others than the widow or next of kin can apply. Wilkinson v. Conalty, 65 Mich. 614.

After the expiration of the thirty days from the death of the decedent, within which period, according to Code West Virginia, § 4, ch. 85, the husband or wife is first entitled to administration, a wider discretion is vested in the court and it may appoint a creditor or a stranger, if no distributee applies; but, if a suitable distributee then applies, he is entitled to the preference. Bridgeman v. Bridgeman, 38 W. Va. 212.

Under a statute authorizing a grant of letters of administration on the estate of one leaving property in the State, upon application of "any person interested" therein, a creditor residing in another State may apply. Branch v. Rankin, 108 Ill. 444.

Though administration may be granted to a creditor or to a stranger, if no application is made by a distributee in thirty days, yet a distributee is legally entitled to it whenever he does apply, if he is competent and gives security, and has not before refused, though thirty days may have elapsed. Cotton v. Taylor, 4 B. Mon. (Ky.) 357.

In 1835, application was made, by an officer of the Charitable Marine Society of Baltimore, for letters of administration on the estate of a seaman who died abroad. This was resisted by A, who had funds of the deceased, and claimed to retain a portion of them for services creditor applying is entitled to administration;¹ in others the largest creditor.² The debt must be proved³ but the right to administer is not defeated by the fact that the claim has been rendered. The deceased had no kindred. Held, that A, on proving himself to be a creditor, would be entitled to administration, and that in the absence of such proof, the orphans' court would grant letters in their discretion. Hoffman v. Gold, 8 Gill & J. (Md.) 79.

Upon the death of a man who has never been married, if his father renounces, his brothers are entitled to administer in preference to any creditor. Lathrop v. Smith, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 64.

Where a creditor would avail himself of the lands of the deceased for the payment of his debt, he should apply for administration, if the next of kin refuse to take it; and in that character he may have a license to sell the lands for that purpose. Nitchell v. Lunt, 4 Mass. 654.

An original independent proceeding by a creditor for temporary letters of administration of his debtor's estate, being unauthorized by statute, cannot be maintained. Saw Mill Co. v. Dock, 3 Dem. (N. Y.) 55.

Administration, when letters are issued on petition, can only be granted to, or on application by, one or more of the persons specified in Michigan Comp. L. § 4379, viz., creditors and distributees; and, as between these, only in this order, and under the contingency specified, of their being competent or willing to take the trust. Breen v. Pangborn, 51 Mich. 29.

There being no administrator, a creditor of the intestate cannot demand that a receiver be appointed to administer. Walker v. Drew, 20 Fla. 908.

If a judge of probate is satisfied that a creditor of a deceased non-resident has reasonable grounds for an averment that the debtor has fraudulently conveyed his real estate within this commonwealth, he ought to grant administration upon the estate of such person, in order that the question of fraud may be fully tried in a court of common law. Bowdoin v. Holland, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 17.

A creditor, having a right of action against the deceased which survives, is entitled to administration on the estate, where the next of kin refuse it. Otherwise if the cause of action does not survive.

Mitchell v. Lunt, 4 Mass. 654; Royce v. Burrell, 12 Mass. 395; Stebbins v. Palmer, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 71; 11 Am. Dec. 146.

A distributee must be preferred to a creditor as administrator when they both apply together. Haxall v. Lee, 2 Leigh (Va.) 267.

For rights of creditors to administer in Louisiana, see Succession of McKinney, 4 La. Ann. 25; Hair v. McDade, 10 La. Ann. 534; Monget v. Penny, 7 La. Ann. 134; Succession of Petit, 9 La. Ann. 207.

See also in general, on rights of creditors to administer, Mullanphy v. County Court, 6 Mo. 563; Munsey v. Webster, 24 N. H. 126; Hill v. Alspaugh, 72 N. Car. 402; Freek's Appeal, 114 Pa. St. 29; Elma v. Da Costa, 1 Phill. 177; Goods of Brackenbury, 25 W. R. 698; Arnold v. Sabin, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 525; Smith v. Sherman, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 408.

1. In New York, the creditor first applying has the preference. Laws of New York, 1867, ch. 782, § 6.

2. In North Carolina, the creditor for the greatest amount will be appointed administrator de bonis non, other things being equal. Cutlar v. Quince, 2 Hayw. (N. Car.) 60.

In a contest between two creditors, for administration of the estate of their debtor, the question is not who is the largest creditor, but who represents the greatest interest, and any facts bearing upon this point should be submitted to the jury. Freeman v. Worrill, 42 Ga. 401.

In Wilkinson v. Conalty, 65 Mich. 614, the petition for administration purported to be made by creditors of the deceased, but did not aver that it was made by principal creditors. How. St. Michigan 5849, permits principal creditors, in certain cases, to be appointed administrators. Held, that the matter of competency as administrator is one for judicial decision, and the omission of such averment is not a defect.

See also Curtis v. Williams, 33 Ala. 570; Lentz v. Pilert, 60 Md. 296; 45 Am. Rep. 732; Goods of Von Desen, 43 L. T. 532; Ex parte Ostendorff, 17 S. Car. 22.

3. Thompson v. Buckner, Riley Ch.

barred by the Statute of Limitations,¹ or that there are no assets above exemptions.² A claim which accrued after the death of the decedent, as for funeral expenses, is sufficient to give the right to administer;³ but a debt assigned after the death of the decedent does not constitute the assignee such a creditor as to entitle him to administration.⁴ In some States creditors have no preference.⁵

c. GENERAL CONSIDERATIONS AFFECTING THE CHOICE OF ADMINISTRATORS.—(1) Suitableness.—As amongst persons equally entitled by law to administer, the court at its discretion will choose the most suitable.⁶ Even where persons have a legal preference, they may be set aside if obviously unsuitable for the trust.⁷ Amongst various considerations which have influenced the courts in choosing administrators, are

(S. Car.) 33; 2 Hill Ch. (S. Car.) 499.

1. Ex parte Caig, T. U. P. Charlt. (Ga.) 159. In Pennsylvania, a power of attorney from a surviving executor, which was ten years old, was held too stale whereon to base an application for a vacant administration. Bleakley's Estate, 5 Whart. (Pa.) 361.

2. Wheat v. Fuller, 82 Ala. 572. In Sturges v. Tufts, R. M. Charlt. (Ga.) 17, where it appeared that the estate of a deceased person was not equal, or but barely so, to the payment of debts, administration was granted to a creditor, in preference to the next of kin.

3. Lentz v. Pilert, 60 Md. 296; 45 Am. Rep. 732; Newcombe v. Beloe, L. R., 1 P. & D. 314.

4. Pearce v. Castrix, 8 Jones (N. Car.) 71; Goods of Coles, 3 Sw. & Tr. 181; Downward v. Dickenson, 3 Sw. & Tr. 564.

5. Cain v. Haas, 18 Tex. 616; McCandlish v. Hopkins, 6 Call (Va.) 208.

6. Discretion as to Suitableness.—Thus between brothers, administration will be granted to the one most interested to execute it faithfully. Moore v. Moore, 1 Dev. (N. Car.) 352.

In the Succession of Chaler, 39 La. Ann. 308, it was held that when two beneficiary heirs are contestants for the administratorship of the ancestor's succession, a large discretion is vested in the judge who makes the appointment, and, unless manifestly wrong, his conclusion will not be disturbed.

In West Virginia, as between distributees, the county court judges as to fitness for the trust. Bridgman v. Bridgman, 30 W. Va. 212.

In Pennsylvania, where the class primarily entitled to administer upon a decedent's estate consists of several persons, the register may grant letters to all jointly if they wish it, or select one of them and commit the administration to him. Brubaker's Appeal, 98 Pa. St. 21.

In North Carolina, the next of kin of a deceased person, after the widow, have the right amongst them of administration on the estate of a deceased relative; but this right is not vested in one more than another, and the degree of propinquity does not give a legal priority. The court will choose from the class the person best qualified to take care of the estate. Atkins v. McCormick, 4 Jones (N. Car.) 274.

See also in general, Thompson v. Hucket, 2 Hill (S. Car.) 347; Dalrymple v. Gamble, 66 Md. 298; Atkinson v. Hasty, 21 Neb. 663; Garrison v. Cox, 95 N. Car. 353; Wheat v. Fuller, 82 Ala. 572.

7. "Personal suitableness, for instance, is a very important element, whether in determining the appointment as between the widow and next of kin of an intestate, or where one or more next of kin alone are concerned. Favorably as our law treats the widow's claim to administer, even though the intestate's next of kin were his own children, a widow evidently unsuitable may be passed over in favor of the next of kin; but if the next of kin are all unsuitable, the widow, being competent, is entitled to the sole administration; while if both widow and next of kin are unsuitable, the application of all should be refused. And so, too, where only next of kin of a certain class are concerned in the administration, if one is suitable and the others unsuitable, the suitable one will be taken; if two or more are equally entitled, equally suitable, and equally strenuous to be appointed, the court has power to appoint one or more of them; but if all are unsuitable the appointment must be otherwise bestowed. From among two or more persons equally akin to the deceased, the court may choose the most suitable at discretion." Schouler's Executors and Administrators 137.

moral fitness and integrity,¹ business experience,² insolvency,³

1. Moral Fitness.—In Coope v. Low-erre, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 45, it was held that where a surrogate has a discretion to select between two or more individuals of the same class, in granting administration, he may properly take into consideration moral fitness in making such selection.

Drunkenness and Improvidence.—The statute of New York declares, that letters of administration shall not be granted "to any person who shall be adjudged incompetent by the surrogate to execute the trust by reason of drunkenness, improvidence, or want of understanding." Under this statute it was held that a professional gambler was incompetent by reason of improvidence. McMahon v. Harrison, 6 N. Y. 443; 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 659. But see Harrison v. McMahon, 1 Bradf. (N. Y.) 283.

An applicant for letters of administration will not be precluded from receiving them, by reason of intemperance, unless it be of such a gross character as would warrant overseers of the poor in designating him an habitual drunkard, under the statutes of New York, or a jury in adjudging him so to be. Elmer v. Kechele, 1 Redf. (N. Y.) 472.

Administration will not be refused on the ground of improvidence, not shown to be so great as to be likely to endanger the safety of the estate. In re Cutting, 5 Dem. (N. Y.) 456.

To render one incompetent to serve as executor, on the ground that he is "improvident, or wanting in understanding," it is not sufficient to show that he has an ill-regulated temper, lacks self-control, and is accustomed to use abusive language towards those named as co-executors. McGregor v. McGregor, 3 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 92.

Testatrix, a woman of the town, appointed as her executor a man whom she had supported upon her gains, and with whom she had cohabited. Held, that he was not a fit person, and letters testamentary were refused. Plaisance's Estate, Myr. Prob. (Cal.) 117.

Where the judge of probate refused administration of an estate to the next of kin of the deceased, on the ground of mania a potu, as a fact within the knowledge of the court—held, to be irregular. A judge cannot decide upon facts within his own knowledge, unless he is sworn as a witness. Smith v. Moore, 3 How. (Miss.) 40.

Conviction of an Infamous Crime.—Conviction of an infamous crime disqualifies one from being an administrator, if the conviction has been within the State. O'Brien's Estate, 67 How Pr. (N. Y.) 503.

2. Business Experience.—The Civil Code of Louisiana, art. 1043, provides that the probate judge must select the "most solid" person. To determine the question of "solidity," the judge should look to the business capacity, experience, property, and integrity of the respective applicants. Succession of Chaler, 39 La. Ann. 308. See also Stephenson v. Stephenson, 4 Jones (N. Car.) 472; Williams v. Wilkins, 2 Phill. 100; Martin v. Duke, 5 Redf. (N. Y.) 597; Shilton's Case, 1 Tuck. (N. Y.) 73.

3. Insolvency.—Insolvency ordinarily disqualifies a person, though otherwise competent, to be appointed an administrator. In Cornpropst's Appeal, 33 Pa. St. 537 the court said: "The register is at liberty to pass by the incompetent individual and grant letters to others who would not have been entitled to them, but for that incompetency. The act does not define the grounds of disqualification. They are to be sought for in the decisions of the English ordinary, and in the practice of this State, before the passing of the Act 15th of March 1832. There is no doubt that insolvency is one. Those interested in the estate are entitled to the security of an administrator's personal liability, as well as to that of his bail. If letters may be granted to an insolvent person, they have but the single security of the sureties in the administration bond. Besides, likelihood to prove insolvent is a ground for removal under the 22nd section of the Act of Assembly of the 29th of March, 1882. Certainly the register may not appoint one whom it would be the duty of the orphans' court to remove, unless he should give other and further security than the register may require.

adverse interests,¹ sex,² marriage,³ illiteracy⁴ and insanity.⁵

In Levan's Appeal, 112 Pa. St. 294. it was held that a man, earning $42 a month, sober, steady, and industrious, who owes $20 on old debts, is not disqualified from administering an estate. See also Succession of Martin, 13 La. Ann. 557; Hovey v. McLean, 1 Dem. (N. Y.) 396.

1. Adverse Interest.—A person who holds another trust, the interests of which conflict with those of the estate, should not be appointed administrator. State v. Reinhardt, 31 Mo. 95; Wright v. Wright, 72 Ind. 149; Hassinger's Appeal, 10 Pa. St. 454; Jones v. Whitehead, 66 Ga. 290; Heron's Estate, 6 Phila. (Pa.) 87; Bieber's Appeal, 11 Pa. St. 157.

Debtor.—A debtor to the estate should not be appointed. Territory v. Valdez, 1 N. Mex. 533; Succession of Chaler, 39 La. Ann. 308.

Hostility to Distributees.—If the applicant for administration is hostile to one or more of the distributees, he will not be appointed. Bridgman v. Bridgman, 30 W. Va. 212; Drew's Appeal, 58 N. H. 319; Pickering v. Pendexter, 46 N. H. 69; Moody v. Moody, 29 Ga. 515; Heron's Estate, 6 Phila. (Pa.) 87; Webb v. Needham, 1 Add. 494.

Surviving Partner.—A surviving partner, ordinarily, should not be appointed administrator of his deceased partner's estate, to the exclusion of one who is likely to prove more disinterested. Brown's Estate, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 127; In re Garber's Estate, 74 Cal. 338; Cornell v. Gallagher, 16 Cal. 367; Altenu's Estate, 32 La. Ann. 364; Heward v. Slagle, 52 Ill. 336.

Miscellaneous.—For certain miscellaneous cases of adverse interest as a disqualification, see Hall v. Thayer, 105 Mass. 219; 7 Am. Rep. 513; Plowman v. Henderson, 59 Ala. 559; Bingham v. Cranshaw, 34 Ala. 683.

2. Sex.—In some of the States there are statutes which prefer the male next of kin to the female. New York Rev. Stat. 74, § 28; Cook v. Carr, 19 Md. 1. And sometimes, on practicable considerations of suitableness, the same preference is made, apart from statutory authority. Schouler's Executors and Administrators 139.

3. Marriage.—In some States it is provided by statute that single women shall be preferred to married women. Thus in Maryland the Act of 1798, ch. 101, sub-ch. 5, § 19, which declares that in the grant of letters of administration, a feme sole shall be preferred to a married woman, applies to a case where an intestate left two daughters, one of whom was married and the other was not. Smith v. Young, 5 Gill (Md.) 197; Owings v. Bates, 9 Gill (Md.) 463; In re Curser, 89 N. Y. 401.

Cverture does not incapacitate from administration if the married woman is otherwise entitled. Gygers' Estate, 65 Pa. St. 311; In re Curser, 89 N. Y. 401; Binnerman v. Weaver, 8 Md. 517.

But in Texas letters of administration cannot be granted to a married woman, even with the consent of her husband, if he refuses to join in the application and the trust. Nickelson v. Ingram, 24 Tex. 630.

Statutes sometimes deprive the husband from succeeding by the marriage to his wife's right of administration. Richards v. Mills, 31 Miss. 450; Barber v. Bush, 7 Mass. 510. In Alabama a woman may resign administration on her marriage. Rambo v. Wyatt, 32 Ala. 363; 70 Am. Dec. 544.

4. Illiteracy.—As a general rule inability to read or write does not incapacitate a person to act as administrator. Thus in Wilkey's Appeal, 108 Pa. St. 567, it was held that the fact that the widow of a decedent was illiterate, and over seventy years of age, should not deprive her of her right to administer her husband's estate, where she appeared to have "as good business capacity as most farmers' wives." See also Nusz v. Grove, 27 Md. 391; Emerson v. Bowers, 14 N. Y. 449.

A different rule, however, prevails in North Carolina. In Stephenson v. Stephenson, 4 Jones (N. Car.) 472, it was held that in the appointment of an administrator, a person who cannot write nor read writing, and has no experience in keeping accounts, or in settling estates, is incompetent within the meaning of the statutes.

5. Insanity.—An insane person is

(2) Residence.—In most of the States mere non-residence does not disqualify a person from acting as administrator; but it is often considered an objection; and, as among next of kin, those resident, if in other ways suitable, should be preferred to those who are non-resident.¹ In some of the States non-residence is an absolute disqualification;² while in others, non-residents are permitted to administer if they qualify with resident sureties.³

(3) Age.—Infancy and extreme old age are disqualifications. In some of the States it has been held that an infant cannot lawfully be appointed administrator;⁴ but in Louisiana it seems that a minor may act, even though she may be married.⁵ In Mississippi, the court may appoint a suitable person adminis-unsuitable for the trust of administration. Goods of Phillips, 2 Add. Ecc. 335.

1. Jones v. Jones, 12 Rich. (S. Car.) 623; Ex parte Barker, 2 Leigh (Va.) 719; Bridgman v. Bridgman, 30 W. Va. 212; McGregor v. McGregor, 3 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 92; In re Williams, 44 Hun (N. Y.) 67; McCreary v. Taylor, 38 Ark. 393; Child v. Gratiot, 41 Ill. 357; Wickwire v. Chapman, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 302; Smith v. Munroe, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 345; Goods of Burch, 2 Sw. & Tr. 139.

In Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Gould, 64 Iowa 343, it was held that a non-resident should not be appointed save under special justifying circumstances.

In Bridgman v. Bridgman, 30 W. Va. 242, it was held that the courts, in the exercise of a sound discretion, should not appoint a non-resident distributee an administrator so long as any other distributee competent to act and willing to assume the trust was within the jurisdiction of the court. In Sellings' Estate (Surr. Ct.), 2 N. Y. Supp. 634, an administration of an estate was granted to a non-resident married daughter, in preference to a dissolute, irresponsible and dishonest son of the intestate, though a resident of the State.

In California, the non-residence of a widow does not affect her right to preference in nominating an administrator, as against the claim of the public administrator to administer. Robie's Estate, Myr. Prob. (Cal.) 226.

In re Williams, 5 Dem. (N. Y.) 292, a person died a resident of Tennessee. On application for letters in New York, it was held that as between a New York relative and a nearer Tennessee relative, the latter should be preferred.

In Rhode Island, non-residence does not create an insuperable objection to a grant of letters. Hammond v. Wood, 15 R. I. 66.

In New Hampshire it has been held that where several persons are of the same degree of kindred to the deceased, one living out of the State is not entitled to administration as of right; but in case those living in the State have interests adverse to the heirs and creditors, the judge of probate may properly appoint the one residing out of the State. Pickering v. Pendexter, 46 N. H. 69.

2. In Frick's Appeal, 114 Pa. St. 29, it was held that a non-resident has no right to letters of administration. Trunkay, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "Among the reasons for refusing administration to a non-resident, is that he should be within the jurisdiction of the courts of this State. He is a trustee, answerable as such for the conduct of the trust estate, and interested parties when their rights are withheld should not be confined to the slow process against sureties." See also Sarkie's Appeal, 2 Pa. St. 157; Child v. Gratiot, 41 Ill. 357; Radford v. Radford, 5 Dana. (Ky.) 156; Beech's Estate, 63 Cal. 458.

In Wisconsin, the policy of the law discourages the appointment of non-resident administrators. Sargent's Estate, 62 Wis. 130.

3. Frick's Appeal, 114 Pa. St. 29; Massachusetts Public Stat., ch. 132, § 8; Robie's Estate, Myr. Prob. (Cal.) 226. And see Ex parte Barker, 2 Leigh (Va.) 719; Jones v. Jones, 12 Rich. (S. Car.) 623.

4. Carow v. Mowatt, 2 Edw. (N. Y.) 57; Collins v. Spears, Walk. (Miss.) 310; Cluett v. Mattice, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 417.

5. Briscoe v. Tarkington, 5 La. Ann. 692.

trator during minority, and is not limited to the next of kin.¹ In New York, the guardian of a minor son of an intestate is not entitled to administration in preference to the minor's adult sister.²

(4) Corporations.—A corporation cannot act as an administrator, unless expressly authorized so to do by its charter.³

(5) Illegitimates.—Whether an illegitimate child is entitled to administration or not depends upon the local statutes of distribution, the right to administration following the right to share in the distribution of the estate.⁴ Thus where illegitimates, in default of lawful children inherit from their mother, they are entitled to the administration of her estate.⁵

(6) Amount of Interest.—As a general rule the person who is entitled to the estate of a decedent is entitled to administration, and, other things being equal, the person having the largest interest in the estate will have the preference.⁶

(7) Renunciation and Nomination by the Person Entitled to Administration.—Where the widow or the person having the first right to administration renounces and requests the nomination of another person, the court is not bound to grant such a request, but may exercise its discretion. In some States the person next entitled after the person who has renounced has the legal right to the administration, which cannot be defeated.⁷ In other States

1. Pitcher v. Armat, 5 How. (Miss.) 288.

2. Cottle v. Vanderheyden, 11 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 17.

3. Thompson's Estate, 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 334; Porter v. Trall, 30 N. J. Eq. 106. In Maryland, letters cannot be granted to a corporation, even though it be the universal legatee under the will of decedent. Georgetown College v. Browne, 34 Md. 450. In New Jersey letters will be granted under such circumstances to one of the members of the corporation. Matter of Kirkpatrick, 22 N. J. Eq. 463. In Delaware, where foreign administrators are permitted to maintain actions, the power of a corporation as administrator, granted in another State, was recognized. Deringer v. Deringer, 5 Houst. (Del.) 528.

In several States corporations are empowered by express statute to act as executors and administrators. This is the case in Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and Missouri.

4. Govane v. Govane, 1 Har. & M. (Md.) 346; Succession of Hebert, 33 La. Ann. 1099; In re Pico, 56 Cal. 413; Public Administrator v. Hughes, 1 Bradf. (N. Y.) 249.

5. Ferrie v. Public Administrator, 3 Bradf. (N. Y.) 249.

6. Long v. Huggins, 72 Ca. 776; Leverett v. Dismukes, 10 Ga. 98; Johnson v. Johnson, 15 R. I. 109; Sweezy v. Willis, 1 Bradf. (N. Y.) 495; Chalder's Succession, 39 La. Ann. 308; Thomton v. Winston, 4 Leigh (Va.) 152; Bridgman v. Bridgman (W. Va.) 3 S. E. Rep. 580; Matter of Kirkpatrick, 22 N. J. Eq. 463; McCully's Estate, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 296; Murdock v. Hunt, 68 Ga. 164; McClellan's Appeal, 16 Pa. St. 110.

7. In McClellan's Appeal, 16 Pa. St. 110, Rogers, J., said: "If the widow renounces administration, it shall be granted to the children, or other next of kin, in preference to strangers or even to creditors. The discretion given to the register is limited to a selection from those asking, if competent, in each class in their order. Tol. 86; Wms. Exrs. 246. When the widow renounces her right to administer, it is the duty of the register to select from the children, or next of kin, a person or persons competent to perform the duties of administration, preferring males to females. In making the choice among this class, doubtless, great respect ought to be paid to the recommendation of those persons who have the most interest in the assets, on the reasonable presumption that those who have the greatest interest to increase the estate are most fit to advise as to the administration. Thus far the cases go, but no further. It has never been understood, as is contended, that the widow or next of kin, or both combined, having the greatest stake in the estate, can pass by any one of the children, or next of kin, competent and willing to take, and vest the appointment in a stranger. On the contrary, directly the reverse is ruled in Williams' Appeal, 7 Pa. St. 259. There, two of the sons of the testator, who were his executors, having renounced, the register, at their request, granted letters of administration to a stranger, to which a third son and two of the daughters assented. A fourth son and a daughter, having petitioned for a revocation, it was held that the register was bound to revoke the letters and grant administration to the person who consented to act. The facts of the case cited are precisely similar, with the immaterial exception that here the widow concurred in the nomination. There, as here, all the persons entitled of the first class declined, except the claimant and his sister, and the court affirmed the register's court, reversing the decision of the register, who had given the administration to two strangers, put in nomination by persons of the first class. Judge Coulter correctly says that although the executors (also next of kin) may relinquish their own right, they cannot take away the rights of others."

In Maryland, the legal right to administer cannot be delegated. Georgetown College v. Browne, 34 Md. 450.

In New Jersey, where the next of kin waive their claims to administration, a stranger may be appointed; but the next of kin have no right to dictate the selection. In re Cresce, 28 N. J. Eq. 236.

In Guldin's Estate, 81* Pa. St. 362, it was held that a married daughter, unless unfit, is entitled to administer her father's estate, although his other children, having renounced their right, request that the administration be granted to a stranger.

Where a widow, by a writing duly attested, but without appearing in court, relinquishes her right of administration, and requests that A be appointed, the court may, nevertheless, appoint B, a creditor of the deceased, and the widow cannot object thereto, unless she personally appears in court for that purpose. Triplett v. Welle, Litt. Sel. Cas. (Ky.) 49.

Where a widow makes an absolute renunciation of her right to administer, the register has a right to grant letters of administration to any one of the sons of the decedent—he is not bound to prefer an elder to a younger. Shomo's Appeal, 57 Pa. St. 356.

One having the priority of right to the administration, under the statutes of New York, can only deprive those coming after him of their right by taking letters himself. He cannot nominate a third party to the exclusion of the others. In re Root, 1 Redf. (N. Y.) 257.

Where two strangers, one nominated by the widow, applied for administration, and the ordinary granted letters to the nominee of the widow, supposing, erroneously, that he was bound by law so to do, the appellate court, not perceiving that any injury could result therefrom to the legal rights of the defeated applicant, refused to reverse the ordinary's decision. McBeth v. Hunt, 2 Strobb. (S. Car.) 335.

Where the next of kin reside abroad, the court will grant administration to the appointee of such next of kin. Smith v. Munroe, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 345.

Where a widow has renounced her right to administer her husband's estate, and recommended another person, all the children being minors, the surrogate has jurisdiction to appoint such person, without citing the next of kin. Sheldon v. Wright, 5 N. Y. 497.

Letters testamentary cannot, under the law of Maryland, be granted to a corporation, even though the corporation be the universal legatee and executor under the will of the decedent. Nor can the corporation, in such a case, designate a person to administer on the estate cum testamento annexo. Georgetown College v. Browne, 34 Md. 450.

As a general rule the judge should be guided, to some extent, in making his appointment, by the preferences of the other heirs and creditors. Succession of Chaler, 39 La. Ann. 308; Mandeville v. Mandeville, 35 Ga. 243; Munsey v. Webster, 24 N. H. 126.

the courts will give great weight to the preferences of those who have the greatest interest in preserving the estate, and will appoint the person whom they request.¹

The law does not favor an agreement, the consideration for which is the relinquishment by one person to another of a right to administer on an intestate's estate.²

f. PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION.—In many of the United States where there is no known husband, widow, or next of kin qualified to administer, or where the persons entitled to administration fail to take out letters, administration is granted to a public official, who is usually known as the public administrator.³ A grant of

1. In Georgia, the appointment as administrator, of one recommended to the ordinary by a majority of the distributees, cannot be defeated by one of the distributees on the ground that the applicant is not next of kin, nor interested in the estate, nor a creditor. Halliday v. Du Bose, 59 Ga. 268.

Those entitled to administer upon an estate requested that the Brooklyn Trust Co. be appointed administrator. Held, that its right, under the circumstances, was superior to that of the public administrator, upon consideration of the apparently conflicting provisions of the statutes concerning the right of each to administer. Godard v. Abbott, 30 Hun (N. Y.) 401.

A's appointment as administrator of an estate was requested by the intestate's widow and by the majority of his creditors. B was the largest creditor of the estate in his capacity as C's administrator. The judge, in the exercise of his discretion, appointed B. Held, no error. Ex parte Ostendorff, 17 S. Car. 22.

On application to appoint an administrator, made by a grandmother who was next of kin, and creditors—held, that the probate court had discretion to order letters to issue to the grandmother's nominee in preference to that of the creditors. Wyche's Estate, Myr. Prob. (Cal.) 85. See also In re Cotter's Estate, 54 Cal. 215; Keenan's Estate, Myr. Prob. (Cal.) 186; In re Stevenson, 72 Cal. 164; In re Keane, 56 Cal. 407.

2. In Bowers v. Bowers, 26 Pa. St. 74, 67 Am. Dec. 398, Woodward, J., said: "The consideration of the contract sued on was the purchase of the office of administrator from him upon whom the law devolved the right to it, and the only question in the record is whether that is such a consideration as the law will support. I call it an office, not because it is so strictly, but because it very much resembles one, and is frequently so called in the books. An office is a right to exercise a public or private employment, and to take the fees and emoluments thereunto belonging. An administrator is appointed by a public officer, under his seal of office, to exercise a trust and perform duties which are carefully defined by law, and which affect both public and private interests, and his compensation is measured by legal standards, though not defined in the fee bill. In Beck v. Stitzel, 21 Pa. St. 522, it was held that words were actionable without proof of special damage, which imputed to an administrator 'a positive and fraudulent breach of his official oath.' If public policy forbids traffic in the office of postmaster, as was decided in Filson v. Himes, 5 Pa. St. 456; 47 Am. Dec. 422, it will, for superior reasons, interdict barter in respect to the more sacred trust of administration. But if administration of a decedent's estate be not an office, it is strictly a trust, and as such is not to be purchased for a price which creates in the trustee an interest adverse to the cestui que trust."

3. A good example of a statute authorizing public administration is afforded by the Missouri act of 1868 (1 Wagner's Stat., ed. 1872, p. 122, § 8), which makes it "the duty of the public administrator to take into his charge and custody the estates of all deceased persons in his county, in the following instances: First, When a stranger dies intestate in the county without relatives, or dies leaving a will, and the executor named is absent or fails to qualify; second, when persons die intestate without any known heirs; third, when persons die or are found dead in the county; fourth, when money, prop-administration to a public administrator cannot be sustained, if there are relatives within the State who are willing and competent to act;¹ but the public administrator is preferred to credierty, papers or other estate are left in a situation exposed to loss or damage, and no other person administers on the same; fifth, when any estate of any person who dies intestate therein or elsewhere is left in the county liable to be injured, wasted or lost when said intestate does not leave a known husband, widow or heir in this State; sixth, when from any good cause said court shall order him to take possession of any estate to prevent its being injured, wasted, purloined or lost."

In Union Mut. Ins. Co. v. Lewis, 97 U. S. 682, this act was construed, and it was held that it did not authorize a suit by a public administrator in that State against a foreign insurance company doing business there, to enforce the payment of a policy of insurance, not made or to be executed in that State upon the life of a citizen of Wisconsin, who neither resided, died nor left any estate in Missouri.

A county court in Missouri may order the public administrator to take possession of any estate where administration has not been taken out under the general law. Callahan v. Griswold, 9 Mo. 784.

A public administrator may be ordered to take charge of the assets of a partnership, where one member is deceased, in order to prevent their being injured, wasted, purloined or lost; provided that there is no existing administrator having charge of the partnership effects. And he cannot be divested of the estate in a collateral proceeding, but only on application to the probate court. Headlee v. Cloud, 51 Mo. 301.

1. In Langworthy v. Baker, 23 Ill. 484, it was held, that the commission of an estate to the public administrator cannot be sustained unless the record shows that there is no relative within the State who will act, and that the application was made by a person interested in the estate.

Relatives of the deceased, who have an interest in his estate at the time of his death, have, in the order prescribed by law, a right to administer thereon. After such relatives, the right in the county of New York, belongs to the public administrator. Public Administrator v. Peters, 1 Bradf. (N. Y.) 100.

A public administrator, as such, is not entitled to administer under a will, as dative testamentary executor, where the testamentary executor has died, and where one or more of the heirs are present in the State. Bougere's Succession, 30 La. Ann. 422.

Emma Hughes, illegitimate, deceased intestate, was domiciled in England at the time of her death. Richard Hughes, the son of her mother, and the public administrator, also, applied for letters of administration on her estate. Held, that by the law of England, she had no lineal decedents nor collateral relatives, and the said Richard was not entitled to letters of administration. Public Administrator v. Hughes, 1 Bradf. (N. Y.) 125.

A public administrator will be preferred to the nominee of the married daughter of the intestate. Kelly's Estate, 57 Cal. 81; and to the nominee of the brother of a deceased Chinaman. Yun's Estate, Myr. Prob. (Cal.) 181.

In Goddard v. Public Administrator, 1 Dem. (N. Y.) 480, it was stated that, in appointing an administrator, the court, ordinarily, will prefer the public administrator to a trust company, authorized by statute to administer in the discretion of the surrogate. The duties of the office are best conducted by an individual.

Public administrators have power to take charge of, and administer on, the effects, arriving at quarantine, of any person coming from any other country or State, and dying intestate on his passage; but this power will be superseded by letters of administration granted by any court having jurisdiction. Ex parte Commissioners of Emigration, 1 Bradf. (N. Y.) 259.

Under Tennessee Code, § 468, providing that, if persons entitled to administration fail to take out letters within six months after the intestate's death, the public administrator, after applying for letters, shall administer the estate—Held, that where letters had been granted to the public administrator before the six months expired, the probate court might, on application of the parties interested within the time, revoke the letters. Varnell v. Loague, 9 Lea (Tenn.) 158.

See also the following cases on the tors.¹ In some States there is no separate office of public administrator, but public administration is granted to some county officer such as the sheriff,² county clerk,³ or county treasurer.⁴ In construction of various acts relating to public administrators: In re Page, 107 N. Y. 266; Proctor v. Wanmaker, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 302; In re Blank, 2 Redf. (N. Y.) 443; Douglas v. Mayor etc. of N. Y., 56 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 178; Patullo's Estate, 1 Tuck. (N. Y.) 99; Speckles v. Public Administrator, 1 Dem. (N. Y.) 475; In re Brewster, 5 Dem. (N. Y.) 259; Taylor v. Public Administrator, 6 Dem. (N. Y.) 158; Tymon v. Cromwell, 2 Dem. (N. Y.) 650; Tuohay v. Public Administrator, 2 Dem. (N. Y.) 412; Burnside's Succession, 34 La. Ann. 728; Townsend's Succession, 36 La. Ann. 535; Longuefosse's Succession, 34 La. Ann. 583; Taylor's Succession, 23 La. Ann. 22; Henry's Succession, 31 La. Ann. 555; Duson v. Dupre, 32 La. Ann. 806; Supple's Succession, 23 La. Ann. 24; Moore v. Griffith, 25 La. Ann. 213; Miller's Succession, 27 La. Ann. 574; Bougere's Succession, 30 La. Ann. 422; Morgan's Estate, 53 Cal. 243; Nunan's Estate, Myr. Prob. (Cal.) 238; Murphy's Estate, Myr. Prob. (Cal.) 185; McCabe v. Lewis, 76 Mo. 296; Tittman v. Edwards, 27 Mo. App. 492; Donaldson v. Lewis, 7 Mo. App. 403; McGuire v. Buckley, 58 Ala. 120; State v. Anderson, 16 Lea (Tenn.) 321; Cleveland v. Quilty, 128 Mass. 578.

1. Creditor Not Preferred.—Estate of Doak, 46 Cal. 573; McKinnon's Estate, 64 Cal. 226; In re Page, 107 N. Y. 266. A creditor cannot claim letters in preference to the public administrator, by reason of a non-resident heir-at-law having requested the appointment of the creditor. Hyde's Estate, 64 Cal. 228. But in Illinois, contrary to the usual rule, a creditor is preferred to a public administrator. Rosenthal v. Prussing, 108 Ill. 128.

2. Sheriff.—Under § 57 of the act of 1797, in Kentucky, if there be an estate of a deceased person, not administered, and of which there is no administrator, after a lapse of three months from the intestate's death, it may be committed to the sheriff, and if it be received by him or his deputy, he and his official sureties are liable for its faithful administration. Scarce v. Page, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 311.

A sheriff does not become an administrator ex officio of an intestate estate until empowered by the probate court to act as such. Until then, he can do nothing to bind the estate. Wilson v. Dibble, 16 Fla. 782; Davis v. Shuler, 14 Fla. 438.

A grant of administration to a sheriff virtute officii attaches to the office and expires therewith. Landford v. Dunklin, 71 Ala. 594.

Neither the sheriff nor his securities can be heard to question the validity of a grant of letters of administration to him, after the sheriff has accepted and acted under the grant, obtaining possession of the assets and converting them. Burnett v. Nesmith, 62 Ala. 261.

The refusal of the court to grant letters of administration to the sheriff, on the application of a party representing himself to be a creditor, is not an interlocutory or final order, within the meaning of the Alabama act of 1850 (Pamph. Acts, 32 § 29) from which an appeal lies. The party's remedy is by mandamus. Brennen v. Harris, 20 Ala. 185.

Under the provisions of the Virginia Code, 542, § 10, it is discretionary with the court to revoke letters of administration given to the sheriff and grant them to a distributee. Hutcheson v. Priddy, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 85.

Before the burden of administering on an estate can be cast on a sheriff, it is incumbent on the party making the application to make it appear to the court that there are rights, property, or effects of the deceased subject to administration; and if he should claim to be a creditor, to set forth his claim free from legal objection, and that it is a valid existing debt against the deceased. Cocke v. Finley, 29 Miss. 127.

See also Johnson v. Tatum, 20 Ga. 775; Scarce v. Page, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 311; Williamson v. Furbush, 31 Ark. 539.

3. Clerk.—The ordinary, having tried in vain to get any person to apply for letters of administration on an estate, may compel the clerk of the superior court to perform the duties of administrator. Johnston v. Tatum, 20 Ga. 775.

4. County Treasurer.—Sutton v. Public Administrator, 4 Dem. (N. Y.) 33; In re Ward, 1 Redf. (N. Y.) 254.

New York, the commissioners of immigration are empowered to act in certain cases where foreigners die intestate on the passage.¹

6. Procedure.—The procedure pursued in an application for letters of administration is similar to that pursued in applying for letters testamentary. It is the usual practice for the person claiming or entitled to administration to present a petition to the probate court, setting forth the fact of the death of the intestate, the date of the death, the place of last residence, the name of the widow or husband, and the next of kin, stating the degree of kindred, and such other matters as may be suitable or necessary for the court to be informed of.² In many of the States, after the petition has been filed with the register, a citation issues to notify all persons interested of the proceedings. The citation is made returnable at a certain day, when a hearing is held and the application disposed of.³ In some of the States the form of the

1. Ex parte Commissioners of Emigration, 1 Bradf. (N. Y.) 259.

2. Petition for Letters.—In Philadelphia the form of the petition is as follows:

The petition of — respectfully sheweth that — was a resident of Philadelphia county, State of Pennsylvania, and departed this life intestate at No. — in the county of — and State of — on the — day of — A. D. 189—, at — o'clock — M. That the said — deceased, left — surviving the following-named widow or husband, heirs and next of kin, to-wit: The said intestate was possessed of goods, chattels, rights and credits to the value of $— and of real estate (less incumbrance) to the value of $— as near as can be ascertained.

Therefore the said — respectfully applies for letters of administration — upon the goods, chattels, rights, and credits of which said — died possessed. Dated — A. D. 189—.

In Shipman v. Butterfield, 47 Mich. 487, it was held that a petition, not showing on its face that it was made by a person entitled to administration, should be dismissed.

A petition for administration, stating decedent to be "late of," etc., is sufficient to confer jurisdiction on the probate court of the county named. Abel v. Love, 17 Cal. 234.

A petition of M S. of Monterey, for letters of administration, was addressed to the judge of the county of Santa Clara, and showed that Dr. John T., late a resident of the county aforesaid, died in said county. Held, that it sufficiently appeared that the decedent was a resident of the county of Santa Clara at the time of his death. Townsend v. Gordon, 19 Cal. 188.

In New York it has been held that, although it is usual to set forth in the petition the facts essential to the grant of letters of administration, as elicited upon the preliminary examination before the surrogate, it is not necessary. Johnston v. Smith, 25 Hun (N. Y.) 171.

No person will be allowed to apply for letters, or to object to their grant, unless it appears that he is interested in the estate. Augusta etc. R. Co. v. Peacock, 58 Ga. 146; Russell v. Hartt, 87 N. Y. 19; Succession of Poret, 26 La. Ann. 157; Ferris Estate, 1 Tuck. (N. Y.) 15; Burton v. Waples, 4 Harr. (Del.) 73; Burwell v. Shaw, 2 Bradf. (N. Y.) 322; Ferril v. Public Administrator, 3 Bradf. (N. Y.) 151; Sheldon v. Wright, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 39.

When a petitioner for administration withdraws his petition in the probate court, he ceases to be a party to the record. Miller v. Keith, 26 Miss. 166.

In a contest as to the right of administration, there are strictly no plaintiffs or defendants. All applicants are actors, and some may withdraw, and others come in, at any time during the progress of the cause, even after an appeal from the county to the superior court. Atkins v. McCormick, 4 Jones (N. Car.) 274.

3. In some States the citation is required to be published in a newspaper. Montelius v. Sarpy, 11 Mo. 237; McGehee v. Ragan, 9 Ga. 135.

certificate of letters of administration is prescribed by statute. In others the form of the letters is left to the discretion of the probate court. Where no specific form is prescribed by law, if the certificate of appointment is signed by the judge, although it may not be in the usual form, it must be considered as the act of the judge, and effect must be given to it.¹ The appointment of an administrator is a judicial act; while the issuing of the letters is a ministerial act.² If the court of probate appoints a person

Letters of administration issued in disregard of the rule of court on the subject of notice to those first entitled, when they have not renounced, are invalid, and this, although the statute is silent on the subject of notice. Gans v. Dabergott, 40 N. J. Eq. 184.

Letters of administration, granted to an applicant who has neither caused a citation to be issued, given security, nor taken the prescribed oath are void; and a subsequent compliance with the last particulars will be of no avail, giving notice being indispensable. Torrence v. McDougald, 12 Ga. 526.

Under Massachusetts Rev. Stat., ch. 64, § 4, held, that the appointment of a stranger, before the expiration of thirty days from the intestate's death, without citation or notice to the next of kin, was irregular, and should be reversed. Cobb v. Newcomb, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 336.

In a public notice of the granting of letters of administration, an error of two days as to the time when granted is immaterial. Acre v. Ross, 3 Stew. (Ala.) 288.

No notice is required by Maine Rev. Stat., ch. 106, prior to granting administration on an intestate's estate, where it is granted "to the widow, husband, next of kin, or husband of the daughter of the deceased, or to two or more of them." Bean v. Bumpus, 22 Me. 549.

An opposition to an appointment of curator, if it has not been made, is in time, although the application has been advertised ten days. Succession of Block, 6 La. Ann. 810.

It cannot be pleaded in defense to an action brought by an administrator, that the proper parties were not duly cited before the surrogate. The latter obtains jurisdiction, not by the citations, but by the residence of the intestate within the county. The other provisions of the statute are merely directory, a non-compliance with which is not an objection, collaterally, to the validity of the letters. James v. Adams, 22 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 409.

Proof of Notice.—It is competent to prove the posting of notice of the appointment of an administrator by the affidavit of the administrator attached to a copy of the notice,¹ as provided in Iowa Code, § 3698. Brownell v. Williams, 54 Iowa 353.

Reading in Church.—A citation from the ordinary, giving notice of one's intention to apply for administration, is sufficiently published in South Carolina by being read by an officiating clergyman in church. Sargent v. Fox, 2 McCord (S. Car.) 309.

1. Carlton's Succession, 26 La. Ann. 329.

In Georgia, a certificate of letters of administration, concluding "given under my hand and seal of office, this August 7, 1854, A. B. Ordinary," is sufficient. Witzel v. Pierce, 22 Ga. 112.

If letters of administration purport to be granted by proper authority, and are in due form, and sealed with the office seal of the county court, they will be good without the signature of the clerk, until set aside for want of formality. Post v. Caulk, 3 Mo. 35.

A clerk's certificate which has his signature and official seal, is complete evidence of the appointment of a succession. Davie v. Stevens, 10 La. Ann. 496.

Letters of administration, not authenticated by the seal of the orphans' court which granted them, are inoperative and not admissible as evidence. Tuck v. Boone, 8 Gill (Md.) 187.

In Sharp v. Dye, 64 Cal. 9, it was held that letters of administration are not void because the seal of the court is affixed in the wrong place.

In Texas a grant including two estates under one administration was held not to be void. Grande v. Herrera, 15 Tex. 533.

2. Letters Issued on Christmas Day.—In not entitled to the administration, the proper remedy is by appeal.¹

7. Effect of Decree.—In general the probate court will be presumed to have lawfully exercised its jurisdiction, and its decree cannot be attacked in collateral proceedings.² But if it appears Glendenning v. McNutt, 1 Idaho N. S. 592, to a suit by an administrator, it was contended that his appointment was void, having been made on Christmas day. The letters appeared to have been issued on that day, but the record showed that the appointment was in fact, made on the following day. Held, that the appointment was the judicial act, the issue of the letters merely the ministerial act; that no injury to the defendant was shown, and that his defense was untenable.

1. Dexter v. Brown, 3 Mass. 32; Wright v. Wright, Mart. & Y. (Tenn.) 43; Evans v. Evans, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 143.

Mandamus will not lie. State v. Mitchell, 3 Brev. (S. Car.) 520.

2. Burnley v. Duke, 2 Rob. (Va.) 102; Fisher v. Bassett, 9 Leigh (Va.) 119; 33 Am. Dec. 227; Landford v. Dunklin, 71 Ala. 597; Watson v. Glover, 77 Ala. 323; Bean v. Chapman, 62 Ala. 58; Burnett v. Nesmith, 62 Ala. 261; Davis v. Swearinger, 56 Ala. 31; Jennings v. Moses, 38 Ala. 402; Savage v. Benham, 17 Ala. 119; Leatherwood v. Sullivan, 81 Ala. 458; Sims v. Boynton, 32 Ala. 353; 70 Am. Dec. 540; Scott v. Crews, 72 Mo. 261; Rowden v. Brown, 91 Mo. 429; McNair v. Dodge, 7 Mo. 404; Hensley v. Dodge, 7 Mo. 479; Riley v. McCord, 24 Mo. 265; Naylor v. Moffatt, 29 Mo. 126; Hobson v. Ewan, 62 Ill. 146; Wright v. Wallbaum, 39 Ill. 554; Clark v. Pishon, 31 Me. 503; McFarland v. Stone, 17 Vt. 165; 44 Am. Dec. 325; Fletcher v. Fletcher, 29 Vt. 98; Wheeler v. St. Joseph etc. R. Co., 31 Kan. 640; Robinson v. Epping, 24 Fla. 237; Breen v. Pangborn, 51 Mich. 29; Albright v. Cobb, 30 Mich. 355; Johnson v. Johnson, 66 Mich. 525; Morgan v. Locke, 28 La. Ann. 806; Herron's Succession, 32 La. Ann. 835; Lamm's Succession, 40 La. Ann. 312; Webb v. Keller, 39 La. Ann. 55; Jones v. Bittinger, 110 Ind. 476; Francisco v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 35 Fed. Rep. 647; Davis v. Smith, 58 N. H. 16; Boody v. Emerson, 17 N. H. 577; Kittredge v. Folsom, 8 N. H. 98; Cleveland v. Quilty, 128 Mass. 578; Emery v. Hildreth, 2 Gray (Mass.) 228;

Ramp v. McDaniel, 12 Oregon 108; Glendenning v. McNutt, 1 Idaho (N. S.) 592; Holmes v. Oregon etc. R. Co., 7 Sawy. (U. S.) 380; Milliken's Estate, Myr. Prob. (Cal.) 88; Irwin v. Scriber, 18 Cal. 499; Francisco v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 35 Fed. Rep. 647; Gallagher v. Holland, 20 Nev. 164; Ragland v. Green, 14 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 194; Brown v. Landon, 30 Hun (N. Y.) 57; Kelly v. West, 80 N. Y. 139; O'Connor v. Huggins (Supreme Ct.), 1 N. Y. Supp. 377; Flinn v. Chase, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 85; Munro v. Merchant, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 383; Beeber's Appeal, 99 Pa. St. 596; Sager v. Lindsey, 108 Pa. St. 25; Wood's Appeal, 55 Pa. St. 332; Rinehart v. Rinehart, 27 N. J. Eq. 475; Quidort v. Bergeaux, 18 N. J. Eq. 473.

Where a probate court has jurisdiction to appoint some person administrator, and makes an appointment by issuing letters of administration to a person not a relative or creditor of the deceased, and without citing any of the relatives or creditors to appear and either take or renounce the administration, although the appointment may have been erroneous, yet the letters of administration cannot be attacked collaterally, and especially not by a person who is neither a relative nor a creditor of the deceased. Taylor v. Hosick, 13 Kan. 518.

A judgment granting letters of administration cannot be attacked collaterally by showing that the applicant was not a citizen of Georgia. Maybin v. Knighton, 67 Ga. 103.

A failure to cite the widow of the deceased is ground for revocation, but does not render the letters void. Kelly v. West, 80 N. Y. 139.

Under Massachusetts Gen. St., ch. 117, § 4, it is no defense to an action by an administrator that his appointment was procured by his false statements respecting the place of residence of his intestate, unless the want of jurisdiction in the probate court to appoint appears of record. McFeely v. Scott, 128 Mass. 16.

The appointment of an administrator cannot be attacked collaterally by showing non-compliance with the law that the person on whose estate letters have been granted is not in fact dead, the grant may be attacked collaterally;¹ and where it appears that the court of probate had no jurisdiction by reason of the non-residence of the intestate, or because the intestate had no property within the jurisdiction, or for other reasons, a collateral attack on the letters may be sustained.²

as to giving bond, nor by evidence that the appointment was made at an adjourned term, and that there had been no sufficient citation at the regular term. Barclay v. Kimsey, 72 Ga. 725.

A grant of letters of administration to the son of an intestate was assailed collaterally for the following reasons: (1) because the son's petition did not state that he was twenty-one years of age, what his exact relationship to the deceased in the order of consanguinity, and that citation was published; (2) because the oath of the administrator was filed in the office of the judge of probate, and not in the office of the clerk of the circuit court; and (3) because the appraisement did not show the number of the intestate's family and the property they had exempted. The petition did allege that the petitioner was the son of the intestate and one of the distributees. Held, that the court had jurisdiction to grant the letters of administration. Emerson v. Ross, 17 Fla. 122.

1. Where an administration was granted on the estate of a living person, on the presumption of death arising from his absence, unheard of for seven years—held, that an innocent purchaser claiming under the administrator, had no title against the living owner, as the administration was wholly void. Moore v. Smith, 11 Rich. (S. Car.) 569; 73 Am. Dec. 122.

2. If a probate court issues letters of administration, the intestate having been a resident of another county, this may be shown by a collateral attack on the jurisdiction. People's Sav. Bank v. Wilcox, 15 R. I. 258.

Letters of general administration, granted during the pendency of a contest respecting the probate of a will, are null and void. Nor can they be supported as a grant of administration pendente lite. Slade v. Washburn, 3 Ired. (N. Car.) 557.

The grant of administration by a judge of probate who is interested in the estate is void. Sigourney v. Sib- ley, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 507; 33 Am. Dec. 762.

A judgment of the court of ordinary, granting administration, may be impeached by extraneous evidence showing that the court had no power to grant the administration. Griffith v. Wright, 18 Ga. 173.

A grant of administration originally void and not merely voidable, acquires no validity from an acquiescence of twenty years or any longer period. Holyoke v. Haskins, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 20; 16 Am. Dec. 372.

Under Act Texas 1846, requiring that letters of administration be granted in the county of the residence of the deceased, or where he owned property, or where he died, letters issued by the probate court of a county where the deceased did not die, on an application which fails to show either the situs of his property, or his residence, are void. Paul v. Willis, 69 Tex. 261.

Letters of administration, granted by a court not having jurisdiction, are merely void, and the court that has jurisdiction may grant letters, though the former letters have not been revoked. Ex parte Barker, 2 Leigh (Va.) 720.

An intestate died in 1836, leaving only real property. Administration was granted in 1846, on an application which did not show jurisdiction, and in 1853 administration de bonis non was granted on application failing to show special reasons therefor, and a debt allowed, to satisfy which said real estate was sold. Held, that both administrations were void, and that the order of sale, being void, might be attacked collaterally, especially where it appeared that the object of the administration was the personal benefit of the applicant. Paul v. Willis, 67 Tex. 261.

For other cases of collateral attack, see Miller v. Jones, 26 Ala. 247; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Crazin, 71 Ill. 177; Ex parte Barker, 2 Leigh (Va.) 720; Henry v. Estey, 13 Gray (Mass.) 336; Cummings v. Hodgdon, 147 Mass.

8. When Administration May be Dispensed With.—If all the persons entitled to distribution are of full age, they may pay the debts of the estate, and divide the property among themselves, without the appointment of an administrator.¹ Such agreements are, however, not favored by the courts, and if made unfairly, or in disregard of the rights of any one interested in the estate, they may be set aside by the subsequent appointment of an administrator.²

In some of the States it is provided by statute that administration may be dispensed with under certain circumstances. Thus in Indiana, estates worth less than $300, may be inventoried, appraised, and settled without an administrator.³ In Maine, estates

21; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Dunden, 37 Kan. 1; Harwood v. Wylie, 70 Tex. 538; Ex parte Barker, 2 Leigh (Va.) 719.

1. In Vermont it is competent for all the heirs of a deceased person, if they are of age, to settle and pay the debts of the estate, and divide the property among themselves, without the intervention of an administrator, and neither the creditors nor debtors of the estate have a right to complain. Taylor v. Phillips, 30 Vt. 238; Babbitt v. Bowen, 32 Vt. 437.

Where a wife dies intestate, and her husband afterwards dies, leaving to her assets which belonged to him as survivor, unadministered, his representatives may, under the statute, bring suits for the recovery of such assets, without taking letters of administration upon her estate. Roosevelt v. Ellithorp, 10 Paige (N. Y.) 415.

Where an estate is not in debt, and the heirs, being of full age, carry out a settlement upon which they have all agreed, and by which they receive all that they could by virtue of an administrator, one cannot be appointed. Needham v. Gillett, 39 Mich. 574.

A court of equity will dispense with administration upon the estate of an intestate, and decree distribution direct, when the only office of administration, if granted, would be distribution. Fretwell v. McLemore, 52 Ala. 124.

In Pennsylvania an administrator was not permitted to disturb a sale of personal property made before his appointment by the widow and kindred, where he could not show debts or any good cause for reopening the transaction. Walworth v. Abel, 52 Pa. 370.

After an adverse possession of personality for forty-two years, a court of equity will presume a former administration to protect the rights of bona fide purchasers of such property. Woolfolk v. Beatly, 18 Ga. 520.

2. In Wright v. Wright, Mart. & Y. (Tenn.) 43, it was declared that agreements between distributees, to divide the intestate's property without administering, ought not to be encouraged.

Where the heirs-at-law and next of kin of a deceased person took possession of his estate and divided it among themselves and sold some of it, —held, that a court of equity could not protect them by restraining an administrator, regularly appointed, from recovering the property in actions at law. Carter v. Greenwood, 5 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 410.

See also in general on the necessity of administration, Bradford v. Felder, 2 McCord Eq. (S. Car.) 168; Cochran v. Thompson, 18 Tex. 652; Alexander v. Barfield, 6 Tex. 400; Smiley v. Bell, Mart. & Y. (Tenn.) 378; 17 Am. Dec. 813; Marshall v. King, 24 Miss. 85; Patterson v. High, 8 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 52; Davidson v. Potts, 7 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 272; Sharp v. Farmer, 4 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 122; Hibbard v. Kent, 15 N. H. 516; Clark v. Clay, 31 N. H. 393; Bartlett v. Hyde, 3 Mo. 490; Bowdoin v. Holland, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 17; Allen v. Simons, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 124; Walker v. Drew, 20 Fla. 908; Eisenbise v. Eisenbise, 4 Watts (Pa.) 134.

3. By 2 Indiana Rev. Stat. 279, estates worth less than $300 are to be inventoried and appraised and settled without an administrator; but if it turn out that it be worth more than $300, an administrator is to be appointed; when appointed he is to proceed de novo, to make a new inventory and appraisement, and the former ap-less than $20 need not be administered upon.¹ In Louisiana, administration will not be granted when there is no absolute necessity for it.²

The government sometimes dispenses with the necessity for administration, where something is due to the decedent for a public service, as for a pension or prize money. In such cases the government prefers as a matter of policy to deal directly with the widow or next of kin of the decedent.³

In some States no administration is necessary upon the estate of an infant intestate.⁴

9. Secondary and Limited Administration.—Besides original administration heretofore considered, there are various kinds of secondary and limited administrations, which may be classified as follows: (1) Administration cum testamento annexo; (2) administration de bonis non; (3) administration durante minore ætate; (4) administration durante absentia; (5) administration pendente lite; (6) administration ad colligendum.

a. APPOINTMENT OF ADMINISTRATORS CUM TESTAMENTO ANNEXO.—Where a person dies testate, but without having appointed an executor in his will, or where the executor named in the will is dead, or incompetent, or refused to accept the trust, an administrator with the will annexed is appointed to carry out the provisions of the will.⁵

praisement is not conclusive. Pace v. Oppenheim, 12 Ind. 533.

1. Bean v. Bumpus, 22 Me. 549.

2. Alleman v. Berqueron, 16 La. Ann. 191; Brashear v. Conner, 29 La. Ann. 347; Broussard v. Ditch, 30 La. Ann. 1109; Welch's Succession, 36 La. Ann. 702; Sarrazin's Succession, 34 La. Ann. 1168; Louaillier v. Castille, 14 La. Ann. 777; Lumsden's Succession, 17 La. Ann. 38; Dees v. Tildon, 2 La. Ann. 412; Soubiran v. Rivollet, 4 La. Ann. 328; Martin v. Dupre, 1 La. Ann. 239; Blake v. Kearney, 30 La. Ann. 388.

3. "Statutes specially dispense with letters of administration in various instances; and particularly where the balance of pay due some public servant is to be settled by the government, or the bounties, prize money or pensions of soldiers and sailors remain to be adjusted. For the public interest is often thought to be subserved in such cases by dealing directly with widows, orphans, and other next of kin, through the executive; to the utter exclusion, if need be, of the intestate's creditors, and the avoidance of controversies in the probate court over the locus of assets or of the decedent's last domicile."

19 C. of L.—14

4. Cobb v. Brown, Spears Eq. (S. Car.) 564.

The prohibition in the Missouri act concerning guardians and curators, against the issuing of letters of administration upon the estate of a deceased minor, applies to those cases only where there are no debts, except those which the guardian himself has allowed to be created, and does not apply where there are demands for which the minor would have been liable to an action. George v. Dawson, 18 Mo. 407.

In an action by a sole surviving heir against the sureties of a deceased administrator, it appeared that plaintiff's brother, the only other heir of the decedent, had died while a minor, owing no debts, and leaving plaintiff his sole heir. Held, that as the only duty of administration on such brother's estate would be distribution, an administrator of his estate need not be appointed. Glover v. Hill, 85 Ala. 41. But see Miller v. Eatman, 11 Ala. 609; Wheeler v. St. Joseph, etc. R. Co., 31 Kan. 640; Cobb v. Brown, Spear's Eq. (S. Car.) 564.

5. Where a testator appointed three executors, with power to distribute his property as they thought best,

209

Administration with the will annexed is usually granted to the

and they all died indebted to the testator—held, that the orphans' court might appoint the son of the surviving executor, administrator of such estates with the will annexed, there being no claim by the next of kin, nor by the State, nor by creditors. Neave's Estate, 9 S. & R. (Pa.) 186.

Wherever a deceased person has left a will and omitted to appoint an executor, or the person appointed refused to qualify, the court may appoint any proper person administrator with the will annexed. Suttle v. Turner, 8 Jones (N. Car.) 403; Smith v. Wingo, 1 Rice (S. Car.) 287.

Where application is made to the surrogate for letters of administration with the will annexed, the executor having died, prima facie evidence that assets remain unadministered is sufficient, and there need be no specific enumeration of the assets remaining, nor is it an objection to the issuing of such letters that, owing to the Statute of Limitations, and the lapse of time since the original executor took his letters, such letters would confer but a barren office on the administrator cum testamento annexo. Pumpelly v. Tinkham, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 321.

The power of the surrogate, under 3 New York Rev. Stat. 162, § 45, to appoint an administrator with the will annexed, in case of the death of all the executors, is not repealed nor affected by the act of 1863, which authorizes the supreme court to appoint a receiver of the estate in such an event. Depau's Estate, 1 Tuck. (N. Y.) 290.

The appointment of an administrator cum testamento annexo assumes that the court has admitted the will to probate. But this assumption may be contested by the proper parties in due time. Lackland v. Stevenson, 54 Mo. 108.

It is a question whether the record should show that there was cause for granting administration cum testamento annexo. Peebles v. Watts, 9 Dana (Ky.) 102; 33 Am. Dec. 531; Giessen v. Bridgford, 83 N. Y. 348. In Vick v. Mayor of Vicksburg, 2 How. (Miss.) 379, the act of appointment of an administrator with the will annexed must state a case giving the court authority to make such appointment; if it does not, the appointment will be void, although the facts were sufficient to justify it.

The order of a county court appointing an administrator with the will annexed, though defective in not stating that the executors named in the will refused to qualify, is valid, if in fact the executors refused to qualify; and this fact may be proved, where the validity of the order comes collaterally in question. Peebles v. Watts, 9 Dana (Ky.) 102; 33 Am. Dec. 531.

A died, and letters of administration were granted on his estate to B. About a year after, C and D presented the will of A to the probate court, for the first time, by which E was constituted his executor, and a petition was filed with the will, praying that letters of administration cum testamento annexo might be granted them, averring that E, the executor named, was a non-resident. The court granted the petition, and appointed them such administrators accordingly; and it did not appear that E contested the petition, or claimed the right of executorship, within the sixty days permitted by the Mississippi statute. Held, on writ of error to these decrees and orders, that there was nothing in the record upon which they could be reversed, and they were therefore affirmed. Cox v. Cox, 3 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 292.

Dative Execution in Louisiana.—As to the appointment of a dative executor in Louisiana, see Crocker's Succession, 14 La. Ann. 94; Nicholson's Succession, 5 La. Ann. 358; Bernard's Succession, 3 La. Ann. 565; King v. Lastrapes, 13 La. Ann. 582.

Miscellaneous.—For certain miscellaneous cases illustrating the appointment of administrators cum testamento annexo, see Fowler v. Walker, 1 Dem. (N. Y.) 240; In re Powell, 5 Dem. (N. Y.) 281; In re Roux, 5 Dem. (N. Y.) 423; Luers v. Brunges, 56 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 282; Van Giessen v. Bridgford, 83 N. Y. 348; In re Allen, 2 Dem. (N. Y.) 293; Blanch v. Morrison, 4 Dem. (N. Y.) 297; Hayward v. Place, 4 Dem. (N. Y.) 487; Bell v. Welch, 38 Ark. 139; Frisby v. Withers, 61 Tex. 134; Culver v. Hardenbergh, 37 Minn. 225; Slagle v. Entrekin, 44 Ohio St. 637; Wilcoxon v. Reese, 63 Md. 542; Meek v. Allison, 67 Ill. 46; Kirby v. State, 51 Md. 383; Ex parte Clark, 2 Va. Cas. 230; Creath v. Brent, 3 Dana (Ky.) 129; person having the greatest interest under the will.¹ The residuary legatee is preferred to the next of kin, and of several residuary legatees, one or more of them may be selected by the court at its discretion.² If the residuary legatee refuses to serve, the next of kin may be appointed, and where the will contains no specific disposition of the residue, the next of kin are properly granted administration.³ Where a wife makes a will, but fails to appoint an executor, the husband's right to administer is usually recognized by the courts;⁴ and the same rule applies under similar circumstances to the wife.⁵

Administration cum testamento annexo, should not be granted until the executor named in the will has had an opportunity to renounce the trust.⁶ Under certain circumstances an executor

In re Baldrige (Ariz. 1887), 15 Pac. Rep. 141; Spinning's Estate, 1 Tuck. (N. Y.) 78.

1. Schouler's Executors and Administrators, 166.

2. Under the statute of New York where letters of administration with the will annexed are granted, in a case where letters testamentary have never been issued and there is no executor to take, or where the administrator with the will annexed dies, they issue to persons in the following order of preference: 1, Residuary legatees; 2, principal or specific legatees; 3, the widow; 4, next of kin; 5, the public administrator (in the city of New York); 6, creditors; 7, any person not interested who will accept. In other counties than in New York, the county treasurer takes next after creditors. In re Ward, 1 Redf. (N. Y.) 254; In re Root, 1 Redf. (N. Y.) 257; Quintard v. Morgan, 4 Dem. (N. Y.) 168.

As to the preference accorded to the residuary legatee, see Atkinson v. Barnard, 2 Phill. 318; Taylor v. Shore, 2 Jones 162; Hutchinson v. Lambert, 3 Add. 27; Thompson's Estate, 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 334; Goods of Ditchfield, L. R., 2 P. D. 152.

3. Wms. Exrs. 466; Kooystra v. Buyskes, 3 Phill. 531; Goods of Aston, L. R., 6 P. & D. 203.

The next of kin has preference to a creditor. Little v. Berry, 94 N. Car. 488.

4. Wms. Exrs. 115; Schouler's Husband and Wife, § 457-470. Brenchley v. Lynn, 2 Robert. 441; Goods of Bailey, 2 Sw. & Tr. 135; Salmon v. Hays, 4 Hagg 386.

5. Long v. Huggins, 72 Ga. 776.

The personal representatives of a testator had a right of action against a municipal corporation for his death. The testamentary executor refused to commence suit, closed his administration, and procured his discharge. Held, that under How. St. Michigan, § 5843, providing that if an executor dies or is removed, or his authority shall be extinguished, administration with the will annexed may be granted as to the estate not already administered, letters were properly granted to the widow to prosecute the action. Merkle v. Bennington, 68 Mich. 133; 55 Am. Rep. 666.

A married woman, otherwise entitled to the letters, is none the less so because the pending suit is against her husband. Hayward v. Place, 4 Dem. (N. Y.) 487.

Connecticut Gen. St., p. 371, § 12, providing, on refusal of an executor to accept the trust, that the court shall commit the administration with the will annexed to the widow or next of kin. Held, not to apply in case of a non-resident testator having property in the State. Lawrence's Appeal, 49 Conn. 411.

6. The order granting an administration with the will annexed, before the renunciation of the executor named in the will, is avoidable upon the application of the executor, made in due time. Baldwin v. Buford, 4 Yerg. (Tenn.) 16; S. P. Thompson v. Meek, 7 Leigh (Va.) 419.

Letters of administration cannot be legally granted and confirmed while letters granted and confirmed to an executor named in the will are in full force. Landers v. Stone, 45 Ind. 404.

The appointment of an administrator with the will annexed, while there is an executor under no disability and who has renounced may be appointed administrator with the will annexed.¹

Letters of administration with the will annexed are granted by the probate court of the county in which the will is proved,² or in which a copy of a foreign will is filed.³

b. APPOINTMENT OF ADMINISTRATORS DE BONIS NON.—Where the office of an original administrator becomes vacant by who has renounced the appointment, is void, and the renunciation must appear of record. Springs v. Irwin, 6 Ired. (N. Car.) 27.

Letters of administration with the will annexed, issued on the death of the executor without notice, to the next of kin, were revoked on the application of their guardian. Maupay's Estate, 2 Brews. (Pa.) 491.

An administration de bonis non with the will annexed can be appointed on the resignation of the executor without notice to the legatee. Sivley v. Summers, 57 Miss. 712.

An existing administrator is not removed, simply by the appointment of another person as administrator, and such second appointment is void, unless the office has first been made vacant by an accepted resignation or a removal of the first administrator, or by the occurrence of such events as by operation of law create a vacancy. Haynes v. Meeks, 20 Cal. 288; Petigru v. Ferguson, 6 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 378; Grande v. Chaves, 15 Tex. 550.

1. An executor, whose appointment is avoided by his being an attesting witness, may be appointed administrator with the will annexed. Murphy v. Murphy, 24 Mo. 526. See also Goods of Blisset, 44 L. T. 816; Briscoe v. Wickliffe, 6 Dana (Ky.) 157.

2. In Pennsylvania, letters of administration with the will annexed can be granted only by the register of the county in which the will was proved and letters testamentary granted. Eyster's Estate, 5 Watts (Pa.) 132. See also Ward v. Oates, 42 Ala. 225; Van Giesen v. Bridgford, 18 Hun (N. Y.) 73; Jackson v. Jeffries, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 88.

A county court cannot receive and act upon a petition for letters of administration with the will annexed, pending an appeal from the order approving the will. In re Fisher, 15 Wis. 511.

3. Where a residuary legatee in New York wishes to obtain the benefit of stocks in New York belonging to his testator, who was a citizen of another State at his death, in which other State the will was proved, he should cite the executors to prove the will and take out letters testamentary thereon in New York, and if they neglect to do so, to have himself, or some other person, appointed administrator with the will annexed in New York. Brown v. Brown, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 189.

Where the orphans' court has issued letters of administration on the estate of one who died in another State, it should on the filing of a copy of a will, revoke the letters and issue letters cum testamento annexo, no executor being named in the will; and in deciding who is entitled to letters cum testamento annexo, the court should be governed by the rules of precedence which apply in cases of ordinary administration. Dalrymple v. Gamble, 66 Md. 298.

After a will, made in another State, has been recorded in the Kentucky court of appeals, an appointment of an administrator by a Kentucky county court, without the will annexed, is void. Ewing v. Sneed, 5 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 459.

Code Civil Proc. California, § 1350, provides that where an executor fails to qualify, letters shall be granted with will annexed, as in cases of intestacy, § 1365 provides to whom administration shall be granted in the case of an intestate estate. An executor of one dying testate in Virginia, renounced his right as an executor in California, and testator having no wife, an administrator was appointed at his request. Held, that as he would not have been eligible, under § 1365, if deceased had been intestate, he could not be appointed on the executor's renunciation. In re Garber's Estate, 74 Cal. 338.

The executor of a foreign will is not permitted to exercise his office in Louisiana by virtue of his foreign appointment, but must first obtain the authority of the court in Louisiana, death, resignation, or removal, and the estate remains unsettled, an administrator de bonis non is appointed to complete the administration.¹

and give security like an administrator. Succession of Butler, 30 La. Ann. 887.

1. Taylor v. Brooks, 4 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 139; Finn v. Hempstead, 24 Ark. 111; Green v. Byrne, 46 Ark. 453; Williams v. Cubage, 36 Ark. 307; Todd v. Willis, 66 Tex. 704; Dwyer v. Kaltayer, 68 Tex. 554; Ullman v. Verne (Tex. 1887), 4 S. W. Rep. 548; Dwyer v. Kaltayer, 68 Tex. 554; North Carolina University v. Hughes, 90 N. Car. 537; Ham v. Kornegay, 85 N. Car. 119; Minot v. Norcross, 143 Mass. 326; Neal v. Charlton, 52 Md. 495; Scott v. Fox, 14 Md. 388; Alexander v. Stewart, 8 Gill & J. (Md.) 226; Hooper v. Scarborough, 57 Ala. 570; Wright v. Phillips, 56 Ala. 69; Eubank v. Clark, 78 Ala. 73; Martin v. Ellerbe, 70 Ala. 326; Rambo v. Wyatt, 32 Ala. 363; 70 Am. Dec. 544; Jacobs v. Morrow, 21 Neb. 233; Whittaker v. Whittaker, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 393; Saffold v. Banks, 69 Ga. 289; U. S. v. Ames, 4 MacArthur (D. C.) 278; Steel v. Atkinson, 14 S. Car. 154; 37 Am. Rep. 728; Magraw v. Irwin, 87 Pa. St. 139; Moore v. Williamette Transp. etc. Co., 7 Oregon 359; Chamberlain v. McDowell, 42 N. J. Eq. 628; Perrin v. Calhoun Co. Judge, 49 Mich. 342; Balch v. Hooper, 32 Minn. 158; Read v. Howe, 13 Iowa 50; Green v. Thompson, 84 Va. 376; Hendricks v. Snodgrass, Walk. (Miss.) 86; Chapin v. Hastings, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 361; Scott v. Crews, 72 Mo. 261; Byerly v. Donlin, 72 Mo. 270; Henlon v. Bland, 81 Va. 588; Clarke v. Wells, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 475; Merkle v. Bennington, 68 Mich. 133; 55 Am. Rep. 666; Watkins v. Adams, 32 Miss. 333; In re Foreign Missions, 27 Conn. 344.

An administrator de bonis non may be appointed even where the original administrator has reduced all the assets of the estate to money. Donaldson v. Raborg, 26 Md. 312.

Letters of administration de bonis non must be granted in every case where, upon the death of the administrator, there are unadministered assets; and prima facie evidence of such assets is all that is required. Scott v. Fox, 14 Md. 388; Hendricks v. Snodgrass, Walk. (Miss.) 86.

Under Massachusetts Stat. 1817, ch. 190, § 17, authorizing the grant of administration de bonis non, "where there are debts due from the person unpaid," held, that a legacy was not a debt due from the deceased, within the meaning of the statute. Chapin v. Hastings, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 361.

The appointment of an administrator generally, without adding the words de bonis non, is not void because made in respect to an estate already administered. Moseley v. Mastin, Ala. Sel. Cas. 171.

Administration de bonis non, is to be granted where there are debts unsatisfied, notwithstanding the estate is all distributed. Brattle v. Converse, 1 Root (Conn.) 174. After an administrator appointed by a Virginia county court had qualified by giving bond without security, the court in term, made an order permitting him to resign, and on the following day appointed a new administrator, who qualified by giving bond with security. Held, that the second appointment was regular. Goff v. Norfolk etc. R. Co., 36 Fed. Rep. 299.

An administrator de bonis non may be appointed, and may maintain a suit against his predecessor, although there are no debts, and only the rights of heirs and distributees are to be protected. Scott v. Crews, 72 Mo. 261.

When the final settlement of a deceased administrator is set aside by the circuit court, an administrator de bonis non must be appointed by the probate court to settle the estate. Byerly v. Donlin, 72 Mo. 270.

An administrator de bonis non is a necessary party where money is to be paid to the intestate's estate. Hinton v. Bland, 81 Va. 588.

In an action by a sole surviving heir against the sureties of the deceased administrator for settlement, an administrator de bonis non need not be appointed where it appears that all the decedent's debts are paid or barred by limitation, and therefore that no administrative duties remain except settlement and distribution of the estate. Glover v. Hill, 85 Ala. 41.

The goods of an intestate do not go to the legal representative of a deceased administrator, nor has such representative any preferred right to

As a general rule administration de bonis non is granted in accordance with the rules governing the original grant of letters.¹ In Massachusetts, however, no preference is given to the next of kin in the grant of administration de bonis non, but the probate court may grant it to any suitable person.² Where a husband dies pending the settlement of his wife's estate, administration is granted to the husband's representatives.³ The probate court the successorship. Schouler's Exrs. & Admrs. 171; Taylor v. Brooks, 4 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 139; Donaldson v. Raborg, 26 Md. 312.

There must be an actual vacancy. Munroe v. People, 102 Ill. 406; Pollard v. Mohler, 55 Md. 284; Ullman v. Verne (Tex. 1887), 4 S. W. Rep. 548; Rambo v. Wyatt, 32 Ala. 363; 70 Am. Dec. 544; Matthews v. Douthitt, 27 Ala. 273; 62 Am. Dec. 765; Watkins v. Adams, 32 Miss. 333; Ramey v. Green, 18 Ala. 771; Steen v. Bennett, 24 Vt. 303; Trumble v. Williams, 18 Neb. 144; Croxton v. Renner, 103 Ind. 223; Pate v. Moore, 79 Ind. 20; Ex parte Crafts, 28 S. Car. 281.

Upon a petition for the appointment of an administrator de bonis non, the order of appointment recited that "whereas J. P. W. (an administrator previously appointed) is a non-resident, and has not for more than ten years past made any report of his doings to the court, and has left the estate unsettled in full, by means whereof the granting of administration on goods not administered upon doth belong to us." Held, that the order implied the removal of the first administrator, and that the appointment of the second one was valid. Bailey v. Scott, 13 Wis. 618.

Where a court granted letters of administration de bonis non, knowing that an administrator had been appointed in another county and had resigned it was held that, on a collateral attack, the jurisdiction of the court would be conclusively presumed. Brockenborough v. Melton, 55 Tex. 493.

When letters of administration de bonis non are attacked collaterally on the ground that there was no vacancy, the fact that there was no vacancy must be affirmatively shown. Bean v. Chapman, 73 Ala. 140.

1. Williams on Executors (7th ed.) 472; Long v. Eaely, 13 Ala. 239; Kearney v. Turner, 28 Md. 408; Cutlar v. Quince, 2 Hayw. (N. Car.) 60; Bradley v. Bradley, 3 Redf. (N. Y.)

512; Cobb v. Beardsley, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 192; Pendleton v. Pendleton, 6 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 448; Goods of Grundy, L. R., 1 P. & D. 459.

2. Russell v. Hoar, 3 Met. (Mass.) 187.

3. Schouler's Husband and Wife, § 415. The rule seems to have been first definitely established in England, in Fielder v. Hanger, 3 Hagg. 769. That was a cause of granting administration to the executors of Leader, of certain effects of his late wife unadministered by him, an appearance having been given for, and administration prayed for, the niece and one of his wife's next of kin, the executors alleged in a petition, that in June, 1812 in contemplation of marriage, Leader and Mrs. Dawson signed an agreement, that her property should on the marriage pass to Leader, save as to "her moneys in the funds which shall be for her separate use to all intents and purposes as if she were sole and unmarried, and that the same shall be conveyed to trustees, and a proper settlement executed; "that no settlement was made, but the marriage took place, and on her death in June, 1828, she was possessed of personal estate consisting of £2,475 in the four per cents, and some long annuities standing in her name of "Dawson."

The proctor for the niece having returned the act unanswered, Lushington moved that the grant should pass to the husband's executors, citing all the cases collected in vol. 1, Hagg. Ecc. Reports 341-8, and vol. 2, Appendix 158-170.

The court said: "Those cases show that there have been contradictory decisions on the point. On the principle, however, that the grant ought to follow the interest, and that the whole interest is vested in the husband's representatives, I shall decree this grant. I should have done the same if the husband had not taken out administration, unless it could be shown that he had not the interest, but the property belonged to the wife's which granted the original letters of administration is the proper court to which to apply for letters de bonis non.¹

After a great length of time a presumption arises that the estate has been duly administered. In such a case letters of administration de bonis non will not be granted.² But there are special circumstances which will rebut this presumption, and justify the grant of letters de bonis non.³

c. ADMINISTRATION DURING MINORITY. — Administration during minority is granted where a person who has the right to administration, or is named sole executor in a will, is under age, and therefore incapable of executing the trust.⁴ In the United next of kin; and it will be understood in the registry that this is to be the rule for the future, unless special cause to the contrary be shown."

As to the rule in America, see Whitaker v. Whitaker, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 112; Hendrin v. Colgin, 4 Munf. (Va.) 231; Bryan v. Rooks, 25 Ga. 622; 71 Am. Dec. 194; In re Harvey, 3 Redf. (N. Y.) 214; Patterson v. High, 8 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 52; Lockwood v. Stockholm, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 87; Cutchin v. Wilkinson, 1 Call (Va.) 1.

1. An administrator de bonis non, granted by the probate court of a different district from that in which the first administration was granted, but to which the town in which the deceased resided has been annexed by statute is not void, but only voidable upon appeal. Clapp v. Beardsley, 1 Vt. 151.

The county court which granted administration has alone the right to grant administration de bonis non, and a grant by another court is void. Pawling v. Speed, 5 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 582.

When administration is duly granted by any court having jurisdiction, the same court, and no other, can grant administration de bonis non, upon the death of the first administrator. Ex parte Lyons, 2 Leigh (Va.) 761.

A grant including two estates under one administration will not be void, either in whole or in part, if the court has jurisdiction over both estates. Grande v. Herrera, 15 Tex. 533.

2. Lapse of time and other circumstances raise a presumption that all debts against an estate are barred or paid, and that the remaining assets belonged to the heirs; and therefore the estate cannot be reopened by the appointment of an administrator de bonis non. Murphy v. Menard, 14 Tex. 62.

An application for letters de bonis non made sixteen years after probate, by one neither showing an interest in the estate, nor that any debt remained unpaid, will be refused. San Roman v. Watson, 54 Tex. 254.

3. Administration de bonis non may be granted after the expiration of twenty years from the death of the former administrator. Bancroft v. Andrews, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 493; S. P. Holmes, Petitioner, 33 Me. 577.

An executor having died without distributing a parcel of leasehold property inventoried by him, administration de bonis non is properly granted twenty-four years after his death, and the allegation of the testator's widow that she purchased of the executor the property in question, and paid him for it, affords no ground for refusing the letters. Neal v. Charlton, 52 Md. 495.

A person appointed administrator de bonis non in Alabama in 1862, on the ground that the chief was absent in the confederate army, and who continued to act in that capacity until 1867, when his appointment was declared void. Held to be an administrator de facto, and his deed as such to a purchaser, valid. Green v. Scarborough, 49 Ala. 137. Compare Sugg v. Winston, 49 Ala. 586.

4. Cope v. Cope, L. R., 16 Ch. D. 49; Taylor v. Barron, 35 N. H. 484; Pitcher v. Armat, 6 Miss. 288; Lamb v. Helm, 56 Mo. 420. In Wallis v. Wallis, 1 Winst. No. 1 (N. Car.) 78, it was held that a widow under twenty-one years of age cannot be appointed an administratrix. The court may appoint an administrator durante minoritate, and on the widow's attaining full age, give the administration to her, or the office may be filled by such person as she shall appoint.

If two persons are appointed executors and one is of full age while the other is a minor, administration during minority

States, it is usually customary to pass over minors, and select a suitable person for administrator without special reference to or regard for the minor's precedence.¹ An administrator during minority has the usual powers of a general administrator as long as his office continues.²

d. ADMINISTRATION DURING ABSENCE.—In certain cases administration during absence has been granted where, prior to the grant of original letters, the person or persons entitled had been absent from the jurisdiction of the court.³

e. ADMINISTRATION PENDENTE LITE.—Administrations pendente lite are appointed to take charge of an estate pending a contest over a will, or over the right to administration.⁴ The need not be granted, the person of full age being vested with full power to administer. Cartwright's Case, 1 Freem. 258; Williams on Executors 479.

1. Schouler's Executors and Administrators 176, n.

2. In Cope v. Cope, L. R., 16 Ch. D. 52, Jessel, M. R., in speaking of the duties of an administrator durante minore etate, said: "The limit to his administration is no doubt the minority of the person, but there is no other limit. He is an ordinary administrator; he is appointed for the very purpose of getting in the estate, paying the debts, and selling the estate in the usual way; and the property vests in him. I am of opinion that he clearly can sell for the purpose of paying the debts."

3. In Slater v. May, 2 Ld. Raym. 1071, Chief Justice Holt said that it was reasonable that there should be such an administrator, and that this administration stood upon the same reason as an administration durante minore etate of an executor, viz: That there should be a person to manage the estate of the testator, till the person appointed by him is able.

In Willing v. Perot, 5 Rawle (Pa.) 264, a resident of Calcutta died possessed of American funds, which he bequeathed specifically to his sons upon various trusts. The court held that a local administrator cum testamento annexo, durante absentia, was entitled to the fund, in preference to those claiming under the foreign executor.

In Wilkinson v. Winne, 15 Minn. 123, the power of the probate court to appoint a second administrator when the first has absented himself from the State is considered. See also Lamb v. Helm, 56 Mo. 420; Webb v. Kirby, 3 Sm. & G. 333; Goods of Ruddy, L. R., 2 P. & D. 330; Goods of Jenkins, 28 W. R.

431; Goods of Richardson, 35 L. T. 767.

In South Carolina administration durante absentia cannot be granted after probate of the will and letters testamentary are granted. Griffith v. Frazier, 8 Cranch (U. S.) 9.

By the Statute 38 Geo. III, ch. 87, administration durante absentia may be granted where the ordinary executor or administrator goes and remains abroad.

4. The orphans' court has power to appoint an administrator pendente lite only where the validity of the will is contested. Munnikhuysen v. Magraw, 57 Md. 172.

New York, Code, § 2668, restricts the right of the surrogate, in the matter of the appointment of a temporary administrator, to cases where delay necessarily occurs in granting letters under the Code; the surrogate is without power to appoint a receiver pending a contest concerning a will devising real estate. Tooker v. Bell, 1 Dem. (N. Y.) 52.

As an appeal from an order revoking the probate of a will does not revive the powers of the executor, the court can appoint a special administrator. In re Crozier, 65 Cal. 332.

The powers and functions of an administrator pendente lite, which are suspended by the admission of the will to probate and the qualification of the executors, revive on appeal from the decree of probate, and continue until the determination of the appeal. Brown v. Ryder, 42 N. J. Eq. 356.

A probate court has a right to appoint a custodian of the personal property of the deceased, pending the appeal of the executrix from a decree of said court requiring a bond for the faithful administration of said property, she having a life estate person who should be appointed is largely within the discretion of the court, and no one should be appointed who is interested on the one side or the other of the contest.¹

therein. Sarle v. Court of Probate, 7 R. I. 270.

In Mortimer v. Paull, L. R., 2 P. & D. 85, the deceased executed a will and two codicils, and by the will he appointed executors. A suit was instituted to test the validity of the second codicil only; such codicil in no way affecting the appointment of executors. The court refused to appoint an administrator pendente lite.

An administrator appointed by the chancery court under the Tennessee Code, § 2213, is not a mere administrator pendente lite, but a general administrator liable to suit, and whose appointment sets in motion the Statute of Limitations in favor of the estate. Todd v. Wright, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 442.

The authority, under Wagn. Missouri Stat. 72, § 12, to suspend the functions of an executor during a contest of the will in the circuit court, and appoint a temporary administrator pendente lite—held, to include an administrator cum testamento annexo. Lamb v. Helm, 56 Mo. 420.

Under the act Wagn. Stat. 1368, § 29, which provides that if the validity of a will be contested, letters of administration shall be granted during the time of such contest to some other person, in case of proceedings in the circuit court to contest the validity of the will, the probate court may suspend the functions of the executor named in the will, and appoint an administrator pendente lite. Rogers v. Dively, 51 Mo. 193.

See also Benson v. Wolf, 43 N. J. L. 78; Kaminer v. Hope, 18 S. Car. 561; Walker v. Dougherty, 14 Ga. 653; Wade v. Bridges, 24 Ark. 569; Dean v. Biggers, 27 Ga. 73; Crandall v. Shaw, 2 Redf. (N. Y.) 100; Moore v. Alexander, 81 Ala. 509; Elwell v. Universalist Church, 63 Tex. 220; Fisk v. Norvel, 9 Tex. 13; Ex parte Worthington, 54 Md. 359; Fisk v. Norvel, 9 Tex. 13.

1. Whether the surrogate should appoint as temporary administrator one named as executor in a disputed will, depends on the circumstances of the case. All things being equal, his appointment is rather desirable than otherwise. Jones v. Hamersley, 2 Dem. (N. Y.) 286.

One named as executor may, although charged with having unduly influenced the testator, be appointed temporary administrator pending a controversy over the will, where the allegations of undue influence are vague and uncertain, the objector's share small, where the others in interest consent to the appointment, and where economy prompts it. Haas v. Childs, 4 Dem. (N. Y.) 137.

Pending a contest concerning a will, one named therein as executor, and charged by the testaments with having influenced the testator, should not be appointed temporary administrator. Cornwell v. Cornwell, 1 Dem. (N. Y.) 1.

An attorney-at-law who represents an heir in the settlement of a succession may legally be appointed curator ad hoc to represent the interests of another heir absent from the State. Fly v. Noble, 37 La. Ann. 667.

A will executed by the testator in 1882 was, after his death in 1885, offered for probate, and, on contest of its validity, a daughter of the testator appointed administratrix pendente lite, who had, with her devisees, petitioned for admission of the will to probate, and for the appointment of the executors therein named. Under Code Maryland, art. 93, § 68, which provides for the appointment, pending the contest of a will, of either the person named in the will, or to whom the largest portion of personal estate has been bequeathed, or who would be entitled to letters testamentary in case of intestacy, it was held that the administratrix was one of the classes of persons entitled to letters, and had not, by signing and filing the petition consenting to the probate of the will, renounced her right. McIntire v. Worthington, 68 Md. 203; McIntire v. Wilson (Md. 1887), 12 Atl. Rep. 253.

A caveat was filed to a will, and upon application of the party who was admitted to be the executor named in the will, and the largest legatee of the personalty, he was appointed by the orphans' court administrator pendente lite. Held, that the orphans' court had full power to make this appointment, and, the eligibility of the party being admitted, that the exercise of its discretion by

The duties of an administrator pendente lite end with the suit.¹

f. SPECIAL ADMINISTRATION.—In certain cases administration is granted for special or limited purposes. Thus, where a person appoints an executor, the appointment to take effect only after the expiration of a certain specified time, administration for the intermediate time may be granted.² In some jurisdictions, administration limited to certain specific effects of the deceased, or for the performance of a single act, may be granted.³ In Massachusetts, where there is delay from any cause in granting letters of administration, the probate court may appoint a special administrator to collect the effects of the deceased;⁴ and in New York a "special collector" is appointed in cases of delay.⁵

PROCEDENDO.—A writ of procedendo ad iudicium issues out of the court of chancery in England and out of a superior court in United States where judges of any subordinate court delay the parties, as by not giving judgment on either side.⁶ A procedendo may also be awarded out of the superior court where an action has been removed to it from an inferior court, and it appears to said court must determine the matter. Cain v. Warford, 3 Md. 454.

A special collector of the estate of a deceased person will be appointed whenever, by reason of a contest or other cause, there is likely to be delay in the grant of letters testamentary or of administration. But an indifferent person, and not a party litigant, should be appointed. Mootrie v. Hunt, 4 Bradf. (N. Y.) 173; Lawrence v. Parsons, 27 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 26.

1. Letters of administration pendente lite will not be revoked and an administrator appointed pending the determination of the litigation. Robinson's Estate, 12 Phila. (Pa.) 170.

When the contest as to the will is over and the executor qualifies, the functions of the administrator pendente lite are at an end. And notice of his settlement with the executor is not necessary. Robards v. Lamb, 89 Mo. 308.

Under the amendment of the constitution creating the office of ordinary, a temporary administrator is entitled to exercise his authority until an appeal from the grant of permanent letters is tried and determined and such letters are granted. Gresham v. Pyron, 17 Ga. 268.

2. Williams on Executors 513.

3. Jordan v. Polk, 1 Sneed (Tenn.) 430; M'Nairy v. Bell, 6 Yerg. (Tenn.) 302; Smith v. Pistole, 10 Humph. (Tenn.) 205; Harris v. Milburn, 2

Hagg. 62; Goods of Summerset, L. R., 1 P. & D. 350; Succession of De Flechier, 1 La. Ann. 20; Ex parte Lyon, 60 Ala. 650; Jones v. Ritter, 56 Ala. 270; Codman v. Richards, 13 Neb. 383; Pickering v. Werting, 47 Iowa 242; Ellmaker's Estate, 4 Watts (Pa.) 36; Sarle v. Court of Probate, 7 R. I. 270.

4. Massachusetts Pub. Stat., ch. 130, § 10-17.

5. Berdell v. Schell, 2 Dem. (N. Y.) 292; In re Haskett, 3 Redf. (N. Y.) 165; Mootrie v. Hunt, 4 Bradf. (N. Y.) 173; Lawrence v. Parsons, 27 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 26; Crandall v. Shaw, 2 Redf. (N. Y.) 100; Howard v. Dougherty, 3 Redf. (N. Y.) 535.

In Alabama, an administrator ad colligendum is the mere agent or officer of the court, and may be removed at any time, and an administrator in chief appointed. Flora v. Mennice, 12 Ala. 836.

Authorities.—Woerner's American Law of Administration, 1889; Schouler's Executors and Administrators, 1889.

6. "In this case a writ of procedendo shall be awarded, commanding them in the king's name to proceed to judgment; but without specifying any particular judgment, for that (if erroneous) may be set aside in the course of appeal or by writ of error or false judgment; and upon further neglect or refusal, the judges of the inferior have been removed on insufficient grounds. And by 21 Jac. 1, ch. 23, a suit once so remanded shall not be again removed before judgment into any court whatsoever.¹ The office of justice of the peace is determinable by superseding the commission by writ of supersedeas, which supersedes the power of all the justices, but does not totally destroy it; seeing it may be revived again by another writ called a procedendo.² If one pray in aid of the crown in a real action and aid be granted, it shall be awarded that he sue to sovereign in chancery, and the justices in the common pleas shall stay until this writ of procedendo de loquela come to them. So also on a personal action.³

PROCEDURE—(See also PROCEEDING).—The word procedure as a law term is not well understood. The term is so broad in its court may be punished for their contempt by writ of attachment returnable in the king's bench or common pleas." 3 Bl. Com. 109. The Supreme court of the United States has power to award in proper cases the writs of certiorari and procedendo, and a United States circuit court may be required upon mandamus or procedendo to review a decision of the district court denying relief or unreasonably postponing it. 4 Min. Inst. 301, 276.

"It is remarkable that this writ is not unfrequently styled a mandamus, notwithstanding the functions and nature of a mandamus differ, as we shall see, so essentially from those of a procedendo. Such a confusion of terms we have in Webb v. Barbour, 4 Hen. & M. (Va.) 462, and also in Richardson's Case, 3 Leigh (Va.) 343; and more conspicuously still in several cases in the Supreme Court of the United States, e. g. N. Y. Life etc. Ins. Co. v. Adams, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 306; Ex parte Many, 14 How. (U. S.) 25," 4 Min. Inst. 310.

1. 3 Steph. Com. (11th ed.) 633-4.

For cases where the writ was granted in action removed by habeas corpus, see Pope v. Vaux, 2 W. Bl. 1060; Dixon v. Heslop, 6 T. R. 365; Blanchard v. De La Crounee, 9 Q. B. 869; Fry v. Carey, 1 Stra. 527.

Plaintiff in an inferior court from which a cause is removed by habeas corpus and a rule for better bail given, is not entitled to a procedendo, after render of defendant and notice of such render, although the render be made after the day on which the rule for better bail expires. Farquharson v. Fanchecour, 16 East 387; Johnson v. Walker, 4 B. & Ald. 535; 6 E. C. L. 591.

"If the certiorari has been improperly issued, by a fraud upon the court, a false allegation and the like, the court above will issue a procedendo to the court, commissioners or others below, to proceed in the cause or business. By this writ of procedendo the cause is remitted to the court whence the record came, and it commands the inferior court to proceed to the final hearing and determination of the same. It issues not only in the cases above mentioned, but also when it does not appear to the superior court that the suggestion upon which the cause has been removed is sufficiently proved." 3 Bouv. Inst. § 3367.

A single judge of one of the three superior common-law courts has the power to order a procedendo. Reg. v. Scaife, 18 Q. B. 773.

In Pennsylvania, and perhaps in some of the other States, where on a writ of error the proper judgment cannot be pronounced by the supreme court, or where anything remains for the court below to do, and a venire de novo is not the proper order, the supreme court will award a procedendo. See Troub. & Haly's Prac., § 871. On a reversal for a defect in pleading a procedendo will be awarded to give an opportunity to amend. Garland v. Davis, 4 How. (U. S.) 131. See also Harper v. Keely, 17 Pa. St. 234; Klett v. Claridge, 31 Pa. St. 106; Leach v. Ansbacher, 28 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 277.

2. 1 Bl. Com. 353; 2 Steph. Com. (11th ed.) 659; 1 Br. & Had. Com. 424.

3. Whart. L. Dict. 661; N. N. B. 154. See also Jac. Dict., tit. "Procedendo."

signification that it is seldom employed in our books as a term of art. It includes in its meaning whatever is embraced by the three technical terms, pleading, evidence, and practice. In this sense the word practice means those legal rules which direct the course of proceeding, to bring parties into the court, and the course of the court after they are brought in. And evidence, as a part of procedure, signifies those rules of law whereby we determine what testimony is to be admitted, and what rejected in each case, and what is the weight to be given to the testimony admitted.¹

PROCEEDING—(See also EXECUTIONS, vol. 7, p. 160).—Proceeding (as used in reference to actions) is any step taken by a party in the progress of an action.²

1. Bishop's Crim. Proc., § 2, followed in Kring v. Missouri, 107 U. S. 221.

2. Wilson v. Allen, 3 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 369; Williamson v. Champlin, Clarke Ch. (N. Y.) 9. A proceeding in court is an act done by the authority or direction of the court, express or implied. Bulkeley v. Keteltas, 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 741.

"Proceeding" means, in all cases, the performance of an act, and is wholly distinct from any consideration of an abstract right. It is an act necessary to be done in order to attain a given end; it is a prescribed mode of action for carrying into effect a legal right, and so far from involving any consideration or determination of the right, pre-supposes its existence. Rich v. Husson, 1 Duer (N. Y.) 620. See also Fargo v. Helmer, 43 Hun (N. Y.) 19.

"The term 'proceedings,' in its more general sense in law, means all the steps or measures adopted in the prosecution or defense of an action. (Webster's Dict., Gordon v. State, 4 Kan. 504.) It may mean more than the record history of the case. It is, undoubtedly, sometimes used in this restrictive sense. In its ordinary acceptation the word, when unqualified, except by the subject to which it is applied, includes the whole of the subject. Thus, the proceedings of a suit embrace all matters that occur in its progress judicially; proceedings upon a trial, all that occurs in that part of the litigation." Morewood v. Hollister, 6 N. Y. 320.

Proceedings in Court.—The statutory proceedings to foreclose a mortgage are not "proceedings" in court, so as to authorize the court to remedy defects in them. Dwight v. Phillips, 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 116.

"Proceeding" in the Sense of "Action."

—The word "proceeding" may be used in the sense of "action," as "any proceeding" equivalent to "any action." Pryor v. City Offices Co., 10 Q. B. D. (Eng.) 504.

"A suit is certainly a 'proceeding.'" Dodd v. Middleton, 63 Ga. 638.

"Proceeding" May or May Not Include the Pleadings.—Proceeding is used in the Nebraska Co. Civ. Proc., to distinguish all other steps taken in an action from those embraced in the word pleading. Filing an affidavit in an action of replevin is a "proceeding." Wilson v. Macklin, 7 Neb. 50.

It was provided by the Kansas Code that "an action may be dismissed, without prejudice to a future action . . . by the court for disobedience by the plaintiff of an order concerning the proceedings in the action." It was held that the word proceedings in this connection meant any proceedings in the case including the pleadings. Jackson v. Hoagland, 5 Kan. 559.

Proceeding More Comprehensive than Judgment.—"The word 'proceeding' in a judicial sense is much more comprehensive than that of 'judgment'; the former very frequently including the latter," and accordingly it was held that the certificate of a justice of the peace to a transcript that it contained "a correct statement of the proceedings" sufficiently complied with the provision of an Indiana statute, requiring copies of proceedings before a justice of the peace to be certified by him as "true and complete copies of such proceedings and judgments." Yeager v. Davis, 112 Ind. 230.

Under a Wisconsin statute, which provided that unless "proceedings shall be had" within one year from the entry of a certain order in court, the cause PROCEED.—See note 1.

PROCEEDS.—A word of great generality, but not necessarily money.²

PROCESS.—See SERVICE OF PROCESS; WRITS.

I. Definition, 222.

shall be dismissed, etc., it was held that the notice of an attorney to the adverse party that the cause had been remitted, and that on a day named he would move the court to vacate its judgment, was such a "proceeding." Bonesteel v. Orvis, 31 Wis. 117.

Gaol Liberties.—A United States statute provided that "writs of execution and other final process issued on judgments and decrees rendered in any courts of the United States, and the proceedings thereupon shall be the same, except their style, in each State, respectively, as are now used in the courts of such State," etc. It was held that the allowance of gaol liberties was a part of the "proceeding" upon such writs of execution, within the meaning of the act. United States v. Knight, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 371.

Proceedings in the Cause.—This phrase includes the sheriff's doings under the execution. Ward v. Cohen, 3 S. Car. 338.

Criminal Proceeding.—A "criminal proceeding" is a far larger term than "criminal prosecution." Yates v. Reg. 14 Q. B. D. 648.

1. The word "issue," as used in a Georgia statute giving a remedy where execution has issued illegally, was treated as having the sense of "proceed." Robison v. Banks, 17 Ga. 211.

A stipulation not to proceed against a party is an agreement not to sue. To sue a man: is to proceed against him. Planters' Bank v. Houser, 57 Ga. 140.

2. Phelps v. Harris, 101 U. S. 380, in which case, it was held, that the power to dispose of land and to take in return such proceeds as one thinks best, includes power to exchange for other lands.

The word "proceeds" is a word of equivocal import. Its construction depends very much upon the context and the subject-matter to which it is applied. If a testator should direct his property to be sold, and the proceeds to be disposed of or distributed in a certain manner, no one could doubt that the whole corpus or principal was intended. But should he order it to be rented or invested, then proceeds would necessarily be limited to the net income, especially if the interest given was for life only. Thomson's Appeal, 89 Pa. St. 46; and in the case under consideration it was held that by "proceeds" were meant the income of the estate in question. See also Robert's Appeal, 92 Pa. St. 407.

II. Necessity of Process, 224.

In Belmont v. Dowvert, 35 N. Y. Super. Ct. 208, "proceeds" was held to mean the amount of money that in future would be obtained for the property upon a disposition of it by sale.

And in Knox v. Knox, 59 Wis. 172, the court held in construing a will, that the words "all the proceeds of my said property," meant the entire body of the estate and were not restricted to the income. See also Allen v. Barnes, 5 Utah 100.

Proceeds of a cargo in general includes the return or substituted cargo or property acquired by the sale or exchange of the goods originally shipped. Dow v. Hope Ins. Co., 1 Hall (N. Y.) 166. So in Haven v. Gray, 12 Mass. 71, it was held that insurance upon the proceeds of the outward cargo effected by a valued policy on a voyage out and home, covered the value of that cargo in the return cargo, if the return cargo was procured on the credit of the outward; but where the insurance was effected on the goods "out" and the "proceeds thereof home," it was held that if the identical goods comprising the outward cargo were brought home as the return cargo, the policy did not cover them. Doe v. Whetten, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 160. See also Dow v. Hope Ins. Co., 1 Hall (N. Y.) 166. See also Hancock v. Fishing Ins. Co., 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 134; MARINE INSURANCE, vol. 14, p. 332.

I. DEFINITION.—Process is the mandate of a court to its officer commanding him to perform certain services within his official cognizance. It is the means whereby the defendant in a suit is compelled to appear in court and whereby the effect of the suit is secured to the successful party.¹ In its broader sense it com-

1. Bouvier's Law Dict., Abbot's Law Dict., Anderson's Law Dict.

The meaning of the word "process" is defined in the codes of most of the States; e. g. in the Kentucky code "process" is defined as "a writ or summons issued in the course of judicial proceedings." The term is therefore held to embrace a writ of execution. Gourdy v. Sanders (Ky. 1889), 11 S. W. Rep. 82.

In New York, "process," in its application to insurance companies, is defined to be "any writ, summons or order whereby any suit, action or proceeding shall be commenced" L. 1884 (N. Y.), ch. 346, § 5.

In Wisconsin, a constitutional requirement that all writs of "process" should run in the name of the State, includes only process emanating from the courts of justice of the State. Sprague v. Birchard, 1 Wis. 457.

In Louisiana it is held to signify the judicial means, or the writ which issues forth to bring the defendant into court to answer. It does not include furnishing copies of indictments, recording and indexing court papers and the like. Fitzpatrick v. New Orleans, 27 La. Ann. 457.

In Minnesota the term as used in the constitution is held to include "all such writs, original, mesne, or final, by which the authority of the State is exercised in obtaining jurisdiction over the person or property of its citizens, and which require the exercise of the sovereign power for their enforcement." Hinkley v. St. Anthony Falls etc. Co., 9 Minn. 55.

Is Summons Process?—The question as to whether a mere writ of summons is "process" has often arisen. It has been held in Minnesota that the term "process" did not include a mere summons, process being considered as merely synonymous with proceedings. Hana v. Russell, 12 Minn. 80, and cases cited.

So also in Colorado, Florida, Oregon and Wisconsin a summons has been held not process. Comet Consolidated Min. Co. v. Frost (Colo. 1890), 25 Pac. Rep. 506; Gilmer v. Bird, 15

Fla. 410; Bailey v. Williams, 6 Oregon 71; Porter v. Vandercook, 11 Wis. 70. In all these cases the summons was merely a writing directed to the defendant requiring him to appear and answer the complaint, and was signed only by the plaintiff's attorney. It was not a mandate of the court to its officer commanding him to summon, nor did it bear the signature of the clerk or the seal of the court.

This idea is well set forth in Whitney v. Blackburn, 17 Oregon 564; 11 Am. St. Rep. 857, where it is said: "Properly speaking, a summons is only a process when issued from the office of a court of justice requiring the person to whom it is addressed to attend the court for the purpose therein stated. Under our code, the summons is a process to commence a civil action. But technically, such a summons is not a 'process,' but is more in the nature of a mere notice informing the defendant that an action has been commenced against him, and that he is required to answer the complaint therein within a specified time. In view of this distinction, such notice cannot be considered process in the sense in which that word is used in the books." See also Bailey v. Williams, 6 Oregon 71.

A summons is nevertheless a quasi process; "it is deemed a mandate of the court," and is signed by the plaintiff's attorney as an officer of the court. The expression "summons or other process" is often used. See New York Co. Civ. Proc., §§ 218, 802.

A suit at common law in the United States circuit court was sought to be commenced by serving on defendant a paper purporting to be a summons, in the form prescribed by the statute of New York for commencing a civil action, signed by the plaintiff's attorney, but not under the seal of the court nor signed by the clerk of the court. Defendant before appearing generally in the suit, moved to set aside the summons and the plaintiff asked to be allowed to amend the summons nunc pro tunc, by having the seal and signature added. The court held that the summons required by U. S. Rev. Sts., §

911 to bring a defendant into court was "process," and hence must be under the signature of the clerk and the seal of the court. It was also held that the summons by which this suit was sought to be commenced was not sufficient and could not be amended, since it was not process, and therefore could not be made so by amendment. Dwight v. Merritt, 18 Blatchf. (U. S.) 305.

A Rule to Show Cause.—A rule to show cause is held not to be such a writ of "process" as is required by Massachusetts Stat. to have a teste, and be under the seal of the court. Taylor v. Henry, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 397.

But a rule upon an incumbent to show cause why he refuses to surrender his office, is process. Kennard v. Louisiana, 92 U. S. 480.

A rule nisi is also held to be judicial "process." Falvey v. Jones, 80 Ga. 130.

Memorial.—In Ex parte Davis, 41 Me. 38, a justice of the supreme court who had been removed by the governor in a manner alleged to be unconstitutional, filed a memorial to the court asking the judgment of the court thereon, and claiming the right to sit as a justice of the court. It was held, however, that the memorial so filed was no process known to the common law, since no party adversely interested or otherwise had been summoned or claimed to be heard, and therefore it did not bring the proceedings of the removal before the court in such a manner as to give it jurisdiction.

Other Cases.—A guardian's notice of an application to sell his ward's land has been held to stand in the place and to perform the office of "process." Nichols v. Mitchell, 70 Ill. 258.

Garnishment is not a suit or process. Tunstall v. Worthington, 1 Hempst. (U. S.) 662.

But notice to a garnishee whereby he is informed of the attachment of defendant's property or credits in his hands, and commanded to appear in court and submit to an examination in relation thereto, is "process" within the meaning of the statutes and constitutional provisions prescribing the manner and style in which process shall issue. Middletown Paper Co. v. Rock River Paper Co., 19 Fed. Rep. 252; Boyd v. Chesapeake etc. Canal Co., 17 Md. 195; Hinkley v. St. Anthony Falls etc. Co., 9 Minn. 55. See also GARNISHMENT, vol. 8, p. 1116.

A distraint warrant is no legal "process." U. S. v. Myers, 12 Int. Rev. Rec. 14.

A scire facias upon a mortgage is "process" within the meaning of the Act of April 18, 1861, staying civil process against any person in the service of the State or of the United States for the term of such service and thirty days thereafter. Drexel v. Miller, 49 Pa. St. 246.

So also a scire facias to hear error is "process." Weiskoph v. Dibble, 18 Fla. 22. Likewise a fee-bill is "process" and must run in the name of the "people of Illinois." Reddick v. Cloud, 7 Ill. 670.

None of the appeal papers in an appeal from the judgment of a justice is a "writ or process" requiring a stamp under the law of Congress. Dorman v. Bayley, 10 Minn. 383.

"Process" usually signifies a writ or warrant, but it also means all the proceedings in a case after the first step. (Tomlin's Dict.), and comprehends rule or order to commit. People v. Nevins, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 169.

In England.—Several English cases have held as follows: "Process" is the doing of something in a proceeding in a civil or criminal court; and that which may be done without the aid of the court is not process. Therefore a distraint, whether for rent or any other payment, and whether the right of distress be given by the common law or by statute (or, as it would seem, by any other authority), is not process nor is it "an execution or other required process" within § 13 Bankry. Act, 1869, or within the substituted section (10) of the Bankry. Act, 1883." Blackmore's Cas., 8 Rep. 157; Rex v. Crisp, 1 B. & Ald. 287; 3 Blacks. Com. 3; Ex parte Birmingham etc. Co. (In re Fanshaw), 4 L. J. Bank. 52; L. R., 11 Ex. 615; Ex parte Harrison, 53 L. J. Ch. 917; 13 Q. B. D. 753.

But a writ of sequestration is such process. In re Browne, 40 L. J. Bank. 46; Ex parte Hughes, L. R., 12 Ex. 137.

All the steps taken in an execution, with seizure and sale, are in the natural meaning of the word, comprehended in the term "process." In re Delahoyd, 11 Ir. Ch. Rep. 407.

A trader-debtor's summons is not a "process." In re Dobson, 8 Ir. Ch. Rep. 391; nor an adjudication in bankruptcy thereon. In re Kerr, 1 L. R. Ir. 67; In re McVeigh, 5 L. R. Ir. 177; nor is a petition in Bankruptcy.

prehends the whole proceeding after the original writ and therefore embraces all mandates of the court which may be necessary to institute or to carry on an action or suit, and to execute the judgment of the court.¹

The phrase "due process of law," as used in the various constitutions, means the due course of legal proceedings according to those rules and forms which have been established for the protection of private rights. It is not necessarily judicial process only.²

II. NECESSITY OF PROCESS.—"It would be a violation of one of the first principles of justice to try or to decide upon the rights of an individual, either civilly or criminally, without notice." However summary the proceedings, a party must always be given notice and an opportunity of being heard. So important a principle is this that it has been incorporated into the Constitution of the United States and of every State, that no person shall "be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law."³

Ex parte Walker, In re Haywood, 6 De G. M. & G. 752; Ex parte Therene, In re Saunders, 2 De G. F. & J. 661; Ex parte Hills, 3 De G. & J. 476, n.

A mere notice, though headed with the name of a county court, is not a "process" within § 57, 9 & 10 Vict., ch. 95; R. V. Castle, 30 L. T. 188; but such a notice, especially if it also has the royal arms and (without authority) professes to bear the signature of the register, is a "false color or pretence" of such "process." Rex v. Evans, 26 L. J. M. C. 92; Dears & B. 236; R. v. Richmond, 28 L. J. M. C. 188.

1. Gilmer v. Bird, 15 Fla. 410.

The original division of process was into original, mesne, and final; original process being the original writ commanding the party to appear and defend; mesne process embracing all writs and orders of the court necessary for the carrying on of the suit; while final process comprehended those writs which were necessary to secure to the successful party the benefit of the suit. It is now generally understood, however, that all writs preceding execution are embraced within the term "mesne process," which is therefore used to describe any except final process. State v. Ferguson, 31 N. J. L. 231; Arnold v. Chapinan, 13 R. I. 586.

See also various titles which treat of different process, e. g., ATTACHMENT, vol. 1, p. 894; EXECUTION, vol. 7, p. 118, et seq.; FOREIGN ATTACHMENT, vol. 8, p. 316; GARNISHMENT, vol. 8, p. 1116; SUBPENA; WRIT.

2. Westervelt v. Gregg, 12 N. Y. 209; Weimer v. Bunbury, 30 Mich. 201 and cases cited; Rees v. Watertown, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 107; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 715.

This subject has already been fully treated. See DUE PROCESS OF LAW, vol. 6, p. 43, et seq.

3. Holliday v. Swailes, 2 Ill. 515; Bissel v. Briggs, 9 Mass. 464; Ex parte Bradley, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 364; Bradley v. Fisher, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 335; Ex parte Robinson, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 512; U. S. Const. Amendments, arts. 5, 14. See also SERVICE OF PROCESS.

Where it does not appear of record that the defendant has been served with process or that notice has been given him of the suit, or that he has appeared, the court has no jurisdiction. Easterly v. Goodwin, 35 Conn. 273; Karr v. Karr, 19 N. J. Eq. 427; Newton v. Preston, 15 Me. 14; McGahan v. Carr, 6 Iowa 331; Marshall v. Marshall, 2 Greene (Iowa) 241; Com'rs of Pilotage v. Low, R. M. Charl't. (Ga.) 298; Weeks v. Merritt, 5 Robt. (N. Y.) 610.

There need not always be an actual summons—a constructive one being often sufficient. Anderson v. Sutton, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 480; SERVICE OF PROCESS.

The mere fact of a person's being in the presence of the court does not authorize a judgment to be entered against him; he must be brought there by legal means or must have appeared voluntarily by pleading. Jones v. Kenney, Hard. (Ky.) 103.

Attempts to evade service do not dispense with the necessity for personal service. Van Rensselaer v. Palmatier, 2 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 24.

Thus in a well considered case¹ it has been said, "To decide upon the rights of parties who have received no notice, is always full of hazard. Indeed, so far does the common law carry its dread of ex parte proceedings, it is one of its maxims that he who decides, one party being unheard, does wrong though he may decide right."

PROCESSIONING.—See note 2.

PROCESS VERBAL.—"Process verbal" is a true relation in writing, in due form of law, of what has been done and said verbally in the presence of a public officer, and what he himself does upon the occasion; it is a species of inquisition of office.³

PROCLAMATION.—See note 4.

In criminal cases a person in custody may be examined on the charge contained in the indictment without the issue of a formal warrant of arrest. Waller v. Com., 84 Va. 492.

If a defendant die before service of citation upon him, his administrator must be served with citation and copy of the petition. It is error to render judgment upon service of scire facias only, in such case. Lyendecker v. Martin, 38 Tex. 287.

Where defendants who have not answered an original bill are called upon by an amended bill simultaneously to answer both, it is not necessary to issue new subpoenas. Fitzhugh v. McPherson, 9 Gill & J. (Md.) 51.

When some of the proper parties to a cause have not been served with process, the cause should be remanded to the rules until service has been perfected. Hunt v. Walker, 40 Miss. 590.

Residents of one State cited as warrantors in a suit in another State, at the request of the defendant in such suit, but with no notice to them except the appointment of a curator ad hoc to represent them in the suit, are not bound by a judgment rendered therein. Flowers v. Foreman, 23 How. (U. S.) 132.

1. Eskridge v. Jones, 1 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 595; 4 Minor's Insts. (2nd ed.) 517, and cases cited.

2. Processioning was designed to prevent controversies concerning the boundaries of land between adjacent owners, and originally they were required, once in every ten years, to have their lands "processioned or gone around and the land marks renewed." It is, however, now confined to cases where the owner of any particular land desires the lines around his entire tract surveyed and marked anew. And an examination of the law of processioning will show that there is no provision for any other manner of tracing and marking the lines of adjacent owners, so as to make the said lines prima facie correct and admissible in evidence without further proof. Watson v. Bishop, 69 Ga. 53.

3. Bouvier's L. Dict. followed in Hall v. Hall, 11 Tex. 539.

4. In Lapeyre v. United States, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 191, the case turned upon the point whether a proclamation of the President took effect from the time that it was dated or whether some publication in the newspapers or otherwise was necessary. It was held that the same rule of presumption should be applied to proclamations of the President that is applied to statutes; that is, that they have a valid existence on the day of their date, and that no inquiry should be permitted upon the subject. Conceding publication to be necessary, it is to be conclusively presumed that an officer whose duty it is to make such publication has promptly done so. But the dissenting opinion by Justice Hunt concurred in by Justices Miller, Field and Bradley, defines a proclamation as follows: "What is a proclamation? It is to cry aloud publicly; to make known. One may proclaim as of old by the sound of trumpet, or by voice, or by print, or by posting; but not by silence. A proclamation may be published in the newspapers, or scattered by writing, or in any demonstrative manner, but it cannot be published by a deposit in a place to which the public have no access."

"A proclamation by the President reserving lands from sale is his official public announcement of an order to that effect. No particular form of such an announcement is necessary; it is sufficient if it has such publicity as accomplishes the end to be attained." Wolsey v. Chapman, 101 U. S. 770.

PROCURE.—Contrive, effect, or bring about; to effect; to cause.¹

PRODUCE; PRODUCTS.—See note 2.

1. Long v. State, 23 Neb. 45.

Procure, as used in the California statute, making it an offense to "procure a female to have illicit carnal connection with any man," does not cover the offense of seduction. The natural meaning of the word "procure" is that the illicit intercourse is with a person other than the one who commits the offense of procuring, etc. People v. Roderigas, 49 Cal. 9.

There is a clearly recognized legal distinction between procuring an act to be done and suffering it to be done. Matter of Black, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 196.

2. In District of Columbia v. Oyster, 4 Mackey (D. C.) 285, the court defines produce as follows: "The argument of the bar was, as against the information, that produce meant only those things which were the product directly of the soil, such as cereals and fruits, as distinguished from those things which were the product of human industry, and not derived from, but directly connected with the product of the soil. But the common parlance of the country, and the common practice of the country, have been to consider all those things as farming products or agricultural products which had the situs of their production upon the farm, and which were brought into condition for the uses of society by the labor of those engaged in agricultural pursuits, as contradistinguished from manufacturing or other industrial pursuits." And accordingly, within the meaning of a statute, which provided that every person engaged in buying and selling "produce, fish, meats, and fruits" should be regarded as a produce dealer and that no additional license shall be required from produce dealers for selling meat, it was held, that butter and eggs are produce, but that one who sells meat alone is not a produce dealer.

In Mayor v. Davis, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 269, it was held that the words, "produce of the farm" did not include beef raised and killed upon it.

But in Ladd v. Abel, 18 Conn. 513, in construing a covenant in which A agreed to furnish B with "one-half of all the produce" of a farm, and further, if "one-half the yearly rent and produce" should be insufficient for B's support, agreed to increase the supplies, it was held that "yearly produce" did not comprehend the wood and timber of the farm, but must be confined to crops annually gathered.

In Exemption Law.—Under an exemption law which provided that all "products, rents or profits" arising from a homestead should be exempt from levy, it was held, that the earnings of a physician could not be called products of the homestead, although he used the several items of the exemption in rendering the services for which the earnings were the return. Staples v. Keister, 81 Ga. 772.

In a License Law.—An exception to a license law permitted persons to sell wines or liquors, the "products" of their farms. Held, that spirits manufactured from the grain received by a miller as tolls are not from the "products of his farm." State v. Kennerly, 98 N. Car. 657.

"The produce of capital employed in trade is all that the capital produces; i. e., whether in the shape of interest or profits allowed." Johnston v. Moore, 27 L. J. Ch. 455, 456; and accordingly a direction to pay to A for life "the rents, dividends and produce" of an estate consisting partly of capital in a partnership, will give to A the profits on that capital, so long as the capital is properly employed in the business of partnership. Johnston v. Moore, 27 L. J. Ch. 455, 456; Howe v. Dartmouth, 7 Ves. 137.

In a charter-party containing an agreement to ship at A "a full cargo of produce," "produce" means "anything produced by the country in the neighborhood of the port of lading, and being an ordinary subject of importation." Per Maule, J., in Warren v. Peabody, 8 C. B. 800.

In a will a bequest of the produce of a fund, directly, or in trust without any limitation as to continuance, will carry the principal. Craft v. Snook, 13 N. J. Eq. 121. See also Peale v.

PRODUCTION.—In defining the word "production" Webster says it has reference to "that which is produced or made; product; fruit of labor; as, the productions of the earth, comprehending all vegetables and fruits; the productions of intellect, or genius, as poems and prose compositions; the products of art, as manufactures of every kind."¹

PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS.—(See also BILL OF DISCOVERY, vol. 2, p. 199; BOOKS AS EVIDENCE, vol. 2, p. 467 j; EVIDENCE, vol. 7, p. 42; NOTICE TO PRODUCE PAPERS, vol. 16, p. 843; PRIVILEGED COMMUNICATIONS; SUBPENA DUCES TECUM; TRIAL.

I. Production of Documents for Inspection Before Trial, 227.

1. Public Documents, 227.
 - (a) Judicial Writings, 228.
 - (b) Non-judicial Writings, 229.
2. Semi-public Documents, 231.
 - (a) Books of Corporations and Incorporated Banking Companies, 231.
 - (b) Other Semi-public Documents, 241.
3. Private Documents, 242.
 - (a) Doctrine at Common Law, 242.
 - (b) Doctrine Under Statutes, 248.

(c) Power of Congress to Compel the Production of Private Papers, 249.

II. Production of Documents at Trial, 251.

1. Public Documents, 251.
 - (a) Judicial Writings, 251.
 - (b) Non-judicial Writings, 253.
2. Semi-public Documents, 253.
3. Private Documents, 253.
 - (a) Documents in the Hands of the Party, 253.
 - (b) Documents in the Hands of the Adverse Party, 254.
 - (c) Documents in the Hands of Third Parties, 257.

I. PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS FOR INSPECTION BEFORE TRIAL.—1. Public Documents.—These are defined as consisting of the acts of public functionaries, in the executive, legislative, and judicial departments of government, including the transactions which official persons are required to enter in books or registers, in the course of their public duties, and which occur within the circle of their own personal knowledge and observation.² Public documents may be conveniently divided into those which are judicial, and those which are not. In respect to the former class there is a more extensive right of inspection than in regard to the latter. But it may be stated as a general rule, applicable to all writings of a public nature, that if the disclosure of their contents would, in the opinion of the court, or of the chief executive magistrate, or of the head of the department under whose control

White, 7 La. Ann. 449; Arnauld v. Delachaise, 4 La. Ann. 109.

Produce Broker.—Produce broker, as used in an internal revenue law, was held to include a person who sold produce in the public market, although such produce was raised by him upon his own farm. United States v. Simons, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 470.

Produce of Mines.—"The expression 'produce' of mines or minerals does not necessarily mean produce in its native state. Coke may be such produce, although by combustion its chemical nature is changed." MacSwinnney on Mines, Q. & Min. 19, citing Bowes v. Ravensworth, 15 C. B. 518, 523.

Forest Products.—Standing, growing trees are not forest "products." Fletcher v. Alcona Township, 72 Mich. 18.

1. Dano v. M. O. etc. R. Co., 27 Ark. 567.

2. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.) § 470.

the documents are kept, be detrimental to the public interests, an inspection will not be granted.¹

a. JUDICIAL WRITINGS.—From a very early period, it has been admitted that every one has a right, upon paying the proper fees, to have the records of the public courts produced for him to inspect and copy;² and while in England, in the reign of Charles II, this right was, in consequence of frequent applications for a copy of the record on which to base actions for malicious prosecution, restricted³ by refusing to grant a copy of an indictment

1. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), §§ 251, 476;

2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.) § 1483.

The President of the United States, and the governors of the several states, are not bound to produce papers or to disclose information in their possession, when, in their judgment, the disclosure would, on public considerations, be inexpedient. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 251; 1 Burr's Trial, 186-7; Gray v. Pentland, 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 23. Nor will a court compel a disclosure of documents which state policy requires to be kept secret. 1 Whart. Ev. (3d ed.), §§ 604-5, 745.

2. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 470. In England, this right seems to apply only to the superior courts of law and equity. 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1483, where the author says: "Although at the present day, the question whether the public have a strict legal right to inspect these records, is not likely to be mooted, it would be difficult to establish the right, except as to such of the documents as are the records of the superior courts of law and equity; and even with respect to these, it may be doubtful whether the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court would interfere by mandamus unless the applicant was prepared to show that he was interested in the document which he sought to inspect." See Rex v. Justices of Staffordshire, 6 A. & E. 99, 100; 33 E. C. L. 17; 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 473. As regards the records of the inferior tribunals in England, although it is doubtful whether they are open to the inspection of all persons without distinction, it is clear that every one has a right to inspect and take copies of the parts of the proceedings in which he is individually interested. The party who wishes to examine any particular record of one of those courts, should first apply to that court, showing that he has some interest in the document in question, and that he requires it for a proper purpose. If his application be refused, the Chancery, or the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court, upon affidavit of the fact, may send for either the record itself or an exemplification; or a mandamus will be granted by the Queen's Bench Division to obtain for the applicant the inspection or copy required. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 473; 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1492; Rex v. Sheriff of Chester, 1 Chit. 477; 18 E. C. L. 139; Rex v. Wilts and Berks Canal Nav. Co., 3 A. & E. 477; 30 E. C. L. 132; Rex v. Leicester Justices, 4 B. & C. 892; 10 E. C. L. 466; Rex v. Midlam, 3 Burr. 1720-2.

In practice, however, the public records in England are open to all without restriction. 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), §§ 1480-2.

In the United States, the judicial records, as well as the registries of deeds and wills, are by statute or usage settled in default of statute, required to be produced by the officers in charge of them for the inspection of all applicants; to whom also copies are to be given upon payment of the proper fees. 1 Whart. Ev. (3rd ed.), § 745. And any limitation upon the right to a copy of a judicial record or paper, when applied for by any person having an interest in it, would probably be deemed repugnant to the genius of our institutions. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 471.

3. Orders and Directions, 16 Car. II., prefixed to Sir J. Kelyng's Reports, Order VII; 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 471, note 1. But the legality of this order was doubted in Browne v. Cumming, 10 B. & C. 70; 21 E. C. L. 27; and was impliedly denied in Rex v. Brangan, 1 Leach 32, in which case it was declared that by the laws of England every prisoner, upon his acquittal, has an undoubted right to a copy of the record of such acquittal, for any use he may think fit to make of it, and that, after a demand for felony,¹ save upon motion in open court,—in the United States the right seems never to have been restrained.² This right of inspection applies also to writs and other papers in a cause; and if the officer having custody of them, refuse to produce them for inspection, he may be compelled, by rule of court, to do so, even where the object is to procure evidence to be used in a civil action against himself.³

b. NON-JUDICIAL WRITINGS.—This class includes, among many other public documents, acts of State,⁴ legislative acts and journals, laws of other States, and official registers⁵ (comprising books of public officers).⁶ But the same universal right to an inspection does not exist here as in the case of public judicial documents.⁷ The right to inspect non-judicial public docuof it has been made, the proper officer may be punished for refusing to supply it. See also Doe v. Date, 3 Q. B. 619; 43 E. C. L. 889; 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1489.

1. In cases of misdemeanor, the right to a copy of the record was never questioned. Morrison v. Kelly, 1 W. Bl. 385; Evans v. Phillips, 2 Selw. N. P. 1072.

2. In Stone v. Crocker, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 87, the court by Morton, J., said: "Another indispensable, though generally easy step [in actions for malicious prosecution], is the proof of the institution of the prosecution, and of the acquittal of the plaintiff. This necessarily being a matter which exists on record, if at all, must be proved by an authenticated copy of the record. One of the means to which the English courts sometimes resort, to check the improper use of the action for malicious prosecution, is the refusal to the plaintiff, of a copy of the record of his acquittal. This, however, is only done when, in their opinion, there was a probable cause for the prosecution. Groenvelt v. Burrell, 1 Ld. Raym. 253; Carth. 421; Jordan v. Lewis, 2 Str. 1122. It is not probable that our courts would undertake to exercise the same control over the records, but would leave this action, like any other, to be settled upon its merits and according to correct principles of law, when it was regularly before them for trial."

3. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 472; 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1501; Fox v. Jones, 7 B. & C. 732; 14 E. C. L. 112. But see Davies v. Brown, 9 Moo. C. P. 778; 17 E. C. L. 130; Rex v. Sheriff of Chester, 1 Chit. 477; 18 E. C. L. 139.

4. Under this head Mr. Taylor includes treaties, charters, letters patent, letters close, grants from the crown, pardons, commissions, royal proclamations, government orders and regulations, etc. 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), §§ 1526, et seq.

5. Under this head are comprised registers of births and of marriages, made pursuant to the statutes of any of the United States; books which contain the official proceedings of corporations, and matters respecting their property, if the entries are of a public nature; books of assessment of public rates and taxes; bishops' registers, and chapter house registers; books, registers, and other official papers kept at the post-office, the custom-house, and other public offices; prison registers; enrolment of deeds; books of record of the transactions of towns, city councils, and other municipal bodies; and many other public documents. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 484; 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1595, et seq.

6. 4 Min. Inst. (2d ed.) *721-2.

7. Right to Inspect Record of Coroner's Inquest in Clerk's Office.—In Daly v. Dimock, 55 Conn. 579, it was held that under the Connecticut Rev. Sts. §§ 2009, 2011, 2016, providing that the coroner at an inquest shall reduce to writing the testimony of all the witnesses examined before him, and shall make a return to the clerk of the superior court of his county of all the testimony so taken, and of his findings, or of the verdict of the jury, a defendant indicted for the murder of a person over whom an inquest has been held, has a right to inspect all the papers composing the coroner's return, after it has been filed with the clerk. "We do not deem it important," said the court by Carpenter, J., "to consider whether the testimony, when reduced to writing as required by law, and lodged with the clerk of the Superior ments is limited to cases where they constitute the common evidence of transactions between public offices and private individuals, and where the inspection is necessary to establish some disputed claim.¹ Thus, no inspection will be granted of books of public officers in favor of persons who either have no interest in them, or seek to inspect them for some private object unconnected with the purposes for which the books are kept.² But if access be denied without sufficient reason, upon affidavit of that fact, with a statement of the circumstances under which the inspection is claimed, the court will, where an action is pending, award a rule at any stage of the cause for the production of the documents for inspection.³ Where no action is pending, the proper course is an application for a mandamus, commanding the officer in custody of the documents to allow the applicant to inspect and copy them. The application should state some specific reason for the inspection, and should be supported by affidavit, as in the preceding case.⁴

Court, is or is not, in a strict technical sense, a public record. For the purposes of this case, we may concede that the duties of a coroner are of a judicial nature, and that the verdicts of juries and the findings of coroners are, in a general sense, matters of record. They are results and conclusions of judicial proceedings, and are clearly analogous to verdicts and judgments in ordinary courts of justice. In either case the testimony and other oral proceedings are not matters of record, unless made so by statute. In behalf of the plaintiff, it is contended that the statute does make the evidence before a coroner, when reduced to writing, a part of the record. We do not regard that as strictly true. The Legislature required that such testimony should be reduced to writing by a sworn officer, and preserved for future reference. It is enough for our present purpose to say that it is a public document, relating to matters of public interest, and required by law to be kept by a public officer who is the custodian of the records of judicial proceedings, and other public documents. The statute is silent in respect to the purpose for which such writings are preserved, and the use to be made of them, and by whom. In the absence of any limitation or restriction, we must assume that it was intended that they might be examined by any and all persons interested in the subject-matter. We do not consider that we are justified in saying that they may be inspected by one person, and not by another. In the absence of legislation to that effect, we cannot say that they are for the exclusive use of one person or officer, or that any one person or class of persons may not inspect or use them.⁵

1. See Rex v. Hostmen of Newcastle, 2 Str. 1223, note, in which all the older authorities are collected and classified. See also Rex v. King, 2 T. R. 235, per Ashhurst, J., as to the assessments of the land tax.

The custom house books may be inspected by merchants interested in certain entries in the books relating to their goods. Crew v. Saunders, 2 Str. 1005.

2. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 475; 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1499. Thus where a qui tam action was brought against a post-office clerk for interfering in the election of a member of Parliament, an inspection of the post-office books was refused to the plaintiff, because the action did not relate to any transaction in the post-office, for which alone the books were kept. Crew v. Blackburn, cited in Benson v. Post, 1 Wils. 240; Crew v. Saunders, 2 Str. 1005. And see Atherfold v. Beard, 2 T. R. 610.

3. 1 Tidd Pract. 595-6; 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 477; Isaigi v. Brown, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 401; People v. Vail, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 623.

4. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 478; 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1493, where the author says: "It may be laid down as a general rule, that the Queen's Bench

2. Semi-public Documents.—These partake both of a public and of a private character, and are treated as the one or the other according to the relation in which the applicant stands to them.¹ Under this head fall books of corporations and incorporated banking companies, deposit and transfer books of the Bank of England and of the East India Company, rolls of copyhold courts and of courts baron, parish registers, vestry books, terriers, books of commissioners of sewers, public lottery books, a bishop's register of presentations, and some others of the like kind.²

a. BOOKS OF CORPORATIONS AND INCORPORATED BANKING COMPANIES.—The books of both public and private corporations, including those of incorporated banking companies, are considered private with respect to strangers,³ but public as regards the directors, corporators, and stockholders of the corporation or banking company, and as regards the depositors also of a banking corporation.⁴ Although even by these parties an inspection is Division will enforce by mandamus the production of every document of a public nature, in which any one of her majesty's subjects can prove himself to be interested. Every officer, therefore, appointed by law to keep records, ought to deem himself a trustee for all interested parties, and allow them to inspect such documents as concern themselves, without putting them to the expense and trouble of making a formal application for a mandamus. Rex v. Justices of Staffordshire, 6 A. & E. 99, 100; 33 E. C. L. 17. But the applicant must show that he has some direct and tangible interest in the documents sought to be inspected, and that the inspection is bona fide required on some special and public ground, or the court will not interfere in his favor; and therefore if his object be merely to gratify a rational curiosity, or to obtain information on some general subject, or to ascertain facts which may be directly useful in some ulterior proceedings, he cannot claim inspection as a right capable of being enforced. Ex parte Briggs, 28 L. J., Q. B. 272; 1 E. & E. 881; 102 E. C. L. 879; Rex v. Justices of Staffordshire, 6 A. & E. 101; 33 E. C. L. 17. Thus, the rate payers of a county are not entitled to inspect and copy the bills and charges of county officers, which, having been paid by the treasurer under orders of justices, have become items in his accounts, and which have been allowed by the sessions, and deposited by the clerk of the peace among the county records. For in such case the individual rate-payers would have no power to interfere, even though they might prove to demonstration that the bills had been improperly paid and allowed." Rex v. Justices of Staffordshire, 6 A. & E. 84; 33 E. C. L. 17. See also Rex v. Vestrymen of St. Marylebone, 5 A. & E. 268; 31 E. C. L. 333.

For a discussion of the right to inspect the records of deeds in the office of the county clerk or of the public register of deeds, see RECORD.

1. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 474; 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1474.

2. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 474; 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), §§ 1494-9.

3. 2 Stark. Ev. 734; 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 474; 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1495; Ang. & Ames Corp. (11th ed.), § 681; Rex v. Justices of Buckingham, 8 B. & C. 375, per Bayley, J.; 15 E. C. L. 240; Bolton v. Liverpool, 3 Sim. 467; 1 Myl. & K. 88; Hodges v. Atkins, 3 Wils. 308; Mayor of Southampton v. Graves, 8 T. R. 590, which holds this doctrine, notwithstanding some authority to the contrary, viz., Lynn v. Denton, 1 T. R. 689; Barnstaple v. Lathey, 3 T. R. 303; London v. Lynn, 1 H. Bl. 511. And see Davies v. Humphreys, 3 M. & S. 223; Opdyke v. Marble, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 64; Morgan v. Morgan, 16 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 291.

A corporation will not be compelled to disclose its records for the purposes of a litigation to which it is not a party. Henry v. Travelers' Ins. Co., 35 Fed. Rep. 15.

4. 2 Stark. Ev. 734; Ang. & Ames Corp. (11th ed.), §§ 681-2; 1 Morawetz Private Corp. (2d ed.), § 473; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. (4th ed.), § 303; Union Bank v. Knapp, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 108; In re Sage, 70 N. Y. 220; Hatch v.

not exercisable at pleasure,¹ they may, at all reasonable and

City Bank, 1 Rob. (La.) 470; Cockburn v. Union Bank, 13 La. Ann. 289; Martin v. Bienville Oil Works, 28 La. Ann. 204; Huyler v. Cragin Cattle Co., 40 N. J. Eq. 392; Deaderick v. Wilson, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 108, 137; Lewis v. Brainerd, 53 Vt. 519; Com. v. Phoenix Iron Co., 105 Pa. St. 111. In this last case the court by Trunkey, J., said: "Unless the charter provides otherwise, a shareholder in a trading corporation has the right to inspect its books and papers and to take minutes from them, for a definite and proper purpose, at reasonable times. The doctrine of the law is, that the books and papers of the corporation, though of necessity kept in some one hand, are the common property of all the stockholders."

In Lewis v. Brainerd, 53 Vt. 519, the court by Redfield, J., said: "The shareholders in a corporation hold the franchise, and are the owners of the corporate property; and as such owners, they have the right at common law to examine and inspect all the books and records of the corporation, at all reasonable times; and to be thereby informed of the condition of the corporation and its property."

1. 1 Morawetz Private Corp. (2d ed.), § 473, where the author says: "The members of a simple co-partnership are entitled to examine the partnership books and accounts whenever they desire; but this rule is inapplicable to large joint-stock companies and corporations. The control over the affairs of associations of this description is, by common consent, delegated to directors and managing agents, elected by the majority, and the individual shareholders have no authority or control except by their votes at shareholders' meetings. If every shareholder in a large joint stock association were allowed to examine its books and accounts at pleasure, it would become impossible, in practice, to keep the books in a proper manner; moreover, it is evident that the result would be to lay open the affairs of the company to the public, and render any privacy of its dealings impossible."

In Reg. v. Mariquita, etc., Min. Co., 1 E. & E. 289, 102 E. C. L. 289, the court by Campbell, C. J., said: "It is highly proper that an inspection of the books containing the proceedings of the directors should be obtained on special occasions and for special purposes; but the business of such companies could hardly be conducted, if any one, by buying a share, might entitle himself at all times to gain a knowledge of every commercial transaction in which the directors engage, the moment that an entry of it is made in their books; and we cannot find that any such right of inspection is given. . . . We entirely concur in the observations of Mr. Richardson's counsel on the importance of narrowly watching the proceedings of the directors of joint stock companies, and of affording the means of detecting any misconduct of which they may be guilty. But the proposed daily and hourly inspection and publication of all their proceedings would be tantamount to admitting the presence of strangers at all their meetings, and would probably, ere long, be found very prejudicial to the shareholders."

In Com. v. Phoenix Iron Co., 105 Pa. St. 111, the court by Trunkey, J., said: "Text-books and dicta of courts seem to have treated the right of shareholders in joint stock corporations, to inspect the accounts and papers, as similar to that of members in large partnerships where managers are appointed to transact the business. The necessary limitations practically prevent exercise of the right for speculative purposes, or gratification of curiosity; if every shareholder could inspect for such purposes, at his own will, the business of most corporations would be greatly impeded. . . . Were it established that every stockholder may have a mandamus to enforce his right of inspection for the mere purpose of enabling him to vote understandingly, where the stockholders are numerous, there would likely result great inconvenience and hindrance in the conduct of the business of the corporation. The interests of all the corporators require that the writ shall not go at the caprice of the curious or suspicious. It would seem from the weight of authority, and in reason, that a shareholder is entitled to mandamus to compel the custos of corporate documents to allow him an inspection, and copies of them, at reasonable times, for a specific and proper purpose, upon showing a refusal on the part of the custos to allow it; and not otherwise."

proper times, inspect and copy the documents in question, provided they are interested in some special object, or have in view some proper purpose, in respect of which an examination is requisite; as, if an inspection be necessary in view either of an action already instituted, or at least of some specific dispute or question depending; or in order to protect the interests of the applicant or prevent him from suffering injury; or to enable him to perform his duties.¹ The right of inspection extends no further, and to no other documents, than these objects require.²

A stockholder in an incorporated company cannot be deprived of the right to inspect the books of the company, because they are kept in a particular way, or because they contain along with the information to which he is entitled, other information which he has no right to demand. People v. Pacific Mail Steamship Company, 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 280; 3 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 364; 34 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 193. Nor can a director of a bank be excluded by the board of directors from an inspection of its books, although they believe him to be hostile to the interests of the institution. People v. Throop, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 183; Hatch v. City Bank, 1 Rob. (La.) 470. But contra, State v. Einstein, 46 N. J. L. 479, where it was held that if there is fair reason to believe that a director asking for an inspection of corporate books, intends to make an improper use of them, and on that ground his request is denied, the court will not aid him by mandamus.

The fact that a shareholder is employed as the solicitor of litigants opposed to the corporation, does not affect his right of inspection. Reg. v. Wilts Co., 29 L. T. N. S. 922. But see Hutt's Case, 7 Dowl. Pr. 690; Herschfield v. Clark, 11 Ex. 712.

1. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 474; Rex v. Newcastle, 2 Str. 1123; Reg. v. Beverly, 8 Dowl. 140; Rex v. Merchant Tailors' Co., 2 B. & Ad. 115; 22 E. C. L. 40; In re Burton and Saddlers' Co., 31 L. J. Q. B. 62; Rex v. Babb, 3 T. R. 579; Williams v. Prince of Wales Ins. Co., 23 Beav. 338; Brouwer v. Cotheal, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 216; 5 N. Y. 562; People v. Mott, 1 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 247; People v. Cornell, 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 329; 35 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 31; Central Nat. Bank v. White, 37 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 297; People v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 11 Hun (N. Y.) 1; 70 N. Y. 220; Ferry v. Williams, 41 N. J. L. 332; Foster v. White, 86 Ala. 467; Huyler v. Cragin

Cattle Co., 40 N. J. Eq. 392; 42 N. J. Eq. 139; Phoenix Iron Co. v. Com., 113 Pa. St. 513.

2. Rex v. Merchant Tailors' Co., 2 B. & Ad. 115; 22 E. C. L. 40; In re Burton and Saddlers' Co., 31 L. J. Q. B. 62; Com. v. Phoenix Iron Co., 105 Pa. St. 111, 120.

See 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1495, where the author says: "The rule appears to have been sometimes laid down more broadly, and the language ascribed to the court in one or two cases would almost lead to the inference, that members of a corporation have an absolute right, whenever they think fit, to inspect all papers belonging to the aggregate body. Rex v. Hostmen of Newcastle, 2 Str. 1223; Rex v. Babb, 3 T. R. 581, per Ashhurst, J. But this doctrine is now properly exploded; the privilege of inspection being confined to those cases in which the member of the corporation has in view some definite right or object of his own, and to those documents which would tend to illustrate such right or object." Rex v. Merchant Tailors' Co., 2 B. & Ad. 115; 22 E. C. L. 40.

Thus, where certain members of a corporation applied for a mandamus to allow them to inspect all the documents of the corporation, alleging their belief that its affairs were improperly conducted, and complaining of misgovernment in some particulars not affecting themselves, nor then in dispute, the court held that the applicants had no right on these speculative grounds to the inspection desired, and discharged the rule. Rex v. Merchant Tailors' Co., 2 B. & Ad. 115; 22 E. C. L. 40. So, where parties were sued by an incorporated company for alleged misconduct in making false entries in the books of the corporation while acting in the capacity of directors, the court held that they were not entitled to a general inspection of the company's books, at least without an affidavit that such inspec-

The inspection may be made through an agent; and the assistance of a solicitor, attorney, expert, or interpreter may be called in.¹ If access be denied, an action lies, at common law, against the officers having custody of the corporation books and records, for refusing to allow an inspection, and damages therefor, either actual or nominal, may be recovered.² But as an action for damages would generally be an inadequate remedy,³ a writ of mandamus⁴ will be granted to the applicant, or, where a suit is tion was necessary for their defense. Imperial Gas Co. v. Clarke, 7 Bing. 95; 20 E. C. L. 59. Nor will an inspection be granted in order to fish out a defense. Birmingham, etc., R. Co. v. White, 1 Q. B. 282; 41 E. C. L. 541; Imperial Gas Co. v. Clarke, 7 Bing. 95; 20 E. C. L. 59; Hoyt v. American Exchange Bank, 1 Duer (N. Y.) 652; 8 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 89; Shoe & Leather Assoc. v. Bailey, 49 N. Y. Super. Ct. 385. See also Credit Co. v. Webster, 53 L. T. Rep. 419. Nor for speculative purposes or to gratify curiosity. Phenix Iron Co. v. Com., 113 Pa. St. 563, 572; People v. Walker, 9 Mich. 328; Huyler v. Cragin Cattle Co., 40 N. J. Eq. 392; 42 N. J. Eq. 139; and authorities in note 1, p. 233. Nor to ascertain whether it would be better for the petitioner to accept with the other shareholders what was offered her for her holding in an old company which was being wound up, instead of proceeding with an arbitration. In re Glamorganshire Co., 28 Ch. D. 620. Nor to establish a justification in an action against the petitioner for a libel imputing insolvency to the company. Metropolitan Co. v. Hawkins, 4 H. & N. 146; Collin v. Yates, 27 L. J. Ex. 150; Finlay v. Lindsay, 7 Ir. C. L. 1; Opdyke v. Marble, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 64. Nor to examine all the books of the company for fifty years back, the petitioner alleging that he is dissatisfied with the management of the company, and with the accounts, besides other grounds. Reg. v. Grand Canal, 1 Ir. L. R. 337. Nor where the petition does not specify the particular books asked for, nor the object of the petitioner in making the application to the officers and to the court. Reg. v. London, etc., Co., 44 L. J. Q. B. 4; Hunt v. Hewitt, 7 Ex. 236; Pepper v. Chambers, 7 Ex. 226; New England Iron Co. v. New York Loan Co., 55 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 351; Central Cross-Town R. Co. v. Twenty-Third St. R. Co., 53 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 45; Commissioners v. Lem- ley, 85 N. Car. 341; Walker v. Granite Bank, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 39.

1. Cook on Stock and Stockholders and Corporation Law (2d ed.), § 516; Williams v. Prince of Wales Ins. Co., 23 Beav. 338; Bonnardet v. Taylor, 1 J. & H. 386; Draper v. Manchester, etc., R. Co., 7 Jur. N. S. (pt. 1) 86; Hide v. Holmes, 2 Moll. 372; Blair v. Massey, L. R., 5 Ir. Eq. 623; In re Joint Stock Discount Co., 36 L. J. Eq. 150; Atty. Gen. v. Whitwood, 40 L. J. Ch. 592; Lindsay v. Gladstone, L. R., 9 Eq. 132; State v. Bienville Oil Works Co., 28 La. Ann. 304; Foster v. White, 86 Ala. 467; Ballin v. Ferst, 55 Ga. 546. But see Bartley v. Bartley, 1 Drew. 233; Summerfield v. Pritchard, 17 Beav. 9; Draper v. Manchester R. Co., 3 DeG. F. & J. 23; In re West Devon, etc., Mine, 27 Ch. D. 106; Bank of Utica v. Hilliard, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 62.

2. Lewis v. Brainerd, 53 Vt. 510. In this case the court by Dunton, J., said: "Neither is it necessary to allege or prove a reason or purpose for inspecting such records. A lawful reason or purpose for examining the records of the corporation will be presumed in the absence of proof to the contrary. The stockholders in a corporation are severally interested in all the corporate property and corporate action in proportion to the amount of their respective stock. The officers are, to a certain extent, their servants and agents. Such stockholders, therefore, have the right to examine the books and records of the corporation, at reasonable and proper times, without making known to the recording officer their purpose or reasons therefor." But this case appears to lay down the doctrine as to the right of inspection too broadly.

3. See Cockburn v. Union Bank, 13 La. Ann. 289.

4. See, in regard to municipal corporations, MANDAMUS, vol. 14, p. 171.

pending, a rule of court.¹ But the mandamus does not issue as a matter of course;² the reasons for granting the writ must be

1. The English authorities, which are conflicting, are as follows: Rex v. Babb, 3 T. R. 580, 581; Rex v. Lucas, 10 East 235; Edwards v. Vesey, Lee t. Hard. 128; Rex v. Trevannion, 2 Chit. 366, note; 18 E. C. L. 369; Rex v. Sheriff of Chester, 1 Chit. 467, 477, 479, note; 18 E. C. L. 139; Rex v. Shelley, 3 T. R. 145; Mayor of Southampton v. Graves, 8 T. R. 592; Barterman v. Phillips, 4 Taun. 162; Harrison v. Williams, 3 B. & C. 162; 10 E. C. L. 43; Reg. v. Saddlers' Co., 10 W. R. 77; Herbert v. Ashburner, 1 Wils. 297; Rex v. Allgood, 7 T. R. 746; Rex v. Purnell, 1 Wils. 242; Rex v. Bridgman, 2 Str. 1203; Rex v. Newcastle, 2 Str. 1223; Walburn v. Ingleby, 1 Myl. & K. 61; Swansea Vale R. Co. v. Budd, L. R., 2 Eq. 274.

Hatch v. City Bank, 1 Rob. (La.) 470; Cockburn v. Union Bank, 13 La. Ann. 289; Maddox v. Graham, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 56; People v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 11 Hun (N. Y.) 1; People v. Throop, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 183; People v. Mott, 1 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 247; People v. Pacific Mail Steamship Co., 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 280; 3 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 364; 34 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 193; In re Sage, 70 N. Y. 290; Com. v. Phoenix Iron Co., 105 Pa. St. 111; Foster v. White, 86 Ala. 467; Swift v. State (Del. 1886), 6 Atl. Rep. 856.

The order of court may be made at any stage of the action, and the court may, in making the order, direct the manner of the examination. Cook on Stock and Stockholders and Corporation Law (2d ed.), § 519; Williams v. Prince of Wales Ins. Co., 23 Beav. 338.

Stockholders obtaining an inspection may be ordered not to disclose the information received. In re Birmingham, etc., Co., 36 L. J. Ch. 150; Williams v. Prince, etc., Co., 23 Beav. 340.

An appeal may be taken from an order granting a party leave to inspect and examine the books of the adverse party or corporation. Lancashire Co. v. Greatorox, 14 L. T. N. S. 290; Thompson v. Erie R. Co., 9 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 212; Cummer v. Kent, 38 Mich. 351; Commissioners v. Lemley, 85 N. Car. 241; Woods v. De Figanieri, 1 Robt. (N. Y.) 681. And see Saxby v. Easterbrook, L. R., 7 Ex. 207; Bustros v. White, 1 Q. B. D. 423; McCargo v. Crutcher, 27 Ala. 171; Clyde v. Rogers, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 145; In re Sage, 70 N. Y. 221. But see White v. Monroe, 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 650.

An article of a company taking away the right of inspection does not prevent a rule issuing requiring its allowance in pending litigation. Hall v. Connell, 3 Y. & C. Ex. 707.

In New York the right of inspection by order is regulated by statute. See Code Civ. Proc., §§ 803-9; and see also §§ 868-9.

Where a motion is made in an action for an order to secure the inspection of books, papers, and documents, if the moving papers establish the existence of the evidence, its materiality, the necessity of a discovery, and the good faith of the application, and these facts are not contradicted, it is not necessary that the papers should also show, in addition to these facts, that the evidence sought to be discovered is indispensably necessary, and that the party seeking the discovery has not the means of establishing the same facts by other available proof. The cases that seemingly hold such a doctrine, are cases where the propriety and necessity of a discovery were drawn in question by opposing affidavits. Whitworth v. Erie R. Co., 37 N. Y. Super. Ct. 437.

2. "The writ of mandamus, however, does not issue herein as a matter of course. It is an extraordinary remedy to be invoked only upon special occasions. The courts do not grant the mandamus until it has [they have] taken into careful consideration all the facts and circumstances of the case. The condition and character of the books, the reasons for refusal by the corporation, the specific purpose of the stockholder in demanding inspection, the general reasonableness of the request, and the effect on the orderly transaction of the corporate business in case it is granted, are all considered in granting or refusing the writ. It is granted only in furtherance of essential justice." Cook on Stock and Stockholders and Corporation Law (2d ed.), § 514.

clear and cogent ;¹ and, as in all other cases where the interference of a court is sought for the purpose of obtaining the inspection of a document, the applicant must by affidavit show affirmatively all the facts that entitle him to such remedy ;² as, that he has a manifest right to the inspection,³ that he has made an express demand⁴ of a proper person, at a proper time and place, and for a proper reason,⁵ and that his demand was distinctly refused.⁶

1. People v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 11 Hun (N. Y.) 1; aff'd under the name In re Sage, 70 N. Y. 220; In re West Devon, etc., Mine, L. R., 27 Ch. D. 106.

Mere suspicion or conjecture that an inspection is necessary for the maintenance of the applicant's rights, is not sufficient, even though the application is made with a view to bringing suit against the directors. Central Cross-Town R. Co. v. Twenty-Third Street R. Co., 53 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 45.

On petition for a mandamus to compel a corporation to allow a stockholder to inspect the stock ledger (a book containing the list of stockholders), the reasons alleged were, that the stock had recently paid little or no dividends, and had depreciated in market value; that the officers of the corporation did not distribute to the stockholders reports as to its business and condition; and that the petitioners desired to inform themselves, and to inspect the list with a view to a conference with their fellow stockholders. No mismanagement of the company was alleged as a cause of the lack of dividends, or of the depreciation of the stock. The proof showed that the treasurer's reports had been distributed to the stockholders. The by-laws provided for annual and special meetings, which would give opportunity for conference; and the petitioners were not deprived of conference at the annual meetings, nor had they tried to call a special meeting. It was not alleged that there was any considerable dissatisfaction among the stockholders, and it appeared that one of the petitioners had advertised for nearly a year without success, for the stockholders to send their names for a conference. Held, that sufficient cause for a mandamus was not shown. Lyon v. American Screw Company, 16 R. I. 472.

2. People v. Northern Pacific R. Co., 50 N. Y. Super. Ct. 456; 18 Fed. Rep. 471.

3. Ang. & Ames Corp. (11th ed.), § 707.

4. It seems that this demand must come either directly from the applicant or indirectly from his agent, and that it will not suffice if it be made by a person whom the agent has employed for that purpose. Ex parte Hutt, 7 Dowl. 690.

5. People v. Walker, 9 Mich. 328. In this case, the court by Martin, C. J., said: "While, in the absence of any statutory provision to that effect, a corporator may at the common law, have a mandamus to compel the custos of corporate records and documents to allow him an inspection of them, yet, to entitle himself to the aid of the court, he must show that he has made a proper demand upon the custos, at a proper time and place, and for a proper reason, and has been refused. I have examined all the cases to which we have been referred, and can find none where the writ was granted to enable a corporator to gratify idle curiosity. The principle seems to be, and very properly, too, that the party asking the right must have some interest at stake which renders the inspection necessary."

6. 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1502; Cook on Stock and Stockholders and Corporation Law (2d ed.), § 516; Ang. & Ames Corp. (11th ed.), § 707; Rex v. Wilts & Berks Canal Nav. Co., 3 A. & E. 477; 5 N. & M. 344; 30 E. C. L. 132; Reg. v. Bristol, etc., R. Co., 4 Q. B. 162; 45 E. C. L. 161; Com. v. Phoenix Iron Co., 105 Pa. St. 111, 118; People v. Walker, 9 Mich. 329.

The objection that the affidavit discloses no sufficient demand and refusal, must be taken before the merits are discussed. Reg. v. Bristol, etc., R. Co.,

In stating that there must be a distinct refusal, it is not meant that the word "refuse" or any equivalent expression should be employed: it will be enough if the party applied to shows clearly by his conduct that he is determined not to do what is required; but nothing short of this will suffice.¹ The application should also state what information the applicant needs, and what books of the corporation he wishes to inspect.² The writ is properly directed to the person or officer having the possession and control of the books: the corporation is not a necessary party, and whether it be domestic or foreign is immaterial.³

The right of inspection of corporation books, being thus limited in the case of members, is, as regards strangers, still more restricted; and unless the documents sought to be inspected contain the common evidence of some transaction between the corporation and a stranger, or at least furnish the rule by which the stranger is sought to be bound, he has no right to inspect them, even though he be a defendant in a suit brought by the corporation; and he can here, as in cases between private persons, merely give notice to the corporation to produce its books and papers, with the right, if it fails to do so, of introducing secondary evidence.⁴

¹ Q. B. 162, 171, per Lord Denman; 45 E. C. L. 161; Reg. v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 10 A. & E. 531, 545, note b; 37 E. C. L. 174.

It seems that the applicant must also show that when he demanded the inspection, he stated the object for which he wanted it. Rex v. Wilts & Berks Canal Nav. Co., 3 A. & E. 477; 30 E. C. L. 132. See Rex v. Trustees of Northleach and Witney Roads, 5 B. & Ad. 978; 27 E. C. L. 250; Rex v. Clear, 4 B. & C. 899; 10 E. C. L. 466.

² R. v. Brecknock, etc., Co., 3 A. & E. 217, 222-223, per Lord Denman, and Littledale, J.; 30 E. C. L. 81.

Thus, where a stockholder in a company applied to the committee for leave to inspect the books of the company, and was told by the chairman that the committee would take time to consider the request; whereupon, ten days afterward, he again applied to the clerk, who refused inspection, though it did not appear that the refusal was authorized by the committee, the Court of Queen's Bench held that no sufficient refusal by the committee had been proved to warrant the making absolute a rule for a mandamus. Rex v. Wilts & Berks

Canal Nav. Co., 3 A. & E. 477; 5 N. & M. 344; 30 E. C. L. 132.

If, on the application of a party, the liberty to inspect the books be offered as a favor, and not as a right, and be consequently declined by the applicant, it may be questionable whether the court will interfere. Rex v. Trustees of Northleach and Witney Roads, 5 B. & Ad. 978, 982, per Lord Denman; 27 E. C. L. 250.

Where a party applied to a judge on summons for leave to inspect certain books, but the judge, after hearing both parties, referred the question to the court, it seems to have been considered that the proceedings at chambers were equivalent to a demand and refusal. Birmingham, etc., R. Co. v. White, 1 Q. B. 282, 286; 4 P. & D. 649; 41 E. C. L. 541, 543.

³ Cook on Stock and Stockholders and Corporation Law (2d ed.), § 516.

⁴ Cook on Stock and Stockholders and Corporation Law (2d ed.), § 516; Reg. v. Kendall, 1 Q. B. 366; 41 E. C. L. 580; Swift v. State (Del. 1886), 6 Atl. Rep. 303; Bailey v. Stohecker, 38 Ga. 259; St. Luke's Church v. Slack, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 226; Bergenthal v. Bergenthal, 72 Wis. 318.

⁵ 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1496;

When an actual inspection is necessary, a stranger can obtain it only by a bill of discovery, or under the statutory equivalents therefor.¹ And it should be added that in accordance with the invariable rule which protects a witness or party from being compelled to furnish evidence that may expose him to a criminal charge,² a person will never be obliged to allow an inspection of either public or private documents in his custody, where the inspection is sought for the purpose of supporting a prosecution against himself.³ But at present in the various States of the Union the inspection of corporation books is very generally regulated by statutes, references to which are given in the note below.⁴

Mayor of Southampton v. Graves, 8 T. R. 590; Burrell v. Nicholson, 3 B. & Ad. 649; Rex v. Justices of Buckingham, 8 B. & C., 375; 15 E. C. L. 240; Imperial Gas Co. v. Clarke, 7 Bing. 95; 20 E. C. L. 59; Harrison v. Williams, 3 B. & C. 162; 10 E. C. L. 43; Hill v. Great Western R. Co., 10 C. B. N. S. 148; 100 E. C. L. 148; In re Burton and Sadlers' Co., 31 L. J. Q. B. 62; Bank of Utica v. Hilliard, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 419; 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 62.

1. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 474; BILL OF DISCOVERY, vol. 2, p. 206. And see Johnson v. Consolidated Silver Mining Co., 2 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 413.

2. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 451; 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1453; 1 Wharton Ev. (3d ed.), §§ 533, et seq.

3. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 474; 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1500; 1 Whart. Ev. (3d ed.), § 751; Ld. Montague v. Dudman, 2 Ves. Sen. 397; Glynn v. Houston, 1 Keen 329; Rex v. Purnell, 1 W. Bl. 37; 1 Wils. 239; Rex v. Heydon, 1 W. Bl. 351; Rex v. Justices of Buckingham, 8 B. & C. 375, per Tenterden, C. J.; 15 E. C. L. 240; Rex v. Cornelius, 2 Str. 1210; 1 Wils. 142; Boyd v. U. S., 116 U. S. 616; Byass v. Sullivan, 21 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 50. But see Bradshaw v. Murphy, 7 C. & P. 712; 32 E. C. L. 654.

An information in the nature of a quo warranto is not considered as a criminal proceeding within the meaning of this rule. Rex v. Shelley, 3 T. R. 141; Rex v. Babb, 3 T. R. 582; Rex v. Purnell, 1 W. Bl. 45. Nor is a mandamus, at least if the object be to enforce a civil right. Reg. v. Ambergate, etc., R. Co., 17 Q. B. 957; 79 E. C. L. 957. But where the lord of a manor was indicted for a nuisance in not repairing the bank of a river ratione tenuræ, it was in vain urged in support of a rule to inspect the court rolls, that the indictment, though in form a criminal proceeding, was really to try the right of repair, which was a civil right. Rex v. Earl of Cadogan, 5 B. & Al. 902; 7 E. C. L. 295; 1 D. & R. 550.

4. See generally Cook on Corporations as Affected by Statutes and Constitutions, in which a summary of all the State laws in reference to corporations is given.

Alabama.—Code of 1886, § 4677, enacts that "the stockholders of all private corporations have the right of access to, of inspection and examination of, the books, records, and papers of the corporation at reasonable and proper times." Under this statute, which was considered not to be declaratory of the common law, it was held that it was not necessary for a stockholder, in order to exercise the right, to show any reason for such examination. Foster v. White, 86 Ala. 467.

Arizona.—Rev. Sts. of 1887, § 305.

Arkansas.—Const., art. 17, § 2; Rev. Sts. of 1884, §§ 974, 5506.

California.—Const., art. 12, § 14; Civ. Code, §§ 321, 377-8; Penal Code, § 565.

Colorado.—Gen. Sts. of 1883, No. 249.

Connecticut.—Gen. Sts. of 1888, §§ 1296, 1939, 1953. And see Pratt v. Meriden Cutlery Co., 35 Conn. 36.

Delaware.—Laws of 1883, ch. 147.
Florida.—Laws of 1881, pp. 233, 235-6.
Georgia.—Code of 1882, § 1689 q.
Idaho.—Code Civ. Proc., §§ 2639-40.
Maryland.—Gen. Laws of 1888, pp. 286, 304.
Michigan.—Acts of 1885, p. 348.
Minnesota.—Gen. Sts. of 1888, p. 395, § 115; and see pp. 369, 398.
Missouri.—Const., art. 15, § 15; Rev. Sts. of 1879, §§ 720-1, 932.
Nebraska.—Const., art. 11, § 1.
Nevada.—Gen. Sts. of 1885, ch. 8, § 817.
New Hampshire.—Gen. Laws of 1878, p. 351.
New Jersey.—See revision of 1887, p. 183, § 36; p. 186; and Act of March 25, 1881. And see Huyler v. Cragin Cattle Co., 40 N. J. Eq. 392; 42 N. J. Eq. 139.
New Mexico.—Comp. Laws of 1884, §§ 224, 2650.
Illinois.—Const., art. 11, § 9; Rev. Sts., ch. 32, § 13, and ch. 114, §§ 7, 10.
Indiana.—Rev. Sts. of 1887, §§ 2688, 2693, 3010. And see Williams v. College etc. Co., 45 Ind. 170.
Iowa.—Rev. Sts. of 1888, §§ 1076-7, 1279.
Kansas.—Comp. Laws of 1885, p. 214.
Kentucky.—Gen. Sts. of 1887, pp. 765-6.
Louisiana.—Const. of 1879, art. 245.
Maine.—Rev. Sts. of 1884, p. 402; Laws of 1889, ch. 263.

New York.—As the New York statutes on this subject are more minute than those of the other States, and have been extensively copied, they are given in full.

For general provisions, applying to all corporations, see 1 R. S. (1st ed.), p. 601, § 1; R. S. (8th ed.), p. 1728, § 1; 1 Birdseye's R. S., p. 678, § 30; where it is enacted that "the book or books of any incorporated company in this State, in which the transfer of stock in any such company shall be registered, and the books containing the names of the stockholders in any such company shall, at all reasonable times during the usual hours of transacting business, be open to the examination of every stockholder of such company, for thirty days previous to any election of directors; and if any officer having charge of such books, shall upon demand of any stockholder as aforesaid, refuse or neglect to exhibit such books, or submit them to examination as aforesaid, he shall for every such offense, forfeit the sum of $250, the one moiety thereof to the use of the people of this State, and the other moiety to him who will sue for the same, to be recovered by action of debt in any court of record, together with costs of such suit." And see Brouwer v. Cotheal, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 216; aff'd, Cotheal v. Brouwer, 5 N. Y. 562; People v. Pacific Mail Steamship Co., 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 280; People v. Mott, 1 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 247; In re Long Island R. Co., 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 37, 45.

For manufacturing corporations, see Laws of 1848, ch. 40, § 25; R. S. (8th ed.), p. 1960, § 25; 2 Birdseye's R. S., p. 1897, § 104, where it is enacted: "It shall be the duty of the trustees of every such corporation or company, to cause a book to be kept by the treasurer or clerk thereof, containing the names of all persons alphabetically arranged, who are or shall, within six years, have been stockholders of such company, and showing their places of residence, the number of shares of stock held by them respectively, and the time when they respectively became the owners of such shares; and the amount of stock actually paid in; which book shall, during the usual business hours of the day, on every day except Sunday and the fourth day of July, be open for the inspection of stockholders and creditors of the company, and their personal representatives, at the office or principal place of business of such company, in the county where its business operations shall be located; and any and every such stockholder, creditor, or representative, shall have a right to make extracts from such book; and no transfer of stock shall be valid for any purpose whatever, except to render the person to whom it shall be transferred liable for the debts of the company, according to the provisions of this act, until it shall have been entered therein as required by this section, by an entry showing to and from whom transferred.

Such book shall be presumptive evidence of the facts therein stated, in favor of the plaintiff, in any suit or proceeding against such company, or against any one or more stockholders. Every officer or agent of any such company, who shall neglect to make any proper entry in such book, or shall refuse or neglect to exhibit the same, or allow the same to be inspected, and extracts to be taken therefrom, as provided by this section, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and the company shall forfeit and pay to the party injured, a penalty of $50 for every such neglect or refusal, and all the damages resulting therefrom. And every company that shall neglect to keep such book open for inspection as aforesaid, shall forfeit to the people the sum of $50 for every day it shall so neglect, to be sued for and recovered in the name of the people, by the district attorney of the county in which the business of such corporation shall be located; and when so recovered, the amount shall be paid into the treasury of such county for the use thereof." See Tracy v. Yates, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 152; Burr v. Wilcox, 22 N. Y. 551; Johnson v. Underhill, 52 N. Y. 203; Veeder v. Mudget, 95 N. Y. 295; Herries v. Wesley, 13 Hun (N. Y.) 492; Kelsey v. Pfau etc. Co., 41 Hun (N. Y.) 20; 51 Hun (N. Y.) 636; French v. McMillan, 43 Hun (N. Y.) 188.

For banking (moneyed) corporations, see Laws of 1882, ch. 409, §§ 214, 208-9; R. S. (8th ed.), p. 1514, et seq., §§ 214, 208-9; 1 Birdseye's R. S., pp. 210-11, §§ 214, 208-9; where it is declared that "every such corporation shall keep a book, in which the transfer of shares of its stock shall be registered; and another book, containing the names of its stockholders, which books shall, at all times during the usual hours of transacting business, for thirty days previous to an election of directors, be open to the examination of the stockholders. If any officer having charge of such books shall, upon the demand of a stockholder, refuse or neglect to exhibit and submit them to examination, he shall for each offense forfeit the sum of $250." And see Brouwer v. Cotheal, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 216; aff'd, Cotheal v. Brouwer, 5 N. Y. 562.

For business corporations, see Laws of 1875, ch. 611, §§ 16, 17; R. S. (8th ed.), p. 1982, §§ 16, 17; 1 Birdseye's R.

S., p. 371, §§ 16, 17; where it is enacted: "It shall be the duty of the directors of every such corporation to cause to be kept at its principal office or place of business, correct books of account of all its business and transactions, and every stockholder in such corporation shall have the right at all reasonable times by himself or his attorney to examine the records and books of account of such corporation. It shall be the duty of the directors of every such corporation to cause a book to be kept by the treasurer or clerk thereof, containing the names of all persons, alphabetically arranged, who are or shall within six years have been stockholders of such corporation, and showing their places of residence, the number of shares of stock held by them, respectively, and the time when they, respectively, became the owners of such shares, and the amount actually paid thereon; which book shall, during the usual business hours of the day, on every day, except Sundays and legal holidays, be open for the inspection of stockholders and creditors of the corporation and their personal representatives, at the principal business office of such corporation; and any and every such stockholder, creditor or representative shall have a right to make extracts from such book; and no transfer of stock shall be valid for any purpose whatever, except to render the person to whom it shall be transferred liable for the debts of the corporation according to the provisions of this act, until it shall have been entered therein as required by this section, by an entry showing from and to whom transferred. Such book shall be presumptive evidence of the facts therein stated, in favor of the plaintiff in any suit or proceeding against such corporation, or against any one or more stockholders. Every officer or agent of any such corporation, who shall neglect to make any proper entry in such book, or shall refuse or neglect to exhibit the same, or allow the same to be inspected, and extracts to be taken therefrom, as provided by this section, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor; and the corporation shall forfeit and pay to the party injured a penalty of fifty dollars for every such neglect or refusal and all the damages resulting therefrom. And every corporation that shall neglect to keep such book open for inspection as aforesaid, shall forfeit to the people the sum of fifty dollars for every day it shall so neglect, to be sued for and recovered in the name of the people of the State, by the district attorney of the county in which the principal business office of such corporation is located, and the amount so recovered shall be paid to the proper authorities for the support of the poor of such county."

*b. OTHER SEMI-PUBLIC DOCUMENTS.*¹

For transfer agents of foreign corporations, see Laws of 1842, ch. 165, §§ 1, 2; 1 Birdseye's R. S., p. 684, §§ 55-6; where it is declared that "the transfer agent in this State of any moneyed or other corporation existing beyond the jurisdiction of this State (whether such agent shall be a corporation or natural person), shall, at all reasonable times during the usual hours of transacting business, exhibit to any stockholder of such foreign corporation, when required by him, the transfer book of such foreign corporation, and also a list of the stockholders thereof (if in their power so to do). In case such transfer agent or any clerk or officer of such agent should refuse to exhibit such transfer book, or a list of the stockholders of such foreign corporation as aforesaid, he shall for every such offense forfeit the sum of $250, to be recovered by the person to whom such refusal was made."

North Dakota.—Const., art. 8, § 140; and see the Territorial statutes of Dakota (which continue in force in North Dakota until changed by the new State) in Comp. Laws of 1887, 2937, 3110.

Ohio.—Rev. Sts. of 1886, §§ 3268, 3312.

Oregon.—Gen. Sts. of 1887, § 3228.

Pennsylvania.—Const., art. 17, § 2; Brightly's Purdon's Dig. of 1883, p. 164.

Rhode Island.—Pub. Sts. of 1882, pp. 373, 408.

South Carolina.—Laws of 1885, Act No. 114, § 6; Laws of 1886, Act No. 288, § 17.

South Dakota.—Const., art. 17, § 12. And see also Comp. Laws of 1887 of the Territory of Dakota, §§ 2937, 3110, which, until changed, continue in force in the new State of South Dakota.

Tennessee.—Code of 1884, § 1706.

Texas.—Const., art. 10, § 3; Rev. Sts. of 1887, §§ 586, 4115 a, 4121, 4141.

Utah.—Comp. Laws of 1888, §§ 2327-8.

Vermont.—Rev. Laws of 1880, §§ 3294-5. And see Lewis v. Brainerd, 53 Vt. 519.

Virginia.—Code of 1887, §§ 1121-3, 1142.

Washington.—Code of 1881, § 2436.

West Virginia.—Code, ch. 53, § 47; Laws of 1881, ch. 17, § 38; Laws of 1882, ch. 98.

Wisconsin.—Rev. Sts. of 1878, pp. 512, 532, 539.

England.—In England the Companies' Act (25 & 26 Vict., ch. 89) regulates specifically the inspection of corporate books by stockholders. See Mutter v. Eastern etc. R. Co., 59 L. T. R. 117; 36 W. R. 401; Gourand v. Edison etc. Co., 59 L. T. R. 812; Holland v. Dickson, 58 L. T. R. 845; In re West Devon etc. Mine, 27 Ch. D. 106; In re Joint Stock Discount Co., 36 L. J. Eq. 150; In re Emma Silver Min. Co., L. R., 10 Ch. 194; Ex parte Buchan, 36 L. J. Ch. 150.

1. Deposit and Transfer Books of the Bank of England, and of the East India Company.—On the same principle as in the preceding paragraph above, fundholders are entitled to inspect and copy such entries in the deposit and transfer books of the Bank of England, or of the East India Company, as relate to stock in which they claim to be interested. Foster v. Bank of England, 8 Q. B. 689; 55 E. C. L. 689; Geery v. Hopkins, 2 Ld. Raym. 851; 7 Mod. 129; Shelling v. Farmer, 1 Str. 646.

Rolls of Copyhold Courts and of Courts-Baron.—2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1494; Crew v. Saunders, 2 Str. 1005; Rex v. Shelley, 3 T. R. 142; Rex v. Merchant Tailors' Co., 2 B. & Ad. 115, 128-9; 22 E. C. L. 40, 45; Rex v. Tower, 4 M. & S. 162; Rex v. Lucas, 10 East 235; Ex parte Hutt, 7 Dowl. 690; Ex parte Barnes, 7 Dowl. N. S. 20; Addington v. Clode, 2 W. Bl. 1030; Hobson v. Parker, Barnes 237, cited in 3 T. R.

3. Private Documents—a. DOCTRINE AT COMMON LAW.—Originally, at common law, the production of documents by one party for the inspection of his opponent before the trial, can scarcely be said to have existed, save to a limited extent in the case of personal representatives and of parties claiming or justifying under a deed.¹ These were bound, where the deed or the letters testamentary or of administration were within their power, to make profert of them, the effect of which was to tender the document for the inspection of the opponent, who by craving oyer of the instrument, could have it produced either formally or constructively in court.² With this imperfect exception, the common law, adhering to the maxim, "Nemo tenetur armare adversarium suum contra se,"³ refused to compel either party to supply the other with any evidence, parol or otherwise, to assist 142; Warwick v. Queen's College, L. R., 3 Eq. 683; 36 L. J. Ch. 505; Owen v. Wynn, 9 Ch. D. 29; Rex v. Allgood, 7 T. R. 746.

Parish Books, Etc.—These are open to the inspection of parishoners for ordinary parochial purposes. 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1497; Newell v. Simpkins, 6 Bing. 565; 19 E. C. L. 167; but not, it seems, for purposes unconnected with the affairs of the parish. May v. Gwynne, 4 B. & Al. 301; 6 E. C. L. 493; and see Reg. v. Harrison, 9 Q. B. 794; 58 E. C. L. 793; Rex v. Smallpiece, 2 Chit. 288; 18 E. C. L. 338; Ex parte Briggs, 1 E. & E. 881; 102 E. C. L. 879; Burrell v. Nicholson, 3 B. & Ad. 649; 1 Myl. & K. 680; Rex v. Justices of Buckingham, 8 B. & C. 375; 15 E. C. L. 240. In the same class with parish books may be mentioned vestry books, 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1595; Rex v. Martin, 2 Camp. 100; terriers, 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 484; 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.) § 1595; books of commissioners of sewers, 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1498; Reg. v. Com'r of Sewers for Tower Hamlets, 3 Q. B. 760; 43 E. C. L. 917; public lottery books, 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 474; Schinotti v. Bumstead, 1 Tidd Pract. 594; a bishop's register of presentations and institutions, 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 474; 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1498; Rex v. Bishop of Ely, 8 B. & C. 112; 2 M. & R. 127; 15 E. C. L. 158; 17 E. C. L. 296; and other similar books; thus, for instance, it has been held that a person who is not a member of the College of Physicians cannot obtain a rule to inspect the books of the college. Rex v. West, cited 2 Wils. 240; 5 Mod. 395-6. And so a prebendary is entitled at all times to inspect the documents of the chapter. Young v. Lynch, 1 W. Bl. 27.

1. Whart. Ev. (3d ed.), § 753.

2. Whart. Ev. (3d ed.), § 753; Steph. Plead. (3d Am. ed.) 100, et seq.; 380, et seq.; 1 Chit. Plead. (16th Am. ed.) 378, et seq.; 1 Sell. Pract. 261; 1 Tidd. Pract. (8th ed.) 635; Com. Dig., "Pleader," O; Bac. Abr., "Pleas and Pleadings," I, 12; 4 Min. Inst. (2d ed.) *1061, et seq.; Layfield's Case, 10 Co. 92, et seq.; Master v. Miller, 4 T. R. 338; Hutchins v. Scott, 2 M. & W. 816; Archbishop of Canterbury v. Tubb, 3 Bing. N. C. 789; Kellogg v. Riggs, 2 Root (Conn.) 126; Paddock v. Higgins, 2 Root (Conn.) 482; Hilyard v. Township of Harrison, 37 N. J. L. 170; Respublica v. Coates, 1 Yeates (Pa.) 2; Moore v. Fenwick, 1 Gilm. (Va.) 214. See also PLEADING.

When any deed is showed in court, the deed, by judgment of law, doth remain in court all the term at which it is showed, for the whole term is as one day, and the party may demand oyer during the time it is so in court. Wimark's Case, 5 Rep. 74; Simpson v. Garside, 2 Lutw. 705; Hilyard v. Township of Harrison, 37 N. J. L. 170, 174.

3. Co. Litt. 36 a; Wingate's Max. 665. This maxim seems to have been derived from the Roman Law. Cod. Jur. Civ., lib. 2, tit. 1, l. 4. So in the

him in the conduct of his cause.¹ The only recourse was a bill in equity for a discovery. But this being expensive and dilatory, the common law courts gradually relaxed the strictness of the ancient rule; and the practice arose, where one party was in possession or control of a document material to his opponent's case,² the circumstances being such that he might fairly be deemed the trustee or agent of the other, of ordering him to produce it for the adverse party to inspect and copy.³ But in later times the au-

Scotch Law, "Nemo tenetur edere instrumenta contra se." Halk. Max. 100; Ersk. Inst., bk. 4, tit. 1, § 52.

1. Best Ev. (Am. ed.), § 624; 1 Thomp Tr., § 730.

2. This applies only to parties to the cause. A third person no way interested in the suit will not, on motion, be compelled by the court to produce a private paper of his own for the inspection of a party. Such paper may, however, be produced at the trial by a subpoena duces tecum. Davenport v. McKinnie, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 27.

3. Best Ev. (Am. ed.), § 624; Whart. Ev. (3d ed.), § 742; Smith v. Winter, 3 M. & W. 307; Goodliff v. Fuller, 14 M. & W. 4; Steadman v. Arden, 15 M. & W. 587; 4 Dow. & L. 16; Charnock v. Lumley, 5 Scott 438; Rex v. Colucci, 3 F. & F. 103; Goldsmidt v. Marryat, 1 Camp. 562; Ley v. Barlow, 1 Exch. 800; Arundel v. Holmes, 8 Dowl. 119; Rayner v. Ritson, 6 B. & S. 888; 118 E. C. L. 887; King v. King, 4 Taun. 666; Browning v. Aylwin, 7 B. & C. 204; 14 E. C. L. 27; Woolmer v. Devereux, 2 M. & Gr. 758; 40 E. C. L. 612; Morrow v. Saunders, 1 B. & B. 318; 5 E. C. L. 94; Metropolitan Saloon Omnibus Co. v. Hawkins, 4 H. & N. 146; Powell v. Bradbury, 4 C. B. 541; 56 E. C. L. 541; Shadwell v. Shadwell, 6 C. B. N. S. 679; 95 E. C. L. 679; Price v. Harrison, 8 C. B. N. S. 617; 98 E. C. L. 615; Blakey v. Porter, 1 Taun. 384; Bateman v. Philip, 4 Taun. 157; Blogg v. Kent, 6 Bing. 614; 19 E. C. L. 179; Owen v. Nickson, 3 E. & E. 602; 107 E. C. L. 601. And see Street v. Brown, 6 Taun. 302; Portmore v. Goring, 4 Bing. 152; 13 E. C. L. 384; 12 Moo. C. P. 363; Cocks v. Nash, 9 Bing. 723; 23 E. C. L. 439; Pritchett v. Smart, 7 C. B. 625; 62 E. C. L. 625; Pickering v. Noyes, 1 B. & C. 262; 8 E. C. L. 112; Parkhurst

v. Gosden, 2 C. B. 894; 52 E. C. L. 893.

And see several New York cases prior to the Revised Statutes: Jackson v. Jones, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 17; Lawrence v. Ocean Ins. Co., 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 241, 245, note a; People v. Vall, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 623 (case of a public document); Wallis v. Murray, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 399; Bank of Utica v. Hillard, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 62; Willis v. Bailey, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 268. But contra, Den-slow v. Fowler, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 592.

Sealed Instruments.—Whether the document be under seal or not, makes no difference as regards the privilege of inspection. The practice is for the party desiring an inspection to apply either to the court, or to a judge at chambers for an order for the production of the writing. 1 Whart. Ev. (3d ed.) § 753; Woolmer v. Devereux, 2 M. & Gr. 758; Thomas v. Dunn, 6 M. & Gr. 274; Penarth, etc., R. Co. v. Cardiff Waterworks Co., 7 C. B. N. S. 816; Hardman v. Ellames, 2 Myl. & K. 732; Mackintosh v. Great Western R. Co., 14 M. & W. 548; 1 Hall & Tw. 41.

In the case of a plaintiff who claimed damages of a railway company for dismissing him from the office of superintendent, it was held that he was entitled to have an inspection of all entries or minutes in the company's books having reference to his employment. Hill v. Great Western R. Co., 10 C. B. N. S. 148; 100 E. C. L. 148.

But in Beale v. Bird, 2 D. & R. 419; 16 E. C. L. 99; the court refused to require the plaintiff to deliver to the defendant a copy of an agreement in order to enable the latter to plead in abatement that the agreement was signed jointly by himself and others. Perhaps this decision may be reconciled, by considering the lack of favor in which all dilatory pleas are held by the thorities have not been agreed as to either the extent of the power at common law, or the means of enforcing it,—whether by a peremptory order,¹ or, where the writing is not produced, by enlarging the time to plead.² It may be laid down, however, that the right of inspection is not limited to documents which may be made evidence in the action, but extends to all that may throw light upon the case.³ And an inspection may be granted, courts. See Steph. Pl. (3d Am. ed.) 351; 1 Chit. Pl. (16th Am. ed.) *473; 4 Min. Inst. (2d ed.) *1057; Com. Dig., "Abatement," I, 11; Bac. Abr., "Abatement," O; Rex v. Shakespeare, 10 East 83; Attwood v. Davis, 1 B. & Al. 172; Hixon v. Binns, 3 T. R. 186; Alexander v. Mawman, Willes 42; Grant v. Ld. Soudes, 2 W. Bl. 1096; 2 Saund. 209 a, note 1; Hall v. Brazleton, 46 Ala. 359; Clark v. Latham, 25 Ark. 16; Wadsworth v. Woodford, 1 Day (Conn.) 28; Clark v. Warner, 6 Conn. 355; Gill v. Mirzell, 43 Ga. 589; Nixon v. Southwestern Ins. Co., 47 Ill. 444; Haywood v. Chestney, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 495.

And in Pratt v. Goswell, 9 C. B. N. S. 706; 99 E. C. L. 704; it was held that the court would not grant a rule for the inspection of documents which were produced in evidence at the trial, for the mere purpose of furnishing materials to the other side for moving for a new trial.

1. See as to the requisites for such an order, ante, p. 236.

To grant the order, it is not necessary that the document be in the hands of the party himself, against whom the order is asked: it is enough if it be in the hands of his agent, or in some way subject to his authority. 1 Whart. Ev. (3d ed.), § 742, citing Morrow v. Sanders, 3 Moo. C. P. 671; Gigner v. Bayly, 5 Moo. C. P. 71; 16 E. C. L. 389; Steadman v. Arden, 4 Dowl. & L. 16; 15 M. & W. 587; Ley v. Barlow, 1 Ex. 800.

2. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 559. In this section Mr. Greenleaf states the rule thus: "It seems, however, to be agreed, that where the action is ex contractu, and there is but one instrument between the parties, which is in the possession or power of the defendant, to which the plaintiff is either an actual party or a party in interest, and of which he has been refused an inspection, upon request, and the production of which is necessary to enable him to declare against the defendant, the court, or a judge at chambers, may grant him a rule on the defendant to produce the document, or give him a copy for that purpose."

The following conditions are enumerated by Mr. Wharton as necessary in order to obtain a rule of court for the inspection of documents in the hands of the adverse party: "First, the party applying must make an affidavit to the effect that he has no copy in his hands or attainable by himself, though under peculiar circumstances the court may, at its discretion, dispense with such affidavit; secondly, the applicant must have a legal or equitable interest in the document; thirdly, it must appear that the paper is in the hands of the holder as in some sense the trustee of the applicant." 1 Whart. Ev. (3d ed.), § 743, citing Woolmer v. Devereux, 2 M. & G. 758; 40 E. C. L. 612; 9 Dowl. 672; Birmingham R. Co. v. White, 1 Q. B. 286; 41 E. C. L. 541; Beale v. Bird, 2 D. & R. 419; 16 E. C. L. 99; Goldsmidt v. Marryat, 1 Camp. 562; Rayner v. Ritson, 6 B. & S. 888; 118 E. C. L. 887; Price v. Harrison, 8 C. B. N. S. 617; 98 E. C. L. 615; Portmore v. Goring, 4 Bing. 152; 13 E. C. L. 384; 12 Moo. C. P. 363; Morrow v. Saunders, 1 B. & B. 318; 5 E. C. L. 94; Bluck v. Gompertz, 7 Ex. 67; Lawrence v. Hooker, 5 Bing. 6; 15 E. C. L. 345; Cocks v. Nash, 9 Bing. 723; 23 E. C. L. 439; Smith v. Winter, 3 M. & W. 309; Goodliff v. Fuller, 14 M. & W. 4; Powell v. Bradbury, 4 C. B. 541; 56 E. C. L. 541; Pritchett v. Smart, 7 C. B. 625; 62 E. C. L. 625; Ex parte Partridge, 1 H. & W. 350; Pickering v. Noyes, 1 B. & C. 262; 8 E. C. L. 112; Blagg v. Kent, 6 Bing. 614; 19 E. C. L. 179; Parkhurst v. Gosden, 2 C. B. 894; 52 E. C. L. 893.

3. 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1797;

not only where it is asked with a view to establish the original case of the applicant, but also where the object is to obtain material evidence to answer the opponent's case.¹ But a party cannot be subjected to a fishing investigation, to ascertain whether he has books which may contain evidence relating to the merits; nor to a general inquisitorial examination of his books on the chance of something being found which may aid the moving

Hutchinson v. Glover, 45 L. J. Q. B. 120-1; 1 Q. B. D. 138; Bustros v. White, 1 Ch. D. 425, per Jessel, M. R.; English v. Tottie, 45 L. J. Q. B. 138; 1 Q. B. D. 141. But see Hewitt v. Pigott, 7 Bing. 400; 20 E. C. L. 179; where, on a new trial, the court allowed the plaintiff an inspection of a deed read in evidence by the defendant at the first trial, but denied it as to another deed, which, at the former trial, was admitted to have been duly executed, but was not offered in evidence.

It is no objection to granting the inspection that a party desires to see and copy a document in his opponent's hands for the purpose of bringing suit upon the same. 1 Whart. Ev. (3d ed.), § 742; citing Blakey v. Porter, 1 Taunt. 386; Reid v. Coleman, 2 Car. & M. 456; Rowe v. Howden, 4 Bing. 539, note; Arundel v. Holmes, 8 Dowl. 119; Morrow v. Saunders, 1 B. & B. 318; 5 E. C. L. 94; Powers v. Elmendorf, 4 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 60; Miller v. Mather, 5 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 160.

1. 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1795; Goodman v. Harvey, 3 New Rep. 512.

In the following cases an inspection was granted or favored: Scott v. Walker, 2 E. & B. 555; 75 E. C. L. 555; Rayner v. Allhusen, 2 L. M. & P. 95, per Erle, J.; Galsworthy v. Norman, 21 L. J. Q. B. 70, per Erle, J.; London Gas Light Co. v. Vestry of Chelsea, 28 L. J. C. P. 275; 6 C. B., N. S. 411; 95 E. C. L. 411; Hunt v. Hewitt, 7 Exch. 236; Riccard v. Inclosure Com'rs, 4 E. & B. 329; 82 E. C. L. 328; Daniel v. Bond, 9 C. B. N. S. 716; 99 E. C. L. 716; Baker v. London, etc., R. Co., 37 L. J. Q. B. 53; L. R., 3 Q. B. 91; 8 B. & S. 645; Fraser v. Burrows, 46 L. J. Ex. 501; Doe v. Langford, 1 Bail. Ct. Cas. 37; 21 L. J. Q. B. 217; Hill v. Philip, 7 Ex. 232.

In an action against a railway company for injuries sustained on their railway, the plaintiff has been allowed to inspect a variety of reports, descriptive of the accident, made in the ordinary discharge of duty by different servants of the company to their general manager; but in the same case, the court would not sanction the inspection of reports made to the defendants by scientific persons, whom they had consulted in confidence for the purpose of ascertaining how the accident had occurred. Woolley v. N. London R. Co., L. R., 4 C. P. 602; 38 L. J. C. P. 317; Cossey v. London, etc., R. Co., L. R., 5 C. P. 146; 39 L. J. C. P. 174. See also the following cases, which Mr. Taylor (2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1795) regards as irreconcilable. Mahoney v. Widows' L. Assoc. Fund, L. R., 6 C. P. 252; 40 L. J. C. P. 203; Richards v. Gellatly, L. R., 7 C. P. 127; Fenner v. London, etc., R. Co., 41 L. J. Q. B. 313; L. R., 7 Q. B. 767; Malden v. Gt. North. R. Co., L. R., 9 Ex. 300; Skinner v. Gt. North. R. Co., 43 L. J. Ex. 150; L. R. 9 Ex. 298; and M'Corquodale v. Bell, 45 L. J. C. P. 329; 1 C. P. D. 471.

Forgery, etc.—In several cases an inspection has been granted to parties claiming that the documents in question are forgeries. Jackson v. Jones, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 17, and note (a), containing a memorandum of the case Brush v. Gibbon; King v. King, 4 Taunt. 666. And compare Woolmer v. Devereux, 2 M. & G. 758; 40 E. C. L. 612. But see Frank v. Frank, 1 Houst. (Del.) 245. And it seems that the rule allowing a person to refuse to furnish evidence that may expose him to a criminal charge, does not apply here, but that the document must be produced, and, in a proper case, may be impounded by the court for the purposes of a criminal prosecution. 1 Whart. Ev. (3rd ed.), § 751, citing Woolmer v. Devereux, 2 M. & G. 758; 40 E. C. L. 612; 3 Scott N. R. 324; Thomas v. Dunn, 6 M. & G. 274; 46 E. C. L. 274; Richey v. Ellis, Al. & Nap. 111; Rogers v. Turner, 21 L. J. Ex. 9; Boyd v. Petrie, L. R., 3 party.¹ Moreover, communications made to a party by skilled advisers, such as scientific or medical men, are privileged from inspection.² The mere fact that letters are written to the plaintiff's solicitor "in confidence," and under a pledge not to disclose their contents to any one but the plaintiff and his legal advisers, does not exempt them from inspection; but if they are not merely confidential communications, but are written in answer to inquiries by the plaintiff's solicitor in contemplation of anticipated litigation, they are privileged.³

Whenever an inspection of private documents is desired, the application of the party should be supported by affidavit, stating that he has no copy in his hands or attainable by himself, and describing definitely the other cir-

Ch. 818; overruling L. R., 5 Eq. 290.

A partner gave his executors power to continue his interest in the business for two years after his death. In an action by his infant son against them, an order for an inspection of the partnership books, to prepare his complaint, was granted, on an affidavit that the executors had conspired with the decedent's surviving partner, and had sold him the decedent's interest for less money than its value. Martine v. Albro, 26 Hun (N. Y.) 559. And see Hue v. Richards, 2 Beav. 305.

In an action by a principal against his agent for an accounting, an inspection, with copy, of the books and vouchers of the agent may be ordered, to enable the plaintiff to frame his complaint. Manley v. Bonnel, 11 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 123. And see Turner v. Bayley, 34 Beav. 105.

Breach of Promise.—In an action for breach of promise of marriage, the defendant, before pleading, was allowed an inspection of all the letters written by him to the plaintiff during the previous two years. Stone v. Strange, 3 H. & C. 541. And see Pope v. Lister, L. R., 6 Q. B. 242; Chute v. Blennerhasset, 16 Ir. C. L. 9; Glyn v. Caulfield, 3 Macn. & G. 463; Kerr v. Gillespie, 7 Beav. 572. But in Hamer v. Sowerby, 3 L. T. N. S. 734, it was held that the defendant in an action for breach of promise of marriage was not entitled to inspect his own letters to the plaintiff, upon an affidavit that the promise, if any, was contained in the letters. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.) 648, note a, citing the above case.

1. People v. Rector, etc., of Trinity Church, 6 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 177; Walker v. Granite Bank, 19 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 114. And see ante, p. 233, note 2.

2. See generally PRIVILEGED COMMUNICATIONS; Woolley v. N. London R. Co., L. R., 4 C. P. 602; 38 L. J. C. P. 317; Cossey v. London, etc., R. Co., L. R., 5 C. P. 146; 39 L. J. C. P. 174; Friend v. London, etc., R. Co., L. R., 2 Ex. 437; 46 L. J. Ex. 696; Pacey v. London Tramways Co., L. R., 2 Ex. 440, note; 46 L. J. Ex. 698.

3. See generally PRIVILEGED COMMUNICATIONS; 1 Whart. Ev. (3d ed.), § 742; citing McCorquodale v. Bell, 1 C. P. D. 471; Cossey v. London, etc., R. Co., L. R., 5 C. P. 146; Skinner v. Great Northern Railway Co., L. R., 9 Ex. 298; Fenner v. London, etc., R. Co., L. R., 7 Q. B. 767.

It has even been held that documents drawn up by the agent of a party for the purpose of being submitted to a solicitor for advice, were privileged from inspection, although they had not been submitted to the solicitor. Southwark Water Co. v. Quick, 47 L. J. Q. B. 258; 3 Q. B. D. 315; The Theodore Korner, 47 L. J. Adm. 85; L. R., 3 P. D. 162.

And shorthand notes of evidence taken in a former trial have also been held exempt from inspection. Nordon v. Defries, 8 Q. B. D. 508; 51 L. J. Q. B. 415. And see the Palermo, 9 P. D. 6; 53 L. J. P. D. & A. 6.

For the rule as to criminating documents, see Pritchett v. Smart, cumstances of the case.¹ The affidavit must show that the information sought is essential.² It may be made by any person cognizant of the facts.³

A party, to excuse himself from the discovery of a paper sought by the adverse party, must, by affidavit, swear positively that it is not in his possession or control, or state facts which, with his denial on information and belief, are equivalent to a positive denial.⁴

The rule of practice in equity, allowing a party who produces documents for inspection, upon making affidavit that certain portions do not relate to the matter in question, to seal up such irrelevant parts,⁵ applies also in all other cases of the inspection

7 C. B. 625; 62 E. C. L. 625; and ante, p. 238, note 3.

1. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 559; 1 Whart. Ev. (3d ed.), § 743; Morrow v. Saunders, 1 B. & B. 318; 5 E. C. L. 94; McAllister v. Pond, 15 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 299; People v. Rector, etc., of Trinity Church, 6 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 177.

In New York, although the proper statutory proceeding is by petition, the application may be made also by motion supported by affidavit. Johnson v. Consolidated Silver Mining Co., 2 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 413; Pindar v. Seaman, 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 140; Exchange Bank v. Monteath, 4 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 280. But see Dole v. Fellows, 5 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 451; Follett v. Weeds, 3 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 303.

2. Imperial Gas Co. v. Clarke, 7 Bing. 95; 20 E. C. L. 59; Kaupe v. Isdell, 3 Robt. (N. Y.) 699; Stanton v. Delaware Mut. Ins. Co., 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 662. And see Davis v. Dunham, 13 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 425; Morrison v. Sturges, 26 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 177.

An affidavit on which a motion for a discovery of books and papers is made, which merely alleges that there are in the possession of the defendants various letters, receipts, and accounts, in the handwriting of the moving party, "containing evidence in relation to the subject of the action," and "to the merits of the action," is not sufficient to enable the court to pass upon the question whether the contents of such books and documents are at all material as evidence in regard to any issue in the action. The plaintiff is not entitled to the inspection of all such books, merely to obtain information how, or in reference to what matters, to get other evidence. Merguelle v. Continental Bank Note Co., 7 Robt. (N. Y.) 77.

A motion for an order compelling defendant to deliver to plaintiff a copy of a printed book, in an action for a libel contained in the book, was denied because the affidavit did not show what was stated in the book, nor specify any particular information desired, so that the court could order a sworn copy to be delivered, and because the plaintiff was not entitled to the whole book, but only to the particular article on which his action was founded. Lynch v. Henderson, 10 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 345, note.

3. 1 Whart. Ev. (3d ed.), § 750; Exchange Bank v. Monteath, 4 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 280.

But in England it was held under the Common Law Procedure Act (1854), 17 and 18 Vict., c. 125, that a discovery of documents could not be granted except upon the affidavit of the party to the suit; the affidavit of the attorney not being sufficient, although the party himself were abroad. Herschfield v. Clark, 11 Ex. 712; Christopherson v. Lotinga, 15 C. B. N. S. 809; 109 E. C. L. 808.

4. Southart v. Dwight, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 672.

5. 3 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 301; 2 Dan. Ch. Pl. & Pract. (5th Am. ed.) *1824; Gerard v. Penswick, 1 Swanst. 533; Curd v. Curd, 1 Hare 274; Mansell v. Feeny, 2 J. & H. 320; Talbot v. Marshfield, L. R. 1 Eq. 6; 11 Jur. N. S. 901; Napier v. Staples, 2 Moll. (Irish) 270; Dias v. Merle, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 494; Titus v. Cortelyou, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 444; Elder v. Bogardus, 1 Edm. Sel. Cas. (N. Y.) 110.

of books and papers, whether they belong to individuals or to corporations.¹ But if such irrelevant matter cannot be separated, the party must produce the whole.²

When private writings are produced for inspection under an order of court, the court will not, except in the case of forged documents,³ compel the impounding of the papers, or their deposit with an officer of the court or any third party. The owner of the document is allowed to keep it in his possession. The order simply permits its inspection, while in the hands of the owner or his attorney.⁴ But the inspection is not confined to the opposing party or his attorney. Since it may be necessary in order to determine as to the genuineness or meaning of a writing that it should be examined by others, the court will, on due cause shown, authorize an inspection by other persons, as, for example, by experts.⁵

As to the costs of an inspection, see the authorities below.⁶

b. DOCTRINE UNDER STATUTES.—As even the above relaxation at common law proved insufficient for the ends of justice, statutes have been passed both in England,⁷ and very generally in the United States, providing for compelling a party to a pending action or other legal proceeding, to allow his opponent an inspection, with the right to make copies, of all documents in his

1. Cook on Stock and Stockholders and Corporation Law (2d ed.), § 516, note 5; Clifford v. Taylor, 1 Taunt. 167; Hill v. Great Western R. Co., 10 C. B. N. S. 148; 100 E. C. L. 148; Bull v. Clarke, 15 C. B. N. S. 851; 109 E. C. L. 851; Earp v. Lloyd, 3 K. & J. 549; Jones v. Andrews, 58 L. T. R. 601; Pyncheon v. Day, 118 Ill. 9.

2. Carew v. White, 5 Beav. 172. But in Pyncheon v. Day, 118 Ill. 9, where the entries in a journal containing the accounts between the parties, were so intermingled with other transactions that an inspection would disclose such outside matters, it was ordered that the defendant present in court a verbatim copy of all the journal entries of matters between the parties, giving the page where entered, such copy to be verified by affidavit, and, if the plaintiff should so request, by the certificate of the clerk of the court after actual examination and comparison.

3. See note 1, p. 245.

4. 1 Whart. Ev. (3d ed.), § 749; Thomas v. Dunn, 6 M. & G. 274; 46 E. C. L. 274; Rogers v. Turner, 21 L. J. Ex. 9; Hilyard v. Harrison, 37 N. J. L. 170, 173.

In the last case, the court by Depue, J., said: "At common law and independently of recent statutes, courts of law had the power to order inspection of papers which, by the pleadings or by being used in evidence, came within the control of the court. When any deed is showed in court, the deed, by judgment of law, doth remain in court all the term at which it is showed, for the whole term is as one day, and the party may demand oyer during the time it is so in court But the court in exercising this control over papers and documents offered in evidence, will merely grant inspection and examination by the party and his witnesses, either in open court or before an officer of the court, or in the presence of the party producing them, or his attorney, and will not take them from the latter and deliver them into the possession of the other side."

5. 1 Whart. Ev. (3rd ed.), § 752; citing Atty. General v. Whitwood Local Board, 40 L. J. Ch. 590; Swansea Vale R. v. Budd, L. R., 2 Eq. 274; Boyd v. Petrie, L. R., 3 Ch. 818, qualifying L. R., 5 Eq. 290.

6. Costs of Inspection.—Hill v. Philp, 7 Ex. 232; Davey v. Pendleton, 11 C. B. N. S. 628; 103 E. C. L. 626; Gardner v. Dangerfield, 5 Beav. 389.

7. 14 & 15 Vict., c. 99, § 6; 17 & 18 Vict., c. 125, § 50; Rules of the possession relating to the pending cause.¹ In the Federal courts, since the rules of the common law (including the common law doctrine as to the inspection of documents) do not form a part of the law of the United States,² and since no statute has been enacted covering the case,³ there is at present no means of securing, prior to the trial, an inspection of documents in the hands of an opponent, save by a bill of discovery.⁴

c. POWER OF CONGRESS TO COMPEL PRODUCTION OF PRIVATE PAPERS.—Congress has no power to compel the production of the private books and papers of a citizen for its inspection, except in the progress of judicial proceedings, or in suits instituted for that purpose, and in both cases only upon averments that its rights are in some way dependent for enforcement upon the evidence those books and papers contain.⁵

Supreme Court, 1883, Order XXXI, R. 1.

1. See BILL OF DISCOVERY, vol. 2, p. 206, for a summary of the statutory provisions on this subject in England and in the United States.

2. Cooley Prin. Const. L. 131; Cooley Const. Lim. (6th ed.) 30-1; Wheaton v. Peters, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 591, 658. And see Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch (U. S.) 75, 93; United States v. Hudson, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 32; United States v. Coolidge, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 415; United States v. Barney, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 294; United States v. New Bedford Bridge, 1 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 401; United States v. Lancaster, 2 McLean (U. S.) 431, 433; Lorman v. Clarke, 2 McLean (U. S.) 568, 572.

3. Rev. Sta. U. S., § 724, applies, according to the better opinion, to the production of documents at the trial, and not to their production for inspection before trial. See authorities in the next note; and compare pp. 255-6.

4. Foster Fed. Pract. 552; Guyot v. Hilton, 32 Fed. Rep. 743; Colgate v. Compagnie Française, 23 Blatchf. (U. S.) 86; 23 Fed. Rep. 82; Triplett v. Bank, 3 Cranch (C. C.) 646; Merchants' Bank v. State Bank, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 201, 204; Iasigi v. Brown, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 401. But see Coit v. North Carolina Gold Amalgamating Co., 9 Fed. Rep. 577; U. S. v. Youngs, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 264; Central Bank v. Tayloe, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 424; Jacques v. Collins, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 23; Finch v. Rikeman, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 301.

5. Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 168; In re Pacific Railway Commission, 32 Fed. Rep. 241; In re McLean, 37 Fed. Rep. 648. In the second of the above cases the court by Field, J., said: "Of all the rights of the citizen, few are of greater importance or more essential to his peace and happiness than the right of personal security, and that involves, not merely protection of his person from assault, but exemption of his private affairs, books, and papers from the inspection and scrutiny of others. Without the enjoyment of this right, all other rights would lose half their value. The law provides for the compulsory production, in the progress of judicial proceedings, or by direct suit for that purpose, of such documents as affect the interest of others, and also, in certain cases, for the seizure of criminal papers necessary for the prosecution of offenders against public justice, and only in one of these ways can they be obtained, and their contents made known, against the will of the owners. In the recent case of Boyd v. U. S., 116 U. S. 616, the Supreme Court held that a provision of a law of Congress which authorized a court of the United States in revenue cases, on motion of the government attorney, to require the defendant or claimant to produce in court his private books, invoices, and papers, or that the allegations of the attorney respecting them should be taken as confessed, was unconstitutional and void as applied to suits for penalties or to establish a forfeiture of the party's goods. The court, speaking by Mr. Justice Bradley said: 'Any compulsory discovery by extorting the party's oath, or compelling the production of his private books and papers, to convict him of crime or to forfeit his property, is contrary to the principles of a free government. It is abhorrent to the instincts of an Englishman; it is abhorrent to the instincts of an American. It may suit the purpose of despotic power; but it cannot abide the pure atmosphere of political liberty and personal freedom.' The language then used had reference, it is true, to the compulsory production of papers as a foundation for criminal proceedings, but it is applicable to any such production of the private books and papers of a party otherwise than in the course of judicial proceedings, or a direct suit for that purpose. It is forcible intrusion into, and compulsory exposure of, one's private affairs and papers, without judicial process, or in the course of judicial proceedings, which is contrary to the principles of a free government, and is abhorrent to the instincts of Englishmen and Americans. In his opinion in the celebrated case of Entick v. Carrington, reported at length in 19 How. St. Tr. 1029, Lord Camden said: 'Papers are the owner's goods and chattels; they are his dearest property, and are so far from enduring a seizure that they will hardly bear an inspection; and though the eye cannot, by the laws of England, be guilty of a trespass, yet, where papers are removed and carried away, the secret nature of those goods will be an aggravation of the trespass, and demand more considerable damages in that respect. Where is the written law that gives any magistrate such a power? I can safely answer there is none; and therefore it is too much for us, without such authority, to pronounce a practice legal which would be subversive of all the comforts of society.' Compulsory process to produce such papers, not in a judicial proceeding, but before a commissioner of inquiry is as subversive of 'all the comforts of society' as their seizure under the general warrant condemned in that case. The principles laid down in the opinion of Lord Camden, said the Supreme Court of the United States, 'affect the very essence of constitutional liberty and security. They reach further than the concrete form of the case then before the court with its adventitious circumstances; they apply to all invasions on the part of the government, and its employes, of the sanctity of man's home and the privacies of life.'

The case of Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 168, was as follows: The firm of Jay Cooke & Co. were debtors of the United States, and it was alleged that they were interested in a "real-estate pool" in Washington, and that the trustee of their estate had made a settlement with the associates in the "pool" to the disadvantage of numerous creditors, including the United States. The House of Representatives, by a resolution reciting these facts, authorized the speaker to appoint a committee of five to inquire into the matter and history of the said partnership, and the character of the settlement, with the amount of the property involved, in which Jay Cooke & Co. were interested, and the amount paid, or to be paid, in said settlement, with power to send for persons and papers, and report to the House. The committee being appointed and organized, a subpoena was issued to one Kilbourn, commanding him to appear before the committee to testify touching the matters to be inquired into, and to bring with him certain designated records, papers, and maps. Kilbourn, being asked on his appearance before the committee, to state the names of the five members of the partnership, and where each resided, refused to answer the question, or to produce the books. The committee reported the matter to the House, and it ordered the Speaker to issue his warrant, directed to the Sergeant-at-Arms, to arrest Kilbourn and bring him before the bar of the House to answer for contempt. On being brought before the House, Kilbourn persisted in his refusal to answer the question, and to produce the books and papers required. He was thereupon held to be in contempt, and committed to the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms until he should signify his willingness to comply with the requirements of the committee. And it was ordered that in the meantime he should be confined in the common jail of the District of Columbia. He was accordingly confined in jail for 45 days, when he was released on habeas corpus by the chief justice of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. Upon his release he sued the Speaker of the House, the members of the committee, and the Sergeant-at-Arms, for his forcible arrest and confinement. The defendants pleaded the facts recited, to which the plaintiff demurred. The demurrer was overruled, and judgment ordered for the defendants. On a writ of error to the Supreme Court, the judgment was affirmed as to all the defendants except the Sergeant-at-Arms. They, being members of the House, were held to be protected from prosecution for their action. But, as to

II. PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS AT TRIAL.—1. Public Documents.—a.

JUDICIAL WRITINGS.—Judicial writings may be divided into records and quasi records, the latter class embracing depositions, affidavits, bills, answers, orders, decrees, verdicts, judgments of inferior courts, rules of courts, writs, testaments, letters of administration, and certain other documents, which, although not strictly records, partake of their nature and are subject generally to the same rules of evidence.¹ As to both classes the doctrine Thompson, the judgment was reversed, and the cause remanded for further proceedings. The conclusion reached in the the Supreme Court, after careful consideration, was that the subject-matter of the investigation was judicial, and not legislative, and that there was no power in Congress, or in either house, on the allegation that an insolvent debtor of the United States was interested in a private business partnership, to investigate the affairs of that partnership, and, consequently, no authority to compel a witness to testify on the subject. "The House of Representatives," said the court, by Miller, J., "has the sole right to impeach officers of the government, and the Senate to try them. Where the question of such impeachment is before either body acting in its appropriate sphere on that subject, we see no reason to doubt the right to compel the attendance of witnesses, and their answer to proper questions, in the same manner and by the use of the same means that courts of justice can in like cases. Whether the power of punishment in either house by fine or imprisonment goes beyond this or not, we are sure that no person can be punished for contumacy as a witness before either house, unless his testimony is required in a matter in which that house has jurisdiction to inquire, and that we are equally sure that neither of these bodies possesses the general power of making inquiry into the private affairs of the citizen.

. . . If the investigation which the committee was directed to make was judicial in its character, and could only be properly and successfully made by a court of justice, and if it related to a matter wherein relief or redress could be had only by a judicial proceeding, we do not, after what has been said, deem it necessary to discuss the proposition that the power attempted to be exercised was one confided by the Constitution to the judicial, and not to the legislative department of the government. We think it equally clear that the power asserted is judicial and that it is not legislative. . . . The resolution adopted as a sequence of this preamble shows no hint of any intention of final action by Congress on the subject. In all the argument of the case, no suggestion has been made of what the House of Representatives or the Congress could have done in the way of remedying the wrong, or securing the creditors of Jay Cooke & Co., or even the United States. Was it to be simply a fruitless investigation into the personal affairs of individuals? If so, the House of Representatives had no power or authority in the matter more than any other equal number of gentlemen interested for the government of their country. By fruitless we mean that it could result in no valid legislation on the subject to which the inquiry referred."

When the case went back to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, and was tried, the plaintiff recovered a verdict for $60,000 against the Sergeant-at-Arms. A new trial having been granted for excessive damages, the plaintiff recovered on the second trial a verdict for $37,500. This amount was subsequently reduced to $20,000, which was paid by order of Congress, with interests and costs of suit. 23 Sts. at Large 467; MacArthur & Mackey, 416, 432.

"This case," says Field, J., in In re Pacific Railway Commission, 32 Fed. Rep. 241, 253, "will stand for all time as a bulwark against the invasion of the right of the citizen to protection in his private affairs against the unlimited scrutiny of investigation by a Congressional committee. The courts are open to the United States as they are to the private citizen, and both can there secure, by regular proceedings, ample protection of all rights and interests which are entitled to protection under a government of a written constitution and laws."

1. 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1534; 4 Min. Inst. (2d ed.) *718.

is the same, that they are generally not producible in court, but are proved by copies,¹ and this for several reasons: first, because to remove them might lead to their loss or mutilation; secondly, because being of interest to many persons, they might be wanted as evidence in different places at the same time; and, thirdly, because of the public character of the facts they contain, and the consequent facility in detecting any fraud or error in the copies made of them.² But statutes allowing copies of such records to be admitted as evidence do not exclude the production of the originals, when properly authenticated.³ A judicial writing is producible at the trial only when the cause is in the same court whose record it is, or when it is the subject of proceedings in a superior or appellate court of the same jurisdiction.⁴ And although copies are generally receivable as evidence in lieu of the original, there are two cases in which the original record itself must be produced: viz, first, where issue has been joined on a defense or reply of nul tiel record, in some cause in a court to which the disputed record belongs;⁵ and, secondly, where a person is indicted for perjury in a deposition, affidavit, or answer in chancery, or for forgery with respect to any record.⁶ In either of these cases the original document—unless it be shown that

1. But judgments of inferior courts may be proved at the trial by producing from the proper custody the book or minutes containing the proceedings. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 513. So also depositions in chancery are producible at the trial; as are also the original minutes or memorial of the grant of letters of administration, in the absence of a formal record; and writs before they have been returned. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), §§ 516, 519, 521.

2. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), §§ 91, 482, 484; 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), §§ 439, 1534, 1598; 4 Min. Inst. (2d ed.), *715; Dunham v. Chicago, 55 Ill. 357; Berry v. Raddin, 11 Allen (Mass.) 577; Camden, etc., R. Co. v. Stewart, 4 Green (N. J.) 343; Davis v. Gray, 17 Ohio St. 330; Curry v. Raymond, 28 Pa. St. 144; Coons v. Renick, 11 Tex. 134; Winers v. Laird, 27 Tex. 616; Bovee v. McLean, 24 Wis. 225. And see Lord Melville's Case, 29 How. St. Tr. 683-5; Rex v. Lord George Gordon, 2 Doug. 593, and note 3; Jones v. Randall, Lofft 383, 428; Cowp. 17.

3. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 502, note b; Gray v. Davis, 27 Conn. 447; Britton v. State, 54 Ind. 535; Odiorne v. Bacon, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 185; Vose v. Manly, 19 Me. 331; State v. Bartlett, 47 Me. 396; Folsom v. Cressey, 73 Me. 290; Müller v. Hale, 26 Pa. St. 432;

Ballard v. Thomas, 19 Gratt. (Va.) 18.

4. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 502; 1 Whart. Ev. (3d ed.), § 106; 4 Min. Inst. (2d ed.), *715; Pitt v. Knight, 1 Saund. 99; Adams v. State, 11 Ark. 466; Harper v. Rowe, 53 Cal. 233; Gray v. Davis, 27 Conn. 447; State v. Bartlett, 47 Me. 396; Ward v. Saunders, 6 Ired. (N. Car.) 382; Burk v. Tregg, 2 Wash. (Va.) 216; Anderson v. Dudley, 5 Call (Va.) 529; Ballard v. Thomas, 19 Gratt. (Va.) 18.

One court has no authority, as a rule, to require the production before itself of documents or papers on file in another court, and, a fortiori, such order cannot be made for their production before some other court entirely beyond the control of the court making the order. Wright v. Dunklin, 83 Ala. 317.

5. 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1535.

6. Rex v. Howard, 1 M. & Rob. 189; Rex v. Morris, 2 Burr. 1189; Rex v. Benson, 2 Camp. 508; Rex v. Spencer, Ry. & M. 97; Crook v. Dowling, 3 Doug. 77; Stratford v. Greene, 2 Ball & B.; Garvin v. Carroll, 10 Ir. Law R. 330; Lady Dartmouth v. Roberts, 16 East 340. In this last case the judges intimated an opinion that the same strictness was necessary in actions for malicious prosecution; but this would seem to be a mistake. 2 Taylor Ev.

the prisoner has got possession of it, or that it has been lost or destroyed,¹—must be actually produced.

b. NON-JUDICIAL WRITINGS.—These also, for the same reasons as in the case of judicial writings, are, with a few exceptions, not producible at the trial. Among the exceptions are acts of State,² and official registers,³ which, however, may also be proved by copies.⁴ But ordinarily such books, belonging to a particular custody, are not taken from it except by special authority granted only in cases where inspection of the book itself is necessary for the purpose of identifying it, or of determining some question arising upon the original entry, or of correcting an error which has been duly ascertained.⁵

2. Semi-public Documents.—As a general rule, these are produced at the trial in the same manner as private documents.⁶

3. Private Documents.—a. DOCUMENTS IN THE HANDS OF THE PARTY.—Where writings are in the possession of a party desiring to use them at the trial, he has nothing to do but to produce them; and since parol evidence of the contents of writings cannot be given as primary proof, a party relying upon a document can (8th ed.), § 1535, note 7; Purcell v. McNamara, 1 Camp. 200.

1. Reg. v. Milnes, 2 Fost. & Fin. 10.

2. For the documents included under this head, see supra, p. 229, note 4.

3. For the various books and papers comprised under official registers, see supra, p. 229, note 5.

4. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 479; 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), §§ 1526–7.

5. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 484; 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1598.

6. But it seems that the president or other officer of a corporation, which is a party to an action, cannot be compelled by a subpœna duces tecum issued by the adverse party to produce at the trial the books and papers of the corporation. And this rule includes the clerk or cashier of a bank. Bank of Utica v. Hillard, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 153, 419; LaFarge v. LaFarge Fire Ins. Co., 14 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 26, 31; Central Nat. Bank v. White, 37 N. Y. Super. Ct. 297. But see U.S. Express Co. v. Henderson, 28 N. W. Rep. 426.

In Bank of Utica v. Hillard, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 153, the court by Savage, C. J., said: "The obligation of Colling [a bank clerk] to produce the books, upon the duces tecum, depends on the question, whether they were in his possession and under his control. He was the mere clerk of the plaintiffs, and in that character had no such property in, or possession of, the books as imposed the obligation to bring them. They were under control of the cashier, who might forbid their removal, or place them beyond the reach of the witness."

In Bank of Utica v. Hillard, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 419, the court said: "The course for proving the books or papers of the bank, where it is the adverse party, is to give notice to produce them, and on its non-compliance, to show the contents by inferior evidence as in other cases. . . . The books are ordinarily in the possession of the cashier. How? He holds them as the officer, the agent, or servant of the bank in the same manner as an attorney holds the papers of his client. The cases in which the production of papers may be coerced by subpœna are where they are the property of a competent witness, or, at least, where they do not belong exclusively to the adverse party. When he can say 'these are my papers,' we will not compel one who happens to have the temporary possession of them, in the right of the party, to produce them on subpœna."

In LaFarge v. LaFarge Fire Ins. Co., 14 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 26, 31, the court by Bosworth, J., said: "The proper place for the books and papers of a corporation is the office where the business to which they relate is transacted. No officer of the corporation, as prove it no otherwise than by producing it, unless he is able to give such satisfactory reason for its non-production as will justify him in having recourse to secondary evidence.¹

b. DOCUMENTS IN THE HANDS OF THE ADVERSE PARTY.—Where the writing is in the power of the adverse party, there is, in general, no method at common law of compelling him to produce it, since he cannot be forced to give evidence against himself;² but the practice is, in such cases, to give him or his attorney a notice to produce the document, in order that, if it is not brought forward at the trial, secondary evidence of its contents may be admissible.³ It remains only to add that after notice to such, has power or authority, on general principles, to use or control them, except in such manner and at such place as may be requisite to the proper performance of the duties imposed upon him by the corporation. He has no right by virtue of his position and office, and no obligation is imposed upon him by the service of such a subpoena, to remove the books and papers of his principal from the office in which they are required to be kept. It is generally as important to third persons, as to an officer of a corporation, and often of more importance, that its books and papers should not be subjected to the hazard of being lost or injured by being taken to a place of trial, and that they should be at all times retained in its office for use and reference there. Very serious consequences might result, if its officers were held to have the right, and to be under an obligation, to carry them to any part of the State, in obedience to a subpoena duces tecum."

But in U. S. Express Co. v. Henderson, 69 Iowa 40, it was held that a servant of a corporation might be required by subpoena to produce corporation books within his control, and that he could not refuse to produce the books because they would incriminate his employers.

1. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), §§ 557, et seq.; 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1816; 1 Whart. Ev. (3d ed.), § 60. Mr. Taylor thus enumerates the cases in which the contents of documents in the hands of the parties may be established by secondary evidence: first, when the original writing is destroyed or lost; second, when its production is physically impossible, or, at least, highly inconvenient; third, when the law raises a strong presumption in favor of the existence of the document; fourth, when the papers are voluminous, and it is necessary to prove only their general results; and fifth, when the question arises upon the examination of a witness on the voir dire. 1 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 428. See also LOST PAPERS, vol. 13, p. 1059.

2. Since the abolition in many jurisdictions of the common law disqualification of parties to be witnesses, it seems that a subpoena duces tecum will be available, as well in the case of an adverse party, as of a third person, to secure the production of documents at the trial. 1 Thomp. Tr., § 731, citing Merchants' Bank v. State Bank, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 201, in which case Clifford, J., refused to make an order under Rev. Sts. U. S., § 724, requiring the defendants to produce certain documents in their possession, until a subpoena duces tecum should have first been served upon them and should have failed. And see Bishoffsheim v. Brown, 29 Fed. Rep. 341, 343, in which the court by Wallace, J., said: "As a witness a party can be compelled by a subpoena duces tecum to produce books, documents, and papers in his possession the same as any other witness."

3. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 560; 1 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), §§ 440, et seq., 1816; 1 Whart. Ev. (3d ed.), §§ 152, et seq.; Rex v. Watson, 2 T. R. 201; Partridge v. Coates, Ry. & M. 156; Hanson v. Eustace, 2 How. (U. S.) 653; Bethea v. McCall, 3 Ala. 449; Merwin v. Ward, 15 Conn. 377; Avan v. Fry, 69 Ind. 91; Day v. Floyd, 130 Mass. 488; Spring Garden Ins. Co. v. Evans, 9 Md. 1; Jackson v. Livingston, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 136; Trotti v. Hobby, 42 Tex. 349; Bonner v. Ins. Co., 13 Wis. 677.

See also NOTICE TO PRODUCE PAPERS, vol. 16, p. 843, where this topic is fully treated.

Production of Documents in Federal Courts.—In the Federal Courts, the production of documents at the trial is regulated by U. S. Rev. Sts., § 724, as follows: "In the trial of actions at law, the courts of the United States may, on motion and due notice thereof, require the parties to produce books or writings in their possession or power, which contain evidence pertinent to the issue, in cases and under circumstances where they might be compelled to produce the same by the ordinary rules of proceedings in chancery. If a plaintiff fails to comply with such order, the court may, on motion, give the like judgment for the defendant as in cases of nonsuit; and if a defendant fails to comply with such order, the court may, on motion, give judgment against him by default."

For the proper practice under this statute, see Lowenstein v. Carey, 12 Fed. Rep. 811, in which case the court by Hill, J., said: "The proper practice under this statute is for the party requiring the production of such books or writings to spread on the motion docket a motion for a rule upon the opposite party requiring the production of the books or papers desired. The motion should describe the books or papers with as much certainty as may be, and should further state that, according to the best of the mover's knowledge or information and belief, the books or papers called for will tend to prove the issue in favor of the mover. The motion should further state some fact or facts which the books or papers will tend to prove, pertinent to the issue, which issue should be made up before the motion is made, so that the court may determine the pertinency of the fact or facts which it is alleged the books or papers will tend to prove. What they will prove can only be determined after their production. The truth of the allegations stated in the motion should be verified by the affidavit of the mover or his agent, and the materiality of the testimony sought by the production of the books or papers, certified to by the counsel of the mover. Notice must be given the party required to produce the books or writings, or his attorney, a sufficient length of time for the party to appear and show cause, if any he has, why the rule shall not be made, when he may, in opposition to the rule, show by affidavit that he has no such books or papers under his control, or any other reason he may have why the rule shall not be made. If any issue is made upon the motion, the court will hear proof, and grant or refuse the rule according to the proof and nature of the case."

It may be premised that as the production of books and papers in the Federal courts is expressly regulated by the above statute, it is not a matter as to which, under U. S. Rev. Sts., § 914, the practice of the State courts can be adopted. U. S. v. Hutton, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 268; Beardsley v. Littell, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 102; Gregory v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 3 McCrary (U. S.) 374; 10 Fed. Rep. 529; Paine v. Warren, 33 Fed. Rep. 357.

The remedy given by this section is cumulative, and is not intended to impair other remedies. U. S. v. Hutton, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 268; and see Colgate v. Compagnie Française, 23 Blatchf. (U. S.) 86; 23 Fed. Rep. 82. This section refers only to civil cases at common law, and does not apply to equity cases or to suits in admiralty. U. S. v. Babcock, 3 Dill. (U. S.) 566; Bischoffsheim v. Brown, 24 Blatchf. (U. S.) 175; 29 Fed. Rep. 341; U. S. v. 28 Packages, Gilp. (U. S.) 306. But see, as to equity cases, Coit v. North Carolina Gold Amalgamating Co., 9 Fed. Rep. 577. It applies to bankruptcy cases, to cases under revenue laws, and under forfeiture proceedings. In re Mendenhall, 9 Nat. Bank Reg. 285; U. S. v. Hughes, 12 Blatchf. (U. S.) 553; U. S. v. Distillery, 6 Biss. (U. S.) 483; U. S. v. Mason, 6 Biss. (U. S.) 350; U. S. v. 469 Barrels, 10 Int. Rev. Rec. 205. But see as to the two latter, U. S. v. 26 Packages, Gilp. (U. S.) 306; Finch v. Rikeman, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 301; Boyd v. U. S., 116 U. S. 616.

Since the books or writings are to be produced at the trial, the order must so require; and the application to the court and the order thereon, must be made before the trial. Sampson v. Johnson, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 107; U. S. Bank v. Kurtz, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 342; Merchants' Bank v. State Bank, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 201; Iasigi v. Brown, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 401; but see Central Bank v. Tayloe, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 427. The party asking for such books, etc., has no right to examine them before trial. Fost. Fed. Pract. § 372; Triplett v. Bank, 3 Cranch (C. C.) 646; Merchants' Bank v. State Bank, 3 Cliff. (U.

S.) 204; Paine v. Warren, 33 Fed. Rep. 357; Iasigi v. Brown, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 401; Guyot v. Hilton, 32 Fed. Rep. 743. But contra, 1 Thomp. Tr., § 734; citing U. S. v. Youngs, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 264; U. S. v. Hutton, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 269; Central Bank v. Tayloe, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 424; Jacques v. Collins, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 23; Finch v. Rikeman, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 301. And see Gregory v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 3 McCrary (U. S.) 374; 10 Fed. Rep. 529; Bronson v. Kenney, 3 McLean (U. S.) 180.

The "due notice" required to be given of the motion may be directed to the party or his attorney, but must be served a reasonable time before the production of the paper is required, and must contain information that a motion will be made for a nonsuit, or for a judgment by default. Geyger v. Geyger, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 332; U. S. v. 469 Barrels, 10 Int. Rev. Rec. 205; Macomber v. Clarke, 3 Cranch (C. C.) 347; Bas v. Steele, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 381. If the notice was not served a sufficient length of time before the trial, the trial may be postponed. Geyger v. Geyger, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 332; U. S. Bank v. Kurtz, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 342. A court is not authorized to render a judgment of nonsuit upon the failure of the party to comply with the notice. The notice is merely a preliminary proceeding to enable the party to bring before the court the motion for the order to produce; and when that motion is made, the party called on has a right to be heard, and he is not bound to produce the books called for until the court shall order him to do so. Thompson v. Selden, 20 How. (U. S.) 194, 198.

The motion requisite must be made before the day of trial. Central Bank v. Tayloe, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 427; U. S. Bank v. Kurtz, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 342; Iasigi v. Brown, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 401; Sampson v. Johnson, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 107. The power to grant a motion for the production of books or writings is discretionary, but should be firmly exercised in a proper case. The court may at once refuse the motion, or make the rule absolute. Where an attempt to conceal or destroy the books or papers is shown, the rule should be made absolute without delay; but in the absence of fraudulent intent, and of certainty as to their pertinency, an order nisi should be made, which leaves the party to show cause at the trial for not producing. Merchants'

Bank v. State Bank, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 201; Iasigi v. Brown, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 401; Dunham v. Riley, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 126. It has been held in a case which supports the right of the party to an inspection before trial, that the order may require the adverse party to produce the documents and leave them with the clerk, or else to furnish copies to his opponent. Jacques v. Collins, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 23.

The court cannot compel compliance with the order, since the penalty for a failure to produce the documents is nonsuit or default. The cause must be at issue, and the circumstances must be those in which a discovery would be decreed in chancery. The applicant must show that the paper exists, that it is in possession or control of the party, and that it is pertinent to the issue. These facts may be shown by an ex parte affidavit of the applicant, but not by affidavit of his attorney. Merchants' Bank v. State Bank, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 201; Triplett v. Bank, 3 Cranch (C. C.) 646; Jacques v. Collins, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 23; Finch v. Rikeman, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 301; Iasigi v. Brown, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 401; Bas v. Steele, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 381; U. S. v. 28 Packages, Gilp. (U. S.) 306; Buell v. Conn. Ins. Co., 1 Cin. L. Bul. 51.

Although a bill of discovery would not lie against the United States, it seems that an order under this statute may be made against them. U. S. v. Youngs, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 264; U. S. v. Hutton, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 269.

Under this section the right to relief by bill of discovery is taken away only where a complete remedy is given by the statute. U. S. v. Hutton, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 269; Bryant v. Leyland, 6 Fed. Rep. 127. That a bill of discovery has been filed, is no bar, nor is the fact that a copy of the paper has been filed in answer to the bill of discovery, unless the discovery has been completely effectual. Iasigi v. Brown, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 401. The time, place, and manner of the production, is in the discretion of the court, which is governed by the practice in chancery. Gregory v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 10 Fed. Rep. 529; 3 McCrary (U. S.) 374.

For additional adjudications under this statute, see Hylton v. Brown, 1 Wash. (U. S.) 208; Vasse v. Miffin, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 519; Maye v. Carbery, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 336; U. S. Bank v. Wilson, 3 Cranch (C. C.) 213; Waller v. Stewart, 4 Cranch (C. C.) 532; U.

the opponent to produce papers in his possession or power, the regular time for calling for their production is not until the party requiring them has entered upon his case; until which time the other party may in strictness refuse to produce them, and no cross-examination as to their contents is then allowable.¹ Still to insist upon this rule is considered rigorous, and, as a close adherence to it would be inconvenient, judges are unwilling to enforce it.²

In many of the States, however, and in the Federal courts also, the above rule at common law has been altered by statute, and the courts have been empowered to secure by an order the production at the trial of such documents in the hands of one party as may be material to his opponent's case.³

c. DOCUMENTS IN THE HANDS OF THIRD PARTIES.—Where papers are in the hands of a third party, who has a right to keep them, their production at the trial may be constrained in favor of a party who has an interest in them, and a consequent title to use them in evidence, by a subpœna duces tecum.⁴

PROFANITY.—See BLASPHEMY, vol. 2, p. 423.

PROFESSION; PROFESSIONAL.—(Compare BUSINESS, vol. 2, p. 699; EMPLOYMENT, vol. 6, p. 637; LICENSE, vol. 13, p. 538; OCCUPATION; TRADE)—See note 5.

PROFITS.—(See also MESNE PROFITS; LOSSES).—The advantage realized in money by the sale of property at a price exceeding the cost;⁶ or the receipts of any enterprise or busi-

S. v. Three Tons of Coal, 6 Biss. (U. S.) 379; Williams Mower Co. v. Raynor, 7 Biss. (U. S.) 245; Beardsley v. Littell, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 105; Johnson v. Donaldson, 18 Blatchf. (U. S.) 287; 3 Fed. Rep. 22; Schmieder v. Barney, 32 Fed. Rep. 657; Brewster v. Spring Co., 34 Fed. Rep. 679.

1. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 563; Graham v. Dyster, 2 Stark. 23; Sinclair v. Gray, 9 Fla. 71.

It is premature before the jury are sworn and the trial commenced for either party to call on the other to produce a paper which he has been notified to produce on the trial. Hylton v. Brown, 1 Wash. (U. S.) 298.

2. 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), § 1817; Sideways v. Dyson, 2 Stark. 49; 3 E. C. L. 312; Calvert v. Flower, 7 C. & P. 386; 32 E. C. L. 350.

3. See, for instance, Rose v. King, 5 S. & R. (Pa.) 241; Congdon v. Aylsworth (R. I. 1888), 15 Atl. Rep. 73. And 19 C. of L.—17

compare BILL OF DISCOVERY, vol. 2, p. 206.

4. 1 Greenl. Ev. (14th ed.), § 558; 2 Taylor Ev. (8th ed.), §§ 1240, et seq.; 1 Whart. Ev. (3d ed.), §§ 150, 377.

.See SUBPœNA.

5. Professional Artist.—A milliner is not a "professional artist," within the meaning of a United States immigration act. United States v. Thompson, 41 Fed. Rep. 28.

Professional Capacity.—See CAPACITY, vol. 2, p. 722, n.

Professional Employment can only relate to some of those occupations universally classed as professions, the general duties and character of which courts must be expected to understand judicially. Pennock v. Fuller, 41 Mich. 155. See also Bronson v. Newberry, 2 Doug. (Mich.) 52; People v. McAllister, 19 Mich. 217.

Professional Men.—LIBEL AND SLANDER, vol. 13, p. 312.

6. Abbott's Law Dict. Matthew v. Crosby, 56 N. H. 21.

ness exceeding the expenses incident to it.¹ The advantage

In estimating the profits of a corporation the assets, resources, and funds of the company must consist of cash on hand, and other property, and if such assets exceed the liabilities, then profit exists. Hubbard v. Weare, 30 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 176; Miller v. Beavish, 69 Iowa 278. See also Lee v. Neuchatel Asphalt Co., 27 L. J., Ch. 623; People v. Savings Union, 72 Cal. 203.

Under the English Income Tax Act 5 & 6 Vict., ch. 35, §§ 60-100, the "profits" assessable is the amount got from the property or business, minus the cost of getting it. Per Jessel, M. R.; Mersey Docks v. Lucas, 32 W. R. 34. See further Erichsen v. Last, 8 Q. B. Div. 414; Russell v. Town & County Bank, 58 L. J., P. C. 8. In the decision in Mersey Docks v. Lucas, it is laid down that excess of earnings over expenditures are profits, even though such excess had to be applied in reduction of a past debt.

Partnership or Company Established for Any Purpose of Profit.—A mutual benefit society formed by several persons, being partners or shareholders who subscribe money and carry on business substantially for the benefit of the individual members among themselves, and not for the benefit of the society, is not such a partnership or company. Baer v. Bromley, 11 Eng. L. & Eq. 414; 16 Jur. 450. See also Commercial League Assoc. v. People, 90 Ill. 166; State v. Mutual Protection Assoc., 26 Ohio St. 19. In the following cases held to be such a company: Farmer v. State, 69 Tex. 561; Bolton v. Bolton, 73 Me. 299; State v. Critchett, 37 Minn. 13; State v. Farmers' etc. Assoc., 18 Neb. 281. See also BENEFICIAL ASSOCIATIONS, vol. 2, p. 124.

Profits of a Partnership include the rise in value of partnership assets. Robinson v. Ashton, L. R., 20 Eq. 35. As to what sharing of profits constitutes the relation of partnership, see PARTNERSHIP.

1. Abbott's Law Dict.; People v. Niagara Co., 4 Hill (N. Y.) 19; Freeman v. Freeman, 142 Mass. 102; Providence Rubber Co. v. Goodyear, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 788.

The word "profits" has a fixed and definite meaning, and imports the net amount made after deducting any proper expenses incident to the business. Jones v. Davidson, 2 Sneed (Tenn.) 452. The usual, ordinary, and correct meaning of the word "profits" is the excess of receipts over expenditures; that is, net earnings. Connolly v. Davidson, 15 Minn. 519.

The expression "profits of a business" means the receipts, deducting current expenses; and is equivalent to net receipts. Depreciation of buildings in which the business is carried on, though they were erected by expenditure of the capital invested, is not ordinarily or necessarily considered in estimating the profits. Eyster v. Centennial Board of Finance, 94 U. S. 500.

The profits of a company are not such sum as may remain after the payment of every debt, but are the excess of ordinary receipts over expenses properly chargeable to revenue account. Mills v. Northern Ry. of Buenos Ayres Co., 5 Ch. 621, 631; Birch v. Cropper, Re Bridgewater Nav., 14 App. Ca. 525; Lee v. Neuchatel Co., 58 L. J. Ch. 409.

Profits and Income Distinguished.—It is undoubtedly true that "profits" and "income" are sometimes used as synonymous terms; but strictly speaking, "income" means that which comes in, or is received from any business or investment of capital without reference to the outgoing expenditures; while "profits" generally mean the gain which is made upon any business or investment when both receipts and payments are taken into the account. "Income," when applied to the affairs of individuals, expresses the same idea that revenue does when applied to the affairs of a State or nation; and no one would think of denying that our government has any revenue because the expenditures for a given period may exceed the amount of receipts. People v. Niagara Co., 4 Hill (N. Y.) 23.

Within English Income Tax.—After a remarkable conflict of judicial opinion and ultimately by the decision of the House of Lords, Lords Blackburn, Fitzgerald and Bramwell dissenting, it has been ruled that bonuses by an insurance company to participating policy holders, are profits within the meaning of the English Income Tax Act. Last v. London Assur. Co., 10 App. Cas. 438. See New York Ins. Co. v. Stiles, 14 App. C. 381; Mersey Loan Co. v.

which land promises to the owner by way of compensation for its use. The phrase "rents, issues, and profits of lands" does not import that the land has been sold and an advance in price realized.¹

PROFITS À PRENDRE.—See also EASEMENTS, vol. 6, p. 142.

I. Definition, 259.

1. In General, 259.

2. Appurtenant, 260.

3. In Gross, 260.

[261.

II. Distinguished From an Easement,

III. How Acquired or Created, 262.

I. DEFINITION.—1. In General.—Profit à Prendre is a right to Woolton, 4 Times Rep. 164; Gresham Assur. Co. v. Stiles, 24 Q. B. D. 500.

Profits as Stock Dividends.—See DIVIDENDS, vol. 5, p. 736.

Profits Used in Construction.—Monies used by a railroad company to replace an old and worn-out bridge by another of like materials and dimension, are not liable to internal revenue tax, as being "profits used for construction." Hartford etc. R. Co. v. Grant, 9 Blatchf. (U. S.) 542.

Where a wooden bridge is replaced by a much more costly stone bridge, the earnings adequate to pay for the latter, beyond the expense of building anew a like wooden bridge, are to be deemed "profits used for construction." But if the cost of such stone bridge is charged to the expense account of the company, and the whole amount of such account for the year, including such cost, is not more than a proper percentage of the gross receipts of the company to cover all proper ordinary current expenses, and the depreciation of its entire property, such cost is not to be deemed "profits used for construction." Hartford etc. R. Co. v. Grant, 9 Blatchf. (U. S.) 542. See also Grant v. Hartford etc. R. Co., 93 U. S. 225.

Net Profits and profits are, for all legal purposes, synonymous expressions, but the returns themselves are often called gross profits; hence it becomes necessary to call profits net profits to avoid confusion. Lindsay on Partnership 15; Story on Partnership, § 23; Connolly v. Davidson, 15 Minn. 519; Fuller v. Miller, 105 Mass. 103; Wallace v. Bebee, 12 Allen (Mass.) 354. See also NET PROFITS.

Commissions may be considered as profits for some purposes; for example, a participation in commissions has been held such a participation in profits as to constitute the participants partners. Bouvier's Law Dict. citing Chap v. Cramond, 4 B. & Ald. 663; 2 H. Blackstone 235. Commissions received upon the sale of a pirated map are profits which must be accounted for by the commission merchant on a bill by the proprietor of the copyright. 2 Curt. (U. S.) 608.*

Expected Profits, as the proper subject of insurance, see INSURANCE, vol. 14, p. 326; as the measure of damages, see DAMAGES, vol. 5, p. 32; MARKET VALUE; WARRANTY.

1. Abbott's Law Dict.

Rents and Profits.—The words "rents and profits" in a devise may be so construed as to authorize a sale of the land when necessary to raise a sum so as to effect the object of the testator. Schermerhorne v. Schermerhorne, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 73. See LEGACIES AND DEVISES, vol. 13, p. 113. The rents and profits of a trust estate do not include purchase money received by the trustee from a sale of land rescinded through the purchaser's abandonment of the contract. Mansfield v. Alwood, 84 Ill. 497.

In an order against an innocent occupier to account for "rents and profits," the latter word means profits in the nature of rent, and as arising from the land, and not such profits as may have been made by carrying on a business—e. g., a colliery upon the land. Errington v. Morewood, 29 S. J. 320; W. N. (85) 51. See also RENTS AND PROFITS.

"The rents and profits of an estate, the income or net income are all equivalent expressions." Andrews v. Boyd, 5 Me. 202; Earl v. Rowe, 35 Me. 420.

take either the fruit or products of the land of another, or the materials which constitute it.¹

2. Appurtenant.—This right of profit à prendre, if enjoyed by reason of holding a certain other estate, is regarded in the light of an easement appurtenant to such estate.²

3. In Gross.—Where the right of profit à prendre belongs to an individual, distinct from ownership in other lands, it takes the

"Under the term 'profit' is comprehended 'the produce of the soil, whether it arise above or below the surface, as herbage, wood, turf, coal, minerals, stones, also fish in a pond or running water.'" Jones v. Britton (N. Car., 1889), 9 S. E. Rep. 562, following Bouv. L. Dict.

1. Doe v. Wood, 2 B. & Ald. 724; Wait's Actions & Def., vol. 2, p. 655; Pierce v. Keator, 70 N. Y. 421. The right to take sea weed from another's land is the right to a profit à prendre. Hill v. Lord, 48 Me. 99. See Pickering v. Noyes, 4 B. & C. 639; 10 E. C. L. 429; Wickham v. Hawker, 7 M. & W. 63; Littlefield v. Maxwell, 31 Me. 134.

The right to take fish from another's unnavigable stream is a profit à prendre. Cobb v. Davenport, 33 N. J. L. 223; Wickham v. Hawker, 7 M. & W. 63; Waters v. Lilley, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 145; Tinicum Fishing Co. v. Carter, 61 Pa. St. 21. A contract that one may take coal for his salt works from the land of another, is a right of profit à prendre. Huff v. McCauley, 53 Pa. St. 206; Manning v. Wasdale, 5 A. & E. 758; 31 E. C. L. 433; Clark v. Way, 11 Rich. (S. Car.) 621.

Mining.—The grant of an exclusive right to all the coal in a certain lot of land is a corporeal grant—a part of the land itself. But a grant of a right to dig coal in such a lot, and carry it away, is an incorporeal hereditament. A right of profit à prendre, which does not interfere with the right of the owner of the land to mine in the same lot. See generally MINES AND MINING, vol. 15, p. 499.

Examples of Profits a Prendre.—The right to enter upon the lands of another for any of the following purposes has been held to be a right to take a profit in the soil: To cut grass, Viner, tit., Prescription; for pasturage, Cro. Eliz. 180, 363; for the purposes of hunting, Pickering v. Noyes, 4 B. & C. 639; 10

E. C. L. 429; Wickham v. Hawker, 7 M. & W. 63. So also to take away drifting sand from the beach. Blewett v. Tregonning, 3 A. & E. 554; 30 E. C. L. 151; Mervin v. Wheeler, 41 Conn. 25; or to pile wood and lumber thereon for the purpose of sale and shipment, Littlefield v. Maxwell, 31 Me. 134.

A claim to enter another man's land and dig a hole there can hardly be called a "profit à prendre." Maule, J., in Peter v. Daniel, 5 C. B. 568. Washb. on Easem. (4th ed.) *80.

2. Post v. Pearsall, 22 Wend. (N.Y.) 425; Pierce v. Keator, 70 N. Y. 421; Huff v. McCauley, 53 Pa. St. 209; Huntington v. Asher, 96 N. Y. 610; Washb. on Easem., p. 8.

"It would be difficult to treat of easements without embracing the right of taking profits in another's land which one may enjoy in connection with the occupancy of the estate to which such right is united. Washb. on Easem. p. *4.

This right or profit à prendre appurtenant is expressly included in the definition of easements by the court in Ritger v. Parker, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 145. See also Huntington v. Asher, 96 N. Y. 610; Karmuler v. Krotz, 18 Iowa 352; Owen v. Field, 102 Mass. 103; 2 Wait's Actions and Def. 656.

"Still another class of quasi easements are profits à prendre. They differ only in the nature of the advantage derived from the servient tenement." 2 Wait's Act. and Def. 656.

"It is immaterial, however, whether we call it" (the right to take iron ore from one estate appurtenant to another) "an easement or a right of profit à prendre annexed to land. It is the same in nature, and is such a right as can be annexed to other land by express grant, and will pass as appurtenant to it." Grubb v. Grubb, 74 Pa. St. 73.

In case of profit à prendre, it seems to be held uniformly that if enjoyed in connection with a certain estate, they character of an interest or estate in the land itself, rather than that of a proper easement,¹ and may be held in fee, for life, or for years.²

II. DISTINGUISHED FROM AN EASEMENT.—Profits à prendre differ from easements, in that the former are rights of profit, and the latter are mere rights of convenience without profit.³ But the principal distinction is between easements and profits à prendre in gross, the latter being held independently of any dominant are regarded as easements appurtenant thereto. Goodrich v. Burbank, 12 Allen (Mass.) 461.

1. Post v. Pearsall, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 43; Washb. on Easem. p. 9; Pierce v. Keator, 70 N. Y. 421; Huff v. McCauley, 53 Pa. St. 209; Huntington v. Asher, 96 N. Y. 610; Goodrich v. Burbank, 12 Allen (Mass.) 460.

"If the easement consists in a right of profit à prendre, if granted to one in gross, it is treated as an estate and may therefore be for life or inheritance." Washb. on Easem. p. 9; Tinicum v. Carter, 61 Pa. St. 22.

In Post v. Pearsall, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 433, the court by Walworth, Ch., said: "For a profit à prendre in the land of another, when not granted in favor of some dominant tenement, cannot be said to be an easement, but an interest or estate in the land itself."

2. Washb. on Easem. (4th ed.) *78; Huff v. McCauley, 53 Pa. St. 210; Goodrich v. Burbank, 12 Allen (Mass.) 461; Tinicum Fishing Co. v. Carter, 61 Pa. St. 21.

Profits à prendre are both assignable and inheritable.

Post v. Pearsall, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 325; Washb. on Easem. (4th ed.) *79. et seq.; Goodrich v. Burbank, 12 Allen (Mass.) 461. The grantee in fee of a right of common, in gross, and without number, may alienate it, and it descends to his heirs. Leyman v. Abeel, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 30. See also Huntington v. Asher, 96 N. Y. 604; Phillips v. Rhodes, 7 Met. (Mass.) 324; Gloninger Coal Co. v. Franklin, 55 Pa. St. 14.

3. Abb. L. Dict.; Gale on Easem. 1; Hall's Profits à Prendre 1; EASEMENTS, vol. 6, p. 142; Huff v. McCauley, 53 Pa. St. 206; Blewett v. Tregonning, 3 A. & E. 554; 30 E. C. L. 151; Race v. Ward, 4 E. & B. 702; 82 E. C. L. 700;

Manning v. Wasdale, 5 A. & E. 758; 31 E. C. L. 433.

A profit à prendre is, in its nature, corporeal, and is capable of living, while easements are not, and may exist independently without connection with or being appendant to other property. Pierce v. Keator, 70 N. Y. 421; Post v. Pearsall, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 433.

The distinction between an easement and a merely personal right to the profits of land was illustrated in the case of Pierce v. Keator, 70 N. Y. 419. In that case the facts were these: The plaintiff's intestate, owning a farm, granted a strip of it to a railroad company, reserving to himself the privilege of mowing and cultivating the surplus ground of the strip not required for railroad purposes. By foreclosure of a mortgage on the farm, it became the property of the defendant. The deed of foreclosure purported to convey all the farm excepting the strip already conveyed to the railroad company. The defendant claimed that by this deed the privilege reserved to the plaintiff's intestate passed to him as an easement appurtenant to the estate, and proceeded to reap and carry away the wheat sowed by the plaintiff's intestate, for which wrong the action was brought. The court of appeals sustained the distinction between easements and rights to the profits of land, holding the reservation in question to be the latter; and as it was not necessary or even useful to the cultivation of the farm, and as it was not to the grantor, as owner of the farm or for the benefit of the farm, or even to the grantor, his heirs and assigns, the reservation created a mere personal privilege which was not appurtenant to the farm, and did not pass under the foreclosure deed.

estate,¹ whereas, for the existence of an easement, two estates, the dominant and servient, are necessary.²

III. HOW ACQUIRED OR CREATED.—Profits à prendre are acquired by grant or prescription,³ and never by custom.⁴

1. Huntington v. Asher, 96 N. Y. 604; Bainb. Mines (ed. 1871), p. 237. A right of profit à prendre which may be held apart from the possession of land, differs therein from an easement, which requires a dominant tenement for its existence. Grubb v. Grubb, 74 Pa. St. 33; Hill v. Lord, 48 Me. 96; Pierce v. Keator, 70 N. Y. 421; Hall v. Ionia, 38 Mich. 498; Leyman v. Abeel, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 30.

2. See EASEMENTS, vol. 6, p. 142.

Taking Water. When a Profit à Prendre and When an Easement.—The right to enter upon the close of another, and take water for domestic purposes, from any natural fountain, as a pond, Manning v. Wasdale, 5 A. & E. 758; or a running spring; Race v. Ward, 82 E. C. L. 700; has been held to be an easement only, sustainable by proof of custom by the inhabitants. The grounds upon which these decisions rest are, that running water is not a product of the soil, whether above or below the surface, and that it does not remain for any appreciable period of time in any one place. The courts, in these cases, expressly affirm that the right to water in wells, or cisterns, would be an interest in the land, or a right to a profit à prendre. Hill v. Lord, 48 Me. 100.

In the following cases the right to water was held to be an easement. Bissell v. Grant, 35 Conn. 288; Spensley v. Valentine, 34 Wis. 154; Borst v. Empie, 5 N. Y. 34.

Although there is a distinction made between the grant of water and of a profit à prendre, where water is as it may be a subject of sale in gross as a thing of value, it does not seem to be violating any principle of law to regard it as a species of profit à prendre, and therefore a subject of separate grant. Washb. on Easem. (4th ed.) *12; Hall v. Ionia, 38 Mich. 499; Goodrich v. Burbank, 12 Allen (Mass.) 459; Owen v. Field, 102 Mass. 100; Hill v. Shorey, 42 Vt. 614.

3. Bird v. Higginson, 2 Ad. & E. 606; 29 E. C. L. 177; Worcester v. Green, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 425; Bryon v. Whistler, 8 B. & C. 288; 15 E. C. L.

219. See Cronkhite v. Cronkhite, 34 N. Y. 323; Sheets v. Allen, 89 Pa. St. 471.

"A right of way, or a right of passage for water (where it does not create an interest in the land), is an incorporeal right, and stands upon the same footing with other incorporeal rights, such as rights of common, rents, advowsons, etc. It lies not in livery, but in grant; and a freehold interest in it cannot be created or passed (even if a chattel interest may, which I think it cannot), otherwise than by deed." Hewlins v. Shippam, 5 B. & C. 221; 11 E. C. L. 207. To the same effect are Duirmeen v. Rich, 22 Wis. 528; Cook v. Stearns, 11 Mass. 533.

"The right reserved being an incorporeal hereditament could pass only by deed, and, were it otherwise, the assignment of such an interest, since the Statute of Frauds, must be in writing." Thompson v. Gregory, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 81.

4. Smith v. Floyd, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 529; Littlefield v. Maxwell, 31 Me. 141; Moor v. Carey, 42 Me. 29; Merwin v. Wheeler, 41 Conn. 24; Cobb v. Davenport, 33 N. J. L. 223; Grimstead v. Marlow, 4 T. R. 717; Perley v. Langley, 7 N. H. 233; Pearsall v. Vost, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 111; 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 425. "It is clear that there cannot be a custom to take a profit in alieno solo." Blewett v. Tregonning, 3 A. & E. 554; 30 E. C. L. 151; Lockwood v. Wood, 6 Q. B. 50; Race v. Ward, 4 E. L. & E. 702; 82 E. C. L. 700.

Though custom may support a claim for an easement, nothing less than prescription can sustain a claim for a profit à prendre in alieno solo. Hill v. Lord, 48 Me. 98; Gateward's Case, 6 Coke 60; Fowler v. Sanders, Cro. Jac. 446; Waters v. Lilley, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 148; Manning v. Wasdale, 5 A. & E. 758; 31 E. C. L. 433.

If one would prescribe for a profit à prendre in alieno solo, he must allege it in a que estate; in other words, if one would prescribe for such a right in another's soil, as authorizes the taking or having what is, by legal intentment, a profit therein, he must allege

PROHIBITION.—(See also INJUNCTIONS, vol. 10, p. 777; JURISDICTION, vol. 12, p. 244; MANDAMUS, vol. 14, p. 88; WRITS.)

- I. Nature of the Writ, 263.
- II. What Courts May Issue the Writ, 266.
 1. Generally, 266.
 2. State Courts, 267.
 3. Federal Courts, 267.
- III. When Granted, 268.
 1. Generally, 268.
 2. When Right Is Clear, 270.
 3. Doubtful Cases, 271.
 4. Time of Issuing the Writ, 271.
 5. Amount in Controversy, 272.
 6. Where Judge Is Interested, 272.
 7. To Prevent Execution of Judgment Appealed from, 272.
- IV. When Refused, 273.
 1. Generally, 273.
 2. Collection of Taxes, 274.
 3. Issue or Enforcement of Execution, 275.
- V. Against Whom Issued, 275.
 1. Generally, 275.
 2. Courts, 276.
 - (a) Generally, 276.
 - (b) County Courts, 277.
 - (c) Justices' Courts, 277.
 - (d) Courts Martial, 277.
 3. Coroners, 278.
 4. Executive Officers, 278.
 5. Referees and Commissioners, 278.
- VI. Procedure, 279.
 1. In General, 279.
 2. Parties, 280.
 3. When Writ May Issue, 281.
 4. Notice, 281.
 5. Service, 281.
 6. Answer, 281.
 7. Variance, 282.
 8. Motion to Quash, 282.
 9. Prohibition Issued in Excess of Jurisdiction, 282.
 10. Enforcement of Prohibition, 282.
 11. Costs, 282.

I. NATURE OF THE WRIT.—A writ of prohibition is an extraordinary writ issuing out of a court of superior jurisdiction and directed to an inferior court, commanding it to cease entertaining jurisdiction in a cause or proceeding over which it has no control; or where such inferior tribunal assumes to entertain a cause over which it has jurisdiction, but goes beyond its legitimate powers and transgresses the bounds prescribed to it by law.¹

it as pertaining to some specified lot of land, owned by himself, and that he and all those, whose estate he has in the land, have from time immemorial exercised the right which he now claims. Littlefield v. Maxwell, 31 Me. 141, and other cases cited above.

Again, this right is prescribed for in gross, and not as appurtenant to other lands. The right, if it exists, is a profit à prendre, and not a mere easement, and such rights must generally and perhaps universally be prescribed for not in gross, but as incident to other premises for the benefit of which and in connection with which the rights are to be exercised. Merwin v. Wheeler, 41 Conn. 25.

A custom that all the inhabitants of a particular town, for the time being, have the right to the depasture of uninclosed woodlands of individual proprietors within the town, is not a mere easement like a right of way, or a right to flow water. It is a right to take a profit, and for such a right the commoner must prescribe in respect to some estate, and not in respect to mere inhabitancy. The custom is therefore void. Smith v. Floyd, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 522.

1. See 3 Bl. Com. 112; Quimbo Appo v. People, 20 N. Y. 531; Thomas v. Mead, 36 Mo. 232; Mauver v. Mitchell, 53 Cal. 291; Spring Valley Water Works v. San Francisco, 52 Cal. 112.

In United States v. Hoffman, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 158, the court by Miller, J., says: "The writ of prohibition, as its name imports, is one which commands the person to whom it is directed not to do something which by the suggestion of the relator, the court is informed he is about to do. If the thing be already done, it is manifest that the writ of prohibition cannot undo it, for that would require an affirmative act, and the only effect of a writ of prohibition is to sus-

Prohibition is a remedy provided by the common law against the encroachment of jurisdiction.¹ Like other common law remedies it is regarded as generally applicable in this country, unless abolished by positive statutory enactment.² Being a preventive rather than a remedial process, it will not operate to restrain the party named therein generally, or from doing any act save proceeding in the pending suit or matter.³ It should be issued only in cases of extreme necessity, and not for grievances which may be redressed by ordinary proceedings at law or in equity, and it is not demandable as a matter of right, but of sound judicial discretion, to be granted or withheld, according to the circumstances of each particular case,⁴ and since it is discretionary with the court whether to grant or deny the writ, its order refusing to grant it is not appealable.⁵ The proceeding for prohibition is not to be regarded as a continuation of the action or proceeding prohibited, but is collateral thereto, distinct from, and independent thereof, being intended to arrest that proceeding and prevent its further prosecution by a court having no jurisdiction thereof. It is the means, in other words, by which the superior court exercises its supervisory power over the inferior court and keeps it within the limits of its rightful jurisdiction.⁶

While prohibition and injunction have one common object, the restraining of legal proceedings, and each is resorted to only when all other remedies for attaining the desired result are unavailing, there is however, this difference: prohibition operates upon the court, and the judge and officers who disregard it may be punished; an injunction operates upon the party alone to restrain him, but does not interfere with the court itself.⁷

So prohibition and mandamus are different, in that prohibition arrests, while mandamus commands action. Prohibition may be used to arrest an unauthorized act of an officer or person clothed with authority, and mandamus may be employed to compel the pend the action and to prevent any further proceedings in the prohibited direction."

1. People v. Works, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 486; Thomson v. Tracy, 60 N. Y. 31.

2. Arnold v. Shields, 5 Dana (Ky.) 18; 30 Am. Dec. 669. See Rickey v. Superior Ct., 59 Cal. 661.

3. Thomson v. Tracy, 60 N. Y. 31; Ex parte Pennsylvania, 109 U. S. 174; Coker v. Superior Court, 58 Cal. 178; San José Sav. Bank v. Sierra Lumber Co., 63 Cal. 179; Daniel v. Smith, 64 Cal. 346.

4. People v. Westbrook, 89 N. Y. 152; Ex parte Hamilton, 51 Ala. 62; Kinlock v. Harvey, Harp. (S. Car.) 508; Sweet v. Hulbert, 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 315; Gray v. Court of Magistrates, 3 McCord (S. Car.) 175; State v.

Judge, 21 La. Ann. 123; State v. Judge, 38 La. Ann. 921; State v. Seay, 23 Mo. App. 623; Spring Valley Water Works v. San Francisco, 52 Cal. 117; Chester v. Colby, 52 Cal. 519; Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Superior Ct., 59 Cal. 471; Martin v. Thompson, 62 Cal. 618; 45 Am. Rep. 663; Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Superior Ct., 63 Cal. 607; Washburn v. Phillips, 2 Met. (Mass.) 296.

5. People v. Westbrook, 89 N. Y. 152. See Bishop of St. David v. Lucy, Ld. Raym. 539. Compare People v. Justices, 81 N. Y. 500.

6. Mayo v. James, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 17. See Ex parte Hamilton, 51 Ala. 62.

7. Mayo v. James, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 17.

performance of an act enjoined by law, with the condition in each case that the party has no other plain, speedy and adequate remedy. But prohibition as a remedy is not in every respect, the exact converse of mandamus. In prohibition it must be shown to the court that the inferior court or person has exceeded the powers conferred by law, and the court intervenes to prevent further proceedings without or in excess of such power. Mandamus may be resorted to whenever an officer or person refuses to perform a duty enjoined by law, although the act may have been an isolated one disconnected with any proceedings leading up to that which the recalcitrant official or individual refused to perform.¹ Like other extraordinary remedies, such as mandamus, for example, prohibition is not applicable where other adequate remedies exist.² It can not be made to perform the functions of an appeal,³ a writ of error, or a certiorari,⁴ its purpose being,

1. Maurer v. Mitchell, 53 Cal. 289; People v. Board of Election Commrs., 54 Cal. 404; Thomas v. Mead, 36 Mo. 232.

2. State v. Burton, 11 Wis. 50; State v. Braun, 31 Wis. 600; Sherlock v. Jacksonville, 17 Fla. 93; Cooper v. Stocker, 9 Rich. (S. Car.) 292; State v. Hudnal, 2 Nott & M. (S. Car.) 419; People v. Seward, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 518; Ex parte Braudlacht, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 367; 38 Am. Dec. 593; Ex parte Hamilton, 51 Ala. 62; Ex parte Mobile etc. R. Co., 63 Ala. 349; Sasseen v. Hammond, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 672.

3. State v. Judge, 11 La. Ann. 696; State v. Rightor, 32 La. Ann. 1182; State v. Judge, 21 La. Ann. 123; People v. Circuit Ct., 11 Mich. 393; McDonald v. Elfe, 1 Nott & M. (S. Car.) 501; State v. Wakeley, 2 Nott & M. (S. Car.) 410; State v. Nathan, 4 Rich. (S. Car.) 513; Ex parte Peterson, 33 Ala. 74; Ex parte Reid, 50 Ala. 439; People v. Marine Ct., 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 341; People v. Nichols, 79 N. Y. 582; Symes v. Symes, Burr. 813; Wreden v. Superior Ct., 55 Cal. 504; State v. Municipal Ct., 26 Minn. 162; State v. District Ct., 26 Minn. 233; State v. Wilcox, 24 Minn. 143; State v. Judge, 20 La. Ann. 252; State v. Monroe, 33 La. Ann. 923; State v. Judge, 33 La. Ann. 1284; Powelson v. Lockwood, 82 Cal. 613; Mastin v. Sloan, 98 Mo. 252; Turner v. Forsyth, 78 Ga. 683; State v. Cory, 35 Minn. 178; State v. Seay, 23 Mo. App. 623; Levy v. Wilson, 69 Cal. 105; Coker v. Superior Ct., 58 Cal. 178; Walcott v. Wells (Nev. 1890), 24 Pac. Rep. 367; San Jose Sav. Bank v. Sierra Lumber Co., 63 Cal. 179;

Daniel v. Smith, 64 Cal. 346; Bliss v. Superior Ct., 62 Cal. 543; In re Berridge, 4 B. & S. 187.

The county court having jurisdiction to grant a new trial, a writ of prohibition will not lie to prevent the court from proceeding further in the case, respondent's remedy being by appeal, if any error was committed. In re Mason (Supreme Ct.), 4 N. Y. Supp. 664.

Prohibition will issue to restrain the superior court from vacating a judgment, permitting an amendment, and proceeding with a trial after the affirmation on appeal of a judgment in defendant's favor, entered on sustaining his demurrer to the complaint, plaintiff having refused to amend. The remedy by appeal is not speedy. Kirby v. Superior Ct., 68 Cal. 604.

4. Ex parte Ellyson, 20 Gratt. (Va.) 10; Supervisor of Bedford v. Wingfield, 27 Gratt. (Va.) 329; Hogan v. Guigon, 29 Gratt. (Va.) 705; Arnold v. Shields, 5 Dana (Ky.) 18; 30 Am. Dec. 669; Wilson v. Berkstresser, 45 Mo. 283; Cooper v. Stocker, 9 Rich. (S. Car.) 292; State v. Columbia etc. R. Co., 1 Rich. N. S. (S. Car.) 46; Ex parte Gordon, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 363; People v. Seward, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 518; Leonard v. Bartels, 4 Col. 95; Ex parte Williams, 4 Ark. 537; 39 Am. Dec. 246; People v. Nichols, 58 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 200; State v. Municipal Ct., 26 Minn. 162; Ex parte Smith, 23 Ala. 94; Russell v. Jacoway, 33 Ark. 191; People v. District Ct., 7 Colo. 462; State v. Columbia etc. R. Co. 1 S. Car. 46; People v. Clute, 42 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 157; People v. Hills, 5 Utah 410; State v. Kyle, 8 W. Va. 711; Ensign not to correct errors, but to prevent an usurpation of jurisdiction.¹

II. WHAT COURTS MAY ISSUE THE WRIT—1. Generally.—The courts of last resort in many of the States have conferred on them by constitutional or statutory provisions power to issue the writ of prohibition.² The power is not, however, always limited exclusively to these courts, and in some of the States the courts of general common law jurisdiction, such as the various circuit and district courts throughout the State, issue the writ to courts inferior to them to prevent the exercise of jurisdiction pertaining to the higher tribunal.³ But these courts must sustain to each other the relation of superior and inferior, and when the

Mfg. Co. v. McGinnis, 30 W. Va. 532; Ex parte Pennsylvania, 109 U. S. 174; People v. Ulster Co., 31 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 237; Cooper v. Stocker, 9 Rich. (S. Car.) 292; Low v. Crown Point Min. Co., 2 Nev. 75; People v. Marine Ct., 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 341; Sweet v. Hulbert, 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 312; State v. Burton, 11 Wis. 50; People v. Common Pleas, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 278; 18 Abb. (N. Y.) Pr. 438. To prevent the usurpation of an office quo warranto is the proper remedy. Buckner v. Veuve, 63 Cal. 304. Compare State v. Ridgell, 2 Bailey (S. Car.) §60; Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Superior Ct., 59 Cal. 471.

In Connecticut River R. Co. v. County Comm'rs, however, it was held that the fact that certiorari might lie after final judgment should not preclude the issue of the writ of prohibition.

1. A writ of prohibition will not issue to prevent an inferior court from trying an action once properly before it, but claimed to have been afterwards dismissed, or, if not dismissed, then transferred to the United States courts, as the question of the dismissal or transfer is one for that court to determine, and error in so doing is only reviewable on appeal. Walcott v. Wells, (Nev. 1890), 24 Pac. Rep. 367.

Const. Missouri art. 6, § 3, providing that the supreme court shall have control over the courts of appeal by mandamus, prohibition and certiorari only authorizes the writ of prohibition when the court of appeals has no jurisdiction over the matter which it is proceeding to determine. State v. St. Louis Ct. of Appeal, 99 Mo. 216.

As an order of the superior court directing one who has received property for the benefit of minors, by a deed of trust to pay for the support of the minors as guardian, is appealable under Code Civil Proc. California, § 963, subd. 3, a writ of prohibition will be denied. Murphy v. Superior Ct., 84 Cal. 592.

The denial of a jury by a justice of the peace on a trial for misdemeanor does not affect his jurisdiction; and the error, if any—for which there is a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy by appeal to the superior court—cannot be arrested or corrected by the writ of prohibition. Powelson v. Lockwood, 82 Cal. 613.

Judgment was rendered against defendant in an action before a justice of the peace. The defendant applied for a writ of prohibition to restrain the issuing of an execution, on the ground that the justice had exceeded his jurisdiction, the action involving the title to real estate. Held, that defendant's remedy was by appeal. Mancello v. Bellrude (Cal. 1886), 11 Pac. Rep. 501.

2. State v. Columbia, 16 S. Car. 412; State v. County Treasurer, 4 Rich. N. S. (S. Car.) 520; People v. Spiers, 4 Utah 385.

In California, the supreme and superior courts are peers in the exercise of original jurisdiction of prohibition. Santa Cruz Gap Turnpike etc. Co. v. Santa Clara Co., 62 Cal. 41.

3. Reese v. Lawless, 4 Bibb (Ky.) 394; Howard v. Pierce, 38 Mo. 206; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Spratt, 20 Fla. 122; State v. Seay, 23 Mo. App. 623.

A circuit judge has authority to grant writs of prohibition, or other original remedial writs which were grantable by judges at common law, and, when the writ is issued by him, though on an insufficient petition, or otherwise irregularly, it cannot be disregarded or disobeyed by the inferior tribunal to which it is directed, nor court which it is sought to prohibit is in no way subordinate or inferior to that in which relief is sought, it will not be allowed.¹

2. State Courts.—When the jurisdiction of the supreme court of a State is, under the constitution of the State, purely appellate, it has no power to grant a writ of prohibition, this not being the exercise of an appellate jurisdiction, nor in aid or furtherance of such jurisdiction.² But under a constitution conferring upon the supreme court of the State, power to issue any remedial writs necessary to give it a general supervision or control over inferior courts, the power to grant writs of prohibition rests with the supreme court, not with an inferior court having no supervisory powers.³ And where a constitution of a State confers jurisdiction upon the supreme court to issue writs of prohibition, the power granted is construed under such provision with reference to the writ as known at common law and is confined to cases where the act which it is sought to prohibit is of a judicial nature. A statute therefore which extends the remedy to acts which are either judicial or ministerial is unconstitutional.⁴

3. Federal Courts.—The Supreme court of the United States has power to issue writs of prohibition to the district courts when proceeding as courts of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction.⁵ The writ cannot be made to perform the office of an appeal or writ of error,⁶ and if appeal lies to the Supreme court, will the supreme court, in such case interfere by prohibition at the instance of the inferior tribunal, to restrain action under a writ irregularly issued. Ex parte Boothe, 64 Ala. 312.

The district court of the State of Louisiana is without jurisdiction to issue a writ of prohibition to a justice of the peace. Louisiana Const., art. 90, vests the supreme court with exclusive jurisdiction in the premises. State v. Judge, 39 La. Ann. 97.

1. High's Ex. L. Rem., § 785; Burch v. Hardwicke, 23 Gratt. (Va.) 51.

2. Memphis v. Halsey, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 210. See Sasseen v. Hammond, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 672.

3. High's Ex. L. Rem., § 786; Perry v. Shepherd, 78 N. Car. 83; Commonwealth v. Latham, 85 Va. 632; State v. Judge, 39 La. Ann. 97; Day v. Springfield, 102 Mass. 310. See State v. St. Louis Ct. of Appeal, 97 Mo. 276.

4. Camron v. Kenfield, 57 Cal. 550. See Le Conte v. Berkeley, 57 Cal. 269.

It has been held, however, that, under the organic act of Utah, which confers on the territorial legislature authority to legislate upon all "rightful subjects of legislation," the legislature has power to provide for the issuance of writs of prohibition to arrest the exercise of ministerial functions. Ducheneau v. House, 4 Utah 369; and that, under Code Civil Proc. Utah, § 982, a writ of prohibition might be issued against the exercise of ministerial functions, and to stay a justice of the peace from issuing an execution. Ducheneau v. House, 4 Utah 363.

5. U. S. Rev. St., § 688; United States v. Peters, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 129; Ex parte City Bank, 3 How. (U. S.) 294; Ex parte Gordon, 1 Black (U. S.) 503; United States v. Hoffman, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 158; Ex parte Warmouth, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 67; Ex parte Graham, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 541.

The United States Supreme court cannot interfere by prohibition to prevent the marshal from executing criminal process granted by the circuit court. It can only correct the proceedings of the circuit and district courts by prohibition, in the cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction expressly provided for by statute, and not in cases of conviction for piracy or slave trading. Ex parte Gordon, 1 Black. (U. S.) 503.

6. Ex parte Gordon, 1 Black. (U. S.) 503; Ex parte Warmouth, 17 Wall.

it has no power to issue prohibition until the appeal is taken.¹

III. WHEN GRANTED.—1. Generally.—The broad governing principle is that prohibition lies where a subordinate tribunal has no jurisdiction at all to deal with the cause or matter before it; or where, in the progress of a cause within its jurisdiction, some point arises for decision which the inferior court is incompetent to determine.² But a prohibition will not lie where the inferior court has jurisdiction to deal with the cause and with all matters necessarily arising therein, however erroneous its decision may be upon any point.³ The use of the writ of prohibition is not con-

(U. S.) 64; Ex parte Detroit R. Ferry Co., 104 U. S. 519.

1. Ex parte Warmouth, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 64.

2. Ex parte Smith, 34 Ala. 455; 23 Ala. 94; Ex parte Hill, 38 Ala. 429; Ex parte Greene, 29 Ala. 52; Atkins v. Siddons, 66 Ala. 453; Russell v. Jacoway, 33 Ark. 191; Ex parte Blackburn, 5 Ark. 27; Ex parte Williams, 4 Ark. 537; 38 Am. Dec. 46; Hanger v. Keating, 26 Ark. 51; Ex parte Little Rock, 26 Ark. 52; Stale v. Williams, 48 Ark. 227; Cariaga v. Dryden, 30 Cal. 246; People v. Superior Ct., 47 Cal. 81; Spring Valley Water Works v. San Francisco, 52 Cal. 111, 117; Maurer v. Mitchell, 53 Cal. 289; People v. Board of Election Comm'rs, 54 Cal. 404; Bandy v. Ransom, 54 Cal. 87; Clark v. Superior Ct., 55 Cal. 199; Wreden v. Superior Ct., 55 Cal. 504; Kalloch v. Superior Ct., 56 Cal. 231; Coker v. Superior Ct., 58 Cal. 178; Murphy v. Superior Ct., 58 Cal. 520; Spect v. Superior Ct., 59 Cal. 319; Sanborn v. Superior Ct., 60 Cal. 425; Gray v. Superior Ct., 61 Cal. 337; Day v. Superior Ct., 61 Cal. 490; Ah Goon v. Superior Ct., 61 Cal. 555; Farmers' etc. Union v. Thresher, 62 Cal. 407; Capital Sav. Bank v. Reel, 62 Cal. 425; Bliss v. Superior Ct., 62 Cal. 543; Martin v. Thompson, 62 Cal. 619; 45 Am. Rep. 663; San José Sav. Bank v. Sirrea Lumber Co., 63 Cal. 179; Buckner v. Veuve, 63 Cal. 304; Curtis v. Superior Ct., 63 Cal. 435; Chapman v. Stoneman, 63 Cal. 490; Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Superior Ct., 63 Cal. 607; More v. Superior Ct., 64 Cal. 345; Hobart v. Tillson, 66 Cal. 210; People v. Whitney, 47 Cal. 584; Sherlock v. Jacksonville, 17 Fla. 93; Arnold v. Shields, 5 Dana (Ky.) 18; 30 Am. Dec. 669; Reese v. Lawless, 4 Bibb (Ky.) 394; Jasper Co. v. Skitler, 13 Ind. 235; State v. Skinner, 32 La. Ann. 1092; State v. Mix, 33 La. Ann. 794; State v. Third District Ct., 16 La. Ann. 185; State v. Judge, 14 La. Ann. 509; State v. Judge, 20 La. Ann. 239; State v. Monroe, 33 La. Ann. 923; State v. Judge, 33 La. Ann. 1284; State v. Rightor, 40 La. Ann. 837; State v. Judges, 40 La. Ann. 771; In re Boye, 18 La. Ann. 102; Washburn v. Phillips, 2 Met. (Mass.) 296; Prignitz v. Fischer, 4 Minn. 366; Clayton v. Heidelberg, 9 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 623; Roper v. Cady, 4 Mo. App. 593; Thomas v. Mead, 36 Mo. 232; Howard v. Pierce, 38 Mo. 296; Casby v. Thompson, 42 Mo. 133; Thomson v. Tracy, 60 N. Y. 31; People v. Marine Ct., 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 341; Sweet v. Hulbert, 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 312; Quimbo Appo v. People, 20 N. Y. 531; People v. McAdam, 58 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 442; People v. Common Pleas, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 278; Ex parte Brandlacht, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 367; 38 Am. Dec. 593; State v. Whyte, 2 Nott & M. (S. Car.) 174; Baldwin v. Cooley, 1 S. Car. 256; State v. Mitchell, 2 Bailey (S. Car.) 225; Zylstra v. Charleston, 1 Bay (S. Car.) 383; State v. Hopkins. Dudley (S. Car.) 101; McKee v. Town Council, Rice (S. Car.) 24; State v. Simons, 2 Spears (S. Car.) 761; Hutson v. Lowry, 2 Va. Cas. 42; Low v. Crown Point Min. Co., 2 Nev. 75; State v. Burton, 11 Wis. 50; State v. Price, 8 N. J. L. 358; Jasper Co. v. Spittler, 13 Ind. 235; Pringle v. Child, Moore 780; Martin v. Archbishop of Canterbury, And. 258; Edwards' Case, 13 Co. 9; Buskirk v. Judges, 7 W. Va. 91; McConiha v. Guthrie, 21 W. Va. 134; Ensign Mfg. Co. v. McGinnis, 30 W. Va. 532.

3. Ex parte Blackburn, 5 Ark. 21; Hockaday v. Newson, 48 Mo. 196; fined to cases where a subordinate tribunal assumes to entertain some cause or proceeding over which it has no control, the necessity for the writ being the same where, in a matter of which such tribunal has jurisdiction, it goes beyond its legitimate powers.¹ These rules apply only to courts that go beyond their jurisdiction in the exercise of judicial not ministerial power. Prohibition cannot be invoked to prevent proceedings which are purely ministerial in their nature, but only those of a judicial character.²

Jasper Co. v. Spittler, 13 Ind. 235; Dayton v. Paine, 13 Minn. 494; Home Ins. Co. v. Flint, 13 Minn. 244; Morris v. Lenox, 8 Mo. 252; People v. Ct. of Oyer & Terminer, 27 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 14; People v. Russell, 49 Barb. (N. Y.) 351; 3 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 232; 29 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 176; 19 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 135; People v. Seward, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 518; People v. Marine Ct., 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 341; 14 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 266; People v. Common Pleas, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 278; 18 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 438; Bank Lick Turnpike Co. v. Phelps, 81 Ky. 613; More v. Superior Ct., 64 Cal. 345; Ex parte Brandlacht, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 367; 38 Am. Dec. 593; State v. Gary, 33 Wis. 93; State v. Judge, 29 La. Ann. 360; Leonard v. Bartels, 4 Colo. 95; Spring Valley Water Works v. San Francisco, 52 Cal. 111; State v. Judge (La. 1890), 7 So. Rep. 69; State v. Judge, 34 La. Ann. 782; State v. Judge, 36 La. Ann. 768; State v. Nathan, 4 Rich. (S. Car.) 513; State v. Southern R. Co., 100 Mo. 59.

The writ of prohibition does not lie to prevent a district judge from enjoining a feri facias issued against a party domiciled within his territorial jurisdiction by a court of another jurisdiction, where it is necessary to ward off an immediate injury otherwise unavoidable. State v. Houston, 35 La. Ann. 538; Dutens v. Robson, 1 H. Bl. 100.

Upon an application for a writ of prohibition, to stop the trial of an information against the plaintiff for assault with intent to commit murder, the grounds alleged were, that the magistrate before whom the preliminary examination took place did not examine on oath or otherwise the prosecutor or any witness. Held, that the omissions not affecting jurisdiction, prohibition was not the proper remedy. Murphy v. Superior Ct., 58 Cal. 520.

Prohibition does not lie to restrain the proceedings of a judge who has made an order upon supervisors of the county, inquiring why they propose to convert one of the jury rooms of his court-room into a clerk's office. A judge has authority to conduct such an inquiry. Supervisors of Bedford v. Wingfield, 27 Gratt. (Va.) 329.

Removing Seat of Justice.—A writ of prohibition will not lie to prevent the county court, in Arkansas, from removing the seat of justice, the subject-matter being within its jurisdiction. Ex parte Blackburn, 5 Ark. 21.

Passing on Motion to Dismiss Information.—A writ of prohibition will not lie to restrain a superior court from passing upon a motion to dismiss an information. Wreden v. Superior Ct., 55 Cal. 504.

Punishing for Contempt.—The writ of prohibition will not issue to prohibit a district court from punishing for contempt a party defendant in an injunction suit, on the ground that said court had no jurisdiction of the suit. State v. Rightor, 32 La. Ann. 1182.

Contested Elections.—The supreme court will not grant a writ of prohibition to the chancellor, to restrain him from interfering by injunction, in the matter of a contested election, to prevent the use of a certificate of election, which is alleged in the bill to have been obtained on false and fraudulent returns, although the certificate was granted by the returning officer under a mandamus from the circuit court, and although the person who is in possession of the office, and by whom the bill in chancery was filed, is alleged by the petitioner to have been ineligible at the time of the election. Ex parte Reid, 50 Ala. 439.

1. Quimbo Appo v. People, 20 N. Y. 531; State v. Ridgell, 2 Bailey (S. Car.) 560.

A court that grants an appeal suspending a peremptory writ of mandamus has no further jurisdiction in the cause and prohibition will issue to restrain proceedings to enforce it. State v. Lewis, 76 Mo. 370.

2. Atkins v. Siddons, 66 Ala. 453; Kyle v. Evans, 3 Ala. 481; San

In granting a writ of prohibition it is to be observed that the question of the jurisdiction of the subordinate court must be decided by the superior court and not by the inferior tribunal, it being the province of all superior courts of law to confine subordinate tribunals within their proper bounds.¹ But the writ will not issue where the question of jurisdiction has not been raised or decided by the lower tribunal.²

Where an inferior tribunal is proceeding under an unconstitutional act,³ or where proceedings are wrongfully instituted under the law,⁴ or a magistrate proceeds to exercise jurisdiction under a misconstruction of the statute,⁵ or where proceedings are brought within the jurisdiction of an inferior court by legal fraud, prohibition is the proper remedy.⁶

2. When Right Is Clear.—To authorize the issuing of a writ of prohibition from a superior court, it should be clearly made to appear that the inferior court is about to proceed in some matter over which it possesses no jurisdiction; which may be done by

Jose Sav. Bank v. Sierra Lumber Co., 63 Cal. 179; Le Conte v. Berkeley, 57 Cal. 269; People v. Board of Election Comm'rs, 54 Cal. 404; Camron v. Kenfield, 57 Cal. 553; Farmers' etc. Union v. Thresher, 62 Cal. 407; Spring Valley Water Works v. Bartlett, 63 Cal. 245; Hobart v. Tillson, 66 Cal. 210; State v. Justices, 41 Mo. 44; Ex parte Brandlacht, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 367; 38 Am. Dec. 593; Home Ins. Co. v. Flint, 13 Minn. 244; Sherlock v. Jacksonville, 17 Fla. 93; People v. Queens Co., 1 Hill (N. Y.) 195; Seymour v. Almond, 75 Ga. 112; Sasseen v. Hammond, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 672.

A writ of prohibition will restrain the proceedings of an inferior court, only when such proceedings are of a judicial nature. If the inferior court be acting in a purely administrative capacity, for example, as agents of the county for the purpose of removing the seat of justice to a new site, a writ of prohibition is not the proper remedy, however illegal such ministerial acts may be. State v. Justices, 41 Mo. 44.

So prohibition will not lie to restrain a judge acting not in a judicial capacity but merely as a commissioner, in the taking of testimony. State v. Spaing, 31 La. Ann. 122.

The matter of fixing water rates is not judicial, and a writ of prohibition will not be awarded to restrain a board of supervisors from performing that duty. Spring Valley Water Works v. Bartlett, 63 Cal. 245.

1. Gray v. Ct. of Magistrates, 3 McCord (S. Car.) 175.

2. Succession of Whipple, 2 La. Ann. 236; Mayor etc. of London v. Cox, 2 L. R., H. L. Cas. 239.

3. Sweet v. Hurlbert, 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 312; State v. Simons, 2 Spears (S. Car.) 761; Ex parte Roundtree, 51 Ala. 42; Zylstra v. Charleston, 1 Bay (S. Car.) 382.

Minnesota act of March 2, 1881 provided for the issuance of certain State bonds, but, it being doubtful whether the bonds could be legally issued without a vote of the people upon the question, it was provided by the act that it should be left to certain judges to decide that question. Held, that if the act was void as conferring legislative power on the judges, a writ of prohibition would properly issue to restrain them from acting. State v. Young, 29 Minn. 474.

The Supreme court of Alabama will interfere by prohibition, to restrain a circuit judge from sitting as the presiding judge of a statutory inferior court, when the act creating that court, and making him the presiding judge thereof is declared unconstitutional. Ex parte Roundtree, 51 Ala. 42.

4. People v. McAdam, 22 Hun (N. Y.) 559. See State v. Houston, 35 La. Ann. 1195.

5. Baldwin v. Cooley, 1 S. Car. 256; Reese v. Lawless, 4 Bibb (Ky.) 394; Gould v. Gapper, 5 East 345.

6. Ramsey v. Ct. of Wardens, 2 Bay (S. Car.) 180.

setting forth any acts or declarations of the court, or officer, indicative of their intention to pursue such course.¹ The fact that replevin issued by a justice is returnable on Sunday, or that the action involves the title to real estate, or that plaintiffs and the officers making the levy were trespassers, is no ground for prohibition of such proceedings.²

3. Doubtful Cases.—Where the question of jurisdiction or no jurisdiction depends upon a doubtful point of law which the court below is peculiarly fitted to decide, prohibition will be refused.³ So, where the question of jurisdiction is doubtful and it can be more rapidly and cheaply tried by action, prohibition will not be granted.⁴ If the existence or non-existence of jurisdiction depends on contested facts which the inferior tribunal is competent to inquire into and determine, prohibition will not be granted, though the superior court should be of opinion that the questions of fact have been determined wrongly by the court below, and if rightfully determined, would have ousted the jurisdiction.⁵ The finding of the judge is, though not absolutely, yet practically conclusive in the absence of very peculiar circumstances.⁶

4. Time of Issuing the Writ.—A prohibition will not be granted quia timet,⁷ there must be some suit or matter pending; and the writ will not be granted against a person not actually a party to the suit at the time, though it may be open to him to join in it at any time.⁸ If once a proceeding has in fact been instituted before any subordinate tribunal, the prohibitory jurisdiction of the court may be invoked and exercised, at any time before judgment,⁹ and in some cases after judgment,¹⁰ and even after execu-

1. Prignitz v. Fischer, 4 Minn. 366. See Tapia v. Martinez, 4 N. Mex. 165; Haile v. Superior Ct., 78 Cal. 418.

It is only when the cause alleged is seen to be true and is clearly sufficient that prohibition is granted. Walton v. Greenwood, 60 Me. 365.

2. Tapia v. Martinez, 4 N. Mex. 165.

3. The Charkieh, L. R., 8 Q. B. 197; 42 L. J., Q. B. 75; Ex parte Higgins, 10 Jur. 838.

4. In re Birch, 15 C. B. 743.

5. Joseph v. Henry, 1 L. M. & P. 388; 19 J. Q. B. 369; Brown v. Cocking, 9 B. & S. 503.

6. Elston v. Rose, 9 B. & S. 509.

If the superior court is of opinion that the judge below has perversely so decided and has not honestly and fairly exercised his judgment upon the evidence before him, or has proceeded on a wrong principle of law in arriving at his determination of the facts, prohibition will be granted. Elston v. Rose, 9 B. & S. 509; L. R., 4 Q. B. 4.

7. Hill v. Bird, Aleyn. 56; Mealing v. City Council, Dudley (Ga.) 221; Ex parte Greene, 29 Ala. 52; Prignitz v. Fischer, 4 Minn. 366; State v. Monroe, 33 La. Ann. 923; State v. Judge, 33 La. Ann. 1284; Full v. Hutchins, Cowp. 424; and see Stainbank v. Bradshaw, 10 East 349, n.

In Prignitz v. Fischer, 4 Minn. 366, it is held that if it be clearly made to appear that the inferior court is about to proceed in some matter over which it possesses no jurisdiction, prohibition will issue.

Prohibition will not lie to prevent an act not threatened. Coker v. Superior Ct., 58 Cal. 178; Carliaga v. Dryden, 30 Cal. 245.

8. Hill v. Bird, Aleyn. 56. See Maurer v. Mitchell, 53 Cal. 292.

9. Gray v. Ct. of Magistrates, 3 McCord (S. Car.) 175; Shortt on Prohibition 449.

10. Bodley v. Archibald, 33 W. Va. 229.

Compare State v. Price, 8 N. J. L. 358.

tion.¹ But material delay will be a bar to the writ.² So prohibition will not be granted where it appears that the case is no longer pending in the lower court, because the case is out of court and the relator is no longer harassed by an attempt to exercise over him a jurisdiction which he claims to be unwarranted.³

5. Amount in Controversy.—Where courts, limited by law, in the decision of controversies, to amounts falling within a specified sum, as in justices' courts, attempt to assume jurisdiction by dividing a single matter into several suits so as to bring them within the limits fixed by law when the whole amount in controversy is sufficient to bring it within the jurisdiction of a higher court, prohibition may issue.⁴ But where suit on a claim is brought in a justice's court and the defendant has a counter-claim against the plaintiff that exceeds the jurisdiction of such court, he cannot by prohibition compel the inferior court to entertain jurisdiction so that the plaintiff can avail himself of a plea of set-off.⁵

6. Where Judge Is Interested.—A prohibition is also grantable where the judge of an inferior court proceeds to try, by himself or by his deputy, a cause in which he is himself interested.⁶

7. To Prevent Execution of Judgment Appealed from.—Where an appeal is taken from a lower to a higher court, prohibition will issue restraining the judge of the lower court from executing the judgment appealed from.⁷ So the writ will issue to withhold the Prohibition will not lie after sentence, unless the want of jurisdiction appears on the face of the proceedings. State v. Whyte, 2 Nott & M. (S. Car.) 174; Buggin v. Bennet, 4 Burr. 2035; Ricardo v. Maidenhead Board of Health, 2 H. & N. 257; Roberts v. Humby, 3 M. & W. 120.

1. Huton v. Lowry, 2 Va. Cas. 42; Shortt on Prohibition 449; West v. Ferguson, 16 Gratt. (Va.) 270; Ingersoll v. Buchanan, 1 W. Va. 181; State v. Judge, 38 La. Ann. 274.

2. In re Denton, 1 H. & C. 654; Yates v. Palmer, 6 D. & L. 283.

3. United States v. Hoffman, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 158. See Beade v. Supreme Ct., 60 Cal. 290.

4. Girling v. Aldas, 2 Keb. 617; Lawrence v. Warbeck, 1 Keb. 260; Hutson v. Lowry, 2 Va. Cas. 42.

Plaintiff brought several distinct actions before a justice of the peace upon promissory notes against the defendant; each note was for an amount within the jurisdiction of the justice, but the aggregate amount was beyond his jurisdiction. Held that it was a clear defect of jurisdiction, as all the notes constituted but one indebtedness, which made the aggregate amount exceed the jurisdiction of the justice, and prohibition would lie. Hutson v. Lowry, 2 Va. Cas. 42.

Court of Appeals.—Prohibition will lie to prevent the court of appeals of Louisiana from exercising jurisdiction over a controversy involving a right to servitude of light and view, valued at more than $1,000, and a claim for $1,000 damages, both exceeding $2,000, the upper jurisdiction limit of said court. State v. Judges, 49 La. Ann. 771.

5. Browne v. Rowe, 10 Tex. 184.

6. Hutton v. Fowke, 1 Keb. 648; Ex parte Medwin, 1 El. & Bl. 609; Anonymous, 1 Salk. 396; North Bloomfield Gravel Min. Co. v. Keyser, 58 Cal. 315.

Prohibition lies against a judge who takes jurisdiction to decide a plea of recusation against himself made on the ground that he had been employed as advocate in the cause. State v. Judge, 38 La. Ann. 247.

See generally as to disqualification of judges, Judge vol. 12, p. 40.

7. State v. Judge, 24 La. Ann. 598; collection of a judgment granted against a judgment creditor in a case in which the court rendering the decision had no jurisdiction, it appearing that execution had been issued, but not returned satisfied.¹ But prohibition will not lie to arrest the execution of a judgment rendered by a court vested with jurisdiction over the subject-matter.² So it will not be granted to prevent proceedings in execution of a judgment, where the court can see that the party will have an adequate remedy upon appeal.³

IV. WHEN REFUSED—1. Generally.—The writ will be refused where the act is already done.⁴ So, where application has not been made to the court below to refrain from proceeding,⁵ or where the question of its jurisdiction, after being properly submitted, remains undetermined,⁶ or where the proceedings ob-

State v. Judge, 21 La. Ann. 113; State v. Judge, 21 La. Ann. 123; State v. Judge, 38 La. Ann. 274.

Compare State v. Cassidy, 7 La. 274, where an appeal from an order of seizure and sale was taken, the judge regardless of the appeal proceeded to execute judgment. Prohibition was held to be the proper remedy. State v. Judge, 21 La. Ann. 735.

So where an appeal is taken from the decision of the board of county commissioners to the supreme court and there reversed, prohibition will lie when the board still attempts to enforce its own judgment regardless of the decision upon the appeal. Harri-man v. Waldo Co., 53 Me. 83.

Prohibition is the proper remedy to prevent the ordinary from proceeding further, pending an appeal from that court to the superior court. Fite v. Black, 85 Ga. 413.

A petition for a prohibition against execution of a judgment for want of jurisdiction, is not affected by the fact that a plea to the jurisdiction had been overruled below. State v. Lapey-rollerie, 38 La. Ann. 912.

A writ of prohibition will not issue to restrain the execution of a judgment, pending appeal, where the record shows that the bond given for the appeal is insufficient in amount to operate a supersedeas. State v. Judge, 22 La. Ann. 115.

A writ of prohibition is the proper proceeding to arrest the execution of an illegal judgment for costs awarded by the county court in proceedings to contest an election, under the act of April 22, 1852. West v. Ferguson, 16 Gratt. (Va.) 270.

1. Ingersoll v. Buchanan, 1 W. Va.

19 C. of L.—18

181. See Hayne v. Justice Ct., 82 Cal. 284.

2. State v. Houston, 35 La. Ann. 236. See Ex parte Brandlacht, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 367; 38 Am. Dec. 593.

A prohibition will not lie to restrain the execution of a judgment of an inferior court, on the ground that evidence offered on the trial was rejected, which should have been received. State v. Leonard, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 111.

3. State v. Judge, 21 La. Ann. 123; Clark v. Superior Ct., 55 Cal. 199.

4. United States v. Hoffman, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 158; Dayton v. Paine, 13 Minn. 493; People v. Excise Comrs, 61 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 514; Haldeman v. Davis, 28 W. Va. 324; Brooks v. Warren, 5 Utah 89; Hull v. Superior Ct., 63 Cal. 179; Coker v. Superior Ct., 58 Cal. 178; More v. Superior Ct., 64 Cal. 346; State v. Ellis, 40 La. Ann. 818.

5. Barnes v. Gottschalk, 3 Mo. App. 111; State v. Laughlin, 9 Mo. App. 486; Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Superior Ct., 59 Cal. 471; State v. Henry, 41 La. Ann. 908.

If it appear upon the face of the proceedings that the inferior tribunal could have no jurisdiction, no averment need be made that a plea to the jurisdiction was pleaded and overruled. Otherwise, if the court could acquire jurisdiction by consent, or waiver of objection or default. Arnold v. Shields, 5 Dana (Ky.) 18; 30 Am. Dec. 669; De Haber v. Queen of Portugal, 17 Q. B. 171.

6. Chester v. Colby, 52 Cal. 516. See Succession of Whipple, 2 La. Ann. 236.

The writ will not lie until a plea to jected to will be void if consummated.¹ As has been observed, prohibition lies to prevent courts from going beyond their jurisdiction in the exercise of judicial power, but if the point beyond the jurisdiction is one wholly immaterial to the question to be determined in the cause, prohibition will not be granted;² so, where an inferior court oversteps its authority in a portion of its judgment, when the general scope and the purpose of the action of which it has taken cognizance is within its jurisdiction, prohibition will be refused.³ Nor will the writ issue against an inferior court merely for irregularity in its proceedings, if it acts within its jurisdiction.⁴ Only the jurisdiction of the court and the competency of the judge can be considered.⁵ A bill in chancery may be fatally wanting in necessary averments, or it may be instituted in a district in which the defendants are not liable to be sued; yet, these, if they exist, are proper matters of defense, and cannot be reached by prohibition, which lies only where the court has assumed to act upon a matter, or upon the rights of a party, which it could not determine or proceed against.⁶

2. Collection of Taxes.—While there are cases where the writ has been granted against ministerial officers intrusted with the collection of taxes, yet, the better doctrine is that it will not lie against ministerial officers such as the collectors of taxes, to restrain them from levying or collecting taxes;⁷ and in Georgia it is provided the jurisdiction has been interposed in the court below and overruled. Hanger v. Keating, 26 Ark. 51; Ex parte Little Rock, 26 Ark. 52; State v. Judge, 29 La. Ann. 806; Ex parte McMeechen, 12 Ark. 70; State v. Vorhies, 40 La. Ann. 607; State v. Henry, 41 La. Ann. 908; State v. Steele, 38 La. Ann. 569.

A motion to dismiss a suit for want of jurisdiction is sufficient objection to the jurisdiction to afford a foundation for an application for a writ of prohibition. State v. Williams, 48 Ark. 227.

1. Barnes v. Gottschalk, 3 Mo. App. 222.

2. Rutland v. Bagshawe, 14 Q. B. 869.

The trial of a case after the taking of an appeal from an order denying a motion for a change of venue, is not a proceeding without or in excess of the jurisdiction of the court, within the meaning of California Code Civ. Pro., § 1102, so as to authorize the issuing of a writ of prohibition. People v. Whitney, 47 Cal. 584.

3. People v. Common Pleas, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 278; Dutens v. Robson, 1 H. Bl. 100; Carslake v. Mapledoram, 2 T. R. 473.

4. McDonald v. Elfe, 1 Nott & M. (S. Car.) 501; Bowman's Case, 67 Mo. 146.

Rejection of Evidence.—The rejection by a magistrate of competent evidence affecting the credibility of witnesses for the prosecution is not sufficient ground for a writ of prohibition. Ex parte Bradley, 9 Rich. (S. Car.) 95.

5. State v. Judge, 34 La. Ann. 611. In People v. Russell, 49 Barb. (N. Y.) 351, it was held that the writ should not issue to restrain an inferior court from entertaining summary proceedings under a statute not unconstitutional.

6. Ex parte Green, 29 Ala. 52.

When the residence of a testator necessary to give jurisdiction to a surrogate of proceedings for the probate of his will is denied, the denial does not afford ground for the issue of a writ of prohibition to the surrogate. People v. Surrogate's Court, 36 Hun (N. Y.) 218.

7. Maurer v. Mitchell, 53 Cal. 289; Le Conte v. Berkeley, 57 Cal. 269; Farmers' etc. Union v. Thresher, 62 Cal. 407; Hobart v. Tillson, 66 Cal. 210; People v. Queens Co., 1 Hill (N. Y.) 195; Clayton v. Heidelberg, 9 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 623.

In People v. Kern Co., 47 Cal. 81, it by statute that prohibition or any other preventive remedy shall not be awarded by the courts against the collection of the State taxes.¹

3. Issue or Enforcement of Execution.—Prohibition will not issue to prevent the issue of an execution,² nor to prevent the officer holding it from enforcing it.³

V. AGAINST WHOM ISSUED.—1. Generally.—Originally, the writ of prohibition was understood to be a writ issuing out of some superior court, directed to the judge and parties of an inferior court, commanding them to cease from the prosecution of a suit, upon a suggestion that either the cause originally, or some collateral matter therein, did not belong to that jurisdiction, but to the cognizance of some other court.⁴ But in practice this writ has subsequently gone beyond this limit, and has been used not only to restrain inferior judicial tribunals within the orbit of their jurisdiction as to the subject-matter conferred upon them, but has also reached to their collateral proceedings when contrary to the common law or some statutory provision. Nor has it been confined entirely to inferior judicial tribunals, as seemed first to be intended; on the contrary, it has been extended to other public functionaries, officials, and persons charged with the performance of a duty not wholly judicial, and not even very extensively or strongly marked with a judicial character.⁵ So a was held that a writ of prohibition would not issue to prevent a board of supervisors from collecting a tax, unless the proceedings themselves were absolutely without or in excess of the jurisdiction of the board.

So in Mississippi where the law confers upon the board of police, power to levy and collect special tax sufficient to build and repair any court house or jail or other county buildings for their counties, respectively, their jurisdiction over such matters is unquestionable, and hence there is no room for the interference of the circuit court by writ of prohibition to prevent the levy and collection of the tax for the payment of the construction or repair of such public buildings. Clayton v. Heidelberg, 9 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 623.

In Kentucky, the writ of prohibition is not an appropriate remedy to test the legality of a law relating to a tax by preventing the officer from proceeding to collect the tax, but the writ is given for such purpose by statute in Louisville. Talbot v. Dent, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 527.

But see Burger v. Carter, 1 McMull. (S. Car.) 410; People v. Works, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 486.

1. Cody v. Lennard, 45 Ga. 85.

Tax on National Banks.—A writ of prohibition against a board of supervisors commanding them to desist from levying a tax on a national bank will be refused where the legal right for such a writ is doubtful and the remedy will involve public inconvenience. People v. Ulster Co., 31 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 237.

2. Ex Parte Brandlacht, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 367; 38 Am. Dec. 593; Atkins v. Siddons, 66 Ala. 453; Kyle v. Evans, 3 Ala. 481; State v. Justices, 41 Mo. 44. See Ducheneau v. Ireland, 5 Utah 108.

3. Brooks v. Warren (Utah) 12 Pac. Rep. 659. See State v. Judge, 38 La. Ann. 49. Where injunction of an exemption has been asked and regularly tried below, prohibition of the execution will not be granted. The proper remedy is by appeal. State v. Robinson, 38 La. Ann. 968. See Brooks v. Warren, 5 Utah 89.

4. 3 Bl. Com. 112; State v. Stackhouse, 14 S. Car. 427; Sherlock v. Jacksonville, 17 Fla. 93. See Clayton v. Heidelberg, 9 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 623; People v. Queens Co., 1 Hill (N. Y.) 195; Grier v. Taylor, 4 McCord (S. Car.) 206; Jasper Co. v. Spittler, 13 Ind. 235.

5. State v. Stackhouse, 14 S. Car.

town council or municipal court is held to be a proper subject for prohibition when it undertakes to adjudge and administer the laws of the State and usurp a jurisdiction not belonging to it,¹ but so long as a city council confines itself within the limits of the charter to mere police regulations under its own ordinances, it cannot be considered a court subject to prohibition.²

2. Courts—a. GENERALLY.—In England, any court that exceeds its jurisdiction may be restrained by prohibition.³ So, in this country where the supreme court of a State is vested by the constitution of the State with power to issue such remedial, original writs as may be necessary to give it a general superintendence and control of inferior jurisdictions, it may grant a prohibition against any subordinate court whether of general or limited jurisdiction, and whether a court of law or chancery.⁴

427; People v. Road Comm'rs, 3 Hill (S. Car.) 314; Harrington v. Road Comm'rs, 2 McCord (S. Car.) 400; Lynch v. Road Comm'rs, Harp. (S. Car.) 336.

Minnesota.—At common law a writ of prohibition was only issued to restrain the exercise of judicial powers. The Minnesota statute confirms its use, and does not purport to limit, extend, or determine the cases in which it will lie. Home Ins. Co. v. Flint, 13 Minn. 244.

In California, it was held that the legislature had no power to enact the statute which purports to amend California Code, § 1102, in so far as it attempts to enlarge the office of the writ of prohibition. Camron v. Kenfield, 57 Cal. 550. See Maurer v. Mitchell, 53 Cal. 292; Farmers' etc. Union v. Thresher, 62 Cal. 407; Hobart v. Tillson, 66 Cal. 210.

State Auditor.—A writ of prohibition will not lie against the State auditor to forbid him from proceeding by distress against a defaulting collector and his sureties. Casby v. Thompson, 42 Mo. 133.

Secretary of State.—The supreme court will not award a writ of prohibition against a circuit court to prohibit it from proceeding by mandamus to compel the secretary of State to deliver the sealed returns of an election for governor on the petition of a party who alleges that he is plaintiff in an injunction suit to prevent the secretary from delivering said returns, and that the circuit court has ignored his injunction, although it appears that said court had no jurisdiction to award said mandamus. Fleming v. Guthrie, 32 W. Va. 1.

1. McKee v. Town Council, 1 Rice (S. Car.) 24; Zylstra v. Charleston, 1 Bay (S. Car.) 382. See Mealing v. City Council, Dudley (Ga.) 221; People v. District Ct., 6 Colo. 534.

The Supreme court of South Carolina having power to issue "writs of injunction, mandamus, quo warranto, habeas corpus and such other original and remedial writs as may be necessary to give it a general supervisory control over all other courts in this State," held, that it could not issue a writ of prohibition to restrain a city council from issuing liquor licenses. State v. Columbia, 16 S. Car. 412.

2. Mealing v. City Council, Dudley (Ga.) 221.

Mayor.—Where the mayor is by law made the chief executive officer of a city, and as such is authorized to supervise the other officers thereof in the execution of their duties, prohibition will not lie to restrain him from proceeding with the investigation of charges against the chief of police, because he acts as the chief executive officer of the city and not as a court. Burch v. Hardwicke, 23 Gratt. (Va.) 51.

3. Warner v. Suckerman, 3 Bulst. 120.

4. High's Ex. L. Rem., § 776; Henshaw v. Cotton, 127 Mass. 60. See Henry v. Steele, 28 Ark. 455; Ex parte Smith, 23 Ala. 94; Ex parte Hill, 38 Ala. 429; Hudson v. Judge, 42 Mich. 239; Quimbo Appo v. People, 20 N. Y. 531; State v. Judge, 11 La. Ann. 187.

But where a bill in equity is filed and it shows a case of equity jurisdiction to grant the preliminary relief prayed, a writ of prohibition to restrain the action of the court of chancery upon it will

b. COUNTY COURTS.—Prohibition will lie against county courts whenever a proper case is presented to warrant the exercise of the jurisdiction, as where county courts have exceeded their jurisdiction by granting writs of prohibition to justices of the peace, the superior courts will restrain them by prohibition.¹

c. JUSTICES COURTS.²—Where justices courts proceed without authority of law, prohibition affords the proper remedy to restrain their action.³

d. COURTS MARTIAL.—A court martial ordered and organized to try persons against whom are preferred certain charges, will not be restrained by prohibition where the application is made before that court has proceeded to the consideration of any other quesbe refused. People v. Circuit Ct., 11 Mich. 393. See Ex parte Walker, 25 Ala. 81.

Court of Appeals.—A writ of prohibition from the supreme court cannot affect the practice or jurisdiction of the New York court of appeals, or the rights of parties to its process and a hearing thereon. Any question as to jurisdiction of the latter court, the rights of parties to appeal, or the validity of an appeal, is for that court alone to determine. Thomson v. Tracy, 60 N. Y. 31.

Circuit Court.—Where a circuit judge, without jurisdiction, has issued certiorari to review the action of the county court in changing the location of a bridge that has been washed away, and made the writ returnable at a remote time, thus delaying a necessary public improvement, a writ of prohibition is the proper remedy. Wood Co. Ct. v. Boreman (W. Va. 1890), 11 S. E. Rep. 747.

A writ of prohibition will not lie to prevent the circuit court of the city of St. Louis from entertaining proceedings for the condemnation of property on the ground that it had no jurisdiction over the special class of property involved in the proceedings. State v. Southern R. Co., 100 Mo. 59.

District Courts.—Prohibition lies to a district court in Louisiana to prevent it from passing as an appellate court over city courts upon questions involving the legality or constitutionality of a tax title to real estate. State v. Voorhies, 41 La. Ann. 540.

1. Jackson v. Maxwell, 5 Rand. (Va.) 636.

Under Const. Virginia providing that the supreme court of appeals shall have appellate jurisdiction only, except in cases of habeas corpus, mandamus and prohibition, and Code 1873, ch. 156, § 4, providing that said court shall have jurisdiction to issue writs of mandamus and prohibition to the circuit and corporation court, and to the hustings court and the chancery court of the city of Richmond, and in all other cases in which it may be necessary to prevent a failure of justice in which a mandamus may issue according to the principles of the common law—the court has no power to issue a writ of prohibition to a county court. Gresham v. Ewell, 84 Va. 784.

2. See supra, this title, Amount in Controversy.

3. South Carolina R. Co. v. Ellis, 40 Ga. 87; Miller v. Marshall, 1 Va. Cas. 158; Yearian v. Speirs, 4 Utah 482; State v. McCrea, 40 La. Ann. 20; Arnold v. Shields, 5 Dana (Ky.) 18; 30 Am. Dec. 669; Bodley v. Archibald, 33 W. Va. 229; People v. Spiers, 4 Utah 385; Hayne v. Justices' Ct., 82 Cal. 284.

Justices of the peace have jurisdiction to abate the stopping of a way, claimed as an easement, by piling up dirt and building fences, and therefore the superior court errs when it grants a writ of prohibition against them in such a case. Hart v. Taylor, 61 Ga. 156.

The province of the writ of prohibition is to restrain from acting as a court. The board of police justices of the city of New York, when acting under the act of April 17, 1860, in the appointment of clerks, etc., does not act as a "court" and is not subject to prohibition. Norton v. Dowling, 46 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 7.

Where a justice of the peace acts wholly beyond his jurisdiction, and there is no provision for a trial by jury in his court, or in the appellate tion than that of its jurisdiction, unless it appears upon the face of the proceedings that the court has no jurisdiction of any part of the subject-matter of these charges.¹

3. Coroners.—Where a coroner acts beyond the proper limits of his office and jurisdiction in holding an inquest, it has been held that prohibition will lie.²

4. Executive Officers.—A prohibition will not be granted in respect of any proceeding belonging to the executive government of the country.³ Thus, the writ will not issue to restrain a governor from granting a commission to a sheriff who has been improperly elected,⁴ nor to prevent a mayor from investigating charges against an inferior officer of the city.⁵

5. Referees and Commissioners.—Referees provided for by statute to hear and determine the question of a right of way of one citizen over the lands of another, partake of the character of a judicial body, and prohibition is a proper and necessary remedy to keep this quasi court within the boundary of its extraordinary powers.⁶ So, a board of county commissioners acting in a judicial capacity may be prohibited from proceeding under an unconstitutional act.⁷

court, prohibition will lie, as appeal is not an adequate remedy. The objection that there is no jury trial in the justice's court, is not satisfied by appeal. Yearian v. Speirs, 4 Utah 382.

1. Washburn v. Phillips, 2 Met. (Mass.) 296. See State v. Edwards, 1 McMull. (S. Car.) 215.

2. Reg v. Herford, 3 El. & El. 115.

3. Chabot v. Morpeth, 15 Q. B. 446.

By Wisconsin Rev. Stat., ch. 159, §§ 8–13, no less than at common law, the writ of prohibition does not issue to restrain the acts of executive or administrative officers, but only those of a court or other inferior tribunal, exercising some judicial power which it has no legal authority to exercise. State v. Gary, 33 Wis. 93.

4. Grier v. Taylor, 4 McCord (S. Car.) 206; 17 Am. Dec. 731.

5. Burch v. Hardwicke, 23 Gratt. (Va.) 51.

6. State v. Stackhouse, 14 S. Car. 427.

7. Connecticut River R. Co. v. Franklin Co., 127 Mass. 50. See Sweet v. Hurlbert, 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 312; State v. Simons, Spears (S. Car.) 761; Ex parte Roundtree, 51 Ala. 42; Zylstra v. Charleston, 1 Bay (S. Car.) 382.

The writ has been issued against road commissioners to prevent the imposition or collection of fines for road work in cases where the law does not authorize such fines. People v. Road Comm'rs, 3 Hill (S. Car.) 314; Harrington v. Road Comm'rs, 2 McCord (S. Car.) 400; Lynah v. Road Comm'rs, Harper (S. Car.) 336; Gist v. Cole, 2 Nott & M. (S. Car.) 456; 10 Am. Dec. 616; State v. Comm'rs, 1 Mill. (S. Car.) 55.

Connecticut Laws 1881, ch. 124, giving the county commissioners sole jurisdiction of the granting of liquor licenses,—does not constitute them a "court" within the constitution; and a writ of prohibition cannot be issued against them. La Croix v. Fairfield Co., 50 Conn. 321; 47 Am. Dec. 648; Jasper Co. v. Spitler, 13 Ind. 235.

Railway Commissioners.—A prohibition was granted to prevent the railway commissioners from enforcing orders requiring two companies to act jointly in doing what neither could do separately. Toomer v. London etc. R. Co., L. R., 2 Ex. Div. 450. Also where they granted an injunction to restrain a railway company from making charges for the conveyance of passengers in excess of those authorized by their special acts, but without any undue preference. Great Western R. Co. v. Railway Comm'rs, L. R., 7 Q. B. D. 182. Also where they undertook an arbitration between two railway companies under § 8 of 36 & 37 Vict., ch. 48, the specific differ-

VI. PROCEDURE.—1. In General.—In the absence of statutory regulations as to the pleadings and procedure in prohibition, the common law practice is still applicable,¹ and is as follows: The party aggrieved in the court below applies to the superior court, setting forth in a suggestion, petition, or information, the nature and cause of his complaint.² If the facts are not presented by the record of the inferior court the party wishing the writ must make the proper suggestion to the superior tribunal, setting forth all the material facts upon which he relies, with the proper allegations, and, if the facts do not appear on the record, verify the truth of them by affidavit.³ A rule should then be entered upon the opposite party to show cause upon a given day why ence between the two companies not being required or authorized by any general or special act to be referred to arbitration. Great Western R. Co. v. Waterford etc. R. Co., L. R., 17 Ch. D. 493; 44 L. T., N. S. 723. Also, where a railway company having guarantied to a canal company that if the income of the latter was in any year insufficient to pay a dividend of four per cent. the railway company would make up the deficiency, the commissioners, without the consent of the railway company, and without hearing it, made an order allowing through rates for goods traffic between two points, the effect of which would be to reduce the tolls of the canal company below the maximum allowed by its acts, which tolls the canal company was prohibited from reducing or varying without the consent of the railway company. Warwick etc. Canal Co. v. Birmingham, L. R., 5 Ex. Div. 1.

Election Commissioners.—Prohibition, from a court of equity, does not lie to control election officers, when there is a statutory remedy by proceedings to contest the election. Kemp v. Ventulett, 58 Ga. 419.

The board of election commissioners, in complying with California Const., art. 11, § 18, as to ordering an election for fifteen freeholders to propose a charter to be submitted to the voters of San Francisco, are not acting judicially, and a writ of prohibition will not lie to arrest the proceeding. People v. Board of Election Comm'rs, 54 Cal. 404.

Under West Virginia Const., art. 8, § 12, providing that "the circuit court shall have supervision and control of all proceedings before justices and other inferior tribunals, by mandamus, prohibition, and certiorari," and West Virginia Acts 1882, ch. 73, § 3, authorizing the judge of the circuit court to issue a writ of prohibition in vacation, held, that such writ would lie from the judge to the county commissioners assembled in special session to ascertain the result of an election, to prevent them from transcending their powers by examining witnesses and hearing evidence to determine whether the precinct commissioners have returned votes which ought not to be counted. Brazie v. Fayette Co., 25 W. Va. 213.

1. High Ex. Rem., § 796. For a summing up of the common law procedure, see Ex parte Williams, 4 Ark. 537; 38 Am. Dec. 46. This procedure has been recognized in the following cases: State v. Comm'rs, 1 Mill (S. Car.) 55; State v. Hudnal, 2 Nott & M. (S. Car.) 419; Ex parte Richardson, Harp. (S. Car.) 308; M'Kenna v. Road Comm'rs, Harp. (S. Car.) 381; Johnson v. Basquere, 1 Spears (S. Car.) 329; Johnson v. Boon, 1 Spears (S. Car.) 268; Warwick v. Mayo, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 528.

And see also as to the practice in prohibition, South Carolina Soc. v. Gurney, 3 Rich., N. S. (S. Car.) 51; Burch v. Hardwicke, 23 Gratt. (Va.) 51; Doughty v. Walker, 54 Ga. 595.

2. 3 Black. Com. 113.

3. Ex parte Williams, 4 Ark. 537; 38 Am. Dec. 46; Carliaga v. Dryden, 30 Cal. 246. See Santa Cruz Gap Turnpike etc. Co. v. Santa Clara Co., 62 Cal. 41; Buggin v. Bennett, 4 Burr. 2037; Caton v. Burton, Cowp. 330.

An affidavit to a petition for a writ of prohibition is not properly made, which fails to state that the affiant has either knowledge or information concerning the matter stated in the petition. Carliaga v. Dryden, 30 Cal. 244.

the writ should not issue.¹ The entry and service of such rule stay all proceedings in the case. And upon the return the court will make the rule absolute or will discharge it as seems proper.² But sometimes the point may be too nice and doubtful to be decided merely upon a motion, and then, for the more solemn determination of the question, the party applying for the prohibition is directed by the court to declare prohibition; that is, to prosecute an action, by filing a declaration against the other, and if, upon demurrer and argument, the court shall finally be of the opinion that the matter suggested is a good and sufficient ground of prohibition in point of law, then judgment with nominal damages shall be given for the party complaining, and the defendant, and also the inferior court, shall be prohibited from proceeding any further. On the other hand, if the superior court shall think it no competent ground for restraining the inferior jurisdiction, then judgment shall be given against him who applied for the prohibition in the court above, and a writ of consultation shall be awarded; so called, because, upon deliberation and consultation had, the judges find the prohibition to be ill-founded, and therefore by this writ they return the cause to its original jurisdiction, to be there determined in the inferior court.³

2. Parties.—The application for prohibition may be made not only by either of the parties to the proceeding in the inferior court,⁴ but also by a stranger.⁵ The application may be made either against the other party to the suit, or the judge to be prohibited, or both. In modern practice the application in the first instance is made in form against the party and the court;⁶ the

1. Mayo v. James, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 17; Ex parte Williams, 4 Ark. 537; 38 Am. Dec. 46. See Withers v. Road Comm'rs, 3 Brev. (S. Car.) 83.

The execution of such a rule will have the effect of a prohibition quousque, or until the discharge of the rule. Mayo v. James, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 17.

The writ of prohibition will not issue until after opportunity given parties to show cause why it should not issue; and where it clearly appears that no ground for the writ exists, the application will be dismissed without entry of rule to show cause. Ex parte Tucker, 25 Ark. 567.

2. Ex parte Williams, 4 Ark. 537; 38 Am. Dec. 46.

The common law procedure was modified in England by St. 1 Geo. IV, enacted in 1831, authorizing the application to be made on affidavits only, simplifying the declaration, when such should be directed, and regulating the subsequent pleadings and the judgment.

3. Ex parte Williams, 4 Ark. 537; 38

Am. Dec. 46; 3 Black. Com. 113; Bishop of Winchester's Case, 1 Coke Rep. (edition of 1826), p. 535, note; Croucher v. Collins, 1 Saund. 136, note.

4. Strausham v. Medcalfs, 1 Leon 130; Worts v. Clayston, Cro. Jac. 350; Clapham v. Wray, 12 Mod. Rep. 423; Walton v. Greenwood, 60 Me. 363; Bridge v. Branch, 1 L. R., C. P. Div. 633.

5. Wadsworth v. Queen of Spain, 17 Ad. & E., N. S. 171; Trainer v. Porter, 45 Mo. 336; Com. Dig. Prohibition E; High's Ex. L. Rem., § 779; Walton v. Greenwood, 63 Me. 363; De Haber v. Queen of Portugal, 17 Q. B. 171; Worthington v. Jefferies, 44 L. J., C. P. 209; In Reg. v. Twiss, 10 B. & S. 298; 4 L. R., Q. B. 407. See Chambers v. Green, 44 L. J. Ch. 600. The granting of a prohibition on the application of a stranger was held to be discretionary.

6. Mayor etc. of London v. Cox, 2 E. & I. App. 280; Arnold v. Shields, 5 Dana (Ky.) 18; 30 Am. Dec. 669. In writ is usually issued in England in the name of the sovereign and in this country in the name of the State.¹ For separate suits against individuals there should be separate applications for prohibitions.²

3. When Writ May Issue.—The judges at common law did not issue writs of prohibition in vacation. In the United States necessity may require the application for prohibition to be made in vacation, but the writ itself should only be issued in term time. When the application is made in vacation, a rule to show cause should first issue, returnable to the next term of the court, and this rule should be served upon the judge, or court, and the parties to be affected by it.³ When a circuit judge has irregularly granted the writ in vacation, on a petition which did not justify it, and without notice or a preliminary rule to show cause, although the supreme court will not interfere by prohibition, at the suit of the inferior tribunal which has disregarded the writ, it will grant a writ in the nature of a mandamus, commanding the circuit judge to set aside the writ issued by him, and to reverse his action back to the filing of the original petition.⁴

4. Notice.—In proceedings for a writ of prohibition service upon the person or persons adversely interested is essential. To proceed without such notice would violate the fundamental rule that in all suits in courts of common law a service upon the persons or parties adversely interested is indispensable.⁵

5. Service.—The writ is served in the same manner as an ordinary summons, and a summons can be served on the defendant personally or by leaving a certified copy thereof at his usual place of abode with some suitable person.⁶

6. Answer.—A petition for a writ of prohibition will be dismissed if submitted simply on the petition and answer, and the answer denies the leading allegations of the petition.⁷ So, if the respondent files a demurrer and answer, and the demurrer is overruled, and judgment absolute is given against respondent on the insufficiency of his answer, when, in the absence of a motion for judgment on the pleadings, he expects that only the Armstrong v. Taylor Co. Ct., 15 W. Va. 190, a declaration by citizens and tax-payers for a writ of prohibition against the county court, to prevent reduction of taxation on property of a railroad company in the county, was held to be demurrable for not making the company a party respondent.

1. Baldwin v. Cooley, 1 S. Car. 256; High's Ex. L. Rem., § 779. In State v. Seay, 23 Mo. App. 623, it was held that a State is not a necessary party to a writ of prohibition.

2. Gerrard v. Sherrington, 1 Leon 286; Kadwalader v. Bryan, Cro. Car. 162.

3. Ex parte Boothe, 64 Ala. 312.

A writ of prohibition, when allowed by a justice out of court, may be quashed on motion at special term, even if returnable at the general term. People v. Russell, 19 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 136.

4. Ex parte Booth, 64 Ala. 312. See Ex parte Keeling, 50 Ala. 474; Ex parte Ray, 45 Ala. 15.

5. Walton v. Greenwood, 60 Me. 364; Ex parte Davis, 41 Me. 59.

6. Jones v. House, 4 Utah 484.

7. Cariaga v. Dryden, 30 Cal. 244.

Truth of Facts Admitted.—A general demurrer was pleaded to a declaration in prohibition, which stated a trial by unauthorized individuals, and the ad-demurrer would be passed on, a motion to vacate the decision on the ground of surprise, and to allow an amended answer, will be granted.¹

7. Variance.—A variance between the suggestion (or affidavit which the statute has substituted for it) and the declaration, is not fatal in bar and consequently is not ground of demurrer.²

8. Motion to Quash.—The motion to quash the return to the alternative writ of prohibition is in the nature of a demurrer thereto. Like a demurrer it reaches back to the first defective pleading. So if the relation does not state cause for issuing writ of prohibition, it may be quashed upon this motion.³

9. Prohibition Issued in Excess of Jurisdiction.—Where the writ of prohibition is issued in excess of jurisdiction, it may be annulled by certiorari.⁴

10. Enforcement of Prohibition.—Implicit obedience to the mandates of the prohibition is exacted in all cases, and the proper remedy for enforcing the writ, if disobeyed, is by attachment for contempt of court and not by writ of restitution.⁵

11. Costs.—Where a motion for prohibition has been dismissed, without order concerning the costs, the defendant is not entitled to recover costs against the relator.⁶

PROMISE is a declaration, verbal or written, made by one person to another for a good or valuable consideration, by which the promisor binds himself to do, or forbear, some act, and gives to the promisee a legal right to demand and enforce a fulfillment.⁷

mission of testimony in opposition to the rules of law; the truth of the facts alleged being thereby admitted, a prohibition issued without view of the proceedings of the court below. State v. Hudnall, 2 Nott & M. (S. Car.) 419.

Compliance.—An alternative writ of prohibition was issued to the superior court on the petition of an executor, who alleged that, notwithstanding his appeal from an order settling his account, the court, on the application of the heirs, was proceeding to a final distribution. Held, that, on the withdrawal of their application by the heirs, and their stipulation not to renew it until the determination of the appeal, the alternative writ would be dismissed, though the heirs expressly reserve the right to apply for a partial distribution. Pezuela v. Superior Ct., 83 Cal. 49.

1. Heilbron v. Campbell (Cal. 1890) 23 Pac. Rep. 1032.

2. Warwick v. Mayo, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 528.

3. State v. Brawn, 31 Wis. 600.

4. California Furniture Co. v. Halsey, 54 Cal. 318.

5. Howard v. Pierce, 38 Mo. 296;

State v. Hungerford, 8 Wis. 345; 3 Black. Com. 112, 113.

6. Beaufort v. Danner, 1 Strobb. (S. Car.) 176.

7. Newcomb v. Clark, 1 Den. (N.Y.) 226. And yet it was said in that case that a guaranty which reads: "I hereby promise to pay," etc., does not impart or imply a consideration, within the meaning of the New York statute of frauds, requiring the consideration to be expressed.

In Bassett v. Den, 17 N. J. L. 432, the court said: "According to Walker, to promise is to make a declaration of some benefit, or an assurance of some ill. To say, then, that 'I declare that I will, do so and so' means exactly the same thing and imposes precisely the same obligation as the words 'I promise that I will' do so and so." That case turned upon the sufficiency of the oath of a surveyor of highways. The statute using the words "promise and affirm," and the surveyor having used the form "declare and affirm," it was held that the statute had been sufficiently complied with.

Promise is an engagement by which

Definition.

PROMISSORY NOTE—PROPERTY.

Definition.

PROMISSORY NOTE.—See BILLS AND NOTES, vol. 2, p. 313.

PROMOTERS.—See CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 201.

PROMPT.—Prompt is synonymous with quick; sudden; precipitate. Indeed, one who is ready, is said to be prepared at the moment; one who is prompt, is said to be prepared beforehand.¹

PROOF.—(See also BURDEN OF PROOF, vol. 2, p. 649; EVIDENCE, vol. 7, p. 42).—The terms "proof" and "evidence" are often used indifferently as synonymous with each other; but the former is applied, by the most accurate logicians, to the effect of evidence, and not to the medium by which truth is established.²

PROPER.—See note 3.

PROPERTY.—(See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 3, p. 714; EMBEZZLEMENT, vol. 6, p. 459; PERSONAL PROPERTY; REAL the promisor contracts with another to perform or do something to the advantage of the latter. Bouv. Law Dict.

Mutual Promises.—In Schneider v. Lang, 29 Minn. 256, the court by Berry, J., said: "The case is, then, one of a promise on the part of the plaintiff to do something of advantage in law to the defendant, and on the part of the defendant to do something of advantage in law to the plaintiff—a case of mutual promises one of which is the consideration of the other."

Promise and Representation Distinguished.—A representation applies to the present, a promise to the future. Murdock v. Chenango Ins. Co., 2 N. Y. 220.

Concurrent Promises.—Where the acts to be performed are simultaneous. And. Law Dict.; Dermott v. Jones, 23 How. (U. S.) 220.

Dependent Promises — Independent Promises.—When the agreements go to the whole of the consideration of both sides the promises are dependent, and one of them is a condition precedent to the other. If the agreements go to a part only of the consideration on both sides, the promises are so far independent. Dermott v. Jones, 23 How. (U. S.) 220.

Original and Collateral Promise.—Expressions used in speaking of liability under the Statute of Frauds "to answer for the debt or default of another;" the former designating the obligation of the principal debtor, the latter the obligation of the person undertaking to answer for the debt. "Original" also characterizes any new promise to pay an antecedent debt of another. And.

Law Dict., citing Mallory v. Gillett, 21 N. Y. 414.

See also FRAUDS, STATUTE OF, vol. 8, p. 677.

New Promise.—See LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, vol. 13, p. 748.

1. Tobias v. Lissberger, 105 N. Y. 412; 59 Am. Rep. 14.

2. 1 Greenl. Ev., § 1; Schloss v. Creditors, 31 Cal. 203; Perry v. Dubuque etc. R. Co., 36 Iowa 106.

"Proof is that quantity of approximate evidence which produces assurance and certainty." Buffalo etc. R. Co. v. Reynolds, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 98.

"Proof, in strict legal construction, means evidence before a court or jury, in a judicial way." Lenox v. United Ins. Co., 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 224.

"This is a technical word, used in a technical sense, and implies the application, to some extent, of those rules under which evidence is ordinarily admitted." Hill v. Hunt, 20 N. J. L. 478.

Proof, as used in South Carolina Rev. Stat. 497, allowing a judgment to be set aside on "satisfactory proof," is synonymous with evidence. Hill v. Watson, 10 S. Car. 268.

Full Proof.—Evidence which satisfies the mind of the truth of the facts in dispute, to the entire exclusion of every reasonable doubt. Kane v. Hibernia Mut. F. Ins. Co., 38 N. J. L. 450.

Proof is Evident.—See HABEAS CORPUS, vol. 9, p. 207.

See generally, Brown v. Hinchman, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 75; Hill v. Hunt, 20 N. J. L. 476; Ex parte Cook, 2 Tex. App. 388; McCoy v. State, 25 Tex. 38.

3. The California insolvency act of PROPERTY).—Property, in its appropriate sense, means that dominion or indefinite right of user and disposition which one may lawfully exercise over particular things or subjects, and generally to the exclusion of all others; yet the term is often used to indicate the res or subject of the property, rather than the property itself.¹ The word is nomen generalissi-

1880, requires that merchants should have kept "proper books" in order to obtain a discharge. Held, that books which did not contain a loan to the firm, which, if entered, would have shown that the firm was utterly insolvent, were not "proper books" within the meaning of the statute. In re Good, 78 Cal. 399. See generally INSOLVENCY, vol. 11, p. 167.

Proper Instructions.—Within the meaning of a statute which provides that in a contested will case, an issue shall be made up and submitted to the jury under "proper instructions" by the court, it was held, that "proper instructions" are such as the law of the case and the testimony before the jury make pertinent. Davis v. Gelhaus, 44 Ohio St. 69. See also INSTRUCTIONS, vol. 11, p. 236.

1. Rigney v. Chicago, 102 Ill. 77. See also Dorman v. State, 34 Ala. 239.

Arrest of a Female for Injury to Property.—New York Code, § 179, provides that "no female shall be arrested in any action except for a willful injury to person, character or property." "Property," as used in this section means the right of the owner of a thing to its disposal, use, and enjoyment, as well as the thing itself, and any detention of the subject is an injury to the owner's "property" in it, within the meaning of the statute. Eypert v. Bolenius, 2 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 193; Starr v. Kent, 2 Code Rep. (N. Y.) 30; Northern R. Co. v. Carpenter, 3 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 259; Solomon v. Waas, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 179; Duncan v. Katen, 64 N. Y. 625.

But in Tracy v. Leland, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 731, it was held, that by "injury to property," within the above section, an injury to the thing itself was meant, and not an injury to the owner's interest or estate in it.

Other Definitions.—The highest right a man can have to anything, being used for that right which one hath in lands or tenements, goods or chattels, which no way depends on another man's courtesy. Jacobs Law Dict., quoted in Stief v. Hart, 1 N. Y. 24;

Jackson v. Housel, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 282.

The right to possess, use, enjoy, and dispose of a thing. Babcock v. Buffalo, 56 N. Y. 268.

The free use, enjoyment and disposal of all one's acquisitions without control or direction. Caro v. Metropolitan Elev. R. Co., 46 Super. Ct. (N. Y.) 138.

Property is the exclusive right of possessing, enjoying and disposing of a thing which is in itself valuable; it is ownership. Jones v. Van Zandt, 4 McLean (U. S.) 603.

The word "property" denotes the interest one may have in lands and chattels to the exclusion of others. Ayers v. Lawrence, 59 N. Y. 192. See also Morrison v. Semple, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 94.

An exclusive right to things, containing not only a right to use those things, but a right to dispose of them, either by exchanging them for other things, or giving them away to any other person without consideration, or even throwing them away. Wynehamer v. People, 13 N. Y. 397. See also Toledo Bank v. Bond, 1 Ohio St. 623; Sherman v. Elder, 24 N. Y. 381.

The right and interest a man has in lands and chattels. It is the right to enjoy and dispose of certain things in the most absolute manner, as he pleases, provided he makes no use of them prohibited by law. Dow v. Gould etc. Min. Co., 31 Cal. 637; quoting Bouv. Law Dict.

The unrestricted and exclusive right to a thing; the right to dispose of the substance of a thing in every legal way, to use it and exclude every one else from interfering with it. Bruch v. Carter, 32 N. J. L. 561; quoting Burrill Law Dict.

Property consists of those things which belong to us by that exclusive right which enables us to exclude all others from having anything at all to do with them. . . . Toledo Bank v. Bond, 1 Ohio St. 623.

Property consists in the free use, enjoyment, and disposal by a person of mum, and extends to every species of valuable right and interest, including real and personal property, easements, franchises and other incorporeal hereditaments.¹ Standing alone, all his acquisitions, without any control or diminution, save only by the laws of the land. Stevens v. State, 2 Ark. 291.

The sole and exclusive dominion which one man claims and exercises over the external things of this world in total exclusion of the right of any other individual in the universe. Law of Burial, 4 Bradf. (N. Y.) 516.

"Property itself, in a legal sense, is nothing more than the exclusive right 'of possessing, enjoying, and disposing of a thing,' which, of course, includes the use of a thing." Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Englewood etc. R. Co., 115 Ill. 375, 385.

"Property, in its broader and more appropriate sense, is not alone the chattel or land itself, but the right to freely possess, use, and alienate the same; and many things are considered property which have no tangible existence, but which are necessary to the satisfactory use and enjoyment of that which is tangible." Denver v. Bayer, 7 Colo. 113.

An interesting and instructive article by Mr. A. G. Sedgwick, in which he considers the different meanings of the word property, will be found in the North American Review for September, 1882, vol. 135, p. 253. And see Eaton v. Boston C. & M. R. Co., 51 N. H. 511; St. Louis v. O'Flynn, 19 Ill. App. 64; Tripp v. Overocker, 7 Colo. 72.

Power of Disposition.—In Wynehamer v. People, 13 N. Y. 396, the court by Comstock, J., said: "Nor can I find any definition of property which does not include the power of disposition." Sherman v. Elder, 24 N. Y. 381.

Property does not consist merely of the title and possession. It includes the right to make any legal use of it, and the right to pledge or mortgage it, or to sell and transfer it. Kuhn v. Common Council, 70 Mich. 537.

1. Boston etc. R. Co. v. Salem etc. R. Co., 2 Gray (Mass.) 35. See also People v. Mayor etc. of Brooklyn, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 535; Springfield F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Allen, 43 N. Y. 389; Williston Seminary v. Hampshire Co., 147 Mass. 427.

"Property" is of very extensive signification, and reasonably and fairly embraces articles not included in the phrase "goods and merchandise." Chamberlain v. Western Transportation Co., 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 218.

Franchises—Privileges.—It has been held that "property" in a law authorizing taxes, does not include the franchise of a corporation. State v. Philadelphia etc. R. Co., 45 Md. 361.

The power to authorize the laying down of gas pipes, is, in no true sense of the word, a part of the city property, to which the corporate authority of the city is to resort for purposes of revenue. Smith v. Metropolitan Gas Light Co., 12 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 187.

But in general a franchise is property and it possesses the valuable incidents of other species of property. Billings v. Breinig, 45 Mich. 70; Lippencott v. Allander, 27 Iowa 462; Conway v. Taylor, 1 Black (U. S.) 603; Benson v. Mayor etc. of N. Y., 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 223; State Board of Assessors v. State (N. J. 1886), 4 Atl. Rep. 587; 8 Atl. Rep. 724; Soc. for Savings v. Coite, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 594; State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575. See also FRANCHISE, vol. 8. p. 584.

Property in Land.—The term property as applied to lands comprehends every species of title, inchoate and complete. It is supposed to embrace those rights which lie in contract, those which are executory as well as those which are executed. Soulard v. United States, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 512; Delassus v. United States, 9 Pet. (U. S.) 117, 133; Smith v. United States, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 326, 329; Figg v. Snook, 9 Pet. (U. S.) 202; Bryan v. Kennett, 113 U. S. 179.

Article 10 of the Massachusetts bill of rights, assuring compensation for private property taken for public use is not confined to lands held in fee, but includes every valuable interest which can be recognized and enjoyed as property. Old Colony etc. R. Co. v. Plymouth Co., 14 Gray (Mass.) 155; Bryan v. Kennett, 113 U. S. 179.

The mere possession of real estate is constantly treated as property. King v. Gotz, 70 Cal. 240.

Easements.—Property is defined as being "the right to possess, use, enjoy and dispose of a thing." The thing the term includes everything that is the subject of ownership.¹

mentioned does not always have a tangible or physical existence; it may be an easement or anything else that can become the subject of private ownership. The proprietor of an irrigating ditch, whether upon his own premises or those of another, has a property ownership both in the ditch and the right of way therefor, and using or enlarging such ditch without the owner's consent is as much a taking or damaging of private property, within the meaning of the constitution as would be appropriating the right of way therefor in the first instance. Tripp v. Overocker, 7 Colo. 74. See also IRRIGATION, vol. 11, p. 846.

1. Stanton v. Lewis, 26 Conn. 449; Baker v. State, 109 Ind. 58; Jones v. Skinner, 5 L. J. Ch. 90; Morrison v. Hoppe, 4 DeG. & S. 234; Washington Co. v. Weld Co., 12 Colo. 152. Includes everything which goes to make up one's wealth or estate. Carlton v. Carlton, 72 Me. 116. Any estate whether goods, money, or lands, and in its general signification, includes anything capable of ownership. People v. New York etc. R. Co., 84 N. Y. 565; aff'g, 22 Hun (N. Y.) 95.

Labor is Property.—In re Jacobs 33 Hun (N. Y.) 379; Slaughter-house Cases, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 127; In re Fiburcio Parrott, 1 Fed. Rep. 481. See also Foxall v. McKenny, 3 Cranch (C. C.) 206.

Includes Both Real and Personal Property.—"Property," in its general and popular sense, includes both lands and chattels. Owen v. Smith, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 641; DeWitt v. San Francisco, 2 Cal. 289; Moffett v. Moffett, 67 Tex. 644; Primm v. Belleville, 59 Ill. 143. But the meaning may be restricted by the context: as in People v. New York, etc. Co., 84 N. Y. 565, where it was held, under an act which authorized the people to bring an action to recover "money, funds, credits, and property," that "property," when taken in connection with the other words used in the statute, must be restricted to property of the same general character as that already mentioned. See also Chicago v. Hulbert, 118 Ill. 633, where it was held that the word "property," as used in a statute defining a pawn-broker, did not include real estate. And see Merritt v. Carpen- ter, 3 Keyes (N. Y.) 142; Bridgers v. Taylor, 102 N. Car. 86; Bancroft v. Curtis, 108 Mass. 50; Brailey v. Southborough, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 142.

In a Will.—In a devise the word "property," if unrestricted by the context, will include both real and personal property. Jackson v. Housel, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 281. See also Monroe v. Jones, 8 R. I. 526; Den v. Payne, 5 Hayw. (Tenn.) 104; Morris v. Henderson, 37 Miss. 492; Rossetter v. Simmons, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 452; Tyrone v. Waterford, 1 De G. F. & J. 613; Arnold v. Arnold, 2 My. & K. 365; Doe v. Langlands, 14 East 370; Doe v. Morgan, 6 Barn. & C. 512; Hunt v. Hunt, 4 Gray (Mass.) 193; Robinson v. Randolph, 21 Fla. 638; Laing v. Barbour, 119 Mass. 525. See generally Howland v. Howland, 100 Mass. 222; King v. George, L. R., 5 Ch. D. 627; Moake's Eng. Rep. 364; Chapman v. Chick, 81 Me. 109; Chandler v. Simmons, 97 Mass. 507.

And the term has been held to include everything which may be the subject of ownership, as money, securities, etc. Pell v. Ball, Spears Eq. (S. Car.) 48.

And even to include the services of a testator's servants, engaged in the business, where the bequest was of the use of the testator's "property," in a certain baking business. Foxall v. McKenny, 3 Cranch (C. C.) 206.

So stock in a railroad company is embraced in the term "property," which was directed by a will to be sold. Adams v. Jones, 6 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 221.

The words in a will, "my will and desire is, that all my property that I have not before given away and lent be equally divided," etc., conveys every residuary interest whatsoever. Harrell v. Hoskins, 2 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 479.

But the meaning of the term may be so restricted by the context, as by the application of the principle of noscitur a sociis, that it will carry only personal property. Wheeler v. Dunlap, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 291; Harwood v. Lowell, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 313; Buchanan v. Harrison, 1 J. & H. 662; Belaney v. Belaney, 2 Ch. 138; Chapman v. Prickett, 6 Bing. 602; Smith v. Hutchinson, 61 Mo. 87. See also NOSCITUR A SOCIIS; OTHER.

Equivalent to Estate.—In Fogg v.

Clark, 1 N. H. 167, a testator devised all his "landed property in M to F." The court, by Bell, J., said: "The word property in its most strict and proper sense relates solely to the quantity of estate in the land, and, unless words restraining its signification are added, always means the whole interest. The word 'property' in such connection is synonymous with the word estate or interest, and includes everything in the land which the testator possessed." See also Robinson v. Randolph, 21 Fla. 638; Stanley v. Stanley, 26 Me. 198; Hunt v. Hunt, 4 Gray (Mass.) 193; Foster v. Stewart, 18 Pa. St. 24. See also INTENT, vol. 11, p. 373.

Choses in Action.—The word "property" includes choses in action. Stanton v. Lewis, 26 Conn. 449; Carlton v. Carlton, 72 Me. 116; Winfree v. Bagley, 102 N. Car. 515; Ide v. Harwood, 30 Minn. 195; Stahl v. Webster, 11 Ill. 511; M'Lezare v. Goode, 1 Harp. Eq. (S. Car.) 272; New Orleans v. Mechanics' etc. Ins. Co., 30 La. Ann. 876; 31 Am. Rep. 232. See also Savings & Loan Society v. Austin, 46 Cal. 416; Fling v. Goodall, 40 N. H. 215; Cross v. Haldeman, 15 Ark. 202; Banning v. Sibley, 3 Minn. 389; Crone v. Braun, 23 Minn. 239. See generally In re Turcan, L. R., 40 Ch. D. 5; Lombard v. Willis, 147 Mass. 13; McClain v. Buck, 73 Cal. 322; Redmond v. Tarboro, 106 N. Car. 122; Jenkins v. International Bank, 106 U. S. 571.

Within the meaning of § 292 New York Code, requiring, if execution is returned unsatisfied, that the judgment debtor shall appear and answer concerning his "property," a chose in action is property. Ten Broeck v. Sloo, 12 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 28. In Tyrone v. Waterford, 1 De G. F. & J. 613, it was held that a bequest of all the testator's property in a certain county carried debts due to his collieries in that county.

A bequest of "all my property of every description," has been held to pass choses in action. Hurdle v. Outlaw, 2 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 75.

It has been held, that a debt due an American citizen from a foreign government, was property. Meade v. U. S., 2 Ct. of Cl. 224.

The right which an insolvent debtor has in a policy of insurance on his life payable to him in case he survives a certain day, which day is after the first publication of notice, passes to his assignee as "property" within the meaning of Pub. Stat. of Massachusetts, ch. 157, § 46. Smith v. Dickinson, 140 Mass. 171. See also Pierce v. Charter Oak Ins. Co., 138 Mass. 151; Goreley v. Butler, 147 Mass. 10.

But in Pippin v. Ellison, 12 Ired. (N. Car.) 61, it was held that the term "property" in its legal sense does not include choses in action, and in reference to personalty, is confined to "goods," which embraces things inanimate, as furniture, etc., and to "chattels," which embraces living things, as horses, etc. And in Vaughan v. Murfreesboro, 96 N. Car. 318, where a statute permitted a municipal corporation to "levy a tax upon all persons and property within the town," it was held that this did not authorize a tax on solvent credits, money or bonds. And see Pullen v. Commissioners, 68 N. Car. 451. These cases, however, were disapproved in Redmond v. Tarboro, 106 N. Car. 122, which declares that Pullen v. Comm'rs, 68 N. Car. 451, is no longer an authority.

Nor is the right to damages arising from the commission of a tort, though in one sense a chose in action included within the term "property," as, for example, a claim for malicious prosecution. Hopkins v. Fogler, 60 Me. 266; or an action for damages to the person. Stone v. Boston etc. R. Co., 7 Gray (Mass.) 539.

And the term "property" may be used in such a manner as to make it referable solely to such an estate or interest as one may have in lands or goods subject to manual occupation. Goepp v. Bethlehem, 28 Pa. St. 255; Mifflintown v. Jacobs, 69 Pa. St. 152.

So the context may so restrict the meaning of the word as to exclude choses in action. Jameson's Appeal, 1 Mich. 102.

See also CHOSSES IN ACTION, vol 3, p. 235.

Right to Take an Appeal—Right of Action.—Within the meaning of § 519 of the Penal Code of California, which constitutes it an offense to write a letter to any other person, threatening to expose any secret affecting him, with intent to extort money or other "property," it was held that the right to take and prosecute an appeal is property. People v. Cadman, 57 Cal. 464.

There is no doubt that a right in action, where it comes into existence under common law principles, and is not given by statute as a mere penalty, or without equitable basis, is as much property as any tangible possession, and as much within the rules of constitutional protection. Dunlap v. Toledo etc. R. Co., 50 Mich. 474; Johnson v. Jones, 44 Ill. 142; Hubbard v. Brainard, 35 Conn. 563; Griffin v. Wilcox, 21 Ind. 370.

A right of action is as much property as is a corporeal possession. Power v. Harlow, 57 Mich. 111.

Money Is Property.—An act, carving two new counties out of an old one, reserved "all county records and other property," to the old county. Held, that money was included in the term "property." Washington Co. v. Weld Co., 12 Colo. 152.

So, within the meaning of Michigan Comp. Laws, § 579, which enacts that if any person shall feloniously steal the property of another in any other State, and shall bring the same into Michigan he shall be guilty of larceny, it was held that money was property. People v. Williams, 24 Mich. 156.

"Money" is "property" within the meaning of art. 219, of the Texas Code of Crim. Pro., by which the venue of prosecutions for embezzlements, is regulated. Brown v. State, 23 Tex. App. 214.

To the same effect see Baker v. State, 109 Ind. 58; Brown v. Brown, 41 N. Y. 513; People v. Mayor etc. of Brooklyn, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 535; Mitchell v. Mitchell, 35 Miss. 114.

But in Martin v. McNealey, 101 N. Car. 634, where a testator bequeathed to his wife certain personal property and a legacy of $1,000, and by a subsequent clause gave his daughter, upon the death of his wife, "all the property of all descriptions that I have heretofore willed to my wife," it was held, that the legacy did not pass to the daughter under the term "property." The court said: "While the term property, in its broad legal sense, embraces money, in its ordinary acceptation among people not familiar with legal terms and phraseology, it does not." See also MONEY, vol. 15, p. 701.

Property at a Bank.—A bequest of "half my property at R's Bank." The testator had at the bank, a cash balance and some certificates of French shares. It was held, that a moiety of the shares, as well as of the cash balance, passed by the will.

It was said by Halsbury, L. C., that there was nothing at the bank, if the words of the bequest were taken in their strict and proper signification, answering this description, as both the cash balance and the shares were choses in action and had no locality. In re Prater, L. R., 37 Ch. Div. 481.

Business — Profession — Occupation.—The imposition of a tax upon the occupation of wholesale liquor-selling is not a tax upon "property," within the meaning of the word as used in the Arkansas constitution. Straub v. Gordon, 27 Ark. 625.

A constitutional restriction upon taxation of property does not apply to taxes upon a profession or business, such as the business done by an insurance company. Home Ins. Co. v. City Council of Augusta, 50 Ga. 530, 543.

The profession of a priest is his property, and a prohibition of the exercise of that profession by his bishop, without accusation or hearing, is contrary to the law of the land. O'Hara v. Stack, 90 Pa. St. 477.

Prospective Patent.—Section 1753 Rev. Stats. of Wisconsin authorizes the issue of the stock of a corporation in consideration of labor or "property." It was held that, within the meaning of this statute, a prospective patent is property. Whitehall v. Jacobs, 75 Wis. 479.

Within the Meaning of Acts Providing Compensation for the Exercise of the Right of Eminent Domain.—The Texas constitution provides that no person's "property" shall be applied to a public use without adequate compensation. Construing this language, it has been held, that the term "property," as here used, means, "not only the tangible thing owned, but also every right which accompanies ownership and is its incident." Gulf City etc. R. Co. v. Fuller, 63 Tex. 467. See also Fort Worth etc. R. Co. v. Jennings, 76 Tex. 373.

Depriving a proprietor of the beneficial use and enjoyment of his lands, is as much a taking and appropriation of his property as is the taking of the land itself. Grand Rapids Booming Co. v. Jarvis, 30 Mich. 309. See also EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 509.

General Property—Special Property.—General property, the general right which one person has in a thing; special property, some temporary right of control, until a common purpose is accomplished.

In a contract of bailment the bailor has the general property, and the bailee a special property, in the thing bailed; and an officer has a special property in

PROPOSAL.—See note 1.

PROPRIETARY.—Belonging to ownership; or pertaining to a proprietor. One who has the legal right or exclusive title to anything, whether in possession or not; an owner; relating to a certain owner or proprietor.²

PROPRIETOR.—See note 3. (See also COPYRIGHT, vol. 4, p. 157; OWNER.)

goods levied upon. 2 Bl. Com. 388, 391; And's L. Dict.

Absolute Property.—Qualified Property.—Absolute property. A full and complete title to and dominion over personality. Qualified property. A temporary or special interest, liable to be totally destroyed by the happening of a particular event. 2 Kent's Comm. 347; And's L. Dict.

The interest which can be acquired in external objects or things is "property." The things themselves are not, in a true sense, property, but they constitute its foundation and material, and the idea of property springs out of the connection, control, or interest which, according to law, may be acquired in or over them. This interest is "absolute" when a thing is objectively and lawfully appropriated by one to his own use in exclusion of all others; and "limited" or "qualified" when the control acquired falls short of that. To entitle one to bring an action for an injury to any specific object or thing, he must have a property therein of one kind or another. An administrator has no property in the body of his intestate. Griffith v. Charlotte etc. R. Co., 23 S. Car. 38.

Property and Effects.—See EFFECTS, vol. 6, p. 187.

Property in Dogs.—See ANIMALS, vol. 1, p. 573.

As Used in a Policy of Insurance.—See MARINE INSURANCE, vol. 14, p. 320.

1. Under a Connecticut statute making it a criminal offense to publish within the State any written or printed proposals to sell or procure lottery tickets, it was held that an advertisement purporting to be a caution against fraudulent and bogus lotteries, and setting forth that certain lottery companies, of which the advertisers were the managers, were the only ones authorized by law, but not giving the address of the managers, nor the address of any person from whom tickets might be procured, was not a "proposal," within the meaning of the statute. State v. Sykes, 28 Conn. 225.

2. From the Imperial, Webster's and Worcester's Dicts., And. Law Dict., cited in Ferguson v. Arthur, 117 U. S. 487, a case involving the meaning of the term "proprietary medicines" as used in the tariff act.

Proprietary Preparations.—All goods protected by a trade mark do not come within the description of "proprietary preparations," as that term is used in the tariff law, but only those goods which by reason of the care bestowed upon their preparation, the direction for their use and the special use for which they are intended, are brought within the fair commercial meaning of those words. Grommes v. Seeberger, 41 Fed. Rep. 32.

3. A Massachusetts statute provided that, "If the life of any person being a passenger shall be lost by reason of the negligence or carelessness of the proprietor or proprietors of any railroad, steamboat, etc.," such "proprietor or proprietors" shall be liable to a fine. In Com. v. Boston etc. R. Co., 11 Cush. (Mass.) 516, the court by Dewey, J., said: "The term 'proprietors' as used here, may not technically describe a corporate body created in the manner and form our railroad corporations are, but we can have no doubt as to the intended meaning and the effect that ought to be given to it, and that it applies to all common carriers whether corporate or joint stock companies, the terms used being general, and embracing common carriers incorporated or not."

A California act provides that the fact of the publication of a summons shall be verified by the affidavit of the printer of the newspaper in which the publication was made, the court held that the terms "printer" and "proprietor" are, in the sense of the statute, synonymous. Quivey v. Porter, 37 Cal. 458.

PROPRIETY.—See note 1.

PRO RATA.—According to certain part; in proportion.²

PROSECUTE.—To carry forward, wage, or maintain a judicial proceeding.³

PROSECUTING ATTORNEY.—See DISTRICT ATTORNEY, vol. 5, p. 713; PUBLIC OFFICERS.

PROSECUTION.—The act of conducting or waging a proceeding in court.⁴

The means adopted to bring a supposed offender to justice and punishment by due course of law.⁵

Though it is true that there is a distinction between "proprietors" and those to whom buildings are rented, it is also true that in common parlance the person who runs a mill is, though but a tenant, usually spoken of as the proprietor of it. Wilson v. Hampden F. Ins. Co., 4 R. I. 167.

1. As used in an ancient Massachusetts ordinance, held to be "nearly, if not precisely," equivalent to property. Com. v. Alger, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 70.

2. Webster and Worcester, followed in Rosenberg v. Frank, 58 Cal. 405.

Two persons jointly agreeing with another party "to pro rata the loss or gain in the value" of certain shares of hotel stock at the end of two years—held, to be jointly liable for half the loss. Penniman v. Stanley, 122 Mass. 310.

3. Abbott's Law Dict.; Carpenter v. Camp, 39 La. Ann. 1024.

Under a fire insurance policy stipulating that claims under it must be "prosecuted" within a limited time after the loss, it was held that the presentation of the loss, and a demand of its payment, were not such a prosecution of the claim as was meant, but a prosecution by a suit or action. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Lacroix, 35 Tex. 249.

Prosecute with Effect.—See EFFECT, vol. 6, p. 170.

4. It does not necessarily refer to a criminal proceeding. Abbott's Law Dict.; Dollaway v. Turrill, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 399; Fenner, J., in Carpenter v. Camp, 39 La. Ann. 1024. Compare Rawlins v. Jenkins, 4 Q. B. 419.

5. Bouvier's Law Dict.; State v. Williams, 34 La. Ann. 1198. A criminal proceeding at the suit of the government. Tennessee v. Davis, 100 U. S. 269.

It is defined to be the institution or commencement and continuance of a criminal suit; the process of exhibiting formal charges against an offender before a legal tribunal and pursuing them to final judgment on behalf of the State or government, as by indictment or information. Burr. Law Dict.; followed in Schulte v. Keokuk Co. (Iowa), 37 N. W. Rep. 376.

"Now, what is a prosecution. It is not an action, it is not a suit; none of our books confound it with those two words. It is the following up, or carrying on of an action or suit already commenced, until the remedy be attained." State v. Hardenburgh, 2 N. J. L. 339. See also Knowlton v. Read, 11 N. J. L. 321.

May be Synonymous with Indictment.—Within the meaning of the Pennsylvania Act of March 31, 1890, § 77, providing that "All indictments and prosecutions for all misdemeanors, perjury excepted, shall be brought, or exhibited within two years next after such misdemeanor shall have been committed," prosecution is synonymous with indictment. Com. v. Haas, 57 Pa. St. 443.

May Apply to a Defense.—Under a Vermont statute providing that the court may, when necessary, require of either party sufficient security for the cost of the prosecution, it was held that the word "prosecution" as used here applies as well to the defense as to the plaintiff's action, whenever the defense consists of an affirmative claim in avoidance of the orator's claim. Badger v. Taft, 58 Vt. 585.

Does Not Apply to the Investigation of a Grand Jury.—Under the Connecticut Bill of Rights providing that "In all criminal prosecutions, accused shall have a right to be heard by himself and by counsel, etc.," it was held PROSECUTING WITNESS.—See note 1.

PROSTITUTE; PROSTITUTION—(See also ABDUCTION, vol. 1, p. 21; DISORDERLY HOUSE, vol. 5, p. 693; FORNICATION, vol. 8, p. 555; LEWD AND LASCIVIOUS COHABITATION AND CONDUCT, vol. 13, p. 274).—A prostitute is a female given to indiscriminate lewdness for gain.² By the word prostitution, in its most general sense, is understood the act of letting one's self to sale, or of devoting to infamous purposes what is in one's power; as, the prostitution of talents or abilities; the prostitution of the press, etc. In a more restricted sense, the word means the act or practice of a female offering her body to an indiscriminate intercourse with men; the common lewdness of a female.³

that "prosecution" did not apply to an investigation by the grand jury. State v. Wolcott, 21 Conn. 279.

Criminal Prosecution.—A prosecution in a court of justice in the name of the government against one or more individuals accused of crime. Harger v. Thomas, 44 Pa. St. 130.

The Kansas Bill of Rights provides that "in all prosecutions the accused shall be allowed to have a speedy public trial by an impartial jury." Held, that "all prosecutions," as here used, were intended to mean only all criminal prosecutions for violations of the laws of the State, and were not intended to mean or include prosecutions for the violation of ordinary city ordinances which have relation only to the local affairs of the city. State v. Topeka, 30 Kan. 653.

1. Under the Illinois Act of 1869, which provides that one-half the penalty to be recovered against a railroad company for an omission to ring the bell or sound the whistle on the approach of a train to a crossing of a public highway, shall go to the "prosecuting witness," it is not essential, to entitle the person in whose name the suit is brought, to recover, that he should actually have testified in the case. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Herr, 54 Ill. 356.

2. State v. Stoyell, 54 Me. 27; followed in Davis v. Sladden, 17 Oregon 259; And. Law. Dict.

A woman who is unchaste, who has surrendered herself to illicit sexual intercourse with men. Springer v. State, 16 Tex. App. 593.

Though in the definitions above, a prostitute is defined as a woman "given to indiscriminate lewdness," it has been held that "incontinence with one or two persons" may constitute a woman a prostitute; and that it is not essential that she should have "submitted her person to illicit sexual intercourse with various persons." State v. Rice, 56 Iowa 432.

But in Fahnestock v. State, 102 Ind. 161, where, upon the trial of one charged with unlawfully frequenting houses of ill-fame, within the prohibition of § 2002 Rev. Stat. Indiana, 1881, the trial court charged that: "A female prostitute is a woman who has or holds unlawful sexual intercourse with men; and any act of voluntary sexual intercourse between an unmarried female and a male person is whoredom; and a single act of that kind makes a woman a whore or prostitute. These two terms mean the same thing," it was held that the charge was erroneous, as being outside the statutory definition of "prostitute" in the following section of that statute (§ 2003, Rev. Stat. Indiana 1881), viz: "Any female who frequents or lives in houses of ill-fame, or associates with women of bad character for chastity, either in public or at a house which men of bad character frequent or visit, or who commits fornication for hire, shall be deemed a prostitute."

A common prostitute is a public prostitute, who makes a business of selling the use of her person to the male sex for the purpose of illicit intercourse. A woman may be a prostitute and yet have illicit connection with one man only; but to be a common prostitute, her lewdness must be more general and indiscriminate. Morgan v. State, 16 Tex. App. 593.

See, however, the following note.

3. Carpenter v. People, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 610; Miller v. State, 121 Ind. 297; State v. Stoyell, 54 Me. 26.

PROTECT.—See note 1.

PROTEST.—(See also BILLS AND NOTES, vol. 2, p. 313; DEMAND, vol. 5, p. 522; NOTARY PUBLIC, vol. 16, p. 752.)

- I. Definition, 292.
- II. By Whom Made, 293.
- III. Form of Protest, 293.

- IV. When Protest Is Necessary, 295.
- V. Protest as Evidence, 296.
- VI. Waiver of Protest, 297.

I. DEFINITION.—When a foreign bill of exchange is presented for acceptance or for payment and is dishonored (i. e., such acceptance or payment is refused), a solemn declaration, usually written by a notary, must be made, stating the fact of the non-acceptance or non-payment, the reason for it, if any, and that the bill is "protested." This declaration is known as a protest—its object is to fix the liability of the indorsers and other parties to the bill.²

Intercourse with One Man Is Not Prostitution.—The phrase "illicit sexual intercourse," and the word "prostitution," are not convertible terms. "Prostitution," as used in the criminal statutes of the several States, meaning common indiscriminate, meretricious illicit intercourse, and not sexual intercourse confined exclusively to one man. Fahnestock v. State, 102 Ind. 163; Com. v. Cook, 12 Met. (Mass.) 93. See also Carpenter v. People, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 610; Miller v. State, 121 Ind. 296; Osborn v. State, 52 Ind. 526; State v. Stoyell, 54 Me. 26; State v. Ruhl, 8 Iowa 453. Compare Morgan v. State, 16 Tex. App. 593; State v. Rice, 56 Iowa 432.

Not Necessarily for Gain.—Prostitution as sometimes defined, consists in sexual intercourse for gain. "But we think if a woman submits to indiscriminate sexual intercourse, which she invites or solicits by word or act, or any device, she is a prostitute. Her avocation may be known from the manner in which she plies it, and not from pecuniary charges and compensation gained in any other manner." State v. Clark, 78 Iowa 492.

Not a Technical Word.—"Prostitution" is in no sense a technical term, and has no common law meaning.

People v. Cummons, 56 Mich. 544; Henderson v. People, 124 Ill. 607.

See also Miller v. State, 124 Ind. 294; Com. v. Cook, 12 Met. (Mass.) 97.

1. A Wisconsin statute provides that every person who, as principal contractor, etc., "furnishes any material in or about the erection, construction, protection, or removal of any machinery erected or constructed so as to be or become a part of the freehold, shall have a lien for such materials." In Standard Oil Co. v. Lane, 75 Wis. 636, the court, by Cole, C. J., said: "It will be noticed that the word 'protection' is used in connection with 'erection,' 'construction,' and 'repairs,' as well as 'removal.' And while the word, 'protect' often means to cover, shield or defend from injury, harm or danger of any kind, the word imports in the statute something used or furnished for the machinery which not only preserves from injury, but becomes a part of the machinery itself."

An agreement by a lessor "to protect" the lessee in "the use and enjoyment" of the premises, in connection with other words, were held to constitute a covenant for quiet enjoyment. Peters v. Grubb, 21 Pa. St. 455. See also REAL COVENANTS.

2. Dennistown v. Stewart, 17 How. (U. S.) 606; Platt v. Drake, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 296; 1 Randolph on Com. Paper, § 6; Davis v. Coddington, 1 N. Y. 186; Union Bank v. Hyde, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 572; Smith's Mercantile Law (3rd Am. ed.) 327.

Bouvier (Law Dict.) defines protest to be "a notarial act made for want of payment of a promissory note, or for want of acceptance or payment of a bill of exchange, by a notary public, in which it is declared that all parties to such instrument would be held responsible to the holder for all damages, exchanges, re-exchange, etc.

As used with reference to commer-

II. BY WHOM MADE.—Where the case is one governed by the rules of the law-merchant, it is always necessary that the protest be made by a notary if one is procurable; if no notary is to be had it may be made by any suitable person.¹ In other cases, while it is preferable that the protest be a notarial act, it is not always essential to its value as evidence, and it may be done by any convenient party;² in all such cases the necessity of protest being a creation purely of statute, it is generally provided by statute what form and character it shall have.

The notary is always required to act personally, therefore demand, presentment, or protest cannot be made by his clerk; this rule of the commercial law, however, may be varied by statute or by the usage of particular localities.³

III. FORM OF PROTEST.—The form in which a protest is to be made is a matter governed by the usage and law of the place where it is made.⁴ It is a well fixed principle, however, that a protest should state (1) the time of presentment, (2) place of presentment, (3) fact and manner of presentment, (4) demand of payment, (5) fact of dishonor, (6) names of the party by whom and to whom presentment was made. The signature of the notary or other cial paper, in a popular sense, protest includes all steps necessary to charge an indorser. Beals v. Peck, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 245; Davis v. Coddington, 1 N. Y. 186; Townsend v. Lorain Bank, 2 Ohio St. 345; Woodbury v. Sackrider, 2 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 402; Davis v. Coddington, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 16; Ayrault v. Pacific Bank, 6 Robt. (N. Y.) 337.

In Smith's Mercantile Law a protest is defined as "a minute of the non-acceptance or non-payment accompanied by a solemn declaration on the part of the holder against any loss to be sustained thereby." Smith's Mercantile Law (3rd Am. ed.) 327.

In an action by the holder of a bill of exchange against the drawer or indorser, the words "duly protested," in the complaint, must be considered equivalent to an averment that the bill was presented at maturity, at the place of payment named in it. Battle v. Weems, 44 Ala. 105.

1. Burke v. McKay, 2 How. (U. S.) 66; Munroe v. Woodruff, 17 Md. 159; Proffatt on Notaries, § 107. See also 3 Kent's Com. 95 et seq.

But a State law or general usage may overrule the general law-merchant in this respect. See authorities just cited. That a protest should be made by a notary may be seen from the very definition of the word—"a notarial act," etc. See Bouvier's Law Dict., Protest.

See also supra, this title, Definition, and authorities.

2. The California Civ. Code provides that "protest must be made by a notary public, if with reasonable diligence one can be obtained; if not, then by any reputable person in the presence of two witnesses. California Civ. Code, § 3226.

This rule is quite general. See Reed v. Bank of Kentucky, 1 Mon. (Ky.) 91; Proffatt on Notaries, § 107; Chitty on Bills 333; Herkimer Co. Bank v. Cox, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 119; 35 Am. Dec. 220; Bank v. Porter, 2 Watts (Pa.) 141; French Code of Commerce, art. 173. See also NOTARY PUBLIC, vol. 16, p. 752.

The codes of some States provide who shall make a protest in case of the absence or incapacity of the notary. Thus in the Alabama Code, § 1091, it is provided that any justice of the peace may act. A similar provision is found in Civ. Code of Lower Canada, art. 2304.

3. Cribbs v. Adams, 13 Gray (Mass.) 597.

This subject is fully treated in NOTARY PUBLIC, vol. 16, p. 752.

4. 3 Randolph on Com. Paper, §§ 1137-8; 2 Daniel on Neg. Instr., § 10; Carter v. Union Bank, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 548; 46 Am. Dec. 89; Orono Bank v. Ward, 49 Me. 26; Tickner v.

officer making it should, of course, be attached; also the official seal—though this latter is not so universally required.¹

Roberts, 11 La. 14; 30 Am. Dec. 706.

1. Daniel on Neg. Instr., § 950; Proffatt on Notaries, § 110; Smith's Mercantile Law (3rd Am. ed.), 327-8; 3 Randolph on Com. Paper, §§ 1137-8.

A form for a protest is given in BILLS AND NOTES, vol. 2, p. 316.

Date of Protest.—The date of protest must expressly appear, for otherwise it will not be apparent whether or not the bill was really dishonored; for if the protest state that the bill was "this day protested" and is dated on a day previous to or after the day of maturity it is defective on its face. When the hour of the day is not stated it will be presumed that demand, etc., were made at the usual and proper business hours of the day. Walmsley v. Acton, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 312; Burbank v. Beach, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 326; Proffatt on Notaries, § 111; Fleming v. Fulton, 6 How. (Miss.) 473.

Where, upon an order, there was an indorsement, "I protest the within," without date, it must be referred to the date of the order, and a refusal to pay as therein directed. Prigden v. Cox, 13 Tex. 257.

Place of Presentment.—When the bill or note is payable at no particular place it is not absolutely necessary to state at what place presentment and demand was made, if the fact appears that it was presented to the person entitled to pay it; but when it is made payable at a particular place, as at a bank, the certificate of protest must show a presentment and demand at such place. People's Bank v. Brooke, 31 Mo. 7; 1 Am. Rep. 11; Proffatt on Notaries, § 112.

Fact and Manner of Presentment.—It would seem that a presentment at maturity implies a demand for payment and that the demand may be inferred from the presentment. But it is held in several cases that the fact both of presentment and demand must be stated. Naver v. Richardson, 36 Mo. 130; Farmers' etc. Bank v. Allen, 18 Md. 475. See also Farmers' Bank v. Bowie, 4 Md. 290.

In the case of Nott v. Beard, 16 La. 308, it was presumed that a demand necessarily implied a presentment of the bill, but the contrary was decided in Musson v. Lake, 4 How. (U. S.) 262.

It is therefore always the safer course to state both the fact of presentment and demand.

In Crowley v. Barry, 4 Gill (Md.) 194, it was said that a protest which states in substance a demand on the drawer and notice of non-payment is sufficient in point of form.

Where a protest is defective in not stating particularly how notice was given to an indorser, the necessary facts may be supplied by evidence aliunde. Bradley v. Davis, 26 Me. 45.

A protest of a note should state both the demand and notice of non-payment and is evidence of both. Dobson v. Laval, 4 McCord (S. Car.) 57. Compare Walker v. Turner, 2 Gratt. (Va.) 534.

A protest is not vitiated because the notary adds to the usual form a statement of all that transpired when the notes were presented and protested. Reapers' Bank v. Willard, 24 Ill. 439; 76 Am. Dec. 755.

Signature.—The signature, it is said, may be made by the notary's clerk or it may even be printed; it suffices that it appears as the act of the notary. 3 Randolph on Com. Paper, § 1138; Fulton v. McCracken, 18 Md. 528; 81 Am. Dec. 620.

Seal.—In the case of Bank of Kentucky v. Pursley, 3 Mon. (Ky.) 238, it is strongly maintained that a seal is never essential to the validity of a protest unless it is made so by statute; and this idea is also maintained in other cases. Huffaker v. National Bank, 12 Bush (Ky.) 287; Lambeth v. Caldwell, 1 Rob. (La.) 61. See also NOTARY PUBLIC, vol. 16, p. 752.

In Iowa a seal is made an essential to the validity of a protest, but it may be affixed when the instrument is offered in court. Rindskoff v. Malone, 9 Iowa 540.

The protest of a bill was written and signed on the day that payment was refused, but the notary did not affix his seal until several months afterwards, but before trial. Held, that the protest was completed in time. Billingsley v. State Bank, 3 Ind. 375.

When the court can perceive that a seal is attached to a protest, the protest is sufficiently authenticated; and neither the seal nor the signature of the notary

IV. WHEN PROTEST IS NECESSARY.—By the law-merchant a protest is always necessary to charge an indorser in case of the non-acceptance or non-payment of a foreign bill of exchange—in all other cases it is unnecessary and is no evidence of the facts stated therein.¹ But by statute in very many of the States the law of protest is made applicable to inland bills of exchange, and to promissory notes negotiable, and a protest is made necessary in order to charge the drawee or indorsers in either case.² It should be noticed, however, that a foreign promissory note (i. e., a note made in one State or country, payable in another), when indorsed, assumes all the characteristics of a foreign bill of exchange, the payee (indorser) becoming the drawer, the indorsee, the payee, and the maker, the drawee or acceptor. Therefore it has been maintained that the same ceremony as to presentment when due, and protest for non-payment, should be observed as in case of a foreign bill of exchange, and that the protest when so made should be as complete and sufficient evidence as when made upon need be proved. Crowley v. Barry, 4 Gill (Md.) 194.

As to what constitutes a seal, it may be either an impression on wax or some other tenacious material, or by statute a scroll affixed by way of a seal. By the law-merchant, however, no seal was recognized except an impression on wax or similar material. See 4 Minors' Inst. (2nd ed.) 19; 2 Daniel on Neg. Instr., § 15. See also SEAL.

Should Identify the Note.—A protest of a note by a notary public should identify the note; this is usually done by copy; but if the original note is annexed and referred to, it will be sufficient; or in default of either of these, an indorsement on the protest containing name of maker, amount, indorser and date of protest, and in these particulars agreeing with the note sued on, and so far identifying it, must be deemed sufficient. Fulton v. Mac-cracken, 18 Md. 528; 81 Am. Dec. 620.

1. Young v. Bryan, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 146; Union Bank v. Hyde, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 572; Coddington v. Davis, 1 N. Y. 186; Orr v. Maginnis, 7 East 359; Nichols v. Webb, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 326; Burke v. McKay, 2 How. (U. S.) 69; Bank of U. S. v. Leathers, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 64; City Bank v. Cutter, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 414; Smith v. Curlee, 59 Ill. 221; 2 Daniels on Neg. Instr., § 1.

In the case of Coddington v. Davis, 1 N. Y. 186, it was said that while protest in a strict technical sense is not applicable to promissory notes, yet it had by general usage acquired a more extensive signification and included in some cases all the steps necessary to charge an indorser.

Without a special statutory provision otherwise the protest of a domestic bill of exchange is superfluous, unauthorized, and no proof of the alleged dishonor of the bill. Bank of U. S. v. Leathers, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 64; Turner v. Greenwood, 9 Ark. 44; Gilman v. Lewis, 15 Me. 452.

Nor does the law require that a promissory note, negotiable in form, but remaining in the hands of the original payee, should be protested for non-payment; and therefore neither notarial fees for protest nor statutory damages can be recovered. German v. Ritchie, 9 Kan. 106; Banks v. Besser, 56 Ga. 199; City Bank v. Cutter, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 414.

2. 2 Daniel on Neg. Instr. 1; Story on Prom. Notes, § 340; 2 Bouvier's Law Dict., Protest; Ticonic Bank v. Stackpole, 41 Me. 302; 66 Am. Dec. 246; Bowling v. Arthur, 34 Miss. 41; Tevis v. Randall, 6 Cal. 632; 65 Am. Dec. 547; Conolly v. Goodwin, 5 Cal. 220.

Checks and Drafts.—Protest of a check is not essential in order to hold the indorsers. Giving information to the indorsers, seasonably that the bank has refused to pay it, is enough. Mutual Nat. Bank v. Rotge, 28 La. Ann. 933; 26 Am. Rep. 126; Pollard v. Bowen, 57 Ind. 232; Griffin v. Kemp, 46 Ind. 172.

Likewise a draft drawn by an agent on his principal, in the usual course of his business, is as if drawn by the principal on himself, and the drawee is not a bill of exchange.¹ When, however, the drawer of a bill of exchange has failed to place funds in the hands of the drawee to meet it, and has no reasonable expectation that it will be met, a demand of payment and consequently protest are necessary to charge him.² And an instruction by the drawer to the drawee not to pay a bill, will excuse a failure to protest it.³

V. PROTEST AS EVIDENCE.—In cases where a protest is requisite, either by the law-merchant or by statute, it is made complete and sufficient evidence of the fact stated therein, provided there are no material defects as to its form or contents;⁴ and in case of foreign bills of exchange no other evidence of the dishonor is entitled to notice or protest. Raymond v. Mann, 45 Tex. 301.

1. Mr. Daniel in speaking of this subject has to say: "Almost every consideration of convenience which would make a protest necessary and competent evidence of presentment and notice in case of a foreign bill, would recognize it as equally competent in respect to the indorser of a note." Daniel on Neg. Instr., § 928.

Likewise Parker, C. J.: "The similarity between the indorsement of notes and the drawing and indorsement of bills of exchange is so great that there can be no sound reason given for establishing or preserving a distinction between them, and requiring a different character of evidence to prove the same facts with regard to two instruments which . . . are so essentially similar in their nature and operation." Daniel on Neg. Instr., § 928; Williams v. Putnam, 14 N. H. 540; 40 Am. Dec. 204; Edwards on Bills and Notes, § 540.

This view is sustained by other authority. See Ticonic Bank v. Stackpole, 41 Me. 302; 66 Am. Dec. 246; Piner v. Clary, 17 B. Mon. (Ky.) 645; Proffatt on Notaries, § 106; Brooke's Office and Prac. of a Notary 130. See also Carter v. Burley, 9 N. H. 558.

2. Harness v. Davies Co., 46 Mo. 357; Merchants' Bank v. Easley, 44 Mo. 286; Mehlberg v. Tisher, 24 Wis. 607; Proffatt on Notaries, § 115; Daniel on Neg. Instr., § 1074.

A drawee's statement at the time of the demand that he had no funds for the purpose of the payment, cannot be proved by the notary's recital in the protest. Dakin v. Graves, 48 N. H. 45.

Protest Unnecessary.—In Indiana, a negotiable note, payable at a bank in that State need not be protested for non-payment in order to charge the indorser, notice of demand and non-payment being sufficient. Green v. Louthain, 49 Ind. 139.

Likewise in Georgia, unless a note is payable at a chartered bank no protest is necessary. Salmons v. Hoyt, 53 Ga. 493.

In Texas, by statute in case of the non-acceptance of a bill of exchange, the drawer becomes immediately responsible without protest. Thatcher v. Mills, 14 Tex. 13; 65 Am. Dec. 95; Henderson v. Glass, 16 Tex. 559; Carrson v. Russell, 26 Tex. 452.

3. Manning v. Maroney, 87 Ala. 563. See also generally Pier v. Heinschoffer, 52 Mo. 333.

4. Young v. Bryan, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 146; Joseph v. Salomon, 19 Fla. 623.

By the tenth section of the California act, the protest of a notary is expressly made evidence of demand and non-payment of notes as well as bills. Connolly v. Goodwin, 5 Cal. 220.

In nearly all instances, however, the evidence furnished by the certificate of protest is only prima facie. Thus it is held in West Virginia that the true construction of their statute is that the protest of a negotiable note and other instruments mentioned therein is prima facie evidence of the facts "stated therein, or at the foot or on the back thereof, in relation to presentment and dishonor, and notice thereof." Peabody Ins. Co. v. Wilson, 29 W. Va. 528.

The production of a first bill of exchange duly protested for non-acceptance is sufficient prima facie evidence that neither the second nor third of the set were paid, and the party alleging that one of the latter was paid has the burden of proving it. Miller v. Palmer, 58 Md. 451. See also BILLS AND NOTES, vol. 2, p. 406; NOTARY PUBLIC, vol. 16, p. 752.

admissible.¹ The notary's certificate of protest is in the nature of documentary evidence; and the proper construction, as well as the legal effect thereof as an instrument of evidence of the facts stated in it, are questions of law to be determined by the court.² The use of such certificate as evidence only makes it evidence of such facts as are distinctly stated therein and of which it purports to give evidence.³

VI. WAIVER OF PROTEST.—Protest may be waived, either by an express declaration indorsed on the bill or note, or otherwise. As already mentioned, protest in its broad and general acceptance, includes all the steps necessary to charge an indorser (i. e., demand, presentment, protest and notice). Therefore where there is nothing in a waiver of protest to limit its meaning, the word is to be taken as used in its broadest sense, whether applied to foreign or domestic bills or to promissory notes.⁴

The rule in Louisiana, in regard to protests of foreign bills by foreign notaries, is that they are received in aid of commerce to establish the facts of presentment, demand, and non-payment, and this without proof of their signatures and official capacities. But beyond this the rule has not been extended. Schorr v. Woodlief, 23 La. Ann. 473.

1. Joseph v. Salomon, 19 Fla. 623; Young v. Bryan, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 146; Proffatt on Notaries, § 105.

A bill of exchange, the parties to which reside in one State, but payable in another, is so far a foreign bill that the notarial protest in the latter is competent evidence in the former to prove its presentment and dishonor. Grafton Bank v. Moore, 14 N. H. 142.

But a plaintiff, in a suit on a promissory note is not obliged to rely solely on the protest. He may cure the defect by evidence aliunde and he has the right to commence with any part of his evidence; and it is error to reject any part that is, per se, pertinent to the issue. Nailor v. Bowie, 3 Md. 251.

Admission of the Drawee.—Some authorities maintain that the protest of a bill of exchange for non-acceptance and non-payment may be proved by the admission of the drawee. Derrickson v. Whitney, 6 Gray (Mass.) 248; Long v. Crawford, 18 Md. 220. 2. Peabody Ins. Co. v. Wilson, 29 W. Va. 528.

3. It cannot be presumed that any step was regularly taken or that any fact existed which is not certified to. See, as maintaining this and the proposition stated in the text, Peabody Ins. Co. v. Wilson, 29 W. Va. 528; Bradshaw v. Hedge, 19 Iowa 402; Sprague v. Tyson, 44 Ala. 340; Turner v. Rogers, 8 Ind. 140; Daniel on Neg. Instr., § 962.

Therefore where such protest simply states that notice was addressed to the indorsers at a certain place, without adding that such place was the post-office or residence of the indorser, the court will not infer that such was the fact, and such certificate is therefore insufficient to prove due notice. Peabody Ins. Co. v. Wilson, 29 W. Va. 528.

4. Thus where an indorsement read "For value received I waive notice and protest," the indorser was not entitled to demand and notice. Wolford v. Andrews, 29 Minn. 250.

So where the indorsement read, "Protest waived, and I hold myself liable as indorser." Carpenter v. Reynolds, 42 Miss. 807. See also, as supporting the proposition in the text, Baker v. Scott, 29 Kan. 137; 44 Am. Rep. 628; Annville Nat. Bank v. Kettering, 106 Pa. St. 531; 2 Daniel on Neg. Instr., § 929, 1094-5; Higgins v. Wright, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 467. See also Coddington v. Davis, 1 N. Y. 186; 3 Den. (N. Y.) 25; Anderson's Law Dict., Protest; Brannon v. Hursell, 112 Mass. 70; First Nat. Bank v. Hatch, 78 Mo. 13.

Waiver.—Where the words "presentation and protest waived" are contained in the body of a bill of exchange, the waiver affects and forms a part of the contract of the indorser as well as the drawer, and is binding upon him according to the tenor and legal effect

PROTESTANT.—A Christian who protests against the doctrines and practices of the Roman Catholic Church; one who adheres to the doctrines of the Reformation.¹

PROTESTATION.—The name of a particular formula formerly used in common law pleading, when it was expedient for a party to plead in such a manner as to avoid any implied admission of a fact which could not with propriety or safety be positively affirmed or denied; the party interposed an oblique allegation or denial of the fact by protesting (protestando) that the matter does or does not exist, at the same time avoiding a direct affirmation or denial. Coke's definition is "An exclusion of a conclusion."²

PROVIDED, PROVISIO.—(See also CONDITION, vol. 3, p. 422; DEEDS, vol. 5, p. 457; ESTATES, vol. 6, p. 875).—The words "proviso" and "provided," when used in a deed or will, are apt words to create a condition, and this is the effect usually given them.³ But, though their usual, it is not their invariable effect; and they may be shown by the context to express simply a covenant or limitation.⁴

of the bill. Bryant v. Merchants' Bank, 8 Bush (Ky.) 43.

Where the indorser of a note, before maturity, writes on it a waiver of protest, he cannot relieve himself from the effect of the waiver on the ground that it was without consideration. Wall v. Bry, 1 La. Ann. 312.

1. Webster's Dict., followed in Hale v. Everett, 53 N. H. 57, in which case the authorities are collected and exhaustively discussed; and it is held that the term "Protestant" includes all Christians who deny the authority of the Pope of Rome, but that the term is not broad enough to include any who do not, nominally at least, assent to the truth of Christianity as a distinct system of religion, and that a Mohammedan, a Jew, a Pagan, or an infidel cannot properly be called a Protestant, not being a Christian.

"Protestant" includes all those who believe in the Christian religion, and do not acknowledge the supremacy of the Pope. The word is capable of sustaining a charitable bequest. Tappan's Appeal, 52 Conn. 418; Beardsley v. Bridgeport, 53 Conn. 493.

2. Abbott's Law Dict.; Anderson's Law Dict.; 3 Blackstone's Com. 311; Coke's Litt. 124; 1 Chitty's Pleading 534; Stephen's Pleading 235.

Protestation is a saving to the party who takes it from being concluded by any matter alleged or objected against him, upon which he cannot join issue and it is no more than an exclusion of a conclusion, for he that takes it excludes the other from concluding him; and it ought to be consistent with the sequel of the plea. Graysbook v. Cox, Plowden, 276. See generally PLEADING.

3. Proper Words to Express a Condition.—The words usually employed to create a condition are "on condition;" but the phrases "so that," "provided," "if it shall happen" are of the same import. "Provided always" may constitute a condition, limitation, or covenant, according to circumstances. Heaston v. Randolph Co., 20 Ind. 403.

There is no word more proper to express a condition than the word "provided," and it shall always be so taken unless it appears from the context to be the intent of the parties that it shall constitute a covenant. Rich v. Atwater, 16 Conn. 419.

4. Do not Invariably Express a Condition.—"This word (proviso) hath diverse operations. Sometimes it worketh qualification or limitation; sometime condition; and sometime a covenant. Co. Litt. 146 b; 203 b. "'Proviso' is condition inserted into any deed, upon the performance whereof the validity of the deed consisteth. Sometimes is only a covenant, whereof see Coke 1, 2, in the Lord Cromwell's Case. Termes de la Ley."

PROVISIONAL.—See note 1.

PROVISIONAL REMEDY.—A remedy provided for present need or for the occasion; one adapted to meet a particular exigency.²

PROVISIONS.—See note 3.

PROVISO.—See PROVIDED.

It is true that the word "proviso" is an appropriate one to constitute a common law condition in a deed or will, but this is not the fixed and invariable meaning attached to it by the law in these instruments. On the contrary, it gives way to the intent of the parties, as gathered from the examination of the whole instrument, and frequently has been thus explained and applied as expressing simply a covenant or limitation in trust. Stanley v. Colt, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 509.

See also Woodruff v. Woodruff, 44 N. J. Eq. 353.

"Provided" is an apt word to create a condition, yet it does not necessarily import a condition, and it is often used by way of limitation or qualification only; especially when it does not introduce a new clause but only serves to qualify or restrain the generality of a former clause." Chapin v. Harris, 8 Allen (Mass.) 596.

Proviso Distinguished from Exception.

—There is some distinction between a proviso and an exception. A proviso is properly the statement of something extrinsic of the subject-matter of the covenant, which shall go in discharge of that covenant by way of defeasance; an exception is the taking out of a covenant some part of the subject-matter of it. LaPoint v. Cady, 2 Pinn. (Wis.) 515; following 1 Saund. Pl. & Ev. 393.

See also EXCEPTION, vol. 7, p. 113.

Proviso in a Statute.—See STATUTES.

1. Provisional Committee.—A provisional committee is an association formed for carrying into effect the preliminary arrangements necessary to promote a scheme; it is not a partnership, for it constitutes no agreement to share in profit or loss. Reynell v. Lewis, 15 M. & W. 526; 16 L. J. Ex. 25.

2. McCarthy v. McCarthy, 54 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 97.

The order which, in Wisconsin, is a substitute for a bill of discovery, is a "provisional remedy," and as such is appealable, under laws of Wisconsin 1860, ch. 264, § 10, which gives an appeal from an order that grants a provisional remedy. Noonan v. Orton, 28 Wis. 600. See also Blossom v. Ludington, 31 Wis. 283.

The approval of a plaintiff's undertaking by the sheriff in an action of claim and delivery of personal property is not the allowance of a provisional remedy, within section 139 New York Code, which declares that from the time of the allowance of "a provisional remedy, the court is deemed to have acquired jurisdiction, and to have control of all subsequent proceedings." Nosser v. Corwin, 36 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 540.

8. The following articles have been held to be included under the general term "provisions"; fat cattle, as used in the United States act, 6th July, 1812, prohibiting American vessels from trading with the enemy. U. S. v. Barber, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 243; U. S. v. Sheldon, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 119; Indian corn, Atkinson v. Gatcher, 23 Ark. 103; wine and brandy, Mooney v. Ivens, 6 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 363.

Meat purchased and kept by a dealer for sale, is not exempt as "provisions" under Gen. Laws of New Hampshire, ch. 224, § 27. "Provisions" as there used is only intended to extend to articles provided for consumption by the debtor's family. Bond v. Tucker (N. H. 1889), 18 Atl. Rep. 653.

See also State v. Connor, 73 Mo. 575; Nash v. Farrington, 4 Allen (Mass.) 157.

As used in the Alabama Rev. Code, § 1858, giving a lien for advances to make a crop, "provisions" means food for man and beast employed in making the crop, and does not include money or supplies to pay the hire of laborers. McLester v. Somerville, 54 Ala. 670.

"Provisions" will not include a milch cow, as the word is used in the Georgia exemption law. Wilson v. McMillan, 80 Ga. 733; nor cotton, Butler v. Shiver, 79 Ga. 172.

Provisions and Stores.—A New York statute gives a lien and summary remedy for debts created by masters of vessels for such "provisions and stores

PROVOKE—PROXIMATE AND REMOTE CAUSE.

PROVOKE.—See note 1.

PROXIMATE AND REMOTE CAUSE.—The question of proximate and remote cause arises in insurance cases and in cases of negligent injury.²

furnished within this State as may be fit and proper for the use of such vessel," etc., etc. In Crooke v. Slack, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 177, the court by Nelson, C. J., said: "The provisions furnished a ship, strictly considered, are confined to such articles as enter into the food or subsistence for hands and passengers, but stores is a more general term, and may embrace wood and coal."

1. Upon an indictment under a Connecticut Statute (Gen. stat., tit. 12, § 123) for breach of the peace. The court construing the word "provoke" said: "To provoke is to excite, to stimulate, to arouse." State v. Warner, 34 Conn. 279.

2. Cross-References.—The article FIRE INSURANCE, vol. 7, pp. 1040, 1043, under the heading Risk or Peril Insured Against, contains a lengthy enumeration of what have been considered losses by fire; the question always being whether the fire was the proximate cause of the loss.

In MARINE INSURANCE, vol. 14, p. 380, the doctrine is treated in its connection with that immediate subject.

In NEGLIGENCE, vol. 16, p. 428, et seq., and in CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, vol. 4, p. 25, the doctrine of proximate and remote cause, as connected with the subject of negligent injury, is exhaustively discussed. See also ACCIDENT INSURANCE, vol. 1, p. 90.

Distinction Between Insurance and Negligent Injury.—There is really no essential difference in the principles applied, whether the question of proximate cause concerns insurance or negligent injury, except in this, that in an action for a breach of contract, the liability of a negligent party involves only such consequences as were the direct result of the breach, and were within the contemplation of the parties at the time of the formation of the contract, while in an action for negligent injuries, the liability of the negligent party is more extensive, and embraces all the natural or necessary consequences of his wrongful act. NEGLIGENCE, vol. 16, p. 476; DAMAGES, vol. 5, pp. 6, 13; Shearman & Redf. on Neg., § 739.

This, then, is the distinction between the two classes of cases, an action upon a policy of insurance being in the nature of an action for a breach of contract, so far as proximate cause is concerned. And, in consideration of what is or is not the proximate cause, this distinction is essential.

For example, in Metallic etc. Co. v. Fitchburg, 109 Mass. 277, a burning house might have been saved but for the hose of the fire company being cut by a railroad engine running over it. It was held, in an action against the railroad company, that its negligence, in running over and cutting the hose was the proximate cause of the fire, so as to allow a recovery for the negligent injury. Had the building been insured against fire, it is certain that the fire would have been considered, within the meaning of the policy of insurance, the proximate cause of the loss, so as to have enabled the owner of the building to recover on the policy.

In 1 Abbott's Law Dict., p. 192, it is said: "In actions to recover damages on account of injury, the principle of this maxim is applicable, although with not so much strictness as in cases of insurance."

"To determine the question whether the peril insured against was the proximate or remote cause of loss . . . the peculiar nature of the policy of insurance and the question of interest it covers are to be taken into account. The particular intent of the parties is subservient to the public bearing of the question. The terms proximate and remote in their application to questions of insurance thus receive in some respects a more enlarged and in some a more restricted significance than that of one giving a construction to other contracts." 4 Am. Law Rev. 215.

Consequences and Effects.—It is a common supposition that between "consequences" and "effects" there exists no material distinction. But the following from Crabb's English Synonyms negatives this idea: "A consequence is that which follows of itself without any qualification or restriction

Definition. PROXIMATE AND REMOTE CAUSE. Definition.

The proximate cause of an event has been thus defined: "That which, in a natural and continuous sequence, unbroken by any new cause, produced that event, and without which that event would not have occurred."¹

A remote cause is defined as "One which has so far expended itself that its influence in producing the injury is too minute for the law's notice; or a cause which some independent force merely took advantage of to accomplish something not the natural or probable effect thereof."²

In insurance policies are found clauses providing that the insurers shall be liable only for injuries caused by certain perils, or that there shall be no indemnity for damage caused by the negligence of the insured. In these cases, the maxim causa proxima, non remota spectatur applies.³ Where, in an action on such a an effect is that which is effected or produced by, or which follows from the connection between the thing effecting, as a cause, and the thing effected. In the nature of things, causes will have effects, and for every effect there will be a cause, although it may not be visible. Consequences, on the other hand, are either casual or natural; they are not always to be calculated upon. Effect applies to physical or moral objects; consequences to moral objects only; diseases are the effects of intemperance; the loss of character is the general consequence of an irregular life. Consequences follow either from the actions of men, or from things where there is no direct agency or design; results follow from the actions or efforts of men; consequences are good or bad; results are favorable or unfavorable. We endeavor to avert consequences and to produce results."

1. Proximate Cause Defined.—Shearman & Redf. on Negligence (4th ed.), § 261; the definition, though stated in connection with the law of negligence, is believed to be generally applicable. See also NEGLIGENCE, vol. 16, p. 428.

2. Remote Cause.—Bishop on Non-contract Law (Rights and Torts), § 41. And see Cooley on Torts 69; Sheffer v. Washington etc. R. Co., 105 U. S. 252; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 59. NEGLIGENCE, vol. 16, pp. 428, et seq. This definition, like that preceding, while found in a treatment of the law of negligent injury, seems also to be as well applicable to other cases.

3. Maxim, Causa Proxima, etc.—Broom's Leg. Max. 216, et seq.; Swan v. Union Ins. Co., 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 168; Smith v. Universal Ins. Co., 6 Wheat.

(U. S.) 176; Waters v. Merchant's etc. Ins. Co., 11 Pet. (U. S.) 213; Peters v. Warren Ins. Co., 14 Pet. (U. S.) 99; Howard Ins. Co. v. Norwich etc. Tr. Co., 12 Wall. (U. S.) 194; Patapsco Ins. Co. v. Coulter, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 222. Erle, C. J., in Ionides v. Universal Marine Ins. Co., 14 C. B., N. S., 259, declares this maxim to be "peculiarly applicable to insurance law." See also Redman v. Wilson, 14 M. & W. 476; Laurie v. Douglass, 15 M. & W. 746; Patrick v. Commercial Ins. Co., 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 14; Deveaux v. Salvador, 4 Ad. & El. 320; Wilson v. New-port Dock Co., 4 H. & C. 235. Compare 13 Am. L. Reg., N. S. 44.

"For in determining what losses are within the perils insured against, 'causa proxima, non remota spectatur.'" Shaw, C. J., in Copeland v. New England Mar. Ins. Co., 2 Met. (Mass.) 437.

Lord Bacon paraphrases the maxim thus: "It were infinite for the law to consider the causes of causes, and their impulsions one of another; therefore it contenteth itself with the immediate cause, and judgeth of acts by that without looking to any further degree." Maxims, Reg. 1.

It is to be borne in mind that in criminal cases, and in cases of willful injury, the maxim does not apply, and the wrongdoer is held liable for the remote as well as the proximate consequences of his wrongful act. "The maxim, in jure non remota causa sed proxima spectatur, does not, however, apply to any transaction originally founded in fraud or covin; for the law will look to the corrupt beginning, and consider it as one entire act, according to the principle, dolus circuitu policy, the issue is the liability of one for the consequences alleged to result from a certain cause, there is no question as to the applicability of the maxim; the difficulty lies in determining what is and what is not a proximate cause, and as this depends upon the circumstances of each case, no invariable rule can be formulated nor standard fixed; the safe and proper course, where doubt exists, being to submit the question for the decision of the jury.¹

PROXY.—See STOCKHOLDERS.

PRUDENTIAL.—See note 2.

PUBLIC.—What is meant by the public is not any corporation, like a city, town, or county, but the body of the people at large. The people of the neighborhood—the community at large—without reference to the geographical limits of any corporation, constitute the public. The people are the public.³ This term is joined frequently to other terms to designate those things which have a relation to the public, as public officer, public house, public lands, public places, etc., for which see the various titles beginning with this word, and the phrases collected in the notes. When applied thus to property, the word sometimes describes the use to which the property is applied; at other times the character in which it is held.⁴

non purgatur—fraud is not purged by circuitry." Broom's Leg. Max., p. 228; Bac. Max., reg. 1; Noy Max. (9th ed.), p. 12; Tomlin's Law Dict., tit. Fraud. Judgm., 6 E. & B. 948. This distinction is elaborated in NEGLIGENCE, vol. 16, pp. 428, et seq. And see Bloom v. Franklin Life Ins. Co., 97 Ind. 478; 40 Am. Rep. 469; Billman v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 76 Ind. 166, 178; 40 Am. Rep. 230; Forney v. Geldmacher, 75 Mo. 113; 42 Am. Rep. 388.

1. In Mutual Ins. Co. v. Tweed, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 52, Miller, J., observes: "If we could deduct from the cases the best possible expression of the rule, it would remain after all to decide each case largely upon the special facts belonging to it, and often upon the very nicest discriminations."

Question for the Jury.—That the question of proximate cause is one for the jury, under instructions from the court, see Traveler's Ins. Co. v. Seaver, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 543; Howard Fire Ins. Co. v. Transportation Co., 12 Wall. (U. S.) 199; Aetna Fire Ins. Co. v. Boon, 95 U. S. 130; Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469; West Mahoney v. Watson, 112 Pa. St. 574; 116 Pa. St. 344; Kreuziger v.

Chicago etc. R. Co., 73 Wis. 158; Lake v. Milliken, 62 Me. 240; 16 Am. Rep. 466; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Pennel, 110 Ill. 435.

But this of course is subject to the rule that where there is no room for reasonable doubt, or question, it is for the court to decide. Pike v. Grand Trunk etc. R. Co., 39 Fed. Rep. 255; Hathaway v. East Tennessee etc. R. Co., 19 Fed. Rep. 489.

2. Prudential Concerns of a Town.—Massachusetts statute of 1785, ch. 75, § 7, empowers a town to make such orders and by-laws as are necessary for managing and ordering the "prudential affairs of the town." In Willard v. Newburyport, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 231, the phrase, "prudential concerns of a town" was said by Shaw, C. J., to embrace "that large class of miscellaneous subjects affecting the accommodation and convenience of the inhabitants, which have been placed under the municipal jurisdiction of towns by statute or by usage."

3. Baker v. Johnston, 21 Mich. 335.

4. Gerke v. Purcell, 25 Ohio St. 241. See also Montgomery v. Wymen (Ill. 1889), 22 N. E. Rep. 846; Davenport Gas Light Co. v. Davenport, 13 Iowa 229.

The term "public" may be applied to a house, either on account of the proprietorship, as a court-house, which belongs to the county, or the purposes for which it is used, as a tavern, store-house, etc. See Shihagan v. State, 9 Tex. 430.

Public Notice.—The charter of a mutual insurance company provided that the managers of the company in making an assessment should publish the same, and that the members within sixty days thereafter should pay their assessments, or in default thereof, should be proceeded against, "according to the provision of this act." The section, providing the method of procedure in case of default concluded thus: "Public notice of this section to be given, when advertising an assessment made, and how the same will be collected." Held, that the "public notice" required, was notice by advertising in a newspaper. Pennsylvania Training School v. Mut. F. Ins. Co., 127 Pa. St. 559.

Public Trust.—The New York constitution prescribes a certain oath to be taken by every person holding an office or "public trust." In re Wood, Hopk. Ch. (N. Y.) 6, the court, by Sanford, Ch., said: "The words public trust appear to include every agency in which the public, reposing special confidence in particular persons, appoint them for the performance of some duty or service." So it was held that the station of a solicitor or counselor was a public trust. And in Seymour v. Ellison, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 13, it was held that the section of the constitution, which provided that "neither the chancellor nor justices of the Supreme Court, nor any circuit judge shall hold any other office or public trust," prohibited a circuit judge from acting as attorney in a case. But see In re Oaths, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 492; ATTORNEY AND CLIENT, vol. 1, pp. 942, 944, n.

Public Grounds.—See GROUND, vol. 9, p. 62.

Public Ground.—Where certain town lots were dedicated to the public, by recording the official town plat upon which they were designated as "public ground," it was held that they should be taken for a public square for the use of the town. The court by Lane, C. J., said: "The words expressed in the act of dedication were 'public ground;' a phrase which, in reference to a lot in a town, of shape, dimension and position suitable for this purpose naturally, though not necessarily, means a public square." Lebanon v. Warren Co., 9 Ohio 80; 33 Am. Dec. 422.

Public Lot.—See LOT, vol. 13, p. 1163.

Public Square.—As used in Indiana statutes, the term "public square" must be given its popular import, and refers almost exclusively to grounds occupied by the court house, and owned by the county. Westfall v. Hunt, 8 Ind. 177; Logansport v. Dunn, 8 Ind. 378.

See also DEDICATION, vol. 5, p. 416; PARKS, vol. 17, p. 107.

Public Domain.—"Domain," in its broadest sense, when used in connection with property, means "ownership," and "public domain" means, when used in such connection, "public ownership." But where a Texas statute provided that certain certificates which had been issued to a meritorious class of persons, "may be located as headright certificates upon any of the public domain, and patented as in other cases," it was held that the words "public domain" were evidently not used in their most general sense, for if so used they would embrace lands appropriated by the State for public purposes, but that the term must be construed as if written "unappropriated public domain." Day Co. v. State, 68 Tex. 547. See generally PUBLIC LANDS.

Public Grant.—See GRANTS, vol. 9, p. 44.

Public Debt—Public Securities.—In Morgan v. Cree, 46 Vt. 786; 14 Am. Rep. 640, the court by Peck, J., said: "The terms 'public debt' and 'public securities' used in legislation, are terms generally applied to national or State obligations and dues, and would rarely, if ever, be considered to include town debts or obligations."

Public Institutions — Quasi Public Institutions. — Public institutions are those which are created and exist by law or public authority. Private institutions are those which are created or established by private individuals for their own private purposes. The only sensible distinction between public and private institutions is to be found in the authority by which, and the purpose for which, they are created and exist. Toledo Bank v. Bond, 1 Ohio St. 643. And see this case for a valuable commentary upon the distinction between corporations strictly private and those which, though technically private, have for their object the promotion of some public interest, and are of a quasi public character. See also FRANCHISES, vol. 8, p. 588.

Definition.

"Public Libraries."—A New York statute provides that the real and personal property of every "public library" shall be exempt from taxation. The charter of a corporation specified as one of its objects the permanent establishment in the city of New York of an institution in which shall be collected, classified, and arranged, geographical scientific works, voyages, etc., "having special reference to that kind of information which should be collected, preserved, and be at all times accessible for public uses in a great maritime and commercial city." It was held that this clause of the charter was an implied guaranty that a library should be maintained to which the public would have free access; and, as such a library had been maintained free and open to all, it was practically and to all intents and purposes a "public library;" and as such entitled to exemption from taxation. People v. Tax Com'rs etc., 11 Hun (N. Y.) 505.

A Rhode Island statute exempts from taxation "public libraries and the lands and buildings used in connection therewith." Held, that an incorporated library, the ownership of which is in the corporation and the use of which is confined to the stockholders, their immediate families, and their licensees, is not a "public library" in the meaning of the statute. Providence Athenæum v. Tripp, 9 R. I. 559.

See generally TAXATION.

Public Money.—In the statutes of the United States, this term ordinarily means the money of the Federal government received from the public revenues, or intrusted to its fiscal officers, wherever it may be. It does not include the money of States, counties, cities, and towns, although, with reference to those governments and municipalities, such funds, in other connections, would be deemed public moneys. Nor does it include money in the hands of the marshals, clerks, and other officers of courts held by them to await the judgment of the court in relation to the ownership thereof. Such money constitutes trust funds held for individual litigants, and not for the public as represented by the government. Branch v. U. S., 12 Ct. of Cl. 286.

The money appropriated to the payment of the Cherokee Indians, upon their removal, and the cession of their land, was properly "public money," although money stipulated by treaty to be paid them upon such cession and removal. Minis v. U. S., 15 Pet. (U. S.) 448.

PUBLIC.

Definition.

"Public worship" may mean the worship of God conducted and observed under public authority; or it may mean worship in an open or public place, without privacy or concealment; or it may mean the performance of religious exercises under a provision for an equal right in the whole public to participate in its benefits; or it may be used in contradistinction to worship in the family or the closet. In this country, what is called public worship is commonly conducted by voluntary societies, constituted according to their own notions of ecclesiastical authority and ritual propriety, opening their places of worship, and admitting to their religious services such persons, and upon such terms, and subject to such regulations, as they may choose to designate and establish. A church absolutely belonging to the public, and in which all persons without restriction have equal rights, such as the public enjoy in highways or public landings, is certainly a very rare institution, if such a thing can be found." Attorney-Genl. v. Merrimac Mfg. Co., 14 Gray (Mass.) 602.

Under a New York statute exempting from taxation every building of "public worship," it was held that the building of a Young Men's Christian Association, which was used for other purposes besides religious worship, was not exempt. Young Men's Christian Assoc. v. Mayor etc. of N. Y., 113 N. Y. 187. See generally RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES.

Public Offense.—Within the meaning of a Minnesota statute authorizing a peace officer to arrest without a warrant, for a "public offense committed or attempted in his presence," the term "public offense" includes the violation of a city ordinance. In State v. Cantieny, 34 Minn. 1, the court by Dickinson, J., said: "The word 'public' was not intended to express an idea of a distinction between offenses made such by common law or by general statute, and those defined by a law having but a limited territorial operation. . . . It" (the term "public offense") "includes all such violations of municipal ordinances as are punishable by fine or imprisonment."

And see Dyer v. Placer Co. (Cal.

PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION—PUBLIC LANDS.

PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION—ADMINISTRATOR—(See also EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, vol. 7, p. 165; PROBATE).—Public administration is conducted by a special officer, or the guardians of the poor, where there is no relative entitled to apply for letters.¹ The officer conducting the administration is called a public administrator.

PUBLIC DOCUMENTS.—See BOOKS AS EVIDENCE, vol. 2, p. 467*j*; DOCUMENTS, vol. 5, p. 863; ELECTIONS, vol. 6, p. 435; JUDICIAL NOTICE, vol. 12, p. 151; RECORDS.

PUBLIC HOUSE—(See also INN AND INN KEEPERS, vol. 11, p. 3; HOTEL, vol. 9, p. 776).—Public house, in the sense of the law of inns, is one kept for the entertainment of all who come lawfully and pay regularly. The term does not include a boarding house kept for the accommodation only of those accepted as guests by the proprietor.²

PUBLIC LANDS—(See also GRANTS, vol. 9, p. 43; SPANISH LAND GRANTS.)

I Introduction—Congressional Control, 306.

II. General Method of Acquiring Public Lands as Private Property, 310.

1. Pre-emption, 312.

a. Nature and Extent of the Right, 312.

b. Lands Subject to Pre-emption, 314.

c. Persons Entitled to the Right, 316.

d. Proceedings, 318.

(1) Declaratory Statement, 319.

1891), 27 Pac. Rep. 197, for the statutory definition of this term in California.

Public Assemblies.—Within the meaning of a Texas statute regulating the "keeping and bearing" of deadly weapons, a justice's court which was in session and engaged in the trial of a cause was held to be a "public assembly." Summerlin v. State, 3 Tex. App. 444.

Public Corporations.—See CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 186; FRANCHISES, vol. 8, p. 587.

Public Buildings.—In addition to the cases under BUILDINGS, vol. 2, p. 603, see also State v. Mayor etc. of Bayonne, 49 N. J. L. 311.

Public Charities.—See CHARITIES, vol. 3 p. 123; TAXATION.

Public or Private Conveyance.—See CONVEYANCE, vol. 4, p. 138.

Public Enemy.—See BILL OF LADING, vol. 2, p. 232; CARRIERS OF GOODS, vol. 2, pp. 778, 847; ENEMY, vol. 6, p. 640; EXPRESS COMPANIES, vol. 7, p. 563; MARINE INSURANCE, vol. 14, p. 378.

Public Indecency.—In addition to the Indiana cases cited under EXPOSURE OF PERSON, vol. 7, p. 534, see Jennings v. State, 16 Ind. 333; State v. Hevy, 16 Ind. 338. See also LEWD AND LASCIVIOUS COHABITATION, vol. 13, p. 276, n; LIBEL AND SLANDER, vol. 13, p. 344.

Public Letting.—See LETTING, vol. 13, p. 268.

Public Performances, Exhibitions, Entertainments, etc. (within license laws). See LICENSE, vol. 13, p. 534.

Public Purposes.—See MUNICIPAL SECURITIES, vol. 15, p. 1240; DEDICATION, vol. 5, p. 395; CHARITIES, vol. 3, p. 131.

Public Use.—For an exhaustive treatment of this term in the two branches of the law to which a correct definition is of great importance, see EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 524; PATENTS, vol. 18, p. 60.

1. Anderson's L. Dict.

2. Com. v. Cuncannon, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 334. See further Pease v. Coates, 36 L. J. Ch. 57; Fielden v. Slater, 38 L. J. Ch. 379. For the sense in which

- (2) Proof, 320.
- e. Assignment of Pre-emption Right, 322.
- 2. Homestead, 323.
 - a. Proceedings, 325.
- 3. Public Sales and Private Entries, 328.
- 4. Bounty Lands, 330.
- 5. Timber Culture, 331.
- III. Alienation of Land Prior to Issue of the Patent, 332.
- IV. Mineral Lands and Mining Resources, 335.
- V. Land Grants to Railroads, 336.
- VI. The General Land Office, 340.
- 1. Constitution of, 340.
- 2. Powers and Duties of Land Officers, Generally, 342.
- 3. Compensation, 343.
- 4. Force and Effect of Decisions of the Land Office, 343.
- VII. Patents, 347.
- VIII. Cancellation of Patents, 356.
- IX. School Lands, 360.
- X. Town Sites, 362.
- XI. Miscellaneous Provisions Relating to Public Lands, 364.
 - 1. Timber Lands, 364.
 - 2. Swamp Land Grant, 367.
 - 3. Other Provisions, 371.
- XII. Miscellaneous Grants, 373.

I. INTRODUCTION—Congressional Control.—The term public lands is habitually used in legislation to describe such lands as are subject to sale or other disposal by the government under general laws.¹ The general method and process whereby the United States has acquired possession of lands both by cession from the States and by treaties with foreign countries is a matter rather of history than of law, and has no place in this discussion. In order for a clearer comprehension of the whole subject, however, the general source of title may be hastily traced. The English possessions in America were not claimed by right of conquest but by right of discovery, and all discoveries made by persons acting under the authority of the government were for the benefit of the nation and not for such persons individually.² Upon the treaty of 1783 the this term is used in the statutes against gaming, see GAMING, vol. 8, p. 1045, et seq. Compare PUBLIC PLACE.

1. The term public lands in its broadest sense comprehends all land in the possession or ownership of the government as distinguished from land possessed by private individuals, and therefore includes lands of the several States as well as those of the United States.

It is proposed in the present treatise, however, to consider chiefly only such lands as are the property of the United States, the principles governing the law relating to lands belonging to the States being virtually the same except where peculiar statutes exist.

The definition given is found in Newhall v. Sanger, 92 U. S. 761; Wirth v. Branson, 98 U. S. 118; Heydenfeldt v. Daney Gold etc. Min. Co., 10 Nev. 290; Anderson's Law Dict. (Land).

As to exactly what the term public lands includes when used in statutes depends upon the connection in which it is used.

Thus it is a settled principle that land once reserved or appropriated for any purpose ceases to be a part of the public land and in all grants or proclamations declaring public land open to settlement, etc., the portion already reserved is always excepted, though the exception is not specifically mentioned. Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 498; Beecher v. Wetherly, 95 U. S. 517; Leavenworth etc. R. Co. v. U. S., 92 U. S. 733; U. S. v. Stone, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 525.

Yet in a statute (23 Stat. 321) forbidding the inclosure of any public land by one who has no claim or color of title thereto, sections 16 and 36 of each township in Montana is held to form a part of the public lands, though already reserved and appropriated for school purposes. U. S. v. Bisel, 8 Mont. 20; Barkley v. U. S., 5 Wash. 522; U. S. v. Flaherty, 8 Mont. 31.

2. Martin v. Waddell, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 367; Johnson v. M'Intosh, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 575.

In the Florida treaty the United States did not succeed to those rights which the king of Spain held by virtue of his royal prerogative, but possessed the territory subject to the institution and laws of its own government. The same, it is presumed, is true of other treaties whereby the United States has acquired lands. Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. (U. S.) 212.

According to the accepted principles of international law, as then understood by the civilized powers of Europe, the Indian tribes in this new world were regarded as mere temporary occupants of the soil, and the absolute rights of property and dominion were considered to belong to the European nations by which any portion of the country was first discovered. Martin v. Waddell, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 367. This case is one of unusual interest, being an important one as fixing the real source of title to lands in the United States. The defendants in the case claimed certain lands covered with water, by virtue of a title derived from the proprietors of East Jersey; the plaintiffs claimed as grantees of the State of New Jersey, under a law passed in that State in 1824, giving them the exclusive right to take oysters from the place in question. The court reviewed at length the history of the different grants made, and of the rights which were vested in the British crown according to the principles of the British constitution. It held that when the Revolution took place, the people of each State became themselves sovereigns, and in that character held the absolute right to all their navigable waters and soils under them for their own common use, subject only to the rights surrendered by the constitution to the general government, and in consideration of this principle, the plaintiff's right under the grant of the State of New Jersey was held superior to that of the defendant. Martin v. Waddell, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 367. See also U. S. v. Kayama, 118 U. S. 375; U. S. v. Cook, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 591; Johnson v. M'Intosh, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 543; Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 77.

In 1 Kent's Commentaries 257, 258 the following is presented upon the subject of public lands: "Upon the doctrine of the Supreme Court in the cases of Johnson v. M'Intosh, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 543, and in that of Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 142, the United States own the soil as well as the jurisdiction of the immense tracts of unpatented land included within their territories and all productive funds which those lands may create. The title is in the United States by treaty of peace with Great Britain, and by subsequent cessions from Spain and France, and by cessions from the individual States; and the Indians have only a right of occupancy, and the United States possesses legal title subject to that occupancy with an absolute and exclusive right to extinguish the Indian title of occupancy either by conquest or purchase. The title of the European nations, and which passed to the United States, to this immense territory was founded on discovery and conquest; and by the European customary law of the nations, prior discovery gave this title to the soil, subject to the possessory right of the natives, and which occupancy was all the right of European conquerors and discoverers, and which the United States as succeeding to that title, would admit to reside in the native Indians. The principle is that the Indians are to be considered merely as occupants, to be protected while in peace in the possession of their lands, but to be deemed incapable of transferring the absolute title to any other than the sovereigns of the country." See 1 Kent's Commentaries 257, 259.

Right of Federal Government to Acquire Lands.—The constitutionality of the acquisition of foreign territory is vindicated by several decisions of the Supreme Court, as a necessary accompaniment of the power to make treaties. American Ins. Co. v. 365 Bales of Cotton, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 511; 3 Story's Commentaries 156, 161.

And it is upon this principle alone that the authority of the United States government to acquire the Louisiana lands rests.

It may be stated as a matter of history that in 1803 the United States minister to France conducted a treaty with Napoleon the First, whereby the immense territory of Louisiana was to be ceded to the United States upon the payment of $15,000,000. The treaty was sent by Mr. Jefferson to the Senate for their ratification, he advising them in the message which accompanied it to adopt it without debate, clearly indicating that he considered that the Federal government possessed no power under the constitution to acquire land. He considered, however, that such an opportunity was not to be lost, and that the Senate should ratify the treaty and English possessions in America became the property of the several States; and the United States now hold public land in States created out of territory ceded by the original States by force of deeds of cession, and the statutes enacted with them, and not by any municipal sovereignty or right of eminent domain which it may be supposed that they possessed, or have received by compact with such States for that particular purpose.¹ The land in the Territories has been acquired by treaty with other countries and is possessed by virtue of the powers vested by the constitution.

Complete control over all public lands of the United States is vested in Congress without limitation,² and this power cannot be interfered with or its exercise embarrassed by any State legislation.³ Therefore, Congress has sole power to declare the dignity throw themselves upon the people to have their conduct approved. But this view of Mr. Jefferson's has been clearly shown to be erroneous, since the power to acquire land under treaty with foreign countries is one of the necessary and essential accompaniments of the power granted to the President to make treaties. Const. U. S., art. 2, § 2; American Ins. Co. v. 365 Bales of Cotton, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 511.

See also Bryce's American Commonwealth, vol. 2, p. 62; Cooley's "Louisiana Purchase."

1. Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. (U. S.) 212; Clark v. Smith, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 195.

That part of the compact respecting public lands it is held would have been binding on the people of the new States whether they had consented to be bound or not. Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. (U. S.) 212.

2. U. S. v. Gratiot, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 526; Fort Leavenworth etc. R. Co. v. Lowe, 114 U. S. 525; Bagnell v. Broderick, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 436; U. S. v. Maxwell Land Grant Co., 121 U. S. 325; Tameling v. U. S. etc. Co., 93 U. S. 644.

But the President is empowered to order, from time to time as the exigencies of the public service require, parcels of land belonging to the United States to be reserved from sale and set apart for public uses. Grisar v. McDowell, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 363.

"Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory, or other property belonging to the United States." U. S. Const., art. 4, § 3, cl. 2.

Presumption of Possession by United States—Office Found.—When Congress passes an act directing the appropriation and possession of land covered by an old French or Spanish grant after it has been forfeited for non-fulfillment of conditions as to improvement, occupation, etc., such an act is equivalent to an office found and re-unites the land to the public domain. U. S. v. Repentnigny, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 211; McMicken v. U. S., 97 U. S. 204.

An actual entry or office found is therefore not necessary to restore possession to the government. U. S. v. Repentnigny, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 211; McMicken v. U. S., 97 U. S. 204; Schulenberg v. Harriman, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 44; Farnsworth v. Minnesota etc. R. Co., 92 U. S. 49.

3. Gibson v. Chouteau, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 92; Jourdan v. Barrett, 4 How. (U. S.) 169; Union etc. Min. Co. v. Ferris, 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 176; Vansickle v. Haines, 7 Nev. 249.

Effect of State Legislation.—The case of Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 498, contains the best exposition as to the law upon this subject. It is there laid down that a State has a perfect right to legislate as she may please in regard to the remedies to be prosecuted in her courts, and to regulate the disposition of the property of her citizens by descent, devise, or alienation; but Congress is invested by the Constitution with the power of disposing of the public land, and making all needful rules and regulations respecting it.

Therefore, where a patent has not been issued for a part of the public land, a State has no power to declare any title less than a patent valid against the claim of the United States to the and effect of titles emanating from the United States,¹ and no land, or against a title held under a patent granted by the United States.

Whenever a question in any court, State or Federal, is whether the title to property which had belonged to the United States has passed, that question must be solved by the laws of the United States; but whenever the property has passed according to those laws, then, like all property in the State, it becomes subject to State legislation, so far as that legislation is consistent with the admission that the title passed and vested according to the laws of the United States. See also Elliott v. Peirsol, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 340; Boyce v. Danz, 29 Mich. 146; Leavenworth etc. R. Co. v. U. S., 92 U. S. 733; Bagnell v. Broderick, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 436; Barnard v. Ashley, 18 How. (U. S.) 43.

Jurisdiction Over Matters Relating to Public Lands.—By virtue of the provisions of article 3, § 2, of the constitution of the United States, jurisdiction of all such matters is vested in the Federal tribunals; thus, the judicial power of the United States extends to all cases in law or equity arising under the constitution or laws of the United States and treaties made under their authority, to cases between citizens of the same State claiming lands under grants of different States, and to cases in which the United States is a party; and in cases of crime it is provided that a trial shall be had in the State within which the crime was committed, but if not committed in the State, at such place as Congress may by law direct. It would seem, therefore, that in all cases which arise relative to the public lands—that is, as to their ownership prior to the issue of the patent, and as to crimes committed against the public lands, etc.—will be tried in the Federal courts; but in order to lessen the burden which would be imposed by compelling them to examine and decide upon all such cases, it is provided by several acts that the courts of the Territories and sometimes of the States are empowered to try certain cases; for example, in the act forbidding the inclosure of public lands by one who has no title thereto, territorial courts are empowered to try all cases arising within their territorial limits even though the cases must necessarily be those in which the United States is a party. See Const. of U. S., art. 3, § 2;

U. S. v. Douglas-Willan Sartoris Co. (Wyoming 1889), 22 Pac. Rep. 92; Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 498; U. S. v. Bisel, 8 Mont. 20.

Congress and the Treaty Making Power.—A peculiar question arises here as to the relative extent of the power of Congress and of the treaty making power.

In the case of Foster v. Neilson, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 314, the court by Marshall, C. J., said: "Our constitution declares a treaty to be the law of the land. It is consequently to be regarded in courts of justice as equivalent to an act of the legislature whenever it operates of itself without the aid of any legislative provision; but when the terms of a stipulation import a contract, and either of the parties engage to perform a particular act, the treaty then addresses itself to the political and not the judicial department, and the legislature must execute the contract before it can become a rule of court." This, then, would seem to define distinctly to what extent the treaty making power of the government can dispose of or control the public lands, and that such power cannot confer upon the land department authority, nor enjoin upon it any duty respecting the sale, conveyance or disposition of the public lands, except with the consent of Congress. Parker v. Duff, 47 Cal. 554; Pugsley v. Brown, 35 Fed. Rep. 688; Easton v. Salisbury, 21 How. (U. S.) 431; Turner v. American Baptist etc. Union, 5 McLean (U. S.) 344; Stockton v. Williams, 1 Mich. 546. This doctrine is opposed in one case, however, that of Utah Min. etc. Co. v. Dickert etc. Sulphur Co. (Utah, 1889), 21 Pac. Rep. 1002.

1. The whole legislation of the government in reference to the public lands declares the patent (which is the evidence of the conveyance from the government to the private person) to be the statutory and conclusive evidence of legal title. Until it issues the fee is in the government, which by the patent passed to the grantee, and he is entitled to recover the possession in ejectment. Bagnell v. Broderick, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 436. See also Rector v. Gibbon, 111 U. S. 276.

Conflict of Grants.—In the case of Coffee v. Groover, 123 U. S. 1, it appeared that the plaintiff in an ejectment suit claimed certain land under a grant from the State of Georgia, and appropriation of public lands can be made for any purpose save by authority of an act of Congress.¹ After any portion of the public land has been acquired as private property, and a legal title vested in a private owner it becomes a part of the property of the State in which it is situated, subject to the laws of the State as to its alienation and transfer.²

II. GENERAL METHOD OF ACQUIRING PUBLIC LANDS AS PRIVATE PROPERTY.—There are five principal means by which private persons can acquire title to portions of the public land of the United States, namely: (1) by pre-emption; (2) homestead; (3) public auction or private sale; (4) bounty lands or military land warrants; (5) under the Timber Culture Act. The nature of each of these may be briefly described.³

defendant claimed under a grant of the United States and a subsequent grant to him from the State of Florida. When the grant by Georgia was made, that State claimed the land and exercised political jurisdiction de facto over it; the boundary between the States being then a subject of controversy. Some time after both grants had been made, it was decided that the land was within the State of Florida. It was held thereupon that the defendant's title must prevail, notwithstanding the Congressional confirmation of the Georgia grants, the principle being laid down that grants of land made by the government to territories over which it exercises political jurisdiction de facto, but which does not rightfully belong to it, are wholly invalid as against the government to which the territory rightfully belongs.

1. United States v. Fitzgerald, 15 Pet. (U. S.) 407.

This right of the United States to dispose of the fee simple of lands occupied by them has always been upheld in the Supreme Court from the very foundation of the government. Buttz v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 119 U. S. 55; Beecher v. Wetherby, 95 U. S. 517. This right is founded on discovery, and the grant of the United States is subject only to the Indian right of occupancy. A grant made before the extinguishment of the Indian right remains subject to that right, but the title becomes absolute in the grantee whenever the Indian right is extinguished. Clark v. Smith, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 105; Johnson v. McIntosh, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 575; Buttz v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 119 U. S. 55; Thompson v. Doaksum, 68 Cal. 593.

Trespass on Public Lands.—The rights of the United States as to its public lands are the same as those of any owner of private property, and therefore it may maintain trespass against any person trespassing upon such lands either by cutting and carrying away timber or otherwise. Cotton v. U. S., 11 How. (U. S.) 229; Jourdan v. Barrett, 4 How. (U. S.) 169; Schulenberg v. Harriman, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 44. See also U. S. v. Briggs, 9 How. (U. S.) 351; Schulenberg v. Harriman, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 60; Wells v. Nickles, 104 U. S. 444.

Lands Cannot be Acquired as Against the United States by Prescription.—It has been often held that mere occupancy and improvement of the public lands, no matter how long continued, gives no vested right in such lands as against the United States or any purchaser from them. Sparks v. Pierce, 115 U. S. 408; Morrow v. Whitney, 95 U. S. 559; Oaksmith v. Johnston, 92 U. S. 343; Burgess v. Gray, 16 How. (U. S.) 48; Frisbie v. Whitney, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 187; Gibson v. Chouteau, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 92.

The weight of inference in favor of any claim of right to lands as against the United States, growing out of mere possession, is very slight indeed. Simmons v. Ogle, 105 U. S. 271.

2. It is a settled principle that the laws of the State in which the land is situated control exclusively its descent, devise, alienation, transfer, and the effect and construction of instrument intended to convey it. U. S. v. Fox, 94 U. S. 315; McCormick v. Sullivan, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 202; Brine v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 96 U. S. 627; McGould v. Scales, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 32; Watt v. Waddle, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 389.

3. Desert Lands.—There is one other method of acquiring public lands

Land is acquired by preemption by the preemptor going upon the land subject to preemption, improving it, and residing there continuously six months; at the expiration of the required time, by making proof of such residence and improvement and of other minor facts, and paying $1.25 per acre, he is entitled to a patent conveying him full title to the land.¹

Under the homestead laws a person enters upon the land subject to homestead, improves it, and resides there continuously for five years; at the expiration of such time, upon making proof of such residence and improvement, and of minor facts, he is entitled without the payment of any money, except a small amount as fees, to receive a patent conveying to him a fee simple of the land.²

Under the third head, land is acquired in the following way: By order or proclamation of the President it is declared that certain land will be open to sale at public auction at a specified time, and continue open to such sale for two weeks, during which time the land so advertised will be sold to the highest bidder; no credit being given, and the minimum price being $1.25 per acre. Such land embraced in the proclamation as remains unsold at the expiration of two weeks will be subject to private sale and at the regular price of $1.25 per acre.³

To certain soldiers, or to their widows or children, were issued what were known as military land warrants, entitling them to a certain amount of the public land, and upon presentation to the proper office of such warrants, the person was entitled to enter private property; namely, that provided by act of March 3, 1877 (19 Stat. 377), where it is provided that a person of the requisite age, citizenship, etc., may, upon payment of twenty-five cents per acre, file a declaration under oath with the register and receiver of the district in which any desert land is situated that he intends to reclaim a tract of desert land not exceeding one section by conducting water upon the same within a period of three years thereafter, and upon proof of having reclaimed such land is entitled to receive a patent therefor, conveying to him the fee simple; but no entry under this act can be made of lands reclaimed before any entering. See 2 Copp's Land Laws, 888, 909.

See also Gray v. Dixon, 83 Cal. 33.

Entry, Meaning of.—The term entry being of frequent occurrence in this discussion, its meaning may be fully explained in the beginning. As applied to the appropriation of public lands, it is intended to mean that act by which an individual acquires an inceptive right to a portion of the unappropriated soil of the country by filing his claim in the office of an officer provided by law. When the expression "enter a certain tract of land" is used, it is intended to mean not that the person entered upon the lands and took possession, but that his claim to them was entered in the registers in the land office. In the old case of Chotard v. Pope, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 586, it was considered that the words "enter, entry, etc.," were exclusively used with reference to the appropriation of lands hitherto unappropriated. The opinion in that case dwells at length upon the meaning of this word, particularly as applied to the act of 1800, providing for the sale of certain unappropriated lands in Virginia.

1. U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 2257-88; infra, this title, Preemption; U. S. v. Fitzgerald, 15 Pet. (U. S.) 407, note.

2. U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 2289-2317; infra, this title, Homestead; Newkirk v. Marshall, 35 Kan. 77.

3. U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 2353-2379; infra, this title, Public Entry, etc.; Eldred v. Sexton, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 189.

No land of the United States is now subject to private entry except that in so much of the public domain as the warrant provided for without payment of any price for the land, unless the land was held above the usual price, in which case he must pay the difference between the usual price and that at which it was held.¹

Lastly, by special act of Congress it was provided that a person might enter upon land, after making the proper application and upon proof three years after that he had planted a certain acreage of timber, he should be entitled to receive a patent for the land so occupied.²

It should be observed that in no case can more land be acquired by any single one of the means above mentioned, except the third, exceeding in amount one-quarter section, that is, one hundred and sixty acres;³ and in most cases, indeed, in all, it is required that the person attempting to claim the benefit of the above provisions must be a citizen of the United States, or one who has filed his declaration of intention to become such, and must be also either the head of a family, a widow, or a person above the age of twenty-one years.⁴

Having thus seen the general methods of acquiring public land, it will be well to proceed to a more extended discussion of each method.⁵

1. Preemption.—a. NATURE AND EXTENT OF THE RIGHT.—Preemption is the exercise of a right by a person, possessing the qualifications required by statute, who has made a settlement in person on public land subject to preemption, not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres, inhabited and improved it, and erected a dwelling thereon, and obtained a title in preference to any other, by entry and purchase at the price at which the land is held.⁶

Missouri. See Stat. March 2, 1889; Gould & Tucker's Notes on Rev. Stat., p. 522.

1. U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 2414-46; infra this title, Bounty Lands.

2. U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 2464-68 (superseceded by a later statute). See 20 U. S. Stat. 113; infra, this title, Timber Culture.

3. Copp's Pub. Land Laws 802-806; Gould & Tucker's Notes on Rev. Stat., § 2464 (in which latter authority the statute is set out in full).

4. U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 2298, 2261, 2425; Gould & Tucker's Notes on Rev. Stat., pp. 560, 561; 2 Copps' Pub. Land Laws 802-3.

5. U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 2259, 2289, 2418; Gould & Tucker's Notes on Rev. Stat., pp. 560-1.

6. Many of the principles applicable to preemption apply as well to homestead laws and other processes of acquiring public property. It is therefore dealt with much more at length.

6. 2 Copp's Public Land Laws (1890), p. 640; Dillingham v. Fisher, 5 Wis. 475; Bohall v. Dilla, 114 U. S. 47.

Six months' actual residence on the land is requisite in order to constitute a settlement as here intended. Dillingham v. Fisher, 5 Wis. 475; Bohall v. Dilla, 114 U. S. 417.

The right of preemption is in no case prejudiced by a refusal of the land officers, under a mistaken sense of their duty, to receive proof of settlement. Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 330; Cunningham v. Ashley, 14 How. (U. S.) 377; Lytle v. Arkansas, 9 How. (U. S.) 314.

It is another well settled principle that no right of preemption can be established by settlement and improvement on public land where the claimant forcibly intruded upon the possession of one who had already settled upon, improved, and inclosed such land. Such intrusion is but a naked unlawful trespass and cannot initiate a right of

By their preemption laws, the United States do not enter into any contract with the settler or incur any obligation that the land occupied by him shall ever be put up for sale;¹ therefore, a party by settlement upon the public lands, with a declared intention of obtaining a title to the same under the preemption laws, does not thereby acquire a vested interest in the premises sufficient to deprive Congress of its power over them. Under such circumstances the preemption laws give him simply a privilege that in case the lands are offered for sale he may purchase them in preference to others.² It is only when all the preliminary acts prescribed by statute, including the payment of the price of the land, have been performed by the settler that he acquires a full vested interest in the premises occupied by him, and is entitled to have his title consummated by a certificate of entry preemption. Atherton v. Fowler, 96 U. S. 513; Tremouth v. San Francisco, 100 U. S. 251; Wirth v. Branson, 98 U. S. 118; Quimby v. Conlan, 114 U. S. 420; Mower v. Fletcher, 116 U. S. 380; Weeks v. White, 41 Kan. 572.

To create the right of preemption there must always be settlement, habitation, and improvement by the pre-emptor, and these are conditions which cannot be met when the land is in occupation of another. Hosmer v. Wallace, 97 U. S. 575; Davis v. Scott, 56 Cal. 165; Hambleton v. Duhain, 71 Cal. 136.

A preemption claim is not "an account or claim" within the meaning of U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5421, providing against forgery. U. S. v. Spaulding, 3 Dak. 85.

The right of preemption, although a gratuity, constitutes as valid a right in the settler as if it were based on a valuable consideration, and creates an equity in favor of the settler, which excludes the right of all others to purchase the land from the United States, for the time allowed by law for the settler to make his proof and entry; and this right can only be lost by a failure by the settler to complete his purchase within the time allowed. The right, however, is not a title. McAfee v. Keirn, 7 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 780; 45 Am. Dec. 331; Grand Gulf R. etc. Co. v. Bryan, 8 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 234; Taylor v. Brown, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 234.

Contract Not to Exercise Preemption Right.—In Carr v. Allison, 5 Black. (Ind.) 63, A agreed not to enter his claim on certain lands under the pre-emption laws, and to permit B to enter them upon paying him (A) a certain sum. The contract was held void as against public policy.

So also of a contract to secure the withdrawal of opposition to a claim. Snow v. Kimmer, 52 Cal. 624; Hoyt v. Macon, 2 Colo. 502.

1. Hutchins v. Lowe, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 77; Lamb v. Davenport, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 313; Lytle v. Arkansas, 9 How. (U. S.) 314.

But compare Coleman v. Allen, 5 Mo. App. 127.

The same is true in case of settlement upon State lands, and an inchoate right by settlement and improvement, if the settler be otherwise qualified, gives to him a privilege or preference as against the purchase of land by others, but it confers upon him no legal or equitable right whatever as against the State. State v. Budgett, 35 Kan. 600.

2. Frisbie v. Whitney, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 187; Hutchins v. Lowe, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 77; Campbell v. Wade, 132 U. S. 34; Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 330; Rector v. Gibbon, 111 U. S. 276.

It has always been the policy of the government, however, to protect those who, in good faith, have settled upon and improved portions of the public lands. An illustrative case is seen in Lamb v. Davenport, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 313; Rector v. Gibbon, 111 U. S. 276.

Yet it is said in Simmons v. Ogle, 105 U. S. 271, that the inference in favor of the right of one in possession merely, of public land is but very slight. He can base no equity on his possession nor on the failure of the United States to assert title as against him. But this is to be taken as true from the local land officer and later by a patent for the lands from the United States.¹

b. LAND SUBJECT TO PREEMPTION.—All lands belonging to the United States to which the Indian title has been, or may be extinguished, is subject to the right of preemption under the conditions, restrictions, and stipulations provided by law.² To this general provision there are four classes of exceptions provided by the statutes:

(1) Lands included in any reservation by any treaty, law, or proclamation of the President for any purpose.³

only as regards a conflict of his right with that of the United States.

1. Wirth v. Branson, 98 U. S. 118; Hutchins v. Low, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 77.

2. U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2258; Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 498; Turner v. American Baptist etc. Union, 5 McLean (U. S.) 344.

That a preemption right to public lands cannot be initiated so long as the Indian title remains unextinguished, see Buttz v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 119 U. S. 55; Dubuque etc. R. Co. v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 109 U. S. 329; Russell v. Beebe, Hempst. (U. S.) 704.

But the mere fact that the legal title to land is in the United States does not necessarily make it such a part of the public domain as is subject to settlement under the preemption laws. Thus, land in possession of another who has settled upon it as a preemptor or homesteader still belongs to the United States, and is in one sense a part of the public land; yet it is by no means subject to entry by another under the preemption laws. Atherton v. Fowler, 96 U. S. 513; U. S. v. Payne, 8 Fed. Rep. 883; Hosmer v. Wallace, 97 U. S. 575; Hambleton v. Duhain, 71 Cal. 136.

For it is a settled principle, as clearly and distinctly laid down in the case of Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 498, that when a tract of land is once appropriated to any purpose, though it may still remain a part of the public domain, no subsequent law or proclamation can be construed to embrace it, or operate upon it, although no special exception is made of it. Leavenworth etc. R. Co. v. U. S., 92 U. S. 733; Beecher v. Weatherby, 95 U. S. 517.

While a contest is pending in the general land office as to the rights of a State to select certain lands, such lands are to be considered as sub judice, and not within the terms of the preemption statute. U. S. v. Williams, 30 Fed. Rep. 309.

Prior to the Donation Act of Sept. 27, 1850, no person could by entry or preemption settlement acquire as against the United States any right or title to public land in Oregon. Missionary Soc. v. Dalles City, 107 U. S. 336.

Between March 1, 1856 and May 30, 1862, unsurveyed public lands in California were not subject to settlement under preemption laws. Since that time, however, they as well as surveyed lands, have been so subject. 10 Stat. at L., U. S. 246; 12 Stat. at L., U. S. 409; Hosmer v. Wallace, 97 U. S. 575.

A qualified preemptor can acquire no right by entry and settlement on land embraced within a tract which for twenty years had been fenced by another, who had erected thereon a dwelling house and other buildings, and who with his tenants, had occupied the same as a dairy farm and for grazing purposes. McBrown v. Morris, 59 Cal. 64.

3. U. S. Rev. St., § 2257; Gould and Tucker's Notes on Rev. St. 521; Leavenworth etc. R. Co. v. U. S., 92 U. S. 733; Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 498; Beecher v. Wetherby, 95 U. S. 517.

The United States may properly proceed by bill in equity to have a judicial decree of nullity and an order of cancellation of a patent issued by itself, ignorantly or in mistake, for lands reserved from sale by law, and a grant of which by patent was, therefore, void. U. S. v. Stone, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 525.

An order of the Secretary of the Interior is equivalent to a "proclamation" by the President mentioned in the statute. Wolsey v. Chapman, 101 U. S. 755.

A patent issued for land withdrawn from appropriation by an Indian treaty is void. The entry was without right,

(2) Lands included within the limits of an incorporated town, or selected as the site of a city or town.¹

(3) Lands actually settled and occupied for purposes of trade and business and not for agriculture.²

(4) Lands on which are situated any known salines or mines.³

To constitute the exception contemplated here, there must be upon the land ascertained mineral deposits of such an extent and value as to make the land more valuable to be worked as a mine, under the conditions existing at the time, than to use it for merely agricultural purposes. The circumstance that there are surface indications of the existence of veins of mineral, or that a and the patent should be vacated. U. S. v. Carpenter, 111 U. S. 347.

See as to lands under a particular act "to quiet land titles in California." McCreery v. Haskill, 119 U. S. 327.

It has already been noticed that when once land is withdrawn from the public domain, either for State school land or other purposes, it is no longer open to preempts. See Durand v. Martin, 120 U. S. 366.

1. U. S. Rev. St., § 2258; Gould & Tucker's Note on Rev. St. 524, et seq.; Chotard v. Pope, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 586.

Lands Reserved as the Site for a City or Town.—This provision is not affected by the extent of territory which the State or territorial legislature may include in an incorporated town. Nor was it repealed, as to Nebraska, by the organic act of the Territory providing that the legislature should not interfere with the primary disposal of the soil; the power of States to incorporate towns on the public domain is well acknowledged. Moreover the land is withdrawn from operation of the preemption law by the act of Congress, not by the act of incorporation. Root v. Shields, 1 Woolw. (U. S.) 340; Carroll v. Patrick, 23 Neb. 834.

Where a company has made an effort to build a town upon certain land and afterwards abandons the project, such land cannot be considered as being withdrawn from preemption. Smiley v. Sampson, 1 Neb. 56.

Issue of a patent to the municipal authorities can pass no title as against one whose right to a patent was perfected previously to the act authorizing the issue to municipal authorities. Starks v. Starrs, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 402.

Where the title to a town lot is confirmed by Congress and such lot is a portion of a claimant's land upon which his house stood, his title to the remainder of the claim is not affected thereby. O'Brien v. Perry, 1 Black (U. S.) 132.

2. U. S. Rev. St., § 2258. See also Surgett v. Lapice, 8 How. (U. S.) 48.

3. U. S. Rev. St., § 2558; Gould & Tucker's Notes on Rev. St. p. 525.

Therefore a patent will be canceled if it appears that the person who obtained it knew that there were mines on the land covered by it at the time he made the application. In the case of McLaughlin v. U. S., 107 U. S. 526, it appeared that cinnabar, a mineral which carries quicksilver, was found on the land in 1863; that a man resided on the land and mined cinnabar at that time, and in 1866 established some form of reduction works there; that these were on the ground when application for the patent was made by the agent of the patentee, and that these facts were known to him. The patent was therefore canceled. See also Mullen v. U. S., 118 U. S. 271; Morton v. Nebraska, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 674; Deffeback v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 392.

The Act of July 1st, 1864, gave a legislative construction to the word "mines," by which it is made to include all coal-beds or coal-fields, in which no interest had become vested. U. S. v. Mullan, 10 Fed. Rep. 785; 118 U. S. 271.

The grant to the Central Pacific Railroad Company (12 U. S. St. at L. 492, § 3)—excepting all mineral lands—imports a duty of officers issuing patents to ascertain whether the lands are mineral or not. Issuance of a patent is a determination of the officers that the land therein conveyed is not mineral; and this, even though the patent contains an exception of mineral land. And an occupant thereunder will be protected against in-change in the conditions has occurred subsequently to the sale, whereby new discoveries are made, or by means whereof it may become profitable to work such lands as mines, does not in the least affect the title as it passed at the time of the sale.¹

It has always been the policy of the government since the acquisition of the Northwest Territory, and the inauguration of its land system, to reserve salt springs from sale, and this policy has been applied, at least so far as to render void an entry where salines at the time had been noted on the field book, were palpable to the eye, and were discovered prior to the entry.²

c. PERSONS ENTITLED TO RIGHT.—Every person being the head of a family, or widow, or single person, over the age of twenty-one years, and a citizen of the United States, or having filed a declaration of intention to become such as required by the naturalization laws, who may hereafter make a settlement in person on the public lands, subject to preemption, and who inhabits and improves the same, and who has erected or shall erect a dwelling thereon, is authorized to enter a claim for land, subject to the general provisions with regard to preemption.³ No person, howtrusion of any stranger claiming to have discovered minerals thereon. Cowell v. Lammers, 21 Fed. Rep. 200.

1. The question is to be determined according to the facts in existence at the time. If upon the premises at the time there were not actual "known mines" capable of being profitably worked for their mineral products, the title to them acquired under the preemption act cannot be successfully assailed. Colorado Coal etc. Co. v. U. S., 123 U. S. 307, 328; U. S. v. Reed, 28 Fed. Rep. 482; Mullan v. U. S., 118 U. S. 270 (coal lands).

2. Salines.—Morton v. Nebraska, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 660; Deffebach v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 392; U. S. v. Gear, 3 How. (U. S.) 120.

3. U. S. Rev. St., § 2259; Gould & Tucker's Notes on Rev. St., p. 526-8. An officer of the United States has the same right to acquire a portion of the public lands by any mode or purchase authorized by law, as any other citizen. U. S. v. Fitzgerald, 15 Pet. (U. S.) 407.

The applicant for preemption under the statute of May 30, 1862, authorizing settlements upon California lands, must have all the qualifications prescribed under the general preemption law. Gimmy v. Culverston, 5 Sawy. (U. S.) 605.

The settlement upon the land required by the preemption laws is that of a qualified person, and the fact that one of foreign birth has been in possession prior to the date of declaring his intention to become a citizen, will not preclude him from preempting the land of which he continued in possession, and his settlement would be considered as commencing with the date of such declaration of intention. Boyce v. Dautz, 29 Mich. 146.

Testimony that a person has been accepted by the United States land officers, as entitled to enter public lands, is prima facie proof of such qualification. Barnhart v. Ford, 41 Kan. 341.

But the tenant of a preemptor cannot himself preempt the same land upon hearing that his landlord's entry has been canceled and vacated by the land office, when it afterwards turns out that such cancellation was void and was vacated by the Commissioner of the General Land Office. Potter v. Tibbetts, 43 Fed. Rep. 505.

Entry in Trust for Another.—A party cannot enter public lands under the preemption laws in trust for the use and benefit of another, and the court will not decree that an entry was so made, or that the title acquired thereunder by the preemptor from the government inured to the benefit of any other person. Robinson v. Jones (Neb. 1890), 47 N. W. Rep. 480; Warren v. Van Brunt, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 646.

A "Bona Fide Preemption Claimant" as used in § 8 of the act of Congress of July 23, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 220), and ever, who is proprietor of three hundred and twenty acres of land in any State or Territory, or who quits or abandons his residence on his own land, to reside on the public lands in the same State or Territory, is to be entitled to the right in question.¹ Nor can any person be entitled to more than one preemptive right by virtue of the provisions just set forth; and where a party qualified has filed his declaration of intention to claim the benefit of such generally, is one who has settled upon lands subject to preemption, with the intention to acquire them, and who, in order to perfect his right to them, has complied, or is proceeding to comply, in good faith with the requirements of the preemption laws. Hosmer v. Wallace, 97 U. S. 575; Ferguson v. McLaughlin, 96 U. S. 174.

A person who settles on a quarter-section of land within the exterior limits of a Mexican grant, a portion of which is occupied by a bona fide purchaser for value from the Mexican grantee does not, if upon the final survey of the grant, the land is excluded from the grant, become a bona fide preemptor, within the meaning of the eighth section of the act of Congress of July 23, 1866, to quiet land-titles in California, as against the purchaser from the Mexican grantee; and such purchaser, under the seventh section of said act, is entitled to enter the land of which he is in possession at the minimum price. Rutledge v. Murphy, 51 Cal. 388.

Aliens.—Aliens are qualified to make entry under homestead or preemption laws upon the following conditions:

1st. Where they have declared their intentions to become citizens of the United States under § 2165 of the U. S. Rev. Stat.

2nd. It is equivalent to a declaration by the widow or minor children, where the father makes his declaration of intention and dies before having taken out full papers.

3rd. When an alien comes to this country during his minority, and remains until after he reaches his majority he must file his declaration under § 2165, or comply with the requirements of § 2167 before he is qualified to make entry.

4th. An honorable discharge from the United States armies, either the regular or volunteer force, is equivalent to a declaration of naturalization. See NATURALIZATION, vol. 16, p. 223;

Hutchinson v. Donaldson, 9 Copp. 150; The Jackson Case, 10 Copp. 19; 2 Copp. Pub. Land Laws 1279.

Citizens.—All persons born or naturalized within the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, and none others, are citizens of the United States. Const. of U. S. amendments, art. 14; North Noonday Min. Co. v. Orient Min. Co., 1 Fed. Rep. 527; 6 Sawy. (U. S.) 299; CITIZENSHIP, vol. 3, p. 242.

A corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State is to be considered a citizen within the meaning of these provisions. North Noonday Min. Co. v. Orient Min. Co., 1 Fed. Rep. 527; 6 Sawy. (U. S.) 299. But in a later case McKinley v. Wheeler, 130 U. S. 630, Mr. Justice Field adds these restrictive words: "All of whose members are citizens of the United States," and it seems that it must be also shown that the corporation was organized under the laws of the United States, or some State or Territory thereof, and that the members are citizens and severally and individually qualified and competent under the homestead or preemption laws. Thomas v. Chisholm, 13 Colo. 105; CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 185.

1. U. S. Rev. St., § 2260; Gould & Tucker's Notes on Rev. St. 529; Myers v. Croft, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 296.

A person does not become a proprietor within the meaning of the law by holding land in trust for others, or by entering at the land office; the proprietorship contemplated is a legal and absolute one. Aiken v. Ferry, 6 Sawy. (U. S.) 79.

Indians.—The preemption laws do not apply to Indians. Half-breeds are to be considered Indians so long as they retain their tribal relations; and neither Indians nor half breeds become citizens of the United States by being made electors under State laws. 7 A. G. Op. 746.

Otherwise as to homestead laws, see INDIANS, vol. 10, p. 447.

provisions for one tract of land, he cannot file at a future time a second declaration for another tract.¹

d. PROCEEDINGS.—A party desiring to acquire land under the preemption laws, must himself carefully examine the land, assure himself of its true description according to the public surveys, and of its character and desirability for purposes of residence and cultivation, and that there is no other valid claim to it. He is bound to know personally the land he claims, and any mistakes which he might have avoided by the exercise of proper diligence are made at his own risk. The land, having been selected, he must move upon it and make an actual bona fide settlement thereupon, since no rights as a preemptor can be acquired until substantial acts of settlement have been made.²

1. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2261.

The second filing of a declaratory statement by any preemptor who was qualified at the date of the first filing, is illegal, and the party acquires no rights whatever under it; but where the first filing was illegal from any cause not the willful act of the party, he may make a second and legal filing. Baldwin v. Stark, 107 U. S. 463; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 72; Nix v. Allen, 112 U. S. 129; Goist v. Bottum, 5 L. D. 643; In re Raymond, 10 Cowp. 394; 2 Copp's Pub. Land Laws (1890) 642.

In the case of Cornelius v. Kessel, 128 U. S. 456, the defendant had entered two tracts of land as being subject to entry as public lands of the United States, paid the full purchase price, and received a receipt from the receiver of the land office. On discovering that one tract was not subject to entry, the Commissioner of the General Land Office canceled the entry as to both tracts, without notice to defendant and without returning or offering to return the purchase money. It was held that the cancellation was invalid as to the tract subject to entry, and that defendant could rely on the original entry, and was entitled to have conveyed to him the legal title held by one who had received a patent for said tract after the order of cancellation.

But the statute does not prohibit a preemptor from filing a second declaration of intention to preempt the same tract of land described in a former declaration, when from defect or otherwise the first statement has become unavailing, and rights of third persons have not intervened. Cumens v. Cyphers, 56 Cal. 383.

Plaintiff and defendant filed on separate and adjoining tracts of land, and made improvements thereon. Defendant, without the knowledge of plaintiff, obtained permission to amend his declaratory statement so as to include the tract on which plaintiff had settled, and thus bought that tract and had it included in his patent. Held, that this amendment was in violation of U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2261, which prohibits a preemptor from filing at a future time a second declaration for another tract, and the patent thereon issued could not defeat plaintiff's rights. Sanford v. Sanford, 139 U. S. 642.

In the case of Mix v. Allen, 112 U. S. 129, it is held that one who under the act of Sept. 4, 1841, providing that no person should be entitled to more than one preemptive right by virtue of the act, entered a quarter of a quarter section, must be deemed to have abandoned his right to enter the whole quarter section, notwithstanding he cultivated parts of the other quarters of the quarter section.

Filing by a Minor.—It must be observed that in order to make a second filing illegal, the person filing must have been fully qualified at the date of the first filing, therefore the filing of a declaratory statement for a preemption right by a minor will not prevent him, on attaining majority, from obtaining a preemption right to the same or another tract of land. Tatro v. French, 33 Kan. 49.

2. 2 Copp's Pub. Land Laws (1890), 641, et seq.; U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2259; Tyler v. Green, 28 Cal. 406; 87 Am. Dec. 130, note (in this note is contained an admirable synopsis of proceedings in preemption). Grimmy v. Culverson, 5 Sawy. (U. S.) 605.

A settlement upon a portion of a

(1) Declaratory Statement.—After the claimant has made his settlement, and not before, he is to file a declaratory statement in the district land office, either in person or through the mails.¹ Filing his declaration without an actual settlement having been made is illegal and no rights are acquired thereby, although a subsequent bona fide settlement may be recognized if made before the intervention of any valid adverse claim, and if followed up by the proper inhabitaney and improvement.² The statement must identify by description the land settled upon, state the date of settlement, and declare the intention of the party to claim the same under the preemption laws. It must be in writing or printed, according to the forms prescribed, and be attested by quarter section, and making the improvements required by law, is sufficient to sustain a preemptive claim to the whole quarter-section as against subsequent settlers, even though the latter may have purchased from earlier occupants. Quinby v. Conlan, 104 U. S. 420.

But an actual settler's right cannot extend beyond the quarter-section upon a part of which his improvements are made, in order to make up an entire quarter-section of one hundred and sixty acres. Lytle v. Arkansas, 9 How. (U. S.) 314.

Settlement.—What constitutes an actual settlement as required by preemption laws, is usually a question of fact upon which the decision of the Land Office is conclusive. See infra, this title, The General Land Office. In the case of Lindsey v. Hawes, 2 Black. (U. S.) 554, it appeared that the claimant's stable or blacksmith shop was on the land, and there was evidence of his inclosure and cultivation of the ground or a part of it and that a considerable part of the house in which he and his family lived was also on the ground. These facts were considered sufficient evidence of bona fide settlement.

See also Harkness v. Underhill, 1 Black. (U. S.) 317, where an affidavit of actual settlement to sustain a claim was set aside when it was shown that claimant went on the land into a log pen without a roof, and remained only one night. Ferguson v. McLaughlin, 96 U. S. 174.

It is evident that inhabitation and improvement, essential requisites of a proper settlement, cannot be accomplished while the land is in the occupation of another. Hosmer v. Wallace, 97 U. S. 575; Bohall v. Dilla, 114 U. S. 47.

The claimant's dwelling-house must be on some portion of the land (Ferguson v. McLaughlin, 96 U. S. 174), and if the house is bisected by the line between two quarter sections he may be considered as residing on either. Silver v. Ladd, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 219.

It does not constitute a settlement where the claimant forcibly intrudes upon the possession of another who has actually settled on the land, improved and inclosed it, though the title is still in the United States. Such an act is not a settlement but a mere naked trespass. Hambleton v. Duhain, 71 Cal. 136; Davis v. Scott, 56 Cal. 165; Hosmer v. Wallace, 97 U. S. 575.

1. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2264; 2 Copp's Pub. Land Laws 641.

When a settler enters in person on land open to preemption with the intention of availing himself of the provisions of the law concerning such land and does any act in execution of that intention, e. g., by cutting logs to build a house, he is a settler and must give the required notice within thirty days. 4 A. G. Op. 493.

Where one has a right to make a preemption of public lands, the Land Department is not justified in refusing to permit him to file his declaratory statement, on account of a rule of its own establishment forbidding the filing of a declaratory statement subsequent to the commencement of a contest between other parties for the same land. Quinn v. Chapman, 111 U. S. 445.

2. 2 Copp's Pub. Land Laws 641.

A failure by any claimant to make the declaratory statement within the time prescribed, renders his claim liable to be forfeited and the tract to be awarded to the next settler in order of time, who has given proper notice, etc. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2264-5.

not less than two witnesses living in the neighborhood of the land. It should also contain the residence and post-office address of the claimant and his witnesses.¹

As to the time in which the declaratory statement must be filed, there is a difference as to whether (1) the land has been offered for sale, or (2) has been surveyed and is unoffered, or (3) has never been surveyed at all. In the first case the claimant is allowed thirty days after he has become a settler on the land in which to file the statement. In the second he is allowed three months after becoming a settler, and in the last case the declaration must be filed three months after the plat of the township survey is filed in the district land office.²

(2) Proof.—The statutes require the preemptor before entering the lands, to make oath that he has not previously exercised his preemption right; that he does not come within the exceptions named by statute; that he has not settled upon and improved the land, intending to sell the same on speculation, but in good faith to appropriate it to his own exclusive use; that he has not made any contract or agreement directly or otherwise, in any way with any person whomsoever, by which the title he may acquire from the United States shall inure in anywise to the benefit of any person except himself.³

1. 2 Copp's Pub. Land Laws 642-3.
2. U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 2264-65; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 72; Lansdale v. Daniels, 100 U. S. 113.

The claim, however, will not be forfeited for failure to make the declaration within three months, if it is made before any adverse claim accrues. Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 72; Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 530.

A declaratory statement, or notice of claim, filed before the proper time (e. g., before the plats of survey are returned to the land office), is a nullity. Lansdale v. Daniels, 100 U. S. 113.

3. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2262.

By virtue of this statute a contract by which one party agrees to furnish half the government price of land, and of improving the same, in consideration of the other party preempting and conveying half the land to him after title acquired, is void. Marshall v. Cowles, 48 Ark. 362.

Likewise an agreement with a preemptor that, if his application for a patent is not opposed in the United States Land Office, he will convey to the other contracting party an interest in the land patented, is contrary to the statute, and therefore void. Snow v. Kimmer, 52 Cal. 624.

Therefore an agreement between settlers upon unsurveyed public land of the United States that after their respective lands should be surveyed and patents obtained therefor each would convey to the other such land embraced in the patent to him as was in the possession of the other at the time of the agreement, is void, unless the parties are settlers on, and have their improvements on the same legal subdivision. Turner v. Donnelly, 70 Cal. 597; Damrell v. Meyer, 40 Cal. 170; Hudson v. Johnson, 45 Cal. 21.

A party, A, holding a preemption claim, agreed to convey a portion of the land to the state if it would erect the capitol in the town. The capitol was so erected, and A afterwards obtained his patent but refused to convey the portion promised. The promise was held void, and a bill for its specific performance was therefore dismissed. Dawson v. Merrille, 2 Neb. 179; 3 Neb. 458. See also Brisbois v. Robert, 1 Minn. 230.

Agreement to secure cancellation of an entry by a third party who has surrendered the same is not void as against public policy, and may constitute a valid consideration. Thompson v. Hanson, 28 Minn. 484.

In Texas.—The laws of Texas forbade any person to sell lands obtained by Any person swearing falsely forfeits all right to the land and to the purchase money paid, besides making himself liable to prosecution under criminal laws for perjury.¹

In addition to the oath, proof must be made by the testimony of the claimant, corroborated by that of at least two witnesses, examined separately, of the facts constituting his qualifications and his compliance with the law as to settlement, inhabitancy, improvement, non-alienation, etc. In making such proof the claimant must appear in person with his witnesses at the district land office.² The affidavit of the claimant, his testimony, as well as that of his witnesses, must be made at the same time and place and before the same officer. The officer prescribed in such case is the register or receiver, or the clerk of the court of record of the county in which the land is situated.³ As to the time of making proof, it must be made within twelve months from the date of settlement in the case of lands which have been offered for sale. If the land is unoffered, proof must be made within thirty-three months from the date of settlement, or in case of unsurveyed lands, from the date of filing plat of survey in the district office.⁴ Payment is to be made at the time of making proof.⁵

A failure to make proof and payment as prescribed by law, renders the land subject to appropriation by the first legal applicant, him as a colonist within five years after entry. An agreement, therefore, to sell before such time is void. Deamuke v. Griffin, 10 Tex. 113; Clay v. Cook, 16 Tex. 70; Soye v. McCallister, 18 Tex. 80; Cook v. Lindsay, 57 Tex. 67.

The law has since been repealed. See as to the effect of such repeal upon prior purchasers, Clay v. Clay, 35 Tex. 509.

1. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2262.

The United States may maintain a suit in equity to vacate a patent obtained by false swearing in ex parte proceedings; nor is the right vacated by the indictment or conviction of the patentee or by the forfeiture of the money paid. U. S. v. Minor, 114 U. S. 233; reversing 10 Sawy. (U. S.) 155.

The General Land Office has authority to set aside an entry by preemption obtained by false and fraudulent affidavits of occupation. Harkness v. Underhill, 1 Black (U. S.) 316; Garland v. Wynn, 20 How. (U. S.) 6.

2. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2263; 2 Copp's Public Land Laws 643.

U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2263, requires proof to be made before the register and receiver agreeably to such rules as the Secretary of the Interior may require. The instructions issued (see 2 Copp's Pub. Land Laws, 643) require claimant's testimony to be corroborated by that of at least two witnesses.

3. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2262, Act of June 9, 1880 (21 Stat. 169).

The oath, etc., may be made before either the register or receiver. Potter v. U. S., 107 U. S. 126.

Proof taken in the presence of the register only, but both officers deciding in favor of the claim, is a sufficient compliance even where the Commissioner has instructed that proof must be made before both officers. Lytle v. Arkansas, 9 How. (U. S.) 314.

The Act of Congress of June 9, 1880, providing that the affidavit may be made before the clerk of the county court or of any court of record of the county in the State or Territory where the lands are situated, does not authorize the oath to be administered before the clerk of the probate court. U. S. v. Hall (N. Mex., 1889), 21 Pac. Rep. 85.

4. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2264; 2 Copp's Pub. Land Laws (1890) 642-3. See also Huff v. Doyle, 93 U. S. 558.

The act of 1870 allows a preemptor eighteen months from the time limited for his declaratory statement to make payment and proof. Morrison v. Stalnaker, 104 U. S. 213.

5. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2267.

but in the absence of an adverse claim, proof and payment may be made after the expiration of the twelve or thirty-three months allowed.¹ A failure to inhabit and improve the land in good faith as required by law renders the claim subject to contest and the entry subject to investigation and cancellation.²

Where a party entitled to claim the benefits of the preemption laws, dies before consummating his claim by filing in due time all the papers essential to its establishment, the executor or administrator of his estate, or one of the heirs, is competent to file the necessary papers to complete the establishment of his claim; but the entry in such case is made in favor of the heirs of the deceased preceptor, and the patent thereon must cause the title to inure to such heirs as if their names had been specially mentioned.³ This provision, however, does not apply where unsurveyed public land has been occupied by a settler with the intention to preempt it, but who dies before the survey is made. In such case the settler has no vested interest which can pass to his heirs.⁴

e. ASSIGNMENT OF PREEMPTION OF RIGHT.—It is provided by statute that all assignments and transfers of the right of preemption prior to the issue of the patent shall be null and void;⁵ but the words "right of preemption," as here used, must be considered as relating only to the right of the preceptor before payment of the purchase money and the issue of the register's certificate of purchase to him.⁶

Military bounty land warrants and agricultural college scrip are to be received from actual settlers in payment of preemption claims. U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 2277-78.

1. 2 Copp's Pub. Land Laws 642; U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2264. See also Lansdale v. Daniels, 100 U. S. 113; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 72.

2. 2 Copp's Pub. Land Laws 642.

The preemption laws are intended for the benefit of persons making settlement upon the public lands, followed by residence and improvement, and the erection of a dwelling house thereon. It is essential that the preceptor prove that he occupied the premises continuously after filing his declaratory statement. Bohall v. Dilla, 114 U. S. 51.

3. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2269; Gould & Tucker's Notes on Rev. St., p. 531; Morehouse v. Phelps, 21 How. (U. S.) 294. An administrator or executor cannot complete the entry unless it appears that they are heirs. Elliott v. Figg, 59 Cal. 117.

Lands acquired by the heirs under this provision are not subject to the debts of the ancestor. Rogers v. Clemmans, 26 Kan. 522.

See also similar statutes construed in Galloway v. Finley, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 264; Davenport v. Lamb, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 418.

Where the land so patented is in Kansas (or in any other State having similar laws) the grant will inure to illegitimate children of the preceptor who were notoriously recognized by him in his lifetime, as they inherit from their father under Gen. St. Kansas 1889, ch. 33, § 23. Caldwell v. Miller, 44 Kan. 12.

4. Buxton v. Traver, 67 Cal. 172; affirmed 130 U. S. 575; Elliott v. Figg, 59 Cal. 117; Grand Gulf R. etc. Co. v. Bryan, 8 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 268.

5. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2263; Gould & Tucker's Notes on Rev. St., § 2263; Olson v. Orton, 28 Minn. 36; Kellom v. Easley, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 559; compare Thredgill v. Pintard, 12 How. (U. S.) 24; decided prior to the above statute.

6. Dillingham v. Fisher, 5 Wis. 475; Thredgill v. Pintard, 12 How. (U. S.) 24.

Therefore, a preceptor who has entered the land and who at the time is the owner in good faith, and has done nothing inconsistent with the provisions of the law on the subject, may

Nor is this requirement to be construed to prevent any pre-emptor from making a valid assignment of his possessory right.¹

2. Homestead.—The second method, by means of which public land may be acquired as private property, is under the homestead laws. This method of acquiring land should be considered in connection with the previous title of preemptions, since the persons who may exercise the right and the land subject to acquirement are virtually the same under both.² And in the beginning the distinction must be observed between homestead as used in this connection, and the same word as used in connection with homestead exemption laws. The meaning of the same word in the two connections is entirely different, though they have sometimes been confused.³

sell, even though he has not yet obtained a patent. Disability extends only to the assignment of the preemption right. Myers v. Croft, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 291; Thurston v. Alva, 45 Cal. 16. See also Robbins v. Bunn, 54 Ill. 48; McKean v. Crawford, 6 Kan. 112; McKean v. Massey, 6 Kan. 122; Camp v. Smith, 2 Minn. 155; Thredgill v. Pintard, 12 How. (U. S.) 24; Goodlet v. Smithson, 5 Port. (Ala.) 245; 30 Am. Dec. 561; Masters v. Eastis, 3 Port. (Ala.) 368.

See also infra, this title, Alienation of Land Prior to Issue of Patent.

By the act of June 19, 1834 (4 Stat. 678), it was specially provided that a pre-emptor might assign his certificate of preemption and location at any time after entry at the land office. See Marks v. Dickson, 20 How. (U. S.) 501.

Who May Take Advantage of a Violation of This Provision.—Where plaintiff preempts land and obtains a patent therefor, a subsequent contract entered into by him for the conveyance of the land is not invalidated, as between the parties, by the fact that before plaintiff acquired his title, or filed his declaratory statement, a parol contract had been entered into by the same parties to the same effect, in violation of U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2262. A question of forfeiture under said section can only be raised by the United States. Larison v. Wilbur (N. Dak. 1890), 47 N. W. Rep. 381.

1. Relinquishment of Possessory Right.—That is, that while one cannot before the completion of his title assign his right of preemption, so as to place another in his situation, yet he may enter into an agreement to abandon the land he occupies so that another may enter upon it, and initiate a right of preemption for himself. O'Hanlon v. Denver, 81 Cal. 63. The cases of Damrell v. Meyer, 40 Cal. 166, and Huston v. Walker, 47 Cal. 484, do not oppose this doctrine; they merely sustain the idea that there can be no valid assignment of the preemption right.

See also, as sustaining the proposition in the text, Olson v. Orton, 28 Minn. 36; Washington etc. R. Co. v. Osborne (Idaho, 1889), 24 Pac. Rep. 421; Pelham v. Service (Kan. 1891), 26 Pac. Rep. 29.

2. U. S. Rev. St., §§ 2257, 2289-2317; Gould & Tucker's Notes on Rev. St. 536-540; 21 U. S. Stat. L. 141, § 3, provides that whoever settles on land with the intention of claiming it under the homestead laws shall be allowed the same time to file his homestead application and perfect his original entry as is allowed to settlers under the preemption laws to put their claims on record, and that his right shall relate back to the date of settlement. Sturr v. Beck, 133 U. S. 541.

It is undoubted that no rights can be based on a pretended settlement, which is nothing more than a naked trespass. Hambleton v. Duhain, 71 Cal. 136; Hosmer v. Wallace, 97 U. S. 575; Atherton v. Fowler, 96 U. S. 513. Therefore an unauthorized inclosure of public land by a mere trespasser cannot prevent a homestead entry of the land by a citizen of the United States who goes properly upon the land and complies with the requirements of the homestead laws. Whittaker v. Pendola, 78 Cal. 296; Haven v. Hawes, 63 Cal. 514.

3. See HOMESTEADS, vol 9, p. 424. This confusion seems to have been

Every person who is either the head of a family, or has arrived at the age of twenty-one years, and who is a citizen of the United States, or has filed his declaration of his intention to become such as is required by the naturalization laws, is entitled to exercise the right of acquiring lands under the homestead laws.¹ There are, however, as in the case of preemption, two well-defined exceptions; in the case of those who have already exercised the homestead right, or who are already possessed of three hundred and twenty acres of land in any State or Territory.²

The lands subject to homestead are the same as those which are subject to preemption, as set forth in the previous section. The amount of land which may be acquired cannot exceed one hundred and sixty acres, but any person who owns and resides on certain land may enter other land lying contiguous to his, provided the aggregate shall not exceed one hundred and sixty acres.³

No lands acquired under the provisions of this homestead law can in any event become liable to the satisfaction of a debt contracted prior to the issuing of the patent therefor.⁴

made in some of the law dictionaries extant.

The homestead here treated of and as acquired under the United States statutes, carries with it no exemption whatever, except what is provided by § 2296 of U. S. Rev. Stat., where it is declared that "no lands acquired under the provisions of this chapter, shall in any event become liable to the satisfaction of any debt contracted prior to the issuing of the patent therefor."

1. Who May Exercise Homestead Right.—U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2289.

One who is a tenant in common cannot acquire a right of homestead to government land of which he is in possession for himself and his cotenants. Reinhardt v. Bradshaw, 19 Nev. 255. See also Nickals v. Winn, 17 Nev. 188; Atherton v. Fowler, 96 U. S. 513.

Compare Emerson v. Sansome, 41 Cal. 552 (decided before Atherton v. Fowler, 96 U. S. 513).

Enlisted Soldiers Residing on Lands.

—U. S. Rev. St., § 2308, provides that where a party, at the date of his entry under the homestead law, was actually enlisted and employed in the army of the United States, his services therein shall, in the administration of such homestead laws, be construed to be equivalent, to all intents and purposes, to a residence for the same length of time upon the tract so entered. Hastings etc. R. Co. v. Whitney, 132 U. S.

357. See also U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2293.

2. U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 2260, 2289.

3. The U. S. Rev. Stat. (§ 2289) provide that every person . . . shall be entitled to enter a quarter section or a less quantity of unappropriated public lands upon which the person may have filed a preemption claim, or which may at the time the application is made be subject to preemption at a dollar and twenty-five cents per acre.

See also supra, this title, Preemption; U. S. v. Reed, 28 Fed. Rep. 482; McLaughlin v. U. S., 107 U. S. 526; Ard v. Brandon, 43 Kan. 425.

4. U. S. Rev. St., § 2296; Gould & Tucker's on Rev. St., p. 537.

This section has been held valid and binding upon the States in many cases. Seymour v. Sanders, 3 Dill. (U. S.) 437; Baldwin v. Boyd, 18 Neb. 444; Sorrels v. Self, 43 Ark. 451, 453; Gile v. Hallock, 33 Wis. 523; Nycorn v. McAllister, 33 Iowa 374; Webster v. Bowman, 25 Fed. Rep. 889; Cheney v. White, 5 Neb. 261; 25 Am. Rep. 487; Miller v. Little, 47 Cal. 348; Russell v. Lowth, 21 Minn. 167; Shorman v. Eakin, 47 Ark. 351.

In the case of Union Pac. R. Co. v. Kennedy (Colo. 1889), 20 Pac. Rep. 696, it appeared that Kennedy and one McMonagle were the claimants of a stone quarry on the government land. They put one Brown in possession and procured him to file on the land as a

In the case of the death of both father and mother, leaving an infant child or children under age, the right in fee inures to the benefit of such children, and the executor or guardian may in accordance with the laws of his State at any time within two years sell the land for the benefit of such infant, but for no other purpose.¹

a. PROCEEDINGS.—In order to obtain the benefit of the homestead laws, the person applying, after having filed his application stating his name, residence, and address,² must make affidavit before the register or receiver, that he is a person properly qualified, that his entry is made in good faith, for the purpose of actual settlement and cultivation, and not either directly or indirectly for the use or benefit of any other person; and the filing preemptor for their benefit, they paying the expenses of the filing and agreeing to furnish the price of the land and to take the title. Kennedy afterwards bought out his associate, made a written agreement with Brown reciting the facts as above stated, stipulating that Brown should work the quarry and pay him (K) a certain sum, and thereafter should be the half owner. Kennedy to make the sales and collections. It was held that the first arrangement was unlawful, and therefore the written agreement being entirely based upon it and so interwoven with it could not be enforced. After Kennedy had resigned possession to Brown he could have no right to transfer it to the latter except under the illegal contract. It was further held that Brown, having changed his claim from a preemption to a homestead, it would be a violation of the statute above mentioned (§ 2296) to allow Kennedy any lien on the land for what he had expended.

This section (2296) does not prevent the settler from making a valid mortgage on the land after receiving his certificate of entry, but before he receives a patent. Boggan v. Reid (Wash. 1889), 20 Pac. Rep. 425; Lang v. Morey, 40 Minn. 396.

1. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2292.

The children who are of age at the time of the claimant's death acquire no interest as against the minor heirs. Bernier v. Bernier, 72 Mich. 43.

A patent issued under this section granting the land so entered to the "minor heirs" of the father, passes the title to the persons described in the above section (§ 2292), i. e., to children under the age of twenty-one years of age, though by the law of the State in which they resided, some of them were not minors. Anderson v. Peterson, 36 Minn. 547.

The right of the children of a deceased soldier to locate an additional homestead is personal property and may be sold or assigned by their guardian. Mullen v. Wine, 26 Fed. Rep. 206.

Proof.—The recitation in a patent issued by the United States to one as heir of a homestead claimant, that such person is the heir of the homestead claimant and has performed the necessary conditions to perfect the homestead claim, is sufficient proof of the facts recited, in an action of ejectment brought by the patentee. Chant v. Reynolds, 49 Cal. 213.

The Rights of Wife of Homesteader.—

In the case of Michaelis v. Michaelis, 43 Minn. 123, it appeared that the husband relinquished his homestead claim previously entered by him, and deserted his wife, leaving her in possession. The defendant, having notice of these facts, afterward entered the same land, took possession, and destroyed certain improvements upon the premises, claiming such improvements by a sale from the husband. It was held that though it was error to charge that the homestead cannot be relinquished without consent of the wife (the State law applicable to that subject having no application to homestead entries on United States lands), yet the wife might recover possession from the defendant pending the inquest; together with damages for his dispossessing her and destroying the improvements, the sale of improvements having been shown to be collusive.

2. 1 Copp's Pub. Land Laws (1890) 339; Gallagher v. Cadwell, 3 Wash. 501.

of such affidavit must be accompanied by the proper fees provided.¹

1. U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 2290-91.

The fees provided in such case are $5 when the entry is not more than eighty acres, and $10 when it is more than eighty. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2290.

Compliance with these requirements is essential to initiate any right whatsoever in the public lands under the homestead laws; therefore where the settler applies to the local land office to enter certain land under the homestead act, but neither presents nor files the affidavit prescribed by the statute, nor pays nor tenders the fee required in such cases, and the land officers inform him that the land has been withdrawn from the market for the benefit of a railroad company, and no appeal is taken by him from the refusal of these local land officers to allow his entry, his action and his failure to appeal conclude all rights which he might otherwise have acquired. The refusal of the officers to allow his claim to be entered would not have prejudiced his right in the least had he been really entitled to the land. Burnham v. Starkey, 41 Kan. 604.

Affidavit in Homestead Proceedings.—

The affidavit that his entry is not made directly or indirectly for any other person is not violated by an agreement having been made between the homesteader and his neighbor that the latter shall have a roadway over the former's homestead. U. S. v. Reed, 28 Fed. Rep. 482; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Watts, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 310.

By virtue of §§ 2290-91, above cited, a contract, the consideration for which is money due for improvements, to convey land, the title to which is at the time in the United States, by a person who contemplates and afterwards does take it as a homestead, is against public policy, and cannot be enforced in a court of equity. Anderson v. Carkins, 135 U. S. 483 (reversing 21 Neb. 364).

For the same reason a note given for the land on purchase before entry is without consideration and invalid. Shorman v. Eakin, 47 Ark. 351.

See Hastings etc. R. Co. v. Whitney, 132 U. S. 357, as to a failure to state in the affidavit that the claimant, or some member of his family, had resided continuously on the land. The entry was made under § 2293, providing specially for entries by soldiers in service, and not being void on its face was considered to be cured by § 2308.

In Sweeney v. Sparling (Iowa, 1890), 46 N. W. Rep. 1068, the plaintiff and defendant occupied and improved adjoining claims on public land before the government survey. They went together to the land office to enter their claims under the homestead law, when it was discovered that all the land occupied by both had to be homesteaded by one person. It was then agreed that defendant should enter the whole tract, and, when he procured a patent, he should convey plaintiff's claim to him. It was held the agreement might be enforced, although the homestead act of 1862 requires that the entry shall be for the exclusive use of the person in whose name it is made, and that transfers made before the patent issues shall be void.

The requirements of this affidavit, together with the provision of § 2296, that land cannot be made liable to any debt contracted prior to the issue of a patent, preclude the sale or any contract for the sale of land held under the homestead entry until title thereto is acquired by the homesteader. Brake v. Ballou, 19 Kan. 397; Mellison v. Allen, 30 Kan. 382; Weeks v. White, 41 Kan. 569; Shorman v. Eakin, 47 Ark. 351; Whittaker v. Pendola, 78 Cal. 296; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Kennedy (Colo., 1889). 20 Pac. Rep. 696.

This principle being fixed, the question arises, When does the homesteader acquire such title as he may alienate? This has been fully discussed in another portion of the article. See infra, this title, Alienation of Land Prior to Issue of Patent.

Section 2288 of Rev. Stat. provides that a preemption or homestead settler may transfer by warranty against his own acts any portion of his preemption or homestead for church, cemetery, or school purposes, or for the right of way for railroads across such preemption or homestead, and a transfer for such public purpose shall in no way vitiate the right to complete and effect the title to their preemptions or homesteads. Rube v.

The certificate or patent for lands under the homestead law cannot be issued until the expiration of five years from the date of entry, and at the expiration of such time, or within two years thereafter, the person making such entry, or his widow, or his heirs or devisees in case of the death of himself and wife, must prove by two credible witnesses that he, she, or they have resided upon and cultivated the same for the term of five years immediately succeeding the filing of the affidavit,¹ and also make additional affidavit that no part of the land has been alienated except as allowed by law, and that he, she, or they will bear true allegiance to the government of the United States.²

Any person having a homestead on the public domain may at any time, by paying the minimum price of the land entered upon, obtain a patent therefor under the preemption law. Likewise, a person having entered on a preemption claim may "homestead his preemption."³

Sullivan, 23 Neb. 779; Burlington etc. R. Co. v. Johnson, 38 Kan. 142; Hays v. Steiger, 76 Cal. 555.

An agreement with another to use the land jointly and to divide the profits arising from its use is not contrary to the spirit of the statute requiring affidavit to be made that no part of the land has been alienated. Hot Springs R. Co. v. Tyler, 36 Ark. 205; Hays v. Steiger, 76 Cal. 555.

The relinquishment of a homestead entry, and the withdrawal of a protest against the final proof of another, is a sufficient consideration for a promise, and the contract is not illegal, though the party making the relinquishment had made no settlement on the land, had not improved it, and had, in fact, no interest in it. Pelham v. Service (Kan.), 26 Pac. Rep. 29.

In any case in which the applicant for the benefit of a homestead has complied with all the other requirements, and is prevented by reason of distance, bodily infirmity, or other good cause, from personal attendance at the district land office, he may make the affidavit required before the clerk of the court for the county in which he is an actual resident, and transmit the same with the fee and commissions to the register and receiver. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2294.

But, if any applicant makes affidavit to these excusatory facts willfully and contrary to his oath, not believing them to be true, his land is not only forfeited but he is also liable to an indictment and conviction for perjury. U. S. v. Hearing, 26 Fed. Rep. 744.

Settlement Must Have Been Made in

Good Faith.—In the case of U. S. v. Norris, 41 Fed. Rep. 424, one G made the application and paid the fee required by the homestead laws to enter public land. He made the application in bad faith, however, and only for the purpose of appropriating the timber on the land, and never complied with his obligations as a homesteader. He was afterwards allowed to become a beneficiary under the act of Congress of 1880 providing that those who had entered lands under the homestead laws might become entitled thereto by paying the government price and a patent was issued to him. In an action brought by the United States, it was held that G, by his application, had obtained neither a legal nor an equitable title to the land; that whatever title he may have obtained by his patent did not relate back to the application; and that the defendant who had purchased lumber in good faith before the issuance of the patent, from one to whom G had conveyed the right to cut timber on the land, was liable to the government for the value of the timber purchased.

1. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2291; Newkirk v. Marshal, 35 Kan. 77.

2. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2291.

As to the matter of alienation of land before title is perfected, see infra, this title, Alienation of Land Prior to Issue of Patent.

3. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2301; Timber Cases, 11 Fed. Rep. 81 (case where a settler "homesteaded" his preemption); U. S. v. Freyberg, 32 Fed. Rep. 195 (case where a homestead right was changed to a preemption).

3. Public Sales and Private Entries.—Congress may authorize the President to issue an order exposing to public sale certain of the public lands. Such sale is required to be advertised for a period of not less than three nor more than six months prior to the day of sale.¹ The land so advertised is to be held at public auction for a period of two weeks, after which time such portions of it as remain unsold are to be held subject to private entry and sale.² Persons making application for the purchase at private sale of any tract of land must produce to the register a memorandum in writing describing the tract which he shall enter, by the proper number of the section, or subordinate division, and of the township and range, subscribing his name thereto, such memorandum to be preserved in the office of the register.³

In no case can credit be allowed for the purchase money on the sale of any such lands, but every purchaser must make on the day of purchase complete payment therefor, and each purchaser at private sale must produce to the register of the land office a receipt from the treasurer, or other officer, for the amount of the purchase money, before he enters his tract at the land office.⁴ The lands placed at public auction are to be sold to the

Where a preemption filing is canceled on account of the preemptor's failure to comply with the law in regard to residence and improvements, he cannot afterwards claim the land as a settler under the homestead law, where the land in the meantime has been patented to another person. Ard v. Pratt, 43 Kan. 419.

Doctrine of This Section Restated.—To sum up the whole law of homesteads briefly, the Revised Statutes of the U. S. (§§ 2260-91-96-97) require a settler—

1. To make application at the land office, and file his affidavit that the application is for his exclusive use and benefit, and not for that of another. This forbids the sale or agreement to sell before the right is perfected.

2. To settle upon the land in good faith, and reside there continuously for five years.

3. The land cannot be subject to any debt contracted prior to the issuance of the patent.

See Shorman v. Eakin, 47 Ark. 351; U. S. v. Norris, 41 Fed. Rep. 424 (settlement not in good faith).

1. U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 2353-5459. The lands are required to be offered at public sale in half quarter sections. The public lands when offered at private sale, however, may be purchased at the option of the purchaser, either in entire sections, half sections, quarter sections, half quarter sections, or quarter quarter sections. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2354.

It is a fundamental principle underlying the land system of this country that private entries are never permitted until after the lands have been exposed at public auction at the price for which they are afterwards subject to private entry. Therefore, where land offered at public sale at $2.50 per acre is afterwards ordered by Congress to be sold at $1.25, a private entry at $1.25 made before the land is offered at public sale at the reduced price is invalid. Eldred v. Sexton, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 189; 30 Wis. 193; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 88; Chotard v. Pope, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 588.

By statute of March 2, 1889, all lands of the United States were withdrawn from being subject to private entry except those in Missouri. See Gould & Tucker's Notes on Rev. Stat., p. 522.

2. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2360.

3. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2355.

4. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2356; Gould & Tucker's Notes on Rev. Stat. 552; Matthews v. Zane, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 205.

And if any person being the highest bidder at a public auction for a tract of land fails to make payment therefor on the day of purchase, the tract must be again offered at public sale on the next day of sale, and such per-highest bidder, but in no case is the price to be less than $1.25 per acre.¹

Special provision is made in the statutes in case any tract of land has been erroneously sold, so that the sale cannot be confirmed,² or where any purchaser at private sale has entered a tract different from that he intended to purchase, or where any mistake has been made in the true number of the tract intended to be entered.³

Every person, who before or at the time of the public sale contracts or attempts to contract with any person, that such person shall not bid upon or purchase the land so offered, or any part thereof, or who in any way attempts to hinder or prevent any person from bidding at a sale is subject by the statute to a fine or imprisonment, or both.⁴ So, also, in case any person enters into any contract or secret understanding with any other person proposing to purchase such land to pay or to give to such purchaser for the land a sum of money over and above the price at which the land is bid off by such purchasers.⁵

son is not capable of becoming a purchaser of that or any other tract offered at such public sale. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2356.

In case of purchase by a receiver he must place the required amount of his own money with the moneys which he holds in trust for the government. U. S. v. Boyd, 5 How. (U. S.) 29.

Lands sold at the last day of public sale and not paid for cannot be entered until they have again been offered for sale, such lands being not unsold lands but reverted lands. 2 A. G. Op. 200; 3 A. G. Op. 448.

1. U. S. Rev. Stat. 2357.

The minimum price to be paid for reserved lands along the railroads within the limits granted by any act of Congress, in this case as in all others is $2.50 per acre. U. S. Rev. Stat. 2357.

2. U. S. Rev. Stat. 2362, 2363.

It is provided that the Secretary of the Interior upon proof being made to his satisfaction that land has been erroneously sold may repay to the purchaser, or his legal representatives, the sum of money which was paid therefor.

3. U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 2369-2372.

4. The punishment provided is a fine of not more than $1,000, or imprisonment for not more than two years, or both. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2373. This section is intended to protect the government and to punish all persons who enter into a combination or conspiracy to prevent others from bidding at the sale, either by agreement not to do so, or by intimidation, threats, or violence. Fackler v. Ford, 24 How. (U. S.) 322.

Any agreement of the kind above mentioned intending to prevent competition in bidding for lands offered for sale, being intended to protect the government, can be taken advantage of only by the government itself. Easley v. Kellom, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 279; Fackler v. Ford, 24 How. (U. S.) 322. Therefore, one who is not injured thereby cannot defeat the title of a purchaser at a sale of public lands at public auction by showing that a combination to prevent bidding was formed. Root v. Shields, 1 Woolw. (U. S.) 340.

5. And every bond, obligation, or writing of any kind whatsoever, founded upon or growing out of such contract, bargain, agreement, or secret understanding, is declared by statute to be utterly null and void. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2374.

This section and the two immediately following are intended for the protection of those who purchase lands at public sales from the extortions of those who have formed the combinations mentioned in § 2373 (that is, those who combine to prevent competition in the purchase of the land offered). Fackler v. Ford, 24 How. (U. S.) 322. But an agreement among settlers on unsurveyed public lands to purchase them as soon as they are surveyed and offered for sale, and then to mortgage them to

4. Bounty Lands.—Any person holding military warrants for bounty lands, which have been issued by any law of the United States, may enter upon the quantity of public land subject to private entry to which he is entitled under such warrants, and upon the return of the warrants with evidence of the location thereof having been legally made at the General Land Office, is entitled to have a patent for such land issued to him.¹ Such warrants are made by statute assignable by deed, or instrument of writing, made and executed according to the form and regulations prescribed by the General Land Office, so as to vest in the a creditor to secure a debt, is not in contravention of the sections. Wright v. Shumway, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 23. Nor is there any principle of law which forbids persons from associating together to purchase lands of the United States on joint account at public sale. Oliver v. Piatt, 3 How. (U. S.) 333. If the party aggrieved have no legal evidence of the contract, agreement, or secret understanding, provided against in the section under consideration, he may by bill in equity compel the other party to make discovery thereof. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2376; but a bill brought pursuant to this section must allege and show that the contract sought to be rescinded is within the statute and that the party who brought it has no legal evidence of the contract. Gale v. Cutler, 1 Pin. (Wis.) 253.

1. See U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 2414, 2423; Gould & Tucker's Notes on Rev. Stat., p. 556.

A certificate of entry or location under a military land warrant vests in the holder an equitable title to the land and gives him a right to the patent when issued; and if he conveys the land or assigns the certificate, and afterwards obtains a patent, he becomes under the statute (§ 2414), as well as upon plainest principles of equity, a trustee for the person to whom he had previously sold or his assignee. Gray v. Jones, 14 Fed. Rep. 83; Key v. Jennings, 66 Mo. 356; Wirth v. Branson, 98 U. S. 118; Stinson v. Geer, 42 Kan. 520.

Act of Congress of 1850 granting swamp lands to the various States did not affect any such land on which before the passage of the act a military land warrant had been located. Culver v. Uthe, 133 U. S. 655.

Where, in ejectment it appeared that a location of a military bounty land warrant, duly made by A on the demanded premises, the same being a part of the surveyed public land of the United States, had not been vacated or set aside, a subsequent entry of them by B was without authority of law, and a patent issued to him therefor was void. Wirth v. Branson, 98 U. S. 118.

Location of Land Under Warrant Not a Sale.—The disposal of land by the United States by allowing persons to locate certain sections under military land warrants is not considered a "sale" within the meaning of an act providing that a State shall be entitled to five per cent. of the proceeds arising from the sale of certain public lands. Five Per Cent. Cases, 110 U. S. 471. But the term "all lands remaining unsold" is considered to except lands located under land warrants. Gormley v. Uthe, 116 Ill. 643; 133 U. S. 655.

Virginia Military District.—Much is found in the digests concerning bounty warrants for land in the Virginia Military District. This district was a reservation made in 1784, at the time of the cession by Virginia to the Continental Congress of all her lands lying northwest of the Ohio river. The reservation was made for the purpose of allowing military land warrants issued by the State to be located upon it. Several acts of Congress were made with respect to it, the first being in 1794, then in 1804, when a period of limitation was prescribed for making locations and return surveys. This period of limitation was extended by numerous Acts, 1814, 1815, 1818, 1821, and others down to as late as 1850. Most of the law, if not all, applicable to this reservation is now practically obsolete, the land having been long since taken up and the titles virtually settled, so that it is needless to enter into a discussion, or a setting forth of the numerous cases which have been decided upon it. It will be seen fully discussed in the case of Fussell v. Gregg, 113 U. S. 550.

assignee all the rights of the original owner.¹ But all sales, mortgages, letters of attorney, or other instruments of writing affecting the title or claim to any warrant issued or to be issued under the provisions of the statutes concerning military land warrants, which are made or executed prior to the issue of such warrant, are void to all intents and purposes whatsoever.²

5. Timber Culture.—By the Act of 1878 provision is made allowing persons to enter upon public land subject to private entry, and for the issuing of a patent to such person for the land entered, upon proof of his having complied with certain requirements in the statute as to the planting of timber.³

Other leading cases upon the subject are Doddridge v. Thompson, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 469; Reynolds v. M'Arthur, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 417; Taylor v. Myers, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 23; Jackson v. Clark, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 628; M'Arthur v. Browder, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 488; Bouldin v. Massie, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 122; Watts v. Lindsey, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 158; Maxwell v. Moore, 22 How. (U. S.) 185; Walker v. Smith, 21 How. (U. S.) 579.

1. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2414.

In all cases the assignee for value takes no better right as against the United States than his assignor himself had. Bronson v. Kukuk, 3 Dill. (U. S.) 490; 5 A. G. Op. 237, 387, 509.

These warrants are assignable in blank and therefore there is no presumption arising from an assignment on the face of the land warrants that the persons to whom they were assigned received them from those to whom they were originally issued. Reynolds v. Sumner, 126 Ill. 58.

In the case of Reynolds v. Sumner, 126 Ill. 58, a person under a written contract undertook to enter land with military warrants furnished by another, taking title in their joint names, and paying half the cost after one year. One month he had the precise amount of warrants agreed upon which he entered in his own name. He paid the note of half the cost of the warrants and often admitted the other's interest in the land. It was held that a trust resulted for a half interest in favor of the other party, and that this trust was not affected by the Statute of Frauds. See also Hellman v. Messmer, 75 Cal. 166; Thomas v. Jameson, 77 Cal. 91.

2. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2436; Week v. Bosworth, 61 Wis. 78; White v. Taylor, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 23.

3. See Gould & Tucker's Notes on U. S. Rev. Stat., pp. 560, 561; 2 Copp's Public Land Laws 802, 803.

This statute is considered* to supersede all other provisions concerning the acquirement of land under what is known as the timber culture provisions.

It is needless to give in detail the requirements of the statute; in brief, a person is required to have the qualifications already prescribed, as to citizenship, etc., and to make proof of having cultivated the land in the manner prescribed by the statute, and planted a certain quantity of timber, as is also there provided. As in other cases, only one quarter section of land may be acquired by the same person under this act, and land can only be acquired under it for the personal use and benefit of the person entering, and not for that of any other. See also U. S. v. Shinn, 14 Fed. Rep. 448, where portions of this statute are discussed.

No land acquired under the provisions of this act can become liable to the satisfaction of any debt contracted prior to the issuing of the final certificate therefor. Act of June 14, 1878, 20 Stat. at L. 113.

No final certificate can be given or patent issued for the land entered upon under this act until after the expiration of eight years from the date of entry. Act of June 14, 1870, 20 Stat. at L. 113.

One entering land under the provisions of this act, and having complied with its conditions, is, during the term required to perfect his right to a patent, the owner of agricultural products grown on the land, and the trees standing thereon; therefore, he may recover for the destruction of either caused by the negligence of a railway

III. ALIENATION OF LAND PRIOR TO ISSUE OF THE PATENT.—As to when the title of a claimant under the public land laws reaches such a state as that he has a vested interest which he may convey to another is a question upon which there is some doubt. The general rule, however, appears to be that it is not necessary that a patent shall have issued, but a conveyance made at any time after the right to a patent is perfected is valid and binding, though not if made before such right is perfected.¹ The true company in allowing fire to escape from their locomotives, and the fact that after the destruction of the trees he surrendered his claim does not at all affect his right to recover. Carner v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 43 Minn. 375.

1. Knight v. Leary, 54 Wis. 459; Newkirk v. Marshall, 35 Kan. 77; Gould & Tucker's Notes on Rev. Stat., § 2291, et seq. See also Lamb v. Davenport, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 307; Myers v. Croft, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 291; Cox v. McGarrahan, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 298; Bush v. Marshall, 6 How. (U. S.) 284; Thredgill v. Pintard, 12 How. U. S.) 24; Marks v. Dickson, 20 How. (U. S.) 501; Quinby v. Conlan, 104 U. S. 420; Camp v. Smith, 2 Minn. 155; Thurston v. Alva, 45 Cal. 16; Robbins v. Bunn, 54 Ill. 48; 5 Am. Rep. 75; McKean v. Crawford, 6 Kan. 112.

In the case of Lamb v. Davenport, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 307, it appeared that several years before the act of Congress was passed by which title to the land in question could be acquired, settlement on and cultivation of a large tract of land, including the lands in controversy, was made; a town was laid off into lots and sold, which are now a part of the city of Portland, Oregon. Justice Miller, in delivering the opinion of the court in this case observes: "Of course no legal title vested in any one by these proceedings, for that remained in the United States. . . . but it was equally well known that these possessory rights and improvements placed on the soil were by the policy of the government generally protected, so far at least as to give priority of the right of purchase when the land was offered for sale. They (these rights) were the subjects of bargain and sale and as among the parties to such contracts were valid. . . . Parties in possession of the soil might make valid contracts even concerning the title, predicated upon the hypothesis that they might thereafter acquire the title except in cases where Congress had imposed restrictions upon such contracts. Sparrow v. Strong, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 97; Myers v. Croft, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 291; Davenport v. Lamb, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 418; Thredgill v. Pintard, 12 How. (U. S.) 24." The act of Congress passed afterwards, which forbade the future sale of a settler's interest until the patent should issue, is a strong implication in favor of the validity of such sales made before its passage. Lamb v. Davenport, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 307.

The act of 1834 in regard to preemption rights of settlers allows the assignment of preemption rights to pass an equitable title. Marks v. Dickson, 20 How. (U. S.) 501; Bush v. Marshall, 6 How. (U. S.) 284. But the act of 1841 forbade the sale of all preemptive rights to public lands acquired by mere settlement and improvement. Quinby v. Conlan, 104 U. S. 420; Myers v. Croft, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 291.

Mortgage of Homestead or Preemption Right.—A mortgage of lands sought to be acquired under the homestead or preemption laws, if executed after the right to a patent is perfected, is valid, no matter whether the patent has been secured or not; but if executed before such right has been perfected, it is invalid. Webster v. Bowman, 25 Fed. Rep. 889; Cheney v. White, 5 Neb. 261; 25 Am. Rep. 487.

See also Wright v. Shumway, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 23.

In the case of McCue v. Smith, 9 Minn. 252, 86 Am. Dec. 100, a note and mortgage made by a preemptor upon the preempted premises after the issuance of the proofs of certificate of preemption to secure money loaned to pay for the land preempted, and executed pursuant to an agreement made prior to the preemption, was held illegal and void, and this decision seems consonant with reason, since it is contrary to the spirit and policy of the law to allow the title to preempted lands to come to the preemptor already burdened. And it is held by a number of doctrine, it seems, may be arrived at by a consideration of the following principle, which though stated as peculiarly applicable to preemptors may still be made to apply to claimants under homestead or similar laws:

The right of a preemptor may be said to have three different stages or phases, namely:

1. One may comply with the provisions of the acts of Congress by settlement or cultivation, etc., not yet having paid his money or obtained a certificate of purchase from the Register of the Land Office. The rights of the preemptor in this stage are inchoate and personal, and therefore cannot be conveyed or assigned to others.¹

cases that any agreement to convey the land made before final proof by a homesteader or preemptor is in violation of the law and void, and cannot be enforced at law or in equity. Gould & Tucker's Notes on Rev. Stat., § 2296; Shorman v. Eakin, 47 Ark. 351; Cox v. Donnelly, 34 Ark. 762; Thompson v. Doaksum, 68 Cal. 593; Oaks v. Heaton, 55 Iowa 116.

But in a later case (Jones v. Tainter, 15 Minn. 512), the case of McCue v. Smith was overruled, and it was held that a mortgage by a preemptor upon the land preempted, executed after the proofs were made, and pursuant to an agreement made before proofs to secure the price of the land warrants used in paying for the land, is valid. This latter case is sustained by a decision in the Land Department. Larsen v. Weisbecker, 1 Land Dep., Dec. 1883, 422.

Where a person residing on public land subject to preemption executes a mortgage thereon and then sells the land to another, who takes possession and afterwards preempts the land and obtains a title from the United States, the mortgage cannot be enforced against the title thus acquired from the United States, because the preemptor does not derange his title from the United States through the person who executed the mortgage. Burr v. Shaw, 48 Cal. 455; Kirkaldie v. Larrabee, 31 Cal. 455.

In the case of Green v. Houston, 22 Kan. 35, a preemptor of land in the Osage Indian Trust borrowed $220 with which to enter his claim; later he executed his note therefor and at the same time executed a mortgage on the land to secure the note. After entering the tract of land he conveyed it to one M, subject to the mortgage. This deed was duly recorded; M agreed to pay the mortgage debt as a part of the purchase price; then M conveyed to G, covenanting that the premises were free and clear of all incumbrances except as shown by the records of Cowley county, and G assumed and agreed with M to pay the mortgage as part payment of the land. In an action by the mortgagee to foreclose the mortgage, it was held that although the mortgage might have been void under the laws of Congress, yet G was estopped from showing that it was void. See also Brewster v. Madden, 15 Kan. 249; Drury v. Tremont Improvement Co., 13 Allen (Mass.) 168. Compare Calkins v. Copley, 29 Minn. 471; Lang v. Morey, 40 Minn. 396.

1. Dillingham v. Fisher, 5 Wis. 475; McLane v. Bovee, 35 Wis. 27; Trulock v. Taylor, 26 Ark. 54; 10 A. G. Op. 56; Busch v. Donohue, 31 Mich. 482; Frislie v. Whitney, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 187; Aiken v. Ferry, 6 Sawy. (U. S.) 79; Lamb v. Davenport, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 307; Schoolfield v. Houle, 13 Colo. 394.

The right of a preemptor at this stage is, however, sufficient to constitute a good defense to an action of trespass. U. S. v. Brown, 4 McLean (U. S.) 378.

In the case of Washington etc. R. Co. v. Osborne (Idaho 1889), 21 Pac. Rep. 421, it appeared that a tract of unsurveyed land of the United States was located and settled, and buildings erected on it. The defendant who was qualified to take proceedings to obtain title under the preemption laws, bought the right of possession and improvements, took possession and continuously resided thereon, made improvements, located the section, filed his declaration to hold it under the preemption laws, and intended to obtain title thereunder as soon as the land should be surveyed. The act of Congress March 3, 1875, made provision for the condemnation of possessory claims in order for a right of way for railroads; but it was held that the defendant had such a right of private entry in his possessory claim that it could not be taken from him for a right of way except by the exercise of the right of eminent domain, and, therefore, he was entitled to compensation. Washington etc. R. Co. v. Osborne (Idaho 1889), 21 Pac. Rep. 421.

2. Where he has paid his money and obtained the register's certificate of purchase. Here the "right of preemption" has been merged in emption. The strict legal title is still in the government, but the entire equitable title and interest are in the purchaser, which he may transfer or assign at pleasure. He may convey by deed and the legal title will vest in the grantee upon the issuing of the patent.¹

But although the owner of this inchoate title may not assign or convey it to others, it is not to be understood that he cannot make a valid agreement to abandon the land and relinquish his entry so that another may enter it—a contract having this agreement to relinquish as a consideration is valid and binding. Pelham v. Service (Kan. 1891), 26 Pac. Rep. 29 (relinquishment of homestead entry); Olson v. Orton, 28 Minn. 36 (of preemption entry); Lapham v. Head, 21 Kan. 332; Kennedy v. Shaw, 43 Mich. 359; Moore v. McIntosh, 6 Kan. 39; Thompson v. Hanson, 28 Minn. 484; Lamb v. Davenport, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 307; Myers v. Croft, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 291.

1. Henry v. Welsh, 4 La. 547; 20 Am. Dec. 490, note; Dillingham v. Fisher, 5 Wis. 475; Red River etc. R. Co. v. Sture, 32 Minn. 95; Hutchins v. Low, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 77; Lytle v. Arkansas, 9 How. (U. S.) 328; Grand Gulf R. etc. Co. v. Bryan, 8 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 368; Hyde v. Holland, 18 Oregon 331; Goodlet v. Smithson, 5 Port. (Ala.) 245; 30 Am. Dec. 561. The whole principle is that as between the United States and the owner of the certificate of purchase, the certificate is as valid and binding as a patent; but the right of other parties as against him is not concluded until the issue of the patent. Aström v. Hammond, 3 McLean (U. S.) 107; Carroll v. Safford, 3 How. (U. S.) 441; Hutchins v. Lowe, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 77; Deffebach v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 392; Coleman v. Allen, 5 Mo. App. 127.

It is at this stage that the right to a patent for the land has become vested in the purchaser, and that the government holds the legal title in trust for him until the patent is issued. U. S. v. Freyberg, 32 Fed. Rep. 195; Deffebach v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 392; Simmons v. Wagner, 101 U. S. 260; Pacific Coast Min. Co. v. Spargo, 16 Fed. Rep. 348; Starks v. Starrs, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 402.

It is at this stage also, that the land ceases to be the property of the United States and becomes that of the pre-emptor to such an extent that it is liable to taxation by the State in which it lies. Carroll v. Safford, 3 How. (U. S.) 441; Witherspoon v. Duncan, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 210; and to execution from a State court. Goodlet v. Smithson, 5 Port. (Ala.) 245; 30 Am. Dec. 561; but it has not so far passed into the hands of the purchaser as to deprive the United States of any equities to which it may have been entitled. Bronson v. Kukuk, 3 Dill. (U. S.) 490; Litchfield v. Webster Co., 101 U. S. 773; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Traill Co., 115 U. S. 600; Union Pac. R. Co. v. McShane, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 444.

The grantee or assignee of a certificate of entry of land at the government land office has a valid subsisting interest in the land to which the right of possession is incident, and upon which he may maintain ejectment, but his estate is at most a determinable fee, such inchoate legal title being liable to revert in the government upon cancellation of the certificate for cause, and the patent to be issued to another party. McLane v. Bovee, 35 Wis. 27.

This case seems to state the doctrine correctly, except as to the assertion of an equitable title in an ejectment suit. For the rule in this regard, see infra, this title, Patent.

In the case of Raisback v. Carson (Wash.), 13 Pac. Rep. 618, a deed from a pre-emptor bore the same date as the pre-emptor's certificate of purchase. It was held that there was no presumption that the deed was executed before

3. Upon the issue of the patent by the United States, the perfected legal title combined with the equitable interest in the preemptor, completes his right and renders it absolute.¹

IV. MINERAL LANDS AND MINING RESOURCES.—This subject has already been fully treated elsewhere and nothing more than a reference is needed here.²

the certificate, and that in the absence of evidence that it was then executed it would not be declared void.

It is said, however, that one who has proved up under the preemption laws and obtained the receiver's final certificate therefor does not acquire such a title as will support an action to quiet title against one claiming under a similar right. Vantongren v. Hefferman, 5 Dak. 180.

1. See infra, this title, Patents, and authorities cited. See also U. S. v. Stone, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 525; Hooper v. Scheimer, 23 How. (U. S.) 235; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 72; Hutchins v. Low, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 77; Green v. Watkins, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 28; Astrom v. Hammond, 3 McLean (U. S.) 107.

And the patent when issued relates back to the inception of the right of the patentee. Flint etc. R. Co. v. Gordon, 41 Mich. 420; Astrom v. Hammond, 3 McLean (U. S.) 107; Starks v. Starrs, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 402.

In the case of Grand Gulf R. etc. Co. v. Bryan, 8 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 268, the court has to say: "A mere right of preemption is not a title, but only a proffer to a certain class of persons that they may become purchasers if they will; but without payment or an offer to pay, it confers no equity and only confers a right where the party has accepted the offer by payment or by claiming the benefit of the statute in the proper manner within the required time." See also Phelps v. Kellogg, 15 Ill. 135; Lytle v. Arkansas, 9 How. (U. S.) 328.

This whole question is well presented in the opinion of Justice Field in Hutchins v. Low, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 77. In which case he observes: "The question here presented was before this court and was carefully considered in the case of Frisbie v. Whitney, reported in 9 Wall. (U. S.) 189, and it was there held that under the preemption laws mere occupation and improvement of any portion of the public lands of the United States, with a view to preemption, do not confer upon the settler any right in the land occupied as against the United States, or impair in any respect the power of Congress to dispose of the land in any way it might deem proper, and that the power of regulation and disposition conferred upon Congress by the Constitution only ceases when all the preliminary acts prescribed by those laws for the acquisition of title, including the payment of the price of the land, have been performed by the settler. When these prerequisites have been complied with, the settler for the first time acquires a vested right in the premises occupied by him, of which he cannot subsequently be deprived. He is then entitled to a certificate of entry from the local land office, and ultimately to a patent from the United States. Until such payment and entry the acts of Congress give to the settler only a privilege of preemption in case the lands are offered for sale in the usual manner; that is, the privilege to purchase them in that event in preference to others." See also Dillingham v. Fisher, 5 Wis. 475.

This principle is asserted by Attorney-General Speed, 11 A. G. Op. 462, where he says: "It is not to be doubted that settlement on the public lands of the United States, no matter how long continued, confers no right against the government. . . . The land continues subject to the absolute disposing power of Congress until the settler has made the required proof of settlement and improvement, and has paid the requisite purchase money." The principle involved in this opinion has been received and acquiesced in by the Secretaries of the Interior, and has come to be the recognized rule of action in that Department. This construction of the law has also been asserted by the courts of last resort in several States. Frisbie v. Whitney, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 187; Bower v. Higbee, 9 Mo. 261; Phelps v. Kellogg, 15 Ill. 135; Grand Gulf R. etc. Co. v. Bryan, 8 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 268; People v. Shearer, 30 Cal. 650; Hutton v. Frisbie, 37 Cal. 475.

2. See U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 2318-2352;

V. LAND GRANTS TO RAILROADS—(See also GRANTS, vol. 9, pp. 46, et seq.).—Numerous acts have been passed by Congress granting to certain railroads a moiety of the sections of public lands lying contiguous to its track.¹ The sections granted are usually, though not always, the odd numbered sections, the United States reserving for its own the other alternate sections.² In the construction of such grants made to take effect as soon as the road is definitely located, the grant is to be held as one in presenti, and upon the definite location of the road the title relates back to the date of the grant.³ So that the construction and completion of the road

MINES AND MINING CLAIMS, vol. 15, p. 512.

1. Such was the case in the grant by Act of 1862, amended by Act of 1864, of lands to the Union Pacific Railroad Company. See U. S. v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 98 U. S. 334. Instances of other grants are seen in U. S. v. Curtner, 38 Fed. Rep. 1; Platt v. Union Pac. R. Co., 99 U. S. 48; Denver etc. R. Co. v. Alling, 99 U. S. 463; Central Pac. R. Co. v. Gallatin, 99 U. S. 727; Kansas Pac. R. Co. v. Dunmeyer, 113 U. S. 629; Baker v. Gee, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 333; New Orleans Pac. R. Co. v. U. S., 124 U. S. 124; U. S. v. McLaughlin, 127 U. S. 428.

Grant of Right of Way to Railroads.—See infra, this title, Other Provisions.

2. See Van Wyck v. Knevals, 106 U. S. 360; Eldred v. Sexton, 30 Wis. 189; 19 Wall. (U. S.) 193; Leavenworth etc. R. Co. v. U. S., 92 U. S. 733.

In all grants which are to be satisfied out of sections along the line of a railroad, it is necessarily implied, in the absence of a specific designation otherwise, that the land is to be taken from the nearest sections of the character mentioned which are undisposed of. Wood v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 104 U. S. 329; Ryan v. Central Pac. R. Co., 99 U. S. 382.

3. Van Wyck v. Knevals, 106 U. S. 360; Schulenberg v. Harriman, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 44; St. Joseph etc. R. Co. v. Baldwin, 103 U. S. 426; Broder v. Natoma Water etc. Co., 101 U. S. 274; St. Paul etc. R. Co. v. Winona etc. R. Co., 112 U. S. 720; Winona etc. R. Co. v. Barney, 113 U. S. 618.

Upon the location of the road the title relates back to the date of the grant irrespective of the time of the location, and in case of two roads claiming under the same grant, they take in undivided moieties where there is a conflict. St. Paul etc. R. Co. v. Winona etc. R. Co., 112 U. S. 720.

So also where two roads cross one another, they take in equal moieties; but the title to indemnity or lieu lands outside that limit is acquired by priority of selection approved by the Secretary of the Interior. Sioux City etc. R. Co. v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 117 U. S. 406; St. Paul etc. R. Co. v. Winona etc. R. Co., 112 U. S. 720; Western Land Co. v. Hamblin, 79 Iowa 539.

The road becomes definitely fixed or located as soon as a map of the route is filed with the Secretary of the Interior, and no subsequent neglect of the Secretary could affect the rights of the company. Van Wyck v. Knevals, 106 U. S. 360; Kansas Pac. R. Co. v. Atchison etc. R. Co., 112 U. S. 414; Kansas Pac. R. Co. v. Dunmeyer, 113 U. S. 629; Baker v. Gee, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 333; Walden v. Knevals, 114 U. S. 373; U. S. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 41 Fed. Rep. 842.

Compare Western Land Co. v. Hamblin, 79 Iowa 539.

Where, by various acts of Congress, land is granted generally to different railroad corporations before the roads in question have been located, the specific lots to be ascertained, and the title thereto perfected only upon the location and construction of the roads, the rights of contesting corporations to disputed tracts are determined by the dates of their respective grants, and not by the dates of the location of their respective roads. Missouri etc. R. Co. v. Kansas Pac. R. Co., 97 U. S. 491.

Whether a grant to a railroad is one in presenti, so that the building and completion of the road are conditions subsequent, or otherwise so that the building, etc., is made a condition precedent, depends, of course, upon the language in each particular grant, to be construed according to well fixed rules of interpretation. The words "shall be and are hereby granted" always import a grant in presenti.

are not conditions precedent to the grant, but conditions subsequent, the non-performance of which will defeat the grant.¹

But Congress in making grants in aid of railroads cannot be supposed to exercise its liberality to the prejudice of pre-existing rights, which, though imperfect, are meritorious and entitled to just legislative protection;² and therefore where any homestead, preemption, or other similar rights have attached, they will be

Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 488; Martin v. Marks, 97 U. S. 345; Hannibal R. Co. v. Smith, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 95; Winona etc. R. Co. v. Barney, 113 U. S. 618.

1. Conditions Subsequent.—Thus in the case of Act of Congress, May 15th, 1856, granting lands to Iowa for railroad purposes, and which authorized a sale of one hundred and twenty sections of land in advance of the construction of any part of the road, it was held that purchasers thereof took a good title although no part of the road was constructed when the same was made, the conditions as to the completion of the road imposed by statute being conditions subsequent. Cedar Rapids etc. R. Co. v. Courtwright, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 310.

So also the provision in Act of 1856 that lands remaining unsold after ten years shall revert to the United States if the road be not then completed, is a condition subsequent. Schulenberg v. Harriman, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 44.

Likewise the grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad of July 2, 1854, was a grant in presenti, and only to be defeated by a failure to perform the conditions subsequent, and then only by appropriate judicial proceedings to declare a forfeiture. Francoeur v. Newhouse, 40 Fed. Rep. 618; U. S. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 41 Fed. Rep. 842; Washington etc. R. Co. v. Northern Pac. R. Co. (Idaho, 1889), 21 Pac. Rep. 658; U. S. v. Curtner, 38 Fed. Rep. 1.

Conditions Precedent.—In the case of Shepard v. Northwestern L. Ins. Co., 40 Fed. Rep. 341, it was held that while the Act of Congress, June 3d, 1856, granting certain public lands to the State of Michigan for railroad purposes was intended as a present grant of the lands included in its terms, and no further conveyance by the government was necessary, yet the grant did not become operative or divest the title in the United States to any particular land until it had been earned by the building of a certain number of miles of the road and selected by the railroad company.

By Act of March 3d, 1871, certain surveyed lands were granted to a railway company, provided its line should be completed within five years, and if the company should fail to complete the road within the time prescribed, Congress might secure its speedy completion. The latter act of July 31, 1876, provided that before any land granted to any railway should be conveyed the cost of survey should be paid by the party in interest. The line was not completed within the time stipulated. It was therefore held that Congress had a right to impose a new condition on this grant, and that the company was not entitled to recover the money paid by it for surveys under protest, and that the right of Congress to impose such condition was not affected by the authority given it to complete the road. New Orleans Pac. R. Co. v. U. S., 124 U. S., 124. Other instances of cases in which the construction of a certain portion of a railroad was made a condition precedent to the grant are seen in Farnsworth v. Minnesota etc. R. Co., 92 U. S. 49; Chamberlain v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 92 U. S. 299; Cedar Rapids etc. R. Co. v. Herring, 110 U. S. 27; Vicksburg etc. R. Co. v. Sledge, 41 La. Ann. 896; U. S. v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 39 Fed. Rep. 132.

2. Broder v. Natoma Water etc. Co., 101 U. S. 274; Atchison v. Peterson, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 507; Basey v. Gallagher, 26 Wall. (U. S.) 670; Forbes v. Gracey, 94 U. S. 762; Wolcott v. Des Moines Co., 5 Wall. (U. S.) 681; Williams v. Baker, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 144.

Therefore, in the grant of lands to the Pacific Railroad Company, by 13 U. S. Stat. at L. 356, § 4, the provision that "the same shall not defeat or impair any preemption, homestead, swamp land or other lawful claim," includes a water company's right to use their recognized and protected in pursuance of the constant policy of the government to protect those who have in good faith settled upon and improved any portion of the public land.¹

It is generally provided that where lands along the line of a proposed railway are already taken up, a railroad company may take indemnity lands from other portions of the public domain.²

canal constructed years before over public land in California. Broder v. Natoma Water etc. Co., 50 Cal. 621; affirmed 101 U. S. 274.

Although, as previously stated, a grant of alternate sections of public land to a railroad, when its road shall have been definitely located, is to be construed as a grant in presenti a clause providing for indemnity for lands within the alternate sections to which preemption rights have attached may be construed to embrace lands to which such rights attached before the definite location of the road, yet after the grant. Winona etc. R. Co. v. Barney, 113 U. S. 618; Kansas Pac. R. Co. v. Denmeyer, 113 U. S. 629.

It is apprehended that the above principle applies as well to homestead, timber culture or other similar rights as to preemption rights. See Kansas Pac. R. Co. v. Denmeyer, 113 U. S. 629.

1. Broder v. Natoma Water etc. Co., 101 U. S. 274; 50 Cal. 621; Winona etc. R. Co. v. Barney, 113 U. S. 618; St. Joseph etc. R. Co. v. Baldwin, 103 U. S. 426; Burnham v. Starkey, 41 Kan. 604; Burlington etc. R. Co. v. Johnson, 38 Kan. 142; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 215.

"It has always been the policy of the government to protect those who in good faith have settled upon and improved portions of the public lands." Lamb v. Davenport, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 313; Rector v. Gibbon, 111 U. S. 276.

Persons claiming particular tracts of these (i. e., land granted to the Missouri etc. Railroad Co.) lands by virtue of prior homestead or preemption settlements, can under the State practice obtain, by action at law, full protection of their rights without the interference of the United States. U. S. v. Missouri etc. R. Co., 37 Fed. Rep. 68.

It must be remembered that most railroad grants are in presenti, and therefore take effect on the passage of the act making the grant, so that in order to claim a prior homestead or preemption right, such right must have been initiated before the act took effect. Winona etc. R. Co. v. Barney, 113 U. S. 618.

2. Indemnity Lands.—In Kansas Pac. R. Co. v. Atchison etc. R. Co., 112 U. S. 414, it is held that the indemnity clause in the Minnesota grant of 1857 covers losses from the grant by reason of sale and the attachment of preemption rights previous to the date of the act. Winona etc. R. Co. v. Barney, 113 U. S. 618; Barney v. Winona etc. R. Co., 117 U. S. 228.

The same is held as to the act of May 5, 1864, granting lands to the State of Wisconsin. Wisconsin Cent. R. Co. v. Price Co., 133 U. S. 496.

The United States act of March 3, 1863, granting lands to Kansas to aid in the construction of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad, provided that if it should appear, when the lines of the road should be definitely fixed, that the alternate sections granted were sold, reserved, or otherwise appropriated, indemnity lands should be selected. Held, that the withdrawal by the land office, before the lines were definitely fixed, of lands along the "probable line" of the road affected no rights of another railroad company which, but for such withdrawal, could maintain a claim to a part of these lands by reason of a compliance with the provisions of the Pacific Railroad acts. Kansas Pacific R. Co. v. Atchison etc. R. Co., 112 U. S. 414.

Act of Congress May 5th, 1864, granted land to the State of Wisconsin to aid in the construction of a railroad, and provided for indemnity in case portions of the land granted had been already taken up. It was held that this indemnity clause covers losses from the grant by reason of sale and attachment of homestead and preemption right previous to the date of the grant, as well as between such date and the date of the location of the railroad. Wisconsin Cent. R. Co. v. Price Co., 133 U. S. 496. See also concerning indemnities, Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Tilley, 41 Fed. Rep. 729.

It is to be borne in mind that such grants, like all other grants of Congress, are not only conveyances from the government to such railroads, but are also laws of the United States, and therefore any common law principle in conflict with them must be subordinated to them.¹

In other cases grants are made to a State in aid of a railroad, and where this is the case the State acquires nothing under the act of Congress more than a mere naked trust, or power to dispose of the lands therein specified, and to apply them to the use and purpose prescribed in the act.²

In addition to the rules already stated, the general rules applicable to the construction of legislative acts in general apply to cases of land grants by Congress in aid of railroads, and it is scarcely necessary to detail here the constructions which have been placed upon the various acts which have been made at different times for the benefit of railroad companies.³

1. Congressional Grant Has the Force of Law.—Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Kansas Pac. R. Co., 97 U. S. 491; Kansas Pac. R. Co. v. Dunmeyer, 113 U. S. 629; St. Paul etc. R. Co. v. Greenhalgh, 26 Fed. Rep. 563.

"It is always to be borne in mind in construing a Congressional grant, that the act by which it is made is a law as well as a conveyance and that such effect must be given to it as will carry out the intent of Congress." Justice Field in Missouri etc. R. Co. v. Kansas Pac. R. Co., 97 U. S. 491; quoted and approved in Hall v. Russell, 101 U. S. 503.

2. Rice v. Minnesota etc. R. Co., 1 Black (U. S.) 360; Wolsey v. Chapman, 101 U. S. 755; Van Wyck v. Knevals, 106 U. S. 360; Hannibal etc. R. Co. v. Smith, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 95; Schulenberg v. Harriman, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 60; Grinnell v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 103 U. S. 739; Cedar Rapids etc. R. Co. v. Courtwright, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 310; Williams v. Baker, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 144; Kansas City, etc. R. Co. v. Attorney-General, 118 U. S. 682; Leavenworth etc. R. Co. v. U. S., 92 U. S. 733; Litchfield v. Webster Co., 101 U. S. 773; Miller v. Swann, 89 Ala. 631.

3. In the construction of all land grant acts made in aid of railroads "granted lands" are those falling within the limits specially designated, while indemnity lands are those selected in lieu of parcels previously disposed of or reserved, the title to which accrues only from their selection. Barney v. Winona etc. R. Co., 117 U. S. 228;

Leavenworth etc. R. Co. v. U. S., 92 U. S. 760.

The grants of land in aid of railroads are to receive such construction as will best carry out the intent of Congress to ascertain which the condition of the country as well as the purpose declared will be considered by the court and all parts of the act will be read together. Winona etc. R. Co. v. Barney, 113 U. S. 618.

Where a grant of land and the franchises for the construction of a railroad provide for their forfeiture upon failure to begin work within a prescribed time, the forfeiture may be by legislative act without any judicial proceedings. Farnsworth v. Minnesota etc. R. Co., 92 U. S. 49.

Construction of Other Grants.—Grants immediately or indirectly to railway companies have received judicial construction in the following cases besides those already mentioned: Schulenberg v. Harriman, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 44; Ryan v. Central Pac. R. Co., 99 U. S. 382; Cedar Rapids etc. R. Co. v. Herring, 110 U. S. 27; St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. McGee, 115 U. S. 469; Wisconsin Cent. R. Co. v. Price Co., 133 U. S. 496; Wood v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 104 U. S. 329; Bullard v. Des Moines etc. R. Co., 122 U. S. 167; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Rockne, 115 U. S. 600; Rice v. Minnesota etc. R. Co., 1 Black (U. S.) 360; Platt v. Union Pac. R. Co., 99 U. S. 48; Denver etc. R. Co. v. Alling, 99 U. S. 463; St. Paul etc. R. Co. v. Winona etc. R. Co., 112 U. S. 720; Eldred v. Sexton, 30 Wis. 193; 19 Wall. (U. S.) 189; Ver-

VI. THE GENERAL LAND OFFICE—1. Constitution of.—The head of the Land Office is the Commissioner of the General Land Office, who is appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. His duty is to perform, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, all executive duties appertaining to the surveying and sale of the public lands, and also such as relate to private claims for lands, and the issuing of patents for all grants of land under the authority of the government.¹ The Commissioner exercises a general superintendence over the subordinate officers of this department, and is clothed with liberal powers of control for the protection of the rights of all parties claiming lands from the government.²

Subordinate land offices are established by provisions of the statutes in various land districts over the country,³ and for each dier v. Port Royal R. Co., 15 S. Car. 476; Sams v. Port Royal etc. R. Co., 15 S. Car. 484; Barney v. Winona etc. R. Co., 117 U. S. 228; New Orleans etc. R. Co. v. U. S., 124 U. S. 124; U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 37 Fed. Rep. 551; Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Esquibel, 4 N. Mex. 337; U. S. v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 39 Fed. Rep. 132; Farmers' Loan etc. Co. v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 39 Fed. Rep. 143.

Indian Lands.—Where the right of an Indian tribe to the possession and use of certain lands, as long as it may choose to occupy the same, is assured by treaty, a grant in general terms of "land" cannot be construed to embrace them. And a proviso that any and all lands heretofore reserved to the United States, for any purpose whatever, are reserved from the operation of the grant to which it is annexed, applies to lands so set apart for the use of an Indian tribe. Leavenworth etc. R. Co. v. U. S., 92 U. S. 733.

1. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 446, 453; Cahn v. Barnes, 5 Fed. Rep. 331.

The ultimate head of the Land Department is, of course, the Secretary of the Interior. The land office was originally a Bureau of the Treasury Department under the statute of April 25, 1812, but upon the creation in 1849 of the Department of the Interior the Land Office was transferred to that department. Gould & Tucker's Notes on Rev. Stat., p. 52, § 446.

In proceedings before the Land Department if it appears that the claim of the moving party is against public policy, or against the law, it must be disregarded, although such objection was not raised by the allegation of the parties. Therefore, in a contest before the department, involving the question of the abandonment of a homestead, where it appeared that the complainant was not a bona fide homestead claimant, the Secretary of the Interior did not exceed his jurisdiction in directing a cancellation of the entry. Lee v. Johnson, 116 U. S. 48.

But no officer of the Land Department has authority to insert in a patent any other terms than those of conveyance, with recitals showing a compliance with the law. Deffebach v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 392.

2. Bell v. Hearne, 19 How. (U. S.) 252, where the court observes: "The Commissioner is clothed with liberal powers of control, to be exercised for the purposes of justice and to prevent the consequences of inadvertence, irregularity, mistake or fraud in the important and extensive operations of that office for the disposal of the public domain."

This general power of superintendence gives the Commissioner of the General Land Office direct supervision over registers and receivers, whose decisions on all questions he is authorized to review. Barnard v. Ashley, 18 How. (U. S.) 45. See also U. S. v. Chaplin, 31 Fed. Rep. 894; U. S. v. Barnhart, 33 Fed. Rep. 459; Darcy v. McCarthy, 35 Kan. 722.

The Commissioner is charged with the keeping and charge of the seal of the office, and of the records and other books and papers of the office. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 454; Bullion etc. Min. Co. v. Eureka Hill Min. Co. (Utah, 1886), 11 Pac. Rep. 536.

3. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2248.

Whenever the quantity of public land remaining unsold in any land dis-office there is appointed a register and a receiver, whose duty it is to transact all the business appertaining to the public lands in the district for which their office is established. Registers and receivers are appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to hold office for four years. They are required to reside at the place where the land office to which they are appointed is, and to execute before entering upon their office a bond in the sum of $10,000.¹ All proceedings for the acquirement of public land, either under the homestead, pre-emption, or other laws, are to be made before such registers and receivers, and they are empowered to pass upon all claims relating to lands within their districts,² their judgment to be subject to a review by the Commissioner of the General Land Office.³

The statutes also provide for the appointment of a surveyor-general for certain States and Territories, and prescribe his duties.⁴ Being a disbursing officer and in some cases being authorized to act as register and receiver, he is required to give bond in a certain sum for the faithful discharge of all his duties.⁵

tract is reduced to less than 100,000 acres, it is made the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to discontinue the land office of such district, and transfer the land remaining unsold to the district most convenient to it. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2248.

1. U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 2234-2237.

2. U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 2262, 2290, 2355. Potter v. U. S., 107 U. S. 126; Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 498.

Under the Act of 1882 for adjusting land claims, the register and receiver are empowered to decide on the true location of grants or confirmations, but not upon legal questions of title. Tate v. Carney, 24 How. (U. S.) 357; Doe v. Eslava, 9 How. (U. S.) 421; Cousin v. Labatut, 19 How. (U. S.) 203.

A receiver acting also as register by authority of an order from the Land Department, is a de facto officer and his official acts are valid even though it be unlawful for him to hold the office. Jeffords v. Hine, (Arizona 1886), 11 Pac. Rep. 351.

3. Harkness v. Underhill, 1 Black (U. S.) 316; U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2273; Barnard v. Ashley, 18 How. (U. S.) 45; Haydel v. Dufresne, 17 How. (U. S.) 23.

4. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2207, et seq.

In case any surveyor-general is suspended by the President, the suspension takes effect upon due notice, but if the officer acts subsequently, his acts being the acts of an officer de facto are valid and binding as such. 15 A. G. Op. 62.

5. That surveyors of public lands are disbursing officers, see Farrar v. U. S., 5 Pet. (U. S.) 373.

By U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2228, the President is authorized in any case where he thinks the public interest may require it, to transfer the duties of register and receiver in any district to the surveyor-general of the surveying district in which such land district is located.

Every surveyor-general is required by the statutes before entering upon the duties of his office to execute and deliver to the Secretary of the Interior a bond with good and sufficient security in the penal sum of $30,000 conditioned for the faithful disbursement according to law, of all public money placed in his hands, and for the faithful performance of the duties of the office, and the President is authorized whenever he may deem it expedient, to require any surveyor-general to give a new bond with additional security. U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 2215-16.

Where a surveyor-general, receiver or register of a land office is in default in the discharge of his official duties, after his commission has expired but before his successor has entered upon the duties of the office, the sureties on the bond of such surveyor-general or receiver, or register, are liable for all defaults of their principal. U. S. v. Jameson, 16 Fed. Rep. 331; U. S. v. Linn, 2 McLean (U. S.) 501; Bryan v. U. S., 1 Black (U. S.) 140.

2. Powers and Duties of Land Officers Generally.—In the discharge of their duties the land officers act as agents for the Secretary of the Interior in the execution of powers conferred upon him, and therefore the courts will not interfere with such officers while in the discharge of their duties either by injunction or mandamus.¹

The register and the receiver are empowered to pass upon the sufficiency of proof of settlement and improvement by preemptions, homesteaders, or others.² They are not required to do so concurrently; all that the law requires being that they shall both be satisfied.³ They have no power, however, to overthrow the decision of a prior register and receiver made sometime before and which had been followed by possession, and as to which there had intervened the claims of bona fide purchasers;⁴

1. Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 473; Litchfield v. Richards, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 575; Cox v. McGarrahan, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 298; Gaines v. Thompson, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 347.

Mandamus.—For this reason the Supreme Court has no power to issue a writ of mandamus to the register of the Land Office of the United States commanding him to enter the application of a party for certain tracts of land, even though such writ had been refused by the highest court of law or equity in a State. McClurny v. Silliman, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 369.

So also the cancellation of an entry of land by the Commissioner of the Land Office, which the Secretary of the Interior has directed him to make is not a ministerial act which may be enjoined by the court. Gaines v. Thompson, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 347.

For the same reason mandamus will not be issued to command the Commissioner of the Land Office to have a patent prepared, signed, recorded and issued, where the merits of the case cannot then be determined upon the record. The duty in this case is not merely ministerial, but involves the exercise of judgment and discretion which cannot be controlled or influenced by mandamus. If the relator entitled under a certificate presents an equity superior to the opposing title, the appropriate remedy is by bill in equity. U. S. v. Edmunds, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 563.

The issue of a final certificate of purchase or of a patent since this also involves the exercise of discretion, cannot be interfered with by a mandamus from the courts. McIntire v. Woods, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 504; U. S. v. Commissioner, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 563; Cox v. McGarrahan, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 298.

Whether certain land is open to preemption and settlement and should therefore be surveyed, is a matter of doubt and within executive judgment or discretion; consequently a mandamus directing a survey cannot be granted. U. S. v. Lamar, 116 U. S. 423.

2. U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 2273, 2262, 2290, 2355; Tate v. Carney, 24 How. (U. S.) 357; Wilcox v. Johnson, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 498.

Thus the decision by the Land Department, rejecting a person's claim to preempt on evidence that he had previously exercised the "preemptive right," is conclusive. Baldwin v. Stark, 107 U. S. 463.

"The officers of the Land Department are specially designated by law to receive, consider, and pass upon proofs presented with respect to settlements upon the public lands, with a view to secure rights of preemption. If they are in the construction of the law applicable to any case, or if fraud is practiced upon them, or they themselves are chargeable with fraudulent practices, their rulings may be reviewed and annulled by the courts when a controversy arises between private parties founded upon their decisions. But, for mere errors of judgment upon the weight of evidence in a contested case before them, the only remedy is by appeal from one officer to another of the department, and perhaps, under special circumstances, to the President." Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 330.

3. Potter v. U. S., 107 U. S. 126.

4. Tate v. Carney, 24 How. (U. S.) 357; Doe v. Eslava, 9 How. (U. S.) 421; Cousin v. Labatut, 19 How. (U. S.) 203.

this is a judicial act and requires the judgment of a court.¹ An appeal lies from the decision of all subordinate officers to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and from his decision to the Secretary of the Interior.²

In adjusting Congressional grants of land to a State, the only questions for consideration by the officers of the government are whether the State possesses the right to claim the land under her grant, and whether the land was subject to selection by her agents. Those officers have no jurisdiction to review transactions between the State and her purchasers or locating agents.³

3. Compensation.—The compensation of all officers in the Land Department is provided by statute, in most cases being a fixed amount, but in the case of registers and receivers being a fixed salary with the addition of certain fees.⁴ And all fees which are not authorized to be taken as compensation must be paid into the office of the Treasury Department.⁵

4. Force and Effect of the Decisions of the Land Office.—It is a general rule that authority to hear and determine certain matters having been vested by law exclusively in a special tribunal, the decisions of that tribunal upon all matters such as come properly within its jurisdiction are final and conclusive, and not subject to review in any other tribunal.⁶ The Land Office, therefore, being

1. U. S. v. Stone, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 525.

2. Haydel v. Dufresne, 17 How. (U. S.) 23. (In that case the ultimate appeal was to the Secretary of the Treasury, but this was owing to the fact that the Department of the Interior had not been established, and the land offices were a part of the Department of the Treasury). Harkness v. Underhill, 1 Black (U. S.) 316; U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2273.

Prior to the act of Congress of September 4, 1841, giving an appeal to the Secretary of the Treasury, no appeal could be taken from the decision of the register and receiver disallowing a preemption claim. Arnold v. Grimes, 2 Iowa 1.

3. Frasher v. O'Connor, 115 U. S. 102; Van Reynegan v. Bolton, 95 U. S. 36.

4. For the salaries of officers of the general land office, see U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 446-450.

The salaries of the surveyor-generals in the different States vary. U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 2207, 2211.

Registers and receivers each receive a salary of $500 annually, and certain fees prescribed by statute. U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 2237, 2238.

But in no case can the compensation of a register or receiver, including salary, fees and commissions, exceed in the aggregate $3,000 a year, nor can any register or receiver receive for any one quarter, or fraction of a quarter, more than a pro rata allowance of such maximum. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2240.

A receiver, however, is entitled to commissions on the sales of Indian trust lands over and above his compensation as a receiver of public moneys, when appointed special receiver to assist in selling such trust lands. U. S. v. Brindle, 110 U. S. 688.

A neglect or refusal by the register or receiver to pay over to the United States the surplus beyond the commissions to which he is entitled by law, is a breach of his official bond, both as respects himself and his sureties, and the United States is not required to proceed against the principal for money had and received, but may proceed directly against his sureties. U. S. v. Babbitt, 95 U. S. 334.

5. U. S. v. Babbitt, 95 U. S. 334; 1 Black (U. S.) 55; U. S. v. Brindle, 110 U. S. 688; U. S. v. Dickson, 15 Pet. (U. S.) 141.

6. Boatner v. Ventris, 8 Mart., N. S. (La.) 644; 20 Am. Dec. 266, note. (In this note this subject is reviewed at such a tribunal, its decisions upon all questions of fact coming properly within the scope of its jurisdiction, in the absence of fraud or mistake, are final and conclusive and cannot be reviewed by any other branch of the government.¹

length and a number of authorities collected). Steel v. St. Louis Smelting etc. Co., 106 U. S. 447; Sioux City etc. R. Co. v. U. S., 34 Fed. Rep. 835; Warren v. Van Brunt, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 646. JURISDICTION, vol. 12, p. 244, et seq.

In the case of Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 535, the court by Miller, J., observes: "When the law has confided to a special tribunal the authority to hear and determine certain matters arising in the course of its duties, the decision of that tribunal, within the scope of its authority is conclusive upon all others. That the action of the land office in issuing a patent for any of the public land, subject to sale by preemption or otherwise, is conclusive of the legal title, must be admitted under the principles above stated, and in all courts and in all forms of judicial proceedings where this title must control, either by reason of the limited powers of the court or the essential character of the proceeding, no inquiry can be permitted into the circumstances under which it was obtained. . . . It is fully conceded that where both officers decide controverted questions of fact in the absence of fraud, imposition, or mistake, their decisions on those questions are final, except as they may be reversed on appeal in that department."

1. Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 511; Boatner v. Ventris, 8 Mart., N. S. (La.) 644; 20 Am. Dec. 266; Lytle v. Arkansas, 9 How. (U. S.) 333; Quinby v. Conlan, 104 U. S. 420; Rector v. Gibbon, 111 U. S. 276 (the famous Hot Springs reservation case); Steel v. St. Louis Smelting etc. Co., 106 U. S. 447; Lee v. Johnston, 116 U. S. 48; U. S. v. Marshall Sil. Min. Co., 129 U. S. 579; Baldwimer v. Stark, 107 U. S. 463; Ehrhardt v. Hogaboom, 115 U. S. 67; Casey v. Vassor, 4 McCrary (U. S.) 127; Hosmer v. Wallace, 47 Cal. 461; Hess v. Bolinger, 48 Cal. 349; Dilla v. Bohall, 53 Cal. 709; 114 U. S. 47; Rutledge v. Murphy, 51 Cal. 388; Bracken v. Parkinson, 1 Pin. (Wis.) 685; Hill v. Miller, 36 Mo. 182; Stucker v. Duncan, 37 Mo. 160; Ard v. Pratt, 43 Kan. 419; Sioux City etc. R. Co. v. U. S., 34 Fed. Rep. 835; Van Sant v. Butler, 19 Neb. 351; Kinney v. Degman, 12 Neb. 237; Rush v. Valentine, 12 Neb. 513.

Thus the decision by the Land Department rejecting a person's claim to preempt certain land upon evidence that he had previously exercised the "preemptive right," is binding and conclusive. Baldwin v. Stark, 107 U. S. 463.

Likewise, the decision of the officers of the Land Department is final upon the question as to whether a claimant under the Donation Act, who had demanded his patent certificate as against other contesting claimants, had resided on and cultivated the lands in dispute for four consecutive years, and had otherwise conformed to the requirements of the act. Vance v. Burbank, 101 U. S. 514.

So also the action of the register and receiver of the United States Land Office in accepting the proofs furnished by a preceptor as satisfactory and receiving his money and issuing to him the usual duplicate is a judicial determination of his rights which is conclusive in all collateral proceedings. Boyce v. Danz, 29 Mich. 146.

Whether certain public land shall be surveyed and brought into market is a matter concerning which the courts will not interfere with the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior. U. S. v. Lamar, 116 U. S. 423.

The whole doctrine is summed up in the case of Aurora Hill Min. Co. v. 85 Mining Co., 34 Fed. Rep. 515; the decisions of the department officers on question of law or of fact are not subject to collateral attack; on questions of fact their decisions are conclusive; on questions of law their decisions can only be reviewed under a direct proceeding for that purpose. Evidence is admissible in an action at law to show error in the decision of an officer of the Land Department on a matter submitted to him for decision. See also Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Wiggs, 43 Fed. Rep. 333.

In the case of U. S. v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 61, the character of the fraud for which a bill in chancery will

It is another rule equally as well settled as the preceding and applicable to all proceedings held before officers and tribunals vested by law with power to hear and determine certain matters that where upon an ex parte application, it has been determined that one of the parties is entitled to the property to the exclusion of the others, such determination is final only as between one party and the government, and any third party whose rights may have been prejudiced may litigate the conflicting claim in any court of justice and obtain relief therefor.¹ In granting this rebe sustained to set aside a judgment or decree between parties rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction are stated to be frauds extrinsic or collateral to the matter tried by the first court and not a fraud which was in issue in that suit. The most usual cases in which such relief has been granted are those in which by fraud or deception practiced on the unsuccessful party he has been prevented from exhibiting fully his case, by reason of which there has never been a real contest before the court upon the subject-matter of the suit. The opinion of Justice Miller in this case (U. S. v. Throckmorton) contains a most excellent exposition of the whole doctrine of relief in equity against fraud or mistake, particularly as regards the subject in hand. See also Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 511; Minnesota v. Bachelder, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 109; Silver v. Ladd, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 219; Starks v. Starks, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 402; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 84; Vance v. Burbank, 101 U. S. 514.

It will be remembered, however, that the decisions which are final and conclusive are only those of officers from whom no appeal lies to a superior officer. Therefore, where by the Act of July 4, 1836 (5 Stat. at L. 137), the Commissioner of the General Land Office has power to supervise the decisions of the registers and receivers of the land districts, the decisions of these latter officers upon a claim brought before them after the passage of the statute is not final and conclusive. Barnard v. Ashley, 18 How. (U. S.) 43; Rush v. Valentine, 12 Neb. 513; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 72.

It must be also noted that those decisions of the Land Department which enjoy immunity from review by courts are those which determine questions of fact. Decisions by the Land Office as to questions of law are in all cases reviewable in the courts. Rector v.

Gibbons, 111 U. S. 276; Quinby v. Conlan, 104 U. S. 120; Hosmer v. Wallace, 47 Cal. 461. For this reason the interpretation placed upon the Public Lands Act by the Secretary of the Interior is not binding upon the courts. U. S. v. Murphy, 32 Fed. Rep. 376; U. S. v. Mann, 32 Fed. Rep. 386.

Mixed Question of Law and Fact.—Where there is a mixed question of law and of fact and the court cannot so separate it as to see clearly where the mistake of law is, the decision of the tribunal to which the law has confided the matter is conclusive, but where it can be made entirely plain to a court of equity, that on facts concerning which there is no dispute or no reasonable doubt, the Land Department have by mistake of the law deprived the man of his right, it will give relief. Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 473; Ard v. Pratt, 43 Kan. 419; Jeffords v. Hine (Arizona, 1886), 11 Pac. Rep. 351; Porter v. Bishop, 25 Fla. 749.

1. Comegys v. Vasse, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 212; Lytle v. Arkansas, 9 How. (U. S.) 333; Garland v. Wynn, 20 How. (U. S.) 7; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 84; Lindsey v. Hawes, 2 Black (U. S.) 558; Cunningham v. Ashley, 14 How. (U. S.) 377; Boatner v. Ventris, 8 Mart., N. S. (La.) 644; 20 Am. Dec. 273, n.

This rule would seem, however, to be merely an extension of the principle above established, namely that in case of fraud or mistake, the courts may review the decision of the Land Office Department. See cases above cited; also Wynn v. Garland, 16 Ark. 440; Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 535; Fraser v. O'Connor, 115 U. S. 102; Warren v. Van Brunt, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 646.

The Remedy for an Erroneous Decision of Land Officers.—If a register or receiver of a land office refuses to hear the evidence of a preemption claimant and allows another preemption claimlief the courts do not act as an appellate tribunal over the decisions of the Land Department or its officers, however, but in pursuance of the power always possessed by a court of equity to grant relief to parties whose rights are prejudiced.¹ It is believed that by the application of these principles every question arising as to the force and effect of the decisions of the Land Department may be determined.²

ant to land to introduce his testimony and enters the same, the remedy for the first party is by appeal to the Commissioner of the General Land Office. He cannot retain relief in equity. Sacramento Sav. Bank v. Hynes, 50 Cal. 195.

But where a preemption claimant is refused the right to file his declaratory statement on account of a rule existing in the office, it seems that this refusal would not prejudice the claimant's right if he were otherwise entitled to the land. Quinn v. Chapman, 111 U. S. 445.

Notwithstanding the general rule as to the effect of decisions rendered by the officers of the Land Department, it is well established that where there are several parties who set up conflicting claims to property, with which a special tribunal may deal as between one party and the government, regardless of the rights of others, these latter may come into the ordinary courts of justice and litigate the conflicting claims; nor do the regulations of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, whereby a party may be heard to prove his better claim to enter land, deprive courts of justice of this jurisdiction. Courts of justice have always power to examine a contested claim before entry under the preemption laws, and to overrule the decisions of the register and receiver confirmed by the Commissioner in cases where they have been imposed upon. Garland v. Wynn, 20 How. (U. S.) 6; Barnard v. Ashley, 18 How. (U. S.) 43; Shelton v. Keirn, 45 Miss. 106; Comegys v. Vasse, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 212; Lytle v. Arkansas, 9 How. (U. S.) 328; Cunningham v. Ashley, 14 How. (U. S.) 377.

Where preemption right to public lands is claimed against a subsequent title from public authorities, the register and receiver in deciding such cases do not so act in a judicial capacity that their judgment on the matter is conclusive, and the courts will examine the facts to ascertain which party has the better right. Barnard v. Ashley, 18 How. (U. S.) 43.

1. Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. (U.

S.) 84. EQUITY, vol. 6, p. 717; Bisson v. Curry, 35 How. 72; Garland v. Wynn, 20 How. (U. S.) 7; Lytle v. Arkansas, 22 How. (U. S.) 203; Chapman v. Quinn, 56 Cal. 266.

2. In the case of Garland v. Wynn, 20 How. (U. S.) 6, this language was used: "The general rule is that where special parties set up conflicting claims to property, with which a special tribunal may deal as between one party and the government, regardless of the rights of others, the latter may come into the ordinary courts of justice and litigate the conflicting claims. Such was the case in Comegys v. Vasse, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 212, and the case before us belongs to the same class of ex parte proceedings; nor do the regulations of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, whereby a party may be heard to prove his better claim to enter, oust the jurisdiction of the courts of justice. We announce this to be the settled doctrine of this court. It was in effect so held in the case of Lytle v. Arkansas, 9 How. (U. S.) 328; next in the case of Cunningham v. Ashley, 14 How. (U. S.) 377, and again in the case of Barnard v. Ashley, 18 How. (U. S.) 44."

In Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 511, it was laid down in emphasizing this principle that where land officers in their department exceed the jurisdictions conferred upon them, although the same is not the result of any fraud or imposition, relief is nevertheless granted. Observe that the same rules apply to their determinations as to those of other tribunals exercising judicial functions. Their decisions are binding and conclusive when acting within their jurisdiction, but when acting without the pale of their authority they are to be regarded as mere nullities.

Equity will also grant relief notwithstanding the decision of the Land Office, where the claimant has done everything which the law requires in the prosecution of a right, and has failed to attain such right, owing to the misconduct or negligence of the land officers. Lytle v. Arkansas, 9 How. (U. S.) 333.

VII. PATENTS.—Any person having perfected his right to the ownership of any portion of the public lands, is entitled to have issued to him a patent, an instrument which is nothing more nor less than the evidence of the conveyance to him from the United States of the legal title to the lands in question.¹ The legal title remains in the United States until the issue of this patent, but before it is issued and after the perfection of the claimant's right,

In the case of Lytle v. Arkansas, 22 How. (U. S.) 203, a contest arose between plaintiffs and the State of Arkansas as to the ownership of a fractional section of land for which a patent had been granted to the State by the Land Department. The complainants maintained their claim by virtue of a preemption right of their ancestor Cloyes, who claimed to have settled upon the land as a bona fide preceptor. His claim was objected to by the State courts because he never had in good faith settled upon the land, and the Supreme Court of the United States affirmed the judgment because in their opinion the affidavits on which the occupant's entry was founded were untrue in fact and a fraud upon the register and receiver. See also for a similar case Johnson v. Towseley, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 84, in which case Mr. Justice Miller sets forth most clearly the whole doctrine as to the authority of courts of equity to grant relief in all such cases.

Doctrine of this Section Re-stated.—From what has been said before it will be seen therefore that in deciding upon questions of fact within the scope of its jurisdiction, and in the absence of fraud or mistake, the decisions of the Land Office are binding upon all the courts, and cannot be reviewed in them. The rule may, perhaps, be better stated thus: The courts have jurisdiction to review all decisions of the Land Department:

1. When the department has acted beyond the scope of its proper jurisdiction.
2. When, though acting within its jurisdiction, there has been fraud or mistake committed.
3. When the question is one of law and not of fact.
4. In all questions arising after the issue of the patent by the government, the courts have the same jurisdiction as in case of any other dispute concerning the right or title to property.

1. Morrow v. Whitney, 95 U. S. 551; Whitney v. Morrow, 112 U. S. 693;

McGarrahan v. New Idria Min. Co., 96 U. S. 316; Irvine v. Irvine, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 617; U. S. v. Stone, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 525; Brown v. Huger, 21 How. (U. S.) 305; Warren v. Van Brunt, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 647; Bryan v. Forsyth, 19 How. (U. S.) 334; Cowell v. Colorado Springs, 100 U. S. 55; Anderson's Law Dict., Patents.

The patent is the instrument which under the laws of Congress passes the title of the United States, and in an action of ejectment in the Federal courts for lands derived from the United States the patent, when regular on its face, is conclusive evidence of title in the patentee. Gibson v. Chouteau, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 92.

A patent for unimproved lands, no part of which was in the possession of any one at the time it issued, gives a legal seisin and constructive possession of all the lands within the survey. Peyton v. Stith, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 485.

Nothing passes a perfect title to public lands with the exception of a few cases, but a patent. Exceptions are where Congress grants land in words of present grant. This general rule applies as well to preemption as to other purchases of public lands. Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 498; Leavenworth etc. R. Co. v. U. S., 92 U. S. 733.

In the case of Langdeau v. Hanes, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 521, the court observes in the course of its opinion: "In the legislation of Congress a patent has a double operation. It is a conveyance by the government when the government has any interest to convey, but where it is issued upon the confirmation of a claim of a previously existing title, it is documentary evidence having the dignity of record, of the existence of that title, and of such equities respecting the claim as justify its recognition and confirmation. The instrument is none the less efficacious as evidence of previously existing rights, because it also embodies words of release or transfer from the government."

the United States holds the land in trust for such claimant.¹ Although before the issue of the patent the claimant may have such an interest in the land as will entitle him to enforce it in a court of equity, he has not the legal title, such as may be asserted in a court of law, as against one holding a patent, nor can he exercise any of the other rights incident to the legal title.²

Denny v. Dodson, 32 Fed. Rep. 904; 13 Sawy. (U. S.) 230.

Presumption of Issuance.—In the case of Jenkins v. Trager, 40 Fed. Rep. 726, it appeared that the plaintiff's father J purchased the land in controversy in 1831 and immediately went into actual possession under a deed from the original purchaser from the United States. He remained in possession until his death in 1855. His executors remained in possession until 1867, and the plaintiff had possession ever since. It was held that in such a length of time it must be presumed that a patent had issued.

1. Bronson v. Kukuk, 3 Dill. (U. S.) 490; U. S. v. Freyberg, 32 Fed. Rep. 195; Astrom v. Hammond, 4 McLean (U. S.) 107; Cornelius v. Kessel, 58 Wis. 237; affirmed 128 U. S. 456; Lindsey v. Hawes, 2 Black (U. S.) 554; Starks v. Starrs, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 402; Carroll v. Safford, 3 How. (U. S.) 441. The government stands in the same position as does any private party who is under a contract to convey. Arnold v. Grimes, 2 Iowa 1.

Until a patent issues, the legal title remains in the United States, and it will protect any equity the United States may have in the land from a sale for taxes by the State. Bronson v. Kukuk, 3 Dill. (U. S.) 490.

2. Equitable Title as Against Patent.—In the case of Bagnell v. Broderick, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 450, it was held that a patent for land carries the fee, and is the best title known to a court of law. "Such," it is said in the case of Hooper v. Scheimer, 23 How. (U. S.) 285, "is the settled doctrine of this court."

A patent cannot be collaterally avoided at law even for fraud. Field v. Seabury, 19 How. (U. S.) 324.

It is also settled that no equitable title can be set up in ejectment in opposition to the legal title, except where there is an express statutory provision. 4 Minor's Inst. 371; 2 Minor's Inst. 197-8; Jackson v. Chase, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 84; Jackson v. Pierce, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 222; Davis v. Teays, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 283.

For this reason a patent is conclusive in a court of law. West v. Cochran, 17 How. (U. S.) 403; Balance v. Forsyth, 13 How. (U. S.) 24; Livingston v. Story, 9 Pet. (U. S.) 632; Willot v. Sanford, 19 How. (U. S.) 82; Gaines v. Hale, 16 Ark. 25; Dickinson v. Brown, 9 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 130; Bledsoe v. Well, 4 Bibb (Ky.) 229; Finley v. Williams, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 167; Jackson v. Marsh, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 282.

In the case of Field v. Seabury, 19 How. (U. S.) 323, the court said: "This case involves directly the point whether, when a grant or patent for land . . . has been given by the sovereignty or legislative authority only having the right to make it, without any provision having been made in the patent, or by the law to inquire into its fairness between the grantor and the grantee . . . the third party cannot raise in ejectment the question of fraud as between the grantor and the grantee, and thus look beyond the patent or grant. We are not aware that such a proceeding is permitted in any of the courts of law. In England, a bill in equity lies to set aside letters patent obtained from the king by fraud (Attorney-Gen'l v. Vernon, 1 Vern. 277, 370; 2 Ch. Rep. 523), and it would in the United States; but it is a question exclusively between the sovereignty making the grant and the grantee; but in neither could a patent be collaterally avoided at law for fraud. This court has never declared it could be done. Stoddard v. Chambers, 2 How. (U. S.) 284, does not do so as has been supposed." See also Gregg v. Sayre, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 244; Swayze v. Burke, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 11.

It seems clear, therefore, from the foregoing discussion, that the proposition stated in the text that the holder of an equitable title to land under a certificate of purchase duly issued cannot assert such title in a court of law as against the holder of a patent for the same land, since such patent can only be impeached in a court of equity, unless void on its face. See

Gregg v. Sayre, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 244; Swayse v. Burke, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 11.

In the case of Simmons v. Wagner, 101 U. S. 260, it is maintained, however, that a person in possession of public land under a certificate of the register that he had paid for the same, without a patent, can successfully defend against an action in ejectment to recover the possession by the holder of a patent issued upon a subsequent purchase of the land as a part of the public domain; the court basing its decision upon the ground that the patent was absolutely null and void, and therefore (following the decision in Sherman v. Buick, 93 U. S. 209, which holds that though where a patent is merely voidable it can only be set aside by a court of equity, yet that an absolute want of power to issue the patent might be shown in a court of law) might be defeated in a court of law. The court citing, to sustain this decision, Wirth v. Branson, 98 U. S. 118; Frisbie v. Whitney, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 187; Lytle v. Arkansas, 9 How. (U. S.) 314. It was said in the opinion of the court that "where the right to a patent has once become vested in a purchaser of public land, it is equivalent so far as the government is concerned to a patent actually issued. The execution and delivery of the patent after the right to it has become complete are the mere ministerial acts of the officers charged with that duty. Barney v. Dolph, 97 U. S. 652; Starks v. Starrs, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 402."

The apparent discrepancy existing between the case of Simmons v. Wagner, 101 U. S. 260, and the cases cited in the first part of this note may be obviated by the following considerations: namely, In the case of Simmons v. Wagner, the defendant was in possession under a certificate of purchase from the Land Department. The plaintiff brought an action of ejectment for the land, setting up in support of his claim a patent issued to him. It being a settled principle of law in actions of ejectment that the plaintiff must succeed, not by the weakness of the defendant's title, but by the strength of his own (Wordworth v. Fulton, 1 Cal. 295, 309; Webber v. Pere Marquette Boom Co., 62 Mich. 626), it devolved upon the plaintiff to establish his claim. And while the defendant could not set up in opposition his equitable title, yet he might attack the plaintiff's and show that the conveyance to him was void, owing to a want of power in the parties issuing it to execute it. While a patent may not be attacked collaterally even for fraud in a court of law, still the defendant may set up as a defense that there was no power in the officers issuing the patent to execute it. Sherman v. Buick, 93 U. S. 210; EJECTMENT, vol. 6, pp. 245 k, 245 q; 4 Minor's Inst. 371; Wordworth v. Fulton, 1 Cal. 595.

In the consideration of this principle the rule is to be remembered that the practice of the Federal courts conforms as nearly as practicable to that of the courts of the State in which they sit. This rule cannot be held to apply to such an extent as to allow the holder of any equitable title to assert it in a court of law as against the holder of a patent. The language in the case of Bagnell v. Broderick, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 436, conclusively establishes this principle; there the court say: "Congress has the sole power to declare the effect and precedence of titles to the public lands emanating from the United States, and whatever may be the equities outstanding in third parties, the patentee has a legal title and the State law cannot confer upon the equitable owner the right to maintain ejectment against the patentee." See also Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 498.

The case of O'Brien v. Perry, 1 Black (U. S.) 132, is apt to appear to militate against the principles announced in Bagnell v. Broderick, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 436, but a closer study will show that it does not. The case was an action at law by the patentee to recover possession, and it was held that according to the practice of the Supreme Court of Missouri, it was competent for the defendant to set up a prior equitable title in bar of the suit, in the State court.

In Arkansas, it has been held that an entry with the register of the United States Land Office in accordance with a law authorizing him to act, and a receipt of the purchase money by the proper officer, although no patent be issued, vests such title and legal interest as enables a purchaser to maintain ejectment. Trulock v. Taylor, 26 Ark. 54.

So also in Wisconsin, it is held that the grantee or assignee on a certifi-

A patent once issued, having been duly signed, countersigned, and delivered, cannot be recalled, nor can it be canceled by any act of the government officers, nor can it be collaterally impeached in an action at law. The only remedy where it has been fraudulently obtained is by bill in equity in the name of the United States.¹ Title by patent from the United States is title by record, and though it is usual to deliver a patent to the claimant, as in case of all other deeds, yet delivery of it is not necessary in order to give it effect.²

cate for entry of land at the government land office has a "valid subsisting interest" in the land to which the right in possession, is incident, and upon which he may maintain ejectment. McLane v. Bovee, 35 Wis. 22.

But in all cases the principle must be considered as established beyond controversy, for in no Federal court can an action of ejectment be maintained by the holder of the equitable title as against the holder of a patent from the United States.

1. Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 530; Hughes v. U. S., 4 Wall. (U. S.) 232; Quinn v. Chapman, 111 U. S. 445; St. Louis Smelting etc. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636; U. S. v. Marshall Silver Min. Co., 129 U. S. 579; Gilmore v. Sapp, 100 Ill. 297; Webber v. Pere Marquette Boom Co., 62 Mich. 626.

"A patent is the highest evidence of title and is conclusive until annulled by a judicial tribunal." U. S. v. Stone, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 535; Bagnell v. Broderick, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 450.

After a patent for public land is issued by the Land Department, delivered and accepted by the grantee, all control by the executive department of the government over the title ceases. Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 530; Warren v. Van Brunt, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 646; Bicknell v. Comstock, 113 U. S. 149; and a subsequent destruction or mutilation of this record by such department does not in the least impair its validity. Bicknell v. Comstock, 113 U. S. 149.

Where a patent issued in the name of James B by a mistake on a purchase by John B, was never delivered to James B but was delivered to the true purchaser, the Commissioner of the General Land Office has power to cancel the patent and issue a new one in the name of John B, since the power to correct the clerical mistake is a necessary incident to the administration of the department. The latter patent vested the title in John B superior to that of a prior purchaser on execution sale against James B. Bell v. Hearne, 19 How. (U. S.) 252 (reversing 10 La. Ann. 515). See also Le Roy v. Clayton, 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 502; Marsh v. Nichols, 128 U. S. 605, where the case of Bell v. Hearne is cited and approved.

A court of equity will vacate a patent of the United States for a tract of land, obtained by mistake of the officers of the land office, to the end that a clear title may be transferred to the previous purchaser, upon a bill filed for that purpose by the United States. Hughes v. U. S., 4 Wall. (U. S.) 232.

A Seeming Exception.—"But it has always been held," says Justice Miller, in delivering the opinion of the court in the case of Sherman v. Buick, 93 U. S. 209, "that an absolute want of power to issue a patent can be shown in a court of law to defeat a title set up under it, though where it is merely voidable the party may be compelled to resort to a court of equity to have it so declared. Stoddard v. Chambers, 2 How. (U. S.) 317; Easton v. Salisbury, 21 How. (U. S.) 426; Reichart v. Felps, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 160." Therefore, testimony whether parol or documentary which shows a want of power in officers to issue a patent, is admissible at law to defeat a title set up under it, in which case his patent is not merely voidable but absolutely void, and the party is not obliged to resort to a court of equity to have it so declared. Sherman v. Buick, 93 U. S. 209; Patterson v. Tatum, 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 164.

2. U. S. v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 378; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137. In this latter case the court in the course of its opinion has to say: "In all cases of letters patent certain solemnities are required by law, which solemnities are the evidences of the validity of the instrument. A formal

A patent being the mere evidence of a grant, the officer who issues it acts ministerially and not judicially.¹ It would seem, therefore, that a mandamus would lie in favor of the party entitled to such patent to compel its issuance;² such, however, is not always the case. It is certain that since every patent is required to be signed by the President, no mandamus can issue to the Commissioner of the Land Office, or to the Secretary of the Interior, to cause either of them to issue such patent;³ though they may be required to prepare it and to lay it before the President for his signature.⁴ And in all cases a mandamus will lie to have a patent already issued delivered to the party entitled to it.⁵ The interest possessed by the holder of an equitable estate in public land is not such as will enable him to oust those who are in possession of the land, even though they be there without title, or in other words, are mere naked trespassers. The only course is for the complainant to perfect his title by obtaining a patent, after which he may proceed by an action at law to recover the possession.⁶

delivery to the person is not among them." See also Green v. Liter, 8 Cranch (U. S.) 229; Ex parte Kuhtman, 3 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 257; Donner v. Palmer, 31 Cal. 500; LeRoy v. Jamison, 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 369; Gillmore v. Sapp, 100 Ill. 297.

1. U. S. v. Stone, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 525.

2. This would follow from the general principle governing the issue of a writ of mandamus; namely, that wherever there is no other remedy for the injured party and no discretion vested in the officer as to the performance of a duty, but such duty is a purely ministerial one, he may be compelled to perform it by means of a mandamus. See MANDAMUS, vol. 14, pp. 98, 99; 4 Minor's Insts. 500.

3. Cox v. McGarrahan, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 298; U. S. v. Commissioner, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 563.

U. S. Rev. Stat., § 450 requires patents for lands to be signed by the President, either in person, or in his name by a secretary under his direction. McGarrahan v. New Idria Min. Co., 96 U. S. 316.

By reason of such requirement it is plain therefore that no proceeding by mandamus or otherwise can be had to compel either the Commissioner of the General Land Office or the Secretary of the Interior to issue such a patent. Cox v. McGarrahan, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 298; McCluny v. Silliman, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 369.

4. This has not been in terms decided. It would seem to follow, however, from the decision rendered in Butterworth v. U. S., 112 U. S. 50, that a mandamus would issue to compel the Commissioner of Patents to prepare a patent, to countersign it, and to lay it before the Secretary of the Interior for his signature, the Commissioner having decided that the relator was entitled to it. It would seem also to follow from the decision mentioned above in the case of U. S. v. Stone, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 525, where it was said that the issuing of a patent was a ministerial and not a judicial duty.

Much confusion is apt to follow from a hasty examination of the cases, since in one the issuing of a patent is declared to be a ministerial duty and in another it is doubted whether such issuance can be enforced by mandamus; but the rules as above stated seem to involve the whole doctrine upon the subject.

5. U. S. v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 378; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137; Kendall v. U. S., 12 Pet. (U. S.) 524; Decatur v. Paulding, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 497; Comm'rs of Patents v. Whiteley, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 522; McCluny v. Silliman, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 369; U. S. v. Stone, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 525; MANDAMUS, vol. 14, pp. 142, 143.

6. The case of Fussell v. Gregg, 113 U. S. 550, is the leading case upon the subject. It was there held that where the complainant has an equitable estate in fee in the premises in dispute, and the defendants are in possession

The patent for lands must be executed strictly in the manner provided by statute. Every integral part of the execution is essential to its perfection, and before it can operate as a grant, the last formalities of the law prescribed for its execution must be complied with.¹ Like other deeds, it is also necessary that it be without title, in other words are mere naked trespassers, a court of equity has no jurisdiction to oust the defendants and put in possession the claimant, the relief being such as a court of law is competent to grant; the court urging the point that the complainant could turn the defendants out of possession only upon the strength of the legal title, and that, therefore, his only remedy was first to acquire the legal title, and having done this, to bring his action in a court of law. The opinion in this case is sustained by Galt v. Galloway, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 332; Hipp v. Babin, 19 How. (U. S.) 271; Parker v. Winnipiseogee etc. Mfg. Co., 2 Black (U. S.) 545; Grand-Chute v. Winnegar, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 355; Lewis v. Cocks, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 466; Killian v. Ebbinghaus, 110 U. S. 568; Fussell v. Hughes, 113 U. S. 565.

In Fussell v. Gregg, 113 U. S. 550, the court by Woods, J., observed: "The case as alleged is that she had an equitable estate in fee in the premises and that the defendants . . . are in possession without title—in other words, are mere naked trespassers. The theory of her appeal seems to be that because she has an equitable title only, and for that reason could not recover in an action at law, a court of equity has jurisdiction of her case; but this is plainly an error. Mr. Justice Bradley in Young v. Porter, 3 Wood (U. S.) 342."

1. Form and Style of Patent.—McGarrahan v. New Idria Min. Co., 96 U. S. 316.

Therefore, the record to prove a valid patent must show that all the provisions of the law were complied with. The patent must be signed in the name of the President, either by himself or his secretary, sealed with the seal of the General Land Office, and countersigned by the recorder. This countersigning by the recorder cannot be considered as merely directory; the record of a patent is not equivalent to its countersignature. McGarrahan v. New Idria Min. Co., 96 U. S. 316. See also U. S. Rev. Stat., § 450, where the President is authorized to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, a special secretary whose duty it shall be to sign in his name and for him all patents for lands sold or granted under the authority of the United States.

Officers of the Land Department have no authority to insert in a patent any other terms than those of conveyance, with recitals to show compliance with the law, and every unauthorized insertion is void. Deffebach v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 392; Francoeur v. Newhouse, 40 Fed. Rep. 618.

The purchaser of a title under a patent is chargeable with notice of whatever the patent recites. U. S. v. Maxwell Land-Grant Co., 21 Fed. Rep. 19.

In the case of Hall v. Martin (Ky. 1889), 11 S. W. Rep. 953, a patent described the specific boundaries of the land patented, as much so as the courses and distances in an ordinary deed, stated the number of acres, and excluded therefrom the number of acres contained in prior grants (being 210½ acres). It was claimed that because the exclusions were not described so as to be identified by boundary, etc., the patent was void for uncertainty. But it was held otherwise. See also Hamilton v. Fugett, 81 Ky. 366; Hillman v. Hurley, 82 Ky. 626.

State Patents.—The requirements of the various States as to the form and requisites of a patent vary. It is usually made necessary that the governor sign it, and that the great seal of the State be affixed.

A Mississippi statute required that the "patent shall be signed by the governor, and attested by the secretary of state, with the great seal of the State.

It was held that under this, a patent signed by the governor and sealed with the great seal was valid though not signed by the secretary of state. Exum v. Brister, 35 Miss. 391.

And in New York it was held that a patent without the governor's signature was valid if sealed with the great seal. The fact of the seal being attached was considered as evidence that the patent had been approved by the governor. People v. Livingston, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 253.

In Arkansas patents are to be signed recorded. A failure to record, however, does not defeat the grant, but only deprives the party of one of the means of making his proof; he can still maintain his rights under it by the production of the patent itself.¹

A patent for land is the highest evidence of title, and is conclusive as against the government, and all claiming under junior patents or titles, until set aside or annulled, unless it be absolutely void upon its face;² and the presumption is always that it is valid and properly executed and passes a legal title.³

There is one case and only one in which it may be attacked collaterally in a court of law, and that is where it is absolutely void upon its face; as where the issuing of it was without authority of law, or in violation of law.⁴

The right to a patent once vested is treated by the government, when dealing with the land, as equivalent to a patent already issued, and when in fact it does issue it relates back to the incepby the governor and sealed with the great seal of the State. State v. Morgan, 52 Ark. 150.

1. McGarrahan v. New Idria Min. Co., 96 U. S. 316.

2. It would seem, however, that this does not influence in the least the requirements in the several States that all deeds to real property of whatever character must be recorded in order to be binding against subsequent bona fide purchasers for value. The record spoken of is the record of the General Land Office. See Love v. Simms, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 516.

3. U. S. v. Stone, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 525; Bagnele v. Broderick, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 450; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 72; Gibson v. Chouteau, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 92; Warren v. Van Brunt, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 646; Hodper v. Scheimer, 23 How. (U. S.) 235; St. Louis Smelting etc. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636; Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 498.

Confirmation of Grants by Congress.—If a tract confirmed by Congress has clearly defined boundaries or is capable of identification, the confirmation perfects the claimant's title, and a subsequent patent serves only as a documentary evidence of that title. Morrow v. Whitney, 95 U. S. 551; Whitney v. Morrow, 112 U. S. 693.

A patent once issued remains good as to all the world until canceled for fraud in an action brought by the United States government; and in a collateral proceeding cannot be attacked or assailed unless void on its face. Turner v. Donnelly, 70 Cal. 597; Sanford

v. Sanford (Oregon, 1887), 13 Pac. Rep. 602.

3. Minter v. Crommelin, 18 How. (U. S.) 87.

But in a suit brought by the United States to cancel a patent for fraud on the part of the government officials; for example, where they are charged with having procured its issue to a fictitious person, there is no presumption of the regularity of the proceedings preliminary to the issue of such patent. Moffat v. U. S., 112 U. S. 24.

Compare U. S. v. Silver Min. Co. 128 U. S. 678.

And the presumptions which arise in support of a patent for public land, issued by a State, can have no force in face of the facts that the State selection of the same was originally void, and that the selection has been invalidated by Congress. Chant v. Reynolds, 49 Cal. 213.

4. Rice v. Minnesota etc. R. Co., 1 Black (U. S.) 360; Polk v. Wendal, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 99; Polk v. Wendell, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 303; Doe v. Wynn, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 388.

It is sometimes said that there are additional cases in which a patent may be attacked collaterally in a court of law; for example, where it is prohibited by statute, or where the State had no title. Rice v. Minnesota etc. R. Co., 1 Black (U. S.) 360; but these may be more properly considered as being but particular applications of the rule stated above. See also upon this subject, Stoddard v. Chambers, 2 How. (U. S.) 284; U. S. v. Stone, 2 Wall. (U. S.)

tion of the right of the patentee, so far as it may be necessary to cut off all intervening claimants.¹

All patents for lands which have been previously granted, reserved for sale, or appropriated, are void.² Likewise, patents issued to fictitious parties do not transfer the title, and no one, not even a subsequent bona fide purchaser for value, can derive any right under a conveyance to such fictitious patentee.³

As before stated, a patent is nothing more nor less than a deed in which the United States is the grantor and the patentee is the grantee, and therefore the rules applicable to the interpretation and construction of these generally are to govern also in the case of patents.⁴ In the exercise of equity jurisdiction courts may inquire into the allegations of fraud or mistake leading to the issue of a patent to one person when it should have been issued to another, and where it so appears may decree the legal title to be held in trust for the party equitably entitled to the land.⁵ A 525; St. Louis Smelting etc. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636.

1. Starks v. Starrs, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 402; Gibson v. Chouteau, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 92; Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 330; Lessieur v. Price, 12 How. (U. S.) 59; Flint etc. R. Co. v. Gordon, 41 Mich. 420; Astrom v. Hamlin, 3 McLean (U. S.) 107; U. S. v. Freyberg, 32 Fed. Rep. 195; French v. Spencer, 21 How. (U. S.) 228.

This rests partly upon the equitable maxim that "equity regards that as done which ought to have been done." See EQUITY, vol. 6, p. 705, and cases cited.

Therefore where a party aliened his equitable interest in the land after entry and prior to the issue of the patent, the issue of the patent to him vested in him the legal title to the land in trust for the other. The patent relates back to the act erecting the equitable title. Callahan v. Davis, 90 Mo. 78; Landes v. Brant, 10 How. (U. S.) 372; Touchard v. Crow, 20 Cal. 160; Ford v. French, 72 Mo. 250.

2. Morton v. Nebraska, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 660; Relchert v. Felps, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 160; U. S. v. Stone, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 525; Polk v. Wendal, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 87; Polk v. Wendell, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 293; Doe v. Winn, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 380; Stoddard v. Chambers, 2 How. (U. S.) 284; Minter v. Crommelin, 18 How. (U. S.) 87; Rice v. Minnesota etc. R. Co., 1 Black (U. S.) 360; Francoeur v. Newhouse, 40 Fed. Rep. 618.

3. Moffat v. U. S., 112 U. S. 24. And since such a patent conveys no title, one claiming under a purchase from the pretended patentee can take none. Moffat v. U. S., 112 U. S. 27.

4. Thus a patent is to be interpreted as a whole, and the various provisions in connection with each other, and the legal deductions drawn therefrom are to be conformable with the document. Brown v. Huger, 21 How. (U. S.) 305; U. S. v. Stone, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 525.

The court cannot go beyond the specific terms used in a patent for a grant of land and determine the tract and quantity of the land by a supposed equity arising out of the preemption laws. Gazzam v. Phillips, 20 How. (U. S.) 372 (disapproving Brown v. Clements, 3 How. (U. S.) 650).

All the presumptions which apply in favor of a deed or other sealed instrument apply also in the case of a patent. Minter v. Crommelin, 18 How. (U. S.) 87; DEEDS, vol. 5, p. 423.

5. Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 72; Rose v. Richmond Min. Co., 17 Nev. 25; Plummer v. Brown, 70 Cal. 544.

Thus, the locator of an agricultural scrip on a certain quarter section knew that by mistake a prior purchaser's application had been misdescribed that certain correct entries had been changed to correspond with the misdescription, and that such prior purchaser had occupied the land in good faith for many years; it was held under these circumstances that the locator took his patent charged with trust in favor of such prior purchaser. Widdicombe v. Childers, 124 U. S. 400.

So also where one owning a government land warrant issued in the name patent always issues in the name of the party who is originally entitled to it. In the case of the death of such person before the patent is issued, it issues in his name to his heirs who hold it as if the patent had been issued directly to them. A special provision is made for this in most cases, for it seems that the principle is otherwise where there is no statutory provision made for it.¹ At common law a grant to a deceased party is as ineffectual to pass the title of the grantor as if made to a fictitious person.² The doctrines laid down as to the validity, character of patents, and their cancellation, etc., are founded upon general principles of law and equity, and are not peculiarly applicable to the patents from the United States alone; they apply as well to patents and other evidences of title issued by the States, and, therefore, no special doctrine need be laid down for cases of patents issued by a State.³

of another, and not assigned by him, enters land under the warrant to himself, but owing to the want of assignment makes the entry in the name of the other, the latter takes the legal title to the land as trustee for the former. Key v. Jennings, 66 Mo. 356.

But to charge the holder of a patent as a trustee it is not sufficient to show that the patent should not have issued to him, but it must also appear that it should have been awarded to the party claiming the benefit of the trust. Bohall v. Dilla, 114 U. S. 47.

Where a party has acquired as a preemption claimant the legal title to land from the United States, another preemption claimant cannot prove him a trustee and compel him to make conveyance of such legal title, unless such other has complied with the provisions of the preemption law, or was prevented from so doing by some act, by means of which the holder of the legal title acquired an undue advantage in the proceedings. Sacramento Sav. Bank v. Hynes, 50 Cal. 195.

1. Cox v. Prewitt (Ky. 1889), 10 S. W. Rep. 432; Briggs v. McClain, 43 Kan. 652. Statutory provision is made by Kentucky Gen. St., art. 1, ch. 50, by § U. S. Stat. at L. 31; 24 U. S. Stat. at L. 219, and by various other statutes.

5 U. S. Stat. at L. 31 (act of May 20, 1836), declares, "that in all cases where patents for public lands have been or may hereafter be issued, in pursuance of any law of the United States, to a person who has died or who shall hereafter die, before the date of such patent, the title to the land vested therein shall inure to and become vested in the heirs, devisees and assigns of such deceased patentee as if the patent had issued to deceased person during life." See this quoted and applied in Davenport v. Lamb, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 428.

2. Davenport v. Lamb, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 430; Galt v. Galloway, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 332; McDonald v. Smalley, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 261; Galloway v. Finley, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 298; McCracken v. Beall, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 210; Thomas v. Wyatt, 25 Mo. 26; 31 Mo. 188; 69 Am. Dec. 446, note; Lyles v. Lescher, 108 Ind. 382; Hunter v. Watson, 12 Cal. 363; 73 Am. Dec. 543; Ready v. Kearsley, 14 Mich. 225; GRANTOR AND GRANT-EE, vol. 9, p. 40.

3. In the case of Com. v. Bowman, (Ky. 1889), 11 S. W. Rep. 28, it appeared that in the settlement of the boundary line between Kentucky and Tennessee, a portion of land containing seven thousand eight hundred acres lying in Tennessee was left the property of, and subject to the disposition of Kentucky. In 1836 the State of Kentucky issued a patent to defendant's ancestors for seven thousand eight hundred acres, and nearly fifty years afterwards sued in a Kentucky court to have the patent corrected so as to convey only fourteen hundred acres, claiming that the first grant was obtained by fraudulent representations. It was held, however, that the jurisdiction of the State of Kentucky over the land was entirely exhausted by the first execution of the patent; and that the suit must be dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

VIII. CANCELLATION OF PATENTS.—In the exercise of that jurisdiction, which according to accepted principles is possessed by courts of equity, such courts have authority to examine into the validity of all patents where fraud is charged in the obtaining of them; and where it appears that in the issuing of such patents fraud or mistake was committed, a decree will be made setting them aside.¹ But while courts of equity have power to set aside, to cancel, or to correct patents or other evidences of title in cases of fraud or mistake, it can only be done upon specific averment, supported by clear and satisfactory proof.² Every intendment is to be made in favor of the patent and the general rule that

1. U. S. v. Beebe, 127 U. S. 338; Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 530; Miller v. Kerr, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; Brush v. Ware, 15 Pet. (U. S.) 93; Bodley v. Taylor, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 196; Hoofnagle v. Anderson, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 212; Attorney Genl. v. Vernon, 1 Vern. 277.

U. S. v. Williams, 30 Fed. Rep. 309; U. S. v. Pratt Coal etc. Co., 18 Fed. Rep. 708; U. S. v. White, 17 Fed. Rep. 561; U. S. v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 68; U. S. v. San Jacinto Tin Co., 125 U. S. 273; Colorado Coal etc. Co. v. U. S., 123 U. S. 307; Vance v. Burbank, 101 U. S. 514; Smith v. Ewing, 23 Fed. Rep. 741; Garland v. Wynn, 20 How. (U. S.) 6; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 72; Warren v. Van Brunt, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 648; Lee v. Johnson, 116 U. S. 48; U. S. v. Minor, 114 U. S. 233; Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 330; U. S. v. Maxwell Land-Grant Co., 121 U. S. 325; Meador v. Norton, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 442.

Also where a party claims that his title is superior to that of the patentee on account of fraud and deceit practiced by such patentee in obtaining it, his only remedy is by a bill in equity; he cannot set up such facts in an ejectment suit. Steel v. St. Louis Smelting etc. Co., 106 U. S. 447; Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 530.

A land patent fraudulently obtained from the government by one knowing that another person has a prior right to the land may be set aside by an information in the nature of a bill in equity filed by the attorney of the United States for the district in which the land lies, although a simple bill in equity by the United States would be a more proper remedy. U. S. v. Hughes, 11 How. (U. S.) 552.

In no case have the officers of the land department any power to cancel or set aside a patent after it has once issued. Upon its issuance a patent passes completely beyond the scope of their jurisdiction. Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 530; Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 340; Field v. Seabury, 19 How. (U. S.) 323.

The United States circuit court is without jurisdiction of a suit attacking for fraud the action of a patentee of public land and the officers of the land department, where the plaintiff does not claim an equitable interest in the land, but merely avers that such action has deprived him of an appeal from a decision of the Land Department touching his own claims. Craig v. Leitensdorfer, 123 U. S. 189. See also Garland v. Wynn, 20 How. (U. S.) 6.

2. A mere preponderance of evidence is not sufficient. U. S. v. Maxwell Land-Grant Co., 121 U. S. 325; 122 U. S. 365; Colorado Coal etc. Co. v. U. S., 123 U. S. 307; U. S. v. Atherton, 102 U. S. 372; U. S. v. Wenz, 34 Fed. Rep. 154; Vance v. Burbank, 101 U. S. 514; U. S. v. Hancock, 133 U. S. 193; Stockbridge Iron Co. v. Hudson Iron Co., 107 Mass. 290; Story's Eq. Jur., § 157.

In the case of Atlantic Delaine Co. v. James, 94 U. S. 207, Mr. Justice Strong, in delivering the opinion of the court, observes: "Canceling an executed contract is an exertion of the most extraordinary power of a court of equity. The power ought not to be exercised except in a fair case, and never for an alleged fraud, unless the fraud be made clearly to appear; never for alleged false representations, unless their falsity is certainly proved, and unless the complainant has been deceived and injured by them." Quoted and approved in U. S. v. Maxwell Land-Grant Co., 121 U. S. 380.

When a sale has been set aside and fraud is never to be presumed, and that officers are to be presumed to have done their duty applies in all its force.¹

Where the government is under obligations to issue a patent to the rightful owner of the land, the Attorney-General may institute a suit in equity in the name of the United States to annul a patent obtained by fraud on the part of the patentee;² but such suit is brought only where the United States has an interest and not for the purpose of benefiting one of two rival claimants, to neither of whom the United States owes any obligation in the premises.³

The frauds for which a bill in equity will be sustained to set aside a patent are frauds extrinsic or collateral to the matter tried by the first tribunal, and not the fraud which was in issue in a previous suit; and it must also appear that such frauds affected the determination of the tribunal so that but for them the case would have been decided in the complainant's favor.⁴

the surrender of the patent required by the school land commissioners on account of fraud and deceit having been practiced; and the land has again been sold and a second patent issued, the latter patentee may sustain a bill in equity to have the first patent canceled if the holder of such patent refuse to give it up; and may enjoin him from asserting title to the land. Burrows v. Rutledge, 76 Wis. 22; Putnam v. Rutledge, 76 Wis. 29.

In the case of Lyman v. U. S. Ins. Co., 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 632, the court by Kent, Ch., said: "The cases which treat of this head of equity jurisdiction all require a mistake to be made out in the most clear and decided manner and to the entire satisfaction of the court."

1. U. S. v. San Jacinto Tin Co., 125 U. S. 273; Minter v. Crommelin, 18 How. (U. S.) 87; Colorado Coal etc. Co. v. U. S., 123 U. S. 307; FRAUD, vol. 8, p. 635; U. S. v. Marshal Silver Min. Co., 129 U. S. 579.

Fraud on the part of officers of the Land Department and others is never to be presumed, but must be clearly proved, and it is a circumstance weighing strongly in favor of the validity of the patent that at every stage the survey was contested. U. S. v. San Jacinto Tin Co., 125 U. S. 273; Stringer v. Young, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 320; Patterson v. Jenks, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 216.

This rule applies as well in case of patents issued by a State as when issued by the United States. Hebbron v. Graves, 78 Cal. 380; Fuller v. Codrington, 74 Tex. 334.

2. U. S. v. Beebe, 17 Fed. Rep. 36; affirmed 127 U. S. 338; Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 535; U. S. v. Pratt Coal etc. Co., 18 Fed. Rep. 708; U. S. v. Williams, 30 Fed. Rep. 309; U. S. v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 68.

The United States if not a real party in such actions is affected by the laches of those whose interests it asserts, and a neglect until forty-five years after the cause of action has accrued is a bar to the action. U. S. v. Beebe, 127 U. S. 338.

Such a bill in equity by the United States (i. e., one to set aside a patent) is not to be treated as a writ of error or as a petition for a rehearing in chancery, or as if it were a mere re-trial of the case as it was before the land office, with such additional proof as the parties may be able to furnish. U. S. v. Marshal Silver Min. Co., 129 U. S. 579.

Where the only objection to a patent is that it is void for excess, the question is one exclusively between the United States and the patentee, and in which no third party can interfere. Webber v. Pere Marquette Boom Co., 62 Mich. 626.

3. U. S. v. San Jacinto Tin Co., 125 U. S. 273.

4. U. S. v. White, 17 Fed. Rep. 561; U. S. v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 68; U. S. v. San Jacinto Tin Co., 125 U. S. 273; Steel v. St. Louis Smelting etc. Co., 106 U. S. 447; Stringer v. Young, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 320; Craig v. Leitensdorfer, 123 U. S. 189; Patterson v. Jenks, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 216.

To obtain relief upon the ground of fraud it must appear that a party was prevented thereby from exhibiting his

Where a patent has been wrongfully issued to one not entitled to it, the United States is not the only party who may file a bill to have such patent canceled; but any one claiming adversely as a purchaser or as a donee of the United States may maintain a suit for that purpose.¹

A patent can only be set aside in favor of those whose title was at the time such as to enable them to resist successfully any action of the government respecting it.² It will be observed that when a patent is merely voidable, which is the case when the land officers are guilty of fraud or mistake in issuing it, it is necessary to proceed by bill in equity in order to have it canceled; but where such patent is absolutely void, as, for example, through lack of authority in the officers to issue it, or when the defect is apparent on its face, it may be declared void in a court of law even in a collateral proceeding.³

case fully to the Department, so that it may properly be said that there was never a decision in a real contest about the subject-matter of inquiry. An allegation in a bill of equity that false testimony was submitted is not sufficient where the party had opportunity to meet it and took all the appeals which the law affords. Vance v. Burbank, 101 U. S. 514.

In the case of Lee v. Johnson, 116 U. S. 48, the doctrine is clearly and distinctly laid down that it is not enough that fraud and imposition have been practiced upon the Land Department, or that false testimony or fraudulent documents have been presented; it must appear that they affected its determination, which otherwise would have been in favor of the plaintiff. And this decision is also supported by the principle that to entitle a party to relief in equity against a patent, he must show a better right to the land than the patentee, and not merely prove that the patentee is not entitled to it. Sparks v. Pierce, 115 U. S. 408; Bohall v. Dilla, 114 U. S. 47; U. S. v. Minor, 114 U. S. 233; Gibson v. Chouteau, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 92.

1. The language of Justice Miller in the case of Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 530, is somewhat misleading where he observes, that in case a lawful reason exists why the patent should be canceled or rescinded, the appropriate and only remedy is by a bill in chancery brought by the government.

But it seems that any party who is a contestant claimant for the land may have appropriate relief in a court of equity, and may himself institute proceedings to obtain such relief. Lee v. Summers, 2 Oregon 268; Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 530; Doe v. Winn, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 380; Bagnell v. Broderick, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 436.

In the case of Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 340, the court by Field, J., observes: "If they (the land officers) err in the construction of law applicable to any case, or a fraud is practiced upon them . . . their rulings may be reversed and annulled by the courts when a controversy arises between private parties founded upon their decisions."

2. Moore v. Wilkinson, 13 Cal. 488; Waterman v. Smith, 13 Cal. 373; Lee v. Summers, 2 Oregon 260.

3. 2 Minor's Inst. 900; Sherman v. Buick, 93 U. S. 209; Stoddard v. Chambers, 2 How. (U. S.) 317; Easton v. Salisbury, 21 How. (U. S.) 426; Reichart v. Phelps, 33 Ill. 439; affirmed 6 Wall. (U. S.) 160; Blankenpickler v. Anderson, 16 Gratt. (Va.) 62; Masters v. Eastis, 3 Port. (Ala.) 368; 2 Lom. Dig. 514; Simmons v. Wagner, 101 U. S. 260; 3 Washburne on Real Prop. 175; Cooper v. Roberts, 6 McLean (U. S.) 93.

The doctrine is thus stated in 2 Minor's Inst. 897: "When a false suggestion, mistake, or irregularity appears on the face of the grant, it is absolutely void, and may be declared so to be in whatever court it is adduced as an evidence of title. So it seems that it may be impeached in a court of law for any matter which makes it absolutely void, as where the State has no title to the thing granted, where the officer had no authority to

It is a doctrine well established and grounded on accepted principles, that whenever a sovereign appears in a court as a suppliant for its aid, it becomes subject to all those rules of equity which govern in the case of private litigants.¹ So that when the United States or a State files a bill in equity to cancel a patent for fraud or mistake in its issuance, it must comply with the equitable maxim, "he who asks equity must do it" and offer a return of the purchase money.² Also, though it is a general rule that the Statute of Limitations does not run so as to bar the claims of the sovereign, still if in a particular case equitable principles forbid the granting of relief, not sought until years after issue the grant, or where the grantee was dead at the time of the issuing of it. But for causes anterior to its being issued which render it voidable merely and which are not apparent on its face, it appears to be impeachable only by scire facias or bill in equity." Hambleton v. Wells, 4 Call (Va.) 213; Stringer v. Young, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 341; White v. Jones, 4 Call (Va.) 253; 2 Am. Dec. 564; Alexander v. Greenup, 1 Munf. (Va.) 134; 4 Am. Dec. 541; Polk v. Wendal, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 87; 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 293; Doe v. Winn, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 380; Witherington v. McDonald, 1 Hen. & M. (Va.) 306.

A patent issued in violation of law is void and may be shown to be so in a court of law. Hic-tuk-ho-mi v. Watts, 7 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 363; Dixon v. Porter, 23 Miss. 84.

1. U. S. v. Beebee, 17 Fed. Rep. 36; 127 U. S. 338; Mitchell v. U. S., 9 Pet. (U. S.) 711; U. S. v. Smith, 94 U. S. 217; The Siren, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 159; Brent v. Bank of Washington, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 615; People v. Clark, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 120; 9 A. G. Op. 204; Mayor of Hull v. Horner, 1 Cowp. 110; Pomeroy's Eq., § 388.

In the case of U. S. v. Smith, 94 U. S. 217, it is observed that "the principles which govern inquiries as to the conduct of individuals in respect to their contracts, are equally applicable where the United States is a party."

In State v. Snyder, 66 Tex. 687, it is said: "There are many authorities to the effect that a State or other sovereignty when it becomes a litigant in its own courts, must have its rights determined by the same principles applicable to other litigants. That such is the correct rule there can be no doubt.

... In no country governed by law could the right of the sovereign and the subject be determined by diverse principles." Citing U. S. v. MacDaniel, 7 Pet. (U. S.) 1; The Floyd Acceptances, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 675; State v. Kroner, 2 Tex. 492; State v. Purcell, 16 Tex. 305.

2. "An individual . . . would be compelled to do equity before he could enforce his legal right; and we can perceive no reason why the United States should be exempted from the fundamental rule of equity, subject to which its courts administer their remedy." Brent v. Bank of Washington, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 615.

The most important rule derived from the application of this maxim is that Upon Cancellation of Patent Purchase Money Must be Returned.—In the case of State v. Morgan, 52 Ark. 150, it was held that a complaint in equity by which the State seeks to cancel its own patent and recover possession of the land, covered by it, on the ground that fraud was used in its procurement, is insufficient, unless it offers to restore to the defendant the purchase money and taxes paid by him and to pay the value of his improvements less the rents and profits, with which he ought to be charged. All this on the ground that "he who asks equity must do it." See also Baymore v. Mullins, 52 Ark. 207, 211; U. S. v. State Nat. Bank, 96 U. S. 30; Terrill v. Dewitt, 20 Tex. 260; U. S. v. Beebee, 17 Fed. Rep. 36; 127 U. S. 338; U. S. v. Smith, 94 U. S. 217; Mitchell v. U. S., 9 Pet. (U. S.) 711; U. S. v. Budd, 43 Fed. Rep. 630; EQUITY, vol. 6, p. 707; Whelan v. Reilly, 61 Mo. 656; Stull v. Harris, 51 Ark. 294; Ellis v. Ellis, 54 Ala. 348. And it seems that this case correctly states the doctrine, since as already shown, the same rules of equity are to govern a State or sovereignty which comes into a court of justice as a private party. Pomeroy's Eq., § 388; Terrill v. Dewitt, 20 Texas 260; U. S. v.

the right to obtain such relief had accrued, a court of equity will refuse the application of the sovereign made under such conditions.¹

IX. SCHOOL LANDS.—By several acts, passed at various times, Congress has granted to each of certain Territories, usually those Beebe, 17 Fed. Rep. 36, 41; 127 U. S. 338; U. S. v. Smith, 94 U. S. 217; Mitchel v. U. S., 9 Pet. (U. S.) 711; U. S. v. Budd, 43 Fed. Rep. 630; EQUITY, vol. 6, p. 707; Wheelan v. Reilly, 61 Mo. 565; Stull v. Harris, 51 Ark. 294; Ellis v. Ellis, 84 Ala. 348.

This principle was also maintained in the case of People v. Bryan, 73 Cal. 376. It was there declared that no suit could be maintained for the cancellation of a patent on account of an innocent mistake in the procedure, unless an offer was made to return the purchase money. It did not, however, necessarily, confine the rule to cases of innocent mistake. See also, People v. Morris, 77 Cal. 208; U. S. v. White, 9 Sawy. (U. S.) 131; 17 Fed. Rep. 561.

The case of State v. Snyder, 66 Tex. 687, does not, as is sometimes maintained, militate against this principle. The constitutional provision that no money shall be drawn from the Treasury but in pursuance of specific appropriations made by law," was held up as one reason why the purchase money could not in that case be returned; the language in Treasurer v. Wygall (46 Tex. 465) was cited: "The key that unlocks the State Treasury is an act of the legislature directing the thing to be done which is demanded and not the judgment of a court, founded on any equitable consideration.

This case (Texas v. Snyder) itself recognizes and approves the doctrine that a sovereign seeking remedies in a court of equity must be governed by the same rules as private parties, and cites many cases to sustain that view.

The case of the United States v. Minor is sometimes cited in opposition to the statement of the text. It was certainly decided in that case that in the particular instance involved no return or offer of return of the purchase money was necessary, but it was because the purchase money was, by virtue of § 2262 of Revised Statutes, forfeited as a penalty for false swearing. U. S. v. Minor, 114 U. S. 233; U. S. Rev Stat., § 2262.

1. U. S. v. Beebe, 17 Fed. Rep. 36; 127 U. S. 388; Maxwell v. Kennedy, 8 How. (U. S.) 221; Clarke v. Boorman, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 509; Badger v. Badger, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 94; Boone v. Chiles, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 248; Wilson v. Anthony, 19 Ark. 16 (cited and approved in Sullivan v. Portland etc. R. Co., 94 U. S. 806); Harwood v. Cincinnati etc. R. Co., 17 Wall. (U. S.) 78; 2 Story's Eq., § 1520.

The equity courts adopt their own rule rather than the statutory limitation in such cases. Thus it is said in Badger v. Badger, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 94: "But there is a defense peculiar to courts of equity, founded on lapse of time and the staleness of the claim, where no Statute of Limitation covers the case. In such cases courts of equity act upon their own inherent doctrine of discouraging, for the peace of society, antiquated demands, and refuse to interfere where there has been gross laches in prosecuting the claim, or long acquiescence in the assertion of adverse rights."

And this case has been cited and approved many times. Marsh v. Whitmore, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 178; Hayward v. Eliot Nat. Bank, 96 U. S. 611; Twin Lick Oil Co. v. Marbury, 91 U. S. 592.

Doctrine of This Section Restated.—The conclusions then, derived from the foregoing presentation seem to be—

1. Patents can be impeached only for fraud or mistake practiced in their issuance; or when issued without authority or in violation of law. Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 530; Rice v. Minnesota etc. R. Co., 1 Black (U. S.) 360; U. S. v. Beebe, 127 U. S. 338; U. S. v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 68.

2. Patents issued fraudulently or by mistake are voidable merely and can only be impeached by a direct proceeding in equity. U. S. v. Beebe, 127 U. S. 338; Miller v. Kerr, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; U. S. v. Maxwell Land-Grant Co., 121 U. S. 325.

3. Patents issued without authority or in violation of law being utterly void may be collaterally attacked in a court of law. 2 Minor's Insts. 800; Sherman v. Buick, 93 U. S. 209; Simmons v. Wagener, 101 U. S. 260; Stringer v. Young, about to become States, a portion of the public lands within its boundaries for the use of the public schools. The portion granted has most often been the sixteenth section of each township, though in several cases both the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections have been granted.¹ And it is always provided that in case such section or sections have already been taken up under pre-emption, homestead or other laws, other portions of the public land may be taken in lieu thereof.²

3 Pet. (U. S.) 341; St. Louis etc. Smelting Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636.

4. The bill in equity to set aside a patent issued by the United States is filed by the Attorney General in the name of the United States. U. S. v. San Jacinto Tin Co., 125 U. S. 273; U. S. v. Beebe, 17 Fed. Rep. 36; affirmed 127 U. S. 338.

5. That the United States or a State appearing in a court of equity to have a patent canceled becomes subject to all rules which govern private litigants.

1. By § 1946 of the Revised Statutes it is provided that sections sixteen and thirty-six of each township in the Territories of New Mexico, Utah, Colorado, Dakota, Arizona, Idaho, Montana and Wyoming are to be reserved for the purpose of being applied to the public schools of such Territories, or of the States to be created out of them. By § 1947 the same provision is made as to Washington Territory. U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 1946-7; Ferry v. Street, 4 Utah 521.

Sections sixteen and thirty-six of each township were granted to California and Nevada. Ivanhoe Min. Co. v. Keystone Consolidated Min. Co., 102 U. S. 167; Natoma Water etc. Co. v. Bugbey, 96 U. S. 165; Heydenfeldt v. Daney Gold etc. Min. Co., 93 U. S. 634 (Nevada).

Upon their admission to the Union, Congress granted to each of the States of Indiana, Michigan, Missouri, Ohio, Wisconsin and others the sixteenth section of each township for school purposes. See Springfield v. Quick, 22 How. (U. S.) 56 (Indiana); Vincennes University v. Indiana, 14 How. (U. S.) 268; Cooper v. Roberts, 18 How. (U. S.) 173 (Michigan); Hedrick v. Hughes, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 123 (Missouri); Ham v. Missouri, 18 How. (U. S.) 126; Dickins v. Mahana, 21 How. (U. S.) 276 (Ohio); Beecher v. Wetherby, 95 U. S. 517 (Wisconsin).

See also Kissell v. St. Louis Public Schools, 18 How. (U. S.) 19; St. Louis

Public Schools v. Walker, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 282.

By act of March 3, 1803 (2 Stat. at L. 229), a grant of the sixteenth section in each township of the public land south of Tennessee was made for the benefit of the schools within such Territory. This included Mississippi. See Gaines v. Nicholson, 9 How. (U. S.) 356.

2. "In all cases where sections sixteen or thirty-six or either or any of them are occupied by actual settlers prior to the survey thereof, the commissioners of the counties in which the sections so occupied are situated, are authorized to locate other lands to an equal amount . . . within their respective counties in lieu of the sections so occupied." U. S. Rev. Stat., § 1947.

See also Hedrick v. Hughes, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 123; Ham v. Missouri, 18 How. (U. S.) 126; Natoma Water etc. Co. v. Bugbey, 96 U. S. 165; Heydenfeldt v. Daney Gold etc. Min. Co., 93 U. S. 634; Gaines v. Nicholson, 9 How. (U. S.) 356; Bullock v. Rouse, 81 Cal. 590.

All selections of lieu lands made by a State upon unsurveyed public lands of the United States are utterly void. And all public land of the United States is considered unsurveyed until a certified copy of the official plat of the survey has been filed in the local land office. U. S. v. Curtner, 38 Fed. Rep. 1.

A list of lands selected by the State as indemnity for the loss of school lands, prepared and certified by the General Land Office of the United States, and transmitted by it to the local land office, vests the title to the lands in the State as effectually as a patent, and the title so transferred relates back to the date of the selection of the land by the State. A patent is unnecessary. McCreery v. Haskell, 119 U. S. 327; Howell v. Slauson, 83 Cal. 539.

California Lands—Booth Act.—By Act of Congress passed in 1877, com-

The legislation to which these grants have given rise has been almost exclusively of a local character, the questions usually being as to the rights of contesting claimants.¹

X. TOWN SITES.—There are three methods by means of which public lands may be acquired as private property for town-site purposes :

1. The President is authorized to reserve public lands for town-site purposes on the shores of harbors, at the junction of rivers, at important portages, or in natural or prospective centers of population. Provision is made for the survey of such reservation into lots, for the appraisalment of the same, and their sale at pub-monly called the Booth Act, it was provided "that where indemnity school selections have been made and certified to the State and such selections shall fail by reason of the land in lieu of which they were taken not being included within such final survey, or a Mexican grant, or are otherwise defective, the same are hereby confirmed, and the sixteenth or thirty-sixth sections, in lieu of which selection was made, shall, upon being excluded from such final survey, be disposed of as other public lands of the United States." 19 U. S. Stat. at L. 268.

The use of the words "or are otherwise defective," shows that the intention of Congress in enacting the law was to cover any and all defects in indemnity school sections, which might have been made and certified to the State. And the act being a curative one, is, upon well settled principles of law, to receive a liberal construction. Hambleton v. Duhain, 71 Cal. 136; Howell v. Slauson, 83 Cal. 539; McCreery v. Haskell, 119 U. S. 327.

The listment to the State of a certain section in lieu of section sixteen, which was only partly within a private grant, is within the terms of the above statute, and confirmed by it; so that the subsequent cancellation of a part of the section by the Secretary of the Interior is void. Cucamonga Fruit Land Co. v. Moir, 83 Cal. 101.

Under this act, which confirms the selection of indemnity lands subject to the rights of previous bona fide settlers thereon, the question of the good faith of the previous settlers is one of fact, or one of law and fact combined, so that the decision of the Interior Department in any case involving the same is final. Green v. Hayes, 70 Cal. 276. See supra, this title, Force and Effect of Decisions of the Land Office.

1. It is held that the title to the lands granted vests in the State where the lands are surveyed, or where they are bounded or ascertained. Ferry v. Street, 4 Utah 521.

The Congressional Act making the grant in some cases provides that the reserved section shall be for the benefit of the schools in the township. This condition is not violated by a State law, apportioning its general school fund by equalizing the amount to be appropriated for the education of each pupil throughout the State, taking into the estimate the amount derived from the sixteenth section. Springfield v. Quick, 22 How. (U. S.) 56. See also Vincennes University v. Indiana, 14 How. (U. S.) 268.

Other cases which have arisen upon such grants are those previously cited under this division. See further Sherman v. Buick, 93 U. S. 209; Aurrec Oechea v. Bangs, 114 U. S. 381; U. S. v. Bisel, 8 Mont. 20.

Lands to which a preemption or homestead claim has attached are excepted from all grants, and a railroad company acquires no right in lands to which such claims have attached, even though they are afterwards abandoned. Kansas Pac. R. Co. v. Dunmeyer, 113 U. S. 629.

This principle is well illustrated in the case of Webster v. Newell, 66 Mich. 503, where land had been granted to the State in aid of railroads, and the rights of those who had settled on the lands in good faith made improvements, etc., and the title of innocent purchasers from them were by the disposition of the land found to be nugatory. An Act was immediately passed for their relief. See also Potter v. Land Commissioner, 55 Mich. 490.

lic outcry; the lands remaining unsold to be disposed of at public sale or private entry at not less than their appraised value.¹

2. Where parties have already founded, or may desire to found, a city or town on public land, they may have filed with the recorder for the county a plat of the town not exceeding six hundred and forty acres, describing its exterior boundaries, giving the name of the town, and exhibiting its streets, etc., and the measurement and area of each municipal subdivision; also with a statement of the extent and general character of the improvements, this map to be verified under oath, and within a month after its filing the verified transcript of it must be transmitted to the General Land Office, accompanied by the testimony of two witnesses that the city or town has been established in good faith. The President is then authorized to cause the lots embraced within the limits of such city or town to be offered at public sale to the highest bidder, subject to a minimum of $10 per lot; those lots remaining unsold to be subject to private entry.²

3. When any portion of the public land has been already settled upon and occupied as a town site, it is lawful for the corporate authorities, or if it be unincorporated, for the judge of the county court of the county to enter at the proper land office, and at the minimum price, the land so settled and occupied in trust for the several use and benefit of the occupants thereof, according to their respective interests. The execution of this trust as to the disposal of lots and the proceeds of their sales is to be conducted under the regulations prescribed by the legislative authority of the State or Territory in which the town is situated.³

1. U. S. Rev. St., §§ 2380-81. Gould & Tucker's Notes on Rev. St. 557, 558; 2 Copp's Public Land Laws 1007, 1011.

2. U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 2382-86; 2 Copp's Pub. Land Laws 1011.

3. U. S. Rev. St., §§ 2387-94; 2 Copp's Public Land Laws, 1012.

By virtue of these provisions, lands do not vest in municipal authorities as owners, but in conveying the lands to the individual owners, the authorities act in the execution of a power conferred by the statute. Stringfellow v. Cain, 99 U. S. 610; Burbank v. Ellis, 7 Neb. 156.

The provision that the execution of the trust is to be conducted under such rules as may be prescribed by the legislature of the State or Territory does not authorize the legislature of a Territory to change or close streets, alleys, or blocks of the town by a new survey, wherefore a lot owner who at the time of the entry has a right to ingress and egress by an alley cannot be deprived of his right by a subsequent order and conveyance of the county court. Ashby v. Hall, 119 U. S. 526. Neither can a judge in the execution of this trust establish a street over lands actually occupied as a residence. Helena v. Albertose, 8 Mont. 499.

Whenever any public land has been settled upon and occupied as a town site under the above provisions, and the town is not incorporated, it is the duty of the probate judge (he being judge of the county court in Kansas) upon being furnished with the entrance money to enter lands for the benefit of the occupants of the town site according to their respective interests. Any contract made by one of the occupants of a town site with a third person that the judge shall not so enter the land, is illegal and void. McTaggart v. Harrison, 12 Kan. 62.

When a town site is entered by the probate judge, he takes the title in trust for the occupants, and one in actual possession of a lot cannot be deprived of his right thereto by an

In no case, however, may town sites be located upon mineral lands; and if there be an entry on a town site within whose limits mineral lands are found, the entry and patent will be inoperative as to lands known at the time to be valuable for their minerals, or discovered to be such before their occupation and improvement for residence or business under the town site title.¹ Lands embraced within a town site are exempt from settlement and sale under the preemption laws but not otherwise, and if unoccupied may be located for mining or other similar purposes.²

XI. MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS RELATING TO PUBLIC LANDS.—In addition to what has already been stated, there are certain miscellaneous provisions in the statutes relative to public lands which may be noticed seriatim.

1. Timber Lands.—In order to preserve for the use of the navy timber peculiarly useful for naval purposes, the Secretary of the Navy is authorized under direction of the President to cause such vacant and unappropriated lands of the United States, as produce live oak and red cedar timbers, to be explored and selections to be made of such tracts as in his judgment may be necessary to furnish the navy with a sufficient supply.³ It is made a crime award of commissioners and a subsequent deed from the probate judge to another. Rathbone v. Sterling, 25 Kan. 444. See generally Marysville Invest. Co. v. Munson, 44 Kan. 491. By the laws of Utah (and probably of other States and Territories) the inchoate right of the cestui que trust is descendible to his heirs, or which might be conveyed or assigned. Stringfellow v. Cain, 99 U. S. 610; Hussey v. Smith, 99 U. S. 20. See also generally Townsend v. Little, 109 U. S. 504; Ming v. Foote, 9 Mont. 201; Clark v. Titus (Arizona, 1886), 11 Pac. Rep. 312.

Change of County—Two Judges.—The trust imposed upon the judge of a county in which such a town site is located is an official and not a personal one. Therefore, a town site having been patented in trust to the county judge as prescribed, the judge of a new county formed out of a part of the old one and embracing the site is the proper officer to execute the trust. Tucker v. Whittlesey, 74 Wis. 74; Whittlesey v. Hoppenyan, 72 Wis. 140.

"Occupant."—An occupant within the meaning of the town-site law is one who is a settler or resident of the town and in bona fide actual possession of the lot at the time the entry was made. One who has never been in actual possession of a lot cannot therefore be said to be an occupant of it. The occupancy must be actual and cannot be begun by an agent. It must be for residence or for business or use, and the residence, business or use must be by the claimants. There must be a subjection of the land to his will and control. Pratt v. Young, 1 Utah 347; Cain v. Young, 1 Utah 361; Lechler v. Chapin, 12 Nev. 65; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Tillman (Arizona, 1889), 21 Pac. Rep. 818. Compare Hussey v. Smith, 99 U. S. 20 (reversing 1 Utah 129).

Presumption of Proper Performance by County Judge.—Where the judge who holds land under the United States town-site act, in trust for the occupants, executes an official deed for a part of it, the presumption obtains that he did his duty in all respects by compliance with all the statutory prerequisites, and that he conveyed it to a proper party; and one not a beneficiary of the trust, but a mere stranger to the title, cannot litigate or call in question the validity or regularity of the deed in those respects. Taylor v. Winona etc. R. Co., 45 Minn. 66; Lamm v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 45 Minn. 71.

1. Deffebach v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 392; Sparks v. Pearce, 115 U. S. 408; Witherspoon v. Duncan, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 218.

2. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2258; Steel v. St. Louis Smelting etc. Co., 106 U. S. 447.

3. U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 2458–2463;

punishable by fine and imprisonment to engage, or to assist in cutting or removing from the public lands any live oak, or red cedar, or other timber, without authority;¹ this provision, however, is not to be construed so as to interfere with the rights of a

Gould & Tucker's Notes on Rev. St. 558-559; U. S. v. Garretson, 42 Fed. Rep. 22.

1. Cutting Timber on Public Lands.—An Offense.—Every such person is liable to a fine of not less than three times the value of the trees or timber so cut, destroyed or removed, and to imprisonment not exceeding twelve months: U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 2461, 4751, 5388. Act of June 3rd, 1878, set forth at length in Gould & Tucker's Notes on Rev. Stat. 558-9; 16 A. G. Op. 189; U. S. v. Norris, 41 Fed. Rep. 424.

The term "timber," as used in this section (2461) is held not to apply alone to large trees fitted for house or ship building, but includes trees of any size, character, or sort, useful in manufacturing or constructing any useful article, and it is no defense that the timber when cut was used for firewood or for charcoal. U. S. v. Stores, 14 Fed. Rep. 824.

The statute of June 3, 1878, which gave permission to the residents of Colorado, Nevada, the Territories, and other mineral districts of the United States to cut timber for certain purposes upon the mineral lands therein, does not apply to Oregon, there being no "mineral district" in that State. The subject of cutting timber on the public lands in Oregon is regulated by an act of the same date, providing for the sale of timber lands therein. U. S. v. Smith, 8 Sawy. (U. S.) 100. See also as to the construction of this act relating to the cutting of timber in Oregon, U. S. v. Young, 8 Sawy. (U. S.) 108.

Measure of Damages.—The Act of June 3, 1878, spoken of above, prohibits the cutting of timber with intent to dispose thereof, except that the settler under the homestead or preemption laws may dispose of the timber cut while clearing his claim; if, therefore, the timber is cut for the purpose of disposing of it, and not merely as a means of preparing the land for tillage, an offense against the act is committed. If, however, the offense is inadvertent, the value of the timber standing affords the proper measure of damages; if willful, the value of the labor should be added. U. S. v. Williams, 18 Fed. Rep. 475;

U. S. v. Heilner, 26 Fed. Rep. 80; Wooden Ware Co. v. U. S., 106 U. S. 432; Bly v. U. S., 4 Dill. (U. S.) 464; 16 A. G. Op. 189; U. S. v. Ordway, 30 Fed. Rep. 36; U. S. v. Perkins, 44 Fed. Rep. 670.

Boxing and chipping trees for the purpose of gathering turpentine is not a violation of the statute where the trees are not felled and are not upon public lands reserved for supplying timber for the navy, and where there is no intent to export, dispose of, or use the trees for timber. U. S. v. Garretson, 42 Fed. Rep. 22; Leatherburg v. U. S., 32 Fed. Rep. 780 (reversing 27 Fed. Rep. 606). See also U. S. v. Taylor, 35 Fed. Rep. 484.

Timber on Indian Lands.—Indians do not own the fee of the lands which they occupy; they have only a right of occupancy. The timber on such land being a part of the realty they can no more make a valid sale of it than of any other part. They may rightfully sever such timber as may be necessary to improve the land and make it more habitable; but for no other purpose. And when rightfully severed it of course being no longer a part of the realty may be disposed of by sale. U. S. v. Cook, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 591; Spencer v. U. S., 10 Ct. of Cl. 255; Cotton v. U. S., 11 How. (U. S.) 229.

The principle as to the property Indians have in the lands they occupy, as above stated, is confirmed by several cases. U. S. v. Cook, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 591; Johnson v. McIntosh, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 574; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 580; Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 48; 1 Kent's Com. 257; Leavenworth etc. R. Co. v. U. S., 92 U. S. 733; U. S. v. Kayama, 118 U. S. 375.

Where, in an action by the United States to recover the value of logs cut on public land, the plaintiff's evidence shows that the defendant purchased from the trespasser and converted to his own use a large number of logs, among which were some of those cut from the public land, the burden is on the defendant to show that all the logs so bought by him preemptor or homestead claimant to cut and remove timber from the land upon which he has settled.¹

By special act of Congress March 3rd, 1872, and other statutes, license was given to railroad companies generally to take timber were not so cut. Norris v. U. S., 44 Fed. Rep. 735.

Innocent Purchaser of Timber Unlawfully Cut.—An innocent purchaser from a willful trespasser of timber cut on public lands is liable to the government for the value of the timber at the date of such purchase, including the value of all labor and expense which the trespasser had before bestowed upon it. U. S. v. Heilner, 26 Fed. Rep. 80; U. S. v. Eureka etc. R. Co., 40 Fed. Rep. 419; U. S. v. Norris, 41 Fed. Rep. 424.

Compromise with Offenders.—The Commissioner of the General Land Office instructed his agents to seize and sell timber cut on the public land, and to compromise with the trespasser upon his paying a reasonable compensation. A compromise made under these instructions by which the trespasser agreed to pay all costs of the seizure and gave bond to pay for the timber when its value should be ascertained, is binding upon the United States. Wells v. Nickles, 104 U. S. 444.

A party convicted of a violation of § 2461 is only relieved from the criminal prosecution and liabilities provided for in said section by payment of $2.50 per acre for the land on which it is cut, in pursuance of the provisions of the act of Congress of 1878 (1 Supp. Rev. St., p. 329, § 5). He is not relieved from his civil common law liability to the United States as owner of the land for the value of the timber cut. U. S. v. Scott, 39 Fed. Rep. 900.

Pleading.—As to the pleading in an action against any person for a violation of the laws concerning the preservation of timber on the public lands, see U. S. v. Williams, 6 Mont. 379; U. S. v. Ordway, 30 Fed. Rep. 36.

1. Act of June 3, 1878; Gould & Tucker's Notes on Rev. Stat., pp. 558 & 559, where this act is set forth. U. S. v. Murphy, 32 Fed. Rep. 376; U. S. v. Mann, 32 Fed. Rep. 386; U. S. v. Ball, 31 Fed. Rep. 667; U. S. v. Freyberg, 32 Fed. Rep. 195; Timber Cases, 3 McCrary (U. S.) 519; U. S. v. Benjamin, 21 Fed. Rep. 285; Ladda v. Hawley, 57 Cal. 51; U. S. v. Lane, 19 Fed. Rep. 910; U. S. v. Yoder, 18 Fed. Rep. 372; Wells v. Nickles, 104 U. S. 444.

But one holding land under a homestead claim can only cut and sell timber from such portion or parts of the land as are being cleared for cultivation or settlement, and the fact that defendant was induced through the wrong representations of the register of the land office to believe that the homesteader had an unrestricted right to cut timber from his entry does not estop the government from prosecuting him for such unlawful cutting. U. S. v. Murphy, 32 Fed. Rep. 376; U. S. v. Mann, 32 Fed. Rep. 386.

A settler on the public lands under the homestead act is not authorized prior to the issue of a final certificate to remove timber therefrom except for purpose of preparing the land in the ordinary way for tillage; but if he does cut and remove timber therefrom for export and sale merely, and afterwards obtains a certificate from the register and receiver of his compliance with the law as such settler, the government can maintain no action against him for damages for cutting such timber, nor against any one to whom he may have disposed of the same. U. S. v. Ball, 31 Fed. Rep. 667; U. S. v. Freyberg, 32 Fed. Rep. 195.

If the preemptor on public land before payment makes a contract permitting another to cut timber from the land, he cannot recover the price agreed, unless it be shown that the timber was cut for the use of the navy, or that it was to enable the preemptor to cultivate the land; and a subsequent acquirement of the title by the preemptor does not confer a right of action. Ladda v. Hawley, 57 Cal. 51.

Section 5388 does not apply to one who removes and uses for building purposes timber which has been cut on an Indian reservation by another person without his aid or encouragement. U. S. v. Konkapt, 43 Fed. Rep. 64.

Possession by a homestead claimant and a receiver's receipt issued since bringing the action, do not divest the

from the public lands lying contiguous to their route, but this is not to be construed so as to allow such companies to waste the timber lands of the United States by disposing of the timber thereon not needed for their own use in construction or repairs.¹

By a recent act of Congress timber may be taken from the mineral lands on the public domain for building or other domestic purposes.²

2. Swamp Land Grants.—In 1850 an act known as the Arkansas Swamp Land Grant was enacted, which provided that in order to enable States to construct levees and drains and reclaim swamp and overflowed lands, all swamp and overflowed lands unfit for cultivation on that account and unsold on Sept. 28th, 1850, were granted, with certain restrictions, to the several States.³ The duty was government of possession or title so that it cannot bring trespass for cutting timber on the land. U. S. v. Taylor, 35 Fed. Rep. 484.

See further, People v. Turner, 49 Hun (N. Y.) 466; U. S. v. Williams, 8 Mont. 85; U. S. v. Saucier (N. Mex. 1891), 25 Pac. Rep. 791.

1. 13 Stat. at L. 365; 17 Stat. at L. 339; 18 Stat. at L. 482; U. S. v. Ordway, 30 Fed. Rep. 36; U. S. v. Denver etc. R. Co., 31 Fed. Rep. 886; U. S. v. Chaplin, 31 Fed. Rep. 890; U. S. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 6 Mont. 351; Denver etc. R. Co. v. U. S., 34 Fed. Rep. 838.

Sale of Timber Lands.—See U. S. v. Budd, 43 Fed. Rep. 630.

2. Land returned on the government survey as mineral land, of broken and rugged surface, with every indication of mineral ground, but on which no mines have been located, though in the vicinity of valuable mines, and which is unfit for cultivation or entry as agricultural lands, is not included in the act mentioned. U. S. v. Edwards, 38 Fed. Rep. 812; U. S. v. Williams, 8 Mont. 85.

Unsurveyed public lands, mineral in character, of little or no value except for the mineral therein, and within organized mining districts, or not far remote from known mines, constitute mineral lands as intended by the act. U. S. v. Richmond Min. Co., 40 Fed. Rep. 415.

3. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2479; Gould & Tucker's Notes on Rev. Stat., p. 562.

Swamp and Overflowed Lands.—The grant related only to lands which were in fact swamp and overflowed. Sacramento Sav. Bank v. Hynes, 50 Cal. 195; Hamilton v. Shoaff, 99 Ind. 63.

The States of Kansas, Nebraska and Nevada are excepted in this provision, and the grants to the States of California, Minnesota and Oregon are subject to special limitations, restrictions and conditions. U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 2479, 2490. In order to constitute swamp and overflowed land within the meaning of this act, it is not essential that the land should be overflowed annually, but merely that it be subject to overflow and require artificial means to subject it to beneficial use. Keller v. Brickey, 78 Ill. 133.

It is essential that the lands have been rendered unfit for successful cultivation prior to the date of the act (Sept. 28, 1850), by reason of the overflow. And the fact that some staple products may be cultivated and raised on the land is not a test, but it is whether such products, or some of them, may be ordinarily cultivated successfully. Thompson v. Thornton, 50 Cal. 142. It seems that by this statute the title to the bed of a pond or a non-navigable lake would pass. Indiana v. Milk, 11 Fed. Rep. 289.

If lands are patented by a State "according to the official plat," in the State land office, which plat designates them as tidal overflow, it cannot be objected that the lands were not conveyed as overflowed lands. Cragin v. Powell, 128 U. S. 691.

Unsold Lands.—It will be observed that only such lands of the character mentioned pass to the States by virtue of this grant as were unsold at the time of the grant. Therefore it did not pass to the State the title to such land, as the government had before that time agreed or assumed to pass to others, so that a tract upon which land officers had allowed a military bounty warrant to imposed upon the Secretary of the Interior to make accurate lists of plats of all such lands and to transmit them to the governors of the States in which they lay, and upon the request of a governor of any State to issue patents conveying the fee-simple of the land to such State.¹ The proceeds of the land derived from their sale by the State were to be applied exclusively, as far as be located before the passage of the act was not included within the terms of the grant. Gormley v. Uthe, 116 Ill. 643; 133 U. S. 655 (sub nomine Culver v. Uthe). Compare Five Per Cent. Cases, 110 U. S. 471.

Evidence of the Character of Lands.—Verbal testimony of witnesses is admissible to show the character of lands claimed to be swamp and overflowed lands in order to show that they are such, and so excluded from a railroad grant. Hannibal etc. R. Co. v. Smith, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 95.

In the case of Iowa R. Co. v. Antoine, 52 Iowa 429, which was an action at law to recover real estate, the plaintiff claimed under a railroad grant, and produced as evidence of his title the certificate of the Commissioner of the General Land Office approved by the Secretary of the Interior, and the defendant was not allowed to prove by parol the swampy character of the land in order to show that it passed to him under the swamp land grant.

In the case of Thompson v. Thornton, 50 Cal. 142, a suit in ejectment between a plaintiff claiming the land as swamp and overflowed land, purchased by him from the State, and the defendant claiming it under the United States, as dry land, the township plats from the land office were admitted in evidence on behalf of the plaintiff to prove that the land had been surveyed and that the title had vested in the State under the swamp land grant of Congress July 23, 1866.

Confirmation of Lands to California.—By §§ 2485-2489 all selections of any portion of the public domain to which no homestead, preemption, or other right had attached under the laws of the United States, and which were not otherwise excepted by being mineral lands, or reserved for certain purposes, or claimed under valid Mexican or Spanish grants, etc., were confirmed to the State of California. U. S. Rev. St., § 2485.

Section 2486 and the following prescribe the conditions and qualifications of the confirmation. See these sections reviewed in Huff v. Doyle, 93 U. S. 558; reversing 50 Cal. 130.

By this act the State of California by the selection and segregation of certain lands as swamp lands, acquired the right under that act to have the character of the lands determined in the mode prescribed therein, and the purchaser from the United States pending proceedings, for the determination of the character of the land took subject to such determination, which being in favor of the State entitled the State to a patent relating back to Sept. 28, 1850, the date of the passage of the act granting swamp and overflowed lands to the State. The character of the lands having been once determined by the mode prescribed, such determination cannot be impeached collaterally. Sacramento Valley Reclamation Co. v. Cook, 61 Cal. 341.

A description of land in the government survey as "subject to periodical overflow" cannot be said to mean the same as "swamp and overflowed lands," so as to pass title to the land to the State under this confirmation act. Heath v. Wallace, 71 Cal. 50.

1. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2480.

It seems that the grant being as we have seen before one in presenti, the interest of the States in the lands cannot be impaired by the delay or refusal of the Secretary to have the lists and plats made. San Francisco Sav. Union v. Irwin, 28 Fed. Rep. 708; Owens v. Jackson, 9 Cal. 322; Summers v. Dickinson, 9 Cal. 554; French v. Fyan, 93 U. S. 169; Gaines v. Thompson, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 347; Cox v. McGarrahan, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 298; Litchfield v. Richards, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 575; Hannibal etc. R. Co. v. Smith, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 95.

A patent issued by the Secretary in pursuance of this provision cannot be impeached, in an action at law, by evidence to show that the land which it purports to convey was not, in fact, swamp and overflowed land; in a case where the Secretary has assumed to perform the duties imposed by the act his action is conclusive. (Overruling necessary, to the reclaiming of such lands.¹ Upon proper proof being made that any of the land purchased from the United States prior to March 2, 1855, were "swamp lands" within the meaning of the act of 1850, the purchase money of such lands 27 Cal. 87; and distinguishing Hannibal etc. R. Co. v. Smith, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 95). French v. Fyan, 93 U. S. 169.

And the decision by the Interior Department that certain land was not swamp and overflowed land cannot be attacked in a suit by an individual against one claiming it under the pre-emption laws and a government patent. Ehrhardt v. Hogaboom, 115 U. S. 67. See also, supra, this title, Force and Effect of Decisions of the Land Office.

The issue of a patent is not essential in order to vest the title in the State. Upon approval of the selection of a swamp land tract by the Secretary of the Interior, and acceptance by the governor, the title becomes vested in the State, without any patent from the general government. Masterson v. Marshall, 65 Mo. 94; Campbell v. Wortman, 58 Mo. 258.

1 U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2480.

Although the grant is made apparently for the exclusive purpose of enabling such States to reclaim the lands by means of levees and drains, yet since the proceeds are to be applied to this purpose only "as far as necessary," each State has a large discretion as to the necessity of so applying the proceeds, and may exercise its discretion in its behalf without affecting its title. Congress alone has the power, and only in a clear case of violation of the trust to enforce the conditions of the grant by revocation or otherwise. American Emigrant Co. v. Adams Co., 100 U. S. 61.

So that notwithstanding the provision of § 2480, it is held that the State may authorize the counties in which the lands lay, to devote the proceeds therefrom to erecting public buildings, and building bridges and roads. Mills Co. v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 107 U. S. 557; Cook Co. v. Calumet etc. Co., 131 Ill. 505.

Not a Trust Fund.—And it is well settled that this appropriation of the proceeds of these lands rests solely with the good faith of the several States. The act created neither a trust nor a contract. Mills Co. v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 107 U. S. 557; Hagar v. Reclamation District No. 108, 111 U. S. 701;

U. S. v. Louisiana, 127 U. S. 182; A. P. Cook Co. v. Auditor Genl., 79 Mich. 100.

The proceeds to be obtained from the sale of swamp land, and the purchase money to be paid for such lands already sold, are not subject to a property trust either in the heads of the United States or of any State, in such a sense that a claim of the United States upon a particular State for money due may not be set off against the claim of the State to the swamp land fund. U. S. v. Louisiana, 127 U. S. 182. See also Mills Co. v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 107 U. S. 557; American Emigrant Co. v. Wright Co., 97 U. S. 339; Louisiana v. U. S., 22 Ct. of Cl. 284; affirmed 123 U. S. 32; Hager v. Reclamation District No. 108, 111 U. S. 701.

Evidence of Sale by the State.—In an action to impeach a patent issued by the United States on the ground that plaintiff had purchased the lands in question from the State as swamp lands included in the grant of 1850, the certificate of the State land commissioner as to the records of his office was held inadmissible as evidence, since the purchase of swamp lands from the State can only be shown by the certificate of purchase or by certified transcript of the records and official documents of the proper land office. Driver v. Evans, 47 Ark. 300; Branch v. Mitchell, 24 Ark. 441; Bohall v. Dilla, 114 U. S. 47.

Purchase of Swamp Lands From a State.—Various provisions have been made in the several States concerning the disposal by sale of such lands. Thus it is held that an application for the purchase of swamp lands under act Oregon Oct. 26, 1870, § 3, for "the selection and sale" of swamp lands, from the date of its receipt and filing by the Land Commissioner, constitutes a contract between the State and the applicant for the sale to the latter of the tract or tracts therein mentioned, with the right to the immediate possession thereof, and, on the performance of the conditions subsequent, of payment and reclamation within the terms and requirements of said action, the applicant or his assigns is entitled to a patent was to be paid over to the State; or if the land had been sold by warrant or scrip, the State was authorized to select indemnity lands from such of the public lands as were open to sale at $1.25 per acre.¹

By a subsequent act all lands selected and reported to the General Land Office as swamp and overflowed lands by the several States entitled to the provisions of the act prior to 1857, were confirmed to the said States respectively.²

The words of the statute that the lands "shall be and the same are hereby granted" to the States have the effect to create a grant in præsenti, so that the title of the State dates from the date of the act, notwithstanding a subsequent provision concerning the making of lists of plats of the land and the issuing of patents, etc.³

In recognition of this principle, Congress passed an act for the relief of locators upon swamp lands, and directed the President to cause patents to be issued as soon as practicable to locators therefor. McConaughy v. Pennoyer, 43 Fed. Rep. 196.

1. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2482.

The term "land purchased from the United States" is considered not to include those lands upon which prior to the date of the act land warrants had been properly located, the taking of land by the location of land warrants not being considered a sale within the meaning of the statute here. Gormley v. Uthe, 116 Ill. 643; 133 U. S. 655 (sub nomine Culver v. Uthe).

2. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2484. The confirmation extended only so far as the lands remained unappropriated and not interfered with by any actual settlement under the laws of the United States. U. S. Rev. St., § 2484.

It has been held that this confirmation vested the lands absolutely in the State whether actually swamp lands or not. American Emigrant Co. v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 47 Iowa 515.

3. Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 488 (reversing 63 Cal. 252); Martin v. Marks, 97 U. S. 345; Hannibal etc. R. Co. v. Smith, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 95; French v. Fyan, 93 U. S. 171; San Francisco Sav. Union v. Irwin, 28 Fed. Rep. 708; 136 U. S. 578; Edmondson v. Corn, 62 Ind. 17; Hendry v. Willis, 33 Ark. 833; Ringo v. Rotan, 29 Ark. 56; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Brown, 40 Iowa 333; Danel v. Purvis, 50 Miss. 261; Rice v. Sioux City etc. R. Co., 110 U. S. 695; Campbell v. Wortman, 58 Mo. 258; Owens v. Jackson, 9 Cal. 322; Summers v.

Dickinson, 9 Cal. 554. Compare, however, Grantham v. Atkins, 63 Cal. 359; Thompson v. Prince, 67 Ill. 281; Keller v. Brickey, 78 Ill. 133; in which cases it is held that the act in question did not create a title in præsenti; that the fee simple remained in the United States until the patent issued, and, therefore, the right of private entry continued until the actual issue of the patent to the State, notwithstanding the land in controversy had been reported and confirmed as swamp land, inuring to the State. These cases, are, however, clearly overruled by the weight of authority.

Since the act created a title in præsenti in the State, the State's grantee may recover possession from one claiming under a preemption, and a United States patent issued thereunder, without regard to whether the certificate provided for had issued or not. The only question open is whether the lands were or were not swamp and overflowed lands in 1850. After the passage of the act, the approval by the land office of the selections of land reported to it by the several States, and the issue of patents, etc., were mere ministerial acts. Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 488; Martin v. Marks, 97 U. S. 345; San Francisco Sav. Union v. Irwin, 28 Fed. Rep. 708.

And this grant being in præsenti cannot be impaired by the delay or refusal of the secretary to have the lists and plates, etc., made. San Francisco Sav. Union v. Irwin, 28 Fed.

who had made entries on the public lands claimed as swamp lands with land warrants prior to the issue of patents to the States under the Act of 1850.¹

The Act of 1850 applied only to the States and not to the Territories, and upon a State's being admitted to the Union after the passage of the act, it acquired no rights under it, unless the rights were by an express provision extended to it.²

3. Other Provisions.—Express grant of the right of way is made for highways and railroads over the public lands not reserved for public uses.³ Provision is also made for the setting aside of a certain portion of land at the head of Yellowstone river as a public

Rep. 708; Owens v. Jackson, 9 Cal. 322; Summers v. Dickinson, 9 Cal. 554; Edmundson v. Corn, 62 Ind. 17.

1. 10 Stat. at L. 634. The statute adds "Any decision of the Secretary of the Interior, or any other officer of the government, to the contrary, notwithstanding."

In the case of Huggett v. Case, 61 Mich. 480, a bona fide locator of lands in Michigan which are patented to the State under the swamp land act, but unknown to him, the list of swamp lands not having then been approved by the Secretary of the Interior, and there being nothing in the land office to designate the lands as swamp lands, is relieved by this act of Congress of 1855, and a person deriving title subsequently from the State holds his apparent title in trust for such locator and those holding under him. See also Dale v. Turner, 34 Mich. 405; Ives v. Ely, 57 Mich. 574.

A proceeding instituted to contest the right of a State to land claimed by it under the swamp land grant is not conclusive of the rights of a grantee of the State who was not a party to the proceeding. Snell v. Dubuque etc. R. Co., 80 Iowa 767; Connors v. Meseroy, 76 Iowa 691.

2. Rice v. Sioux City R. Co., 110 U. S. 695; St. Paul etc. R. Co. v. Rice, 9 Fed. Rep. 368.

Therefore, the State of Minnesota, being a Territory at the time of the passage of the act acquired no rights under it upon being admitted to the Union, notwithstanding a clause in the act of admission provided that "all the laws of the United States which are not locally applicable are to have the same force and effect within that State as in other States of the Union." Rice v. Sioux City R. Co., 110 U. S. 695.

Cases in which certain portions of the act making a grant were reviewed may be seen in Buena Vista Co. v. Iowa Falls etc. R. Co., 112 U. S. 165; American Emigrant Co. v. Adams Co., 100 U. S. 61; Hagar v. Reclamation District, No. 118, 111 U. S. 701; Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 488; Sacramento Sav. Bank v. Hynes, 50 Cal. 195. See also Cape Girardeau etc. R. Co. v. Hatton, 102 Mo. 45; Funston v. Metcalf, 40 Miss. 504; Dowd v. Louisville etc. R. Co. (Miss. 1890), 8 So. Rep. 295.

3. Railroad Right of Way.—U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2477.

The statute reads, "The right of way for the construction of highways over public lands not reserved for public uses is hereby granted." § 2477. Though railroads are not specifically mentioned in this provision, the term highways is considered to include them. Flint etc. R. Co. v. Gordon, 51 Mich. 420; Rogers v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 3 Wall. (U. S.) 654; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Otoe Co., 16 Wall. (U. S.) 667. Compare, however, Burlington etc. R. Co. v. Johnson, 38 Kan. 142; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 315.

But whether the term "highways" as here used included railroads or not is now immaterial, since by 18 Stat. at L. 482, the right is extended to railroads. Red River etc. R. Co. v. Sture, 32 Minn. 95; U. S. v. Chaplin, 31 Fed. Rep. 890.

Rights of Preemptors Protected.—But in order for a railroad company to acquire a right of way through the public lands of the United States, as against one in possession of such lands under homestead, preemption or other laws, it must appear that such company complied with the other provisions of the Act granting the right of way; that is, it must have filed with the Secretary of the Interior a copy of its park, to be under the exclusive control of the Secretary of the Interior.¹ There is a recognized public right of pasturage on the public domain which is left open, and the right cannot be interfered with by adjacent land owners though they may be in a degree injured by the exercise of it.²

Inclosure of any portion of the public lands by any person who has no claim, or color of title, or any right to such land, is prohibited, and jurisdiction is conferred upon territorial and other courts to grant injunctions to restrain such inclosures, whenever it may be necessary.³

articles of incorporation, and due proof of its organization under the same, and it must also have claimed the benefits of the act by filing with the register of the land office of the proper district a profile of the road. All preemption, homestead, or other rights acquired prior to such filing will be protected as a vested right. Larsen v. Oregon R. etc. Co., (Oregon, 1890), 23 Pac. Rep. 974; Burlington etc. R. Co. v. Johnson, 38 Kan. 142; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 215.

Congress has the power to grant a right of way over the public lands of the United States, and it is immaterial that such lands have long been occupied by one who is a qualified preemptor, but who has taken no steps to procure a title. Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Burr, 86 Cal. 279.

Other Matters.—A grant of lands over which a railroad has been constructed is to be construed as excepting the railroad's right of way. Verdier v. Port Royal etc. R. Co., 15 S. Car. 476; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 677; Sams v. Port Royal etc. R. Co., 15 S. Car. 484; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 683; Flint etc. R. Co. v. Gordon, 41 Mich. 420. See also Gould & Tucker's Notes on Rev. Stat., p. 561.

The Act of July 26, 1866 (14 St. U. S. 289), giving a right of way over the Osage ceded lands reserved by the United States for the Great and Little Osage Indians, gave such right only over such lands as had not previously been disposed of by the government. Roberts v. Missouri etc. R. Co., 43 Kan. 102; Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 498.

Congress retains the right of eminent domain over Indian lands and may therefore grant to a railroad a right of way over them. Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kan. R. Co., 135 U. S. 641 (reversing 33 Fed. Rep. 900.)

1. U. S. Rev. St., §§ 2474-5. Statute of June 15, 1880 (21 Stat. 199), withdrew from sale the hot springs in Uncompahgre Park, and four square miles of the surrounding land, and made the two sections (§§ 2475 & 2474) applicable to the said tract; but this provision was repealed by statute May 14, 1884, (23 Stat. 22). Gould & Tucker's Notes on Rev. St. U. S. p. 561.

2. Pasturage.—Therefore persons entitled to the right cannot be enjoined from exercising it by persons who own parcels of land detached and scattered through a large body of the public domain, and lying open, though thereby defendants' cattle will trespass on complainants' lands. Buford v. Houtz, 133 U. S. 320.

In the case of McGinnis v. Friedman, (Idaho, 1888), 17 Pac. Rep. 635, the plaintiff M applied for an injunction to restrain F from pasturing sheep upon the ranges on the public lands, because to allow sheep to graze upon the land would ruin the pasturage for cattle. M grounded his right to the injunction upon the fact of priority of possession, having enjoyed exclusive use for some years previous. Section 6872 of the Territorial statutes was also invoked in support of his right. It was held, however, that M having no claim of title, the injunction must be denied.

3. Inclosure of Public Land.—23 U. S. St. at L. 322, § 3. A curious case arose in this connection. It seemed that the defendant owned a large number of sections, designated by odd numbers, the title to the alternate or even numbered sections being still in the government. The defendant undertook to inclose a part of this land by a long line of fences wholly within the limits of his own property, the practical effect of which was, however, to inclose a large number of the even numbered sections

The Commissioner of the General Land Office, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, is authorized to make all regulations necessary for the carrying out of these miscellaneous provisions, which are not elsewhere provided for.¹

XII. MISCELLANEOUS GRANTS.—An act of Congress passed in 1841 and renewed by a later statute granted for purposes of internal improvement to each new State afterward admitted into the Union, upon its admission, so much public land as, including the quantity that was granted to it before its admission, would amount to five hundred thousand acres.² The selection of the land was to be made in such manner as the legislature of each State might direct. The location was to be made in parcels conformably to sectional divisions and subdivisions of not less than three hundred twenty acres in one location and on public land of the public lands. In a proceeding for an injunction instituted by the United States attorney, the Supreme Court of Wyoming held that the statute so far as it forbade as a nuisance the erection by any person of a fence wholly within the limits of his own land, is not a legitimate exercise of police power, but an unwarranted invasion of private property, and therefore unconstitutional. The court in this case following the case of U. S. v. Brandestein, 32 Fed. Rep. 738; U. S. v. Douglas-Willan Sartoris Co. (Wyoming 1889), 22 Pac. Rep. 92.

Sections sixteen and thirty-six of each township, though reserved by special act for the purposes of public schools, still form a part of the public lands within the meaning of the act. U. S. v. Bisel, 8 Mont. 20; U. S. v. Flaherty, 8 Mont. 31; Barkley v. U. S., 3 Wash. 522.

The act makes an exception in case of lands inclosed under an "asserted right" thereto by or under claim made in good faith, with a view to entry thereof at the proper land office. Therefore, one cannot be convicted of an offense under the act where he fenced in one hundred and sixty acres of unsurveyed land, and at the same time filed a notice of declaration as a settler on the public land, in the office of the recorder of the county with a view of entering the land as soon as possible. U. S. v. Godwin, 7 Mont. 402.

Lands granted by a railroad, but to which the grantee has been unable to get title, owing to the township not being surveyed, are not within the contemplation of the act. U. S. v. Godwin, 7 Mont. 402.

In the case of U. S. v. Brandestein, 32 Fed. Rep. 738, the lands on the filing of the plat of a proposed railroad by the company had been withdrawn from settlement by the United States, being granted to the railroad, although they had not yet been earned by the company. It was held that the inclosure of such land did not fall within the prohibition of the act.

Defendant inclosed and occupied land on a section within the limits of a grant to a railroad, after the land had been withdrawn from sale or entry, relying on the railroad company's promise to sell the land to him as soon as it should perfect its title thereto. The railroad had not been completed when the entry was made, and the grant had not been declared forfeited. It was held that this was not an unlawful occupancy under the act in question. U. S. v. Osborn, 44 Fed. Rep. 29.

An indictment under the act mentioned must show that the defendant is not within any of the exceptions permitting such inclosure. U. S. v. Felderward, 36 Fed. Rep. 490. It need not, however, allege that defendant had not gone upon the land, improved and occupied it under the land laws of the United States, claiming title thereto in good faith. That is a matter of defense. U. S. v. Cook, 36 Fed. Rep. 896.

1. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2478; Gould & Tucker's Notes on Rev. Stat., p. 562; U. S. v. Waitz, 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 473; Cragin v. Powell, 128 U. S. 601; Thompson v. Hanson, 28 Minn. 484. See also supra, this title, Land Office.

2. 5 Stat. at L. 455; U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2378.

not reserved from sale by law of Congress or proclamation of the President.¹ In a very early case it was decided that the act did not convey the fee simple of any lands whatever to the State, but left the land system of the United States in full operation as to the regulation of titles, so as to prevent conflicting interests.²

In 1850, owing to the disturbed and unsettled state of affairs in the Territory of Oregon, Congress passed a bill known as the Oregon Donation Act, making a grant of certain lands to all settlers complying with certain conditions and requirements. The general nature and several provisions of the act may be better discussed in the note.³

The act of 1841 limited the use of the fund arising from these lands to certain designated objects, but the later statute (§§ 2378-9), provided only that it shall be "for the purpose of internal improvement." The repeal of the former provision shows clearly an intent to leave the designated objects of internal improvement to which this fund is to be applied entirely to the direction of the proper State authorities. In re Senate Resolution, 12 Colo. 285.

It was further decided in the above case of In re Senate Resolution, 12 Colo. 285, that the construction by the State of reservoirs and canals for purposes of irrigation, and the changing of channels of natural streams when necessary to the success of such improvements, when the same can be done without invasion of the rights of prior appropriators, were within the authority conveyed by the section (§ 2378), provided the control of such improvements be retained by the State.

1. 5 Stat. at L. 455; U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2379; Foley v. Harrison, 15 How. (U. S.) 433.

The location may be made at any time after the public lands in any such new State have been surveyed according to law. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2379.

2. Foley v. Harrison, 15 How. (U. S.) 433.

The words "shall be granted" import that the grant is not to be in presentii, and for this reason do not pass the fee but rather impose a trust upon the States. Patterson v. Tatum, 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 64; Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 330.

In the case of Foley v. Harrison, 15 How. (U. S.) 433, the plaintiff claimed under a patent from the State of Louisiana and entries only in the United States office. The defendants claimed under patents from the United States direct. In accordance with the principle above announced, namely, that the State did not possess the fee simple of the land, the patentee of the United States was held to have the superior title.

In the case of Patterson v. Tatum, 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 164, it was held that when the selection and location of the lands were once made according to the direction of the State legislature out of land not reserved but subject to location, the general gift became a particular gift of the particular lands located, vesting in the State a perfect and absolute title to the same which will pass by her patent.

In the case of Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 330, it was held that the provision of the Act of 1841 authorizing the State to make selections of land did not interfere with the operations of the provisions of the act regulating the system of settlement and preemption. The two modes of acquiring title to lands from the United States are not in conflict with each other, but both are to have full operation, that one controlling in each particular case under which the first initiatory step was had. In that same case Justice Field also observed that it was implied by the decision in Foley v. Harrison, 15 How. (U. S.) 433, that the act was merely the terms of a grant, requiring further legislation, or further action in some form by the government in order to vest the title of the land selected in the State.

3. Oregon Donation Act.—Act of Sept. 27, 1850, 9 Stat. at L. 496.

Many of the sections of this act are set forth in full in Hall v. Russell, 101 U. S. 503. The act has received judicial interpretation in many cases. See Davenport v. Lamb, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 418; Hall v. Russell, 101 U. S. 503; Silver v. Ladd, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 219;

Vance v. Burbank, 101 U. S. 514; Johnson v. U. S., 2 Ct. of Cl. 391; Barney v. Dolph, 97 U. S. 652; Lamb v. Davenport, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 307; Stark v. Starr, 94 U. S. 477; Missionary Soc. v. Dalles City, 107 U. S. 336; and many others.

Lands Granted by the Act.—The lands subject to the grant were any of the public lands of the United States within the Territory of Oregon which were unappropriated. 9 Stat. at L. 496, §§ 1-2-3.

Land occupied and cultivated under the provisional government and occupied as a town site prior to Dec. 1st, 1850, may be held as a donation under the act. Martin v. T.V. Vault, 1 Oregon 77.

The amount of the grant varied. To a settler prior to Dec. 1st, 1850, the amount to a married man or one who should become married prior to Dec. 1st, 1850, a whole section, six hundred forty acres, was granted, one-half to himself and the other half to his wife to hold in her own right. To single persons half that amount.

By section five it was provided that to those who should settle after Dec. 1st, 1850, and before Dec. 1st, 1853, should receive one-half section if married as above, and if unmarried, one-quarter section.

Where one was married but his wife died in Sept. 1850, he could take but one-half section of land under § 4; he was not a "married man" as intended by that section. White v. Allen, 3 Oregon 103.

Section four of the act provided that a married man might enter one whole section, six hundred forty acres, one-half for himself, the other half for his wife to be held by her for her sole separate use and benefit.

In the case of Jette v. Picard, 4 Oregon 296, one L took up two hundred sixty-three and fifty-three hundredths acres of land, under this section, being married at the time. It was held that his wife was entitled to have one-half of the same set apart to her, her right being in no wise dependent upon the number of acres in the claim.

Persons to Whom It Applied.—The grant was made in favor of every white settler or occupant of the public lands, American half-breed Indians included, above the age of eighteen years, being a citizen of the United States or having made his declaration to become a citizen. See Hall v. Russell, 101 U. S. 503, where the statute is set forth; 9 Stat. at L. 496, § 4.

To acquire the benefit of the act one must have become a resident on the land before December 1st, 1850, and must reside upon and cultivate the land for four consecutive years. Hall v. Russell, 101 U. S. 503.

Upon the death of any settler prior to the issuing of the patent or prior to the expiration of the four years, his widow and heirs were to receive equal parts. 9 Stat. at L. 496, § 8. Under this provision, if the husband or wife dies before the patent issues, each of the children and the surviving husband or wife take equal shares. Davenport v. Lamb, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 418.

An unmarried female incapable of labor was held capable to take lands under the act. Silver v. Ladd, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 219.

An Indian woman married to a white man, is a wife within the meaning of the term as used above, and is therefore entitled to one-half her husband's claim. Vandolf v. Otis, 1 Oregon 153.

Conditions of the Grant.—A settlement in good faith and four years' continuous residence and cultivation were requisite in order to acquire any donation under the act. Affidavits were to be made by the settler that the land was for his own use and cultivation. The other proceedings were very similar to those already set forth as required in case of preemption settlers. Supra, this title, Preemption; 9 Stat. at L. 496.

The grant being one in præsentia in certain respects, the conditions of settlement etc., were conditions subsequent. Blakesly v. Caywood, 4 Oregon 280; Lee v. Summers, 2 Oregon 260; Summers v. Dickinson, 9 Cal. 554. See also Hall v. Russell, 101 U. S. 503.

The wife or her heirs get nothing until the husband, or some one for him, proves up the claim under the act. The wife could not be a settler or get anything, except through her husband. If he abandoned possession before becoming entitled to the grant, her estate was gone as well as his. Whatever will bar her, will necessarily bar her heirs. Vance v. Burbank, 101 U. S. 514.

The claimant must set the land apart for his own use and designate it by boundaries with reasonable certainty; and any substantial change in the location will be construed an abandonment of his claim and as the taking of a new one. Carter v. Chapman, 2 Oregon 93; Stark v. Stark, 2 Oregon 118.

As to what constitutes residence and cultivation see Starr v. Stark, 2 Oregon 118; the residence is to be determined from all the facts and circumstances in each particular case. Lee v. Simonds, 1 Oregon 158.

The heirs of settlers who died prior to Dec. 1, 1850, cannot under the act inherit by virtue of the residence and cultivation of their ancestors. Newton v. Spencer, 3 Oregon 548.

Interest Acquired by the Grant.—The words of the statute "shall be and is hereby granted" import, as in all other cases, a grant in presenti. This principle has been well settled in many cases. See Lee v. Summers, 2 Oregon 260; Blakesly v. Caywood, 4 Oregon 280; Fremont v. U. S., 17 How. (U. S.) 559; Adams v. Burke, 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 418; Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 488; Martin v. Marks, 97 U. S. 345; Hannibal etc. R. Co. v. Smith, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 95.

And the conditions of settlement, occupation, etc., are considered to be conditions subsequent, upon the non-performance of which the grant is to be defeated. Blakesly v. Caywood, 4 Oregon 280; Simmons v. Dickinson, 9 Cal. 554.

It is contended that as the necessary consequence of these two principles the legal title passed to the several grantees under the act by the act itself, and that the patent was only the consummation and the evidence of title, and that, therefore, the parties might alien and devise the land prior to the issue of the patent. See Lee v. Summers, 2 Oregon 260; Blakesly v. Caywood, 4 Oregon 280.

But a different doctrine has been laid down by the Supreme Court of United States and the following principles in regard to the alienation or devising of lands acquired under the act seem to be settled.

The court in the case of Hall v. Russell, 101 U. S. 503, reviewed the provisions of this act, and while recognizing that the language seemed to import a grant in presenti, yet held that the grantee acquired no divisible interest in the land until the completion of the conditions subsequent. The court uses this language: "There cannot be a grant unless there is a grantee, and, consequently, there cannot be a present grant unless there is a present grantee. If, then, the law making the grant indicates a future grantee and not a present one, the grant will take effect in the future and not presently. In all previous cases in which we have given these words ("shall be and is hereby granted," etc.) the effect of an immediate and present transfer, it would be found that the law has designated a grantee qualified to take under terms of the law actually in existence at the time."

Contracts in regard to possessory interests in such lands made by the occupant before the Donation Act, were not invalidated by it, the Act only prohibiting the sale of such interests in future. Therefore the purchaser by such a contract acquired an equitable right to the land which might be enforced when he had obtained a legal title. Lamb v. Davenport, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 307; Starks v. Starrs, 94 U. S. 477. This is true although no constructive possession of public lands in the Territory of Oregon could be had prior to the Donation Act. Missionary Soc. v. Dalles City, 107 U. S. 335.

But, as has been seen, it is not always essential that a patent shall have been acquired in order to empower a party to alien his interest in lands claimed by virtue of the act. If his right to a patent has been completed, he may, before receiving the patent, sell and convey land even so as to cut off the rights of children, or heirs of husband or wife. Barney v. Dolf, 97 U. S. 652; Myers v. Croft, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 291; Thurston v. Alva, 45 Cal. 16.

In accordance with the principles above stated, under the act there was no grant of land to a settler until he had qualified himself to take as grantee by completing his four years of residence and cultivation, and performing such other acts as were required by the statute in order to protect and keep alive his claim. Therefore, such settler could not devise his interest in the land unless the fee passed to him before his death. Hall v. Russell, 101 U. S. 503.

The act authorized the right of only two classes of persons to dispose of their donation by will; namely, first, married persons who were settlers under the act and had complied with the provisions of the act, and die before the patent issues; second, alien

Prior to the act there could be no constructive possession of public lands, in the Territory of Oregon.¹

Other grants have been made at various times and under varying conditions, which call for no special treatment here.²

PUBLIC LAW—(See also INTERNATIONAL LAW, vol. 11, p. 431; LAW, vol. 12, p. 950).—Public law in one sense is a designation given to international law, as distinguished from the laws of a particular nation or state. In another sense, a law or statute that applies to the people generally of the nation or state adoptsettlers who die before their naturalization is completed. Hall v. Russell, 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 506, aff'd 101 U. S. 503.

Whether the husband or wife who takes as survivor the share of the deceased under the act takes as purchaser or by inheritance, the contracts of the husband concerning the equitable interest of the part allotted to him made before the act was passed are binding on the title which goes to his children by reason of a patent issued after the death of both husband and wife. Lamb v. Davenport, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 307.

1. Missionary Soc. v. Dalles City, 107 U. S. 336; Lounsedale v. Parrish, 21 How. (U. S.) 290; Stringfellow v. Cain, 99 U. S. 610.

2. Huntington Bay Grant.—Colonial patents of 1666, 1688 and 1694 granted to the town of Huntington a title to all lands south of Long Island Sound between certain fixed east and west points including "all havens harbors, waters, etc." Huntington Bay, a body of water lying between Lloyd's Neck and Eaton's Neck, on the north shore of Long Island, is a "haven" or "harbor" within the meaning of the patents, so that the title to the soil under the said bay passes to the trustees of the town by virtue of the said patents. Huntington v. Lowndes, 40 Fed. Rep. 625. The defendant in that case was once a citizen of New York, and had possessed during that time an oyster-bed in Huntington Bay, from 1867-1872, claiming that the said oyster-bed was upon the common lands of the State, but claimed no title to the soil himself. He then removed to, and thereafter resided in the State of Connecticut, but still continued to occupy the oyster-bed. It was held that when he removed from the State of New York, and gave up his citizenship, he at the same time yielded up whatever equitable right of ownership he might have had in the premises, and his use and occupation thereafter was that of a trespasser only, which could not by any lapse of time ripen either into a title in fee or to a right to continue the occupation thereof. Huntington v. Lowndes, 40 Fed. Rep. 625.

Other Grants.—For other miscellaneous grants of land see U. S. v. Des Moines River Nav. etc. Co., 43 Fed. Rep. 1 (grant to Iowa for purpose of improving the Des Moines River).

Authorities on Public Lands.—The subject of public lands receives brief attention in Tiedman on Real Property, § 682 and §§ 744-7; 3 Washb. on Real Property; 6 Lawson's Rights and Remedies, § 2696, et seq.; Gerard's Titles (a New York work); 2 Minor's Inst. 998 (concerning Virginia lands).

Copp's Public Lands contains all the United States statutes on the subject of public lands together with the decisions of the Department of the Interior and the various questions which have arisen. See also Lester's Land Laws; Kinney's Dig. of U. S. Supreme Ct. Reports.

Gould & Tucker's Notes on Rev. Stat. of U. S. contain all the later revisions of the statutes and references to all the leading cases.

There are numerous decisions by the State courts which have received no notice in this article; they relate chiefly to local matters, and depend upon special statutory enactments. It has not been thought necessary to incur this article with them, since they are of no value outside the State in which they were rendered, and within each State may be easily found from the State Digest. The article SPANISH LAND GRANTS will necessarily treat of many questions intimately connected with public lands.

ing or enacting it, is denominated a public law, as contradistinguished from a private law affecting only an individual or a small number of persons.¹

PUBLIC OFFICERS—(See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 3, p. 670, and the cross-references in the following analysis).

- I. Definition, 380.
- II. Essential Elements of Public Office, 382.
- III. Kinds of Offices and Officers, 390.
 1. Executive Officers (See also GOVERNOR, vol. 8, p. 1400; PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES), 391.
 2. Legislative Officers, 391.
 3. Judicial Officers (See also COURTS, vol. 4, p. 447; JUDGE, vol. 12, p. 2), 391.
 4. Ministerial Officers, 392.
 5. Civil Officers, 392.
 6. Military Officers (See also MILITARY LAW, vol. 15, p. 390), 392.
 7. Naval Officers, 392.
 8. Offices of Trust, 392.
 9. Offices of Profit, 393.
 10. Honorary Officers, 393.
 11. Officers De Jure, 394.
 12. Officers De Facto (See also DE FACTO OFFICERS, vol. 5, p. 92), 394.
 13. Usurpers or Intruders, 396.
- IV. Eligibility to Public Office, 397.
 1. Qualifications, 401.
 - a. Citizenship, 401.
 - b. Residence, 402.
 - c. Age, 402.
 - d. Sex, 403.
 - e. Mental Capacity, 405.
 - f. Property Qualifications, 406.
 2. Disqualification, 406.
 - a. By Holding Prior Office, 406.
 - b. For Criminal Acts, 409.
 3. Preference to Veterans, 412.
 4. Civil Service Examinations, 414.
- V. Right to Hold Office—How Conferred, 416.
 1. By Election (See ELECTIONS, vol. 6, p. 255), 417.
 2. By Appointment, 417.
 - a. The Appointing Power, 418.

- b. Exercise of the Power to Appoint, 423.
- c. Appointment by Concurrent Action of Two or More Officers or Bodies, 428.
- d. Filling Vacancies, 430.
- e. Evidence of Appointment, 435.

VI. Acceptance, 437.

VII. Qualification for Office, 440.

1. The Oath of Office (See also OATH, vol. 16, p. 1017), 443.
2. Official Bonds (See also BONDS, vol. 2, p. 448), 445.
 - a. When Required, 445.
 - b. Sureties (See SURETYSHIP), 445.

VIII. Entry Upon the Discharge of the Duties, 445.

IX. Trafficking in Offices and Contracts Concerning Offices and Officers (See ILLEGAL CONTRACTS, vol. 9, p. 879), 445.

1. Contracts to Secure Election or Appointment, 445.
2. Contracts for Influencing Official Action (See ILLEGAL CONTRACTS, vol. 9, p. 879), 448.
3. Contracts Respecting Compensation of Officers (See ILLEGAL CONTRACTS, vol. 9, p. 879), 448.

X. Power and Authority of Public Officers, 448.

1. Its Source and Nature, 448.
2. How Exercised, 455.
 - a. Delegation of Authority, 461.
 - b. Exercise of Power by Deputy (See DEPUTY, vol. 5, p. 623), 465.
 - c. Exercise of Joint Authority, 465.
 - d. In Whose Name Exercised, 468.
 - (1) By Officer, 468.

1. Morgan v. Cree, 46 Vt. 786; 14 Am. Rep. 640.

- (2) By Deputy (See also DEPUTY, vol. 5, p. 623), 469.
3. Disqualification to Act, 470.
- a. Of Ministerial Officers, 470.
- b. Of Judicial Officers (See JUDGE, vol. 12, p. 2), 471.
- c. Of Governmental and Political Officers, 471.
4. Ratification of Authority (See also AGENCY, vol. 1, p. 331), 471.
- XI. Duties of Public Officers, 477.
1. Their Character, 478.
2. Accountability for Public Property, 480.
- XII. Liabilities of Public Officers, 483.
1. Legislative Officers, 485.
2. Judicial Officers (See JUDGE, vol. 12, p. 2; JURISDICTION, vol. 12, p. 244), 486.
- a. Quasi-Judicial Officers, 486.
3. Ministerial Officers, 490.
- a. For Default of Official Subordinates, 495.
- b. For Default of Private Servants, 496.
- c. Liability on Their Official Contracts, 497.
- (1) Negotiable Instruments, 502.
- d. Criminal Liability, 502.
- (1) Particular Offenses, 504.
- XIII. Liability of the Public for the Acts of Its Officers and Agents, 506.
1. Contracts Made by Officers, 510.
2. Torts of Officers, 514.
- XIV. Liability of the Party at Whose Instance the Officer Acts, 515.
1. The General Rule, 515.
2. Various Classes of Proceedings, 516.
- a. Malicious Prosecution, 516.
- b. False Imprisonment, 516.
- c. Injunctions, 518.
- d. Attachments, 518.
- e. Proceedings Under an Unconstitutional Statute, 519.
- f. Executions, 519.
- g. Levy in Bankruptcy Proceedings, 521.
- h. Other Cases, 521.
3. Ratification, 522.
- XV. Rights of the Public Against Third Persons, 522.
- XVI. Rights of the Officer as Against Third Persons, 523.
- XVII. Compensation, 525.
1. From the Public, 525.
2. From the Individual for Whom the Officer Acts, 537.
3. Reimbursement and Indemnity, 540.
- XVIII. Particular Officers and Classes of Officers, 543.
1. Federal Officers, 543.
- a. Presidents and Heads of the Departments (See PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES; UNITED STATES; and supra, this title, Liabilities of Public Officers), 543.
- b. Congress (UNITED STATES; and supra, this title, Liability of Legislative Officers, 543).
- c. Judges of Federal Courts (See UNITED STATES COURTS), 544.
- d. United States Commissioners (See UNITED STATES COURTS), 544.
- e. United States Marshals (See SHERIFFS), 544.
2. State Officers (See also STATE AND STATE OFFICERS; GOVERNOR, vol. 8, p. 1400), 544.
3. County Officers (See also COUNTY COMMISSIONERS), vol. 4, p. 373; COUNTIES, vol. 4, p. 343; SHERIFFS; RECORDS; RECORDING ACTS), 544.
- a. County Treasurers, 544.
- b. County Clerks (See also infra, this title, Clerks of Court and County Recorder), 547.
- c. County Recorders (See RECORDING ACTS), 548.
- d. Collectors of Taxes (See TAXATION), 548.
- e. County Auditors (See COUNTIES, vol. 4, p. 343), 548.
4. Town Officers (See TOWNSHIPS), 548.
5. Municipal Officers, 548.
- a. Election and Appointment, 549.

- b. Powers and Duties, 552.*
 - (1) The Mayor, 554.
 - (2) Municipal Councils (See also MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, vol. 15, p. 1028), 555.
- c. Compensation, 555.*
- d. Liability of the Municipality for the Acts of Its Officers, 557.*
- e. Liability of the Officer to the Corporation, 562a.*
- f. Removals from Office, 562a.*
- 6. Court Officers (See also COURTS, vol. 4, p. 447), 562c.
 - a. Clerks of Courts, 562c.*
 - b. Court Attendants* (See SHERIFFS), 562j.
- 7. Police Officers, 562j.
- XIX. Duration of the Officer's Authority, 562k.
- XX. Termination of the Officer's Authority, 562o.
 - 1. By Expiration of His Term, 562o.
 - 2. By Resignation, 562r.
 - 3. By Acceptance of an Incompatible Office, 562u.
- a. Doctrine at Common Law, 562u.*
- b. Doctrine Under Statutes, 562b*.*
- 4. By Abandonment, 562c.*
- 5. Removal of Subordinate Officers, 562f.*
- 6. Removal by Legislative Action, 562p.*
- 7. Removal by Judicial Action, 562r.*
 - a. Impeachment* (See IMPEACHMENT, vol. 9, p. 951), 562s*.
 - b. Quo Warranto* (See QUO WARRANTO), 562s*.
- XXI. Remedies as Against Public Officers, 562s.*
 - 1. Injunctions (See INJUNCTIONS, vol. 10, p. 777), 562s*.
 - 2. Mandamus (See MANDAMUS, vol. 14, p. 88), 562s*.
 - 3. Certiorari (See CERTIORARI, vol. 3, p. 60), 562s*.
 - 4. Writ of Prohibition (See PROHIBITION, WRIT OF), 562s*.
- XXII. Procedure in Ordinary Actions by and Against Public Officers, 562s.*

I. DEFINITION.—An office is a position or station in which a person is employed to perform certain duties, or by virtue of which he becomes charged with the performance of certain duties, public or private,¹ and an officer is one who is lawfully invested with an office,² and a public office is a public charge or employ-

1. Burrill L. Dict.; Bunn v. People, 45 Ill. 397; People v. Langden, 40 Mich. 673; People v. Tweed, 13 Abb. Pr., N. S., (N. Y.) 419; State v. Kenyon, 7 Ohio St. 547; State v. Wilson, 24 Ohio St. 347.

In the abstract, office signifies a place of trust. People v. Stratton, 28 Cal. 382.

The term "office" has no legal or technical meaning attached to it distinct from its ordinary acceptation. Shelby v. Alcorn, 36 Miss. 273; 72 Am. Dec. 169; Hill v. Boyland, 40 Miss. 618; People v. Brooklyn, 77 N. Y. 503; 33 Am. Rep. 659.

An office consists in a right and a corresponding duty to execute a public or private trust, and to take the emoluments. 3 Kent's Com. 454; Com. v. Gamble, 62 Pa. St. 343; 1 Am. Rep. 422; Bunn v. People, 45 Ill. 397; State v. Wilson, 29 Ohio St.

347; Bowers v. Bowers, 26 Pa. St. 74; 67 Am. Dec. 398; Attorney-Gen'l v. Barstow, 4 Wis. 567; Butler v. Regents, 32 Wis. 124.

2. Bacon's Abr., tit. Office and Officer; Bouv. L. Dict.; Miller v. Sacramento Co., 25 Cal. 94; Bunn v. People, 45 Ill. 397; Olmstead v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 42 N. Y. Super. Ct. 481.

He who performs the duties of an office is an officer. U. S. v. Maurice, 2 Brock. (U. S.) 103; Hamlin v. Kassafer, 15 Oregon 456; 3 Am. St. Rep. 176; Bunn v. People, 45 Ill. 397.

An officer is one invested by a superior authority, particularly by government, with the duty of transacting affairs of a certain class; an incumbent of an office; a person designated to execute some function of government. And. L. Dict.; Abb. L. Dict. The meaning of the words "office and officer" necessarily varies with its ment imposed or conferred by appointment or authority of government and for public purposes,¹ and public officers are officers by whom the government performs its usual political functions—its functions of government.²

An office is a mere right to exercise a public function or employment,³ though it is an entity and may exist in fact though it use in different statutes, and to determine it correctly in a particular instance, regard must be had to the intention of the act and the subject-matter in respect to which the terms are used. Ryan v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 50 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 91.

1. U. S. v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 385; In re Oaths, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 492; In re Hathaway, 71 N. Y. 238; In re Wood, Hopk. (N. Y.) 6; Smith v. New York, 37 N. Y. 518; People v. Nichols, 52 N. Y. 478; 11 Am. Rep. 734; In re Dorsey, 7 Port. (Ala.) 293; Miller v. Sacramento Co., 25 Cal. 98; People v. Hayes, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 248; Olmstead v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 42 N. Y. Super. Ct. 481; Hill v. Boyland, 40 Miss. 618; Shelby v. Alcorn, 36 Miss. 273; 72 Am. Dec. 169; State v. Stanley, 66 N. Car. 59; 8 Am. Rep. 488; State v. Kennon, 7 Ohio St. 547; Hamlin v. Kassafer, 15 Oregon 456; 3 Am. St. Rep. 176.

An office is a public charge or employment, and the term seems to comprehend every charge or employment in which the public are interested. In re Wood, Hopk. (N. Y.) 6; People v. Hayes, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 248; People v. Brooklyn, 77 N. Y. 503; 33 Am. Rep. 659.

Whoever has a public charge or employment, or even a particular employment affecting the public, is said to hold or be in office. Rowland v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 83 N. Y. 372.

Office has been defined to mean public employment, and its legal meaning to be an employment on behalf of government in any station of public trust. A place of trust by virtue of which a person becomes charged with the performance of certain public duties. Smith v. Moore, 90 Ind. 294.

The word office is of very vague and indefinite import; everything concerning the administration of justice or general interests of society may be supposed to be within the meaning of the term, especially if fees and emoluments are annexed to the office. Com. v. Sutherland, 5 S. & R. (Pa.) 145; U. S. v. Hatch, 1 Pin. (Wis.) 182.

A civil office is a grant and possession of sovereign power, and the exercise of such power within the limits prescribed by law which creates the office constitutes the discharge of the duties of the office. State v. Valle, 41 Mo. 29; Opinion of Judges, 3 Me. 481; Shelby v. Alcorn, 36 Miss. 273; 72 Am. Dec. 169.

An office is a public position, to which a portion of the sovereignty of the country, either legislative, executive, or judicial attaches for the time being, and which is exercised for the benefit of the public. High Ex. Rem., §. 620; Eliason v. Coleman, 86 N. Car. 235; Doyle v. Raleigh, 89 N. Car. 133; 45 Am. Rep. 677.

The word "office" refers to the functions performed, and not to the place where the service is rendered. Stone v. U. S., 3 Ct. of Cl. 260.

2. Sheboygan Co. v. Parker, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 93; Bunn v. People, 45 Ill. 397; People v. Nostrand, 46 N. Y. 375; Rowland v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 83 N. Y. 376; State v. Stanly, 66 N. Car. 59; 8 Am. Rep. 488.

A public officer is one who has some duty to perform, concerning the public. Shelby v. Alcorn, 36 Miss. 273; 72 Am. Dec. 169; Hill v. Boyland, 40 Miss. 618.

Any person charged by law with the performance of public functions, affecting the general interests of society, especially if he be elected thereto by the people or appointed directly by the legislature, and who receives his compensation out of the public treasury, is a public officer. Hall v. State, 39 Wis. 79; Foltz v. Kerlin, 105 Ind. 221; 55 Am. Rep. 197; People v. Brooklyn, 77 N. Y. 503; 33 Am. Rep. 659; People v. Bedell, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 199.

In Rowland v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 83 N. Y. 372, the court by Danforth, J., said: "We are not to be too precise in seeking for words and definitions. We may look also at the intent of the statute and so ascertain the meaning of the words used, and who are aimed at."

3. Leach v. Cassidy, 23 Ind. 449; Waldo v. Wallace, 12 Ind. 569; Gos-

be without an incumbent;¹ and it is not property, nor are prospective fees of an office the property of the incumbent,² nor is it a subject of sale, purchase, or incumbrance.³

II. ESSENTIAL ELEMENTS OF PUBLIC OFFICE.—The term "office" implies a delegation of a portion of the sovereign power to and possession of it by the person filling the office⁴—a public office being an agency for the State,⁵ and the person whose duty it is man v. State, 106 Ind. 203; Miller v. Sacramento Co., 25 Cal. 94; People v. Stratton, 28 Cal. 382; Shelby v. Alcorn, 36 Miss. 273; 72 Am. Dec. 169; Olmstead v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 42 N. Y. Super. Ct. 481.

Webster defines office as a special duty, trust, or charge, conferred by authority and for a public purpose; an employment undertaken by the commission and authority of the government. See also Butler v. Regents, 32 Wis. 124.

1. People v. Stratton, 28 Cal. 382.

The power and jurisdiction of an officer, however, constitutes the office, and are of the essence of it, and inseparable from it. Com. v. Gamble, 62 Pa. St. 343; 1 Am. Rep. 422.

2. Smith v. New York, 37 N. Y. 518; Conner v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 5 N. Y. 285; State v. Davis, 44 Mo. 129; Prince v. Skillin, 71 Me. 361; 36 Am. Rep. 325; State v. Hawkins, 44 Ohio St. 109; State v. Douglass, 26 Wis. 428; 7 Am. Rep. 87. And see People v. Murray, 70 N. Y. 521.

Officers of government have no proprietary interest in their offices, and their rights are the mere consequence of their duties. State v. Dews, R. M. Charl. (Ga.) 397.

Under the constitution and laws of Alabama, an office is not property, but a mere public trust created for the benefit of the State and not for the advancement of the officer. And, unless expressly inhibited by the constitution, the legislature has entire control over the compensation of officers, whether the office is created by statute or owes its origin to the constitution. Ex parte Lambert, 52 Ala. 79; Beebe v. Robinson, 52 Ala. 67.

In North Carolina, it is held that an office is property, and that the incumbent has the same right to it that he has to any other property. King v. Hunter, 65 N. Car. 603; 6 Am. Rep. 754; Vann v. Pipkin, 77 N. Car. 408; Brown v. Turner, 70 N. Car. 93; Hoke v. Henderson, 4 Dev. (N. Car.) 1; 25 Am. Dec. 676. Subject, however, to legislative control in all that concerns the interests of the community. Hoke v. Henderson, 4 Dev. (N. Car.) 1; 25 Am. Dec. 676.

3. Smith v. New York, 37 N. Y. 518; Conner v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 5 N. Y. 285.

An office will not pass by an assignment by the incumbent of all his property, nor will such assignment affect his right to prospective fees. Smith v. New York, 37 N. Y. 518; Conner v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 5 N. Y. 285.

4. Opinion of Judges, 3 Me. 481; Miller v. Sacramento Co., 25 Cal. 98; People v. Middleton, 28 Cal. 603; Bunn v. People, 45 Ill. 397; State v. Kirk, 44 Ind. 401; 15 Am. Rep. 239; Lindsey v. Attorney-Gen'l, 33 Miss. 508; Shelby v. Alcorn, 36 Miss. 273; 72 Am. Dec. 169; Olmstead v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 42 N. Y. Super. Ct. 481; Doyle v. Raleigh, 89 N. Car. 133; 45 Am. Rep. 677; Eliason v. Coleman, 86 N. Car. 235; Worthy v. Barrett, 63 N. Car. 199; U. S. v. Hatch, 1 Pin. (Wis.) 182; Sheboygan Co. v. Parker, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 93.

In Attorney-Gen'l v. Barstow, 4 Wis. 567, it was said that the very legal idea of office is that it is derivative. That it has a source from whence it proceeds, a power which creates it, and to which it is responsible. In this sense of the term the king is not a public officer, and he is never so regarded in the British Constitution. Nor is the President of the United States such an officer, nor is a governor of a State, though their original creations of the very sovereign power in the organization of government emanate directly from the Constitution itself.

5. State v. Stanley, 66 N. Car. 59; 8 Am. Rep. 488; Augusta v. Sweeney, 44 Ga. 469; 9 Am. Rep. 172; State v. Judges, 21 Ohio St. 1; People v. Hayes, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 250; Conner v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 5 N. Y. 285; People v. Murray, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 42.

A school trustee, deriving his official character from general law and the election of the people of a given to perform the agency being a public officer.¹ The term embraces the idea of tenure, duration, emolument and duties,² and has respect to a permanent public trust to be exercised in behalf of government,³ and not to a merely transient occasional or inci-district, is as much a public agent as if he were the immediate agent of the State, or of one of its political divisions. Ogden v. Raymond, 22 Conn. 379; 58 Am. Dec. 429; and see People v. Bennett, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 480.

A board authorized to take measures in the manner prescribed to obtain a supply of water for the use of a city, and invested with the necessary power to accomplish the object, all their powers being derived from the act, and the board being a part of the local administration of the city, constitutes a civil office and not a mere agency. State v. Valle, 41 Mo. 29.

A treasurer or other person authorized to receive, hold or disburse public moneys is always a public officer. See Shelby v. Alcorn, 36 Miss. 273; 72 Am. Dec. 169; State v. Brandt, 41 Iowa 593; People v. McKinney, 10 Mich. 54; Lorillard v. Monroe, 11 N. Y. 392; 62 Am. Dec. 120; Com. v. Morrissey, 86 Pa. St. 416; Com. v. Evans, 74 Pa. St. 124; Brown v. Turner, 70 N. Car. 93; U. S. v. Bloomgart, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 356.

Selectmen who are invested with the function of a treasurer, upon failure of the town to elect such an officer, or who by special vote of the town, may be constituted a special agent of the town, to receive as well as to hold the funds of the town, are receivers of public money, and therefore public officers. State v. Boody, 53 N. H. 610.

1. State v. Stanley, 66 N. Car. 59; 8 Am. Rep. 488.

The test as to whether one is a city officer is whether his office constitutes part of the government of the city as organized by the act incorporating it. Greaton v. Griffin, 4 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 310.

Postmasters, Wiggins v. Hathaway, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 632; Spence v. Harvey, 22 Cal. 336; 83 Am. Dec. 69; deputy postmasters, Maxwell v. M'Ilvoy, 2 Bibb (Ky.) 211; Schroyer v. Lynch, 8 Watts (Pa.) 453; and mail contractors, Cornwell v. Vorhees, 13 Ohio 523; 42 Am. Dec. 206, are public agents acting for the general government in the performance of a function which the government is charged to have executed; but mail carriers are not. Sawyer v. Corse, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 230; 94 Am. Dec. 445.

2. U. S. v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 385; Olmstead v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 42 N. Y. Super. Ct. 481; Bunn v. People, 45 Ill. 397; Shelby v. Alcorn, 36 Miss. 273; 72 Am. Dec. 169.

Persons performing duties, and exercising functions in pursuance of statutory directions, and authority, of a various, delicate, and important nature, which could be successfully performed only by men of large experience and knowledge of affairs, and which are not merely subordinate and provisional, but in the highest degree authoritative, discretionary and final in their character, are not to be regarded as mere employes, agents, or committeemen, but are, properly speaking, officers, and the places which they hold are offices. In re Corliss, 11 R. I. 638; 23 Am. Rep. 538.

3. In re Hathaway, 71 N. Y. 238; People v. Brooklyn, 77 N. Y. 503; 33 Am. Rep. 659; People v. Nostrand, 46 N. Y. 375; State v. Anderson, 45 Ohio St. 196.

The practice of the law in the courts by attorneys is considered as a part of the administration of justice, and attorneys are considered as public officers. In re Wood, Hopk. (N. Y.) 7; and see Richardson v. Brooklyn, etc., R. Co., 22 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 368; Merritt v. Lambert, 10 Paige (N. Y.) 352; 2 Den. (N. Y.) 607; Watters v. Whittemore, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 593; In re Austin, 5 Rawle (Pa.) 191; 28 Am. Dec. 657; Thomas v. Steele, 22 Wis. 207; In re Mosness, 39 Wis. 509; 20 Am. Rep. 55. But the contrary was held in In re Dorsey, 7 Porter (Ala.) 293; In re Oaths, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 492; Leigh's Case, 1 Munf. (Va.) 468.

Trustees and directors and other officials of the benevolent institutions of the State are public officers. See People v. Nichols, 68 N. Car. 429; People v. Bledsoe, 68 N. Car. 457; State v. Wilson, 29 Ohio St. 347; People v. Sanderson, 30 Cal. 160.

The superintendent or principal keeper of the Albany county penitentiary is a public officer. Porter v. Pillsbury, 11 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 240.

dental employment.¹ A person in the service of the government who derives his position from a duly and legally authorized election or appointment,² whose duties are continuous in their nature³ and defined by rules prescribed by government and not by contract,⁴ consisting of the exercise of important public

A receiver of a national bank appointed in accordance with an act of Congress is an officer of the United States. Platt v. Beach, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 303.

1. In re Oaths, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 492; People v. Nichols, 52 N. Y. 478; 11 Am. Rep. 734; People v. Nostrand, 46 N. Y. 375; Hill v. Boyland, 40 Miss. 618; State v. Board of Public Works, 51 N. J. L. 240; State v. Wilson, 29 Ohio St. 347; U. S. v. Germaine, 99 U. S. 508; U. S. v. Maurice, 2 Brock. (U. S.) 96; U. S. v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 385; Sheboygan Co. v. Parker, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 93.

The idea of an officer clearly embraces the idea of tenure, duration, fees, or emoluments, rights and powers as well as that of duty; a public station or employment; an employment confirmed by appointment of government. People v. Nostrand, 46 N. Y. 375; In re Oaths, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 493.

2. U. S. v. Maurice, 2 Brock. (U. S.) 103; U. S. v. Smith, 124 U. S. 525; U. S. v. Mouat, 124 U. S. 303; U. S. v. Germaine, 99 U. S. 508; Platt v. Beach, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 303; Vaughn v. English, 8 Cal. 39; Bunn v. People, 45 Ill. 397; People v. Hayes, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 249; McCoy v. Curtice, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 17; 24 Am. Dec. 113; Ricketts v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 67 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 320; Collins v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 3 Hun (N. Y.) 680; Bradford v. Justices, 33 Ga. 332; State v. Castell, 22 La. Ann. 15; State v. Board of Public Works, 51 N. J. L. 240; State v. Wilson, 29 Ohio St. 347; Walker v. Cincinnati, 21 Ohio St. 14; 8 Am. Rep. 24.

Congress has by express enactment vested the appointment of cadet engineer in the Secretary of the Navy, and when thus appointed they become officers and not employés. U. S. v. Perkins, 116 U. S. 483; citing U. S. v. Germaine, 99 U. S. 508; U. S. v. Moore, 95 U. S. 760; U. S. v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 385.

The fact that the president of a city council is chosen by a limited elective body, composed of public officers, does not deprive him of the character of a public officer. State v. Anderson, 45 Ohio St. 196.

Where the other elements exist, it can make no difference whether or not a person is commissioned by the chief executive officer with the authentication of the seal of the State, in order to constitute him an officer. Bradford v. Justices, 33 Ga. 332.

An officer of the United States can only be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, or by a court of law or the head of a department. A person in the service of the government, who does not derive his position from one of these sources, is not an officer of the United States in the sense of the Constitution. U. S. v. Smith, 124 U. S. 525; U. S. v. Mouat, 124 U. S. 303; U. S. v. Germaine, 99 U. S. 508.

3. U. S. v. Maurice, 2 Brock. (U. S.) 103; Bunn v. People, 45 Ill. 397; State v. Board of Public Works, 51 N. J. L. 240; Hill v. Boyland, 40 Miss. 618; Shelby v. Alcorn, 36 Miss. 273; 72 Am. Dec. 169; State v. Wilson, 29 Ohio St. 347; Sheboygan Co. v. Parker, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 93.

A clerk of the district court is an inferior officer. Ex parte Hennen, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 230.

4. U. S. v. Maurice, 2 Brock. (U. S.) 103; U. S. v. Tinklepaugh, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 430; Ogden v. Raymond, 22 Conn. 379; 58 Am. Dec. 429; Bradford v. Justices, 33 Ga. 332; Bunn v. People, 45 Ill. 397; Ellis v. State, 4 Ind. 1; Prather v. Lexington, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 559; 56 Am. Dec. 585; McCoy v. Curtice, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 17; 24 Am. Dec. 113; Moser v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 21 Hun (N. Y.) 163; People v. Comptroller, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 595; Hill v. Boyland, 40 Miss. 618; Shelby v. Alcorn, 36 Miss. 273; 72 Am. Dec. 169; Com. v. Gamble, 62 Pa. St. 343; 1 Am. Rep. 422; State v. Wilson, 29 Ohio St. 347; State v. Anderson, 45 Ohio St. 196; State v. Valle, 41 Mo. 29; State v. Castell, 22 La. Ann. 15; Opinion of Justices, 3 Me. 481. And see Smith v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 67 Barb. (N. Y.) 223; Sweeny powers, trusts, or duties, as a part of the regular administration of the government,¹ the place and the duties remaining, though the incumbent dies or is changed,² and who receives his compensation out of the public treasury,³ is a public officer, and his charge or employment is a public office,⁴ every office in the constitutional meaning of the term implying an authority to

v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 5 Daly (N. Y.) 274; affirmed 58 N. Y. 625.

A deputy whose place is provided for and whose duties are prescribed by law is not a mere agent or servant, but is to a certain extent an independent public officer. Dayton v. Lynes, 30 Conn. 351; White v. State, 44 Ala. 409; Conwell v. Voorhies, 13 Ohio 523; 42 Am. Dec. 209; Towns v. Harris, 13 Tex. 507; Eastman v. Curtis, 4 Vt. 616; U. S. v. Martin, 17 Fed. Rep. 150; U. S. v. Tinklepaugh, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 430. But a special deputy employed for a particular purpose is a mere agent or servant. Kavanaugh v. State, 41 Ala. 399; Armstrong v. U. S., Gilp. (U. S.) 399.

A policeman of a city is a public officer holding his office as a trust from the State, and not as a matter of contract between himself and the city. Farrell v. Bridgeport, 45 Conn. 191. But police patrolmen are not "public officers." Shanley v. Brooklyn, 30 Hun (N. Y.) 396.

1. Bunn v. People, 45 Ill. 397; People v. Nostrand, 46 N. Y. 381; People v. Langdon, 40 Mich. 673; People v. McKinney, 10 Mich. 54; State v. Kennon, 7 Ohio St. 546; Walker v. Cincinnati, 21 Ohio St. 14; 8 Am. Rep. 24; State v. Wilson, 29 Ohio St. 347; Conwell v. Voorhees, 13 Ohio 523; 42 Am. Dec. 206; Sheboygan Co. v. Parker, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 93.

Office embraces the idea of rights and powers as well as that of duty, U. S. v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 385; Olmstead v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 42 N. Y. Super. Ct. Rep. 481.

Assessors, Lorillard v. Monroe, 11 N. Y. 392; 62 Am. Dec. 120, and collectors of taxes are public officers. State v. Walton, 62 Me. 106; Morse v. Lowell, 7 Met. (Mass.) 152; People v. Bedell, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 199; Lorillard v. Monroe, 11 N. Y. 392; 62 Am. Dec. 120.

The collector of delinquent taxes for Philadelphia is a public officer and therefore removable at the pleasure of the receiver of taxes. Houseman v. Com., 100 Pa. St. 222.

2. Bunn v. People, 45 Ill. 397; State

v. Wilson, 29 Ohio St. 347; U. S. v. Maurice, 2 Brock. (U. S.) 103.

Change from Territory to State.—Where an office is recognized both by the organic law of a territory and of the State created from the territory, the office remains the same, although dependent on varying provisions of law. People v. Jobs, 7 Colo. 589.

All officers of the old government, on the admission of the State, became ad interim, State officers. They could do no act prohibited by the constitution to regular State officers of like functions, but were not obliged to follow the mode of procedure prescribed for them. State v. Hitchcock, 1 Kan. 178; 81 Am. Dec. 503.

3. Hall v. State, 39 Wis. 79; Vaughn v. English, 8 Cal. 39; Foltz v. Kerlin, 105 Ind. 221; 55 Am. Rep. 197; People v. Brooklyn, 77 N. Y. 503; 33 Am. Rep. 659; People v. Bedell, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 199; Shelby v. Alcorn, 36 Miss. 273; 72 Am. Dec. 169; Lindsey v. Attorney-Genl., 33 Miss. 508.

A clerkship in the Treasury or in the Attorney-General's office is an office within the provision that no person shall be paid the salaries of two or more different offices on account of having performed the duties thereof. Talbot v. U. S., 10 Ct. of Cl. 426.

A court crier, whose appointment is authorized, and whose compensation is fixed by law, is a public officer. Ricketts v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 67 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 320.

4. U. S. v. Maurice, 2 Brock. (U. S.) 103.

The duty which a court attendant owes to perform such duties as are required to be performed by the court, and to aid in the proper business of the court, and to be present at its sittings, and execute its commands, secure due order in its proceedings, and attend upon juries, is regarded as a public duty, and the attendant is regarded as a public officer. Rowland v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 83 N. Y. 372; Moser v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 21 Hun (N. Y.) 163; Sweeney v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 5 Daly (N. Y.) 274. Formerly, however, they were regarded in New York not as exercise some portion of the sovereign power, either in making or executing or administering the laws.¹ But although an office is an employment, it does not follow that every employment is an office.²

A duty or employment arising out of contract, and dependent for its duration and extent upon the terms of such contract;³ or officers, but merely as servants of the court, performing such menial services as would be required of them from time to time. Wines v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 9 Hun (N. Y.) 659; Holley v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 56 N. Y. 166; Brennan v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 62 N. Y. 365; Rowland v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 44 N. Y. Super. Ct. 559.

A notary public is an officer known to the common law, the civil law, and the law of nations. Kiriksey v. Bates, 7 Port. (Ala.) 529; 31 Am. Dec. 722; Governor v. Gordon, 15 Ala. 72.

The city notary of the city of New Orleans, however, is not a municipal officer. State v. Castell, 22 La. Ann. 15.

In Goshen v. Stonington, 4 Conn. 209; 10 Am. Dec. 121, it was held that a clergyman, in the celebration of marriage, is a public civil officer, and his acts in that capacity are admissible as prima facie evidence of his official character. But see Union Church v. Saunders, 1 Houst. (Del.) 100; 63 Am. Dec. 187.

1. Opinion of Judges, 3 Me. 481; Bunn v. People, 45 Ill. 397; Lindsey v. Attorney-Gen'l, 33 Miss. 508; Shelby v. Alcorn, 36 Miss. 273; 72 Am. Dec. 169; People v. Nostrand, 46 N. Y. 375; Olmstead v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 42 N. Y. Super. Ct. 481; U. S. v. Hatch, 1 Pin. (Wis.) 182.

The true test of a public office is that it is parcel of the administration of the government, civil or military, or is itself created directly by the law-making power. Eliason v. Coleman, 86 N. Car. 235.

Commissioners appointed by the legislature on behalf of the State to sign an issue to the city treasury certain city treasury warrants to be issued and circulated as money, are not officers or agents of the corporation; they are State officers only. Garnier v. St. Louis, 37 Mo. 554.

An inspector is an officer of the customs, and may visit vessels to discover if any goods are illegally on board, and, if obstructed in so doing, an indictment lies under § 71 of the Collection Act of March 1, 1799, ch. 128. U. S. v. Sears, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 215.

A United States marshal is an officer within the meaning of the revised statutes of the United States, to whom it is a criminal offense for a deputy marshal to present a false claim for fees for approval. U. S. v. Strobach, 4 Woods (U. S.) 592.

2. U. S. v. Maurice, 2 Brock. (U. S.) 96; Hall v. Wisconsin, 103 U. S. 5.

As to who are public officers under particular constitutional and statutory provisions, see generally Rowell v. Horton, 58 Vt. 1; Armstrong v. U. S., Gilp. (U. S.) 399; Wilcox v. Hemming, 58 Wis. 144; 46 Am. Rep. 625; Com. v. Evans, 74 Pa. St. 124; Platt v. Beach, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 303; U. S. v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 385; U. S. v. Bloomgart, 2 Ben. 356; Castle v. Lawlor, 47 Conn. 340; Jacksonville v. Allen, 25 Ill. App. 54; State v. Wilson, 29 Ohio St. 347; Dullam v. Wilson, 53 Mich. 392; 51 Am. Rep. 128; Talbot v. U. S., 10 Ct. of Cl. 426; U. S. v. Smith, 124 U. S. 525; U. S. v. Mouat, 124 U. S. 303; People v. McKinney, 10 Mich. 54; People v. Board of Police, 75 N. Y. 38; In re Carpenter, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 30; Mangam v. Brooklyn, 98 N. Y. 585; 50 Am. Rep. 705; In re Stuart, 53 Cal. 745; People v. Ct. of General Sessions, 13 Hun (N. Y.) 395; Ex parte Hennen, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 230; Enkle v. Edgar, 63 Cal. 188; State v. Castell, 22 La. Ann. 15; Britton v. Steber, 62 Mo. 370; State v. Walsh, 69 Mo. 408; Seiple v. Mayor, etc., of Elizabeth, 27 N. J. L. 407; People v. Bledsoe, 68 N. Car. 457; Fisher v. Cortland, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 173; State v. Wells, 112 Ind. 237; Dolan v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 6 Hun (N. Y.) 506; Hauck v. State, 45 Ohio St. 439; People v. Nichols, 68 N. Car. 429; Attorney-Gen'l. v. Barstow, 4 Wis. 567; Auffmordt v. Hedden, 30 Fed. Rep. 360; Jacksonville v. Allen, 25 Ill. App. 54; U. S. v. Hendee, 124 U. S. 309; Sawyer v. Corse, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 230; 94 Am. Dec. 445; U. S. v. Cook, 128 U. S. 254; People v. Perry, 79 Cal. 105; State v. Connelly, 104 N. Car. 794; State v. Gt. Man, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 472.

3. Shelby v. Alcorn, 36 Miss. 273; 72 Am. Dec. 169; Detroit Free Press Co.

a position, the duties of which are undefined, and which can be changed at the will of the superior;¹ or, a species of service performed under public authority, and for public good, but not in the execution of any standing laws which are considered as rules of action and guardians of rights;² or a public agency, for the performance of acts in behalf of the principal,

v. State Auditors, 47 Mich. 135; Olmstead v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 42 N. Y. Super. Ct. 481; State v. Board of Public Works, 51 N. J. L. 240; Brown v. Turner, 70 N. Car. 93; Eliason v. Coleman, 86 N. Car. 235; Butler v. Regents, 32 Wis. 124; Hall v. Wisconsin, 103 U. S. 5; U. S. v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 385.

A government office is different from a government contract. The latter from its nature is necessarily limited in its duration, and specific in its objects. The terms agreed upon define the rights and obligations of both parties, and neither may depart from them without the assent of the other. U. S. v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 385; citing U. S. v. Mauriee, 2 Brock. (U. S.) 103; Jackson v. Healy, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 495; Vaughn v. English, 8 Cal. 39; Sandford v. Boyd, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 79; Ex parte Smith, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 693.

A contractor is not an officer of government, when he undertakes to perform work or render services for the government for a compensation, to be paid to him with a view to his own profit, and when his subordinates are employed and paid by him, and are liable to be dismissed at his pleasure. Sawyer v. Corse, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 230; 94 Am. Dec. 445.

1. People v. Langdon, 40 Mich. 673; Kavanaugh v. State, 41 Ala. 399; Opinion of Judges, 3 Me. 481; Olmstead v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 42 N. Y. Super. Ct. 481; State v. Board of Public Works, 51 N. J. L. 240; Smith v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 67 Barb. (N. Y.) 223; Lindsey v. Attorney-Gen'l., 33 Miss. 308; U. S. v. Smith, 124 U. S. 525; Armstrong v. U. S., Gilp. (U. S.) 399.

A person who receives no certificate of appointment as an officer, is not required to take any oath, has no term or tenure, and neither discharges duties nor exercises powers depending directly on authority of law, but serves upon the request of a public board, being responsible only to them, is not an officer, although his duties may involve high professional skill, and duties of dignity and importance in connection with public affairs, such as those of the superintending architect of public works. Olmstead v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 42 N. Y. Super. Ct. 289.

A person in the employment of the public service of the United States, who was appointed pursuant to law and whose compensation is fixed by law, when the vacation of the office of his superior would not have affected the tenure of his place, his duties being continuing and permanent, and not occasional or temporary, however, is a public officer, though his duties are only such as his superior in office should prescribe. U. S. v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 385.

A deputy clerkship of a county court is not such an office as cannot be filled by a woman. Jeffries v. Harrington, 11 Colo. 191.

2. Opinion of Judges, 3 Me. 481; People v. Middleton, 28 Cal. 605; Smith v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 67 Barb. (N. Y.) 223; Olmstead v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 42 N. Y. Super. Ct. 481; State v. Gardner, 43 Ala. 234; State v. Platt, 4 Harr. (Del.) 154; McArthur v. Nelson, 81 Ky. 67; Doyle v. Raleigh, 89 N. Car. 133; 45 Am. Rep. 677; State v. Board of Public Works, 51 N. J. L. 240; Walker v. Cincinnati, 21 Ohio 14; 8 Am. Rep. 24; Bunn v. People, 45 Ill. 397; U. S. v. Smith, 124 U. S. 525.

Firemen and officers of the fire department are not officers, but mere agents of the municipality. People v. Pinckney, 32 N. Y. 377.

The chief clerk in the office of the assessor of the city of Detroit, is not an officer, even though he is independent of the assessor in the tenure of his position. People v. Langdon, 40 Mich. 673.

A road supervisor is not a public officer. State v. Putnam, 35 Iowa 561; nor is a police jurymen, State v. Montgomery, 25 La. Ann. 138; nor is the medical superintendent of the asylum for the insane at Ward's Island. Macdonald v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 32 Hun (N. Y.) 89; nor a bridge tender. State the public, whose sanction is necessary to give the acts performed the power and authority of law;¹ or an employment for a special and single object, in which there is no enduring element;² or an agency, the duties of which when completed, though years may be required for their performance, terminates the employment³ or the duties of which are not continuing and permanent but occasional and intermittent⁴ is not an office but a mere employment, and the incumbent is not an officer but a mere employé.⁵

v. Board of Public Works, 51 N. J. L. 240.

1. Opinion of Judges, 3 Me. 481; and see Lindsey v. Attorney Gen'l., 33 Miss. 508; Sheboygan Co. v. Parker, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 93.

The enrolling clerk of the House of Representatives is not an officer, but a mere employé. State v. Gardner, 43 Ala. 234.

An assistant postmaster is merely a servant or agent of the postmaster who is therefore liable for the former's negligence. Coleman v. Frazier, 4 Rich. (S. Car.) 14; 53 Am. Dec. 727.

2. Bunn v. People, 45 Ill. 397; Kavanaugh v. State, 41 Ala. 399; Greaton v. Griffin, 4 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 310; People v. Nichols, 52 N. Y. 478; 11 Am. Rep. 734; Shepherd v. Com., 1 S. & R. (Pa.) 1; Auffmordt v. Hedden, 30 Fed. Rep. 360; and see Kavanaugh v. State, 41 Ala. 399.

A guardian of an infant is not a public officer within the meaning of the statutes prescribing the time within which actions upon the bonds of public officers shall be brought. Peelle v. State, 118 Ind. 512; Owen v. State, 25 Ind. 107.

The board of supervisors of a county is not such a public officer as is contemplated by the statute referring to double costs on final determination in its favor of a trial upon mandamus. People v. Niagara Co., 50 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 353.

3. Bunn v. People, 45 Ill. 397; McArthur v. Nelson, 81 Ky. 67; Walker v. Cincinnati, 21 Ohio St. 14; 8 Am. Rep. 24; David v. Portland Water Committee, 14 Oregon 98; Greaton v. Griffin, 4 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 310.

A road supervisor is not such an officer as is referred to in the statute making resistance to officers in the service of process, or in the discharge of their duties, a crime. State v. Putnam, 35 Iowa 561.

4. U. S. v. Germaine, 99 U. S. 508;

State v. Board of Public Works, 51 N. J. L. 240; Olmstead v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 42 N. Y. Super. Ct. 431; Com. v. Lehman, 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 149; U. S. v. Hatch, 1 Pin. (Wis.) 182; Auffmordt v. Hedden, 30 Fed. Rep. 360; Sheboygan Co. v. Parker, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 93.

A pilot is not a public officer. Dean v. Healy, 66 Ga. 503.

Commissioners appointed under the statutes of Louisiana, providing for the liquidation of banks are not public officers. Conrey v. Copland, 4 La. Ann. 307.

Persons licensed under the revenue laws of the United States to trade with officers, soldiers, and the inhabitants of the surrounding country in war time, are not officers of the United States. State v. Bell, Phill. (N. Car.) 76.

An act of Congress empowering justices of the peace to arrest and commit persons charged with violation of the criminal laws of the United States, does not make justices of the peace exercising such power officers of the Federal government. Ex parte Gist, 26 Ala. 156.

5. See Shelby v. Alcorn, 36 Miss. 273; 72 Am. Dec. 169; and see cases above cited.

The legislature has full power to appoint and employ all such agents as might be deemed necessary by them to perform duties, not of a permanent, but of a transient or incidental character, and such employés are never exalted to the position of a public officer, though their duties might require months or years for their full performance. Bunn v. People, 45 Ill. 397.

While a public printer is not usually a public officer, it is entirely competent for the legislature to make him one. Walker v. Dunham, 17 Ind. 483; Ellis v. State, 4 Ind. 1. And see Brown v. Turner, 70 N. Car. 93; Com.

Compensation or emoluments is a usual incident to office,¹ but it is not a necessary element² and public officers are usually though not universally required to take an oath.³ The duty of appointing others to office constitutes of itself a public office,⁴ the power of appointment and removal of officers and filling of vacancies which may occur in offices being a high public function and trust, and persons vested with such power hold and exercise a public franchise and office.⁵

That the duration of the tenure of the place is for a short or indefinite period is immaterial,⁶ and the official or unofficial character of a position is not to be determined by its name, nor by

v. Binns, 17 S. & R. (Pa.) 219. His clerks and employes, however, are not officers. Clapp v. U. S., 7 Ct. of Cl. 351.

Where the public printing is by law to be contracted for, the person doing it is not a public officer. Brown v. Turner, 70 N. Car. 93.

The word employé is more extensive than "clerk" or "officer," signifying any one in place, or having charge or using a function, as well as one in office. Stone v. U. S., 3 Ct. of Cl. 260.

1. State v. Kennon, 7 Ohio St. 546; State v. Wilson, 29 Ohio St. 347; Shelby v. Alcorn, 36 Miss. 273; 72 Am. Dec. 169; People v. Nostrand, 46 N. Y. 375; State v. Stanley, 66 N. Car. 59; 8 Am. Rep. 488; State v. Tate, 68 N. Car. 547; Hall v. Wisconsin, 103 U. S. 5.

The existence of a statutory provision providing for emoluments is a ground, which, taken with others, will constitute an office. See U. S. v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 393; Ellis v. State, 4 Ind. 1; People v. Nostrand, 46 N. Y. 375; Ricketts v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 67 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 320.

2. State v. Kennon, 7 Ohio St. 546; State v. Anderson, 45 Ohio St. 347; State v. Stanly, 66 N. Car. 59; 8 Am. Rep. 488.

3. State v. Stanley, 66 N. Car. 59; 8 Am. Rep. 488; In re Wood, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 29, note; and see State v. Brandt, 41 Iowa 593; Kavanaugh v. State, 41 Ala. 399; Lindsey v. Attorney Genl., 33 Miss. 508; Shelby v. Alcorn, 36 Miss. 273; 72 Am. Dec. 169; State v. Wilson, 29 Ohio St. 347; Sawyer v. Corse, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 230; 94 Am. Dec. 445; Hall v. Wisconsin, 103 U. S. 5; Sweeny v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 5 Daly (N. Y.) 274; affirmed 58 N. Y. 625.

In Collins v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 3

Hun (N. Y.) 680, it was held that the true test to distinguish officers from mere servants or employes, probably is in the obligation to take the oath prescribed by law. See also Worthy v. Barrett, 63 N. Car. 199.

In David v. Portland Water Committee, 14 Oregon 98, it was suggested that an act providing for the appointment of a committee, need not require the members of the committee to take an oath of office and still be valid, even if they came under the denomination of officers under the Constitution. See also State v. Stanley, 66 N. Car. 59; 8 Am. Rep. 488; State v. Tate, 68 N. Car. 547.

4. State v. Stanley, 66 N. Car. 59; 8 Am. Rep. 488; State v. Tate, 68 N. Car. 547; Bunn v. People, 45 Ill. 397; Wiggins v. Hathaway, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 632; State v. Kennon, 7 Ohio St. 546; U. S. v. Tinklepaugh, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 425; and see State v. Anderson, 45 Ohio St. 196.

5. Bunn v. People, 45 Ill. 397; State v. Kennon, 7 Ohio St. 546.

6. Com. v. Evans, 74 Pa. St. 124; Vaughn v. English, 8 Cal. 39; People v. Comptroller, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 595; State v. Stanley, 66 N. Car. 64; 8 Am. Rep. 488. And see David v. Portland Water Committee, 14 Oregon 98.

All persons who, by authority of law are intrusted with the receipt of public money, or through whose hands money due to the public may pass to the treasury, are public officers, whether the service be general or special, transient or permanent. Brown v. Turner, 70 N. Car. 93; Com. v. Evans, 74 Pa. St. 124; and see People v. Nostrand, 46 N. Y. 375.

In Ellis v. State, 4 Ind. 1, however, it was held that the fact that the tenure of office was prescribed by statute was a ground for holding it to be an office.

the presence or absence of an official designation.¹ It is the duty of an officer, and the nature of that duty which makes him a public officer, and not the extent of his authority;² office importing the discretionary exercise of some sovereign function, whether great or small within the limits prescribed by law.³

III. KINDS OF OFFICES AND OFFICERS.—Public offices and public officers may be divided with reference to the nature and character of the duties devolving upon them, into executive, legislative, judicial and ministerial offices and officers, and some or all of these may be again divided with reference to the governmental departments within which they fall, into civil, military and naval

1. State v. Kennon, 7 Ohio St. 547; Bunn v. People, 45 Ill. 397; U. S. v. Mouat, 124 U. S. 303; U. S. v. Hendee, 124 U. S. 309.

In Lindsey v. Attorney-Gen'l, 33 Miss. 508, however, it was held that the very name of a pension agency imports that it is an agency as contradistinguished from an office, and in State v. Wilson, 29 Ohio St. 347, the fact that the law creating an office denominated the incumbent an officer and called the place an office, was held to be an indication of his being an officer. And see also People v. Hayes, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 249; People v. Comptroller, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 595; People v. Langdon, 40 Mich. 373.

It has been held that the designation of a place as an "office" in the statute providing for it, is a reason for determining it to be an office. Bradford v. Justices, 33 Ga. 332; State v. Wilson, 29 Ohio St. 347; Urket v. Coryell, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 60; U. S. v. Tinklepaugh, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 430; People v. Comptroller, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 595; State v. Wharton, 24 La. Ann. 7.

2. Vaughn v. English, 8 Cal. 39; Bunn v. People, 45 Ill. 397; People v. Bedell, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 199; State v. Kennon, 7 Ohio St. 547; and see Lorillard v. Monroe, 11 N. Y. 392; 62 Am. Dec. 120.

County commissioners are officers. Hummell's Case, 9 Watts (Pa.) 416.

Municipal officers are none the less civil officers under the State, because their functions are confined to the local administration, where the offices are created, and the officers are appointed, and their powers given, and their duties defined, and their salaries fixed direct by act of the legislature. State v. Valle, 41 Mo. 29.

A school trustee deriving his official character from general law, and the election of the people of a given district, is as much a public agent, as if he were the immediate agent of the State, or of one of its political divisions. Ogden v. Raymond, 22 Conn. 379; 58 Am. Dec. 429.

In Com. v. Lehman, 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 144, however, it was held that places, the duties of which are temporary and local, are not embraced in a general provision of the constitution giving to the governor power to appoint to offices established by law.

A position without duties is not an office. Com. v. Gamble, 62 Pa. St. 343; 1 Am. Rep. 422, the court by Thompson, C. J., saying: "It seems like solecism to regard that to be an office in this country to which there are no duties assigned."

3. Opinion of Judges, 3 Me. 481.

Legislators are officers. Morrill v. Haines, 2 N. H. 246; State v. Boody, 53 N. H. 610; In re Newport Charter, 14 R. I. 655; People v. Brooklyn, 77 N. Y. 503; 33 Am. Rep. 659; Hill v. Boyland, 40 Miss. 619.

Persons to whom judicial powers are intrusted are public officers. Poeple v. Ransom, 58 Cal. 558; Bishop v. Oakland, 58 Cal. 572; Com. v. Gamble, 62 Pa. St. 343; 1 Am. Rep. 422.

So are persons exercising executive functions, whether under United States, State, or municipal government, including marshals and their deputies, sheriffs and their deputies, and other subordinate officers, besides the executive heads of government. See U. S. v. Martin, 17 Fed. Rep. 150; U. S. v. Tinklepaugh, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 428; McCoy v. Curtice, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 17; 24 Am. Dec. 114; Dayton v. Lynes, 30 Conn. 351; Eastman v. Curtis, 4 Vt. 616.

In North Carolina, however, members of the legislature are not considered offices and officers, and still another division of the whole may be made with reference to the qualification and compensation of the incumbent of the office into offices of trust, offices of profit, and honorary offices, while officers may be considered with reference to the legality and character of their title to the offices occupied by them, as officers de jure, officers de facto, and usurpers or intruders.¹

1. Executive Officers.—(See also GOVERNOR;² PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES).—Executive officers are those whose duties are mainly to cause the laws to be executed.³

2. Legislative Officers.—Legislative officers are those whose duties relate mainly to the enactment of laws, such as members of Congress, and of the several State legislatures.⁴

3. Judicial Officers.—(See also COURTS;⁵ JUDGE⁶).—Judicial officers are those whose duties are to decide controversies between individuals, and accusations made in the name of the public against persons charged with a violation of the law.⁷

to be officers. Theirs are places of trust and profit, but not offices of trust and profit. Worthy v. Barrett, 63 N. Car. 199; Doyle v. Raleigh, 89 N. Car. 133; 45 Am. Rep. 677.

1. Political offices are such as are not connected immediately with the administration of justice, or the execution of the mandates of a superior officer. The offices of the President of the United States, of the heads of the departments, and of the members of the legislature, are of this number. Bouv. L. Dict.

2. Vol. 8, p. 1400.

3. Bouv. L. Dict.; People v. San Francisco, 4 Cal. 127.

Executive power is the power to execute the laws, and is vested in the governor of the State; the administrative officers of the State, counties, townships, towns, and cities. State v. Hyde, 121 Ind. 20.

Executive duties are such as concern the execution of existing laws. Peterson v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 17 N. Y. 449.

4. Bouv. L. Dict.

Legislative power is the power to enact, alter, and repeal laws. Hovey v. State, 119 Ind. 395; State v. Hyde, 121 Ind. 20; Hawkins v. Governor, 1 Ark. 570; 33 Am. Dec. 346; Lafayette, etc., R. Co. v. Geiger, 34 Ind. 185; Greenough v. Greenough, 11 Pa. St. 489; 51 Am. Dec. 567; Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 449; In re Canada Southern R. Co., 7 Fed. Rep. 653.

And see Merrill v. Sherburne, 1 N. H. 199; 8 Am. Dec. 52.

The legislative department prescribes what the law shall be in future cases arising under it. Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 700; Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 426.

The power of the legislature is not judicial. It is limited to the making of laws, not to the exposition or execution of them. DeChastellux v. Fairchild, 15 Pa. St. 18; 53 Am. Dec. 570.

5. Vol. 4, p. 447.

6. Vol. 12, p. 2.

7. Bouv. L. Dict.; Black's L. Dict.; Lewis v. Webb, 3 Me. 326; Merrill v. Shurburne, 1 N. H. 199; 8 Am. Dec. 52.

Judicial power is the power to construe and interpret the constitution and laws, and to render judgments, and make decrees determining private controversies. Hovey v. State, 119 Ind. 395; State v. Hyde, 121 Ind. 20.

Whatever emanates from a judge as such, or proceeds from courts of justice, is judicial. In re Cooper, 22 N. Y. 67.

The judicial department determines what the law is, and what the rights of parties are, with reference to transactions already had. Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 700; Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 426.

To declare what the law shall be is a legislative power. To declare what it is or has been, is judicial. Dash v. Van Kleeck, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 498; 5 Am. Dec. 291; People v. Keeler, 99 N. Y. 463.

4. Ministerial Officers.—Ministerial officers are those whose duty it is to execute the mandates, lawfully issued, of their superiors,¹ officers of justice charged with the execution of the law,² a ministerial duty being one in respect to which nothing is left to the discretion of the officer.³

5. Civil Officers.—Civil, as contrasted with military officers, include all who are engaged in the service of government, distinct from those engaged in the military or naval service.⁴ Under the Constitution, all officers of the United States who hold their appointments under the National Government, whether their duties are executive or judicial, in the highest or in the lowest departments of the government, with the exception of officers of the army or navy, are civil officers.⁵

6. Military Officers—(See also MILITARY LAW⁶).—Military officers are those who have command in the army,⁷ military offices being such as are held by soldiers and sailors for military purposes.⁸

7. Naval Officers.—Naval officers are those who are in command in the navy.⁹

8. Offices of Trust.—An office, the duties and functions of which require the exercise of discretion, judgment, experience, and skill, is an office of trust, and it is not necessary that the officer should have the handling of public money or property, or the care and oversight of some pecuniary interest of the government.¹⁰

1. Bouv. L. Dict.

2. Black's L. Dict.

3. Mississippi v. Johnson, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 498; Pennington v. Streight, 54 Ind. 376.

4. See And. L. Dict., tit. Civil; 1 Story Const., § 791; State v. Valle, 41 Mo. 29.

Civil officers embrace only those officers in whom a portion of the sovereignty is vested, or to whom the enforcement of municipal regulations or the control of the general interests of such is confided. U. S. v. Hatch, 1 Pin. (Wis.) 182.

5. And. L. Dict., tit. Officers; Black's L. Dict., tit. Civil Officers; 1 Story Const., § 792; Mechem Pub. Off., § 24; and see Crawford v. Dunbar, 52 Cal. 36; State v. Valle, 41 Mo. 29.

Where the services of persons employed by the government are special, being rendered to it as a government, and whose salary or pay is directly or indirectly fixed and limited by law, such persons are in the "civil service of the United States," while those whose services are such as might be rendered to an employer, whose wages come under the restrictions of no statute, and who receive for their services whatever such services may be worth in the place where they happen to be rendered, are not in the civil service. Baker's Case, 4 Ct. of Cl. 227.

The post of treasurer of a public corporation, such as the city of Wilmington, in Delaware, is not a civil office within the meaning of the constitutional exclusion of the clergy from civil office. State v. Wilmington, 3 Harr. (Del.) 294.

6. Vol. 15, p. 390.

7. Bouv. L. Dict.

Officers of the army, as used in the United States statutes, refer to commissioned officers. Non-commissioned officers are not officers in the sense in which the latter term is generally used. Babbitt v. U. S., 16 Ct. of Cl. 202.

8. Bouv. L. Dict.

The office of colonel or volunteer in the military service of the United States, as now organized, is not an office in the militia. Kerr v. Jones, 19 Ind. 351.

9. Bouv. L. Dict.

10. Mechem's Pub. Off., § 16; citing In re Corlies, 11 R. I. 638; 23 Am. Rep. 538; Doyle v. Raleigh, 89 N. Car. 133; 45 Am. Rep. 677; and see Ellis v. State, 4 Ind. 1; People v.

9. Offices of Profit.—An office of profit or a lucrative office is one to which there is attached a compensation for services rendered; the word lucrative meaning yielding lucre; gainful; profitable.¹ The lucrativeness of an office, however, does not depend upon the amount of compensation affixed to it.²

All offices of profit are necessarily offices of trust and must therefore be included in those of the latter description,³ but offices of trust are not necessarily offices of profit.⁴

10. Honorary Offices.—Where no salary or fees are annexed to an office, it is a naked or honorary office, and is supposed to be accepted merely for the public good.⁵

Nichols, 52 N. Y. 478; 11 Am. Rep. 734; State v. De Gress, 53 Tex. 387; McGregor v. Balch, 14 Vt. 428; 39 Am. Dec. 231.

In In re Corliss, 11 R. I. 638; 23 Am. Rep. 538, the court, speaking of the office of commissioner of the United States Centennial Commission, said: "We think it is an office of trust. It is true that originally the United States had no pecuniary interest in the exhibition. The commissioners, however, were to be intrusted with a large supervisory and regulative control of the property sent for exhibition, and from time to time the government gave its sanction to the exhibition. The honor and reputation of the United States were pledged for its proper management to its own citizens, and to foreign nations. From that time the honor and reputation of the United States were largely in the keeping of the commissioners, and in this view there was a very delicate and important trust reposed in them. It would be a narrow, and, we think, an improper interpretation to hold that an office is an office of trust only when the officer has the handling of public money or property, or the care and oversight of some pecuniary interest of the government."

1. State v. Kirk, 44 Ind. 401; 15 Am. Rep. 239; Foltz v. Kerlin, 105 Ind. 221; 55 Am. Rep. 197; People v. Whitman, 10 Cal. 38; State v. Valle, 41 Mo. 29. And see Doyle v. Raleigh, 89 N. Car. 133; 45 Am. Rep. 677; Castle v. Lawlor, 47 Conn. 340.

An office is not an office of profit under the United States, when the officer is not entitled to any pay from the United States, nor to any perquisite or emolument under any law of the United States. In re Corliss, 11 R. I. 638; 23 Am. Rep. 538.

As to what particular offices are offices of trust and profit, see Ellis v. State, 4 Ind. 1; Howard v. Shoemaker, 35 Ind. 111; Kerr v. Jones, 19 Ind. 351; Dailey v. State, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 329; Dickson v. Brown, 17 Ill. 191; Doyle v. Raleigh, 89 N. Car. 133; 45 Am. Dec. 677; Crawford v. Dunbar, 52 Cal. 36; People v. Whitman, 10 Cal. 38; State v. Valle, 41 Mo. 29; State v. DeGress, 53 Tex. 387; McGregor v. Balch, 14 Vt. 428; 39 Am. Dec. 231; Leigh's Case, 1 Munf. (Va.) 468.

2. Dailey v. State, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 329; Dickson v. Brown, 17 Ill. 191; State v. Kirk, 44 Ind. 401; 15 Am. Rep. 239.

The office of surveyor-general is a "lucrative office," and that of comptroller an "office of profit," under the constitution of California. People v. Whitman, 10 Cal. 38.

Officers of the United States on the retired list constitute a part of the army of the United States. They retain the actual rank held by them at the day of their retirement; receive seventy-five per cent. of the pay of that rank; are subject to trial by court-martial, and may be assigned to duty at the soldiers' home. Such an officer holds a lucrative office under the United States—an office of trust or profit in contemplation of the constitution of Texas. State v. DeGress, 53 Tex. 387.

The words "lucrative office," as used in the California constitution, art. 4, § 20, refer solely to offices under the United States. People v. Leonard, 73 Cal. 230.

3. Doty v. State, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 529; and see also Doyle v. Raleigh, 89 N. Car. 133; 45 Am. Rep. 677; State v. Valle, 41 Mo. 29.

4. See In re Corliss, 11 R. I. 638; 23 Am. Rep. 538.

5. State v. Stanley, 66 N. Car. 59; 8 Am. Rep. 488; Dickson v. Brown, 17 Ill. 191.

11. Officers De Jure.—An officer de jure is one who is clothed with full legal right and title to the office; though circumstances, such as the intrusion of an unauthorized person, may prevent his performance of the duties of the office.¹

Within the scope of his authority the acts of an officer de jure are valid for all purposes.² And where the officer de jure is also the officer de facto the lawful title and possession are united.³

12. Officers De Facto—(See also DE FACTO OFFICERS⁴).—An officer de facto is one who, having some apparent authority or color of title to the office, or who has the reputation of being the officer he assumes to be, is in actual possession of the position, exercising its functions, though his appointment or election may have been irregular, illegal or of undetermined legality.⁵

The distinction between an officer de jure and an officer de facto is that an officer de jure is one who has the lawful right or title without the possession of the office, while an officer de facto has the possession and performs the duties under the color of right without being actually qualified in law so to act.⁶ The acts of

The terms offices of honor and offices of trust are used in a synonymous sense in the Illinois statute disfranchising the duelist and prescribing the anti-dueling oath, and in the latter, profit and emolument will have the sense of the latter term, as merely enlarging the sense of the former to all offices having pay or perquisites, whether profitable or not. Dickson v. Brown, 17 Ill. 191.

In State v. Valle, 41 Mo. 29, it was held that a member of the legislature, who receives compensation for his services as a civil officer, holds an office of profit, as well as of honor.

1. Abb. L. Dict.; Plymouth v. Painter, 17 Conn. 585; 44 Am. Dec. 574; Kimball v. Alcorn, 45 Miss. 151; and see People v. Staton, 73 N. Car. 546; 21 Am. Rep. 479.

Some cases apply the term de jure to cases only, in which the lawful officer has been ousted or has never actually taken possession of the office. See Hamlin v. Kassafer, 15 Oregon 456; 3 Am. St. Rep. 176; Plymouth v. Painter, 17 Conn. 585; 44 Am. Dec. 574.

2. Hamlin v. Kassafer, 15 Oregon 456; 3 Am. St. Rep. 176; McCraw v. Williams, 33 Gratt. (Va.) 510.

3. Hamlin v. Kassafer, 15 Oregon 456; 3 Am. St. Rep. 176.

4. Vol. 5, p. 92.

5. Abb. L. Dict.; McCraw v. Williams, 33 Gratt. (Va.) 510; Jeffords v. Hine (Ariz. 1886), 11 Pac. Rep. 351;

Plymouth v. Painter, 17 Conn. 585; 44 Am. Dec. 574; Ex parte Strang, 21 Ohio St. 610; and see Fitchburg R. Co. v. Grand Junction R. Co., 1 Allen (Mass.) 557; Opinion of Justices, 70 Me. 560; and see Burke v. Cutler, 78 Iowa 299.

There can be no such thing as a de facto officer when there is no office to fill. State v. Lane, 16 R. I. 620.

The definition of an officer de facto, as given by Lord Ellenborough, in Rex v. Bedford Level, 6 East 356, which he generalized from that of Lord Holt, in Parker v. Kett, 1 Ld. Raym. 658, is "one who has the reputation of being the officer he assumes to be, and yet is not a good officer in point of law." See Petersilea v. Stone, 119 Mass. 465; 20 Am. Rep. 335; State v. Carroll, 38 Conn. 449; 9 Am. Rep. 409.

6. Hamlin v. Kassafer, 15 Oregon 456; 3 Am. St. Rep. 176; McCraw v. Williams, 33 Gratt. (Va.) 510; Plymouth v. Painter, 17 Conn. 585; 44 Am. Dec. 574; Wilcox v. Smith, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 231; 21 Am. Dec. 213; Burke v. Elliott, 4 Ired. (N. Car.) 355; 42 Am. Dec. 142.

The color of right which constitutes one an officer de facto may consist in an election or appointment, or in holding over after the expiration of one's term or acquiescence by the public in the acts of such officer for such a length of time as to raise the presumption of colorable right by election or an officer de facto are recognized in law to be valid and effectual so far, and only so far, as they affect the public and third persons,¹ appointment. Hamlin v. Kassafer, 15 Oregon 456; 3 Am. St. Rep. 176.

Where the law requires an election to be by joint ballot of two branches, an election by the separate action of each branch is sufficient to give color of title to the office. Belfast v. Morrill, 65 Me. 580.

One, who having been elected to an office, assumes to exercise its duties, without having attempted to qualify, is without color of title. Creighton v. Com., 83 Ky. 147.

Two persons cannot be officers de facto for the same office at the same time. Hamlin v. Kassafer, 15 Oregon 456; 3 Am. St. Rep. 176; State v. Blossom, 19 Nev. 312; McCahon v. Leavenworth Co., 8 Kan. 442; Boardman v. Halliday, 10 Paige (N. Y.) 432; Morgan v. Quackenbush, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 80; Conover v. Devlin, 15 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 1470. And there cannot be at the same time an officer de jure and one de facto, in possession of the same office. Boardman v. Halliday, 10 Paige (N. Y.) 232; Conover v. Devlin, 15 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 1470.

One who conceals himself from the public presumably to escape from some criminal charge, who has no place of business, his whereabouts being unknown, and who could not be found after diligent search, and could not be communicated with even by letter addressed to him through the post office, cannot be a de facto officer. Williams v. Clayton (Utah, 1889), 21 Pac. Rep. 398.

A de facto court of appeals cannot exist under a written constitution, which ordains one supreme court, and defines the qualifications and duties of its judges, and prescribes the mode of appointing them. Hildreth v. McIntire, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 206; 19 Am. Dec. 61.

1. Hooper v. Goodwin, 48 Me. 79; People v. Sassovich, 29 Cal. 480; Morton v. Lee, 28 Kan. 287; Hamlin v. Kassafer, 15 Oregon 456; 3 Am. St. Rep. 176; Petersilea v. Stone, 119 Mass. 465; 20 Am. Rep. 335; Fitchburg R. Co. v. Grand Junction R. Co., 1 Allen (Mass.) 558; Com. v. Kirby, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 581; Burton v. Patten, 2 Jones (N. Car.) 124; 62 Am. Dec. 194; Quinn v. Com., 20 Gratt. (Va.) 138; Griffin v. Cunningham, 20 Gratt. (Va.) 31; McCraw v. Williams, 33 Gratt.

(Va.) 510; McGregor v. Balch, 14 Vt. 428; 39 Am. Dec. 231; Brown v. Lunt, 37 Me. 423; Tucker v. Aiken, 7 N. H. 113; Moore v. Graves, 3 N. H. 408; Baird v. Bank of Washington, 11 S. & R. (Pa.) 411; State v. Carroll, 38 Conn. 449; 9 Am. Rep. 409; Plymouth v. Painter, 17 Conn. 585; 44 Am. Dec. 574; M'Instry v. Tanner, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 135; Wilcox v. Smith, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 231; 21 Am. Dec. 213; Burgess v. Koontz, 64 Md. 134; Nason v. Dillingham, 15 Mass. 170; Bucknam v. Ruggles, 15 Mass. 180; 8 Am. Dec. 98; Hussey v. Smith, 99 U. S. 24; Phillips v. Payne, 92 U. S. 132; Bolling v. Lesner, 91 U. S. 596; Cocke v. Halsey, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 71, and numerous other cases. See DE FACTO OFFICERS, vol. 5, p. 92.

Public funds expended by a de facto officer for lawful purposes cannot be recovered from him; but not so if they were expended for an unauthorized though a useful purpose. McCracken v. Soucy, 29 Ill. App. 619.

One who acts as an officer de facto is estopped from denying that he is such officer, even on a criminal prosecution for malfeasance in office. People v. Bunker, 70 Cal. 215. And see Joliet v. Tuohey, 1 Ill. App. 483.

One who has accepted and exercised an office under a new appointment, is precluded from claiming that his tenure of the office was a continuance of his original tenure. Farrell v. Bridgeport, 45 Conn. 191.

In State v. Durkee, 12 Kan. 314, the court, by Valentine, J., said: "The interests of the public require that somebody should exercise the duties and functions of the various offices pending a litigation concerning them, and no one has a better right to do so than the various officers de facto, who claim to be officers de jure."

As a general rule, the acts of an officer de facto are invalid as to himself, and afford him no protection whatever. See Gourley v. Hankins, 2 Iowa 75; Patterson v. Caldwell, 1 Mete. (Ky.) 493; Blake v. Sturtevant, 12 N. H. 567; People v. Hopson, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 574; Conover v. Devlin, 15 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 477; Green v. Burke, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 490; Keyser v. McKissan, 2 Rawel (Pa.) 139; Neal v. Overseers, 5 Watts (Pa.) 539; Riddle v. Bedford Co., 7 S. & R. (Pa.) 392; Venable v. Curd, and they cannot be collaterally called into question.¹ Nor can the question as to whether he is also an officer de jure be settled in proceedings between third parties.²

13. Usurpers or Intruders.—A usurper is one who assumes the right of government by force contrary to and in violation of the constitution of the country,³ or one who intrudes himself into an office which is vacant, or ousts the incumbent without any color of title whatever.⁴ The acts of a mere usurper are utterly void

² Head (Tenn.) 582; U. S. v. Maurice, 2 Brock. (U. S.) 96; Cummings v. Clark, 15 Vt. 653.

But the principle, upon which the acts of officers de facto have been held valid, has sometimes been extended so far as to protect them under certain circumstances, when they have been directly proceeded against. In such case, however, they might properly be called upon to show that they acted by virtue of some appointment or election which they had a right to believe valid, even though it were otherwise. State v. Carroll, 38 Conn. 449; 9 Am. Rep. 409; Petersilea v. Stone, 119 Mass. 466; 20 Am. Rep. 335.

¹ Petersilea v. Stone, 119 Mass. 465; 20 Am. Rep. 335; Murphy v. Shepard, 52 Ark. 356; Moore v. Turner, 43 Ark. 243; Twombly v. Kimbrough, 24 Ark. 474; Hooper v. Goodwin, 48 Me. 79; Brown v. Lunt, 37 Me. 423; Coolidge v. Brigham, 1 Allen (Mass.) 333; People v. White, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 520; McCraw v. Williams, 33 Gratt. (Va.) 510; State v. Bloom, 17 Wis. 521; State v. Carroll, 38 Conn. 449; 9 Am. Rep. 409.

² Hooper v. Goodwin, 48 Me. 79; Brown v. Lunt, 37 Me. 423; Morse v. Calley, 5 N. H. 222; Bean v. Thompson, 19 N. H. 290; 49 Am. Dec. 154; McCraw v. Williams, 33 Gratt. (Va.) 510; People v. Collins, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 549; Mayor, etc., of N. Y. v. Conover, 5 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 179; People v. White, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 520; Overseers of the Poor v. Farrington, 20 Vt. 473; Leach v. Cassidy, 23 Ind. 449; State v. Jones, 19 Ind. 358; 81 Am. Dec. 403; Braidy v. Theritt, 17 Kan. 471; Com. v. Kirby, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 577; Coolidge v. Brigham, 1 Allen (Mass.) 333; Sheehan's Case, 122 Mass. 445; 23 Am. Rep. 374; McGregor v. Balch, 14 Vt. 428; 39 Am. Dec. 231; Norton v. Shelby Co., 118 U. S. 442.

The rule extends to all offices executive or judicial, and applies alike to questions of the validity of the original election or appointment, and to questions whether the commission or authority has expired by its own limitation, or by the acceptance of an incompatible office. Sheehan's Case, 122 Mass. 445; 23 Am. Rep. 374; People v. White, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 527. And see State v. Carroll, 38 Conn. 449; 9 Am. Rep. 409.

An injunction does not lie to restrain an officer de facto from performing the duties of his office, upon the ground that by accepting a subsequent office, he has vacated the first. Hagner v. Heyberger, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 104; 42 Am. Dec. 230.

The only proper mode of trying the question of the validity of an appointment or election to a public office, which a person claims to exercise, under a color or show of right, is by quo warranto, or other proper process to which the officer is a party, and in which the title may be definitely and conclusively settled. Coolidge v. Brigham, 1 Allen (Mass.) 333; Fowler v. Bebee, 9 Mass. 231; Com. v. Fowler, 10 Mass. 290; In re Strong, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 484; Sudbury v. Stearns, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 148.

In an action directly against the officer, however, where he attempts to justify his acts, under and by virtue of his commission, it is competent to show that his appointment was invalid and afforded him no protection. Coolidge v. Brigham, 1 Allen (Mass.) 333.

³ Bouv. L. Dict.; Black's L. Dict.

⁴ McCraw v. Williams, 33 Gratt. (Va.) 510; Smith v. Causler, 83 Ky. 367; Hooper v. Goodwin, 48 Me. 79; Jester v. Spurgeon, 27 Mo. App. 477; Tucker v. Aiken, 7 N. H. 113; Plymouth v. Painter, 17 Conn. 585; 44 Am. Dec. 574; Hamlin v. Kassafer, 15 Oregon 456; 3 Am. St. Rep. 176.

The law of Louisiana authorizing a suit to redress the usurpation of, or intrusion into, a public office, does not in every respect.¹ A performance of official duties, with the acquiescence of the public, however, for such a length of time as to raise a presumption of colorable right, constitutes him an officer de facto.²

IV. ELIGIBILITY TO PUBLIC OFFICE.—The term "eligible" as applied to candidates for office means capable of being chosen; the subject of selection or choice; also implying competency to hold the office if chosen.³ Constitutional and statutory provisions with reference to eligibility, therefore, are sometimes held to refer to capability of being chosen as well as to capability of apply to one indisputably holding one office who is performing the duties of another former office, on the claim that it has been abolished, and its duties transferred to him. This is not usurping or intruding into the latter office. State v. Ward, 27 La. Ann. 659.

The Ohio statute prohibiting any person from taking "upon himself to exercise any office without being legally authorized," means such an assumption as imports a willful usurpation; not a holding over, reasonably believing it his duty to do so until his successor is qualified. Kreidler v. State, 24 Ohio St. 22.

To maintain an application for a writ of prohibition, there must be a clear usurpation of jurisdiction. State v. Judge of Dist. Ct., 14 La. Ann. 509.

1. McCraw v. Williams, 33 Gratt. (Va.) 510; Hooper v. Goodwin, 48 Me. 79; Tucker v. Aiken, 7 N. H. 113; Hamlin v. Kassafer, 15 Oregon 456; 3 Am. St. Rep. 176; Plymouth v. Painter, 17 Conn. 585; 44 Am. Dec. 574.

Both as to individuals and as to the public. Plymouth v. Painter, 17 Conn. 585; 44 Am. Dec. 574.

One who was appointed to an office without authority, and never performed any official duty as such officer, and never had the reputation of being such officer, is not an officer de jure or de facto. Schenk v. Peay, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 267.

The exact distinction between an usurper or intruder, and an officer de facto is that the former has no color of title to the office, and the latter has, by virtue of some appointment or election. Fitchburg R. Co. v. Grand Junction R. Co., 1 Allen (Mass.) 552; Petersilea v. Stone, 119 Mass. 465; 20 Am. Rep. 335.

2. Hamlin v. Kassafer, 15 Oregon 456; 3 Am. St. Rep. 176; State v. Carroll, 38 Conn. 449; 9 Am. Rep. 409; Wilcox v. Smith, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 231;

21 Am. Dec. 213; Gilliam v. Reddick, 4 Ired. (N. Car.) 368.

The mere claim to be a public officer is not enough to constitute one an officer de facto. Hamlin v. Kassafer, 15 Oregon 456; 3 Am. St. Rep. 176; Wilcox v. Smith, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 231; 21 Am. Dec. 213.

When the government is entirely revolutionized, and all its departments usurped by force, or the voice of a majority, then prudence recommends and necessity enforces obedience to the authority of those who may act as the public functionaries; and in such case the acts of a de facto executor, a de facto judiciary, and of a de facto legislature, must be recognized as valid, but this is required by political necessity. Hildreth v. McIntire, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 206; 19 Am. Dec. 61.

The reason of public policy upon which it is held that the acts of an officer de facto are not to be called in question collaterally but are valid as to third persons, may apply even to a case where such officer is a usurper or intruder. Petersilea v. Stone, 119 Mass. 465; 20 Am. Rep. 335.

3. Black's L. Dict.; Searcy v. Grow, 15 Cal. 118; People v. Leonard, 73 Cal. 230; State v. Bemenderfer, 96 Ind. 374; Carson v. McPhetridge, 15 Ind. 327; Smith v. Moore, 90 Ind. 294; Brady v. Howe, 50 Miss. 626; State v. Clarke, 3 Nev. 566. And see State v. Trumpf, 50 Wis. 103.

The term "ineligible" means as well disqualification to hold an office as disqualification to be elected to an office. State v. Murray, 28 Wis. 96; 9 Am. Rep. 489.

Qualification for office, as defined by the most approved lexicographers, is endowment or accomplishment that fits for an office; having the legal requisite. Endowed with qualities fit or suitable for the purpose. State v. Seay, 64 Mo. 89; 27 Am. Rep. 206.

holding,¹ so that the removal of a disqualification after choice but before entry upon the discharge of the duties of the office does not entitle the candidate to hold,² though where the disqualification is one which he has the power to remove at any time the rule is adopted in a number of the States that disqualification does not relate to the choice to, but to the holding of the office.³

The right of eligibility to office is not consecrated as universal and inviolable by the constitution,⁴ but it belongs equally to all persons whomsoever not excluded by constitutional provisions,⁵ and the legislature cannot establish arbitrary exclusions from

1. State v. Clark, 3 Nev. 566; People v. Leonard, 73 Cal. 230; Searcy v. Grow, 15 Cal. 118; Brady v. Howe, 50 Miss. 607.

Where a majority of the ballots at an election were for a person not eligible to the office under the constitution, it was held that the ballots cast for such ineligible person were ineffectual, and that the person receiving the greatest number of legal votes, though not a majority of the ballots, was duly elected and entitled to the office. Gulick v. New, 14 Ind. 93; 77 Am. Dec. 49.

2. Territory v. Smith, 3 Minn. 240; 74 Am. Dec. 749; State v. Sullivan, 45 Minn. 309; State v. Williams, 99 Mo. 291; 30 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 254; In re Corliss, 11 R. I. 638; 23 Am. Rep. 538.

Under a provision that no person holding any lucrative office under the government of the United States shall be eligible to any civil office of profit under the State, a party cannot be elected first to a State office and receive a Federal appointment to a lucrative office, and hold both offices at the same time. State v. Clarke, 3 Nev. 566. And see People v. Leonard, 73 Cal. 230.

3. State v. Murray, 28 Wis. 96; 9 Am. Rep. 489; State v. Trumpf, 50 Wis. 103; State v. Smith, 14 Wis. 497; People v. Hamilton, 24 Ill. App. 609; Smith v. Moore, 90 Ind. 294; Vogel v. State, 107 Ind. 374; Brown v. Goben, 122 Ind. 113; Privett v. Bickford, 26 Kan. 52; 40 Am. Rep. 301.

The rule in Indiana formerly was that the candidate must be eligible at the time of the choice. Reynolds v. State, 61 Ind. 392; Jeffries v. Rowe, 63 Ind. 593; Gulick v. New, 14 Ind. 93; 77 Am. Dec. 49; Beal v. Ray, 17 Ind. 554; Price v. Baker, 41 Ind. 572; 13 Am. Rep. 346. And see Howard v. Shoemaker, 35 Ind. 111.

The ineligibility of a candidate for an office in Wisconsin does not render void the votes cast for him, and such votes should be counted by the canvassers, and if such ineligible person has the highest number of votes, the person who has the next highest number will not be thereby elected. State v. Smith, 14 Wis. 497. And see State Giles, 1 Chand. (Wis.) 112; State v. Tierney, 23 Wis. 430; Wood v. Bartling, 16 Kan. 109.

In Huff v. Cook, 44 Iowa 639, it was held that a person who was not eligible to an office at the time of election, may be made so by a law subsequently passed. Or, in other words, that a retrospective law may cure or legalize any act which the general assembly could, as an original question have authorized.

4. Barker v. People, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 686; 15 Am. Dec. 322.

Eligibility to office is not declared as a right or principle by any express terms of the constitution, but it results as a just deduction from the express powers and provisions of the system. The basis of the principle is the absolute liberty of the electors and the appointing authorities to choose and to appoint any person who is not made ineligible by the constitution. Barker v. People, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 686; 15 Am. Dec. 322.

Where a constitution defines the qualification of an officer, it is not within the power of the legislature to change or superadd to it, unless the power be expressly, or by necessary implication, given to it. Thomas v. Owens, 4 Md. 189; Page v. Hardin, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 648.

5. Barker v. People, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 686; 15 Am. Dec. 322; People v. Clute, 50 N. Y. 451; 10 Am. Rep. 508; In re Foley, 39 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 356; Page v. Hardin, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 648.

office or any general regulations requiring qualifications which the constitution has not required,¹ though the right of the legislature to demand such additional qualifications as the nature of the particular office may reasonably require will not be abridged by implication from a constitutional exclusion.² A mere legislative office not of constitutional origin, however, is subject to be controlled and regulated by the legislature,³ though matters of individual conscience, including opinions on political subjects cannot affect a citizen in any of his legal or political rights,⁴ and no

As the people, with respect to certain offices, have seen fit by express constitutional provisions to restrict their freedom of choice, it is a fair inference that, where the constitution is silent, they intended no restriction. Wright v. Noell, 16 Kan. 601.

The expression of one thing in the constitution is necessarily the exclusion of things not expressed. Page v. Allen, 58 Pa. St. 338; 98 Am. Dec. 272; Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 426.

1. Barker v. People, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 686; 15 Am. Dec. 322; In re Foley, 39 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 356; Page v. Hardin, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 660; People v. May, 3 Mich. 598.

The legislature may not put upon any elector a personal restriction from voting for any officer who may be elected, save such restriction as is imposed by the constitution. But it may, in the exercise of its judgment for the public good, limit the number from whom the electors may select; for thus to legislate is within the general and sovereign power of legislation which it constitutionally possesses. People v. Clute, 50 N. Y. 451; 10 Am. Rep. 508.

2. Darrow v. People, 8 Colo. 417; Rogers v. Buffalo, 123 N. Y. 173; State v. Covington, 29 Ohio St. 102.

As a right flowing from the constitution, eligibility cannot be taken away by any law declaring that classes of men, or even a single person not convicted of a public offense, shall be ineligible to public stations. But as a right not expressly secured by the constitution, it may be taken from convicted criminals, if the legislature, in their plenary power over crimes, deems such a deprivation a necessary punishment. Parker v. People, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 686; 15 Am. Dec. 322; People v. Clute, 50 N. Y. 451; 10 Am. Rep. 508.

In Rogers v. Buffalo, 123 N. Y. 173, the court by Peckham, J., said: "Looking at it as a matter of common sense, we are quite sure that the framers of our organic law never intended to oppose a constitutional barrier to the right of the people through their legislature, to enact laws which should have for their sole object the possession of fit and proper qualifications for the performance of the duties of a public office, on the part of him who desired to be appointed to such office. So long as the means adopted to accomplish such end are appropriate therefor, they must be within the legislative power. The idea cannot be entertained for one moment that any intelligent people would ever consent to so bind themselves with constitutional restrictions on the power of their own representatives as to prevent the adoption of any means by which to secure, if possible, honest and intelligent service in public office."

3. State v. Davis, 44 Mo. 129; Advisory Opinion, 38 Mo. 419; Jeffries v. Rowe, 63 Ind. 592; Coffin v. State, 7 Ind. 157; Prince v. Skillin, 71 Me. 361; 36 Am. Rep. 325.

4. Attorney-Gen'l. v. Detroit, 58 Mich. 217; 55 Am. Rep. 675; Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 426; Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376; 74 Am. Dec. 572; People v. Hurlbut, 24 Mich. 44; 9 Am. Rep. 103; Brown v. Haywood, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 357; Louthan v. Com., 79 Va. 196; 52 Am. Rep. 626.

Legislation which creates a board of commissioners consisting of two or more persons, and which provides that not more than a certain proportion shall be taken from one party, does not amount to an arbitrary exclusion from office or to a general regulation requiring qualifications not mentioned in the constitution. Rogers v. Buffalo, 123 N. Y. 173; though a provision requiring an appointment of a board of officers consisting of two persons chosen from each of the two leading political religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States.¹ In the absence of either constitutional or statutory provision, such persons may hold office only, as a general rule, as have themselves a voice in designating by whom the office shall be filled.²

The election of a person to an office who does not possess the requisite qualifications gives him no right to hold the office or claim a certificate of election.³

parties would be so, as it would render members of all other parties ineligible. Attorney-Gen'l. v. Detroit, 58 Mich. 213; 55 Am. Rep. 675.

1. U. S. Const., art. 6, § 3; and see Rogers v. Buffalo, 123 N. Y. 173.

The same rule would seem to be applicable to offices under the several States. See Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 426; Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376; 74 Am. Dec. 572; Rogers v. Buffalo, 123 N. Y. 173.

Most, if not all, of the provisions of the Federal and State constitutions, which are of the nature of a bill of rights, were placed therein with reference to English history, and the struggles for liberty which such history recorded. Declarations, oaths, and tests as a condition for holding office had been frequently resorted to by the Parliament of Great Britain for the purpose of promoting the prosperity of one religion, or insuring the downfall of another. Rogers v. Buffalo, 123 N. Y. 173.

By the constitutions of the following States, no religious test is permitted as a qualification for office: Massachusetts, Amdt. 7; Maine 1, 3; Rhode Island 1, 3; New York 12, 1; New Jersey 1, 4; Ohio 1, 7; Indiana 1, 5; Illinois 5, 25; Michigan 18, 1; Wisconsin 1, 19; Iowa 1, 4; Minnesota 1, 17; Kansas B. of Rts. 7; Nebraska 1, 4; Maryland Decln. Rts. 37; Delaware 1, 2; Virginia 5, 14; West Virginia 3, 11, and 15; Tennessee 1, 4; Missouri 2, 5; Arkansas 2, 26; Texas 1, 4; California 20, 3; Oregon 1, 4; Georgia 1, 1, 13; Alabama 1, 4; Mississippi 1, 23; New Mexico 95, 1; 1851, July 12, § 3. And in the following States, no religious test is permitted as a qualification for any public trust under the State: Maine, New Jersey, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, Kansas, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, Tennessee, Missouri, Texas, California, Oregon, Georgia, Alabama, Stim. Stat. L., § 45.

By the constitutions of North Carolina, Arkansas, Texas, South Carolina, and Mississippi, no one can hold office who denies the existence of a supreme being. Stim. Stat. L., § 46.

2. State v. Smith, 14 Wis. 497; State v. Murray, 28 Wis. 96; 9 Am. Rep. 489; and see State v. Kilroy, 86 Ind. 118; McCarthy v. Froelke, 63 Ind. 507; State v. Covington, 29 Ohio St. 102.

But if the name of an office-holder be struck from the list of registered voters, he will not, for that reason, be removed from his office, when he was before that time, when a qualified and registered voter, duly elected and inducted into office. McPherson v. State, 3 W. Va. 564; Phares v. State, 3 W. Va. 567; 100 Am. Dec. 777.

In Darrow v. People, 8 Colo. 417, it was held that a constitutional provision that no person except a qualified elector shall be elected or appointed to any civil or military office in the State, being negative in form, does not inhibit the legislature by implication from adding a property qualification.

In Smith v. Moody, 26 Ind. 299, it was held that the right to vote, and the legal capacity to hold office, are not essential to citizenship.

Under a constitutional provision that no person except a qualified elector shall be elected or appointed to any civil or military office, the word "office" does not include a deputy clerkship of a county court. Jeffries v. Harrington, 11 Colo. 191; Warwick v. State, 25 Ohio St. 24.

3. State v. Pierce City (Mo. 1887), 3 S. W. Rep. 849; Brady v. Howe, 50 Miss. 625; Shelby v. Alcorn, 36 Miss. 273; 72 Am. Dec. 169; Dillon's Munic. Corp. (3d ed.), § 196.

In St. Louis Co. Ct. v. Sparks, 10 Mo. 117; 45 Am. Dec. 355, however, it is held that statutes prescribing qualifications to office are directory and that the appointment of one not possessing the requisite qualifications is not absolutely void, unless it is so expressly

1. Qualifications—a. CITIZENSHIP.—It is an acknowledged principle of popular government that it is instituted by the citizens for their liberty and protection, and that it is to be administered and its powers and functions exercised by them and through their agency,¹ and that, therefore, an alien is not eligible to office.² When, however, an inhabitant is made eligible to hold an office, he need not necessarily be a citizen.³ And a resident who has declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States and qualified as an elector, thereby becomes eligible to hold office,⁴ and where the right to vote is made the criterion of enacted; and that where the appointing power appoints a person not having the qualifications required by law, such person becomes an officer de facto. See also Harbaugh v. Winsor, 38 Mo. 327.

Presumption of Eligibility.—A person appointed in regular form to a public office is presumed to have been eligible to such office, in the absence of proof to the contrary. State v. Ring, 29 Minn. 78.

1. State v. Smith, 14 Wis. 497; State v. Murray, 28 Wis. 96; 9 Am. Rep. 489; Walther v. Rabolt, 30 Cal. 186; and see State v. Trumpf, 50 Wis. 103.

A citizen is a native or naturalized person. Allegiance on the part of the person, and the duty of protection on the part of the government, constitutes citizenship under the constitution. State v. Kilroy, 86 Ind. 118.

Color.—By the present laws of Georgia colored persons are not eligible to hold office. White v. Clements, 39 Ga. 232.

2. Walther v. Rabolt, 30 Cal. 186; Bouanchaud v. D'Hebert, 21 La. Ann. 138. And see Borst v. Becker, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 330; Grubb v. State, 14 Wis. 434; Byrne v. State, 12 Wis. 519; State v. Trumpf, 50 Wis. 103.

In Walther v. Rabolt, 30 Cal. 185, the court by Sanderson, J., said: "All political power is inherent in the people, and those who are not of the people can have no share in it. The people are such as are born upon the soil, by and for whom, in the first place, the government was ordained, and such persons of foreign birth as may elect to assume the obligation of a citizen by complying with the laws of naturalization as enacted by Congress. If they desire to secure political rights, they must cease to be aliens, and become citizens in the mode there prescribed. Until then they can neither vote nor hold office; they can neither choose nor be chosen, for that is to exercise political power, and they are not of the people who alone may exercise it."

No person except a natural-born citizen or a citizen of the United States at the time of the adoption of the Constitution shall be eligible to the office of President. Neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained to the age of thirty-five years, and been fourteen years a resident within the United States. U. S. Constitution, art. 2, § 1, sub. 5. And no person constitutionally ineligible to the office of President shall be eligible to that of Vice-President of the United States. U. S. Constitution, XII Amendment.

Neither a denizen at common law, nor a naturalized citizen under the general statutory law of England, could hold office. Walther v. Rabolt, 30 Cal. 185.

3. State v. Kilroy, 86 Ind. 118.

The constitution does not prohibit the legislature from conferring on a voluntary association of persons who are not citizens of the United States or electors of the city, the power to elect a person to fill an office created by the legislature. In re Bulger, 45 Cal. 553.

The word "inhabitant" means one who dwells or resides permanently in a place, or who has a fixed residence, as distinguished from an occasional lodger or visitor. State v. Kilroy, 86 Ind. 118; Cooley's Const. Lim. 66.

4. State v. Fowler, 41 La. Ann. 380; State v. Abbott, 41 La. Ann. 1096; In re Wehlitz, 16 Wis. 443; In re Conway, 17 Wis. 526; State v. Smith, 14 Wis. 497.

In the absence of any constitutional or statutory provision on the subject, one who has received a plurality of votes for office, though an alien, and not an elector at the time of his elec-eligibility, if the candidate is an elector he need not be a citizen.¹

b. RESIDENCE.—It is a common, if not an invariable requirement that candidates for public office, shall, for some period, have been residents of the district or locality to be represented.² This is a part of the principle of local self-government,³ and in the construction of these provisions the words "residence" and "domicile" are deemed to be identical and synonymous.⁴

c. AGE.—Candidates are required to have arrived at a certain designated age, differing in different States, and with reference to different offices, in order to be eligible to hold certain of the more important offices.⁵ And in several of the States no judge can hold office after he has attained the age of seventy years.⁶ Infants are usually either expressly or impliedly prohibited from holding office by statutory or constitutional provision.⁷ And in the absence of such provision, offices in which judgment, discretion and experience are essentially necessary to the proper discharge of the duties they impose, or offices of pecuniary and tion, may hold his office, if the disability is removed before the commencement of the term for which he is elected. State v. Trumpf, 50 Wis. 103.

1. McCarthy v. Froelke, 63 Ind. 507; State v. Kilroy, 86 Ind. 118. And see State v. Abbott, 41 La. Ann. 1096.

A person who is not a citizen of the United States may be elected or constituted a selectman, so that his official acts may bind the town. Opinion of Justices, 70 Me. 560.

2. Mechem's Pub. Off., § 82. And see Territory v. Smith, 3 Minn. 240; 74 Am. Dec. 749; Yonkey v. State, 27 Ind. 236; State v. McMillen, 23 Neb. 385; People v. Platt, 50 Hun (N. Y.) 454; affirmed 117 N. Y. 159; People v. Sheffield, 47 Hun (N. Y.) 481; People v. Morrell, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 563.

The object of these provisions is to secure the actual presence of the officer in the place within which his duties are to be discharged, and to give to each town, city and county, officers selected from its own inhabitants, from those who there have municipal rights and duties, and are there subject to particular burdens. People v. Platt, 50 Hun (N. Y.) 454.

3. People v. Platt, 50 Hun (N. Y.) 454; affirmed 117 N. Y. 159.

4. People v. Platt, 50 Hun (N. Y.) 454; affirmed 117 N. Y. 159.

Residence is a question of fact for the jury. People v. Platt, 50 Hun (N. Y.) 454.

5. See U. S. Const., art. 2, § 1, sub. 5; U. S. Const., XIII Amend.; U. S. Const., art. 1, § 3, sub. 3; Stimson's Am. Stat. Law, §§ 204-207, 562.

No person shall be a Senator who shall not have attained to the age of thirty years, and been nine years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not when elected be an inhabitant of the State for which he shall be chosen. U. S. Constitution, art. 1, § 3, sub. 3.

6. Stimson's Am. St. Law, § 563.

Surrogates, People v. Carr, 100 N. Y. 236; 53 Am. Rep. 161; justices of the peace, People v. Mann, 97 N. Y. 532; 49 Am. Rep. 556; Keniston v. State, 63 N. H. 37; 56 Am. Rep. 486; Dohring v. People, 2 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 458; and county commissioners, Betts v. New Hartford, 25 Conn. 180, have been held not to be judges within the prohibition of such provisions.

In Maryland a judge may be continued in office by the legislature after the age of seventy, for such further time as they think fit, not exceeding his term of office. Maryland Rev. Sts., ch. 4, § 3.

7. Rhode Island Const., art. 9, § 1; art. 2, § 1; Stimson's Am. St. Law, §§ 220, 224; Green v. Burke, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 490; U. S. v. Bixby, 9 Fed. Rep. 78; and see infra, this title, Eligibility.

public responsibility cannot be held by a person under age,¹ though a minor may hold an office the duties of which are purely ministerial and require nothing more than ordinary skill and diligence for their proper performance.²

d. SEX.—At common law no woman under the degree of a queen could take part in the government of the state,³ though women were permitted to fill local offices of an administrative character, the duties attached to which they were competent to perform;⁴ and, while, under our constitution, a woman is undoubtedly a citizen,⁵ she is not, by virtue of her citizenship, vested with any absolute right independent of legislation, to take part in the government either as a voter or as an officer,⁶ her ineligibility depending on some constitutional restriction or upon necessary implication arising either from the nature of the office itself or from the law as existing when the constitution was adopted in the light of which it must be read.⁷ In the absence of a constitutional restriction, the question is within the

1. See INFANTS, vol. 10, p. 613; Tyler v. Tyler, 2 Root (Conn.) 519; Moore v. Graves, 3 N. H. 408; Golding's Petition, 57 N. H. 146; 24 Am. Rep. 66; Barrett v. Seward, 22 Vt. 176; U. S. v. Bixby, 9 Fed. Rep. 78; New Albany, etc., R. Co. v. Grooms, 9 Ind. 243.

The acts of an infant as a public officer are binding upon the public until his appointment or election is declared void according to law. People v. Dean, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 438.

2. Crosbie v. Hurley, A. & N. (Ir.) 431; U. S. v. Bixby, 9 Fed. Rep. 78.

An infant may serve as a notary public, U. S. v. Bixby, 9 Fed. Rep. 78; or as clerk of a militia company, Ex parte Dewey, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 265.

3. Robinson's Case, 131 Mass. 376; 41 Am. Rep. 239; Schuchardt v. People, 99 Ill. 501; 39 Am. Rep. 34.

Women could take no part in the administration of justice, even as judges or jurors, with the single exception of inquiries by a jury of matrons upon a suggestion of pregnancy. 2 Inst. 119, 121; 3 Bl. Com. 362; Chorlton v. Lings, L. R., 4 C. P. 374; Robinson's Case, 131 Mass. 376; 41 Am. Rep. 239.

4. Opinion of Justices, 115 Mass. 602; Robinson's Case, 131 Mass. 376; 41 Am. Rep. 237.

It would seem that at common law, women are permitted to hold such offices only as might be executed by deputy. Robinson's Case, 131 Mass. 376; 41 Am. Rep. 239.

5. Robinson's Case, 131 Mass. 376;

41 Am. Rep. 239; and see Bradwell v. Illinois, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 130.

6. Robinson's Case, 131 Mass. 376; 41 Am. Rep. 239; Minor v. Happersett, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 162; Atchison Co. v. Lucas, 83 Ky. 451; Bradwell v. Illinois, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 130; Wheeler v. Hall, 6 Allen (Mass.) 558; Jackson v. Phillips, 14 Allen (Mass.) 539.

The right to practice law in the State court, is not a privilege or immunity of a citizen of the United States, within the meaning of the first section of the XIV Amendment of the constitution of the United States. Bradwell v. Illinois, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 130.

The statutes permitting a married woman to hold and convey property, to make contracts, to sue and be sued, and be an executrix, administratrix, guardian, or trustee, have in no way enlarged the capacity of any woman, married or unmarried, to hold offices. Robinson's Case, 131 Mass. 376; 41 Am. Rep. 239.

7. Opinion of Justices, 115 Mass. 602; and see Robinson's Case, 131 Mass. 376; 41 Am. Rep. 239; Opinion of Justices, 107 Mass. 604.

Under the Minnesota constitution and statutes, providing that any woman entitled to vote shall be eligible to hold any office pertaining solely to the management of schools, a woman is eligible to the office of county superintendent of schools, even though the statute has not authorized her to vote for the purpose of filling such office. State v. Gorton, 33 Minn. 345.

control of the legislature, which may, if deemed expedient, confer such a right upon women.¹ Constitutional and statutory provisions should be construed as far as possible in favor of equality of rights with a view to promote the public interest which is benefited by every legitimate use of individual ability.² Women have, in some instances, been recognized as eligible to office, under statutes of which the language is merely general and public opinion everywhere approves of such appointments.³

But where the constitution disqualifies a woman from voting, she cannot hold office. Atchison Co. v. Lucas, 83 Ky. 451; Rupp v. Rust, 4 Ohio Cir. Ct. 329.

Attorneys at Law.—The refusal of a State court to grant a license to practice law upon the ground that the applicant is a female, and that females are not eligible under the laws of that State, violates no provision of the Federal Constitution. The power of a State to prescribe the qualifications for admission to the bar of its own courts, is unaffected by the XIV Amendment to the Constitution; and the courts cannot inquire into the reasonableness or propriety of the rules it may prescribe. Bradwell v. Illinois, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 130.

In Lockwood v. U. S., 9 Ct. of Cl. 346, it was held that under the constitution and laws of the United States, a court is without power to grant an application made by a woman for admission as an attorney; and that a woman is without legal capacity to take the office of an attorney.

In the State courts different results have been reached. See In re Hall, 50 Conn. 131; 47 Am. Rep. 625; In re Goodell, 48 Wis. 693, holding that a woman may become an attorney at law; and see In re Bradwell, 55 Ill. 535; Robinson's Case, 131 Mass. 376; 41 Am. Rep. 239; In re Leonard, 12 Oregon 93; 53 Am. Rep. 323, holding that she cannot.

In a note to In re Leonard, 12 Oregon 93; 53 Am. Rep. 323, it is stated that women have been admitted to the bar in the United States, and are engaged in the practice of a profession, or in the work connected with it in the following States: Iowa, Missouri, Michigan, Utah, District of Columbia, Maine, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, Kansas, Minnesota, California, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Nebraska, Washington Territory, Pennsylvania.

1. Huff v. Cook, 44 Iowa 639; Opinion of Justices, 115 Mass. 602; Atchison

Co. v. Lucas, 83 Ky. 451; State v. Gorton, 33 Minn. 345.

In Huff v. Cook, 44 Iowa 639, it was held that the general assembly had a right to confer the right on women to hold offices of an administrative character by retrospective law, passed to confirm or make good an election by the people, which was held in the absence of a positive law authorizing it.

School Offices.—Women have in numerous instances been made eligible to school offices. See Wright v. Noell, 16 Kan. 601; Opinion of Justices, 115 Mass. 602; State v. Gorton, 33 Minn. 345; Huff v. Cook, 44 Iowa 639.

2. In re Hall, 50 Conn. 131; 47 Am. Rep. 625; and see Schuchardt v. People, 99 Ill. 501; 39 Am. Rep. 34.

In Jeffries v. Harrington, 11 Colo. 191, the court by Stallcup, C., said: "We do not think that it was the intention of the framers of our constitution to declare such avenues of employment (referring to the position of a deputy clerk of the county court), closed to women, and until some clear expression to that effect has been made by constitutional or legislative provision, the court should not declare against the employment of women in such positions."

In Wright v. Noell, 16 Kan. 601, a woman was held to be eligible to the office of county superintendent of public instruction, upon the ground that the constitution and laws contains no affirmative statement of qualifications which would exclude them, and that it is a fair inference that where the constitution is silent, it intended no restriction.

In Robinson's Case, 131 Mass. 376; 41 Am. Rep. 239, however, it was held that no inference of an intention of the legislature to include women in the statute concerning the admission of attorneys can be drawn from the mere omission of the word male.

3. In re Hall, 50 Conn. 131; 47 Am. Rep. 625; and see Schuchardt v. People, 99 Ill. 501; 39 Am. Rep. 34; State

c. MENTAL CAPACITY.—In some of the States ability to read and write is necessary to eligibility to public office,¹ and by the constitutions of several States no insane person or idiot can hold any State office.² Some of the States have required educational qualifications for certain offices, the performance of the duties of

v. Gorton, 33 Minn. 345; Huff v. Cook, 44 Iowa 639.

All restriction upon human liberty, all claims for special privileges, are to be regarded as having the presumption of law against them, and as standing upon their defense, and can be sustained, if at all, by valid legislation only, by the clear expression or clear implication of the law. In re Hall, 50 Conn. 131; 47 Am. Rep. 625.

The question whether a woman can legally hold a public office is not like the question whether an unnaturalized alien may vote or hold office. The inclinations, interests, and duties of aliens are presumptively with the nation of which they are citizens, and antagonistic everywhere else. But the men and women of our own nation are alike citizens. There is no antagonism. The question whether women shall vote or hold office is one of internal public policy merely. Wright v. Noell, 16 Kan. 601.

Women are appointed in all parts of the country as postmasters. The act of Congress of 1825 was the first one conferring upon the Postmaster-General the power of appointing postmasters, and it has remained essentially unchanged to the present time. The language of the act is, that "the Postmaster-General shall establish post-offices and appoint postmasters." Here women are not included except in the general term "postmasters," a term which seems to imply a male person; and no legislation from 1825 down to the present time authorizes the appointment of women, nor is there any reference in terms to women until the revision of 1874, which recognizes the fact that women had already been appointed, in providing that "the bond of any married woman who may be appointed postmaster shall be binding on her and her sureties." Some of the higher grades of postmasters are appointed by the President, subject to confirmation by the Senate, and such appointments and confirmations have repeatedly been made. The same may be said of pension agents. The acts of Congress on the subject have simply authorized "the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint all pension agents, who shall hold their offices for the term of four years, and shall give bond," etc. In re Hall, 50 Conn. 131; 47 Am. Dec. 625.

1. Mechem's Pub. Off., § 70, citing New Mexico Laws, 1889, ch. 12, p. 18; Arizona Acts of March 21, 1889.

In Alabama there is a constitutional prohibition against requiring an educational qualification. See Stimson's Am. Stat. Law, § 222.

There are many offices, the duties of which absolutely require the ability of reading and writing the English language. There are many electors, who from habit of life and otherwise, are wholly unfit to discharge the duties of many offices. The legislature in such case, in the absence of constitutional prohibition, has power to name such disqualifications for office as shall exclude such persons, and secure such as have the requisite education. This is the case, even though no constitutional provision is made upon the subject, and negative constitutional provisions exist with reference to other subjects. State v. Covington, 29 Ohio St. 102.

2. Stimson's Am. St. Law, § 223.

The States in which insane persons and idiots are prohibited from holding office are Alabama, Georgia, and Louisiana. Stimson's Am. Stat. Law, § 223. And in numerous other States such persons are prohibited from voting. Stimson's Am. St. Law, § 251; and as an officer is required to be a qualified elector of the State in many of the States. Stimson's Am. St. Law, §§ 204, 205, 221; thus as it would appear indirectly disqualifying insane persons and idiots from holding office.

Under the constitution of Kentucky, which makes it the duty of the county court to recommend the two oldest magistrates of the county to the governor, that one might be appointed sheriff, the lunacy of one of such magistrates, during his magistracy, unless continuing at the time of the refusal to recommend him, is no ground for a which requires special or professional knowledge, with reference to fitness for the office,¹ and though no such provision exists, if in the popular understanding and the uniform practice of government, such qualification has been required, such practice and understanding should be held of equal force with judicial and legislative construction.²

f. PROPERTY QUALIFICATIONS.—The constitutions of several States provide that there shall be no property qualification for holding office.³ In the absence of such provision, a requirement by the legislature of a reasonable property qualification, as being a freeholder, or the payment of taxes, is valid and binding,⁴ and the election or appointment of a person who does not possess the required qualifications is simply void.⁵

2. Disqualification—a. BY HOLDING PRIOR OFFICE.—It is frequently provided in State constitutions and statutory enactments that a person holding one office shall not be eligible to certain others deemed to be inconsistent or incompatible with the one already held.⁶ These provisions occur most frequently refusal by the county court to recommend. Bartlett v. Justices, Sneed (Ky.) 215.

1. See Stimson's Am. Stat. Law, § 562, with reference to judges.

A person must have been a licensed practicing attorney for two years in order to be eligible to the office of district attorney in Kentucky. See Kentucky Const., art. 6, § 2; in Maryland he must have been admitted to practice in the State and resided two years in the county. Maryland Const., art. 5, § 10; and the constitutions of South Carolina and Tennessee would probably be construed to render ineligible to that office one not an attorney at law. See South Carolina Const., 4, 29; Tennessee Const., 6, 5.

Construction of Constitution.—A provision, which, like that of Louisiana Const. 1845, art. 95, restricts the choice of the people and the area of selection in filling public offices, which are established for their benefit, and not that of the functionaries, should not receive a large construction, so as to take in, by implication, offices requiring professional skill, and not representative in their character. State v. Blanchard, 6 La. Ann. 515.

2. People v. May, 3 Mich. 598; Conroy v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 6 Daly (N. Y.) 490.

In People v. May, 3 Mich. 598, the court, by Martin, J., speaking of the office of prosecuting attorney said: "Were it a balanced question, we should not hesitate to solve it in such manner as to protect the public interest, and especially to preserve the criminal jurisprudence of a State from possible utter prostration."

Disqualification of the Clergy.—No minister or preacher of any religious denomination can be a member of the legislature in Maryland, Delaware, Kentucky or Tennessee or be governor in Kentucky, or hold any civil office in Delaware. Stimson's Am. Stat. Law, § 223, sub. 1.

The office of treasurer of a public corporation, such as the city of Wilmington, in Delaware, is not "a civil office in this State" within the meaning of the constitutional exclusion of the clergy from civil office. State v. Wilmington, 3 Harr. (Del.) 294.

3. Stimson's Am. Stat. L., § 222.

These States are California, Delaware, Alabama, Kansas, Mississippi, North Carolina and South Carolina.

4. See Darrow v. People, 8 Colo. 417; People v. Sheffield, 47 Hun (N. Y.) 481.

5. Spear v. Robinson, 29 Me. 531; State v. Swearingen, 12 Ga. 23; State v. Gastinel, 20 La. Ann. 114. And see ELECTIONS, vol. 6, p. 255. But see St. Louis Co. Ct. v. Sparks, 10 Mo. 117; 45 Am. Dec. 355.

6. Mechem's Pub. Off., § 76. And see People v. Leonard, 73 Cal. 230; Crawford v. Dunbar, 52 Cal. 36; Foltz v. Kerlin, 105 Ind. 221; 55 Am. Rep. 197; Kerr v. Jones, 19 Ind. 351; State v.

with reference to lucrative offices,¹ but are not confined exclusively to them.² They cannot be defeated by making the incumbent of one office an incumbent ex officio of a forbidden office,³ and appointments made in violation of such prohibition are void both for want of capacity in the appointee to accept, and for want of authority in the appointing power to appoint.⁴

Clarke, 3 Nev. 566; Shelby v. Alcorn, 36 Miss. 273; 72 Am. Dec. 169; State v. Taylor, 12 Ohio St. 130; McGregor v. Balch, 14 Vt. 429; 39 Am. Dec. 231; Dailey v. State, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 329; In re Corliss, 11 R. I. 638; 23 Am. Rep. 538; State v. De Gress, 53 Tex. 387; Davenport v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 67 N. Y. 456; State v. Valle, 41 Mo. 29.

1. In New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Vermont, Indiana, Nebraska, Maryland, West Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, Arkansas, Texas, Oregon, Alabama, Louisiana, Maine, New Jersey, Illinois, Michigan, Ohio, Iowa, Delaware, Virginia, Kentucky, Missouri, Colorado, South Carolina, Georgia, Pennsylvania, Kansas, California, and Minnesota, the prohibition is directed to holding more than one office where one or both of them is lucrative. See Stimson's Am. Stat. L., § 220.

In Maine, New Jersey, Ohio, Indiana, Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Texas, California, Oregon, Nevada, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, the Territories and the United States, members of legislative bodies are prohibited from being elected or appointed to offices of profit which may be created or the emoluments of which may be increased during their terms. In most of them, however, they may be elected to any office which is elective by the people. Stimson's Am. Stat. L., § 220.

The words "lucrative office," in the California constitution, refer solely to the office "under the United States," and one holding such lucrative office is disqualified to hold any State office, no matter how small the emolument of the latter may be. People v. Leonard, 73 Cal. 230.

2. In Rhode Island, Illinois, Wisconsin, North Carolina, Kentucky, Texas, California, Nevada, Louisiana, West Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia, Iowa, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Maine, Oregon and Delaware, the choice to an office of trust, profit or honor of any person holding office under a foreign power is prohibited. And in Maine, New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Wisconsin, Kansas, Delaware, West Virginia, Missouri, Arkansas, Texas, Colorado, Louisiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Oregon, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Iowa, Nebraska, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Territories, United States, California, Nevada, Minnesota and Alabama, the election to the State legislature of a person holding a lucrative office under the United States is forbidden. See Stimson's Am. Stat. L., § 220.

In Georgia, Louisiana, South Carolina and West Virginia, a person holding an office under another State is ineligible. Stimson's Am. Stat. L., § 220.

3. Bouanchaud v. D'Hebert, 21 La. Ann. 138. And see Olmstead v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 42 N. Y. Super. Ct. 481.

But in State v. Somnier, 36 La. Ann. 267, it was held that Louisiana Acts, 1877, No. 44, making the clerk of the district court ex officio a member of the jury commission, does not confer upon him an additional office, in violation of the constitution.

In Wyoming Territory, two offices are not merged into one by a statute making a person holding one office an ex officio officer as to another. The provision of Wyoming Territory, Rev. St. 206, art. 2, § 1, that a judge of probate shall be ex officio county treasurer, does not render the sureties on his bond as judge liable for his malfeasance as county treasurer. Ritter v. Wyoming Ter., 1 Wyoming Ter. 318.

4. Shelby v. Alcorn, 36 Miss. 273; 72 Am. Dec. 169; Brady v. Howe, 50 Miss. 625; State v. Taylor, 12 Ohio St. 130; McGregor v. Balch, 14 Vt. 428; 39 Am. Dec. 231.

In Dailey v. State, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 329, however, it was held that a county recorder by accepting the office of county commissioner, vacates his office of recorder.

They do not apply, however, to a mere de facto incumbency.¹ Nor to a case in which the officer failed to qualify under the prior election or appointment,² nor do they apply unless so expressly provided where the term of the prior office has fully expired at the time of the commencement of the second one,³ even though the performance of the uncompleted duties of his office may have been imposed upon him.⁴ Some of these constitutional provisions have been held to apply only to constitutional offices, and do not, therefore, prevent a constitutional officer from holding a municipal or other office not of a constitutional origin.⁵

Legislative enactments disqualifying certain public officers from being chosen to fill other designated offices are not unconstitutional,⁶ but they as well as the constitutional provisions

1. Crawford v. Dunbar, 52 Cal. 36. And see People v. Duane, 55 Hun (N. Y.) 315; People v. Turner, 20 Cal. 142.

The authorization of the coroner by statute to perform certain duties appertaining to the office of sheriff, he being disqualified, is no infringement of that clause of the constitution which declares that "No person shall hold or exercise at the same time more than one civil office." Powell v. Wilson, 16 Tex. 59.

2. Pumphrey v. State, 17 Md. 57; Smith v. Moore, 90 Ind. 294.

A person acting as United States inspector of customs under an appointment from the collector of the port of San Francisco, whose appointment, however, had never been legalized and completed by the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, is eligible to the position of State district judge, and not within the prohibition of the constitution of California. People v. Turner, 20 Cal. 142.

3. Smith v. Moore, 90 Ind. 294; Vogel v. State, 107 Ind. 374.

A person holding the office of United States district attorney, on the day of election, is incapable of being chosen to the office of attorney-general of the State. State v. Clarke, 3 Nev. 566.

The Constitution of Wisconsin, art. 2, § 12, providing that "No member of the legislature shall, during the term for which he was elected, be appointed or elected to any civil office in the State which shall have been created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased, during the term for which he was elected," does not disqualify a member of the legislature from holding an office, the emoluments of which are increased during his term, but after his election to such office. State v. Boyd, 21 Wis. 208.

4. State v. Somers, 96 N. Car. 467.

An officer of the United States army, retired from active service on three-quarters' pay on account of age, does not hold office within New York Laws 1888, ch. 584, § 1, providing that a person appointed to the office of aqueduct commissioner "shall hold no other Federal, State, or municipal office," though by U. S. Rev. St., § 1094, an officer on the retired list is declared to be a part of the army, and though he may, by other provisions, be appointed to certain duties in connection with the Soldiers' Home, under certain circumstances. People v. Duane, 55 Hun (N. Y.) 315.

5. State v. Montgomery, 25 La. Ann. 138; State v. Kirk, 44 Ind. 401; 15 Am. Rep. 239; Mohan v. Jackson, 52 Ind. 599; and see De Turk v. Com., 129 Pa. St. 151; People v. Duane, 55 Hun (N. Y.) 315; State v. Somnier, 33 La. Ann. 237; People v. Whitman, 10 Cal. 38.

A trial justice or justice of the peace and quorum is not within Maine Const., art. 9, § 2, prohibiting justices of courts from holding any legislative office. Justices' Opinion, 68 Me. 594.

One who is appointed to print the laws of the United States in his newspaper may, at the same time, be an alderman of Philadelphia. Com. v. Binns, 17 S. & R. (Pa.) 219.

6. People v. Clute, 12 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 400.

The prohibition is not inoperative until the legislature declares certain are to be strictly if not literally construed, a restriction upon appointments not applying to elective offices,¹ and in the absence of such provisions, offices the duties of which are not incompatible with each other, may be united in one person.²

Constitutional provisions are sometimes met with prohibiting the occupation of given officers for more than a prescribed number of consecutive terms.³ Under such provisions, any intervening space removes the disqualification.⁴

b. FOR CRIMINAL ACTS.—In many of the States the commission, either of infamous crime⁵ or of criminal acts denoting an unfitness for the performance of the duties imposed,⁶ are constitutional disqualifications for holding office, and in the absence of offices to be incompatible; but is absolute, and the legislature may declare offices not within the prohibition to be incompatible. De Turk v. Com., 129 Pa. St. 151.

1. Carpenter v. People, 8 Colo. 116; State v. McCollister, 11 Ohio 46. And see People v. Duane, 55 Hun (N. Y.) 315; De Turk v. Com., 129 Pa. St. 151; U. S. v. Evans, 4 Mackey (D. C.) 281; State v. Weston, 4 Neb. 234.

A retired army officer may hold an office in the executive department and may receive the salary thereof in addition to his retired pay. Collins v. U. S., 15 Ct. of Cl. 22.

There is nothing in the statutes of the United States to deprive a deputy collector of internal revenue of his salary because he holds the office of inspector of tobacco, compensated by fees from those employing him. Harrison v. U. S., 21 Ct. of Cl. 451.

Adoption of New Constitution.—One who was legally elected a State senator in 1860 under the old constitution, and elected Secretary of State in 1862 is not, under the provisions of the new constitution, ineligible to such office by reason of being a senator. State v. Clendenin, 24 Ark. 78.

What Are Municipal Corporations.—The board of president and directors of public schools, school districts and corporations organized for the purpose of education only, are not municipal corporations under session act of March 14, 1869, and the acts amendatory thereto which declare that no person shall be eligible to the office of justice of the county court of St. Louis county, who at the time of his election shall hold any office under a municipal or railroad corporation created by the laws of the State of Missouri. Heller v. Stremmel, 52 Mo. 309.

2. Troy v. Wooten, 10 Ired. (N. Car.) 377; and see State v. Harrison, 116 Ind. 300.

Under the Texas constitution providing that "no person shall hold or exercise at the same time more than one civil office of emolument, except justice of the peace, county commissioner, notary public, and postmaster," a person may hold either of the offices named, and, at the same time, any other office. Gaal v. Townsend, 77 Tex. 464.

3. See Horton v. Watson, 23 Kan. 229; State v. Derbes, 11 La. Ann. 50; Griebel v. State, 111 Ind. 369.

Where at a first election held May 11, 1886, a county treasurer was elected, and having been re-elected in November, 1886, he held possession of the office continuously from the first named date to the end of the second term, it was held that he was ineligible to hold the office for the succeeding term under Kansas Const., art. 9, § 3, providing that no person shall hold the office of county treasurer more than two consecutive terms, though two full terms would be four years. Davis v. Patten, 41 Kan. 480.

4. Horton v. Watson, 23 Kan. 229.

5. See Stimson's Am. Stat. L., § 223, b. c.; Royall v. Thomas, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 130; 26 Am. Rep. 335; State v. Buckman, 18 Fla. 267; Anderson v. State, 72 Ala. 187; Wenner v. Smith, 4 Utah 238.

The provision in the charter of Chicago rendering one ineligible as an alderman for conviction of crime, refers to convictions under Illinois laws, and not in the Federal courts. Hildreth v. Heath, 1 Ill. App. 82.

6. See Stimson's Am. Stat. L., § 223, d. e. f. g. h.; Royall v. Thomas, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 130; 26 Am. Rep. 335; constitutional provision the legislature has power to deprive criminals of their eligibility to office when they deem such deprivation a necessary punishment for their crimes.¹

The constitution of the United States provides that no person shall be a Senator or Representative in Congress, or elector of President or Vice-President or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States or under any State who, having previously taken an oath as a member of Congress, or as an officer of the United States, or as a member of any State legislature, or as an executive or judicial officer of any State, to support the constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same, or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof;² and similar provisions are found in the constitutions and statutes of some of the States, in which case they are enforceable in the State courts.³

State v. Buckman, 18 Fla. 267; Anderson v. State, 72 Ala. 187.

A conviction of petty larceny disqualifies a person from voting in Florida. State v. Buckman, 18 Fla. 267; Anderson v. State, 72 Ala. 187.

Condonation.—The reappointment of an officer, with knowledge of his previous misconduct in matters involving no moral delinquency, is a condonation thereof, so far as affects the right to remove him therefor. State v. Common Council, 9 Wis. 254.

Under a Texas constitution providing that every officer before assuming the duties of his office shall take an oath that he has not given, or offered any inducement to procure votes at his election; and that every person shall be disqualified from holding office upon conviction for such offense, merely holding out a promise to serve, for less compensation than the lawful fees in case of his election, does not disqualify one from holding office, nor does such promise disqualify him at common law, unless the number of voters influenced thereby is sufficient to change the result of the election. State v. Humphreys, 74 Tex. 466.

The Colorado act of March 8, 1877, declares that every qualified elector shall be eligible to office except as provided by the constitution. The constitution does not, in terms, disqualify because of corrupt means resorted to in obtaining the office, as provided by § 6 Edw. VI, ch. 16. Such conduct, therefore, does not disqualify. People v. Goddard, 8 Colo. 432.

1. Barker v. People, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 686; 15 Am. Dec. 322; People v. Clute, 50 N. Y. 451; 10 Am. Rep. 508.

The declaration of the constitution that each house of legislature shall be judge of the qualifications of its own members, does not take away the right of the legislature to take from a citizen his right to eligibility to those offices as a punishment for a crime of which he has been convicted. Barker v. People, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 686; 15 Am. Dec. 322.

2. Const. U. S. XIV Amendt., § 3. Congress may by a vote of two-thirds of each house, remove such disability. Const. U. S. XIV Amendt., § 3.

In Hudspeth v. Garrigues, 21 La. Ann. 684, it was held that the upholding of the office of clerk of a district court, under the Confederate government while in rebellion, was not of itself an act of rebellion which would disqualify the incumbent from holding office, the court by Howe, J., saying: "If, in legislative, or other official capacity, he had been engaged in the furtherance of the unlawful purposes of the insurgents, when the duties of his office necessarily had relation to the support of the rebellion; if he had held a position created for the purpose of more effectually carrying on hostilities, or whose duties appertained to the support of the rebel cause; or if he had in some way misused the office he did hold to forward the designs of the enemies of the United States, the case would have been very different."

3. See State v. Watkins, 21 La. Ann. 631; Hudspeth v. Garrigues, 21 La. Ann. 684; Privett v. Stevens, 25 Kan. 275; Privett v. Bickford, 26 Kan. 52; 40 Am. Rep. 301; Bridgeman v. Mallett, 1 Winst. (N. Car.) 112; Worothy v. Barrett, 63 N. Car. 199.

The provisions found in several of the States that persons liable for public moneys shall not be eligible to any office of trust or profit until they have paid over and accounted, are not ex post facto laws, nor are they repugnant to the constitution of the United States,¹ and the provisions existing in many of the States that any person who has engaged in a duel either as a principal or a second, or who has aided or abetted dueling, is disqualified to hold any office, post, or trust under the government,² are constitutional and will be enforced.³

Most of these provisions presuppose that the act or default upon which the disqualification is based must be judicially ascertained and fixed before the ineligibility attaches,⁴ but under some of them no previous conviction is held to be necessary upon the

Under the Florida Constitution, art. 16, § 1, a person who was a member of the secession convention, and afterward aided the enemies of the United States, is not debarred from holding office. In re Executive Communication, 12 Fla. 651.

Involuntary Service.—One who has served in the Confederate army, but not voluntarily, is not thereby rendered ineligible to hold the office of sheriff; nor can the question of his ineligibility be determined by an election canvassing board. Privett v. Stevens, 25 Kan. 275.

1. Taylor v. Governor, 1 Ark. 21; and see Cawley v. People, 95 Ill. 249; Brady v. Howe, 50 Miss. 607; Stimson's Am. Stat. L., § 234 e.

Mississippi constitution, art. 4, § 16, which disqualifies for office persons liable for public moneys unaccounted for, applies to private citizens as well as public officers. Hoskins v. Brantley, 57 Miss. 814.

The admission of the candidate, that he has made no settlement with the school board for school funds, though coupled with the assertion that he has disbursed more than he has received, and that he has filed his vouchers with the State auditor, is an admission of ineligibility, for want of a discharge; but a discharge granted by competent authority cannot be attacked. The only issue is upon the fact of the discharge. State v. Echeveria, 33 La. Ann. 709.

Additional Qualifications.—A statute which requires a sheriff elect, who has hitherto been sheriff, to produce his tax receipts from the proper officer, before again being inducted into the office, is not unconstitutional, upon the ground that it imposes additional qualifications upon the eligibility to office of such sheriff-elect other than those required by the constitution. State v. Dunn, 73 N. Car. 595.

2. See Stimson's Am. Stat. L., § 223 h; Morgan v. Vance, 4 Bush (Ky.) 323; In re Dorsey, 7 Port. (Ala.) 293; Brooks v. Calloway, 12 Leigh (Va.) 466; Moseley v. Moss, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 534.

3. Barker v. People, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 686; State v. Dupont, 3 McCord (S. Car.) 334; and see Moody v. Com., 4 Metc. (Ky.) 1; Com. v. Jones, 10 Bush (Ky.) 725; Royall v. Thomas, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 130; 26 Am. Rep. 335.

The dueling act of Alabama, so far as it prescribes an expurgatory oath, as a condition to the practice of law, is contrary to the scope and design of a free government; and so much of the act on the subject of dueling as requires the test oath to be taken by attorneys and counselors at law, is contrary to the constitution, and void. In re Dorsey, 7 Port. (Ala.) 293.

4. Cawley v. People, 95 Ill. 249; Com. v. Jones, 10 Bush (Ky.) 725; Brady v. Howe, 50 Miss. 607. And see Barker v. People, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 686; 15 Am. Dec. 322; State v. Humphries, 74 Tex. 466. See also Morgan v. Vance, 4 Bush (Ky.) 323.

Previous conviction is required by the language of the provision itself in many instances. See Stimson's Am. Stat. L., § 223.

In Illinois, while an officer might be ousted by quo warranto, until his default was judicially ascertained, his acts would be valid and binding and his sureties would be responsible for them. Cawley v. People, 95 Ill. 249.

ground that the civil and criminal remedies are twofold and have no necessary connection between them.¹

3. Preference to Veterans.—It is provided in several of the States that honorably discharged Union soldiers and sailors shall be preferred in appointment and employment to office or service in every public department and upon all public works therein, or in any of the cities, towns, and villages thereof, age, loss of limb, or other physical impairment which does not in fact incapacitate, not being deemed to disqualify them, provided they possess the business capacity necessary to the discharge of the duties of the position.²

1. Royall v. Thomas, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 130; 26 Am. Rep. 335; Brady v. Howe, 50 Miss. 607; Com. v. Walter, 83 Pa. St. 105; 24 Am. Rep. 154. And see Brooks v. Calloway, 12 Leigh (Va.) 466; Moseley v. Moss, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 534.

In Cochran v. Jones, 14 Am. L. Reg. N. S. 222, the board for the determination of contested elections decided that the disqualification for dueling and offense against the laws are separate subjects; and that the board has jurisdiction to decide the former without reference to a conviction for the latter in a judicial tribunal.

In Royall v. Thomas, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 130; 26 Am. Rep. 335, the court, by Staples, J., speaking of the anti-dueling laws, said: "Universal experience has demonstrated the truth of the observation that the practice of dueling could not be restrained by penal laws.

Who can fail to see how utterly valueless is all this legislation if the disabilities depend upon a previous criminal conviction? If no man can be excluded from office for violating the constitution until a jury can be found to convict, and a court to sentence him to an infamous punishment, the statute of 1810, and all the succeeding laws on the subject, are the merest mockeries. The juries have heretofore set at defiance the penal laws relating to dueling; is it supposed that they would be more inclined to hang offenders by the neck, or to put them in the penitentiary, when it comes to be understood this is the only way to exclude them from office."

In Pennsylvania though an officer might be removed by quo warranto for obtaining his election by bribery, without having first been convicted of the offense on an indictment, the defendant would have the right to have the issues of fact raised upon the quo warranto tried by a jury. Com. v.

Walter, 83 Pa. St. 105; 24 Am. Rep. 154.

2. New York Laws, 1884, ch. 312, § 1, as amended by Laws 1887, ch. 464; New York Laws, 1884, ch. 410, § 4, as amended by Laws 1886, ch. 29, § 1; Massachusetts Stats., 1887, ch. 437; Massachusetts Stats., 1884, ch. 320; and see Opinion of Justices, 145 Mass. 587; Sullivan v. Gilroy, 55 Hun (N. Y.) 285; People v. Wallace, 55 Hun (N. Y.) 149; People v. Durston (Supreme Ct.), 3 N. Y. Supp. 522; People v. Bardin (Supreme Ct.), 7 N. Y. Supp. 123; People v. French, 51 Hun (N. Y.) 345.

The New York provision also applies to non-competitive examinations under the civil service laws, rules or regulations whenever they apply. New York Laws (1884), ch. 312, § 1, as amended by Laws 1887, ch. 464.

Under the Massachusetts statutes, persons who served in the army or navy of the United States, in the War of the Rebellion, and were honorably discharged, cannot be preferred for appointment to office or employment, without having made application for appointment to office, or employment to the civil service commissioners as required by statute and the rules of the commissioners made thereunder. Opinion of Justices, 145 Mass. 587.

Under the New Jersey statute (Pamph. L. 1885), no person holding a position in any city or county of the State, whose term of office is not fixed by law, and receiving a salary from such city, county, or State, who is an honorably discharged soldier or sailor, having served in the War of the Rebellion, shall be removed from such position, except for good cause shown after a hearing, but such person shall hold his position during good behavior, and shall not be removed for political reasons. State v. Board of Public Works, 51 N. J. L. 240.

These provisions apply to all such appointments or employments in which the applicant is not required, under the civil service laws, to submit to competitive examination as to their fitness and qualification to fill the positions for which they apply,¹ and as the legislature may provide for the doing of public work in such manner and with such agencies as it deems proper, their constitutionality is reasonably free from doubt,² though they cannot be permitted to interfere with the constitutional freedom of a superior officer or head of a department to select and appoint his deputies and subordinates, or the exercise of his judgment in determining the fitness and propriety of contemplated appointments;³ and in any event, the determination of competency

In New York all officials or other persons having power of appointment to, or employment in the public service, are charged with the faithful compliance with the provisions, giving preference to soldiers and sailors, both in letter and spirit; failure therein being declared to be a misdemeanor. New York Laws (1884), ch. 312, § 2, and as amended by Laws 1887, ch. 464.

1. People v. Wallace, 55 Hun (N. Y.) 149.

The provisions of this law embrace the employment of ordinary laborers. Sullivan v. Gilroy, 55 Hun (N. Y.) 285.

The act applies to New York city, though previous statutes, also applicable to New York, with other cities, provided for appointments and promotions only on an examination as to fitness. McGuire v. Byrnes (Supreme Ct.), 2 N. Y. Supp. 760.

A statute giving honorably discharged soldiers and sailors a preference of appointment and employment, applies to veterans in office at the time of the passage of the act, as well as to those appointed under it. People v. French, 52 Hun (N. Y.) 464.

But the preference of veterans under the laws of New York is confined to appointment only and does not include promotions. Promotions of officers and members of the police force in the State of New York, therefore, are still to be determined upon grounds of meritorious police service and superior capacity. In re McGuire, 50 Hun (N. Y.) 203; McGuire v. Burns (Supreme Ct.), 2 N. Y. Supp. 760.

2. Sullivan v. Gilroy, 55 Hun (N. Y.) 284; In re Wortman (Supreme Ct.), 2 N. Y. Supp. 324; People v. Bardin (Supreme Ct.), 7 N. Y. Supp. 123.

These provisions do not seek to abridge rights guaranteed by the constitution, nor do they discriminate as to eligibility to, or qualification for the office. They simply regulate the agency for service, upon the public works of the municipality. Sullivan v. Gilroy, 55 Hun (N. Y.) 285.

The proper remedy of one having a clear right to a preference under the statute is by writ of mandamus to secure and enforce the right. Sullivan v. Gilroy, 55 Hun (N. Y.) 285; People v. Bardin (Supreme Ct.), 7 N. Y. Supp. 123.

The act was intended to relieve veterans from the disqualification of age, and as a consequence, the power of police commissioners to remove a veteran from the position of policeman, because he had reached the age of sixty years, was thereby abrogated, and a policeman who has been removed for this cause being a veteran, is entitled to be reinstated. People v. French, 52 Hun (N. Y.) 464.

Where four clerks are appointed to a temporary position for no definite term, one of whom was a soldier and had the preference in the appointment, and afterwards the duties of the position were reduced and the soldier was discharged, it was held that the soldier should have been discharged last of the four temporary clerks, and that he was entitled to be reinstated. People v. Adams, 53 Hun (N. Y.) 141.

3. People v. Angle, 109 N. Y. 564; People v. Durston (Supreme Ct.), 3 N. Y. Supp. 522; and see People v. Goething (Supreme Ct.), 8 N. Y. Supp. 742.

When a person applies to a public officer for appointment and employment under these provisions, it is incumbent upon him to furnish satisfac-

and sufficient business capacity, being a judicial act, cannot be controlled or reviewed by mandamus.¹

4. Civil Service Examinations.—Provisions are found in some of the States directing examinations for the purpose of ascertaining the fitness of candidates for office or public employment in respect to character, knowledge, and ability for the branch of service into which they seek to enter, and requiring the places to be filled by selection from among those graded highest as a result of such examinations,² and promotions from a lower to a higher grade of service are to be made on the basis of merit and competition.³ The civil service laws are constitutional and valid,⁴ but do not apply to laborers or workmen or the subordi-

tory evidence that he belongs to the class of persons intended to be benefited by the law, and officers cannot be charged with violating its provisions, and be held to be guilty of a misdemeanor in refusing employment to an applicant, by declining to act upon the mere assertion of the applicant, if he does not know, as a matter of fact, from other sources, that the statement of the applicant is true. People v. Wallace, 55 Hun (N. Y.) 149; People v. Knapp (Supreme Ct.), 4 N. Y. Supp. 825.

The applicant is required to establish the fact of his qualification by the affidavits of others, and not by their mere written recommendations. People v. Knapp (Supreme Ct.), 4 N. Y. Supp. 825.

1. People v. Little Falls (Supreme Ct.), 8 N. Y. Supp. 512; People v. Summers, 56 Hun (N. Y.) 644; and see People v. Adams, 51 Hun (N. Y.) 583; People v. Wallace, 55 Hun (N. Y.) 149; People v. Saratoga Springs (Supreme Ct.), 7 N. Y. Supp. 125; People v. Knapp (Supreme Ct.), 4 N. Y. Supp. 825.

It is a universal rule in respect to all subordinate tribunals, clothed with the exercise of judgment and discretion, that they cannot be compelled by mandamus to decide in any particular way. People v. Saratoga Springs (Supreme Ct.), 7 N. Y. Supp. 125.

The act giving preference to honorably discharged soldiers and sailors, does not entitle a veteran whose office is abolished, to displace another officer to whose duties the duties of the office so abolished have been added. People v. Adams, 51 Hun (N. Y.) 583.

2. See New York Laws, 1883, ch. 354; and amendments, Laws, 1884, ch. 357, 410; Laws 1886, ch. 29; Massachusetts Stats. 1884, ch. 320; Opinion of Justices, 145 Mass. 587; Peck v. Rochester (Supreme Ct.), 3 N. Y. Supp. 872; Rogers v. Buffalo, 123 N. Y. 173.

In Peck v. Rochester (Supreme Ct.), 3 N. Y. Supp. 872, the court by Angle, J., said: "Civil service examinations, as a prerequisite to entering upon the duties of office, appear to have been known to the common law of England more than five hundred years ago. In the city of London, in a tower which is thought to have been one of the earliest portions of Westminster Abbey, is a room where there are six horseshoes and sixty-one nails, which, by ancient custom, the sheriffs of London were compelled to count when they were sworn in. In the time of Edward II, when this custom was established (1308-1327), it was a proof of education, as only well-instructed men could count up to sixty-one. At the same time it was ordained that the sheriff, in proof of his strength, should cut a bundle of sticks. This custom (the abolition of which has been vainly attempted) still exists, but a bundle of matches is now provided. The original knife is always used. 2 Hare Walks in London (N. Y. ed. 1878) 272, 273.

3. New York Laws, 1883, ch. 354, § 2.

The statute is not restricted to officers, but includes generally all clerks and persons in the civil service of the government. People v. Civil Service Board, 41 Hun (N. Y.) 287.

4. Rogers v. Buffalo, 51 Hun (N. Y.) 637; People v. Angle, 109 N. Y. 564; Rogers v. Buffalo, 123 N. Y. 173. And see In re Wortman (Supreme Ct.), 2 N. Y. Supp. 324.

No law involving any test other than fitness and ability to discharge the duties of the office, can be legally ennates of an officer for whose errors the superior officer is financially responsible.¹ Nor can the constitutional discretion of a superior officer be hampered, restricted, or regulated in its exercise by any extraneous authority whatever,² and the requirements of these laws being in derogation of common-law right, the burden of proof is upon the party seeking to prevent the employment of any person to establish that he comes within a prohibited class.³ An appointment or employment in violation of the civil-service laws is illegal, and the authorities have no right to appropriate the public moneys to the payment for services rendered in pursuance of such illegal appointment or employment.⁴

acted under cover of a purpose to ascertain or prescribe such fitness. Rogers v. Buffalo, 123 N. Y. 173.

A statute like that of New York providing that not more than two of the three persons constituting the civil service commission shall be adherents of the same political faith is not unconstitutional. Rogers v. Buffalo, 123 N. Y. 173.

1. Rogers v. Buffalo (Supreme Ct.), 2 N. Y. Supp. 326; Rogers v. Buffalo, 51 Hun (N. Y.) 637.

The fact that the council is vested with power to reject an applicant nominated for the office of street inspector, and that if it saw fit, it might even reject an indefinite number of duly qualified applicants, does not indicate that the legislature did not intend the civil-service rules to apply to such officer, Rogers v. Buffalo, 51 Hun (N. Y.) 637.

A lamp inspector, whose duties are to keep a record of the number and location of all the street lamps in the city; the number unlighted each night, and the reason therefor; to investigate all complaints relating to such lamps, and make report to the council—is not a subordinate officer, clerk, or assistant required to be examined by New York Laws, 1883, ch. 354, § 8, as amended by New York Laws, 1884, ch. 410, § 2, for appointment under the civil-service rules. Peck v. Belknap, 55 Hun (N. Y.) 91.

2. People v. Angle, 109 N. Y. 564; People v. Durston (Supreme Ct.), 3 N. Y. Supp. 522.

Election officers are exempted from the provisions requiring civil-service examination in the State of New York. People v. French, 51 Hun (N. Y.) 345.

The provisions of the laws of New York relating to the employment of honorably discharged Union soldiers and sailors are not limited in their application to those departments or works of the State in which the employés are subject to civil-service examination. An officer who is eligible to reappointment, without undergoing a civil-service examination therefor, cannot lawfully be reappointed, if among the other qualified candidates there are honorably discharged Union soldiers or sailors. People v. French, 51 Hun (N. Y.) 345.

3. Peck v. Belknap, 55 Hun (N. Y.) 91; and see Rogers v. Buffalo, 51 Hun (N. Y.) 637.

Although one may have the right to an appointment, after having passed an examination by the civil-service examiners, a complaint for refusal to appoint, which does not charge an omission of duty on the part of the examiners, is insufficient. Gillen v. Wheeler, 5 N. Y. St. Rep. 904.

4. Rogers v. Buffalo (Supreme Ct.), 2 N. Y. Supp. 327; Peck v. Rochester (Supreme Ct.), 3 N. Y. Supp. 852.

Where honorably discharged soldiers who have served in the army or navy of the United States in the late war are certified by the board of examiners as competent, they shall be preferred for appointment to positions in the civil service of the State over all other persons though graded lower than others so examined and reported, provided their qualification and fitness shall have been ascertained as provided by law. New York Laws (1884), ch. 410, § 4, as amended by Laws 1886, ch. 29, § 1. And where two or more soldiers or sailors are certified as duly qualified, the appointment shall be made from among those so certified, who are graded highest as the result of the

V. RIGHT TO HOLD OFFICE—HOW CONFERRED.—All political power is inherent in the people,¹ and all officers and functionaries exercising powers of government and control over political action must derive their powers and office either directly from the people or from the agents or representatives of the people,² who have either directly or indirectly through their chosen representatives, created such offices and agencies as they deem to be desirable for the administration of public functions, and declared in what manner and by what persons they shall be exercised.³ The exercise of political functions is an act in its nature public and not private,⁴ and official power cannot exist in any person by his own assumption, or by the employment of another private person.⁵ Public office can be obtained and exercised only by a duly and legally authorized election or appointment.⁶

The powers of government are parceled out by the several constitutions,⁷ and where the manner of filling an office is prescribed by constitution, a different mode cannot be provided by legislative enactment;⁸ but if the manner of filling it is not examination. New York Laws (1886), ch. 29, § 2.

1. Wright v. Noell, 16 Kan. 601; Opinion of Justices, 70 Me. 560; Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 426; State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 449; State v. Hyde, 121 Ind. 20; People v. Hurlbut, 24 Mich. 44; 9 Am. Rep. 103; People v. Detroit, 28 Mich. 228; 15 Am. Rep. 202.

One of the principles lying at the very foundation of our government is that all political power resides with the people; that government is founded on their sole authority and organized for the great purpose of protecting their rights and liberties and securing their independence, and that they have at all times a complete power to alter, reform or abolish their government whenever they deem it necessary. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clinton Co., 1 Ohio St. 77.

2. Attorney-Gen'l. v. Detroit, 58 Mich. 213; 55 Am. Rep. 675; Hovey v. State, 119 Ind. 395; Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 426; State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 449; People v. Hurlbut, 24 Mich. 44; 9 Am. Rep. 103; People v. Detroit, 28 Mich. 228; 15 Am. Rep. 202.

The government is the fountain of office. State v. Valle, 41 Mo. 29.

3. Mechem's Pub. Off., § 501; State v. Stanley, 66 N. Car. 59; 8 Am. Rep. 488; State v. Judges, 21 Ohio St. 1.

The constitution is the letter of attorney by which alone officers are authorized to act, and in all cases they must be able to show that their acts are authorized by it. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clinton Co., 1 Ohio St. 77.

4. Ames v. Port Huron Log, etc., Co., 11 Mich. 139; 83 Am. Dec. 731.

5. Ames v. Port Huron Log, etc., Co., 11 Mich. 139; 83 Am. Dec. 731.

The right to choose officers is primarily and inherently in the people. Primarily it is neither an executive nor legislative function except as expressly or impliedly delegated to the executive or legislative department; it resides entirely in electors of the State. Silence on the subject takes no part of the power from the people and vests none in their representatives. State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 382.

6. Ames v. Port Huron Log, etc., Co., 11 Mich. 139; 83 Am. Dec. 731; and see Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376; 74 Am. Dec. 572; People v. Bull, 46 N. Y. 57; 7 Am. Rep. 302.

When it is provided that an office shall be filled by election by law, without expressly or by necessary implication defining the electoral body to whom the power of choosing is committed, the presumption is that the election is to be referred to the people of the civil or political division for which the officer is to be elected. State v. Harrison, 113 Ind. 434; 3 Am. St. Rep. 663, citing State v. Irwin, 5 Nev. 111; Magruder v. Swann, 25 Md. 173.

7. Ames v. Port Huron Log, etc., Co., 11 Mich. 139; 83 Am. Dec. 731.

8. Opinion of Justices, 117 Mass. 603; Speed v. Crawford, 3 Metc. (Ky.)

prescribed, or if it is not an office of constitutional origin, it is competent for the legislature to declare the manner of filling it, either through the agency of an election by the people, or by appointment by such authority as it may deem just and proper,¹ and in like manner to change from time to time the mode of election or appointment.²

1. By Election.—See ELECTIONS.³

2. By Appointment.—Appointment is the selection or designation of a person, by the person or persons having authority therefor, to fill an office of public function and discharge the duties of the same.⁴ As distinguished from an election, an appointment is generally made by one person or a limited number

207; People v. Raymond, 37 N. Y. 428; People v. Albertson, 55 N. Y. 50; People v. Blake, 49 Barb. (N. Y.) 9; Devoy v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 264; People v. Keeler, 29 Hun (N. Y.) 175; People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 532; Warner v. People, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 272; 43 Am. Dec. 740; People v. Bull, 46 N. Y. 57; 7 Am. Rep. 302; King v. Hunter, 65 N. Car. 603; 6 Am. Rep. 754; State v. Goldstucker, 40 Wis. 124; State v. Brunst, 26 Wis. 412; 7 Am. Rep. 84.

The constitution cannot be evaded by change in the name of an office, nor can an office be divided and the duties assigned to two or more officers under different names, and the appointment to the offices made in any manner except as authorized by the constitution. People v. Albertson, 55 N. Y. 50.

Where the new duties imposed upon an officer are such as are calculated to facilitate and the better to enable him to perform the same essential duties performed by an officer before the change, he cannot be considered as a new officer in the sense of the constitution. People v. Raymond, 37 N. Y. 428.

It would not be competent for the legislature to create a new civil division of a State, and abrogate the local offices of the several counties that might compose it, and direct the appointment by the governor and Senate of other officers, limited to perform the same local functions only, although distinguished by new and more extended titles. People v. Pinckney, 32 N. Y. 377.

1. People v. Woodruff, 32 N. Y. 355; People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 538; People v. Batchelor, 22 N. Y. 128; People v. Pinckney, 32 N. Y. 377;

Sturgis v. Spofford, 45 N. Y. 446; Board of Revenue v. Barber, 53 Ala. 589; Dibble v. Merriman, 52 Conn. 214; State v. Gorby, 122 Ind. 17; State v. Covington, 29 Ohio St. 102.

Offices are new and can be altered or abolished by legislation, when they are new in respect to their operative and substantial functions, in a sense that those functions were not, at the time of the adoption of the constitution, performed by persons who were officers under some other name. People v. Pinckney, 32 N. Y. 377.

A constitutional provision requiring that county and township officers shall be elected, does not imply that city and village officers shall also be elected. State v. Covington, 29 Ohio St. 102.

2. People v. Woodruff, 32 N. Y. 355.

A commission issued by the governor to an appointee of the legislature under a void election, which recites that it is issued because of such election, cannot be given the effect of an executive appointment. State v. Peelle, 124 Ind. 515.

3. Vol. 6, p. 255.

4. Black's L. Dict.

An appointment to an office is not the same thing in a constitutional sense as an election to office. Speed v. Crawford, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 207.

The word "appointment" is sometimes used in a sense to denote the right or privilege conferred by an appointment; thus the act of authorizing a man to print the laws of the United States by authority of a right thereby conveyed, is considered such an appointment, but the right is not an office. Bouv. L. Dict., tit. Appointment.

acting with delegated powers, while an election is made by all of a class.¹

a. THE APPOINTING POWER.—The power to appoint officers is a prerogative of the people,² which belongs where the people choose to place it,³ and can be exercised only by those departments of government to which they have either expressly or impliedly confided it by their constitutions.⁴

Appointments to office, by whomsoever made, are intrinsically executive acts.⁵ And the power to appoint is usually conferred

1. Bouv. L. Dict., tit. Appointment; State v. McCollister, 11 Ohio 46; People v. Lord, 9 Mich. 227. And see Carpenter v. People, 8 Colo. 116; People v. Bull, 46 N. Y. 57; 7 Am. Rep. 302.

Whenever the office is to be conferred by the people or by any considerable body of the people, it is spoken of as an election. Whenever it is to be conferred by an individual, as by the governor, or by a select number of individuals, as by a judicial court, or by the general assembly, it is spoken of as an appointment. State v. McCollister, 11 Ohio 46.

Where the mode of conferring the office is in legal effect an appointment, the fact that the statute prescribing it uses the word "election" does not affect the question. Sturgis v. Spofford, 45 N. Y. 446.

While it is entirely accurate to say that an appointment is not the equivalent of an election in a constitutional sense, in determining the right of an incumbent to hold until his successor is elected, as in Gosman v. State, 106 Ind. 203; or when passing upon title of officers who were appointed when the law required them to be elected, as in Speed v. Crawford, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 207, it is a fundamental error to assume that a selection to office by the general assembly, when that body is expressly authorized to elect, is not an election in the constitutional sense. State v. Harrison, 113 Ind. 434; 3 Am. St. Rep. 663.

2. Hovey v. State, 119 Ind. 395; State v. Hyde, 121 Ind. 20; Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 426; State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 449; People v. Hurlbut, 24 Mich. 44; 9 Am. Rep. 103; People v. Detroit, 28 Mich. 228; 15 Am. Rep. 202.

The power to fill an office is political, and this power is exercised in common by the legislatures, the governors, and other executive officers of every State in the Union, unless it has been expressly withdrawn by the organic law of the State. People v. Langdon, 8 Cal. 1.

3. Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376; 74 Am. Dec. 572.

The power of appointment is not restricted to bodies or officers representing or responsible to the people. Sturgis v. Spofford, 45 N. Y. 446.

The constitution of California does not prohibit the legislature from conferring on a voluntary association of persons, who are not citizens of the United States or electors, the power to elect a person to fill an office created by the legislature. In re Bulger, 45 Cal. 553.

4. Hovey v. State, 119 Ind. 395; State v. Hyde, 121 Ind. 20; State v. McAdoo, 36 Mo. 453; State v. Swift, 11 Nev. 128; State v. Irwin, 5 Nev. 111.

The power to appoint to office is regarded as a political or executive power, to be exercised by the person authorized to execute it, according to his discretion. Achley's Case, 4 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 35.

Appointments to office can be made by the heads of departments of the United States government in those cases only in which Congress has authorized it by law; and therefore the appointment of an agent of fortifications by the Secretary of War, there being no act of Congress conferring that power upon that officer, is irregular. U. S. v. Maurice, 2 Brock. (U. S.) 96.

5. State v. Barbour, 53 Conn. 76; 55 Am. Rep. 65; Taylor v. Coin, 3 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 401; Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376; 74 Am. Dec. 572; Achley's Case, 4 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 35; Greenough v. Greenough, 11 Pa. St. 489; 51 Am. Dec. 567; Wood v. U. S., 15 Ct. of Cl. 151; Perkins v. U. S., 20 Ct. of Cl. 438; Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; Haw-either expressly or impliedly upon executive officers,¹ though the exclusive right to exercise the power is not included in the general grant of power to the executive department.²

The executive cannot act where other modes of appointment are prescribed by constitution.³ And all independent departments have some appointing power as an incident of the principal power, for without it no department can be independent.⁴ Where an appointment is essential to the proper exercise of a judicial duty, the court concerned has authority to make it.⁵

kings v. Governor, 1 Ark. 570; 33 Am. Dec. 346; Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 426; Hovey v. State, 119 Ind. 395; State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 449; State v. Noble, 118 Ind. 350; State v. Hyde, 121 Ind. 20; Lafayette, etc., R. Co. v. Geiger, 34 Ind. 185.

It has been so held where the appointment was made by a court. Taylor v. Com., 3 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 401. Also when made by a common council of a city. Achley's Case, 4 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 35. And when made by an executive officer. Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137.

The power to fill the office of district attorney pro tempore vests in the governor, by virtue of the general law authorizing him to fill vacancies in office. State v. Garrett, 29 La. Ann. 637.

1. See State v. Harrison, 113 Ind. 434; 3 Am. St. Rep. 663; State v. Hyde, 121 Ind. 20; State v. Gorby, 122 Ind. 17; Hovey v. State, 119 Ind. 395; State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 449; Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 426; State v. Day, 14 Fla. 9; Page v. Hardin, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 648; Prater v. Strother, (Ky. 1890), 13 S. W. Rep. 252; Burton v. Kennebec Co., 44 Me. 388; Watkins v. Watkins, 2 Md. 341; State v. Smith, 82 Mo. 51; State v. Kennon, 7 Ohio St. 547; Speed v. Crawford, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 207; In re Bartlett, 9 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 414; People v. Bledsoe, 68 N. Car. 457; Com. v. King, 85 Pa. St. 103.

A statute authorizing the governor to fill vacancies in certain offices, is a valid constitutional act, and authorizes the governor to fill all vacancies in the offices provided for. Falconer v. Robinson, 46 Ala. 340; and see Addison v. Saulmer, 19 Cal. 82; Gormley v. Taylor, 44 Ga. 76; State v. Tucker, 23 La. Ann. 139; Brady v. West, 50 Miss. 68.

Under a constitutional provision that the governor shall "nominate, etc., all officers whose appointments are not otherwise provided for," the governor has power to appoint all officers whose appointments are not provided for by the constitution. People v. Bledsoe, 68 N. Car. 457. See People v. Nichols, 68 N. Car. 429.

2. Hovey v. State, 119 Ind. 395; Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376; 74 Am. Dec. 572; State v. Barbour, 53 Conn. 76; 55 Am. Rep. 65; Taylor v. Com., 3 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 401; State v. Hyde, 121 Ind. 20; State v. Irwin, 5 Nev. 111; State v. Swift, 11 Nev. 128; Achley's Case, 4 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 35; Biggs v. McBride, 17 Oregon 640.

It is the nature of the power of appointment which is executive, whether exercised by the governor or a court, as distinguished from those acts of the court that are merely judicial. Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376; 74 Am. Dec. 572.

The head of a department has no constitutional prerogative of appointment to office, independently of the legislation of Congress, and by such legislation he must be governed, not only in making appointments but in all that is incident thereto. U. S. v. Perkins, 116 U. S. 483.

3. Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376; 74 Am. Dec. 572.

4. State v. Noble, 118 Ind. 350; State v. Hyde, 121 Ind. 20; State v. Barbour, 53 Conn. 76; 55 Am. Rep. 65; Achley's Case, 4 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 35.

5. State v. Noble, 118 Ind. 350; State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 449; State v. Hyde, 121 Ind. 20; State v. Smith, 15 Mo. App. 412; In re Janitor, 35 Wis. 410.

The district court of Texas has authority, under Pasch. Dig., art. 191, to appoint a district-attorney pro tempore for an indefinite time not to extend beyond the term of the court. State v. Manlove, 33 Tex. 798.

The power to appoint officers is Legislative bodies may elect or appoint the officers of their respective branches and relating to their department of the government,¹ and the governing officers of all benevolent and other institutions which it is the duty of the legislature to establish and maintain, or, at its option, to authorize their appointment by some other department of the government;² and where the people have, by their constitutions, expressly conferred the power of appointment of other officers, upon the legislature, it may properly and lawfully be exercised within the limits so prescribed.³ The legislature has no power to appoint local officers, however; it cannot take from the people of counties, towns and cities the right of local self-government, or the right to control their own purely local affairs in their own way,⁴ though, as an ministerial, and may be conferred upon persons holding judicial offices. People v. Morgan, 90 Ill. 558. And see Walker v. Cincinnati, 21 Ohio St. 14; 8 Am. Rep. 24.

The power vested by statute in the judges of certain judicial districts in California to appoint police commissioners is not a judicial power, and was not continued in force by the new constitution. Heinlen v. Sullivan, 64 Cal. 378.

Temporary Absence.—The circuit court may make a temporary appointment during the absence of the clerk, but such appointment will not continue longer than such absence, and he will be entitled to the office on his return. Lowry v. Tullis, 32 Miss. 147.

1. State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 449; State v. Noble, 118 Ind. 350; State v. Hyde, 121 Ind. 20; Tenney v. State, 27 Wis. 387.

Power to employ a competent clerk does not authorize a legislative committee to employ legal counsel. Tenney v. State, 28 Wis. 387.

2. Hovey v. State, 119 Ind. 386; State v. Harrison, 113 Ind. 434; 3 Am. St. Rep. 663; Washington Co. v. Nesbitt, 6 Md. 468; Biggs v. McBride, 17 Oregon 640.

Offices relating to the State benevolent institutions are not such as any elector may claim a right to hold, solely on the ground that he is a voter, but the legislature may restrict them to competent persons by prescribing particular qualifications. It is within the power of the legislature, by virtue of its general power, to require that the officers of this class shall be selected from different political parties, or that they shall be persons of peculiar skill and experience, and it may provide for the appointment of women. Hovey v. State, 119 Ind. 386.

3. Mechem's Pub. Off., § 106; Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376; 74 Am. Dec. 572; People v. Bennett, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 480; Jones v. Perry, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 59; 30 Am. Rep. 430.

The fact that the constitution may prescribe that the mode of appointing judges shall be by the legislature, does not constitute the legislature the constituent. Jones v. Perry, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 59; 30 Am. Dec. 430. See State v. Kennon, 7 Ohio St. 546.

County commissioners have authority to employ a competent person at a reasonable compensation to examine the accounts of the county treasury, when, in their opinion, it is necessary to do so. Laws v. Harlam Co., 12 Neb. 637.

In several of the States the legislature is prohibited from the exercise of all appointing power. See State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 449; Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 426; State v. Judges, 21 Ohio St. 1; Walker v. Cincinnati, 21 Ohio St. 14; 8 Am. Rep. 24; State v. Kennon, 7 Ohio St. 546.

4. Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 426; State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 449; People v. Lynch, 51 Cal. 15; 21 Am. Rep. 677; Taylor v. Palmer, 31 Cal. 252; Speed v. Crawford, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 206; People v. Hurlbut, 24 Mich. 44; 9 Am. Rep. 103; Attorney Genl. v. Detroit, 58 Mich. 213; People v. Mayor, etc., of Chicago, 51 Ill. 17; 2 Am. Rep. 278; State v. Swift, 11 Nev. 128; People v. Albertson, 55 N. Y. 50; People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 532; Attorney Genl. v. Detroit, 29 Mich. 108; People v. Detroit, 28 Mich. 228; 15 Am. Rep. 202; Atkins v. Randolph, 31 Vt. 226; incident to its right to confer and recall corporate power, it may make provisional or initiatory appointments, to effect a change or put a new system into operation;¹ and it has an unquestionable right to prescribe the general features of local government in subordination to the constitutional purpose.²

The power to direct the manner or mode in which an act shall be done, however, and the authority to do the act itself, are not identical or equivalent to each other,³ and the power of prescribing the manner of making appointments to office falls naturally and properly to the legislative department,⁴ and may be exer-

State v. Goldstucker, 40 Wis. 124; Bull v. Conroe, 13 Wis. 233.

The theory of the constitution is that counties, cities, towns or villages, are of right entitled to choose who they will have to rule over them, and that this right cannot be taken from them, and the electors and inhabitants divulge by any act of the legislature or of any, or of all, the departments of the government combined. People v. Albertson, 55 N. Y. 50.

The power of the legislature over municipal corporations in the absence of constitutional restriction is unlimited, however, except so far as they are invested with rights incident to a private corporation. David v. Portland Water Committee, 14 Oregon 98.

The legislature may, in creating a municipality, confer the taxing power on authorities to be appointed by some functionary or individual, and submit the charter to the people, and if they adopt the same, the adoption will be an assent by the people to the appointment of such officers by such functionary. People v. Morgan, 90 Ill. 558.

1. People v. Hurlbut, 24 Mich. 44; 9 Am. Rep. 103; People v. Detroit, 28 Mich. 228; 15 Am. Rep. 202; Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376; 74 Am. Dec. 572; State v. Benedict, 15 Minn. 198; State v. Swift, 11 Nev. 128; State v. Irwin, 5 Nev. 111. And see Collins v. State, 8 Ind. 344; State v. McGregor, 44 Ohio St. 628.

Offices which had been filled by executive appointment, and which under amendments, to the constitution were afterwards to be filled by a vote of the people, are properly filled during the interval elapsing, before the elected officers could act by virtue of their election by executive appointment. Burton v. Kennebec Co., 44 Me. 388.

Where selectmen, having authority to appoint a person to act for a special occasion only, appointed him to act generally, he can legally act on such special occasion, the appointment being good pro tanto. Hartshorn v. Schoff, 51 N. H. 316.

2. Attorney-Gen'l. v. Detroit, 29 Mich. 108.

It belongs to the legislature to arrange and distribute the administrative functions of government, committing such portion as it may deem suitable to local jurisdictions, and retaining the other portions to be exercised by officers appointed by the central power, and changing the arrangement from time to time as convenience and efficiency of administration and the public good may seem to require. People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 532.

The function of the legislature is, not to run and operate the machinery of local government, but to provide for and put it in motion. It corresponds to the authority which constitutional conventions sometime find it needful to exercise, when they prescribe the agencies by means of which the new constitutions they have adopted are to be made to displace the old. People v. Hurlbut, 24 Mich. 44; 9 Am. Rep. 103.

3. State v. Kennon, 7 Ohio St. 546; State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 449; Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 426; State v. Peelle, 121 Ind. 496.

Where an office is of legislative creation, the legislature can modify, control, or abolish it, and within these powers is embraced the right to change the mode of appointment to the office. Davis v. State, 7 Md. 151; 61 Am. Dec. 331.

4. State v. Kennon, 7 Ohio St. 546; State v. Covington, 29 Ohio St. 102; State v. Crow, 20 Ark. 209; State v. Hyde, 121 Ind. 20; State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 449; Hovey v. State, 119 Ind. 395; Brady v. West, 50 Miss. 68; State v. Swift, 11 Nev. 128; People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 532; In re Whiting, cised by it in the absence of constitutional provision,¹ as well as where the constitution provides for the appointment to be made in a manner prescribed by law.² And the legislature may make a new distribution of the powers of government and provide for new offices in the interest of the people, provided it does not violate any provisions of the constitution or disturb any existing arrangement made by it,³ plenary power in the legislature for all purposes of civil government being the rule, and a prohibition to exercise a particular power being the exception.⁴

1 Edm. Sel. Cas. (N. Y.) 498; and see Bridges v. Shallcross, 6 W. Va. 562.

Where the legislature creates an office, it can designate by whom and in what manner the person who is to fill the office shall be appointed, and if it is silent on this subject, the governor makes the appointment the same as if he were specially authorized by the act to do so. Davis v. State, 7 Md. 151; 61 Am. Dec. 331.

The office of tax commissioners in New York was created after the adoption of the constitution of 1846; and it is, therefore, competent for the legislature to declare the manner of the appointment of such commissioners. People v. Woodruff, 32 N. Y. 355.

1. State v. Crow, 20 Ark. 209; State v. Sorrels, 15 Ark. 674; People v. Stevens, 15 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 103; People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 538; People v. Batchelor, 22 N. Y. 128.

Retroactive Authorization.—The Louisiana legislative act of March 9, 1874, changing the mode of appointing certain officers, cannot be construed so as to make it retroactive. It must be understood to apply to parishes where appointments to such offices had not been made by the police juries, or where vacancies existed. State v. Parlange, 26 La. Ann. 548.

2. State v. Kennon, 7 Ohio St. 546; State v. Hyde, 121 Ind. 20; State v. Peelle, 121 Ind. 496; Bridges v. Shallcross, 6 W. Va. 562.

Where the constitution authorizes the mode of appointment to certain offices to be directed by the legislature, any subsequent legislature is authorized to act upon the subject. Com. v. Clark, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 127.

3. People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 532; Metropolitan Board of Health v. Hiestler, 87 N. Y. 661; People v. Shepard, 36 N. Y. 285; People v. Porter, 90 N. Y. 68; People v. Detroit, 28 Mich. 228; 15 Am. Rep. 202; State v. Noble, 118 Ind. 350; State v. Hyde, 121 Ind.

20; Sill v. Corning, 15 N. Y. 297; Warner v. People, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 272; 43 Am. Dec. 740; People v. Maynard, 14 Ill. 419; State v. Covington, 29 Ohio St. 102.

The provision of the New York constitution giving the legislature the authority to establish inferior local courts, refers simply to local courts as historically known, that is, courts established within one of the recognized territorial divisions of the State. It does not authorize it to carve out from a territory of the State a district for judicial purposes not appointed by county, town, city, or village lines, and erect therein a local court. People v. Porter, 90 N. Y. 68.

Under the Indiana constitution, the legislature may establish courts, but it does not invest the courts with judicial power. The constitution alone can do that, for all judicial power comes from that instrument, and is vested by it in the courts and judges. State v. Noble, 118 Ind. 350; Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 426.

4. People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 532; People v. Lynch, 51 Cal. 15; 21 Am. Rep. 677; Hovey v. State, 119 Ind. 395; Lafayette, etc., R. Co. v. Geiger, 34 Ind. 185; Bridges v. Shallcross, 6 W. Va. 562.

Independent of constitutional limitations, the legislative power is omnipotent within its proper sphere. The legislature in this respect is the direct representative of the people, and the delegate and depositary of their power. People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 532; Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 426; Hedderich v. State, 101 Ind. 569; 51 Am. Rep. 768; McComas v. Krug, 81 Ind. 327; 42 Am. Rep. 135; Wright v. Wright, 2 Md. 429; 56 Am. Dec. 723.

But like other departments of the government, it can only exercise such powers as have been delegated to it, and when it steps beyond that boundary, its acts, like those of the most hum-

b. EXERCISE OF THE POWER TO APPOINT.—The choice of a person to fill an office constitutes the essence of the appointment,¹ and the selection must be the discretionary act of the officer clothed with the power of appointment.² This choice may be manifested and carried out by the designation of the person to be appointed, by the person or persons having authority to appoint,³ or by ballot of the parties authorized to make the appointment,⁴ or by resolution naming the officer and voted for by those having the appointing power.⁵ Or, in the absence of any statute prescribing a particular form of writing, it may be in any form, provided the language be sufficient to show that the officer intended thereby to exercise his power and to discharge his duty of appointment.⁶ This choice, however, must be evi-ble magistrate in the State who transcends his jurisdiction, are utterly void. Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 426; citing Taylor v. Porter, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 140; 40 Am. Dec. 277; Pumpelly v. Owego, 45 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 219; Campbell's Case, 2 Bland (Md.) 209; 20 Am. Dec. 360.

In inquiring whether a given statute is constitutional, it is for those who question its validity to show that it is forbidden. People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 532; Bridges v. Shallcross, 6 W. Va. 562.

1. Johnston v. Wilson, 2 N. H. 202; 9 Am. Dec. 50; Hoke v. Field, 10 Bush (Ky.) 144; 19 Am. Rep. 582; People v. Fitzsimmons, 68 N. Y. 514; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137; Craig v. Norfolk, 1 Mod. 122.

2. People v. Murray, 70 N. Y. 521; People v. Fitzsimmons, 68 N. Y. 514; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137.

A majority of the appointing power may lawfully determine beforehand and by a caucus for whom they will vote for an appointive office at the regular meeting of such appointing power. Such prior determination will not invalidate a subsequent appointment made thereto. People v. Stowell, 9 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 456.

An appointment made by drawing lots is illegal. Com. v. Philadelphia Comrs., 5 Binn. (Pa.) 534.

Self-appointment.—It is contrary to the policy of the law for an officer to prostitute his official position by using his official appointing power to place himself in office. State v. Hoyt, 2 Oregon 246. And see Kinyon v. Duchene, 21 Mich. 498; Com. v. Douglass, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 77.

Where the power to make an appointment to office is vested in three justices, they cannot appoint one of their own number. People v. Thomas, 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 287.

3. See People v. Murray, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 42; People v. Van Slyck, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 324; Hoke v. Field, 10 Bush (Ky.) 144; 19 Am. Rep. 58.

A nomination in writing signed by the appointing officer, and addressed to a body having power to confirm the appointment, is a sufficient appointment and no further commission is necessary. People v. Murray, 70 N. Y. 521; People v. Fitzsimmons, 68 N. Y. 514.

Where several offices of a different class are to be filled by appointment, and the appointment fails to designate the class of the appointees, the first-named appointee should be regarded, as appointed to the place of first class. People v. Richmond Co., 20 N. Y. 252.

4. Sturges v. Spofford, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 436; reversed on other grounds in 45 N. Y. 446. And see State v. Chapman, 44 Conn. 595; State v. Dillon, 125 Ind. 65; Putnam v. Langley, 133 Mass. 204.

Where a city charter does not prescribe the number of votes necessary to an election of a presiding officer by the council, the votes of a majority of a quorum elect. Cadmus v. Farr, 47 N. J. L. 208.

5. Sturges v. Spofford, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 436; reversed on other grounds in 45 N. Y. 446; and see Achley's Case, 4 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 35.

6. People v. Fitzsimmons, 68 N. Y. 514; People v. Murray, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 42; People v. Van Slyck, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 324.

The fact that the appointing officer used the word nomination instead of appointment, is of no moment. The denced by some open, unequivocal act,¹ and the authority that appoints must not only have power, but must exercise it in the mode defined by the law by which it is authorized.² The rule in some of the States is that an appointment to office can only be made verbally and without writing, when permitted by the terms of the statute conferring the power,³ though in others it is held that where the manner in which the appointment is to be made is not prescribed, it need not be in writing.⁴

An appointment is complete when the last act required of the words nominate, select, designate, or choose would either of them answer the purpose in such case if used in the sense of appoint. People v. Fitzsimmons, 68 N. Y. 514.

1. Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 57; Hoke v. Field, 10 Bush (Ky.) 144; 19 Am. Rep. 58; People v. Murray, 70 N. Y. 521.

2. Kimball v. Alcorn, 45 Miss. 151; People v. Murray, 70 N. Y. 521; People v. Gates, 56 N. Y. 387; State v. Peelle, 124 Ind. 515; State v. Guiney, 26 Minn. 313; State v. Mayor, etc., of Paterson, 35 N. J. L. 190; State v. Michellon, 42 N. J. L. 405; and see Bridges v. Shallcross, 6 W. Va. 562; Launtz v. People, 113 Ill. 137; 55 Am. Rep. 405; State v. Kenny, 45 N. J. L. 251; State v. Dillon, 125 Ind. 65.

Where the statute empowers the Secretary of the Treasury to appoint twenty special agents, and no more, an appointment in excess of that number is void as to the excess, and although the appointee takes the oath of office and renders service, he is not entitled to the compensation fixed by law. Weeks v. U. S., 21 Ct. of Cl. 124.

But where the mayor's power of nomination of inspectors of weights and measures for New York city existed to the extent of two officers, it was held that the selection of four persons did not invalidate its exercise. People v. Kneissel, 58 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 404.

The provision of the New York law, 1850, ch. 140, § 28, subd. 6, that commissioners to ascertain the point of intersection of railroads shall "be appointed by the court, as is provided in this act in respect to acquiring title to real estate," refers merely to the manner of appointment and practice of the court. In re Buffalo, etc., R. Co., 15 Hun (N. Y.) 365.

3. People v. Murray, 70 N. Y. 521; People v. Willard, 44 Hun (N. Y.) 580; People v. Fitzsimmons, 68 N. Y. 514.

Affecting the public and not merely private rights, and being done under the authority of the sovereign power and not under individual authority, it should be authenticated in a way that the public may know when and in what manner the duty has been performed. People v. Murray, 70 N. Y. 521.

In People v. Murray, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 42, it was held that no deed or writing is requisite to give validity to an appointment to an office, unless the statute prescribes that formality, and that commissioners of excise may be appointed by parol.

The New York statutes requiring that commissions of all officers, where no special provision is made by law, shall be signed by the presiding officer of the board or body, or by the person making the appointment, thus making the signing of a commission essential to complete an appointment, embraces only public officers of the State other than militia and town officers. People v. Murray, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 42, citing People v. Molineux, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 9; aff'd 40 N. Y. 113.

4. Hoke v. Field, 10 Bush (Ky.) 144; 19 Am. Rep. 58; People v. Murray, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 42; Saunders v. Owen, 2 Salk. 467; 12 Mod. 200.

In Hoke v. Field, 10 Bush (Ky.) 144; 19 Am. Rep. 58, it was held that an appointment made in the presence of the tribunal charged with the duty of taking the bond and administering the oath of office to the appointee made by an oral announcement by the appointing officer of his determination, was sufficient.

An appointment in the general sense of the term may be by deed, or in writing without seal, or verbally, depending upon the subject-matter of the appointment, and the terms of the authority under which it is made. People v. Murray, 70 N. Y. 521.

appointing power has been performed.¹ Where a commission is required, the signature and sealing of the commission by the appointing power is the last act which completes the appointment,² the commission being a matter of form, which may or may not be necessary, according as usage and positive statute may or may not render it indispensable,³ though where the issue of the commission is to be performed by some other than the appointing power, it constitutes no part of the appointment.⁴ And a nomination in writing made by the appointing officer to the body authorized to confirm it will answer the purpose of a commission,⁵ though if the concurrence or consent of some other body or officer is required, the act of the appointing officer becomes complete and effective only when such concurrence is manifested.⁶

1. State v. Barbour, 53 Conn. 76; 55 Am. Rep. 65; People v. Cazneau, 20 Cal. 503; Conger v. Gilmer, 32 Cal. 75; Jefferson Co. v. Clark, 1 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 82; Achley's Case, 4 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 35; People v. Stowell, 9 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 456; People v. Fitzsimmons, 68 N. Y. 514; U. S. v. Le Baron, 19 How. (U. S.) 73; U. S. v. Stewart, 19 How. (U. S.) 79.

2. Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137; State v. Barbour, 53 Conn. 76; 55 Am. Rep. 65; Hawkins v. Governor, 1 Ark. 570; 33 Am. Dec. 346; Conger v. Gilmer, 32 Cal. 75; People v. Cazneau, 20 Cal. 503; People v. Whiteman, 10 Cal. 38; Jefferson Co. v. Clark, 1 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 82; People v. Murray, 70 N. Y. 521; People v. Fitzsimmons, 68 N. Y. 514; People v. Murray, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 42; U. S. v. Le Baron, 19 How. (U. S.) 73.

The transmission of the commission to the officer is not essential to his investiture of the office. If by any inadvertence or accident it should fail to reach him, his possession of the office is as lawful as if it were in his custody. U. S. v. Le Baron, 19 How. (U. S.) 73.

A commission bears date, and the salary of the officer commences from his appointment, not from the transmission or acceptance of his commission. Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137.

3. Johnston v. Wilson, 2 N. H. 202; 9 Am. Dec. 50. And see Newcum v. Kirtley, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 515.

The commission forms no part of the appointment; it is only evidence of it. People v. Murray, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 42; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137; Billy v. State, 2 Nott & M. (S. Car.) 357.

It is not necessary to produce a commission from the governor to entitle a party to an office, where the statute requiring the issue of a commission had been repealed before the motion to qualify was made. Newcum v. Kirtley, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 515.

4. State v. Barbour, 53 Conn. 76; 55 Am. Rep. 65; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137; People v. Stowell, 9 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 456.

Such formal acts in such cases are mere ministerial acts. State v. Barbour, 53 Conn. 76; 55 Am. Rep. 65.

Where the governor has signed and sealed the commission of an officer, and delivered it to the Secretary of State to be attested and recorded, the duties of the secretary being in that behalf purely ministerial, the court will, by mandamus, compel him to perform them. Hawkins v. Governor, 1 Ark. 570; 33 Am. Dec. 346.

The Secretary of State cannot lawfully withhold a sealed and executed commission, though directed so to do by the President of the United States. Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137.

5. People v. Fitzsimmons, 68 N. Y. 514; People v. Murray, 70 N. Y. 521.

6. Dyer v. Bayne, 54 Md. 88; People v. Bissell, 49 Cal. 407; State v. Barbour, 53 Conn. 76; 55 Am. Rep. 65; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137.

In case of an appointment made by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, which is to be evidenced by no act but the commission itself, it would seem that the commission and the appointment are inseparable, it being almost impossible to show an appointment otherwise

Until the last act to be performed by the appointing power is performed, the appointment is inchoate and may be revoked;¹ but when the appointment is once made and completed, where the officer is not removable by the appointing power, it is irrevocable and cannot be annulled, and the power of the appointing officer or body over the office is terminated.² The act of appointment exhausts the appointing power, and until the removal or dismissal of the incumbent in a manner prescribed by law, any re-exercise of the power would be void.³ Where, through mistake or otherwise, however, a commission has been improperly issued to one person to fill an office when it ought to have been issued to another, the error may be corrected by issuing one to the person legally entitled thereto,⁴ and where an appointment than by proving the existence of a commission. Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137.

In People v. Fitzsimmons, 68 N. Y. 514, it was held that the choice of an officer made by the appointing power, and certified to a body erroneously supposed to have the power of confirmation of the appointment, was a sufficient appointment. The court, by Earl, J., said: "After he had thus selected the members and named them for the office as his final act, it matters not as to the potency of that act that he also erroneously supposed that something more was to be done by some other body or persons."

1. People v. Murray, 70 N. Y. 521; Conger v. Gilmer, 32 Cal. 75; Wood v. Cutter, 138 Mass. 149; Baker v. Cushman, 127 Mass. 105; Putnam v. Langley, 133 Mass. 204; Miller v. Foster, 7 N. J. L. 101; State v. Van Buskirk, 40 N. J. L. 463; State v. Justice, 24 N. J. L. 413.

The supreme court has no power to award a mandamus to the governor to compel him to grant a commission. Hawkins v. Governor, 1 Ark. 570; 33 Am. Dec. 346.

2. Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137; Hill v. State, 1 Ala. 559; People v. Mizner, 7 Cal. 519; People v. Cazneau, 20 Cal. 503; State v. Barbour, 53 Conn. 76; 55 Am. Rep. 65; State v. Chapman, 44 Conn. 595; Jefferson Co. v. Clark, 1 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 82; State v. Phillips, 79 Me. 506; People v. Murray, 70 N. Y. 501; People v. Stowell, 9 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 456; Achley's Case, 4 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 35; People v. Mills, 32 Hun (N. Y.) 459; Jeter v. State, 1 McCord (S. Car.) 233; State v. Van Buskirk, 40 N. J. L. 463; State v. Hamilton Co., 7 Ohio 134.

Some point of time must be taken when the power of the executive over an officer not removable at his will, must cease. That point of time must be when the constitutional power of appointment has been exercised, and this power has been exercised when the last act required from the person possessing the power has been performed. Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 37; State v. Barbour, 53 Conn. 76; 55 Am. Rep. 65.

Such final determination may be evinced by public promulgation of the result, or by subsequent action inconsistent with the purpose of further review. State v. Van Buskirk, 40 N. J. L. 463.

3. Thomas v. Burrus, 23 Miss. 550; 57 Am. Dec. 154; People v. Cazneau, 20 Cal. 503; People v. Reid, 11 Colo. 138; State v. Chapman, 44 Conn. 495; Johnston v. Wilson, 2 N. H. 202; 9 Am. Dec. 50; People v. Stowell, 9 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 456; People v. Woodruff, 32 N. Y. 355. And see People v. Comptroller, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 595.

An office, when once filled, cannot be considered vacant till the term of service expires, or till the death, removal, or resignation of the person appointed. Johnston v. Wilson, 2 N. H. 202; 9 Am. Dec. 50.

A commission issued to an officer by the governor, who erroneously supposed that the office was vacant, confers no title in the office to the person who received the appointment under misapprehension. State v. McNeely, 24 La. Ann. 19.

4. Gulick v. New, 14 Ind. 93; 77 Am. Dec. 49; State v. Johnson, 17 Ark. 407; State v. Chapman, 44 Conn. 595; State v. Capers, 47 La. Ann. 747; Putnam v. Langley, 133 Mass. 204. And see Collins v. State, 8 Ind. 344.

is illegally made or fraudulently obtained, a subsequent appointment legally made will be valid.¹ Under a direction to appoint at a designated time, upon failure to appoint at the prescribed time, it may be afterwards lawfully done; the duty to appoint being paramount and essential, the provision in regard to time must be construed as merely directory,² unless the nature of the appointment or the language of the requirement shows that the designation of the time was intended as a limitation upon the appointing power.³ In the absence of a law forbidding it, a prospective appointment to fill an anticipated vacancy may be legally made by a body or officer empowered to fill such vacancy when it arises;⁴ but an outgoing board or officer cannot fill an office which will not become vacant during the term of their or his own official life.⁵

Where the authority under which an officer, who makes an appointment, assumes to act shows on its face that it emanates from a power not authorized to make it, it is void; but where the appointment is regular on its face, and emanates from a source which has the legal right to bestow it, and it requires a reference to facts not disclosed in the commission or order of appointment to show that the power of appointment has been illegally or irregularly exercised, the appointment is voidable only. Thompson v. State, 21 Ala. 48.

The title to an office is not affected by the fact that a resolution declaring the election lost, and declaring the ballot void by reason of errors which did not in fact exist, and declaring another person elected was adopted. State v. Barbour, 53 Conn. 76; 55 Am. Rep. 65.

1. See Com. v. Philadelphia Comrs., 5 Binn. (Pa.) 534; Com. v. Douglass, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 77; People v. Reid, 11 Colo. 138.

The presumption that all persons know the law does not render a commission issued by the governor to an appointee of the legislature, under an unauthorized election, an appointment by the executive under the power vested in him, on the ground that the governor must be presumed to have known that the power of appointment was in him, and not in the legislature. State v. Peelle, 124 Ind. 515.

Confirmation of Invalid Appointments.
—New Jersey Pamph. Laws, 1881, p. 19, confirming the title of all incumbents of the office of commissioners of road boards, is constitutional and makes valid an appointment made under an unconstitutional law. Poiner v. State, 44 N. J. L. 433.

If the validity of an election for officers or managers of a corporation is not assailed by a direct proceeding during their continuance in office, and they are permitted to act throughout their term, the legality of the next or any subsequent election cannot be questioned on account of any irregularity in the first. Dillard v. Webb, 55 Ala. 468.

2. In re Census Superintendent, 15 R. I. 614; Dyer v. Bayne, 54 Mich. 87; People v. Allen, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 486; People v. Wheeler, 18 Hun (N. Y.) 540; People v. Board of Police, 46 Hun (N. Y.) 296.

Where the power is given to appoint successors to public officers "at" the expiration of their respective terms, an appointment is not invalid because made on the day on which the term expired. People v. Blanding, 63 Cal. 333.

3. People v. Allen, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 486; People v. Board of Police, 46 Hun (N. Y.) 296.

4. State v. VanBuskirk, 40 N. J. L. 463; Haight v. Love, 39 N. J. L. 14; Smith v. Dyer, 1 Call (Va.) 562.

The contrary cases: Biddle v. Willard, 10 Ind. 63; Nove v. Bradley, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 158, and People v. Wetherell, 14 Mich. 48, were decided upon the construction of local statutes. State v. VanBuskirk, 40 N. J. L. 463.

An appointment to a new office to take effect at a future day, when the act creating such office is to go into effect, is a good appointment. State v. Irwin, 5 Nev. 111.

5. State v. Meehan, 45 N. J. L. 189; Haight v. Love, 39 N. J. Eq. 14; Ivy

c. APPOINTMENT BY CONCURRENT ACTION OF TWO OR MORE OFFICERS OR BODIES.—Under provisions of law requiring an appointment to be confirmed by, or made by and with the advice and consent of some body or board other than the appointing power, an appointment can be made in no other way, when such body or board is in session at the time the vacancy occurs;¹ and the officer thus appointed must receive a majority of the votes of the members voting in order to confirm his nomination.² When the act of the appointing officer becomes complete and effective with the concurrence of the confirming body, however, it relates back to and becomes complete from the time of the nomination.³ If a vacancy is accidental and occurs previous to or during the recess of the confirming body, and the concurrence of that body has not been had, the appointment is temporary and contingent upon confirmation,⁴ and if it is not confirmed either because the name was not sent in, or was rejected, the appointment becomes inoperative from the moment of adjournment or

v. Lusk, 11 La. Ann. 486; and see People v. Reid, 11 Colo. 138.

Conditional Appointments.—An appointment to a public office, coupled with a condition that was never performed, becomes a valid appointment when the appointing power subsequently having authority to do so dispenses with the condition. State v. Ring, 29 Minn. 78.

1. State v. Rareshide, 32 La. Ann. 934; People v. Bissell, 49 Cal. 407; and see Kimball v. Alcorn, 45 Miss. 151; Baker v. Port Huron, 62 Mich. 327.

The fact that the legislature wrongfully assumed to take from the governor the appointment of directors in a certain company relieves him from the necessity of sending nominations to those offices to the senate for its "advice and consent." State v. Tate, 68 N. Car. 546.

In People v. Bissell, 49 Cal. 408, it is held that if the term of the incumbent of an office filled by an appointment of the governor, requiring the confirmation of the senate, has expired, but the incumbent still continues to discharge its duties, there is no such vacancy in office as will authorize the governor to fill it without the consent of the senate. And see State v. Rareshide, 32 La. Ann. 934.

2. Com. v. Allen, 128 Mass. 308; and see Baker v. Port Huron, 62 Mich. 327; Com. v. Read, 2 Ashm. (Pa.) 261; and see People v. Walker, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 304; 2 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 421.

Irregular Appointment.—Where the power of nomination existed to the extent of two officers, and four officers were nominated and confirmed by the body having the power of confirmation, it was held that the irregularity did not render the appointment absolutely void, and that the two persons first appointed and confirmed would be legally entitled to the offices. People v. Knessel, 58 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 404.

3. Dyer v. Bayne, 54 Md. 87; Shepherd v. Haralson, 16 La. Ann. 134; and see U. S. v. Bradley, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 364.

An appointment to fill a vacancy in an office required to be filled by appointment by the governor and confirmation by the senate, is completed so far as the governor is concerned upon the delivery of the commission, and the governor cannot, after the commission is issued, revoke the appointment, or by any act affect the right of the appointee to the office, until the governor and senate proceed to fill it as prescribed by law. People v. Cazneau, 20 Cal. 503.

4. State v. Rareshide, 32 La. Ann. 934; State v. Dubuc, 9 La. Ann. 237; People v. Mizner, 7 Cal. 519.

If an office filled by appointment of the governor, requires the confirmation of the senate, such a vacancy therein as will authorize the governor to fill it without the concurrence of the senate, can be caused only by the death or resignation of the incumbent, or by the happening of some other event by reason of which the duties of the office are no longer discharged. State v. Rareshide, 32 La. Ann. 934.

of its rejection, as the case may be.¹ The time of the origin of the vacancy, however, is immaterial, the officer being allowed to fill it when the vacancy happens to exist during the recess of the confirming body, even though the office became vacant during or prior to its session.²

The power of an executive officer to fill an office originally filled by legislative action is usually limited to the period within which the legislative body cannot act, and when the period during which it can act arrives, his power ceases and the right of appointment returns to the original appointing power.³ Where

The approval of an appointment made during vacation is not equivalent to an appointment for the remainder of an unexpired term, and the officer holds only to the end of the session, unless renominated and confirmed during that session. Kroh v. Smoot, 62 Md. 172; and see Gould v. U. S., 19 Ct. of Cl. 503.

1. State v. Rareshide, 32 La. Ann. 934; State v. Board of Assessors, 24 La. Ann. 410; People v. Osborne, 7 Colo. 605; Kroh v. Smoot, 62 Md. 172; Com. v. King, 85 Pa. St. 103.

A vacancy having occurred when the senate was not in session, the nomination to fill the same was properly made at the called session, which was the "next session" after the vacancy occurred. To fill this vacancy, the governor had the power to nominate whom he pleased without regard to any appointment he had made during the recess. State v. Van Tromp, 27 La. Ann. 569.

In California where the appointment to an office is vested in the governor, with the advice and consent of the senate, and the term of the incumbent expires during the recess of the senate, the governor has power to fill such vacancy, and his appointment vests in the appointee the right to hold and discharge the duties of such office for the full term, subject only to be defeated by the non-concurrence of the senate. People v. Addison, 10 Cal. 1.

2. In re Farrow, 3 Fed. Rep. 112; State v. Kuhl, 51 N. J. L. 191.

William Wirt, Attorney General of the United States under President Monroe, in giving his opinion (1 A. G. Op. 631), said: "In reason, it seems to me perfectly immaterial when the vacancy first arose; for, whether it arose during the session of the Senate or during their recess, it equally requires to be filled. The Constitution does not look to the moment of the origin of the vacancy, but to the state of things at the point of time at which the President is called on to act. Is the Senate in session? Then he must make a nomination to that body. Is it in recess? Then the President must fill the vacancy by a temporary commission."

Practically the same opinion has been given by a large number of the Attorney-Generals of the United States. See In re Farrow, 3 Fed. Rep. 112.

In some of the States, it is held that the power of the executive to fill vacancies happening during the recess of the legislative body, does not extend to cases of vacancies occurring previous to, or during the session of that body. State v. Rareshide, 32 La. Ann. 934; and see People v. Forquer, 1 Ill. 104.

In Kimball v. Alcorn, 45 Miss. 151, the court, by Simrall, J., said: "A vacancy might occur by death or other casualty, so shortly before the adjournment of the legislature that the body might adjourn without notice of it. If the governor could not appoint, great public inconvenience would ensue; yet such a vacancy was as complete during the session as if it had happened the first day or the first week. But upon this point it is not necessary that we should express an opinion, and we do not, therefore, commit ourselves upon it."

3. People v. Fitch, 1 Cal. 519; Kimball v. Alcorn, 45 Miss. 151; People v. Crissey, 91 N. Y. 616; and see State v. Peelle, 121 Ind. 496; Calvert Co. v. Hellen, 72 Md. 603.

In order to establish that an appointment made by the governor during a recess of the senate, was only to fill a vacancy, it must be shown first, that a vacancy existed; and, second, that no other mode of filling it was provided. People v. Mizner, 7 Cal. 519.

a subsequent session of the legislative body passes without the office being filled, therefore the executive officer cannot make a valid appointment to such office during the recess.¹

Where an appointment is required to be made by the joint action of two or more bodies, a majority of all constitutes a quorum, and is able to decide any matter on which the whole body had authority to act,² even though one of the bodies should leave before the vote is taken.³ And an appointment required to be made by the concurrent action of several bodies, and in case of disagreement, then by joint ballot to decide the matter, if the bodies fail to concur, an appointment by a majority of the whole number of both bodies is a valid appointment,⁴ even though all the members of one of the bodies leave the joint meeting and refuse to take part in the appointment.⁵

d. FILLING VACANCIES.—The power to appoint to an office includes, by implication, the power to fill a vacancy in it, and all necessary authority to carry out the original power and prevent its becoming inoperative.⁶ It is a condition precedent to the

The power of the governor to fill a vacancy during a recess of the senate being exercised, he has no further control over the office, until the appointee has been rejected by the senate. People v. Mizner, 7 Cal. 519.

1. Schenck v. Peay, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 267. And see Merrill v. Board of School Comrs., 70 Md. 269; Calvert Co. v. Hellen, 72 Md. 603.

The contrary is held under the New Jersey statute. State v. Kuhl, 51 N. J. L. 191.

A provision by which all civil officers appointed by the governor and senate are required to be nominated to the senate within fifty days from the commencement of the session of the legislature, has no application to appointments made under laws passed during that session. Calvert Co. v. Hellen, 72 Md. 603. And see Merrill v. Board of School Comrs., 70 Md. 269.

2. People v. Walker, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 304; Gildersleeve v. Board of Education, 17 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 201; Canniff v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 4 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 430; Beck v. Hanscom, 29 N. H. 213; Kimball v. Marshall, 44 N. H. 465.

Where the law requires an election to be by joint ballot of two bodies, an election by the separate action of each body is sufficient to give, at least, color of title to the office. Belfast v. Morrill, 65 Me. 580.

3. Gildersleeve v. Board of Education, 17 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 201; Kimball v. Marshall, 44 N. H. 465. And see

People v. Walker, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 304.

Where the law gives the power of appointment to two different, distinct bodies, each exhausts its whole power when it performs its part in the transaction. The non-action of the one cannot enlarge or extend the power of the other. Either performing its part in the whole act is functus officio, and cannot resume its power. People v. Mizner, 7 Cal. 519.

4. Ex parte Humphrey, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 612; Whiteside v. People, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 634.

But if the two bodies fail to concur and do not proceed to elect by joint ballot, no appointment can be made. Randlett v. Rice, 141 Mass. 385.

If neither board should nominate, there can be no appointment; if both nominate and agree the appointment is ipso facto made; if they disagree, then a ballot decides the matter. Ex parte Humphrey, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 612.

5. Whiteside v. People, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 634.

In Ex parte Humphrey, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 612, it was held that a refusal to make a nomination is equivalent to a nomination in fact.

6. People v. Fitch, 1 Cal. 519; People v. Campbell, 2 Cal. 135.

The power of appointment to fill vacancies is given in order to prevent a failure of the public service. People v. Bissell, 49 Cal. 407.

In the absence of constitutional restriction, it is competent for the legispower to appoint, however, that an actual vacancy shall have occurred;¹ and an appointment made when no vacancy exists, being void at its inception, no act of the appointing power can thereafter give it validity.² An office is vacant in the eye of the law, whenever it is unoccupied by a legally qualified incumbent who has a lawful right to continue therein until the happening of some future event.³ A newly created office which is not filled by the tribunal which created it, becomes vacant on the instant of its creation,⁴ an existing office without an incumbent being vacant whether it be a new or an old one.⁵

Such a vacancy in an old office as will authorize the place to be filled by appointment, can only be caused by the expiration lature to provide the manner of making original appointments, the terms of office, and how vacancies shall be filled, and when the term of an incumbent appointed to fill a vacancy shall expire. People v. Osborne, 7 Colo. 605.

1. State v. Harrison, 113 Ind. 434; 3 Am. St. Rep. 663; State v. Peelle, 124 Ind. 515; Gosman v. State, 106 Ind. 203; Stewart v. State, 4 Ind. 396; State v. Wharton, 25 La. Ann. 2; Stadler v. Detroit, 13 Mich. 346; State v. Irwin, 5 Nev. 111; Wenner v. Smith, 4 Utah 238; and see Rhodes v. Hampton, 101 N. Car. 629; People v. Hall, 104 N. Y. 170; People v. Lord, 9 Mich. 227.

A mandamus to appoint a person to an office should not be granted unless coupled with an application to remove the present incumbent. People v. Saratoga Springs (Supreme Ct.), 7 N. Y. Supp. 125.

2. State v. Peelle, 124 Ind. 515.

The surrender of an office by the incumbent to one who is appointed when no vacancy existed, amounts to an abandonment of the office, and creates a vacancy, but confers no right upon the person thus illegally appointed. State v. Peelle, 124 Ind. 515; and see Turnipseed v. Hudson, 50 Miss. 429; 19 Am. Rep. 15.

3. State v. Harrison, 113 Ind. 434; 3 Am. St. Rep. 663; Stocking v. State, 7 Ind. 326; People v. Osborne, 7 Colo. 605; State v. McNeely, 24 La. Ann. 19; State v. Lusk, 18 Mo. 333; State v. Irwin, 5 Nev. 111; Com. v. Hanley, 9 Pa. St. 513; and see State v. Bemenderfer, 96 Ind. 374.

The word vacancy has no technical or peculiar meaning. People v. Osborne, 7 Colo. 605; State v. Harrison, 103 Ind. 434; 3 Am. St. Rep. 663; Stocking v. State, 7 Ind. 326; State v. Irwin, 5 Nev. 111

4. State v. Hyde, 121 Ind. 20; Collins v. State, 8 Ind. 344; Driscoll v. Jones (S. Dak. 1890), 44 N. W. Rep. 726; People v. Mott, 3 Cal. 502; State v. Boone Co. Ct., 50 Mo. 317; Rhodes v. Hampton, 101 N. Car. 629; Walsh v. Com., 89 Pa. St. 419; 33 Am. Rep. 771; and see Rose v. Knox Co., 50 Me. 243.

The Nevada act of 1869, creating the county of White Pine, and providing for its organization, caused a vacancy in the office of sheriff, which the governor was authorized to fill, and the unconstitutionality of the act did not affect the right of the person appointed to the office. State v. Irwin, 5 Nev. 111.

In Collins v. State, 8 Ind. 344, it was held that where an act creates a new office, and vests the appointment of the officer for the first term in the general assembly, and the assembly fails to exercise its power, that power is not elsewhere vested.

5. Stocking v. State, 7 Ind. 326; State v. Harris, 1 N. Dak. 190; State v. Borne Co. Ct., 50 Mo. 317; State v. Irwin, 5 Nev. 111.

Where an office has been abolished, and the duties imposed upon a different officer, and the office is afterwards restored, it may be filled by appointment, though the officer upon whom the duties were imposed had previously entered upon a new term of office. Rhodes v. Hampton, 101 N. Car. 629.

In Mississippi the word "vacancy" is held to imply that an incumbent has caused a vacancy by ceasing to hold the office. It does not include the idea of creating an office which never has had an incumbent, and construing the mere filling of the office as a vacancy which has happened. O'Leary v. Adler, 51 Miss. 28.

of the term of service, and the right to hold as fixed by law;¹ or by the death, resignation, or removal of the person elected or appointed;² or by the happening of some other event by which the duties of the office are no longer discharged at all.³ An office is not vacant so long as it is supplied in the manner provided by law, with an incumbent who is legally qualified to exercise the powers and perform the duties which pertain to it.⁴

Under provisions permitting an officer to hold his office for the prescribed term and until his successor shall have been elected and qualified therefor, a failure to fill a position at the expiration of the term, does not create a vacancy which can be filled by appointment;⁵ and the failure through death or other

1. State v. Harrison, 113 Ind. 434; 3 Am. St. Rep. 663.

In California it is held that a public office does not become vacant except upon the happening of one of the events enumerated in the political code as a cause therefor. Rosborough v. Boardman, 67 Cal. 116.

When the constitution clearly enumerates the events which shall constitute a vacancy in a particular office, all other causes of vacancy must be supposed to be excluded, especially when this construction can lead to no injurious results. People v. Whitman, 10 Cal. 38.

2. Johnston v. Wilson, 2 N. H. 202; 9 Am. Dec. 50; People v. Langdon, 8 Cal. 1; People v. Bissell, 49 Cal. 407; State v. Harrison, 113 Ind. 434; 3 Am. St. Rep. 663; State v. Seay, 64 Mo. 89; 27 Am. Rep. 206; State v. Newark, 27 N. J. L. 185; State v. Johns, 3 Oregon 533.

A law which confers power to supply by appointment a place vacated by death or disability authorizes an appointment to be made, where the vacancy is occasioned by resignation. State v. Newark, 27 N. J. L. 185.

An order of court appointing an attorney pro tempore, which merely states that the regular attorney, having been of counsel for the accused, was incompetent to perform his office, does not state a reason for the appointment of another, under the constitutional provision that "in all cases where an attorney for any district fails or refuses to attend and prosecute according to law, the court shall have power to appoint an attorney pro tempore." Pippin v. State, 2 Sneed (Tenn.) 43.

3. People v. Bissell, 49 Cal. 407; State v. Jones, 19 Ind. 356; 81 Am. Dec. 403; State v. Howe, 25 Ohio St. 588; 18 Am. Rep. 321.

The insanity of a county treasurer, not shown to be incurable, will not authorize the permanent appointment of another person in his place; and an appointment, in such case, only during the insanity of the officer, will cease on his recovery. State v. Pidgeon, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 132.

4. State v. Harrison, 113 Ind. 434; 3 Am. St. Rep. 663; Stewart v. State, 4 Ind. 396; People v. Whitman, 10 Cal. 38; State v. Seay, 64 Mo. 89; 27 Am. Rep. 206; State v. Hadley, 64 N. H. 473; People v. Lacombe, 34 Hun (N. Y.) 409; People v. Van Horne, 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 518; Tappan v. Gray, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 507; State v. Howe, 25 Ohio St. 588; 18 Am. Rep. 321; State v. McNeely, 24 La. Ann. 19; Com. v. Hanley, 9 Pa. St. 513.

A vacancy does not exist, when, on quo warranto, judgment of ouster against the incumbent of the office was obtained on the ground that relator had a superior title. It is a vacancy only where no one has any title to the office. State v. Ralls Co. Ct., 45 Mo. 58.

In State v. Harrison, 113 Ind. 434; 3 Am. St. Rep. 663, the court by Mitchell, C. J., said: "Of course it is not to be understood that an office cannot become vacant as respects the appointing power, so long as it remains in the actual physical occupancy of some one who asserts a claim thereto. An office is legally vacant, unless the occupant has an unexpired right or title, founded in the constitution or law precisely as a house is vacant of a lawful tenant, in case the lessee, without any provision authorizing him to hold over, refuses to surrender at the expiration of this term."

5. People v. Tilton, 37 Cal. 614; People v. Whitman, 10 Cal. 46; People v. Bissell, 49 Cal. 407; State v. McMullen, 46 Ind. 307; Stewart v. State, wise of a duly elected or appointed officer to qualify, does not create a vacancy,¹ the old incumbent continuing to hold not merely as a de facto officer but as an officer de jure, until the power upon which the duty of election or appointment is devolved can regularly act and a successor is duly elected or appointed and qualified.²

Where a failure to qualify within a prescribed time is expressly declared to create a vacancy, however, the office becomes vacant, and may be filled by appointment.³ And where the duration of the term is limited by the constitution, the office becomes vacant

4 Ind. 396; State v. Harrison, 113 Ind. 434; 3 Am. St. Rep. 663; Gosman v. State, 106 Ind. 203; State v. Hadley, 64 N. H. 473; State v. Lusk, 18 Mo. 333; Tappan v. Gray, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 507; State v. Howe, 25 Ohio St. 588; 18 Am. Rep. 322; Ex parte Lawhorne, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 85; and see State v. Fagan, 42 Conn. 32; Sparks v. Farmers' Bank, 3 Del. Ch. 274.

The primary object of the framers of the constitution in providing for the holding over of an officer until the qualification of his successor, was to diminish as far as practicable the executive patronage; and, in accordance with this policy, it was thought proper to confine the power of appointment to the single case of a vacancy in office. Com. v. Hanley, 9 Pa. St. 513; People v. Mizner, 7 Cal. 519.

An officer elected under a law which is silent as to his term of office, but which requires an election to be held every two years, holds until his successor qualifies. Cordiell v. Frizell, 1 Nev. 130.

The amendment to the constitution of Missouri, ratified in 1851, which made the office of Secretary of State elective, did not create a vacancy in that office but the incumbent continued till the election of his successor pursuant to a law passed under that amendment; but after his successor was thus elected, his term was ended, although the term, under the original constitution had not expired. State v. Ewing, 17 Mo. 515. The rule is the same in Maryland. See Watkins v. Watkins, 2 Md. 341.

1. Com. v. Hanley, 9 Pa. St. 513; People v. Whitman, 10 Cal. 38; Central v. Sears, 2 Colo. 588; Gosman v. State, 106 Ind. 203; State v. Seay, 64 Mo. 89; 27 Am. Rep. 206. But see State v. Hopkins, 10 Ohio St. 509; State v. Beard, 34 La. Ann. 273.

The right to hold over continues until a qualified successor has been elected by the same electoral body as that to which the incumbent owes his selection, or which is by law entitled to elect a successor. State v. Harrison, 113 Ind. 434; 3 Am. St. Rep. 663; citing Gosman v. State, 106 Ind. 203; State v. Lusk, 18 Mo. 333; People v. Tilton, 37 Cal. 614; Ex parte Lawhorne, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 85; Johnson v. Mann, 77 Va. 265; State v. Jenkins, 43 Mo. 261.

In Gold v. Fite, 2 Baxt. (Tenn.) 237, it is held that an elected officer who dies before his commission is issued, is deemed to have been in office while he lived, so that his death creates a vacancy.

2. State v. Howe, 25 Ohio St. 588; 18 Am. Rep. 321; Walker v. Ferrill, 58 Ga. 512; People v. Tilton, 37 Cal. 614; Stratton v. Oulton, 28 Cal. 44; People v. Whitman, 10 Cal. 38; State v. Harrison, 113 Ind. 434; 3 Am. St. Rep. 663; Elam v. State, 75 Ind. 518; Brady v. Howe, 50 Miss. 607; Sappington v. Scott, 14 Md. 40; Smoot v. Somerville, 59 Md. 88; State v. Hadley, 64 N. H. 473; Johnston v. Wilson, 2 N. H. 202; 9 Am. Rep. 50; In re Carpenter, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 30.

So long as the defeasible right to hold over continues, and the incumbent exercises it, the same conditions which would create a vacancy during the prescribed term will be required to create one during the term which he is lawfully holding over. Gosman v. State, 106 Ind. 203.

In State v. Cocke, 54 Tex. 482, however, it was held that the right of the officer who thus holds over, is by sufferance, rather than by any intrinsic title to the office.

3. Advisory Opinion (Fla. 1889), 5 So. Rep. 613; People v. Crissey, 91 N. Y. 616; People v. Wilson, 72 N. Car. 155; State v. Cocke, 54 Tex. 482; State v. Washburn, 17 Wis. 658; and see In re Executive Communication, 14

upon the expiration of the time limited, even though the legislature has provided that the incumbent shall hold until his successor is duly qualified;¹ and in the absence of a provision entitling an incumbent to hold over, the office becomes at once vacant upon a failure to fill it at the expiration of the term.²

It is the right of the appointing power to determine for its own guidance whether or not a vacancy exists in each particular case,³ but the power to make a valid appointment does not arise until

Fla. 217; Winneshiek Co. v. Maynard, 44 Iowa 15; State v. Matheny, 7 Kan. 327; State v. Hunt, 54 N. H. 431; State v. Hopkins, 10 Ohio St. 509.

In Florida it is held that such an appointee will hold not for the remainder of the term, but until the qualification of a successor, chosen at the next ensuing general election to be held according to law. Advisory Opinion (Fla. 1889), 5 So. Rep. 613.

It is held in Wisconsin that an officer who is elected to fill a vacancy, is entitled to hold during the unexpired term only, which is during that term and until the election or appointment and qualification of a successor. State v. Washburn, 17 Wis. 658.

1. State v. Brewster, 44 Ohio St. 589; State v. Howe, 25 Ohio St. 588; 18 Am. Rep. 321; Gosman v. State, 106 Ind. 203; and see People v. Langdon, 8 Cal. 1.

It is held in New York that although the constitution has prescribed a particular mode of appointing certain officers, and has limited the term of office in particular cases, it is competent for the legislature to provide for a temporary discharge of the duties of the office, until such office can be filled in the manner prescribed by the constitution. Tappan v. Gray, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 507.

In Indiana it is held that a constitutional limit upon the time of holding an office does not affect the right of an officer to hold over as provided by the constitution. State v. Harrison, 113 Ind. 434; 3 Am. St. Rep. 663, the court by Mitchell, C. J., saying: "The obvious purpose of the framers of the constitution was to inhibit the right of the general assembly to create any office to which by its authority a tenure or right to hold for a longer period than four years might be fixed. But their purpose to prevent vacancies in office is equally apparent in respect to offices of legislative creation, as in regard to those provided for in the constitution. The result is that the constitution permits a legislative tenure for a fixed term, not longer than four years; and if at the end of that period, owing to the failure of the body charged with the duty of supplying the office by election, or for any other cause, no successor has been elected, the qualified incumbent holds over by paramount right of tenure, which the constitution supplies until he is superseded by a duly qualified successor, who shall have been elected in a manner provided by law."

2. People v. Baine, 6 Cal. 509; King v. McLure, 84 N. Car. 153.

So of the election or appointment of an unqualified person. People v. Curtis, 1 Idaho N. S. 753.

It is obvious that the framers of the constitution of Virginia purposely omitted any provision that the persons then performing the duties of office in the State should continue to hold over until their successors should be elected or appointed and qualified; and that they intended that those offices, except where otherwise expressly provided in the constitution, should be immediately, or as soon as convenient, filled by the legislature, either directly or in a mode to be prescribed by law. Richmond Mayoralty Case, 19 Gratt. (Va.) 673.

Where a vacancy occasioned by the death of a county clerk is to be filled by appointment of the governor, a statute authorizing a deputy to perform the duties of the office while the vacancy continues, does not constitute him clerk, and his right to perform the duties ceases on an appointment by the governor. People v. Snedeker, 14 N. Y. 52.

3. State v. Harrison, 113 Ind. 434; 3 Am. St. Rep. 663; State v. Gosman, 106 Ind. 203; State v. Jones, 19 Ind. 356; 81 Am. Dec. 403; Hill v. State, 1 Ala. 559; State v. Seay, 64 Mo. 89; 27 Am. Rep. 206.

A vacant office may be filled by elec-there is a vacancy in fact. The authority to fill vacancies confers no judicial power, and the existing title of an incumbent cannot be extinguished or affected by the ex parte judgment of the executive that the office is vacant.¹

c. EVIDENCE OF APPOINTMENT.—A commission, when one is required, is conclusive evidence of an appointment,² though it is only prima facie evidence of the validity of the appointment and the right to exercise the powers and perform the duties of the office.³ The commission does not necessarily constitute any part of the appointment, however;⁴ it is but evidence of those tion or appointment, before a judicial declaration of vacancy is procured, where it appears prima facie that acts or events have occurred subjecting the office to such a declaration of vacancy; but if the person when selected or appointed is resisted by the previous incumbent, when he attempts to take possession of the office, he will be compelled to try the right in some mode prescribed by law. State v. Jones, 19 Ind. 356; 81 Am. Dec. 403.

1. State v. Harrison, 113 Ind. 434; 3 Am. St. Rep. 663; Hill v. State, 1 Ala. 559; Page v. Hardin, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 648; Stokes v. Kirkpatrick, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 138; State v. Seay, 64 Mo. 89; 27 Am. Rep. 206; State v. Lusk, 18 Mo. 333; Dullam v. Wilson, 53 Mich. 392; 51 Am. Rep. 128; Honey v. Graham, 39 Tex. 1; Com. v. Meeser, 44 Pa. St. 341.

A person elected or appointed to office, before it is judicially determined to be vacant, may take possession if the office is in fact vacant. And while in possession he will be an officer de facto, and should the former officer never contest his right, he will be regarded as having been an officer de facto and de jure; and if the former incumbent appear, the burden is upon him of proceeding to oust the then actual incumbent. State v. Jones, 19 Ind. 356; 81 Am. Dec. 403.

2. Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137; State v. Peelle, 124 Ind. 515.

In State v. Allen, 21 Ind. 516, it was held that where the title to an office is derived solely from executive appointment, the commission of the executive is the only legal evidence of such title.

Where the judges of the general court of Virginia appoint a clerk of a district court, in vacation, their certificate that "he is appointed clerk," etc., signed and sealed by a majority of them, without styling themselves judges of that court, is a sufficient commission, and need not run in the name of the commonwealth, nor mention that the vacancy happened between term and term, nor state the tenure of the office. Dew v. Judges, etc., 3 Hen. & M. (Va.) 1; 3 Am. Dec. 639.

3. Hill v. State, 1 Ala. 559; State v. Chapin, 110 Ind. 272; State v. Allen, 21 Ind. 516. And see State v. Peelle, 124 Ind. 515; Gulick v. New, 14 Ind. 93; 77 Am. Dec. 49; Beal v. Ray, 17 Ind. 554; State v. Jones, 19 Ind. 356; 81 Am. Dec. 403.

The commission is conclusive evidence only of its own existence. It is merely prima facie evidence at most of the facts recited in it. Boone Co. v. State, 61 Ind. 379.

Where the source of title to an office is lodged somewhere else than with the executive, his commission is only prima facie evidence of title. State v. Peelle, 124 Ind. 515, citing Boone Co. v. State, 61 Ind. 379; Reynolds v. State, 61 Ind. 392; Hench v. State, 72 Ind. 297; State v. Chapin, 110 Ind. 272; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137.

The governor's commission to an officer, whom he had the power to appoint, does not estop a subsequent appointee of the governor to show that the commission was issued only by reason of an unauthorized election of the incumbent by the legislature. State v. Peelle, 124 Ind. 515.

Where a certificate of vacancy discloses facts which show that no vacancy exists in the office, the certificate affords no support to a commission based on it. Such a commission is without force for any purpose, and does not confer even a prima facie right to the office. Plowman v. Thornton, 52 Ala. 559; Ex parte Harris, 52 Ala. 87; 23 Am. Rep. 559; Thompson v. Holt, 52 Ala. 491.

4. Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137; U. S. v. Le Baron, 19

acts of appointment and qualification which constitute title to the office, and which may be proved by other evidence, where the rule of law requiring the best evidence does not prevent.¹ It is a general rule in relation to all public officers that they may establish their official character by proving that they are generally reputed to be, and have acted as such officers, without producing their commissions or other evidence of their appointment.² And where a person has performed various official acts in any public office, they are, both for himself and for others interested, prima facie evidence of his due appointment to the office.³

How. (U. S.) 73; State v. Capus, 37 La. Ann. 747; People v. Murray, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 42; Billy v. State, 2 Nott & M. (S. Car.) 357. And see Beal v. Morton, 18 Ind. 346.

Possession of the original commission is not indispensably necessary to authorize a person appointed to any office to perform the duties of that office. If it was necessary, then a loss of the commission would be a loss of the office. Not only negligence, but accident or fraud, fire or theft, might deprive an individual of his office. Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137.

The tenure by which an office is held does not depend upon the commission which the governor may think proper to give. It is only evidence of the appointment. The tenure must depend upon the provisions of the act creating the office, or upon the constitution. Jeter v. State, 1 McCord (S. Car.) 233; State v. Lyles, 1 McCord (S. Car.) 238; Hench v. State, 72 Ind. 297.

The commission of an officer is not void because it does not state the term for which he was appointed; that may be shown by parol. State v. Fulker-son, 10 Mo. 681.

1. U. S. v. Le Baron, 19 How. (U. S.) 73; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137; Bradford v. Justices, 33 Ga. 332; State v. Capers, 37 La. Ann. 747; People v. Murray, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 42; Billy v. State, 2 Nott & M. (S. Car.) 357; Jeter v. State, 1 McCord (S. Car.) 233.

Under the act of Congress permitting the use of a copy of the record of a commission in the office of the Secretary of State, as evidence of an appointment, it is not necessary to prove that the original had been transmitted and afterwards lost to give validity to the copy. The copy would be complete evidence that the original had existed, and that the appointment had been made. Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137.

2. McCoy v. Curtice, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 17; 24 Am. Dec. 113; Allen v. State, 21 Ga. 217; 68 Am. Dec. 457; Bryan v. Walton, 14 Ga. 185; Potter v. Luther, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 431; Ring v. Grout, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 341; People v. Cook, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 259; Colton v. Beardsley, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 29; Tomlinson v. Darnell, 2 Head (Tenn.) 538.

It is not material how the question arises, whether in a civil or a criminal case, nor whether the officer is or is not a party to the record. Allen v. State, 21 Ga. 217; 68 Am. Dec. 457, citing Greenl. on Ev., § 92.

This exception to the general rule requiring the best evidence to be given, is founded upon the strong presumption that arises on the exercise of a public office that the appointment to it is valid, and is made for the reason that it would be attended with general inconvenience to require full and strict proof of the appointment or election of public officers. Colton v. Beardsley, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 29.

3. Johnston v. Wilson, 2 N. H. 262; 9 Am. Dec. 50; Jones v. Gibson, 1 N. H. 266; Carter v. Symphon, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 155; People v. Clingan, 5 Cal. 389; State v. Ferguson, 31 N. J. L. 107; Taylor v. Skrine, 3 Brev. (S. Car.) 516; 2 Treadw. (S. Car.) 696; U. S. v. Bachelder, 2 Gall. (U. S.) 15; Fenwick v. Sears, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 268; Woodworth v. Hall, 1 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 248. And see Callison v. Hedrick, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 244; Barada v. Carondelet, 8 Mo. 644.

The foundation of the rule of evidence that a person acting as a public officer has been duly appointed to the office which he assumes to exercise, is that all acts done by what appears to be public authority are presumed to be rightly done until the contrary is

They are prima facie evidence only, however, and, if practicable, may be rebutted by counter-evidence of any irregularity in the appointment,¹ though where a person has acted in an official capacity, he himself cannot afterwards offer evidence against the validity of his own appointment.²

VI. ACCEPTANCE.—An office cannot be considered as filled until the election or appointment is accepted by the person chosen.³ In the absence of special provision therefor,⁴ the acceptance need not be signified in express terms,⁵ and it is often implied from qualification and entry upon the discharge of the duties of the office.⁶ Consenting to be a candidate, or election or appointment with the knowledge and consent of the candidate, is in no sense an acceptance of the office,⁷ and an express refusal or an proved. Com. v. Kane, 108 Mass. 423; 11 Am. Rep. 373.

If an inspector is commissioned and sworn, and in the actual execution of his office, with the knowledge of the Treasury Department, it is sufficient proof of his being regularly appointed. U. S. v. Sears, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 215.

Evidence that a person assaulted was at the time of the assault and with defendant's knowledge, acting as a police officer, and wearing the uniform and badge of such officer, is competent and sufficient evidence of his official capacity to be submitted to the jury. The want of similar proof, as to any other time, might affect the weight but not the competency of this evidence. Com. v. Tobin, 108 Mass. 426; 11 Am. Rep. 375.

1. Johnston v. Wilson, 2 N. H. 202; 9 Am. Dec. 50.

Where a person has distinctly admitted or recognized the official capacity of another, he cannot afterwards offer evidence against the validity of his appointment. Johnston v. Wilson, 2 N. H. 202; 9 Am. Dec. 50.

2. Johnston v. Wilson, 2 N. H. 202; 9 Am. Dec. 50.

Where the title of one to an office consisted in written documents, being his appointment, acceptance, and his oaths of office, which are the record of his title to the office, he will not be permitted by parol evidence to falsify the record for the purpose of showing that he was not an officer de jure, but only an officer de facto. Crawford v. Dunbar, 52 Cal. 36.

Foreign Officers.—No different proof of the appointment of an officer in a foreign country is required from that at home; proof of one exercising the office de facto is usually sufficient in either case. Spaulding v. Vincent, 24 Vt. 501.

3. Johnston v. Wilson, 2 N. H. 202; 9 Am. Dec. 50; Smith v. Moore, 90 Ind. 294.

4. For instances of statutory requirements of notices in writing signifying acceptance of office, see Winnegar v. Rowe, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 258; State v. Weatherby, 17 Neb. 553; Bentley v. Phelps, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 524.

Acceptance with Whom Filed.—Under Nebraska Comp. St., ch. 79, providing that "all officers whose term of office would otherwise expire upon the first Monday in April, shall continue to exercise the duties of their office until the second Monday in July," the failure of school trustees elected at the annual meeting in April to file their acceptances with the director of the old board instead of with one chosen by them ten days after election, does not prevent them from assuming office after the second Monday in July. State v. Weatherby, 17 Neb. 553.

5. Johnston v. Wilson, 2 N. H. 202; 9 Am. Dec. 50.

The fact that the claimant of the office has acted as its incumbent, together with the certificate of election, will raise a presumption that he had executed his bond and taken the oath of office. People v. Clingan, 5 Cal. 389.

6. Johnston v. Wilson, 2 N. H. 202; 9 Am. Dec. 50. And see State v. Weatherby, 17 Neb. 553; Hartford v. Bennett, 10 Ohio St. 441.

In Johnston v. Wilson, 2 N. H. 202; 9 Am. Dec. 50, the court by Woodbury, J., said: "It is often implied from previous conduct, as well as a subsequent receipt of a commission, taking the oath of office, or discharging some of its duties."

7. Smith v. Moore, 90 Ind. 294.

Time of Acceptance.—In Smith v. Moore, 90 Ind. 294, Elliott, J., dissent-absolute failure to qualify is equivalent to a refusal to accept,¹ though a failure to qualify in a prescribed time does not of itself annul or avoid the right or title to the office, but merely renders it voidable or defeasible² unless qualification within a prescribed time is expressly made a condition precedent to the right to the occupation of the office.³

At common law, an office was regarded as a burden, which the appointee was bound, in the interest of the community and good government, to bear;⁴ and a person elected to a municipal office was obliged to accept it and perform its duties, and subjected himself to a penalty by refusal.⁵ And to refuse an office in a ing, it was held that until the consenting party is known to have received a majority vote, there is nothing for him to accept. Elliott, J., in his dissenting opinion, said: "The majority of the court think that acceptance can only come after election and by qualification, and I, that it may come before, as well as after, and that election and qualification are essentially distinct and different things. To my mind it is clear that consent or acceptance may be given as effectually before as after election. That an acceptance is acceptance whensoever made."

The refusal or neglect to file an official oath or bond, must always precede and can never succeed the incumbency. People v. Taylor, 57 Cal. 620.

Knowledge of Appointment.—The power to refuse a thing or neglect a duty, must necessarily be based upon a knowledge of the existence of the thing or duty. An appointee, therefore, cannot refuse an appointment or disregard the duty to qualify connected with it, until he receives information of his appointment. People v. Perkins, 85 Cal. 509.

1. State v. Washburn, 17 Wis. 658; Smith v. Moore, 90 Ind. 294; People v. Taylor, 57 Cal. 620; Morrell v. Sylvester, 1 Me. 248; People v. Wilson, 72 N. Car. 155; and see Bosworth v. Heys, 46 Ga. 635; In re Executive Communication, 14 Fla. 277.

Where a town electing an officer may lawfully require sureties for the faithful discharge of his office, a refusal to find such sureties is a non-acceptance of the trust, even after the person elected has taken the oath of office. Morrell v. Sylvester, 1 Me. 248.

2. Chicago v. Gage, 95 Ill. 593; 35 Am. Rep. 182; Sprowl v. Lawrence, 33 Ala. 674; State v. Peck, 30 La. Ann.

280; State v. Texas Co. Ct., 44 Mo. 230; State v. Churchill, 41 Mo. 41; People v. Holley, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 481; State v. Toomer, 7 Rich. (S. Car.) 216; and see infra, this title, Qualification for Office.

Statutes prescribing a time within which an officer must qualify, are directory in their nature, but the person elected must qualify before taking the office. State v. Colvig, 15 Oregon 57.

In Chicago v. Gage, 95 Ill. 593; 35 Am. Rep. 182, the court by Sheldon, J., said: "It seems reasonable that it is only when the rights of the public, or of third persons, depend upon the exercise of the power or the performance of the duty to which it refers that the statute should be held mandatory, and otherwise but directory. Citing Kane v. Footh, 70 Ill. 590.

3. State v. Matheny, 7 Kan. 327; Beebe v. Robinson, 52 Ala. 67; Thompson v. Holt, 52 Ala. 491.

Where a person is duly elected to the office of school treasurer and fails to qualify within twenty days thereafter, but has sufficient cause for such failure, he may afterwards qualify and hold the office. Carpenter v. Titus, 33 Kan. 7.

4. Edwards v. U. S., 103 U. S. 471; State v. Ferguson, 31 N. J. L. 107.

As every citizen is capable of the benefit of this franchise, so he ought to submit to the charge also. State v. Ferguson, 31 N. J. L. 107, quoting Lord Holt in Vanacker's Case, Carth. 480; 1 Ld. Raym. 496.

5. Edwards v. U. S., 103 U. S. 471.

When not being exempt or disqualified, a man is duly elected to an office, the court, if the corporation is a public one, and the office of a sufficiently important nature to justify its interference, and in all cases where the office is connected with the adminis-

public corporation connected with local jurisdiction, was a common-law offense punishable by indictment.¹

In this country, where offices of honor and emolument are commonly more eagerly sought after than shunned, a contrary doctrine with regard to such offices, and in some States, with regard to offices in general, may have obtained.² But in some of the States statutes have been enacted imposing a penalty upon an officer for a refusal to accept an office,³ and held to be constitutional.⁴ But where by statute or by the law or policy of the State, an officer has the right to resign, or lay down his office at pleasure, as is usually the case with us, the authority to impose a fine for refusing to serve would probably not exist.⁵ One who has accepted and qualified for and entered upon the discharge of the duties of one office, cannot be compelled to accept another,⁶ tration of local jurisdiction vested in the corporation or the administration of justice, will interfere by mandamus to compel him to take upon him and serve the office. State v. Ferguson, 31 N. J. L. 107, quoting Grant on Corporations 230.

1. State v. Ferguson, 31 N. J. L. 107.

2. Edwards v. U. S., 103 U. S. 471.

In Hoke v. Henderson, 4 Dev. (S. Car.) 1; 25 Am. Dec. 677, it was held that the public has a right to the services of all the citizens, and may demand them in all civil departments, as well as in the military.

"We must assume that the common-law rule prevails, unless the contrary be shown." Edwards v. U. S., 103 U. S. 471.

3. See Winnegar v. Roe, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 258; Haywood v. Wheeler, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 432; Brooklyn v. Scholes, 31 Hun (N. Y.) 110; London v. Headen, 76 N. Car. 72; Edwards v. U. S., 103 U. S. 471.

But one penalty can be recovered for a refusal to accept the office of overseer of highways. Haywood v. Wheeler, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 432.

The penalty for refusal to accept the office of overseer of highways provided for in laws of New York, 1821, ch. 128, can be recovered only when the town has been compelled to proceed to a new election. Winnegar v. Roe, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 258.

Although an individual elected to the office of overseer of highways omits to file in the office of the town clerk, a notice of his acceptance of the office, yet coming into office under color of title by a lawful election, if he proceeds to execute the duties of the office, he will be an officer de facto, and his acts as respects the public and third persons, will be valid. Bentley v. Phelps, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 524.

4. Brooklyn v. Scholes, 31 Hun (N. Y.) 110; London v. Headen, 76 N. Car. 72; State v. McEntyre, 3 Ired. (N. Car.) 171.

The fact that a penalty is imposed by statute, for refusing to serve in an office, does not prevent the incumbent from resigning, but he incurs the penalty by such resignation. Conner v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 355.

In Hoke v. Henderson, 4 Dev. (S. Car.) 1; 25 Am. Dec. 677, the court, by Ruffin, C. J., said: "I cannot doubt that the legislature has the perfect power, if it choose arbitrarily to exercise it, of compelling not, indeed, a particular man designated in a statute by name, but any citizen elected or appointed, as by law prescribed, to serve in any office even against his will. I have mentioned some instances in which it is done, and there is no reason why making due compensation, it may not be done as to all offices."

5. Dillon on Municipal Corp. (4th ed.), § 223; citing Willc. 133, pl. 308; Grant, 221, 222; Dillon's Munic. Corp., § 226, note; Gates v. Delaware Co., 12 Iowa 405; U. S. v. Wright, 1 McLean (U. S.) 509; State v. Ferguson, 31 N. J. L. 107.

After one has accepted an office, his refusal to serve without good reason is not in itself a forfeiture, but only a cause of forfeiture. Van Orsdall v. Hazzard, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 243.

6. Hartford v. Bennett, 10 Ohio St. 441; Smith v. Moore, 90 Ind. 294.

In Goettman v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 6 Hun (N. Y.) 132, it was held that and it would appear that no man can be compelled to give his time and labor to the duties of an office to which no compensation is attached.¹

VII. QUALIFICATION FOR OFFICE.—Qualification for office means the performance of the acts which the person chosen is required to perform before he can enter into the office,² the term qualified, when used in this connection, importing that the person chosen has complied with the requirements of law by giving bond and taking the oath of office.³

Qualification is usually held to be a condition precedent to the exercise of the functions of an office as an officer de jure.⁴ Statutes prescribing the time within which a bond is to be given, or where a person holding one office is chosen to fill another, for refusing to serve, in which he is liable to a penalty, he may hold both offices, even though the two offices are deemed to be incompatible.

1. Hinze v. People, 92 Ill. 406; and see Hoke v. Henderson, 4 Dev. (S. Car.) 1; 25 Am. Dec. 677.

When Acceptance Disqualifies.—In Smith v. Moore, 90 Ind. 294, the court by Elliott, J., said: "A construction of the constitution that would result in making a man a judicial officer against his will, would put it in the power of those desiring to obstruct his way to other offices to disfranchise him. And this the constitution never intended should occur."

2. State v. Bemenderfer, 96 Ind. 374.

To qualify is to prepare one's self for the discharge of duties, or the duties of an office. And. L. Dict.

Condition Precedent.—An officer elect, but who has not qualified and entered upon his office, is not an officer within the meaning of the constitution of Nevada. Cordiell v. Frizell, 1 Nev. 130.

Time.—Under Texas statutes providing that at the expiration of thirty days from an election, and from time to time thereafter, as the officers elect qualify, each county judge shall certify to the Secretary of State a statement showing who were elected, to what offices, and the date of their qualification, county commissioners have at least thirty days in which to qualify. Cassin v. Zavalla Co., 70 Tex. 419.

3. State v. Neibling, 6 Ohio St. 40; People v. Crissey, 91 N. Y. 616; Black's L. Dict.

Being duly qualified in the constitutional sense, and in the ordinary acceptation of the words, unquestionably means that the successor shall possess every qualification. That he shall in all respects, comply with every requisite before entering upon the duties of the office. That in addition to being elected by the qualified electors, he shall be commissioned by the governor, give bond as required by law, and that he shall be bound by oath or affirmation to support the constitution of the commonwealth and to perform the duties of the office with fidelity. Com. v. Hanley, 9 Pa. St. 513; State v. Seay, 64 Mo. 89; 27 Am. Rep. 206.

4. State v. Colvig, 15 Oregon 57; People v. Taylor, 57 Cal. 620; People v. Perkins, 85 Cal. 509; State v. Mathemy, 7 Kan. 327; Jump v. Spence, 28 Md. 1; State v. Perkins, 24 N. J. L. 409; Creighton v. Com., 83 Ky. 142; Rounds v. Bangor, 46 Me. 541; Rounds v. Mansfield, 38 Me. 586; Howard v. Proctor, 7 Gray (Mass.) 128; McVeany v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 80 N. Y. 185; 36 Am. Rep. 600.

In Thomas v. Owens, 4 Md. 189, it was held that the qualification of an officer is an indispensable prerequisite to his investiture with the authority and responsibilities of the office. See also Cordiell v. Frizell, 1 Nev. 130.

One who, having been elected to an office, assumes to exercise its duties, without having qualified or attempted to qualify, is without color of title and is not a de facto officer. Creighton v. Com., 83 Ky. 142.

One elected and serving as a constable, although neglecting to furnish a bond within the time required by statute, the selectmen not having required it, is nevertheless, an officer, de facto, if not de jure; and the sureties on his bond, given several months after his an oath of office is to be taken, however, are usually deemed to be directory only,¹ failure to do so within the prescribed time not of itself annulling or avoiding the office, but merely rendering it voidable or defeasible;² and if the State sees proper to excuse the officer's delinquencies by granting him his commission, the defects of his title are cured, and it is converted into a title de jure, having relation back to the time of his election.³ The courts election, are liable for his appropriation of public money to his own use. Weston v. Sprague, 54 Vt. 395.

1. People v. Holley, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 481; McRoberts v. Winant, 15 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 210; Cronin v. Stoddard, 97 N. Y. 271; Cawley v. People, 95 Ill. 249; State v. Porter, 7 Ind. 204; Boone Co. v. Jones, 54 Iowa 699; Williams v. School Dist. No. 1, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 75; 32 Am. Dec. 243; Lowell v. Hadley, 8 Met. (Mass.) 180; State v. Peck, 30 La. Ann. 280; State v. Churchill, 41 Mo. 41; State v. Texas Co. Ct., 41 Mo. 230; Morgan v. Vance, 4 Bush (Ky.) 323; Curry v. Stewart, 8 Bush (Ky.) 560; Kearney v. Andrews, 10 N. J. Eq. 70; State v. Colvig, 15 Oregon 57; Com. v. Read, 2 Ashm. (Pa.) 261; Bank of U. S. v. Dandridge, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 64; Speake v. U. S., 9 Cranch (U. S.) 28.

The matter of time is not essential to the validity of the bond, nor a condition precedent to the party's title to the office. The time not being of the essence of the thing required to be done, is not material. State v. Churchill, 41 Mo. 41. The essence of the thing to be done—that upon which the rights of the public depend—is the giving of the bond, not the precise time when it is done. Chicago v. Gage, 95 Ill. 593; 35 Am. Rep. 182.

Where no time is prescribed within which the oath of office must be taken, but the time of filing the bond is prescribed, the oath may be taken at any time, before the office is forfeited by the neglect of the officer to execute his bond, as required by the statute. People v. McKinney, 52 N. Y. 374.

2. Chicago v. Gage, 95 Ill. 593; 35 Am. Rep. 182; Cawley v. People, 95 Ill. 249; State v. Peck, 30 La. Ann. 280; People v. Benfield, 80 Mich. 265; Horton v. Parsons, 37 Hun (N. Y.) 42; People v. Holley, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 481; Foot v. Stiles, 57 N. Y. 399; Cronin v. Stoddard, 97 N. Y. 271; Kearney v. Andrews, 10 N. J. Eq. 70; Clark v. Ennis, 45 N. J. L. 69.

If no steps are taken to declare and fill a vacancy caused by the failure of an officer to qualify, and the officer subsequently qualifies, he holds the office.

State v. Cronkhite, 8 Ind. 134; State v. Porter, 7 Ind. 204; State v. Findley, 10 Ohio 51.

A law requiring commissioners for the assessment of a special tax to defray the expense of a certain public improvement, to take an oath before proceeding to the assessment, is sufficiently complied with by their taking the oath after the ordinance requiring the improvement has been passed by the common council, but before its approval by the mayor. Gurnee v. Chicago, 40 Ill. 165.

3. State v. Toomer, 7 Rich. (S. Car.) 216; Sprowl v. Lawrence, 33 Ala. 674; Chicago v. Gage, 95 Ill. 593; 35 Am. Rep. 182; Cawley v. People, 95 Ill. 249; People v. Benfield, 80 Mich. 265; Jones v. State, 7 Mo. 81; 37 Am. Dec. 180; McRoberts v. Winant, 15 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 210; Cronin v. Grundy, 16 Hun (N. Y.) 520. And see Weston v. Sprague, 54 Vt. 395. But see Thomas v. Owens, 4 Md. 189.

Where the statute requires two or more bonds, and the officer gives one bond, and enters upon the discharge of the duties of his office, the subsequent tender and acceptance of the remaining bonds cures the defect. People v. Smith, 81 N. Car. 305.

The office, in case of the failure to file an official bond, does not become ipso facto vacant, but there must be a direct judicial or other authorized proceeding on the part of the proper authority to enforce the forfeiture. Foot v. Stiles, 57 N. Y. 399; Horton v. Parsons, 37 Hun (N. Y.) 42; Cronin v. Grundy, 16 Hun (N. Y.) 520.

Until then he is practically an officer de jure having a defeasible title to the office. Horton v. Parsons, 37 Hun (N. Y.) 42; citing Foot v. Stiles, 57 N. Y. 399; People v. Crissey, 91 N. Y. 635; Cronin v. Grundy, 16 Hun (N. Y.) 521; Clark v. Ennis, 45 N. J. L.

generally hold that even though the statute expressly provides that upon failure to give a bond within the time prescribed, the office shall be deemed vacant, and may be filled by appointment, the default is likewise a ground for forfeiture only, not a forfeiture ipso facto.¹

Under some of the provisions of this class, however, time is held to be of the essence of the thing required to be done, and due qualification to be a condition precedent to the party's title to the office.² This is particularly the case under provisions requiring qualification before the person chosen shall enter upon the duties of his office.³ These provisions have no application where 69; Plymouth v. Painter, 17 Conn. 585; 44 Am. Dec. 574; St. Louis Co. Ct. v. Sparks, 10 Mo. 117; 45 Am. Dec. 355.

Where an officer is required to file his oath of office with the Secretary of State, and also with the county clerk, but having duly taken the oath and filed it with the Secretary of State, his failure also to file it with the county clerk will not forfeit his office or create a vacancy. People v. Perry, 79 Cal. 105.

1. People v. Benfield, 80 Mich. 265; Sprowl v. Lawrence, 33 Ala. 674; State v. Ely, 43 Ala. 568; State v. Falconer, 44 Ala. 696; People v. Smith, 81 N. Car. 305.

Time, so far as the validity of the bond is concerned, is merely directory, when the statute does not negative its validity, if filed at a later time. The giving of the bond is mandatory; the time when it is to be given is directory. Duntley v. Davis, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 229.

Duly elected officers cannot be prevented from holding the offices to which they are elected by conspiracy entered into for the purpose of preventing their qualification by the retiring officers, and no technicalities will be permitted to defeat the will of the electors fairly and honestly expressed in the choice of their officers. Culver v. Armstrong, 77 Mich. 194.

2. See In re Executive Communication, 14 Fla. 277; State v. Matheny, 7 Kan. 327; People v. Percells, 8 Ill. 59; State v. McAdoo, 36 Mo. 452; Com. v. Yarbrough, 84 Ky. 496; Calloway v. Com., 4 Bush (Ky.) 383; Falconer v. Shores, 37 Ark. 386; Thompson v. Holt, 52 Ala. 491; Beebe v. Robinson, 52 Ala. 67; People v. Perkins, 85 Cal. 509; People v. Hartwell, 67 Cal. 11; State v. Laughton, 19 Nev. 202; People v. Brite, 55 Cal. 79; Halbeck v.

Mayor, etc., of New York, 10 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 439.

In Kansas failure to qualify is a forfeiture, but may be excused if the officer has sufficient cause for such failure. Carpenter v. Titus, 33 Kan. 7. So in Indiana. State v. Johnson, 100 Ind. 489.

In Indiana, though the failure of an officer to give bond within a prescribed time after the receipt of his commission, renders the office vacant, the commission must have been actually received, or the failure must have been under circumstances which will justify an inference that the party did not intend to receive it, or that he intended to postpone the day of giving the bond. State v. Hadley, 27 Ind. 496.

In Flatan v. State, 56 Tex. 93, it was held that a statute requiring an officer elect to qualify within a prescribed time, will be considered as directory, only where circumstances beyond his control have caused the delay. See also Ross v. Williamson, 44 Ga. 501.

3. Thomas v. Owens, 4 Md. 189; State v. Matheny, 7 Kan. 327; People v. Perkins, 85 Cal. 509; State v. Perkins, 24 N. J. L. 409; Johnson v. Mann, 77 Va. 265; Vaughan v. Johnson, 77 Va. 300; Kilpatrick v. Smith, 77 Va. 347; Childrey v. Rady, 77 Va. 518; Owens v. O'Brien, 78 Va. 116.

In Virginia the anti dueling oath is a necessary prerequisite to the discharge of the duties of an office. Branham v. Long, 78 Va. 352; Johnson v. Mann, 77 Va. 265.

In People v. Taylor, 57 Cal. 620, it was held that the refusal or neglect of a person duly elected to an office to file his official oath or bond, within the time prescribed by law, creates a vacancy, as soon as the term for which he is elected commences, which may be filled by the proper appointing power.

The omission of a commissioner of a contest is pending for an office, until the contest has been finally determined.¹

1. The Oath of Office—(See also OATH).²—Public officers are usually required to take an oath of office.³ The oath is a mere incident to the office and constitutes no part of it,⁴ and may or may not be indispensable, according to usage and positive statute law.⁵ The oath of office usually required of public officers is, that they will faithfully discharge the duties of their respective offices, and in many instances they are also required to swear that they will support the Constitution of the United States, and of the State under which their offices are held.⁶ No oath can be required to be taken which imposes a religious test,⁷ or which renders a person ineligible to office, because of the commission of an act not punishable as a crime at the time it was committed,⁸ highways to execute and file an official bond, as required by the statute, however, does not render him liable as a trespasser for his official acts. Foot v. Stiles, 57 N. Y. 399.

1. People v. Potter, 63 Cal. 127; People v. Mayworm, 5 Mich. 146; People v. Miller, 16 Mich. 56; Pearson v. Wilson, 57 Miss. 848; People v. McManus, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 620; State v. Dahl, 65 Wis. 510; Little v. State, 75 Tex. 616; State v. Kraft, 18 Oregon 550.

In People v. Miller, 16 Mich. 56, it was held that statutes requiring an oath and bond, within a prescribed time must be construed to apply only to persons holding the certificate of election, those whose rights are admitted by the person holding it, and those who, without having a certificate, have obtained a judicial determination, establishing their right to the office.

A county officer who receives no official notice of his election may qualify within twenty days after the commencement of the term for which he is elected. Attorney-Gen'l v. Elderskin, 5 Wis. 300.

2. Vol. 16, p. 1017.

3. State v. Stanley, 66 N. Car. 59; 8 Am. Rep. 488.

In the absence of constitutional or statutory provision rendering a candidate ineligible for bribing electors or offering a bribe, his inability to truthfully take the oath of office will not disqualify him. People v. Thornton, 25 Hun (N. Y.) 456.

4. State v. Stanley, 66 N. Car. 59; 8 Am. Rep. 488; Johnston v. Wilson, 2 N. H. 202; 9 Am. Dec. 50.

An officer who is elected, and by the certificate of the proper authority to that effect is or has become duly qualified to hold the office, is the rightful officer, although holding by a defeasible title when he does not take the oath of office. People v. Crissey, 91 N. Y. 616; In re Kendall, 85 N. Y. 305; Foot v. Stiles, 57 N. Y. 401; Weeks v. Ellis, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 320.

It is no defense to an action on an official bond that the principal did not take the oath of office. Board of School Directors v. Judice, 39 La. Ann. 896.

5. Johnston v. Wilson, 2 N. H. 202; 9 Am. Dec. 50; State v. Stanley, 66 N. Car. 59; 8 Am. Rep. 488.

A manifest intention upon the part of the legislature that inferior officers shall not be required to take an oath of office, is a sufficient exemption under a constitutional provision which requires all officers to take an oath of office, except such inferior officers as may be by law exempt. School Directors v. People, 79 Ill. 511.

A legally chosen president of the senate may become acting governor, without the administration of any other qualifying oath than that which he has taken in his office of senator. Opinion of Justices, 70 Me. 570.

Where a constitution provides that an oath of office shall be taken, a statute providing for an office, need not require the officers to take an oath and still be valid, as the constitution on that subject executes itself and requires no enabling act for that purpose. David v. Portland Water Committee, 14 Oregon 98.

6. See Stimson's Am. Stat. L., §§ 224, 225.

7. U. S. Const., Art. VI, § 3.

8. Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall.

or which imposes upon the officer tests or requirements greater than those which the constitution has declared shall be sufficient.¹

An oath of office need not be in writing if the statute does not in terms require it, if the fact appears that the officer was regularly sworn.² But when the form is prescribed, it must be substantially complied with.³ A departure from a prescribed form in substance, or taking an entirely different oath from that prescribed, leaves the officer without authority and renders all his proceedings absolutely void.⁴

Provisions directing that the oath of office may be taken before particular officers, are merely cumulative or directory, and the oath may be taken before any officer authorized to administer oaths,⁵ and if the certificate does not show that the oath was

(U. S.) 277. And see Ex parte Stratton, 1 W. Va. 305.

Such a requirement would be an ex post facto law and void, for it would add a new punishment for an old offense. Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 277.

1. Mechem's Pub. Off. 259.

The California constitution, art. 11, § 3, does not prohibit the legislature from requiring another form of oath of its officers which is not in conflict with the one therein prescribed. Cohen v. Wright, 22 Cal. 293.

2. Davis v. Berger, 54 Mich. 652.

The governor may certify that the person elected for State librarian has duly taken the oaths according to law, and the certificate is sufficient although the oath is not set out in words, for it will be intended that the proper oaths were administered. Harwood v. Marshall, 9 Md. 84. And see Greene v. Lunt, 58 Me. 518.

3. State v. Trenton, 35 N. J. L. 485; Bassett v. Den, 17 N. J. L. 432; State v. Ayres, 15 N. J. L. 479; Hankins v. Calloway, 88 Ill. 155; Young v. State, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 253.

If the oath of office is signed by the officer with his real name, a mistake in the spelling of the name in the body of the oath will not vitiate it. Hoagland v. Culvert, 20 N. J. L. 387.

The very language of the oath prescribed by statute need not be followed if the substance is preserved. Tide Water Canal Co. v. Archer, 9 Gill & J. (Md.) 479.

Where the oath taken is a complete equivalent for that prescribed, and means the same thing, it is sufficient. State v. Trenton, 35 N. J. L. 485.

In Power's Appeal, 29 Mich. 504, it was held that the oath administered to jurors for the condemnation of private property, must be coextensive with the duty prescribed for them by the constitution, and give the measure and limit of their legal action.

The omission of the venue to the oath of office is not important. Horton v. Parsons, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 42; Colman v. Shattuck, 62 N. Y. 348.

4. Bohlman v. Green Bay, etc., R. Co., 40 Wis. 157; Bowler v. Perrin, 47 Mich. 154; Chapman v. Clark, 49 Mich. 305; Halbeck v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 10 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 439; In re Cambria Street, 75 Pa. St. 357.

A memoranda "sworn before me this 31st of December, 1857," signed by the officer before whom the oath purported to have been taken, is not sufficient under a statute which requires that the oath shall be in writing, and taken and subscribed by the officers. Halbeck v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 10 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 439.

5. Ex parte Heath, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 42; People v. Stowell, 9 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 456; Canniff v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 4 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 430; and see Hardesty v. Taft, 23 Md. 512; 87 Am. Dec. 584.

Where officers required to be sworn, before they enter upon the duties of their offices, are sworn before a person not authorized to administer the oath, their acts are not thereby rendered invalid; the officer being an officer de facto whose acts in which others have an interest are valid. State v. Perkins, 24 N. J. L. 409.

A foreign consul residing in Mexico has no authority to administer an official oath. Otterbourg v. Case, 5 Ct. of Cl. 430.

taken before a proper officer, it may be shown by extrinsic evidence.¹

2. Official Bonds—(See also BONDS).²—a. WHEN REQUIRED.—Public officers who are intrusted with money or property, are generally required to give bond and sureties for the faithful performance of their duties.³ An official bond executed by a public officer which is not required by statute, is void for want of consideration.⁴

b. SURETIES.—See SURETYSHIP.

VIII. ENTRY UPON THE DISCHARGE OF THE DUTIES.—No installation is necessary to the entry upon the discharge of the duties of an office; appointment or election, and the qualification of the officer, by taking the required oaths, and giving the required bonds, if any, are all that is necessary to invest him with the office.⁵

IX. TRAFFICKING IN OFFICES AND CONTRACTS CONCERNING OFFICES AND OFFICERS—(See also ILLEGAL CONTRACTS).⁶—1. Contracts to Secure Election or Appointment.—Contracts for the buying, selling or procuring of public offices are utterly void as contrary to the soundest public policy, and indeed as a constructive fraud upon the government,⁷ such contracts being void at common law whether prohibited and made void by statute or not.⁸ The right of appointment is not the property of the appointing officer and

1. State v. Green, 15 N. J. L. 88; and see Howard v. Proctor, 7 Gray (Mass.) 128.

An officer authorized to administer an official oath cannot lawfully refuse to administer it, on account of the ineligibility of the person chosen. People v. Deas, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 438; Miller v. Sacramento, 25 Cal. 93.

2. Vol. 2, p. 448.

3. Dill on Munic. Corp. (4th ed.), § 214; Mechem's Pub. Off., §§ 263, 264.

4. State v. Heisey, 56 Iowa 404; State v. Bartlett, 30 Miss. 624; U. S. v. Humason, 6 Sawy. (U. S.) 199.

But when an official bond imposes greater obligations than the act of assembly requires, both principal and surety will be held to the full extent of its terms, unless such a construction is forbidden by statute, or a contrary intention on the part of the obligors is shown. Philadelphia v. Shallcross, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 135.

5. Ex parte Smith, 8 S. Car. 495; and see Johnston v. Wilson, 2 N. H. 202; 9 Am. Dec. 50.

6. Vol. 9, p. 789.

7. Story's Eq. Jur. (13th ed.), § 295; Outen v. Rhodes, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 432; 13 Am. Dec. 193; Meredith v. Ladd, 2 N. H. 517; Becker v. Ten Eyck, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 68; Pilson v. Himes, 5 Pa. St. 452; 47 Am. Dec. 422; Eddy v. Capron, 4 R. I. 394; 67 Am. Dec. 541; Ferris v. Adams, 23 Vt. 136; Salling v. McKinney, 1 Leigh (Va.) 42; 19 Am. Dec. 722.

Offices are trusts held solely for the public good, and should be conferred from considerations of the ability, integrity, fidelity, and fitness for the position of the appointee. No other considerations can properly be regarded by the appointing power. Providence Tool Co. v. Norris, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 45.

An agreement to pay money in consideration of an exchange of offices is void. Stroud v. Smith, 4 Houst. (Del.) 448.

8. Eddy v. Capron, 4 R. I. 394; 67 Am. Dec. 541; Outen v. Rhodes, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 432; 13 Am. Dec. 193; Gray v. Hook, 4 N. Y. 449; Ferris v. Adams, 23 Vt. 136; Hopkins v. Prescott, 4 C. B. 578; 56 E. C. L. 578; Graeme v. Wroughton, 32 Eng. L. & Eq. 569; and see Meredith v. Ladd, 2 N. H. 517; Com. v. Callaghan, 2 Va. Cas. 460.

Were the English common law otherwise, such contracts could not be tolerated by the courts of a country whose government is founded theoret-

he has no right to barter it or dispose of it,¹ and an agreement to appoint is likewise void.² So, promises to use personal effort and personal influence among voters to procure or promote the election of any particular person or ticket are void,³ and an agreement by a person to exert his influence against what he believes to be for the public good is void,⁴ though nothing improper or illegal was done or expected to be done under the contract.⁵ Agreements to procure or control appointments to public office⁶ or agreements to aid another in obtaining an appointment based upon a consideration contingent upon success⁷ or promises ically on the most pure and exalted public virtue. Filson v. Himes, 5 Pa. St. 552; 47 Am. Dec. 422.

1. Hager v. Catlin, 18 Hun (N. Y.) 448; Baldwin v. Bridges, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 7; Becker v. Ten Eyck, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 68; Tappan v. Brown, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 175; Gorton v. Waldoborough, 11 Me. 306; 26 Am. Dec. 530; Eddy v. Capron, 4 R. I. 394; 67 Am. Dec. 541; Meredith v. Ladd, 2 N. H. 517; Cartelon v. Whitcher, 5 N. H. 196; Salling v. McKinney, 1 Leigh (Va.) 42; 19 Am. Dec. 722.

It is the duty of the officer having the power of appointment, to make the best appointment in his power and in his judgment at the time he makes the appointment, and it is against public policy that he should be deprived of the exercise of his best judgment by a contract previously made. If he promised the office to one person, and has since discovered that the public will be better served by another, he must be at liberty to make the better appointment. Hager v. Catlin, 18 Hun (N. Y.) 448.

2. Stout v. Ennis, 28 Kan. 706; Baldwin v. Bridges, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 7.

A contract made before election, which provides that if plaintiff would support the defendant for nomination and election, the defendant would, if nominated and elected to the office, employ the plaintiff as his deputy during the term of such office, is illegal and void. Stout v. Ennis, 28 Kan. 706.

The case of Thetford v. Hubbard, 22 Vt. 440, holding that a note given by a constable to the town upon bidding off the office in town meeting, was legal, and could be collected, and other cases of that character (see also Alvord v. Collins, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 418; Howard v. Proctor, 7 Gray (Mass.) 128) go entirely upon special provisions of the statute on that subject, which in terms authorize towns to contract with some person to fill the office. Meacham v. Dow, 32 Vt. 721.

3. Gaston v. Drake, 14 Nev. 175; 33 Am. Rep. 548; Meredith v. Ladd, 2 N. H. 517; Swayze v. Hull, 8 N. J. L. 54; 14 Am. Dec. 399; Ferris v. Adams, 23 Vt. 136; and see Martin v. White, 37 Cal. 168; Robertson v. Robinson, 65 Ala. 610; 39 Am. Rep. 17.

An agreement between two parties whereby one was to withdraw from candidacy for an office, and run for another office, on condition that the other who was also a candidate for the former office would pay his past and future expenses, is void; and a promise to repay money subsequently expended in pursuance of such contract, is also void. Robinson v. Kalbfleisch, 5 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 212.

4. Nichols v. Mudgett, 32 Vt. 546; Liness v. Hesing, 44 Ill. 113; 92 Am. Dec. 153.

In New York, it is unlawful to contribute money to promote the election of any particular person or ticket, except for defraying expenses of printing and circulation of votes, hand-bills, and other papers, and for conveying poor, sick, or infirm electors to the poles. Foley v. Speir, 100 N. Y. 552.

5. Nichols v. Mudgett, 32 Vt. 546; Gaston v. Drake, 14 Nev. 175; 33 Am. Rep. 548.

6. Providence Tool Co. v. Norris, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 45; Faurie v. Morin, 4 Mart. (La.) 39; 6 Am. Dec. 701; Filson v. Himes, 5 Pa. St. 452; 47 Am. Dec. 422; Providence Tool Co. v. Norris, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 45; Meguire v. Corwine, 101 U. S. 108.

7. Gray v. Hook, 4 N. Y. 449; Hunter v. Nolf, 71 Pa. St. 282; Meguire v. Corwine, 101 U. S. 108.

A party has an undoubted right to use his influence to procure the appointment of another to office, but he has no right to urge such an appointment from any other motive than to use personal influence to procure an appointment to office¹ are likewise contrary to public policy and void, without reference to whether improper means are contemplated or used in procuring the appointment.²

All contracts based upon sales of, or trafficking in offices of any description,³ or in which such sales or traffic furnish the consideration for the mutual stipulations of the parties,⁴ are also void, and such a contract or a contract for the purchase or sale, or for the procurement of an office, not only furnishes no support for an action,⁵ but the courts will not aid in the recovery of public good. Haas v. Fenlon, 8 Kan. 601.

1. Filson v. Himes, 5 Pa. St. 452; 47 Am. Dec. 422.

A contract made between two applicants for appointment to office that one should have a pecuniary compensation for withdrawing his application by which he probably had driven off competition and contributed to reduce the number of applicants, is void. Gray v. Hook, 4 N. Y. 449.

2. Providence Tool Co. v. Norris, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 45.

3. Eddy v. Capron, 4 R. I. 394; 67 Am. Dec. 541; Johnson Co. v. Mullikin, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 301; Haas v. Fenlon, 8 Kan. 601; Love v. Buckner, 4 Bibb (Ky.) 506; Baldwin v. Bridges, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 7; Hager v. Catlin, 18 Hun (N. Y.) 448; Filson v. Himes, 5 Pa. St. 452; 47 Am. Dec. 422; Glover v. Taylor, 38 La. Ann. 634; Meacham v. Dow, 32 Vt. 721; Ferris v. Adams, 23 Vt. 136.

A draft drawn in consideration of the resignation of an office is void, although there was no promise to recommend the drawer's appointment, and although the resigning officer had already removed to another State. Eddy v. Capron, 4 R. I. 394; 67 Am. Dec. 541.

The addition of a new consideration, where the covenant is founded on an illegal act, does not cure its illegality. Gray v. Hook, 4 N. Y. 449. And where the contract is entire if a part of the consideration is illegal, the whole contract is void. Carleton v. Whetcher, 5 N. H. 196.

4. Outen v. Rodes, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 432; 13 Am. Dec. 193; Stout v. Ennis, 28 Kan. 706; Faurie v. Morin, 4 Martin (La.) 39; 6 Am. Dec. 702; Carlton v. Whitcher, 5 N. H. 190; Swayze v. Hull, 8 N. J. L. 54; 14 Am. Dec. 398.

Every new contract seeking to carry out or enforce any of the unexecuted provisions of a former illegal contract is void. Gray v. Hook, 4 N. Y. 449. And even if there be an express contract on entirely different terms than those agreed upon before, it ought to be viewed with a considerable degree of suspicion as an attempt to evade a sound and salutary rule of public policy. Hunter v. Nolf, 71 Pa. St. 282.

A promise to pay for services rendered by another as a canvasser at a primary election, to secure the nomination of the promisor to an office, is unlawful and void. Keating v. Hyde, 23 Mo. App. 555.

The distinction between a void and valid new contract, in relation to the subject-matter of a former illegal one, depends upon the fact whether the new contract seeks to carry out or enforce any of the unexecuted provisions of the former contract, or whether it is based upon a moral obligation, growing out of the execution of an agreement, which could not be enforced by law, and upon the performance of which the law will raise no implied promise. Gray v. Hook, 4 N. Y. 449. And Stout v. Ennis, 28 Kan. 706.

If a price be put on the illegal part of the consideration, it might be deducted, and the contract apportioned. Filson v. Himes, 5 Pa. St. 452; 47 Am. Dec. 422. And see Casady v. Woodbury Co., 13 Iowa 113.

5. Faurie v. Morin, 4 Mart. (La.) 39; 6 Am. Dec. 701; Martin v. Wade, 37 Cal. 168; Haas v. Fenlon, 8 Kan. 601; Gaston v. Drake, 14 Nev. 175; 33 Am. Rep. 548; Ferris v. Adams, 23 Vt. 136.

Courts refuse to assist either party to such contracts, and they refuse to hear such cases in the interest of the public, not for the sake of plaintiff or defendant. Gaston v. Drake, 14 Nev. 175; 33 Am. Rep. 548.

Representations that a person would be nominated to a position of public money paid, or for services rendered in pursuance of such a contract.¹

No public policy forbids the purchase of services to be devoted only to advertizing the fact that one is or desires to be a candidate however,² and an officer may make a deputation reserving a portion of the salary or fees to himself and give the balance to his deputy for services,³ or he may give to his deputy all the fees pertaining to the services he may render as such.⁴

2. Contracts for Influencing Official Action.⁵

3. Contracts Respecting Compensation of Officers.⁶

X. POWER AND AUTHORITY OF PUBLIC OFFICERS—1. Its Source and Nature.—All political and governmental power is inherent in the people, and the people are recognized as the fountain of all trust, as an inducement to a party to make a contract, cannot be given in evidence, however false such representations may have been, or however much the party may have been injured by relying upon them. Haas v. Fenlon, 8 Kan. 601.

1. Groton v. Waldoborough, 11 Me. 306; 26 Am. Dec. 530; Martin v. Wade, 37 Cal. 168; Liness v. Hesing, 44 Ill. 113; 92 Am. Dec. 153.

The law will not hear the parties, neither will it entertain causes of action embracing negotiations leading to such a contract, as representations falsely made to bring it about. The law leaves the parties to such a transaction where it found them, and will not attempt to adjust the rights between them. If one party has suffered by the bad faith of another in such a case, he has no redress in the courts. Haas v. Fenlon, 8 Kan. 601.

There can be no rescission of a contract which is against public policy. Such a contract is void at its inception, and there is nothing to rescind. Martin v. Wade, 37 Cal. 168.

2. Keating v. Hyde, 23 Mo. App. 555; Murphy v. English, 64 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 362. And see Foley v. Speir, 100 N. Y. 552.

The employment of any proper agency calculated to bring the fact of a person's candidacy more prominently before the public eye, is legitimate. The information thus disseminated is essential to the intelligent determination of the voter's choice. But it becomes a very different thing when money is paid or promised from friends to control a voter's free agency in selecting the object of his suffrage. Keating v. Hyde, 23 Mo. App. 555.

It is not an offense for a candidate for a national office, who cannot personally present his individual views and national policy over a wide area of constituency, to employ and compensate a person for that purpose. Murphy v. English, 64 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 362.

3. Gaston v. Drake, 14 Nev. 175; 33 Am. Rep. 548; Mott v. Robbins, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 21; 37 Am. Dec. 286; Becker v. Ten Eyck, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 68; Ferris v. Adams, 23 Vt. 136.

The courts will discountenance contracts made before election in which one party promises to divide the profits of his office with another in consideration of help in the performance of the duties of the office, on account of their tendency to induce the exertion of improper influence upon the election of public officers. Gaston v. Drake, 14 Nev. 175; 33 Am. Rep. 548.

4. Gaston v. Drake, 14 Nev. 175; 33 Am. Rep. 548; Pioneer Printing Co. v. Sanborn, 3 Minn. 418.

If a deputy be appointed to an office, consisting of uncertain profits, paying any sum whatever out of such profits, the deputation and contract for the payment are good, because the deputy is to be paid out of profits only, and cannot be charged for more than he receives. But if an office consisting of uncertain fees be granted to a deputy, together with all its fees, reserving a certain sum to be paid, at all events, it is a sale of the office and grant of a deputation; and is void. Becker v. Ten Eyck, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 68; Salling v. McKinney, 1 Leigh (Va.) 42; 19 Am. Dec. 722; Noel v. Fisher, 3 Call (Va.) 215.

5. ILLEGAL CONTRACTS, vol. 9, p. 879.

6. ILLEGAL CONTRACTS, vol. 9, p. 879.

law and authority.¹ The several departments of government are but the depositories of delegated powers more or less limited,² all the power which the people have delegated being what has passed from them by their constitutions.³ The government of the United States can exercise only such powers as are expressly granted to it and such as are necessarily implied from those granted.⁴ The powers not delegated by the constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States, respectively, or to the people.⁵ The constitutions of the several

1. State v. Noble, 118 Ind. 350; State v. Hyde, 121 Ind. 20; State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 382; Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 426; Hovey v. State, 119 Ind. 395; State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 449; People v. Lynch, 51 Cal. 15; 21 Am. Rep. 677; Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376; 74 Am. Dec. 572; Campbell's Case, 2 Bland (Md.) 209; 20 Am. Dec. 360; Attorney-Gen'l. v. Detroit, 58 Mich. 213; 55 Am. Rep. 675; Jones v. Perry, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 59; 30 Am. Dec. 430; Merrill v. Sherburne, 1 N. H. 199; 8 Am. Dec. 52; Dash v. Van Kluck, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 477; 5 Am. Dec. 291; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clinton Co., 1 Ohio St. 77; Enslin v. Bowman, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 471; Satterlee v. Mathewson, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 380; Van Horn v. Dorrance, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 311; Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 386.

The expression that all power is inherent in the people, is nothing more than the expression of a principle that is older than the constitution, which exists by its own innate vitality and vigor. State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 382.

The will of the people must be greater than that of their agents, or there can be no constitutional liberty or independence. Hawkins v. Governor, 1 Ark. 570; 33 Am. Dec. 346.

2. People v. Lynch, 51 Cal. 15; 21 Am. Rep. 677; State v. Hyde, 121 Ind. 20; Campbell's Case, 2 Bland (Md.) 209; 20 Am. Dec. 360; Attorney Genl. v. Detroit, 58 Mich. 213; 55 Am. Rep. 675; Hoke v. Henderson, 4 Dev. (N. Car.) 1; 25 Am. Dec. 677.

No constitutional declaration is needed to invest the people with power, but it does require one to take it from them in whole or in part. State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 382.

Sovereignty resides in the people, and having delegated to the legislature, to the judiciary, and to the executive the exercise of that portion of it as co-ordinate departments, which they have considered most fitting to be exercised by each, they retain to themselves the exclusive paramount sovereignty. Rice v. Parkman, 16 Mass. 326; Jones v. Perry, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 59; 30 Am. Dec. 430.

3. Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 426; State v. Hyde, 121 Ind. 20; State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 449; Augusta v. Sweeney, 44 Ga. 463; 9 Am. Rep. 172; Taylor v. Porter, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 140; 40 Am. Dec. 274; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clinton Co., 1 Ohio St. 77; Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Randolph, 24 Tex. 317.

The constitution is above all the departments of the government, for it creates and preserves them. Hawkins v. Governor, 1 Ark. 570; 33 Am. Dec. 346.

When the authority delegated is exceeded, the act done is null and void. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Randolph, 24 Tex. 317.

Each and all the departments of government are subordinate to the constitution which creates and defines their limits; whatever it commands, is the supreme and uncontrollable law of the land. Thomas v. Owens, 4 Md. 189.

4. People v. Lynch, 51 Cal. 15; 21 Am. Rep. 677; Lafayette, etc., R. Co. v. Geiger, 34 Ind. 185; Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 304; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 316; Golden v. Prince, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 313.

All the departments of the government have the right of judging of the constitution, and interpreting it for themselves; but they judge under the responsibilities imposed in that instrument, and are answerable in the manner pointed out by it. Hawkins v. Governor, 1 Ark. 570; 33 Am. Dec. 346.

5. U. S. Const., 10th Amdt.; People v. Lynch, 51 Cal. 15; 21 Am. Rep. 677; Lafayette, etc., R. Co. v. Geiger, 34 Ind. 185; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v.

States, however, are not grants of powers to the States, but an imposition of restrictions upon, and an apportionment of powers which the States inherently possess;¹ the people who created State governments having thereby placed such checks, conditions and limitations upon the legislative, executive, or judicial power thus delegated as they deemed proper or expedient.² The restraints of a constitution upon the several departments among which the various powers of government are distributed cannot be lessened or diminished by inference and implication,³ and the delegation of authority to the several departments of government must be deemed to have been made subject to and in contemplation of the fundamental principles of our general framework

Clinton Co., 1 Ohio St. 77; David v. Portland Water Committee, 14 Oregon 98; Golden v. Prince, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 313.

The legislature can exercise all powers not forbidden by the constitution of the State or delegated to the general government, or prohibited by the Constitution of the United States. McMillen v. Boyles, 6 Iowa 304. The legislative department represents the independent sovereignty of the people of the State, and is supreme and unlimited in all legitimate subject-matters of legislation, and is controlled only by such restrictions as are imposed by the organic law of the State. Beals v. Amador Co., 35 Cal. 624.

1. Cooley Const. Lim. (6th ed.) 11; People v. Lynch, 51 Cal. 15; 21 Am. Rep. 677; Lafayette, etc., R. Co. v. Geiger, 34 Ind. 185; Beauchamp v. State, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 299; Doe v. Douglass, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 10; 44 Am. Dec. 732; David v. Portland Water Committee, 14 Oregon 98; Hope v. Henderson, 4 Dev. (N. Car.) 1; 25 Am. Dec. 677; Thompson v. Floyd, 2 Jones (N. Car.) 313; Lyon v. Aiken, 78 N. Car. 258; Golden v. Prince, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 313; Day Co. v. State, 68 Tex. 526.

A prohibition contained in a State constitution against the exercise by the legislature of a specific power in a particular instance, is a recognition of the existence of the power, except as its exercise is thus expressly restrained. Day Land, etc., Co. v. State, 68 Tex. 526.

2. People v. Lynch, 51 Cal. 15; 21 Am. Rep. 677; Lafayette, etc., R. Co. v. Geiger, 34 Ind. 185; Doe v. Douglass, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 10; 44 Am. Dec. 732; Campbell's Case, 2 Bland (Md.) 209; 20 Am. Dec. 360; Golden v. Prince, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 313.

As all governmental power originally rested with the people, it must necessarily still be lodged with them, except so far as they have delegated it in their constitutions. Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 426.

Under a general grant of legislative power, however, a State legislature is subject to no restrictions in the enactment of laws except those imposed by the constitution of the State, the Constitution of the United States, and the laws and treaties made in pursuance thereof. Hovey v. State, 119 Ind. 395; People v. Keeler, 99 N. Y. 463; Bank of Chenango v. Brown, 26 N. Y. 469; People v. Daton, 55 N. Y. 380; Lafayette, etc., R. Co. v. Geiger, 34 Ind. 185.

The inquiry is not whether the power to enact a law is to be found in the State constitution, but whether such legislation is prohibited or restrained by that instrument, or by the Constitution of the United States. People v. Keeler, 99 N. Y. 463.

The legislature acting within the sphere of its powers in the making of laws, judges, and judges finally, upon all questions of policy and equity. Sheley v. Detroit, 45 Mich. 431.

In Wright v. Wright, 2 Md. 429; 56 Am. Dec. 723, it was held that granting a divorce is within the regular exercise of legislative power, and that it is not within the jurisdiction of the judiciary to pronounce the act null and void. And see Crane v. Meginnis, 1 Gill & J. (Md.) 403; 19 Am. Dec. 237.

3. People v. Albertson, 55 N. Y. 50.

Constitutions are to receive a strict construction. Lafayette, etc., R. Co. v. Geiger, 34 Ind. 185. And see Hoke v. Henderson, 4 Dev. (N. Car.) 1; 25 Am. Dec. 676; State v. Moss, 2 Jones (N. Car.) 66; Galloway v. Jenkins, 63 N. Car. 147.

of government,¹ a constitution being required to be interpreted according to its spirit and the intent of its framers as indicated by its terms.²

The organic law of every State of the Union as well as of the United States distributes all governmental powers into three departments: the legislative, the executive, including the administrative, and the judicial.³ In the legislative department the sovereign body is represented by the general assembly, in the executive department it is represented by the executive and administrative officers, and in the judicial department it is represented by the courts,⁴ and the legislature makes the laws, the judiciary expounds them, and the executive sees that they Different Departments.—There can be no difference in the powers of the same character of officers whether performing their duties under the general or the State governments. Hawley v. Butler, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 490.

1. People v. Hurlbut, 24 Mich. 44; 9 Am. Rep. 103; People v. Detroit, 28 Mich. 227; 15 Am. Rep. 202; People v. Lynch, 51 Cal. 15; 21 Am. Rep. 677; State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 382; State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 449. Campbell's Case, 2 Bland Ch. (Md.) 209; 20 Am. Dec. 360; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clinton Co., 1 Ohio St. 77.

The legislative, executive, and judicial departments are all responsible for an abuse or usurpation of power in the mode pointed out by the constitution. Hawkins v. Governor, 1 Ark. 570; 33 Am. Dec. 346.

2. People v. Albertson, 55 N. Y. 50; People v. Lynch, 51 Cal. 15; 21 Am. Rep. 677; Lewis v. Webb, 3 Me. 326; People v. Blodgett, 13 Mich. 138.

We should read a constitution with a view to finding out the facts intended to be expressed. People v. Lynch, 51 Cal. 15; 21 Am. Rep. 677; Twitchell v. Blodget, 30 Mich. 138.

A thing within the intent of a constitution or statutory enactment, is for all purposes to be regarded as within its words and terms. People v. Albertson, 55 N. Y. 50.

3. Hovey v. State, 119 Ind. 395; State v. Noble, 118 Ind. 350; Lafayette, etc., R. Co. v. Geiger, 34 Ind. 185; State v. Hyde, 121 Ind. 20; Waldo v. Wallace, 12 Ind. 569; People v. Lynch, 51 Cal. 15; 21 Am. Rep. 677; Hawkins v. Governor, 1 Ark. 570; 33 Am. Dec. 346; Lewis v. Webb, 3 Me. 326; Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376; 74 Am. Dec. 572; Denny v. Mattoon, 2 Allen (Mass.) 361; 79 Am. Dec. 784;

Campbell v. Mississippi Union Bank, 6 How. (Miss.) 625; Turner v. Althaus, 6 Neb. 54; People v. Keeler, 99 N. Y. 463; Dash v. Van Kleeck, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 477; 5 Am. Dec. 291; Lane v. Dorman, 4 Ill. 238; 36 Am. Dec. 543; In re Dennett, 32 Me. 508; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clinton Co., 1 Ohio St. 77; Mauran v. Smith, 8 R. 1. 192; 5 Am. Rep. 564; Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 168.

This division of power prevents the concentration of power in the hands of one person, or one class of persons. State v. Hyde, 121 Ind. 20.

In Hawkins v. Governor, 1 Ark. 570; 33 Am. Dec. 346, the court by Lacy, J., said: "The concentration of all power legislative, executive, and judicial, in the same hands, constitutes the very definition of tyranny that is given by all the early friends and founders of our free institutions."

4. State v. Noble, 118 Ind. 350; State v. Hyde, 121 Ind. 20; Hovey v. State, 119 Ind. 395; People v. Keeler, 99 N. Y. 463.

Each of the three departments has all there is of the element assigned it, but it has nothing more. Each department has it is true, incidental rights of a nature intrinsically different from the body of the power distributed to it, but these incidental rights are such only as are necessary to enable it to perform its function as an independent branch of the government, and are, in fact, part of the principal power itself. State v. Noble, 118 Ind. 350. And see People v. Keeler, 99 N. Y. 464.

The power of obtaining information for the purpose of framing laws to meet supposed or apprehended evils, is one which has from time immemorial been deemed necessary and has been exercised by legislative bodies, though are faithfully executed.¹ These departments of government are equal, co-ordinate and independent,² and exclusive in respect to the duties assigned to each,³ and within the particular limits assigned to each they are supreme and uncontrollable,⁴ any judicial action is required in obtaining such information. People v. Keeler, 99 N. Y. 463.

1. Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376; 74 Am. Dec. 572; Hawkins v. Governor, 1 Ark. 570; State v. Hyde, 121 Ind. 20; Hovey v. State, 119 Ind. 395; People v. Keeler, 99 N. Y. 463; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clinton Co., 1 Ohio St. 77.

In Slack v. Jacob, 8 W. Va. 661, the court by Haymond, P., said: "It is essentially necessary and proper that each department of the government shall be careful in its actions to keep within its legal and constitutional sphere, and not attempt to exercise powers and duties, which, under the constitutional apportionment of power, belongs to the other, or improperly interfere with the exercise of the rights as well as duties of the others.

2. Lafayette, etc., R. Co. v. Geiger, 34 Ind. 185; State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 382; State v. Noble, 118 Ind. 350; Wright v. Defrees, 8 Ind. 298; Hovey v. State, 119 Ind. 395; Smith v. Myers, 109 Ind. 1; 58 Am. Rep. 375; Hawkins v. Governor, 1 Ark. 570; 33 Am. Dec. 346; Lewis v. Webb, 3 Me. 326; Thomas v. Owens, 4 Md. 189.

In Lewis v. Webb, 3 Me. 326, the court by Mellen, C. J., said: "It seems at the present day to be an established principle in our country, as well as in many other parts of the world, that the three great powers of government—the legislative, the executive, and the judicial—should be preserved as distinct from, and independent of each other, as the nature of society, human imperfections, and peculiar circumstances will admit. And the more this independence of each department within its constitutional limits can be preserved, the nearer the system will approach the perfection of civil government and the security of civil liberty.

The line which separates judicial from legislative authority is clear and distinct, and the principle is so well settled and understood that it is seldom called in question, and probably not often violated, except through inadvertence. Butler v. Saginaw Co., 26 Mich. 22; but there is no such thing as drawing between legislative and executive power such a clear line of distinction as separates legislative from judicial. People v. Hurlbut, 24 Mich. 93; 9 Am. Rep. 103.

3. Wright v. Defrees, 8 Ind. 298; State v. Noble, 118 Ind. 350; State v. Hyde, 121 Ind. 20; Smith v. Myers, 109 Ind. 1; 58 Am. Rep. 375; Ex parte Griffiths, 118 Ind. 83; Butler v. State, 97 Ind. 373; Haley v. Clark, 26 Ala. 439; Secombe v. Kittelson, 29 Minn. 555; Attorney-Gen'l. v. Brown, 1 Wis. 513.

It has become an established rule of constitutional law that where general power has been confided to and vested in one department of government, persons intrusted with power in another department will not be permitted to encroach upon the power of, nor exercise functions which pertain and are appropriate to the other department, unless the authority to do so is conferred in express terms, or unless the exercise of the power becomes necessary and appropriate, in order to discharge other constitutional duties and functions expressly permitted to it. Hovey v. State, 119 Ind. 395, citing Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 168; People v. Keeler, 99 N. Y. 463.

In Maryland it is held that the Declaration of Rights and the constitution are not to be interpreted as enjoining a complete separation between the several departments. Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376; 74 Am. Dec. 572. The court, by Tuck, J., saying: "Practically it has never been so in any of the States, in whose fundamental law the principle has been asserted."

4. Wright v. Wright, 2 Md. 429; 56 Am. Dec. 723; State v. Hyde, 121 Ind. 20; Smith v. Myers, 109 Ind. 1; 58 Am. Rep. 375; Ex parte Griffiths, 118 Ind. 83; Hawkins v. Governor, 1 Ark. 570; 33 Am. Dec. 346; Dickey v. Reed, 78 Ill. 261; Lane v. Dorman, 4 Ill. 238; 36 Am. Dec. 543; In re Dennett, 32 Me. 508; Sheley v. Detroit, 45 Mich. 431; People v. Keeler, 99 N. Y. 463; Western R. Co. v. De Graff, 27 Minn. 1; Campbell v. Mississippi Union Bank, 6 How. (Miss.) 625; State v.

assumption of one department of the powers conferred upon another being destitute of authority.¹ But while neither department of government can be made amenable to any other for its action or judgment in discharging the duties imposed upon it, whatever their source or nature,² offices of legislative creation, where legislative authority is not limited or restricted by constitutional provisions, are subject to the will of the legislature with reference to both their tenure and jurisdiction as well as their existence.³

Buchanan, 24 W. Va. 362. And see Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376; 74 Am. Dec. 572; Day Land, etc., Co. v. State, 68 Tex. 526.

The departments of the government must be kept separate and distinct, and each in its legitimate sphere must be protected, otherwise the government fails. State v. Buchanan, 24 W. Va. 362.

The legislature has no power to interfere with the jurisdiction of the courts in such a manner as to change the decision of cases pending before them, or to impair or set aside their judgments, or take cases out of the settled course of judicial proceedings. Denny v. Mattoon, 2 Allen (Mass.) 361; 79 Am. Dec. 784; Columbus, etc., R. Co. v. Grant Co., 65 Ind. 427.

The legislature itself cannot vest the judicial department of the government with authority to assume jurisdiction over the legislative or executive departments. Smith v. Myers, 109 Ind. 1; 58 Am. Rep. 395; citing Sterling v. Drake, 29 Ohio St. 457; 23 Am. Rep. 762; State v. Nichols, 26 Ark. 74; 7 Am. Rep. 600; State v. Sloss, 25 Mo. 291; 69 Am. Dec. 467; Attorney Genl. v. Brown, 1 Wis. 513; Haley v. Clark, 26 Ala. 439.

No one of the departments is supreme, however, in the strict sense of the word, for the supreme power is in the people. State v. Noble, 118 Ind. 350.

1. Jones v. Perry, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 59; 30 Am. Dec. 430; Hawkins v. Governor, 1 Ark. 570; 33 Am. Dec. 346; Smith v. Myers, 109 Ind. 1; 58 Am. Rep. 375; Denny v. Mattoon, 2 Allen (Mass.) 361; 79 Am. Dec. 784; Merrill v. Sherburne, 1 N. H. 199; 8 Am. Dec. 52; Campbell v. Mississippi Union Bank, 6 How. (Miss.) 625; Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 168; State v. Sloss, 25 Mo. 291; 69 Am. Dec. 467; Taylor v. Porter, 4 Hill (N. Y.)

140; 40 Am. Dec. 274; Day Land, etc., Co. v. State, 68 Tex. 526; Columbus, etc., R. Co. v. Grant Co., 65 Ind. 427.

For one department to assume powers or exercise a jurisdiction properly belonging to any other department, is a gross and palpable violation of its own constitutional duty. Hawkins v. Governor, 1 Ark. 570; 33 Am. Dec. 346.

In Butler v. State, 97 Ind. 373, it was held that the courts could not suspend a sentence, because the power to grant pardons and respites was vested in the executive.

2. Western R. Co. v. DeGraff, 27 Minn. 1; and see Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Randolph, 24 Tex. 317; In re Dennitt, 32 Me. 508; Chamberlain v. Sibley, 4 Minn. 309; Pacific R. Co. v. Governor, 23 Mo. 353; 66 Am. Dec. 673. But see State v. Chase, 5 Ohio St. 538; Cotten v. Ellis, 7 Jones (N. Car.) 545.

The court has no power to award a mandamus, either to compel the execution of any duty enjoined on the executive by the constitution, or to direct the manner of its performance. State v. Governor, 25 N. J. L. 331; Hawkins v. Governor, 1 Ark. 570; 33 Am. Dec. 346; Mauran v. Smith, 8 R. I. 102; 5 Am. Rep. 564; Low v. Towns, 8 Ga. 360; People v. Bissell, 19 Ill. 229; 68 Am. Dec. 591; State v. Governor, 25 N. J. L. 331.

The legislature ascertains in its own way the facts on which it bases its action. It is the sole judge whether facts exist to authorize the immediate discharge of a duty, and whatever facts or reasons it may give for such action must be held sufficient. Day Land, etc., Co. v. State, 68 Tex. 526.

3. Prince v. Skillin, 71 Me. 361; 36 Am. Rep. 325; Farwell v. Rockland, 62 Me. 298; Augusta v. Sweeney, 44 Ga. 463; 9 Am. Rep. 172; Bryan v.

Offices provided for or named in the constitution, however, are there regarded as having a known legal character, and though their duties may sometimes be varied by legislation, they cannot be so changed as to destroy the powers of the office, or as to essentially alter it.¹

Under constitutional provisions declaring that judicial powers shall be vested in certain courts, only judicial officers can exercise judicial functions.² The legislature cannot exercise judicial powers.³ Nor can these powers be vested elsewhere than in the Cattell, 15 Iowa 538; Taft v. Adams, 3 Gray (Mass.) 126; Connor v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 5 N. Y. 285; People v. Morrell, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 563; Com. v. Bacon, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 322; Com. v. Mann, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 403; Barker v. Plattsburgh, 4 Pa. St. 49; Territory v. Pyle, 1 Oregon 149; Alexander v. McKenzie, 2 S. Car. 81; State v. Douglass, 26 Wis. 428; 7 Am. Rep. 87; State v. Von Baumbach, 12 Wis. 310; Robinson v. White, 26 Ark. 139; Butler v. Pennsylvania, 10 How. (U. S.) 414.

An appointment under a statute fixing the compensation, is not a contract; and a subsequent statute, reducing the compensation, and providing for the election of new officers by the people who should enter upon their duties before the time fixed by the first statute as the term of office is not unconstitutional, as impairing the obligation of a contract. Butler v. Pennsylvania, 10 How. (U. S.) 402.

The recognition in the constitution of the established division of the State into counties, cities, and towns, does not take from the legislature the power of establishing additional civil divisions for general and permanent objects of government, not inconsistent with the usefulness of existing divisions for the purposes contemplated by the constitution. People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 532.

1. Allor v. Wayne Co., 43 Mich. 76; Underwood v. McDuffee, 15 Mich. 361; 93 Am. Dec. 194; Chandler v. Nash, 5 Mich. 409; In re Head Notes, 43 Mich. 641; State v. Morrill, 16 Ark. 384; People v. Dubois, 23 Ill. 498; Shoultz v. McPheeters, 79 Ind. 373; Little v. State, 90 Ind. 338; 46 Am. Rep. 224; Ex parte Griffiths, 118 Ind. 83; Warner v. People, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 272; 43 Am. Dec. 740; King v. Hunter, 65 N. Car. 603; 6 Am. Rep. 754; Com. v. Gamble, 62 Pa. St. 343; 1 Am. Rep. 422; State v. Douglass, 26 Wis. 428; 7

Am. Rep. 87; State v. Messmore, 14 Wis. 163.

The powers, authority and jurisdiction of a constitutional office are inseparable from it. The legislature may diminish the aggregate amount of duties of a judge by the division of his district or otherwise, but must leave the authority or jurisdiction pertaining to the office intact. Com. v. Gamble, 62 Pa. St. 343; 1 Am. Rep. 422.

In Tennessee, the provision of the constitution, directing that the different counties shall be laid off in districts and providing for the election of justices of the peace and constables for the different districts, is mandatory, and is to be construed that there shall be at least as many officers as the constitution directs, but does not limit the power of the legislature to increase the number. Britton v. Moody, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 15.

2. Gregory v. State, 94 Ind. 384; 48 Am. Rep. 162; Little v. State, 90 Ind. 338; 46 Am. Rep. 224; Shoultz v. McPheeters, 79 Ind. 373; Wright v. Defrees, 8 Ind. 208; Waldo v. Wallace, 12 Ind. 569; Columbus, etc., R. Co. v. Grant Co., 65 Ind. 427; Solomon v. People, 15 Ill. 291; Allor v. Wayne Co., 43 Mich. 76; Chandler v. Nash, 5 Mich. 411; Attorney-Gen'l v. McDonald, 3 Wis. 805; State v. Burton, 11 Wis. 50; Conroe v. Bull, 7 Wis. 408; Gough v. Dorsey, 27 Wis. 119.

There are inherent powers resident in all courts of superior jurisdiction. These powers spring not from legislation, but from the nature and constitution of the tribunals themselves. Little v. State, 90 Ind. 338; 46 Am. Rep. 224; citing U. S. v. Hudson, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 32; Sanders v. State, 85 Ind. 318; 44 Am. Rep. 29; Cavanaugh v. Smith, 84 Ind. 380; Nealis v. Dicks, 72 Ind. 374.

3. Shoultz v. McPheeters, 79 Ind. 373; Columbus, etc., R. Co. v. Grant Co., 65 Ind. 427; Young v. State Bank, tribunals designated or indicated by the constitution,¹ or exercised by officers chosen in a manner different from that prescribed by the constitution,² and powers vested in courts as such do not belong to and cannot be exercised by judges as judges out of court.³

2. How Exercised.—Under a grant of general discretionary power, without qualification, the exercise of the officer's discretion is limited to the evident purposes of the grant, and to what is known as sound and legal discretion, excluding all arbitrary,

4 Ind. 301; 58 Am. Dec. 630; Doe v. Douglass, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 10; 44 Am. Dec. 732; Dupy v. Wickwire, 1 D. Chip. (Vt.) 237; 6 Am. Dec. 729; Hoke v. Henderson, 4 Dev. (N. Car.) 1; 25 Am. Dec. 677; Ervine's Appeal, 16 Pa. St. 256; 55 Am. Rep. 499; Greenough v. Greenough, 11 Pa. St. 489; 51 Am. Dec. 567; DeChastellux v. Fairchild, 15 Pa. St. 18; 53 Am. Dec. 570; Lane v. Dorman, 36 Am. Dec. 543; Merrill v. Sherburne, 1 N. H. 199; 8 Am. Dec. 52; Ashuelot R. Co. v. Elliot, 52 N. H. 387; Jones v. Perry, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 59; 30 Am. Dec. 430; Crane v. McGinnis, 1 Gill & J. (Md.) 463; 19 Am. Dec. 729; Richards v. Rote, 68 Pa. St. 255; Watkins v. Holman, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 25; Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 6 How. (U. S.) 325.

The general assembly, like other departments of government, exercises only delegated authority, and it cannot be doubted that any act passed by it, not falling fairly within the scope of legislative power, is as clearly void as though expressly prohibited. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clinton Co., 1 Ohio St. 77.

1. Shoultz v. McPheeters, 79 Ind. 373; Pennington v. Streight, 54 Ind. 376; State v. Jones, 19 Ind. 356; 81 Am. Dec. 403; Gulick v. New, 14 Ind. 93; 77 Am. Dec. 49; Hall v. Marks, 34 Ill. 358; People v. Maynard, 14 Ill. 419; Abbott v. Mathews, 26 Mich. 176; Chandler v. Nash, 5 Mich. 409; Gibson v. Emerson, 7 Ark. 172; Woodruff v. Griffith, 5 Ark. 354; Beesman v. Peoria, 16 Ill. 484; Weeks v. Torman, 16 N. J. L. 237; Attorney-Gen'l v. McDonald, 3 Wis. 805; Conroe v. Bull, 7 Wis. 408; Gough v. Dorsey, 27 Wis. 119.

The judiciary is a co-ordinate department of the government, and not a mere subordinate branch, depending for existence and power upon the legislative will. Purely judicial powers inherent in courts, as of the essence of their existence, are not the creatures of legislation, and these powers are inalienable and indestructible. Little v. State, 90 Ind. 338; 46 Am. Rep. 224.

Under a constitution vesting all jurisdiction in courts and justices of the peace, a statute authorizing actions in which the judge was interested or prejudiced to be tried by consent of the parties before a counselor of the court, is unconstitutional and absolutely void. Van Slyke v. Trempealeau, etc., Ins. Co., 39 Wis. 390; 20 Am. Rep. 50.

Constitutional provisions requiring all judicial powers to be vested in courts, do not apply to those special tribunals, which the law occasionally calls into existence for particular exigencies, and which cease to exist when the occasion ceases. The exercise of this power and by such tribunals is exceptional and has been recognized and held valid only because it was under statutes in force before the constitution was adopted, and which, it is believed, was not intended to be abrogated by it; or because such proceedings are preliminary and collateral to the principal proceedings which are had in a duly authorized court. Risser v. Hoyt, 53 Mich. 185.

2. Chandler v. Nash, 5 Mich. 409; Allor v. Wayne Co., 43 Mich. 76; People v. Maynard, 14 Ill. 419; State v. Judge, 9 La. Ann. 62.

3. Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Dunlap, 47 Mich. 456; Risser v. Hoyt, 53 Mich. 185; Bowman v. Venice, etc., R. Co., 102 Ill. 459; Field v. People, 3 Ill. 181; Waldo v. Wallace, 12 Ind. 569; State v. Noble, 118 Ind. 350.

In Kentucky, laws permitting the courts to redress, in a summary way, without the intervention of a jury, injuries resulting from the negligence, misfeasance, or malfeasance of their officers are not unconstitutional. Harrison v. Chiles, 3 Litt. (Ky.) 194.

capricious, inquisitorial, and oppressive proceedings.¹ In the exercise of ministerial powers, the officer can do no act but what he is either expressly or by necessary implication authorized to do.² And he has no authority to pause in the execution of his duty, on the suggestion of errors or mistakes in the proceedings, or illegality or unconstitutionality of the authority under which he acts. If the facts upon which he is to act are properly certified to him, he has no discretion but must proceed,³ and a special

1. U. S. v. Doherty, 27 Fed. Rep. 731; State v. Woody, 17 Ga. 612; Rose v. Stuyvesant, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 426; In re Holbrook, 99 N. Y. 539; Third Great Western Turnpike R. Co. v. Loomis, 32 N. Y. 126; U. S. v. Kirby, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 486; Rex v. Peters, 1 Burr. 568; and see U. S. v. Thurber, 28 Fed. Rep. 56.

When palpable injustice has been done in a court of inferior jurisdiction in the exercise of a discretionary power, in opposition to settled principles of law and equity, their proceedings may be corrected by certiorari. Brooklyn v. Patchen, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 47.

The county court in North Carolina is not authorized to bind the county for a loan obtained for the purpose of discharging an illegal indebtedness, in this case for money borrowed in aid of the Rebellion. Davis v. Comrs. of Stokes, 74 N. Car. 374.

Where the legislature points out, specifically how an act is to be done, although without it the court or officer under their general powers, would have been able to perform the act, yet, if the legislature imposes special limitations, they must be strictly pursued. Although performed by a discretionary officer, the statute renders the doing of the act ministerial in him performing it, in which no discretion can be indulged. Hudson v. Jefferson Co. Court, 28 Ark. 359.

2. Vose v. Deane, 7 Mass. 280; U. S. v. Thurber, 28 Fed. Rep. 56; Day Land, etc., Co. v. State, 68 Tex. 526; Mitchell v. Rockland, 41 Me. 363; 66 Am. Dec. 252; Atkinson v. Minot, 75 Me. 189; Parsons v. Monmouth, 70 Me. 262; Wilkins v. Benning, 51 Ga. 9; Tippacanoe Co. v. Cox, 6 Ind. 403; McCaslin v. State, 99 Ind. 428; Casady v. Woodbury Co., 13 Iowa 113; Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. Reynolds, 20 Md. 1; 83 Am. Dec. 535; State v. Bank of Missouri, 45 Mo. 541; Hite v. Goodman, 1 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 364; and see Dunwoody v. U. S., 22 Ct. of Cl. 269; Semmes v. Mayor, etc., of Co- lumbus, 19 Ga. 471; State v. Martin, 27 Neb. 441; State v. Merry, 34 Ohio St. 137; State v. Collins, 12 R. I. 478; Paetz v. Dain, 1 Wilson (Ind.) 149; Nalle v. Fenwick, 4 Rand. (Va.) 585; Yancey v. Hopkins, 1 Munf. (Va.) 419; The Floyd Acceptances, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 666.

Where the power in trustees of a congressional township to make promissory notes is not expressed in the statute, it cannot in so limited a corporation be implied. Congressional Tp. No. 11 v. Weir, 9 Ind. 224.

It is sufficient if there is a law which confers authority to do an official act, and it is wholly unimportant whether the officer intended to act under such law or not. Davis v. Brace, 82 Ill. 542.

3. Waldron v. Lee, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 323; Smyth v. Titcomb, 31 Me. 272; Attorney Genl. v. Iron Co., 64 Mich. 607; People v. Collins, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 549; Halstead v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 3 N. Y. 430; State v. Buchanan, 24 W. Va. 362; U. S. v. Marble, 3 Mackey (D. C.) 32.

Where a board of county commissioners has power to act upon a given matter, its act is valid, even though erroneous, and the auditor cannot refuse to issue his warrant in accordance with it unless such act is legally annulled. State v. Buckles, 39 Ind. 272.

When the board of supervisors of the county of New York have, by resolution, directed the county treasurer to pay to the justice of the supreme court the additional compensation allowed him, in pursuance of an act of the legislature, it is the duty of the treasurer to pay it, and on his refusal, a mandamus lies. People v. Edmonds, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 529.

A ministerial officer intrusted with the collection and disbursement of revenue in any department of government has no right to withhold a performance of his ministerial duties merely because he apprehends that others may be injuriously affected thereby. Smyth v. Titcomb, 31 Me. 272.

statutory power must be exercised as it is given, and in conformity with the statute conferring it.¹

An authority conferred upon a public, as well as a private agent, is construed to include all the necessary and usual means of executing it with effect.²

A public officer can do no official act, or exercise no official function outside of the district or territory for which he is the official agent,³ and upon the termination of his official capacity he becomes functus officio, and incompetent thereafter to do an authoritative act.⁴ It is a well settled rule of law, however—

1. Green v. Beeson, 31 Ind. 7; Petrie v. Doe, 30 Miss. 698; New Jersey R., etc., Co. v. Suydam, 17 N. J. L. 25; U. S. v. Thurber, 28 Fed. Rep. 56; and see Morton v. Comptroller-Gen'l., 4 S. Car. 430.

If a resolution by a board of freeholders, for issuance of county bonds in excess of the limit fixed by law, is one of several resolutions passed together, providing for the purchase of lands for which the bonds are the price, all the resolutions are tainted by the illegality, and will be set aside. State v. Hudson Co., 39 N. J. L. 632.

All the power that any State officer has, is given by written law directly or indirectly, and any acts which any officer from the chief executive of the State to the lowest officer in it, may assume to do in excess of the power thus given, is void, and it matters not whether the want of power results from the absence of a law conferring it under any circumstances, or from a law which forbids the exercise of the power in a given case, while the exercise of a like power in other cases would be lawful. Day Land, etc., Co. v. State, 68 Tex. 526.

2. Backman v. Charlestown, 42 N. H. 125; Spalding v. Preston, 21 Vt. 9; 50 Am. Dec. 68; Feusier v. Mayor, etc., of Virginia City, 3 Nev. 58.

Under an ordinance conferring power to provide for the suppression of fires, and for the appointment and removal of fire wardens, and prescribing the duties and powers of such fire wardens, and the fire engineers and firemen, it was held that power to purchase engines and apparatus, is necessarily and fairly implied as incident to the power expressly granted. Green v. Cape May, 41 N. J. L. 45.

Where there is a substantial compliance with the conditions of a contract, a public corporation cannot take advantage of mere want of form in the acts of its own agents, if the requirements of the statute and of the contract have been substantially complied with. Moore v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 73 N. Y. 238; 29 Am. Rep. 134.

3. Share v. Anderson, 7 S. & R. (Pa.) 43; 10 Am. Dec. 421; Avery v. Seely, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 494; Mitchell v. Malone, 77 Ga. 301; Gittings v. Hall, 1 Har. & J. (Md.) 14; 2 Am. Dec. 502; Brown v. McCormick, 28 Mich. 215; People v. Burt, 51 Mich. 199; Carr v. Phillips, 39 Mich. 319; Jackson v. Humphrey, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 498; Page v. Staples, 13 R. I. 306.

In Allor v. Wayne Co., 43 Mich. 76, it was held that municipal courts cannot be authorized to try extra-municipal crimes, and that justices of the peace in Detroit have power under the general laws of the State to dispose of all criminal business arising in Wayne County outside of the city. And in Robertson v. Baxter, 57 Mich. 127, it held that constables as ministers of public justice, are State ministerial officers, some of whose powers are strictly local and some not.

A sheriff having a prisoner in his custody upon a writ of habeas corpus has power by virtue of the writ to travel through other counties if necessary in order to take his prisoner to the place where the writ is returnable, and he may also upon fresh pursuit retake a prisoner who has escaped from his custody into another county. Page v. Staples, 13 R. I. 306.

A notary public, though required by law to reside in a particular county, may, nevertheless, take acknowledgments in any county in the State. Maxwell v. Hartmann, 50 Wis. 660.

An acknowledgment will be presumed to have been taken within the jurisdiction of the officer taking it although there is no averment of the fact in the certificate. Bradley v. West, 60 Mo. 33.

4. State v. Donnewirth, 21 Ohio St. 216; Ingerson v. Berry, 14 Ohio St.

a rule of the common law, recognized and confirmed by statute—that when an executive officer has begun the service, or commenced the performance of a duty, and thereby incurred a responsibility, he has the authority, and, indeed, is bound to go on and complete it, although his general authority as such officer is superseded by his removal, or by the expiration of his term of office.¹

Where a duty imposed upon a body or officer by law has been discharged and completed, the power is exhausted, and the exe-

315; and see Attorney-Gen'l v. Iron Co., 64 Mich. 607.

A former public officer has no authority to certify proceedings had before him while in office. A person who is no longer a public officer has no more right to give copies of papers than any other individual. Faith and credit are attached to his certificate when it makes a part and is given in discharge of the duties appertaining to the office he holds, because the law presumes it is given under the responsibilities attached to that situation, and with reference to the obligations that flow from it. But that presumption no longer exists, when the individual ceases to act in that capacity. Gaillard v. Aneline, 10 Martin (La.) 479; 13 Am. Dec. 338.

The authority of an officer attaches by the commencement of the service he is employed to perform and will be superseded only when it is completed whether it be a longer or shorter time. Lawrence v. Rice, 12 Met. (Mass.) 527; Welsh v. Joy, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 477.

In Attorney-Gen'l v. Iron Co., 64 Mich. 607, it was held that officers appointed for the accomplishment of a particular purpose have no right to dissolve and terminate their authority until they have completed their task and exhausted their powers.

1. Lawrence v. Rice, 12 Met. (Mass.) 527; People v. Boring, 8 Cal. 406; 68 Am. Dec. 331; Elkin v. People, 4 Ill. 207; 36 Am. Dec. 541; Allen v. Trimble, 4 Bibb (Ky.) 21; 7 Am. Dec. 726; Lemon v. Craddock, Litt. Sel. Cas. (Ky.) 251; 12 Am. Dec. 301; Purl v. Duvall, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 69; Am. Dec. 490; Clark v. Pratt, 55 Me. 546; Tukey v. Smith, 18 Me. 125; 36 Am. Dec. 704; State v. Roberts, 12 N. J. L. 114; 21 Am. Dec. 62; Tuttle v. Jackson, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 224; 21 Am. Dec. 306; American Exch. Bank v. Morris Canal, etc., Co., 6 Hill (N. Y.) 368; and see

Miner v. Cassat, 2 Ohio St. 199; Doolittle v. Bryan, 14 How. (U. S.) 563.

Where the sheriff at the expiration of his term of office has process in his hands, and dies before the complete execution thereof, his late under-sheriff becomes personally liable for moneys collected by him by virtue of such process, notwithstanding the statute providing that where an under-sheriff executes the office of sheriff, his default and misfeasance shall be a breach of the sheriff's bond as well as his own. Newman v. Beckwith, 61 N. Y. 205.

Papers executed by a public officer and the record of his proceedings may be amended by him after the expiration of his term, in order to cure informalities in his proceedings or in the record thereof. Kiley v. Oppenheimer, 55 Mo. 374; Rugle v. Webster, 55 Mo. 246; Kiley v. Cranor, 51 Mo. 541; though such amendments must be made by the persons who were in office when the proceedings were had. Kiley v. Cranor, 51 Mo. 541; Gibson v. Bailey, 9 N. H. 168.

In People v. Caledonia, 16 Mich. 63, however, it was held that when commissioners of highways have gone out of office, it is incompetent for them to make any addition or amendment to a return of their proceedings already made.

In Bank of Tenn. v. Beatty, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 305; 65 Am. Dec. 58, it was held that a sale of real estate made by a sheriff after the expiration of his official term, upon a levy made by him while in office, is utterly void for want of authority, and vests no title in the purchaser; and in Crane v. Hardy, 1 Mich. 56, it was held that an order made by the court for the sale of real estate taken in an attachment suit goes to the sheriff in office for the time being, and not to his predecessor who served the writ of attachment.

cution of the power is no longer subject to supervision or review or change by the officer to whom it was intrusted.¹

It is a well-settled principle of law that every public officer, acting under the sanction of an oath, or in whom the government reposes a trust, shall be presumed to have done his duty until the contrary be proved;² and courts of general jurisdiction are presumed to have acted within their jurisdiction in matters in which they have assumed to act, until the contrary appears, every presumption being in favor of their jurisdiction.³ An official

1. Northampton Co. v. Yohe, 24 Pa. St. 305; Godschalk v. Northampton Co., 71 Pa. St. 324; Northumberland Co. v. Bloom, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 542; People v. Wayne Co., 41 Mich. 4; State v. King, 4 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 521.

In Godschalk v. Northampton Co., 71 Pa. St. 324, it was held that the board of auditors has no power to re-examine and resettle the commissioner's accounts, even if there were errors in them. But that a third person, who was not a party to the audit, is not bound or concluded by it.

2. Hickman v. Boffman, Hard. (Ky.) 356; National Bank v. Herold, 74 Cal. 603; Guy v. Washburn, 23 Cal. 111; Den v. Den, 6 Cal. 81; Todmier v. Aspinwal, 43 Ill. 401; Mercer v. Doe, 6 Ind. 80; State v. Bailey, 16 Ind. 46; 79 Am. Dec. 405; Jenkins v. Parkhill, 25 Ind. 473; Dollarhide v. Muscatine Co., 1 Greene (Iowa) 158; Terry v. Bleight, 3 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 270; 16 Am. Dec. 101; Ellis v. Carr, 1 Bush (Ky.) 527; Phelps v. Ratcliff, 3 Bush (Ky.) 334; Buckner v. Bush, 1 Duv. (Ky.) 394; Dunlap v. Sims, 2 La. Ann. 239; Squier v. Stockton, 5 La. Ann. 120; 52 Am. Dec. 583; New Orleans v. Halpin, 17 La. Ann. 185; U. S. v. Earhart, 4 Sawy. (U. S.) 245; Templeton v. Morgan, 16 La. Ann. 438; Red v. Augusta, 25 Ga. 386; Hutchings v. Van Bokkelen, 34 Me. 126; Bullen v. Arnold, 31 Me. 583; Lowell v. Flint, 20 Me. 401; Conolly v. Riley, 25 Md. 402; Davany v. Koon, 45 Miss. 71; Murray v. Smith, 28 Miss. 31; Lea v. Polk Co. Copper Co., 21 How. (U. S.) 493; Clapp v. Cedar Co., 5 Iowa 15; 68 Am. Dec. 678; Salter v. Applegate, 23 N. J. L. 115; Miller v. Lewis, 4 N. Y. 553; Hartwell v. Root, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 345; 10 Am. Dec. 232; Ward v. Barrows, 2 Ohio St. 241; Young v. Thayer, 11 Greene (Iowa) 196; Dennison v. Story, 1 Oregon 273; Kelly v. Green, 53 Pa. St. 302; Farr v. Sims, Rich. Eq. Cas. (S. Car.) 122; 24 Am. Dec. 396; Dawkins v. Smith, 1 Hill Eq. (S. Car.) 369; Sennett v. State, 17 Tex. 308; Houston v. Perry, 13 Tex. 390; Jones v. Muisbach, 26 Tex. 235; Stevens v. Kent, 26 Vt. 503; Bank of U. S. v. Dandridge, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 64. And see People v. Auditor, 3 Ill. 567; Brandon v. Snows, 2 Stew. (Ala.) 255; Adams v. Jackson, 2 Aik. (Vt.) 145; U. S. v. Hayward, 2 Gall. (U. S.) 485; Com. v. Slifer, 25 Pa. St. 23; 67 Am. Dec. 680; Cooper v. Telfair, 4 Dall. (U. S.) 14.

The presumption of the due execution of his authority by an officer is equally applicable to a proceeding against the officer and to a proceeding against the rights of an individual derived through the act of the officer. Hickman v. Boffman, Hard. (Ky.) 356.

When a State officer does an act which would be a violation of duty unless certain terms or conditions had first been performed, such performance will be presumed as between the individual and the State. Titus v. Kimbro, 8 Tex. 210.

A party complaining of a breach of official duty must show every fact necessary to constitute such breach, and without it damages will not be presumed. Craig v. Adair, 22 Ga. 373.

For exceptions to this rule see EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 509; TAXATION.

In Kentucky, the rule, that officers will be presumed to have acted correctly until the contrary is proved, does not extend to agents appointed by the legislature, pro hac vice, to sell lands for payment of the owner's debts; the correctness of their proceedings must be shown. Pitman v. Brownlee, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 210.

3. Butcher v. Bank of Brownsville, 2 Kan. 70; 83 Am. Dec. 446; Cook v. Skelton, 20 Ill. 107; 71 Am. Dec. 250; Hefferman v. Burt, 7 Iowa 320; 71 Am.

act is of itself an assertion of authority, upon the part of the officer to make it, and is at least prima facie evidence as against him of the existence of such authority;¹ and persons dealing with public officers, as such, are presumed to know and are charged with knowledge of the nature of their duties, and the extent of their powers.² This presumption, however, can never

Dec. 445; Brady v. Malone, 4 Iowa 148; Cooper v. Sunderland, 3 Iowa 114; 66 Am. Dec. 52; Scott v. Coleman, 5 Litt. (Ky.) 350; 15 Am. Dec. 71; Suiter v. Turner, 10 Iowa 526; Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742; Dexter v. Cochran, 17 Kan. 450; Shumway v. Stillman, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 294; 15 Am. Dec. 374; Jackson v. Rogers, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 33; Thomas v. Robinson, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 267; Roderigas v. East River Sav. Inst., 63 N. Y. 460; 20 Am. Rep. 555; Lowry v. Erwin, 6 Rob. (La.) 192; 39 Am. Dec. 556; Coit v. Haven, 30 Conn. 190; 79 Am. Dec. 244; Shepardson's Appeal, 36 Conn. 25; Reynolds v. Stansbury, 20 Ohio 344; 55 Am. Dec. 459; Horan v. Wahrenberger, 9 Tex. 313; 58 Am. Dec. 145; Withers v. Patterson, 27 Tex. 491; 86 Am. Dec. 643; Mitchell v. Menley, 32 Tex. 464; Black v. Epperson, 40 Tex. 179; Adams v. Jeffries, 12 Ohio 253; 40 Am. Dec. 477; Kenney v. Greer, 13 Ill. 432; 54 Am. Dec. 439; Callen v. Ellison, 13 Ohio St. 446; 82 Am. Dec. 448.

A judgment is prima facie evidence of jurisdiction. Horton v. Critchfield, 18 Ill. 133; 65 Am. Dec. 701.

Where general jurisdiction is given to a court over any subject, and that jurisdiction depends in the particular case upon facts which must be brought before the court for its determination upon evidence, and where it is required to act upon such evidence, its decision upon the question of its jurisdiction is conclusive until reversed, revoked or vacated so far as to protect its officers and all other innocent persons who act upon the faith of it. Roderigas v. East River Sav. Inst., 63 N. Y. 460; 20 Am. Rep. 555.

1. Shelbyville v. Shelbyville, etc., Turnpike Co., 1 Met. (Ky.) 54; Jones v. Muisbach, 26 Tex. 235; Mayor, etc., of N. Y. v. Exchange F. Ins. Co., 3 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 261; Dubuc v. Voss, 19 La. Ann. 210; 92 Am. Dec. 526; Landry v. Martin, 15 La. 1; Devall v. Choppin, 15 La. 566; Davis v. Police Jury, 1 La. Ann. 295; Wray v. Doe, 10 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 452;

Houston v. Perry, 3 Tex. 390; Smith v. Low, 5 Ired. (N. Car.) 197. And see Ross v. Reed, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 482; U. S. v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 691; Strother v. Lucas, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 410; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Stimpson, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 448; Delassus v. U. S., 9 Pet. (U. S.) 117; Wilkes v. Dinsman, 7 How. (U. S.) 89; Minter v. Crommelin, 18 How. (U. S.) 87; Russell v. Beebe, Hempst. (U. S.) 704; Den v. Hill, McAll. (U. S.) 480; Dunlap v. Monroe, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 242; Rugles v. Bucknor, 1 Paine (U. S.) 358; Prentiss v. Spalding, 2 Doug. (Mich.) 184; Burt v. Winona, etc., R. Co., 31 Minn. 472.

The averment of neglect of official duty must be supported by some proof, though very little evidence will suffice to shift the burden of proof. Dobbs v. Justices, 17 Ga. 624.

A report or return of the doings of public officers in appraising, granting, and surveying land, although it does not state all they were required to do, is prima facie evidence against a stranger that all was rightly done. Allegheny v. Nelson, 25 Pa. St. 332. But persons exercising a special delegated authority must show, upon the face of their proceedings, that they have acted within their prescribed limits. New Jersey R., etc., Co. v. Suydam, 17 N. J. L. 25.

Where the transcript of a paper does not contain the indorsement "Filed" it will be presumed that it was not properly filed, as, if it had been, it was the clerk's duty so to mark it, with the date of the filing. Wooster v. McGee, 1 Tex. 17.

2. Clark v. Des Moines, 19 Iowa 199; 87 Am. Dec. 423; Hull v. Marshall Co., 12 Iowa 142; Wallace v. Mayor, etc., of San José, 29 Cal. 181; Sutro v. Pettit, 74 Cal. 332; 5 Am. St. Rep. 442; Tamm v. Lavalley, 92 Ill. 263; Mitchell v. Rockland, 45 Me. 496; Lowell Five Cents' Sav. Bank v. Winchester, 8 Allen (Mass.) 109; Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. Reynolds, 20 Md. 1; 83 Am. Dec. 535; Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. Eschback, 18 Md. 282; State v. Hays, be invoked to sustain the acts of an officer, outside of, or contrary to the usual and recognized functions and duties of his office.¹ And when any rights are claimed, under or by virtue of the judgment of a court of special and limited jurisdiction, all facts necessary to confer jurisdiction must be affirmatively shown.²

a. DELEGATION OF AUTHORITY.—If discretion and judgment are to be exercised either as to the time, manner, or feasibility of the exercise of an official function, the body or officer intrusted with the duty to decide must exercise it, and cannot delegate it to any other officer, body, or person.³ The grantee of the 52 Mo. 578; State v. Bank of Missouri, 45 Mo. 528; Delafield v. Illinois, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 192; Hodges v. Buffalo, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 110; Halstead v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 3 N. Y. 430; Demming v. Smith, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 332; McDonald v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 68 N. Y. 23; 23 Am. Rep. 144; Backman v. Charlestown, 42 N. H. 125; Day Land, etc., Co. v. State, 68 Tex. 526; State v. Hastings, 10 Wis. 518; Curtis v. U. S., 2 Ct. of Cl. 144; Lee v. Munroe, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 370.

1. Jones v. Muisbach, 26 Tex. 235; Houston v. Perry, 3 Tex. 390.

Where an officer claims rights by virtue of his office, he must show that he is legally qualified to act; that he is the officer de jure as well as de facto. Dillon v. Myers, Bright. (Pa.) 426.

The presumption that an officer has done his duty should not be allowed to sustain a vital jurisdictional fact; but where the main fact is made out by proof, and the question is one of time merely, it may be allowed to govern. Sheldon v. Wright, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 39.

It is not admissible to assume that one officer is in default, upon the mere presumption on behalf of another that the latter has performed his official duty. In such case the presumption applies with like force in favor of each. Weimer v. Bunbury, 30 Mich. 201; Houghton Co. v. Rees, 34 Mich. 481.

The acts and declarations of an alderman, not representing the city government or the board of health, and not acting in behalf of either, are not legal evidence to affect the rights or liabilities of the corporation. Mitchell v. Rockland, 41 Me. 363; 66 Am. Dec. 252.

2. Mallett v. Uncle Sam Gold, etc., Min. Co., 1 Nev. 188; 90 Am. Dec. 488; McDonald v. Prescott, 2 Nev. 109; 90 Am. Dec. 517; Gunn v. Howell, 27 Ala. 663; 62 Am. Dec. 785; Smith v. Andrews, 6 Cal. 654; Swain v.

Chase, 12 Cal. 283; Lowe v. Alexander, 15 Cal. 296; Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391; 94 Am. Dec. 742; Morrow v. Weed, 4 Iowa 77; 66 Am. Dec. 122; Cooper v. Sunderland, 3 Iowa 114; 66 Am. Dec. 52; Lowry v. Erwin, 6 Rob. (La.) 192; 39 Am. Dec. 556; Spear v. Carter, 1 Mich. 19; 48 Am. Dec. 688; Barnes v. Harris, 4 N. Y. 374; Bowman v. Russ, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 233; Roderigas v. East River Sav. Inst., 63 N. Y. 460; 20 Am. Rep. 555; Bloom v. Burdick, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 130; 37 Am. Dec. 299; Wheeler v. Raymond, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 314; Foot v. Stevens, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 485; Root v. McFerrin, 37 Miss. 17; 75 Am. Dec. 49; Piper v. Pearson, 2 Gray (Mass.) 120; 61 Am. Dec. 438; Reynolds v. Stansbury, 20 Ohio 344; 55 Am. Dec. 459; Adams v. Jeffries, 12 Ohio 253; 40 Am. Dec. 477; Horan v. Wahrenberger, 9 Tex. 313; 58 Am. Dec. 145.

Where the jurisdiction of an inferior and limited court is shown, the same presumption prevails in favor of its proceedings that prevails in favor of those of a superior court. But whatever intendment may be made in favor of the decision, there can be none of the right to decide. Cooper v. Sunderland, 3 Iowa 114; 66 Am. Dec. 52.

3. Birdsall v. Clark, 73 N. Y. 73; 29 Am. Rep. 105; People v. Davis, 15 Hun (N. Y.) 209; Lyon v. Jerome, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 485; 37 Am. Dec. 271; Brooklyn v. Brislin, 57 N. Y. 591; Thompson v. Schermerhorn, 6 N. Y. 92; 55 Am. Dec. 385; Davis v. Read, 65 N. Y. 566; In re Emigrant Industrial Sav. Bank, 75 N. Y. 388; Meuser v. Risdon, 36 Cal. 239; Oakland v. Carpenter, 13 Cal. 540; Jackson Co. v. Brush, 77 Ill. 59; Hydes v. Joyes, 4 Bush (Ky.) 464; State v. Hauser, 63 Ind. 155; Evansville, etc., R. Co. v. Evansville, 15 Ind. 395; State v. Bell, 34 Ohio St. 194; Thomson v. Boonville, power must himself or itself judge and decide, though subordinate officers or agents may be employed to carry such decision into effect.¹ Where the duties of a public officer are of a ministerial character, however, they may be discharged by deputy,² and the power to delegate the exercise of discretionary powers may be expressly conferred.³ Thus a governing body cannot deputize others to perform its governing functions,⁴ and judges must themselves discharge all the judicial duties of their offices,⁵ and the powers conferred upon the legislature to make 61 Mo. 282; Sheehan v. Gleeson, 46 Mo. 100; State v. Mayor, etc., of Paterson, 34 N. J. L. 163; State v. Fiske, 9 R. I. 94; Whyte v. Nashville, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 364; Clark v. Washington, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 54.

The revised statutes of Indiana of 1843, ch. 16, §§ 62 and 64, which authorize boards of county commissioners to enter into contracts in writing for building bridges over watercourses, and to appoint one or more persons to superintend the same, do not empower such commissioners to appoint agents to make such contracts. Potts v. Henderson, 2 Ind. 327.

1. Lyon v. Jerome, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 485; 37 Am. Dec. 271; Birdsall v. Clark, 73 N. Y. 73; 29 Am. Rep. 105; Hicks v. Dorn, 42 N. Y. 47; Edwards v. Watertown, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 426; Baltimore v. Porter, 18 Md. 284; St. Louis v. Clemens, 43 Mo. 395.

2. Abrams v. Ervin, 9 Iowa 87; Hope v. Sawyer, 14 Ill. 254; Ellison v. Stevenson, 6 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 275; Triplett v. Gill, 7 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 432; Attorney-Gen'l. v. Detroit, 58 Mich. 213; 55 Am. Rep. 675; Ruggles v. Collier, 43 Mo. 353; Birdsall v. Clark, 73 N. Y. 73; 29 Am. Rep. 105; Powell v. Tuttle, 3 N. Y. 396; People v. Davis, 15 Hun (N. Y.) 209; Downing v. Rugar, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 178; 34 Am. Dec. 223.

A part of a body of ministerial officers may delegate all their authority to others of their body to act as their attorneys, and the delegation need not be in writing; it is good though merely oral. Downing v. Rugar, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 178; 34 Am. Dec. 223; Gaul v. Groat, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 113; Tullock v. Cunningham, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 256.

A public officer may delegate to a deputy the right to subscribe the name of his principal, and the act of the deputy in the name of the principal within the scope of his authority is the act of his principal. Abrams v. Ervin, 9

Iowa 87, citing Parker v. Kett, 1 Ld. Raym. 658; Ellison v. Stevenson, 6 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 275; Triplett v. Gill, 7 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 432; Com. v. Arnold, 3 Litt. (Ky.) 316; Hope v. Sawyer, 14 Ill. 254.

Under the Maine statute entitled, "Rules of Construction," however, when the signature of a person is required, he must himself write it or make his mark. Chapman v. Limerick, 56 Me. 390.

A county assessor has implied authority to employ necessary clerks. Roberts v. People, 9 Colo. 458.

3. See Lyon v. Jerome, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 485; 37 Am. Dec. 271; State v. Mayor, etc., of Paterson, 34 N. J. L. 163.

4. Attorney-Gen'l. v. Detroit, 58 Mich. 213; 55 Am. Rep. 675; Edwards v. Watertown, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 426; Kramrath v. Albany, 53 Hun (N. Y.) 206.

But the governing body of a city may delegate its mere business functions. Kramrath v. Albany, 53 Hun (N. Y.) 206.

The power of the keeper of a prison to inflict corporal punishment upon a convict for misconduct cannot be delegated to contractors for convict labor. Cornell v. State, 6 Lea (Tenn.) 624. And see Smith v. State, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 744.

5. State v. Noble, 118 Ind. 350; Ward v. Farwell, 97 Ill. 593; Hall v. Marks, 34 Ill. 358; Hards v. Burton, 79 Ill. 504; Campbell v. Monroe Co., 118 Ind. 119; Wright v. Defrees, 8 Ind. 298; Waldo v. Wallace, 12 Ind. 569; Allor v. Wayne Co., 43 Mich. 76; Chandler v. Nash, 5 Mich. 409; St. Paul, etc., R. Co. v. Gardner, 19 Minn. 132; 18 Am. Rep. 334; State v. Jefferson, 66 N. Car. 309; Johnson v. Wallace, 7 Ohio, pt. 2, 62; Winchester v. Ayres, 4 Greene (Iowa) 104; State v. Phillips, 27 La. Ann. 663; King v. Hopkins, 57 N. H. 334; Van Slyke v.

laws cannot be delegated by that department to any other body or authority.¹ The body exercising the general legislative functions of the government, however, may delegate to municipal and other public corporations some portion of its own powers for local purposes,² the general rule being that it may authorize Trempealeau, 39 Wis. 390; Conroe v. Bull, 7 Wis. 408; Gough v. Dorsey, 27 Wis. 119; Milwaukee Industrial School v. Milwaukee Co., 40 Wis. 328.

Even the consent of the parties will not authorize a judge to delegate any portion of his judicial power to another. Hoagland v. Creed, 81 Ill. 506; Andrews v. Beck, 23 Tex. 455.

The people have a right to the judgment of those whom they have made judges, and this right the judges cannot surrender, if they would, without a flagrant breach of a sworn duty. The trust is a personal one, inalienable, and vested in the person selected by the people; and it cannot be delegated by the judges themselves or by any one else for them. State v. Noble, 118 Ind. 350; Van Slyke v. Trempealeau, 39 Wis. 390; 20 Am. Rep. 50.

1. Cooley Const. Lim. (6th ed.) 137; Santo v. State, 2 Iowa 165; 63 Am. Dec. 487; State v. Geebrick, 5 Iowa 591; State v. Weir, 33 Iowa 134; 11 Am. Rep. 115; Ex parte Wall, 48 Cal. 279; 17 Am. Rep. 425; Rice v. Foster, 4 Harr. (Del.) 479; People v. Collins, 3 Mich. 343; Farnsworth Co. v. Lisbon, 62 Me. 451; Brewer Brick Co. v. Brewer, 62 Me. 62; Ruggles v. Collier, 43 Mo. 353; State v. Wilcox, 45 Mo. 458; State v. Hudson Co., 37 N. J. L. 269; People v. Stout, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 343; State v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 3 Duer (N. Y.) 119; Thorne v. Cramer, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 112; Bradley v. Baxter, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 122; Barto v. Himrod, 8 N. Y. 483; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clinton Co., 1 Ohio St. 77; Com. v. M'Williams, 11 Pa. St. 61; Parker v. Com., 6 Pa. St. 507; 47 Am. Dec. 480; Com. v. Judges, 8 Pa. St. 391; Com. v. Painter, 10 Pa. St. 214; Locke's Appeal, 72 Pa. St. 491; Auditor v. Holland, 14 Bush (Ky.) 147; State v. Simons, 32 Minn. 540; Maize v. State, 4 Ind. 343; Meshmeier v. State, 11 Ind. 482; State v. Copeland, 3 R. I. 33; State v. Swisher, 17 Tex. 441; Willis v. Owen, 43 Tex. 41; State v. Parker, 26 Vt. 357; In re Oliver, 17 Wis. 681; Little v. Barreme, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 170; People's R. Co. v. Memphis R. Co., 10 Wall. (U. S.) 38; Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; Bank of U. S. v. Halstead, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 51. And see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 3, p. 670.

This inability arises no less from the joint principle applicable to every delegated power, requiring knowledge, discretion, and rectitude in its exercise, than from the positive provisions of the constitution itself. The people in whom the power resided have voluntarily relinquished its exercise, and have positively ordained that it shall be vested in the assembly. To allow the general assembly to cast it back upon them would be to subvert the constitution, and change its distribution of powers, without their action or consent. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clinton Co., 1 Ohio St. 77.

A law declaring an offense or providing a punishment, or repealing an existing law, on condition that the governor, or any other individual should consent to it, is plainly unconstitutional. It is the naked veto power. Rice v. Foster, 4 Harr. (Del.) 479; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clinton Co., 1 Ohio St. 77.

To repeal a law requires the same exercise of power as to enact it, and the one can no more be delegated than the other. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clinton Co., 1 Ohio St. 77.

2. Oakland v. Carpentier, 13 Cal. 540; Bridgeport v. Housatonic R. Co., 15 Conn. 475; Richland v. Lawrence Co., 12 Ill. 1; Talbot v. Dent, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 526; Ruggles v. Collier, 43 Mo. 353; St. Louis v. Clemens, 43 Mo. 395; People v. Pinckney, 32 N. Y. 377; Com. v. M'Williams, 11 Pa. St. 61; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clinton Co., 1 Ohio St. 77; Nicol v. Mayor, etc., of Nashville, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 252; Tilley v. Savannah, etc., R. Co., 5 Fed. Rep. 641.

A law altering, abridging, or enlarging the vested powers of corporations aggregate, subject to the consent of the said corporation, or a law giving to school districts a portion of the school fund, on condition that said districts will raise an equivalent or proporothers to do things which it might properly, yet cannot understandingly or advantageously do itself,¹ though these delegated powers are regarded as trusts confided in the hands in which they are placed and not subject to be delegated by the repositories,² and a legislature may make a law which leaves it to the people or to a municipality or other body or officer to determine some fact or state of things upon which the action of the law may depend.³

tional sum, are instances of proper conditional legislation, even though the assent of the corporators in one case to the change of their charter, or of the district, in the other, to accept the donation and comply with its terms, should be signified by a majority vote. Rice v. Foster, 4 Harr. (Del.) 479; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clinton Co., 1 Ohio St. 77.

1. Tilley v. Savannah, etc., R. Co., 5 Fed. Rep. 641; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clinton Co., 1 Ohio St. 77; State v. Parker, 26 Vt. 357; Smith v. Janesville, 26 Wis. 291.

In accomplishing the lawful purposes of legislation, the choice of means adopted to the end proposed and not prohibited by the constitution, must be left exclusively to the discretion of the legislative body; and the incorporation of private companies for the construction of works of a public character is one of the lawful means that may be employed. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clinton Co., 1 Ohio St. 77.

2. Oakland v. Carpentier, 13 Cal. 540; Menser v. Risdon, 36 Cal. 239; Smith v. Morse, 2 Cal. 524; Minneapolis Gas Light Co. v. Minneapolis, 36 Minn. 159; Darling v. St. Paul, 19 Minn. 389; Day v. Green, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 433; State v. Hauser, 63 Ind. 155; Evansville, etc., R. Co. v. Evansville, 15 Ind. 395; Mullarky v. Cedar Falls, 19 Iowa 21; Maxwell v. Bay City Bridge Co., 41 Mich. 453; Gale v. Kalamazoo, 23 Mich. 344; 9 Am. Rep. 80; Ruggles v. Collier, 43 Mo. 353; Matthews v. Alexandria, 68 Mo. 115; 30 Am. Rep. 776; St. Louis v. Clemens, 43 Mo. 395; State v. Mayor, etc., of Paterson, 34 N. J. L. 163; State v. Gloucester Co., 50 N. J. L. 585; Brooklyn v. Breslin, 57 N. Y. 591; Milhaus v. Sharp, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 435; Thompson v. Schermerhorn, 6 N. Y. 92; 55 Am. Dec. 385; State v. Jersey City, 25 N. J. L. 309; State v. Bell, 34 Ohio St. 194; Whyte v. Nashville, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 364; Lord v. Oconto, 47 Wis. 386; Lauenstein v. Fond du Lac, 28

Wis. 336; Clark v. Washington, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 40.

Where a city is authorized by its charter to erect, maintain and regulate public wharves and to regulate wharfage, it cannot lease its wharf or empower any one else to fix its rates of wharfage. Matthews v. Alexandria, 68 Mo. 115; 30 Am. Rep. 776.

Cases in which Congress has delegated its powers to the President bear no analogy to those in which a city council delegates power to a mayor. In the one case, by every rule of construction, the corporation is confined within the limits of its chartered powers, in the other case the government is vested with the attributes of sovereignty, and always has resorted and must resort to many things lying within the vast domain of implied power. Ruggles v. Collier, 43 Mo. 353.

3. Rahrer's Case, 140 U. S. 561; Lothrop v. Stedman, 42 Conn. 583; Walton v. Greenwood, 60 Me. 356; Burlington v. Leebrick, 43 Iowa 252; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Dey, 4 Ry. & Corp. L. J. (Ill.) 465; Caldwell v. Reynolds, 10 Ill. 1; State v. Kirkley, 29 Md. 85; Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. Clunet, 23 Md. 449; Talbot v. Dent, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 526; Peck v. Weddell, 17 Ohio St. 271; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clinton Co., 1 Ohio St. 77; State v. Parker, 26 Vt. 357; State v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 38 Minn. 281; Bull v. Read, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 78; Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 46; Cargo of the Aurora v. U. S., 7 Cranch (U. S.) 382.

The true distinction is between delegation of power to make the law, which necessarily involves a discretion as to what it shall be, and conferring an authority or discretion as to its execution to be exercised under and in pursuance of the law. The first cannot be done: to the latter, no valid objection can be made. Tilley v. Savannah, etc., R. Co., 5 Fed. Rep. 641; and see Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clinton Co., 1 Ohio St. 77.

b. EXERCISE OF POWER BY DEPUTY.—See DEPUTY.¹

c. EXERCISE OF JOINT AUTHORITY.—Where a body or board of officers is constituted by law to perform a trust for the public or to execute a power or perform a duty prescribed by law, it is not necessary that all should concur in the act done; the act of the majority is the act of the body.²

All of the persons to whom the exercise of the power is committed, however, must confer and act together,³ but where all have due notice of the time and place of meeting in the manner prescribed

A law must be complete when it comes from the hands of the legislature; its operation, however, may be contingent. Home Ins. Co. v. Swigert, 104 Ill. 653; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Welch, 29 Kan. 672.

1. Vol. 5, p. 623.

2. Williams v. School District, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 75; 32 Am. Dec. 243; First Nat. Bank v. Mt. Tabor, 52 Vt. 87; 36 Am. Rep. 734; Gorton v. Hurlburt, 22 Conn. 178; Louk v. Woods, 15 Ill. 256; Caldwell v. Harrison, 11 Ala. 755; State v. Porter, 113 Ind. 79; Curtis v. Portland, 59 Me. 383; Hanson v. Dexter, 36 Me. 516; Plymouth v. Plymouth Co., 16 Gray (Mass.) 341; George v. School District, 6 Met. (Mass.) 497; Jones v. Andover, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 59; Kingsbury v. Centre School District, 12 Met. (Mass.) 99; Scott v. Detroit, etc., Soc., 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 119; Despatch Line v. Bellamy Mfg. Co., 12 N. H. 205; 37 Am. Dec. 203; State v. Jersey City, 27 N. J. L. 493; Jewett v. Alton, 7 N. H. 253; Parrott v. Knickerbocker, 38 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 508; In re Palmer, 31 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 43; In re Beekman's Petition, 31 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 17; Harris v. Whitney, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 175; People v. Board of Supervisors, 10 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 233; 18 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 152; Whitford v. Bissell, 14 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 302; Johnson v. Dodd, 56 N. Y. 76; Board of Excise v. Sackrider, 35 N. Y. 154; Pell v. Ulmar, 18 N. Y. 139; People v. Chenango Co., 11 N. Y. 563; Olmstead v. Elder, 5 N. Y. 144; Oakley v. Aspinwall, 3 N. Y. 565; Powell v. Tuttle, 3 N. Y. 396; People v. Nichols, 52 N. Y. 478; 11 Am. Rep. 735; Downing v. Rugar, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 178; 34 Am. Dec. 223; Crocker v. Crane, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 211; 34 Am. Dec. 228; Whiteside v. People, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 635; Woolsey v. Tompkins, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 324; Field v. Field, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 394; Babcock v. Lamb, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 238; Ex parte Rogers, 7 Cow. (N.

Y.) 526; McCoy v. Curtice, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 17; Horton v. Garrison, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 176; People v. Walker, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 304; Keeler v. Frost, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 400; Miller v. Garlock, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 157; Doolittle v. Doolittle, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 313; Dougherty v. Hope, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 253; Lee v. Parry, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 125; L'Amoureux v. O'Rourke, 2 Keyes (N. Y.) 499; White v. Lester, 1 Keyes (N. Y.) 316; Gildersleeve v. Board of Education, 17 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 201; Austin v. Helms, 65 N. Car. 560; State v. King, 4 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 521; McCready v. Guardians of the Poor, 9 S. & R. (Pa.) 94; 11 Am. Dec. 667; Jefferson Co. v. Slagel, 66 Pa. St. 202; Com. v. Lecky, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 166; Com. v. Comrs., 9 Watts (Pa.) 466; Cooper v. Lamporter Township, 8 Watts (Pa.) 125; Bathmore Turnpike, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 481; Walker v. Rogan, 1 Wis. 597; Cooley v. O'Conner, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 391; Curtis v. Butler Co., 24 How. (U. S.) 435.

A contract made by county commissioners must be made by the board at a regular session of their court in order to be binding on the county. Potts v. Henderson, 2 Ind. 327.

But where the majority of an elective body protest against the election of a proposed candidate to office, and do not propose another candidate, the minority may elect the candidate. Hendrickson v. Decow, 1 N. J. Eq. 577.

3. Downing v. Rugar, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 178; 34 Am. Dec. 223; Gorton v. Hurlburt, 22 Conn. 178; Martin v. Lemon, 26 Conn. 192; First Nat. Bank v. Mt. Tabor, 52 Vt. 87; 36 Am. Rep. 734; Louk v. Woods, 15 Ill. 256; People v. Walker, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 304; 2 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 421; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Staats, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 570; Parrot v. Knickerbocker, 8 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 234; 38 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 508; People v. Board of Supervisors, 10 Abb. Pr. (N.

by law or by the rules and regulations of the body, or, in the absence of regulations, if reasonable notice be given, and no unfair means are used to prevent all from attending and participating in the proceedings, it is no objection that all the members do not attend if there be a quorum.¹ And where an act is done by a majority of those to whom the power is confided, the presence and concurrence, or notice to and refusal to act, of the rest will be presumed until the contrary appears.² Where the statute con-

Y.) 233; 18 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 152; Crocker v. Crane, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 211; 34 Am. Dec. 228; Johnson v. Dodd, 56 N. Y. 76; Schuyler v. Marsh, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 355. And see Curtis v. Portland, 59 Me. 483; Schenck v. Peay, 1 Woolw. (U. S.) 175; Ex parte Rogers, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 526; Perry v. Tynen, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 140; Moore v. Ewing, 1 N. J. L. 144; 1 Am. Dec. 195; Crocker v. Crane, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 211; 34 Am. Dec. 228.

Statutes conferring powers upon officers relative to the divestiture of estates are construed strictly, and when such powers are conferred upon a number to act collectively it is an indication that the association, if not the concurrence, of all is necessary. Pell v. Ulmar, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 500.

The county court of Harrison county, Kentucky, unless composed of a majority of the justices, cannot lay a charge upon the county for any one object, not even the erection of county buildings, exceeding fifty dollars. Harrison Co. Ct. v. Smith, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 155.

When a general power is conferred upon two or more bodies, they must all meet for consultation and deliberation; though when they have done so the vote of the majority controls, even though one of the bodies should leave before the vote is taken. Gildersleeve v. Board of Education, 17 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 210.

1. Williams v. School District No. 1, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 75; Horton v. Garrison, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 176; First Nat. Bank v. Mt. Tabor, 52 Vt. 87; 36 Am. Rep. 734; Beekman's Petition, 1 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 449; 31 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 16; In re Palmer, 31 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 42; People v. Board of Supervisors, 10 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 233; 18 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 152.

The dispatch of public business is not to be prevented, and the interest of the public is not to suffer, because one or more members after being notified are unable to or neglect to attend. If all have been duly notified, it is a meeting of all the persons, and if a majority of the whole number attend, it is competent for that majority to do any act, or exercise any power confided by law to the body collectively, as respects those who cannot, who neglect to, or who refuse to attend. It is the same as if they had attended and dissented from the act of those who were present. Gildersleeve v. Board of Education, 17 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 201; Horton v. Garrison, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 176.

Taking part in the proceedings is a waiver of notice of the meeting. Mitchell Co. v. Horton, 75 Iowa 271.

The general rule is that to make a quorum of a select and definite body of men, a majority at least, must be present, and if the body be indefinite in number, then the majority of those who appear at a regular meeting constitute a body competent to transact business. People v. Walker, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 304; Field v. Field, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 394; see Crocker v. Crane, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 211; 34 Am. Dec. 228.

2. McCoy v. Curtice, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 17; 24 Am. Dec. 113, note; Yates v. Russell, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 468; Cole v. Hall, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 625; Board of Excise v. Sacridier, 35 N. Y. 154; People v. Palmer, 52 N. Y. 87; Downing v. Rugar, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 178; 34 Am. Dec. 223; Woolsey v. Tompkins, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 324; People v. Whiteside, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 15; Doughty v. Hope, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 253; Miller v. Garlock, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 157; Doolittle v. Doolittle, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 313; Tucker v. Rankin, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 480; Perry v. Tynen, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 137; Oakley v. Aspinwall, 3 N. Y. 565; Gildersleeve v. Board of Education, 17 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 210; Saratoga Co. v. Doherty, 16 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 49; First Nat. Bank v. Mt. Tabor, 52 Vt. 87; 36 Am. Rep. 734; First Nat. Bank v. Concord, 50 Vt. 257.

Where special provision is made by ferring the power, in terms requires the presence and concurrence of all, all must be present.¹ Where there are only two, nothing can be done without the consent of both,² and where the law requires a designated number of members to constitute a board, if a less number qualify and enter upon the discharge of the duties of their offices, they are not a board and can do nothing.³

The members composing a board have no power to act as such except when together in session,⁴ and they will not be permitted to make any agreement among themselves, or with others, by authorizing a majority to act, when all have notice of the meeting and its objects, the proceedings must show that all met and deliberated upon the subject-matter, or that those absent were duly notified of the meeting and failed to attend. And if such facts do not appear, other proceedings are void and cannot be cured by parol evidence, showing that the absent officers were duly notified and failed to attend. Stewart v. Wallis, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 344; People v. Hynds, 30 N. Y. 470; Marble v. Whitney, 28 N. Y. 297; People v. Williams, 36 N. Y. 441.

1. First Nat. Bank v. Mt. Tabor, 52 Vt. 87; 36 Am. Rep. 734; Pulaski Co. v. Lincoln, 9 Ark. 320; People v. Coghill, 47 Cal. 361; Petrie v. Doe, 30 Miss. 698; Powell v. Tuttle, 3 N. Y. 396; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Staats, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 570; North Carolina R. Co. v. Sweepson, 71 N. Car. 350, and see People v. Walker, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 304.

Where the power of appointment of an officer is given by the statute to two distinct bodies, who are to assemble in separate chambers, and make separate nominations, and then to meet together, and, on disagreement, to proceed to an election by joint ballot, no election is valid unless both bodies assent to go into joint meeting for that purpose, and actually attend. People v. Whiteside, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 9; 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 634.

2. Downing v. Rugar, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 178; 34 Am. Dec. 223; Gildersleeve v. Board of Education, 17 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 201; Pell v. Ulmar, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 500; Cooper v. Lampeter Township, 8 Watts (Pa.) 128.

Where, by the provisions of a statute, two are required to act, except in certain cases, the law does not presume that the case contemplated by the exception exists, where one alone can act, but the contrary. Hancock Co. v. Eastern River Lock, etc., Co., 20 Me. 72.

Where, to prevent a failure of justice, it is indispensable that one should act alone, without conferring with the other, he may do so and the act will be valid. Gildersleeve v. Board of Education, 17 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 201; Downing v. Rugar, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 178; 34 Am. Dec. 223.

The policy of the law is to guard against the failure of a public service, and a grant of power in the nature of a public office to several, does not become void upon the death or disability of one or more. People v. Palmer, 52 N. Y. 87.

3. Schenck v. Peay, 1 Woolw. (U. S.) 175; Williamsburg v. Lord, 51 Me. 599; People v. Hynds, 30 N. Y. 470; Giter v. Comrs., 1 Bay (S. Car.) 354; 1 Am. Dec. 621.

In Williamsburg v. Lord, 51 Me. 600, the court by Clifford, J., said: "It appears that at the annual meeting, the town chose three selectmen and assessors. But it does not appear that one of them was ever sworn or acted as one of the assessors. The town for that year had only two assessors, one less than the law required. The two who professed to act were not the majority of the three, because there never were three chosen and qualified. Two assessors are not authorized to assess a tax when they only have been qualified."

In Gildersleeve v. Board of Education, 17 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 201, the court by Daly, F. J., said: "If the public duty is intrusted to three, and one dies or is disqualified, I doubt if the others can act alone, as in the event of division of opinion, there can be no decision. But if there is more than three remaining, the majority can decide; and if all qualified to act are notified, as was the case here, an act done by the majority of them is, in my judgment, valid."

4. McCortle v. Bates, 29 Ohio St. 419; 23 Am. Rep. 758; Sioux City v. Weare, 59 Iowa 95; Strafford v. Welch, 59 N. H. 46; State v. King, 4 Dev. & which their public action is to be, or may be, restrained or embarrassed, or its freedom in any wise affected or impaired,¹ though action irregularly taken by a part may be confirmed at a full meeting of the board.²

d. IN WHOSE NAME EXERCISED.—(1) By Officer.—Public policy requires that an agent of the State should make his contracts and transact his business, not in his own name, but in the name of the State,³ and that all securities he may receive should be made payable to the State,⁴ and that all suits brought by him in his official capacity should be brought in the name of the State.⁵ All writs and process are usually required to run in the name of the State;⁶ process which does not so run, under statutory or constitutional provisions requiring it, being held to be void.⁷

B. (N. Car.) 521. And see Haddam v. East Lyme, 54 Conn. 34; Stockton v. Creanor, 45 Cal. 643.

An act performed by a board within the scope of their authority, is valid and binding, although not made at the office provided for their use. Jefferson Co. v. Slagle, 66 Pa. St. 202.

Where a by-law of a city prohibits the moving of buildings through the public streets, without a license granted by the mayor and aldermen, the board of aldermen cannot delegate to the mayor alone the power to grant such license. Day v. Green, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 433.

A city ordinance, providing that the pay of police officers shall be fixed by the mayor and aldermen, will not warrant the aldermen in denying to police officers, lawfully holding their offices, all pay whatever, without the concurrence of the mayor. Murphy v. Webster, 131 Mass. 482.

1. McCortle v. Bates, 29 Ohio St. 419; 23 Am. Dec. 758.

An agreement by one commissioner, acting without the authority of the board, to waive the objection arising from interest in the officer who summons a jury to assess damages, does not bind the county. Merrill v. Berkshire, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 269.

A statute requiring the appointment of a town collector pro tempore to be made by a writing under the hands of the selectmen, is not satisfied by a writing with the names of all written upon it by one selectman, in the absence of the others, they having agreed that the party should be appointed; and a collector thus appointed cannot recover compensation for his services in collecting the taxes. Phelon v. Granville, 140 Mass. 386.

2. In re Pearsall, 9 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 203.

3. Irish v. Webster, 5 Me. 171; Hunter v. Field, 20 Ohio 340.

4. Irish v. Webster, 5 Me. 171; Hunter v. Field, 20 Ohio 340.

5. Hunter v. Field, 20 Ohio 340; Irish v. Webster, 5 Me. 171; Gilmore v. Pope, 5 Mass. 491.

A suit by justices of the county court is, in legal effect, a suit by the county, which is a public corporation, and it is this corporation that is the party to the record. The justices have no private right in suit, and their names may be rejected as surplusage, and any one of the justices is, in such a case, a competent witness. Ezell v. Giles Co., 3 Head (Tenn.) 583.

In South Carolina, where an action was brought for the benefit of another in the name of a public officer, who resigns pending the action, and a successor is appointed, his resignation need not be suggested on the record and his successor substituted. The practice is to prosecute the suit in the name of the incumbent, at the time the action is brought, and he is not liable for costs nor can he release the action. Clowney v. Foot, 1 Hill (S. Car.) 421.

6. Ferris v. Crow, 10 Ill. 96; Fowler v. Watson, 4 Mo. 27; Little v. Little, 5 Mo. 227; 32 Am. Dec. 317; Gilbreath v. Kuykendall, 1 Ark. 50; Estill v. Baily, 1 Ark. 131. And see Hutchins v. Edson, 1 N. H. 139.

In Ferris v. Crow, 10 Ill. 96, it was held that a fee bill answers to the meaning of writ or process in law, and has the effect of an execution, but to have such effect it must run in the name of the people of the State.

7. Fowler v. Watson, 4 Mo. 27; Little v. Little, 5 Mo. 227; 32 Am. Dec.

(2) By Deputy—(See also DEPUTY).¹—The act of a deputy is, in law, the act of his principal, and such act is a nullity unless done in the name of, and by the authority of, his principal;² but where the deputy is an officer known to the law whose office is recognized by statute, his acts may be certified in his own name with the addition of his proper official designation.³ And a deputy authorized by law to execute the duties of the office during the sickness or necessary absence of the principal officer may act in his own name when the circumstances exist which authorize him to act at all.⁴

317: Estill v. Bailey, 1 Ark. 131; Gilbreath v. Kuykendall, 1 Ark. 50, Ferris v. Crow, 10 Ill. 96.

In Little v. Little, 5 Mo. 227; 32 Am. Dec. 317, it was held that suit instituted by process that does not run in the name of the State, may be dismissed upon motion of the defendant, though prior to the motion he has appeared in the action for other purposes, and though the statute authorizes suits to be instituted, either by the voluntary appearance and agreement of the parties, or by process. But in Pixley v. Winchell, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 366; 17 Am. Dec. 525, it was held that the appearance of the defendant will not be set aside, though the process by which the action was instituted is absolutely void, for by his appearance he is regularly in court, whether there was any process or not.

In Michigan the warrant of a supervisor to a township treasurer, authorizing him to collect taxes, is not void by reason of not being in the name of the people of the State of Michigan. The constitutional provision in respect to process applies only to process issued by courts or some judicial officer. Tweed v. Metcalf, 4 Mich. 579; Wisner v. Davenport, 5 Mich. 501.

1. Vol. 5, p. 623.

2. Joyce v. Joyce, 5 Cal. 449; Lewes v. Thompson, 3 Cal. 266; Rowley v. Howard, 23 Cal. 401; Glencoe v. Owen, 78 Ill. 382; Ryan v. Eads, 1 Ill. 217; Ditch v. Edwards, 2 Ill. 127; 26 Am. Dec. 414; Evans v. Wilder, 7 Mo. 359; Simonds v. Catlin, 2 Cal. (N. Y.) 61; Ferguson v. Lee, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 258; Anderson v. Brown, 9 Ohio 151; Jordan v. Terry, 33 Tex. 680; Arnold v. Scott, 39 Tex. 378; Graves v. Robertson, 22 Tex. 130.

Whatever official act is done by a deputy should be done in the name of his principal and not in the name of the deputy. The authority given by law to a ministerial officer is given to the incumbent of the office. Authority is not given to the deputy, but to the principal, and is exercised by the principal, either by himself or his deputy. Talbot v. Hooser, 12 Bush (Ky.) 408.

Where a summons is served by a special deputy, however, by appointment indorsed thereon, the return which is to be made on their oath, need not be made in the name of the sheriff. Glencoe v. Owen, 78 Ill. 382.

3. Miller v. Alexander, 13 Tex. 497; 45 Am. Dec. 73; Towns v. Harris, 13 Tex. 507; Westbrook v. Miller, 56 Mich. 148; People v. Johr, 22 Mich. 461; Wheeler v. Wilkins, 19 Mich. 78; Fells v. Barbour, 58 Mich. 49; De Villers v. Prioleau, 2 McCord (S. Car.) 144; City Council v. Price, 1 Nott & M. (S. Car.) 300; Eastman v. Curtis, 4 Vt. 616.

Under the Michigan statute requiring bail bonds for appearance to be executed to the officer making the arrest, a bond running to the undersheriff when that officer made the orders, is not thereby rendered invalid. Wilcox v. Ismon, 34 Mich. 268.

In Westbrook v. Miller, 56 Mich. 148, the court, by Cooley, J., said: "If the question were entirely new and were presented as a question as to the most proper and correct method of executing the duty by the deputy, we should say unhesitatingly that the proper method would be for the deputy to perform the act in the name of his principal. But this is matter of form rather than that of substance, and the rights neither of the State nor of any individual are greater or less because of one form being adopted rather than the other."

4. Westbrook v. Miller, 56 Mich. 148; Calendar v. Olcott, 1 Mich. 344; Drennan v. Herzog, 56 Mich. 467;

3. Disqualification to Act—a. OF MINISTERIAL OFFICERS.—Ministerial officers are incapable of acting officially, where by certain relations to either party an undue partiality or interest may be apprehended.¹ No officer who is interested in a suit can serve any process appertaining to it from the commencement to the conclusion.² But to disqualify an officer to execute a writ, he must have been a party to the action of which the writ was a

Allen v. Hazen, 26 Mich. 142; People v. Sutherland, 41 Mich. 177.

Under the statute of Illinois, upon the death of a sheriff, the authority of a deputy continues until a successor is qualified. If the sheriff is dead, then the deputy has direct authority to serve a summons from the statute, and not a derivative authority from the sheriff; and having no principal in whose name he could return the process, he must necessarily sign the return in his own name, and in the character which the statute has given him. Timmerman v. Phelps, 27 Ill. 496.

Under the New York statute, on the death of a sheriff, the powers of the under-sheriff to act in the name of the sheriff survive, for the benefit of the parties interested in the execution of the process, delivered to the sheriff before his decease; and he may proceed to act as under-sheriff in the name of the deceased sheriff, by virtue of the provisions of the statute. Ward v. Storey, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 120.

1. Gage v. Graffam, 11 Mass. 181; Edwards v. Estell, 48 Cal. 194; Stevenson v. Bay City, 26 Mich. 44; Clute v. Barron, 2 Mich. 192; Dwight v. Blackmar, 2 Mich. 330; 57 Am. Dec. 130.

The law wisely foreseeing that the minister of justice should be freed as far as practicable from all the improper bias which may result from self-interest, has declared that no man shall be his own officer, and that no one shall in his own person, and by his own hand, do himself right by legal process. Singletary v. Carter, 1 Bailey (S. Car.) 467; 21 Am. Dec. 480.

Public policy requires that officers chosen to locate and survey public lands should not be permitted to speculate in them, or to acquire interest in them which would present to such officers the temptation to take advantage of the information which their official positions enabled them to acquire, to the detriment of holders of certificates generally. A contract made by a deputy surveyor, with the owner of the land certificate therefor, to locate the same and pay all expenses and obtain a patent, is void, and the fact that there was something to be done after the expiration of his term of office does not entitle him to have the contract enforced. Wills v. Abbé, 27 Tex. 202; and see Flanikin v. Fokes, 15 Tex. 180; De Leon v. White, 9 Tex. 598.

Objection when Taken.—It is too late to object to a commissioner, appointed by special statute to award damages for property taken in laying out a highway, upon the ground of personal interest, upon a motion to confirm a report of such commissioners. Such objection is maintainable only on the hearing of the application for their appointment, and from an omission to make it at that time a consent or a waiver of the objection will be inferred. In re Southern Boulevard, 3 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 447.

2. Singletary v. Carter, 1 Bailey (S. Car.) 467; 21 Am. Dec. 480; Boykin v. Edwards, 21 Ala. 261; Woods v. Gilson, 17 Ill. 218; Filkins v. O'Sullivan, 79 Ill. 524; Chambers v. Thomas, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 536; Morton v. Crane, 39 Mich. 526.

Officers are not to serve writs upon themselves. The sheriff and his deputies constitute, in legal analogy, one office and one officer, but the deputy keeper of a jail is not in the same relation to the office of sheriff. Gage v. Graffam, 11 Mass. 181.

A person deputized by the sheriff to serve a writ, bearing the same name as that of one of the plaintiff's in an action, and, nothing appearing to the contrary, will be presumed to be the party plaintiff himself from identity of names. Filkins v. O'Sullivan, 79 Ill. 524; Brown v. Metz, 33 Ill. 339; 85 Am. Dec. 277.

In New York it was formerly held that an officer who is plaintiff in an action might serve his own writ. Bennet v. Fuller, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 486; Tuttle v. Hunt, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 436; Putnam v. Man, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 202; 20 Am. Dec. 686; Mills v. Young, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 314. But that he could not consequence, or he must have had a direct interest in, or right to, the moneys to be made by its execution.¹ And where no provision has been made for the discharge of the duty in which he is interested, by any other officer, the interested officer may discharge it.²

b. OF JUDICIAL OFFICERS.—See JUDGE.³

c. OF GOVERNMENTAL OR POLITICAL OFFICERS.—Members of a legislative body or municipal board are disqualified to vote on propositions in which they have a direct pecuniary interest adverse to the State or municipality which they represent.⁴

4. Ratification of Authority.—(See also AGENCY⁵).—The doctrine of estoppel to deny the authority of an agent arising from taking and holding the benefits derived from its exercise applies as well to the public and to public corporations as to private corporations and individuals,⁶ the subsequent ratification of an execute final process in his own favor. Mills v. Young, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 314. By the New York Code of Civ. Proc., § 425, however, it is provided that a "summons may be served by any person other than the party to the action, except where it is otherwise specially prescribed by law."

In Parmalee v. Loomis, 24 Mich. 242, it was held that service by an officer of a summons in his own favor was an irregularity only.

In Gage v. Graffam, 11 Mass. 181, it was held that process served by a deputy sheriff, where another deputy of the same sheriff is a party, is not for that cause void, but that on motion or plea, the proceedings will be set aside, though if the defendant appears and answers, the irregularity is waived.

1. Woods v. Gilson, 17 Ill. 218; Chambers v. Thomas, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 536; People v. Wheeler, 21 N. Y. 82; People v. Kingston, 101 N. Y. 82; Foot v. Stiles, 57 N. Y. 399.

The sheriff can execute a writ against his deputy, but the deputy cannot execute one against the sheriff. The sheriff acts in his own name and by virtue of his official authority, while the deputy acts in the name of the sheriff and by virtue of the authority from him derived. Ford v. Dyer, 26 Miss. 243.

A sale of canal land by the treasurer of the board of canal commissioners, whose duty it was to sell the same for a price fixed by law made to himself, is not void and will pass title if not avoided by the State. The price provided by law being paid, the State is not injured. People v. Force, 100 Ill. 549.

A sheriff who is a member of a banking corporation may serve process thereon, because not being personally liable, he is not a party in the action. Adams v. Wiscasset Bank, 1 Me. 361; 10 Am. Dec. 88.

2. Trimmier v. Winsmith, 23 S. Car. 449.

In Evans v. Etheridge, 96 N. Car. 42, it was held that in the absence of statutory regulations, a party is only prohibited from acting in his own case, when he exercises some judicial as distinguished from a ministerial office, and that a clerk of the superior court was authorized by law to issue a warrant of attachment in an action in which he is plaintiff; and that it had always been the practice in North Carolina for clerks to issue process either for or against themselves.

Though after the commencement of an action against a city, plaintiff's attorney becomes mayor, he may still appear for plaintiff on the trial. McKeigue v. Janesville, 68 Wis. 50.

3. Vol. 12, p. 2.

4. Oconto Co. v. Hall, 47 Wis. 208.

This rule is founded upon principles of national justice and sound public policy, and perhaps the only recognized exception to it is where the body or board is permitted to fix the compensation of its members. This exception goes upon the necessity of the case and the fact that all of the members are equally interested. Oconto Co. v. Hall, 47 Wis. 208.

5. Vol. 1, p. 331.

6. San Francisco Gas Co. v. San Francisco, 9 Cal. 453; Ross v. Madison, 1 Ind. 281; Peterson v. Mayor, etc., of unauthorized act by a superior officer or governing body within his or its powers and according to the method pointed out by law binding the political division or public corporation for which the act was done as effectually as an employment in advance would have done.¹ This may be effected when the act is not

N. Y., 17 N. Y. 449; Hodges v. Buffalo, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 110; State v. Buffalo, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 434; Kiley v. Forsee, 57 Mo. 390; Mills v. Gleason, 11 Wis. 470; 78 Am. Dec. 721; Marshall Co. v. Schenck, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 772; Clark v. Washington, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 40; and see Backman v. Charlestown, 42 N. H. 125; Delafield v. Illinois, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 193.

A ratification like the ratification of the act of a private agent, is equivalent to previous authority. McCracken v. San Francisco, 16 Cal. 591; Marshall Co. v. Schenck, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 772; Clarke v. Lyon Co., 8 Nev. 181; McMillen v. Boyles, 6 Iowa 304; Bissell v. Jeffersonville, 24 How. (U. S.) 287; and is retroactive, relating back to the time of the performance of the act in question. Day Land, etc., Co. v. State, 68 Tex. 521. And to be effective, a ratification must be made with full knowledge of all the facts relating to the act ratified. McCracken v. San Francisco, 16 Cal. 591; Clark v. Lyon Co., 8 Nev. 181; Dickinson v. Conway, 12 Allen (Mass.) 487; Combs v. Scott, 12 Gray (Mass.) 493; and see Hasbrouck v. Milwaukee, 21 Wis. 219; Wilhelm v. Cedar Co., 50 Iowa 254; Wadleigh v. Sutton, 6 N. H. 15; Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. Reynolds, 20 Md. 1; 83 Am. Dec. 535.

Ratification of an act of an agent, which was unauthorized, cannot be held valid and binding, where the person sought to be charged has misapprehended or mistaken material facts, although he may have wholly omitted to make inquiries of other persons concerning them, and his ignorance and misapprehension might have been enlightened and corrected by the use of diligence on his part to ascertain them. Combs v. Scott, 12 Allen (Mass.) 493.

A ratification by a party of an act done in his behalf by another without authority, if made under a misapprehension of the full scope of the act, is voidable to the extent of the mistake, and the party can be relieved pro tanto. Miller v. Board of Education, 44 Cal. 166.

1. People v. Swift, 31 Cal. 26; Mc-

Cracken v. San Francisco, 16 Cal. 592; Zottman v. San Francisco, 20 Cal. 96; 81 Am. Dec. 96; Bridgeport v. Housatonic R. Co., 15 Conn. 475; Abbott v. Third School Dist., 7 Me. 118; Fisher v. School Dist. No. 17, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 494; Arlington v. Peirce, 122 Mass. 270; Sault Ste. Marie v. Van Dusan, 40 Mich. 429; Green v. Cape May, 41 N. J. L. 45; Brown v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 63 N. Y. 239; In re Van Antwerp, 56 N. Y. 261; Clarke v. Lyon Co., 8 Nev. 181; Alleghany City v. McClurkan, 14 Pa. St. 81; State v. Torinus, 26 Minn. 1; 37 Am. Rep. 395; Dubuque Female College v. Dubuque, 13 Iowa 555; Hasbrouck v. Milwaukee, 13 Wis. 37; 80 Am. Dec. 718; Day Land, etc., Co. v. State, 68 Tex. 526.

A ratification by a competent body or officer necessarily involves an approval of everything essential to give validity to the act ratified, including as a primary element of regularity the right of the public agent to assume the agency. People v. Lothrop, 24 Mich. 235.

A ratification must be proved. School Dist. No. 6 v. Aetna Ins. Co., 62 Me. 330; Combs v. Scott, 12 Allen (Mass.) 493; Wilhelm v. Cedar Co., 50 Iowa 254. Though it will be presumed for the purpose of justice that the authority exercised by public officers was properly delegated to them, and that contracts made by them without authority have been ratified. San Francisco Gas Co. v. San Francisco, 9 Cal. 453; and see Marshall Co. v. Schenck, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 772.

In State v. Tappan, 29 Wis. 664; 9 Am. Rep. 622, it was held that where a moral obligation exists to perform a contract not binding because it was irregularly entered into, slight evidence of ratification is sufficient. See also Hampshire Co. v. Franklin Co., 16 Mass. 76; Hasbrouck v. Milwaukee, 13 Wis. 37; 80 Am. Dec. 718.

Where there has been a bona fide performance of a contract of which the city has had the benefit, there is a strong equity in favor of the contractor seeking his pay, entitling him to the benefit of a ratification, even of a void ultra vires by acts of recognition and acquiescence, or by acts inconsistent with repudiation or disapproval as well as by express consent,¹ a receipt of the avails of an act being implicit evidence of authority to perform it or assent to its performance.² But a public corporation cannot, by a subsequent ratification, make good an act of its agent which it could not have directly empowered him to do,³ and an officer performing an unauthorized act cannot himself ratify it, either expressly or by any act signifying contract upon slight evidence, if the ratifying body has general power over the subject of the contract. Moore v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 73 N. Y. 238; 29 Am. Rep. 134.

1. Taymouth v. Koehler, 35 Mich. 22; Connett v. Chicago, 114 Ill. 233; Keithsburg v. Frick, 34 Ill. 405; San Francisco Ins. Co. v. San Francisco, 9 Cal. 453; Mayor, etc., of Detroit v. Jackson, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 106; Michigan State Bank v. Hastings, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 225; 41 Am. Dec. 549; Abbott v. Third School Dist., 7 Me. 118; Bridgeport v. Housatonic R. Co., 15 Conn. 475; Arlington v. Peirce, 122 Mass. 270; Stimpson v. Malden, 109 Mass. 313; Parks v. Waltham, 120 Mass. 160; Hayden v. Madison, 7 Me. 76; Knowlton v. Plantation No. 4, 14 Me. 25; Hasbrouck v. Milwaukee, 21 Wis. 219; Marshall Co. v. Schenck, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 772; Bill v. Denver, 29 Fed. Rep. 344.

Acts of acquiescence do not, as is sometimes carelessly said, ratify the unauthorized contract, but in the more guarded and philosophical language of the better authorities, they authorize judges and juries to presume consent or ratification. Certain conduct according to the usual experience of human nature, or of business, ordinarily accompanies or indicates consent or approval. Delafield v. Illinois, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 192; Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. Reynolds, 20 Md. 1.

Where the commissioners' court is authorized to fix the allowance of the county treasurer within certain prescribed limits, and such court has for a long time allowed the same percentage, a failure to make an order regulating the allowance in a particular case raises an agreement by implication on the part of the county to continue to pay the same amount until it shall notify the treasurer to the contrary. Bastrop Co. v. Hearn, 70 Tex. 563.

The recovery of money obtained through a transgression of power, does not affirm but denies the existence of the power. Sault Ste. Marie v. Van Dusen, 40 Mich. 429.

Where plaintiff acted as assistant janitor in a county courthouse without receiving any appointment, but thereafter the county supervisors passed a resolution recognizing the performance of such services and appointing him assistant janitor, the appointment to date back to the time when he began to perform the duties of such position, he can recover the reasonable value of his services rendered before his appointment. Conway v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 8 Daly (N. Y.) 306.

2. Alleghany City v. McClurkan, 14 Pa. St. 81; San Francisco Gas Co. v. San Francisco, 9 Cal. 453; Worden v. New Bedford, 131 Mass. 23; 41 Am. Rep. 185; Lancaster v. Armstrong, 56 Mo. 298; Ruggles v. Washington Co., 3 Mo. 496; Backman v. Charlestown, 42 N. H. 125; Moore v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 73 N. Y. 238; 29 Am. Rep. 134; Mills v. Gleason, 11 Wis. 470; 78 Am. Dec. 721.

Where a city brings action upon notes received by one of its officers without authority, its action is a ratification of the receipt of the notes. Buffalo v. Bettinger, 76 N. Y. 393.

Where a builder was employed to prepare plans and specifications, by a committee of a common council which had no power to employ him, it was held that the appropriation and use of the plans and specifications by the common council amounted to a ratification of the employment by the committee. Peterson v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 17 N. Y. 449.

3. Hodges v. Buffalo, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 110; Smith v. Newburgh, 77 N. Y. 130; Peterson v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 17 N. Y. 449; Sault Ste. Marie v. Van Dusen, 40 Mich. 429; Reilly v. Philadelphia, 60 Pa. St. 467; Clark v. Janesville, 13 Wis. 418.

his assent or acquiescence.¹ When officers fail to pursue the strict requirements of a statutory enactment under which they are acting, no subsequent action on their part can give validity to their acts.² Nothing short of an express act of the legislature can validate an act done in contravention of statutory law.³ And an act which is totally void, not for want of any formality or regularity, or for mistake as to time or otherwise, but for want of power under the law, cannot be ratified even by the legislature.⁴ A statute is not unconstitutional, however,

1. State v. Hays, 52 Mo. 578; State v. Bank of Missouri, 45 Mo. 528; McCracken v. San Francisco, 10 Cal. 624; School Dist. No. 6 v. Aetna Ins. Co., 62 Me. 330; Pratt v. Swanton, 15 Vt. 147; Marsh v. Fulton Co., 10 Wall. (U. S.) 676.

2. Smith v. Newburgh, 77 N. Y. 130; Brady v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 20 N. Y. 312; Cowen v. West Troy, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 48; Peterson v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 17 N. Y. 449; Brown v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 63 N. Y. 239; Grogan v. San Francisco, 18 Cal. 590; Pimental v. San Francisco, 21 Cal. 351; Jefferson Co. v. Arrighi, 54 Miss. 668; Sault Ste. Marie v. Van Dusen, 40 Mich. 429; Reilly v. Philadelphia, 60 Pa. St. 467; Day Land, etc., Co. v. State, 68 Tex. 526; Bryan v. Page, 51 Tex. 532; 32 Am. Rep. 637; Marsh v. Fulton Co., 10 Wall. (U. S.) 676.

Where a charter or statute has committed a class of acts to particular officers or agents other than the general governing body, or where it prescribes certain formalities as conditions to the performance of any particular act, the proper functionaries must act, and the designated forms must be observed, and generally no act of recognition can supply a defect in these respects. Peterson v. Mayor, etc. of N. Y., 17 N. Y. 449.

3. State v. Bank of Missouri, 45 Mo. 528; People v. Phoenix Bank, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 431; 35 Am. Dec. 634; Brown v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 63 N. Y. 239. And see In re Van Antwerp, 56 N. Y. 261; Day Land, etc., Co. v. State, 68 Tex. 526.

Where a legislature authorizes things to be done, a subsequent full legislative recognition of the legality of the thing done, and taking further action in pursuance of it, cures all illegalities in the performance of the act. Campbell v. Kenocha, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 194.

Where a State, by a legislative act, authorized a loan upon particular terms, no officer of the State has power to ratify a loan made upon any other than the terms allowed by the statute. State v. Delafield, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 527.

4. Shawnee Co. v. Carter, 2 Kan. 109; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Maquiklin, 12 Kan. 301; People v. Lynch, 51 Cal. 15; 21 Am. Rep. 677; Marshall v. Silliman, 61 Ill. 218; Barnes v. Lacon, 84 Ill. 461; Menges v. Deutler, 33 Pa. St. 495; 75 Am. Dec. 616; Richards v. Rote, 68 Pa. St. 255; Palmer v. Howard Co., 45 Iowa 61; Seebert v. Linton, 5 W. Va. 57; Hasbrouck v. Milwaukee, 13 Wis. 37; 80 Am. Dec. 718. And see Grogan v. San Francisco, 18 Cal. 590; McCracken v. San Francisco, 16 Cal. 616; Pimental v. San Francisco, 21 Cal. 351; Day Land, etc., Co. v. State, 68 Tex. 526; The Floyd Acceptances, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 666; McMillen v. Boyles, 6 Iowa 304; McManning v. Farrar, 46 Mo. 376; Dale v. Medcalf, 9 Pa. St. 108; Silliman v. Cummins, 13 Ohio 116; Horton v. Thompson, 71 N. Y. 513.

The legislature cannot make good retrospectively acts which it previously had no power to commit. Kimball v. Rosendale, 42 Wis. 407; 24 Am. Rep. 421.

The legislature cannot make a law for the particular case affecting and changing rights and imposing burdens contrary to previously established law, so that the act if valid, has all the force of a judgment, though in violation of the principles upon which judgments are rendered. Shawnee Co. v. Carter, 2 Kan. 115.

Ratification is inoperative, if the party attempted to be charged was not competent to make the contract in question when the same was made, nor when the supposed acts of ratification were performed. Or if the contract was illegal, immoral, or against public policy. Marshall Co. v. Schenck, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 772.

because it gives validity to an act irregularly done, if it could have authorized it to be done in the irregular way in the first instance.¹

The act of ratification must be the act of the sovereign power, or of its authorized agents,² acting in the manner prescribed by Confirmation may make good a voidable or defeasible estate, but cannot operate upon or aid an estate which is void in law, but only confirms its infirmity. Branham v. Mayor, etc., of San José, 24 Cal. 585.

1. Lockhart v. Troy, 48 Ala. 579; State v. Torinus, 26 Minn. 1; 37 Am. Rep. 393; San Francisco v. Certain Real Estate, 42 Cal. 517; Creighton v. San Francisco, 42 Cal. 450; Bass v. Columbus, 30 Ga. 845; Schenley v. Com., 36 Pa. St. 29; 78 Am. Dec. 359; Bridgeport v. Housatonic R. Co., 15 Conn. 475; Emporia v. Norton, 13 Kan. 569; Bartholomew Co. v. Bright, 18 Ind. 93; Maxey v. Wise, 25 Ind. 1; Johnson v. Campbell, 49 Ill. 316; McMillen v. Boyles, 6 Iowa 304; People v. Mitchel, 35 N. Y. 551; Sharpless v. Mayor, etc., of Philadelphia, 21 Pa. St. 147; 59 Am. Dec. 759; Fisk v. Kenosha, 26 Wis. 33; Knapp v. Grant, 27 Wis. 147; Blount v. Janesville, 31 Wis. 648; Single v. Marathon Co., 38 Wis. 363; Kimball v. Rosendale, 42 Wis. 407; 24 Am. Rep. 421; Kunkle v. Franklin, 13 Minn. 127; 97 Am. Dec. 226; and see First Municipality v. Orleans Theatre Co., 2 Rob. (La.) 209; Bartholomew v. Harwinton, 33 Conn. 408; Stuart v. Warren, 37 Conn. 225; Beach v. Walker, 6 Conn. 190; Booth v. Woodbury, 32 Conn. 129; Weister v. Hade, 52 Pa. St. 474; Thomson v. Lee Co., 3 Wall. (U. S.) 327; Mattingly v. District of Columbia, 97 U. S. 687. But see Mills v. Charleston, 29 Wis. 400; 9 Am. Rep. 578; Hasbrouck v. Milwaukee, 13 Wis. 37; 80 Am. Dec. 718; Denny v. Mattoon, 2 Allen (Mass.) 361; 79 Am. Dec. 784; Grover v. Pembroke, 11 Allen (Mass.) 90; Bridgewater v. Elymouth, 97 Mass. 382; Walter v. Bacon, 8 Mass. 468; Winchester v. Corinna, 55 Me. 9.

A school district by a legal meeting may ratify and confirm proceedings of previous meetings which were not strictly legal. Jordan v. School Dist. No. 2, 38 Me. 164; Fisher v. School Dist. No. 17, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 494.

Laws to obviate mistakes and irregularities in proceedings of municipal corporations, when they do not impair any contract or injuriously affect the rights of third persons, are within the competency of legislative authority. Bissell v. Jeffersonville, 24 How. (U. S.) 287; Truchelut v. Charleston, 1 Nott & M. (S. Car.) 227; Frederick v. Augusta, 5 Ga. 561; Winn v. Macon, 21 Ga. 275; Atchison v. Butcher, 3 Kan. 104; Allison v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 9 Bush (Ky.) 247; New Orleans v. Poutz, 14 La. Ann. 866.

The legislature may, in strict conformity with its constitutional powers and duties, recognize a moral obligation as the sole basis for the imposition of a tax, and it may authorize a municipal corporation to pay claims invalid in law, but equitable and just in themselves. People v. Burr, 13 Cal. 343; Beals v. Amador Co., 35 Cal. 624; Brewster v. Syracuse, 19 N. Y. 116.

If an act of the legislature appears upon its face to be an encroachment on the rights of any person, but would nevertheless be valid if passed, with the consent of such person, the court is bound to presume that such consent was given. In re Wellington, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 95; McMillen v. Boyles, 6 Iowa 304.

In Kimball v. Rosendale, 42 Wis. 407; 24 Am. Rep. 421, the court by Ryan, C. J., said: "Perhaps the true limit of the curative power of the legislature as gathered from all authorities and sanctioned by principle, is, or ought to be, that it can reach things voidable only not void. Defects of execution only, not of authority or jurisdiction, and is confined to defective proceedings under previous legislative authority."

2. Wilson v. School Dist. No. 4, 32 N. H. 118; School Dist. No. 6 v. Aetna Ins. Co., 62 Me. 330; State v. Torinus, 26 Minn. 1; 37 Am. Rep. 393; State v. Hays, 52 Mo. 578; McMillen v. Boyles, 6 Iowa 304; Branham v. Mayor, etc., of San José, 24 Cal. 585.

The legislature has power to ratify a contract entered into by a municipal corporation for a public purpose which is ultra vires. Municipal corporations are agencies of the State, through which the sovereign power acts in matters of local concern. It may confer upon them power to enter into contracts, and may annex such limitations law,¹ the unofficial conduct of individuals having no controlling effect,² the test of the right to ratify the unauthorized act of a public agent being whether or not the officer by whom the ratification is claimed could have conferred on the agent the power to do the act in question.³ An officer who could not have originally performed the act cannot ratify it.⁴

and conditions to its exercise as in its discretion it deems proper for the protection of the public interest, and the right to limit involves the power to dispense with limitations. Brown v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 63 N. Y. 239.

1. Wilson v. School Dist. No. 4, 32 N. H. 118; Argenti v. San Francisco, 16 Cal. 255; School Dist. No. 6 v. Aetna Ins. Co., 62 Me. 330; Chamberlain v. Dover, 13 Me. 466; 29 Am. Dec. 517; Delafield v. Illinois, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 193.

Where the authority could originally be conferred only in a particular form or mode, the ratification must follow the same form or mode. McCracken v. San Francisco, 16 Cal. 591.

After an authority to issue bonds has been ratified, and the authority has been executed, the stock subscribed and the bonds issued and in the hands of innocent holders, it is too late, even in a direct proceeding, to call the power in question, much less can it be called in question to the prejudice of a bona fide holder of the bonds in a collateral way. Marshall Co. v. Schenck, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 772; and see Knox Co. v. Aspinwall, 21 How. (U. S.) 544; Bissell v. Jeffersonville, 24 How. (U. S.) 299.

2. School Dist., No. 6 v. Aetna Ins. Co., 62 Me. 330; Davis v. School Dist. No. 2, 24 Me. 349; Lane v. Fourth School Dist., 10 Met. (Mass.) 462; Kingman v. School Dist. No. 13, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 426; Taft v. Montague, 14 Mass. 281; 7 Am. Dec. 215; Wilson v. School Dist. No. 4, 32 N. H. 118; Keyser v. District No. 8, 35 N. H. 477; Taymouth v. Koehler, 35 Mich. 22; Chaplin v. Hill, 24 Vt. 528; Pratt v. Swanton, 15 Vt. 147.

The use of a school building newly erected, alone could give no evidence of acceptance; accompanied by silence and the absence of complaint, however, where to complain would be natural and suitable, or by any circumstances indicating acquiescence, it would be evidence. Wilson v. School Dist. No. 4, 32 N. H. 188; and see Davis v. School Dist. No. 2, 24 Me. 349.

Where selectmen have applied the money of the town to pay their expenses in defending against a criminal prosecution brought against them for alleged official misconduct, a subsequent vote of the town to ratify the application of the money will not be valid against a voter and taxpayer of the town who has not assented to it. Gates v. Hancock, 45 N. H. 528.

The acceptance and occupancy of a public building by a county will not enable the builder to recover of the county an amount in excess of that authorized by the vote, caused by the changes and extension of the original plan. Reichard v. Warren Co., 31 Iowa 381.

3. Richardson v. Crandall, 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 335; Delafield v. Illinois, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 159; Brown v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 63 N. Y. 239; McCracken v. San Francisco, 16 Cal. 591.

The action of a city in authorizing and employing its solicitor to appear and defend an action brought against a police officer, for an assault and battery committed by him, does not make the city liable to pay damages for assault and battery. Buttrick v. Lowell, 1 Allen (Mass.) 172.

4. Delafield v. Illinois, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 159; Horton v. Thompson, 71 N. Y. 513; Brady v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 20 N. Y. 312; Michigan v. Phoenix Bank, 33 N. Y. 9; People v. Flagg, 17 N. Y. 589; State v. Bank of Missouri, 45 Mo. 528; Jefferson Co. v. Arrighi, 54 Miss. 668; Nash v. St. Paul, 8 Minn. 181; State v. Torinus, 26 Minn. 1; 37 Am. Rep. 393; Hague v. Philadelphia, 48 Pa. St. 528; Zottman v. San Francisco, 20 Cal. 105; 81 Am. Dec. 96; McCracken v. San Francisco, 16 Cal. 591; Clarke v. Lyon Co., 8 Nev. 181; Connett v. Chicago, 114 Ill. 233; Marsh v. Fulton Co., 10 Wall. (U. S.) 676.

A ratification by one having the power to do the act ratified at the time it was done, but who had parted with such power before attempting to ratify is invalid. McCracken v. San Francisco, 16 Cal. 591.

The presumption of ratification from non-action of a public corporation is less readily inferable than in case of individuals who can more readily act.¹ If the State acts at the next regular session of its general assembly or other duly authorized body it is sufficient.² And it has been held that the State ought not to be concluded by the mere non-action of one of its officers.³

XI. DUTIES OF PUBLIC OFFICERS.—Where a public body or officer has been clothed by statute with power to do an act which concerns the public interest or the rights of third persons, the execution of the power may be insisted on as a duty,⁴ whether the phraseology of the statute be peremptory or merely permissive;⁵

A contract made by a school corporation before it has a legal existence may be ratified and adopted, however, after it is incorporated. Dubuque Female College v. Dubuque, 13 Iowa 555.

1. School District No. 6 v. Aetna Ins. Co., 62 Me. 330; Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. Reynolds, 20 Md. 1; 83 Am. Dec. 535; State v. Bank of Missouri, 45 Mo. 528; Delafield v. Illinois, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 192. And see Dickinson v. Conway, 12 Allen (Mass.) 487.

Where a State engages in trade or makes contracts, it must, for most purposes, be regarded in the same light as an individual. Delafield v. Illinois, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 159.

Ratification of a contract for compensation with an agent for the collection of taxes not collectible by the county treasurer made by the county treasurer and county attorney, cannot be inferred from the fact that the treasurer reported it to the board who acquiesced therein. Wilhelm v. Cedar Co., 50 Iowa 254.

Municipal corporations are not principals but are themselves agents, answerable to their constituents, and are not to be presumed to recognize and incidentally ratify and confirm the acts of other officers done beyond the scope of their authority. Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. Reynolds, 20 Md. 1; 83 Am. Dec. 535.

2. Delafield v. Illinois, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 159; and see State v. Torinus, 26 Minn. 1; 37 Am. Rep. 393.

In Delafield v. Illinois, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 92, it was held that if the State acted in the manner deemed most prudent, in order to rescind a contract, and prevent loss while it avoided any unqualified disclaimer of the debt in honest hands, this is all that could be expected, and all that could have been done consistently with a just regard for the honor and faith of the State.

3. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. People, 46 Mich. 193; Attorney-Gen'l v. St. Clair Co., 30 Mich. 388; Detroit v. Weber, 26 Mich. 284; People v. Columbia Co., 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 363.

Effect of Ratification.—Where a municipal corporation approves and ratifies the illegal and unauthorized action of its agents, and afterwards, when sued by a third person, pleads such action and its results as a ground of defense, it is thereby estopped from subsequently pursuing the agent on account of such action. New Orleans v. Southern Bank, 31 La. Ann. 560.

In Richardson v. Crandall, 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 335, it was held that a ratification of an unauthorized act of a public officer by the principal, will not relieve him from liability for the act to the injured party.

4. Mayor, etc., of N. Y. v. Furze, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 612; Smith v. State, 1 Kan. 365; Newburgh Turnpike Road Co. v. Miller, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 101; 9 Am. Dec. 274; and see Logansport v. Wright, 25 Ind. 512; Cutter v. Howard, 9 Wis. 309.

Where any person has a right to demand the exercise of a public function, and there is an officer or set of officers authorized to exercise that function, there the right and the authority give rise to the duty. Carr v. Northern Liberties, 35 Pa. St. 324; 78 Am. Dec. 342.

Where the law makes it the duty of a county auditor at a certain time to draw his warrant on the county treasurer, it is his duty to do it without waiting for a request from the person entitled to it. Wilson v. Neal, 23 Fed. Rep. 129.

6. Where the statute directs the doing of a thing for the sake of justice or the public good, the word "may" is but where the authority is essentially discretionary, no legal duty is imposed.¹ So, public offices are held subject to any change or increase of duties that may be imposed by the sovereign power—an increase of duties conferring upon the incumbent no right to increased compensation, as for extra services.² Aside from the general principles above stated, the duties of public officers are so closely allied to their liabilities, that, beyond a short examination of the general character of their duties, and the duties arising from their occupation of a fiduciary position, they will be left for treatment in connection with their liabilities.

1. Their Character.—The duties of public officers are mainly either ministerial or judicial and deliberative in their character. A duty is ministerial when the law exacting its discharge prescribes and defines the time, mode and occasion of its performance with such certainty and precision as to leave nothing to the exercise of judgment or discretion,³ in contradistinction mandatory and means the same as "shall." Mayor, etc., of N. Y. v. Furze, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 612; Newburg Turnpike Road Co. v. Miller, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 101; 9 Am. Dec. 274; and see MAY, vol. 14, p. 979.

There can be no legal right in an individual to hold an office or trust, unless there is also a corresponding legal right in the public to compel performance of the duties with which the office or trust is charged. Hinze v. People, 92 Ill. 406.

A public officer, judicial or otherwise, has no right under color of his office to extort from an individual a bond as a condition on which he will render to him rights and privileges which he may justly claim. Whitted v. Governor, 6 Port. (Ala.) 335.

1. Carr v. Northern Liberties, 35 Pa. St. 324; 78 Am. Dec. 342; and see Baugh v. Lamb, 40 Miss. 493.

A prothonotary is not bound to perform, but he may perform, an official act at an unseasonable hour. Polhemus's Appeal, 32 Pa. St. 328.

2. Mandell v. New Orleans, 21 La. Ann. 9; Hire v. New Orleans, 21 La. Ann. 428.

Every public officer is required to perform all duties which are strictly official, although they may be required by laws passed after he comes into office, and may be cumulative upon his original duties, and although his compensation therefor be wholly inadequate. In such case he must look to the bounty of Congress for any additional reward. Andrews v. U. S., 2 Story (U. S.) 202.

Duties, How Performed.—If public agents concede privileges, they must restrict the concession to such as may be given without detriment to the public. This the party to whom the concession is made is bound to understand. New Jersey, etc., Teleg. Co. v. Board of Fire Com'rs, 34 N. J. Eq. 117.

Where the law requires a public officer to take security in real estate of treble the value of the sum loaned, the duty is properly performed if he has availed himself of the best means of forming a correct opinion of the value of the property, and believes it adequate. Greene Co. v. Bledsoe, 12 Ill. 267.

3. Grider v. Tally, 77 Ala. 422; 54 Am. Rep. 65; Sullivan v. Shanklin, 63 Cal. 247; Com'rs v. Smith, 5 Tex. 471; Arberry v. Beavers, 6 Tex. 467; 55 Am. Dec. 791; Rains v. Simpson, 50 Tex. 495; 32 Am. Rep. 609; Mississippi v. Johnson, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 475; and see Hudmon v. Slaughter, 70 Ala. 546.

A duty is ministerial when an individual has such a legal interest in its performance that neglect becomes a wrong to him. Morton v. Comptroller-Gen'l, 4 S. Car. 430.

A ministerial act may be defined to be one which a person performs on a given statement of facts in a prescribed manner in obedience to the mandate of legal authority without regard to or the exercise of his own judgment upon the propriety of the act being done. Acts done out of court in bringing parties into court are as a general proposition ministerial acts. Bouv. L. Dict., tit. Ministerial; Pennington v. Streight, 54 Ind. 376; Flournoy v. Jeffersonville, 17 to those in which the officer is permitted to examine whether a thing proposed ought or ought not to be done, or whether it ought to be done in one manner or another.¹ Ministerial duties, however, do not exclude all deliberation; the necessity may exist for the ascertainment from personal knowledge or by information derived from other sources of the facts which render the performance of the act a clear and specific duty.² Where the exercise of judgment required extends only to ascertaining whether the requirements of the statute are complied with, the duty is a ministerial one.³ So also, there being no adverse parties, where the examination and auditing of accounts, the comparison of vouchers and the adjustment and statement of balances only are required.⁴ But, on the other hand, where, from the necessity of the case, the law is obliged to trust to the sound judgment and discretion of an officer as to the propriety, legality, or practicability of the performance of an act or function, and its manner of execution, the duty is a judicial one,⁵ and an officer who is required faithfully

Ind. 169; 79 Am. Dec. 468; Ray v. Jeffersonville, 90 Ind. 572; State v. Doyle, 40 Wis. 175; 22 Am. Rep. 692; South v. Maryland, 18 How. (U. S.) 396.

1. Bouv. L. Dict., tit., Deliberation.

2. Grider v. Tally, 77 Ala. 422; 54 Am. Dec. 65; Crane v. Camp, 12 Conn. 464; Betts v. Dimon, 3 Conn. 107; Ray v. Jeffersonville, 90 Ind. 572; Flourney v. Jeffersonville, 17 Ind. 169; 79 Am. Dec. 468.

The clerk of a district court is a mere ministerial officer, with no judicial power and must act under the control of the court. Robbins v. Durell, 1 Idaho Ter. 50.

Supervisors.—The functions exercised by a county supervisor are chiefly ministerial, and those by a circuit clerk wholly so, and the discharge of the duties of the two offices, by the same person, is not incompatible or repugnant. State v. Fiebleman, 28 Ark. 424.

In Grider v. Tally, 77 Ala. 422, the court by Clopton, J., said: "A sheriff must determine whether process, coming into his hands, is issued from a court of competent jurisdiction, and is regular on its face; and a treasurer of public moneys must ascertain whether the warrant is drawn by such officer, and in such manner that its payment is a duty; but the execution of the process, and the payment of the warrant, are ministerial acts. A judge must determine whether a judgment is entered according to the verdict of the jury, or the consideration of the court, and whether a bill of exceptions correctly recites the proceedings; but the act of signing the judgment and bill of exceptions is ministerial."

3. Jackson v. Buchanan, 89 N. Car. 74. See State v. Sneed, 84 N. Car. 816; Washington Co. v. Boyd, 64 Mo. 179.

The county treasurer, in collecting assessments of benefits in favor of a gravel-road company, under the Indiana act of March 11, 1867, does not act as the agent of the company, but as a ministerial officer, and is not liable for money had and received, to the persons assessed, after he had paid it to the company, before any notice of injunction, although the assessments may have been paid by said persons under protest and to save their property from seizure. Rhodes v. Piper, 47 Ind. 457.

In Pennsylvania, the tenure of ministerial offices is generally at pleasure. Field v. Girard College, 54 Pa. St. 233.

4. Machias River Co. v. Pope, 35 Me. 19.

5. Downer v. Lent, 6 Cal. 94; 65 Am. Dec. 489. See Schoettgen v. Wilson, 48 Mo. 253; Elliot v. Chicago, 48 Ill. 293; Saffrons v. Ericson, 3 Coldw. (Tenn.) 1; Com'r v. Smith, 5 Tex. 471; Arberry v. Beavers, 6 Tex. 467; 55 Am. Rep. 791.

The auditor of the State of North Carolina is not a mere ministerial officer. When a claim against the State is presented to him, he is to decide whether there is a sufficient provision of law for its payment, and if, in to act according as things shall appear to him, to the best of his ability, is a judicial officer.¹ The question as to whether or not a mandamus would be granted to enforce a duty has been adopted as a criterion as to whether or not the duty is a ministerial one.²

Both judicial and ministerial duties are often imposed upon the same officer, in which case each class of duties is governed and regulated by the rules of law respectively applicable to that class.³ When the law, in words or by implication, thus commits to any officer the duty of looking into facts and acting upon them, not in a way which it specifically directs, but after a discretion in its nature judicial, the function is usually termed a quasi judicial one.⁴

2. Accountability for Public Property.—It is the duty of a public officer to keep and preserve the public property, such as books, records, furniture, etc., placed in his possession for the purpose of facilitating the execution of his functions, with reasonable diligence and care,⁵ and at the expiration of his term to surrender his opinion, there is not, he must examine the claim and report the fact, with his opinion, to the general assembly. Boner v. Adams, 65 N. Car. 639.

Assessors having jurisdiction of the person and subject-matter for the purpose of making an assessment of property for taxation, act judicially in making the assessment; although the property assessed is not by law the subject of taxation. Bank of Com. v. Mayor, etc., of New York, 43 N. Y. 184.

To administer an affidavit on which a warrant of arrest may issue, is a duty in its nature judicial. Lloyd v. State, 70 Ala. 32.

The duty imposed by the Maryland act of 1831, ch. 281, upon the county commissioners, to take a sufficient bond from the person appointed to collect the taxes imposed by said act, is judicial and not ministerial, and an action will not lie against the commissioners for not taking a bond with sufficient security, unless fraud or corruption is alleged. State v. Dunnington, 12 Md. 340.

1. Seaman v. Patten, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 312.

2. See Rains v. Simpson, 50 Tex. 495; 32 Am. Rep. 609; Grider v. Tally, 77 Ala. 422; 54 Am. Rep. 65; as to when mandamus will be granted, see MANDAMUS, vol. 14, p. 88.

3. See Grider v. Tally, 77 Ala. 422; 54 Am. Rep. 65; People v. Bush, 40 Cal. 344; People v. Provines, 34 Cal. 520; Washington Co. v. Boyd, 64 Mo. 179.

In Iowa.—The county judge is partly a ministerial and partly a judicial officer; in auditing claims he acts judicially, and his judgment may be corrected on appeal; but in drawing a warrant, or buying or selling, he acts as the ministerial agent of the county; therefore, in an action upon a warrant drawn by the judge, as there has been no judicial determination that there was a good consideration, want of consideration may be set up by the county. Campbell v. Polk Co., 3 Iowa 467.

The duty resting on every public officer, on the termination of his official relations, to surrender to his successor the official papers and paraphernalia of the office is ministerial merely, and the Alabama statutes to compel their delivery are designed to give a more certain and expeditious remedy than that existing at common law. Thompson v. Holt, 52 Ala. 491.

Boards of county commissioners are courts of limited and special jurisdiction; and the records must show that the requisitions of the statutes under which they acted were complied with, so far as necessary to give them jurisdiction to make them evidence of the validity of their acts. Rhode v. Davis, 2 Ind. 53.

4. Bishop Non. Cont. Law, §§ 785, 786.

5. Mechem's Pub. Off., § 916.

A public officer is a bailee of the government with reference to public property coming into his hands, and by the common law he is bound to due

it to his successor, or other public authority entitled to receive it.¹

So, any detention for an unlawful or unreasonable time, or appropriation of public moneys by an officer intrusted with their care, renders him chargeable with interest upon the amount retained during the time of detention,² and summary modes of recovering such moneys are not unconstitutional, or contrary to common law.³ The measure of fiduciary responsibility at common law and in equity is the same, whether arising from public or private relations;⁴ but the obligation assumed by the officer is in most instances fixed by the terms of the statute providing for the office or by the terms of his official bond,⁵ under which he is not regarded as a bailee, and his obligation to keep safely is deemed absolute, and without condition to be discharged only by payment.⁶ Under some of the statutes the public diligence only, and only liable for negligence and dishonesty. U. S. v. Thomas, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 337.

Where property comes into the possession of a public officer, by reason of his official position and in accordance with the usage of his office, although it is not made by law the duty of his office to receive it, he owes a duty of ordinary care in its preservation, and occupies the position of a bailee in reference to it. Phelps v. People, 72 N. Y. 334.

1. See McGee v. State, 103 Ind. 444; State v. Meeker, 19 Neb. 444.

Where the right to occupy a building is part of the officer's compensation, his right terminates with his term, and he may be ousted. Frazier v. Virginia Military Institute, 81 Va. 59.

One who duly receives a certificate of election to the office of sheriff and qualifies by filing his oath of office with the county clerk, the bond being approved by the board of county commissioners, is entitled to a mandamus to compel the former sheriff to deliver to him properly belonging to the sheriff's office. Huffman v. Mills, 39 Kan. 577.

2. See State v. Van Winkle, 43 N. J. L. 125; Justices v. Fennimore, 1 N. J. L. 242; Chenango Co. v. Birdsall, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 453; State v. Sooy, 39 N. J. L. 539; Clark v. Shelden, 57 Hun (N. Y.) 586; Pease v. Wyoming, 1 Wyoming Ter. 392.

Where no time is fixed by the provision creating the office, it is the duty of the officer to account within a reasonable time. See Leake v. Sutherland, 25 Ark. 219.

An official treasurer cannot defend an action to compel him to pay over to his successor the funds in his official custody, upon any questions of the regularity of the proceedings whereby the funds came into his possession. Mason v. Fractional School District, etc., 34 Mich. 228. And see School Directors of Sigel v. Coe, 40 Wis. 103; Cairns v. O'Brien, 40 Wis. 469.

3. Murray v. Hoboken Land Co., 18 How. (U. S.) 274. See also Ratterman v. State, 44 Ohio St. 641.

Where, on the default of a county treasurer, there is a shortage of moneys collected both for the county and the territory, the shortage will be apportioned according to the amount each is entitled to receive from the taxes collected. Territory v. Bashford (Arizona, 1881), 12 Pac. Rep. 671.

4. Peck v. James, 3 Head (Tenn.) 75.

The responsibility of a county treasurer, in the absence of any statute enlarging it, is measured by the common-law rule applicable to bailees for hire other than common carriers and innkeepers. If, without fault or negligence on his part, he is violently robbed of money belonging to the county, it is a valid defense, pro tanto, to an action on his bond; but the burden of proving such a defense is upon him. Cumberland Co. v. Pennell, 69 Me. 357.

5. The bond ought properly to be regarded as the measure of official duty. Perley v. Muskegon Co., 32 Mich. 132; 20 Am. Rep. 637.

6. U. S. v. Prescott, 3 How. (U. S.) 587; State v. Houston, 78 Ala. 576; 56 Am. Rep. 59; Township of Union v. Smith, 39 Iowa 9; 18 Am. Rep. 39; Tay- moneys have been regarded as, in legal effect, the property of the officer, the government standing in the position of creditor.¹ Where, however, a place of deposit is provided for by law, the officer's obligation ordinarily extends only to a compliance with the requirement,² and it has been held that he is not to be made responsible for v. Morton, 37 Iowa 550; Lowry v. Polk Co., 51 Iowa 50; 33 Am. Rep. 114; Doolittle v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 20 Kan. 329; State v. Peck, 58 Me. 123; McLeod Co. v. Gilbert, 19 Minn. 214; Jefferson Co. v. Lineberger, 3 Mont. 231; 35 Am. Rep. 462; State v. Powell, 67 Mo. 395; 29 Am. Rep. 512; State v. Nevins, 19 Nev. 162; 3 Am. St. Rep. 873; U. S. v. Watts, 1 N. Mex. 553; State v. Clarke, 73 N. Car. 255; Havens v. Lathene, 75 N. Car. 505; State v. Blair, 76 N. Car. 78; State v. Harper, 6 Ohio St. 610; 67 Am. Dec. 363; Bailey v. Com. (Pa. 1887), 10 Atl. Rep. 764; Com. v. Comly, 3 Pa. St. 372; Nason v. Directors of Poor, 126 Pa. St. 445; Hart v. Guardians of the Poor, 81½ Pa. St. 466; Wilson v. Wichita Co., 67 Tex. 647; U. S. v. Morgan, 11 How. (U. S.) 154; U. S. v. Dashiell, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 183; Boyden v. U. S., 13 Wall. (U. S.) 17; Bevans v. U. S., 13 Wall. (U. S.) 56.

In U. S. v. Prescott, 3 How. (U. S.) 578, the court by McLean, J., said: "Public policy requires that every depository of public money should be held to strict accountability not only that he should exercise the highest degree of vigilance, but that he should keep safely the moneys which come to his hands. Any relaxation of this condition would open a door to frauds which might be practiced with impunity; a depository would have nothing more to do than to lay his plans and arrange his proofs so as to establish his loss, without laches on his part. Let such a principle be applied to our postmasters, collectors of customs, receivers of public moneys and others who receive more or less of the public funds, and what loss might not be anticipated by the public. No such principle has been recognized or admitted as a legal defense."

A treasurer is liable for loss of the funds deposited by him generally in a bank, although the bank was reputed solvent, and such deposit was necessary for the safety of the funds. State v. Moore, 74 Mo. 413; 41 Am. Rep. 322; Inglis v. State, 61 Ind. 212; State v. Powell, 67 Mo. 395; 29 Am. Rep. 512;

Ward v. School District, 10 Neb. 293; 35 Am. Rep. 477; Wilson v. Wichita Co., 67 Tex. 647.

The fact that the county does not provide a safe or suitable place where its money may be kept will not release the treasurer from liability if he deposits it in a bank where, by reason of the failure of the bank, it is lost. Lowry v. Polk Co., 51 Iowa 50; 33 Am. Rep. 114.

The felonious taking and carrying away the public moneys in the custody of a receiver of public moneys, without any fault or negligence on his part, does not discharge him and his sureties. U. S. v. Prescott, 3 How. (U. S.) 578; Halbert v. State, 22 Ind. 125; Morbeck v. State, 28 Ind. 86; State v. Nevin, 19 Nev. 162; 3 Am. St. Rep. 873; State v. Harper, 6 Ohio St. 607; 67 Am. Dec. 363; Jefferson Co. v. Lineberger, 3 Mont. 231. 35 Am. Rep. 462. Nor is he discharged by its destruction. Township of Union v. Smith, 39 Iowa 9; 18 Am. Rep. 39.

1. Perley v. Muskegon Co., 32 Mich. 132; 20 Am. Rep. 637; Campbell v. Pence, 118 Ind. 313; Shelton v. State, 53 Ind. 331.

Under such a theory, the officer would be liable absolutely, whatever may have been the cause of the loss. See Muzzy v. Shattuck, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 233; Halbert v. State, 22 Ind. 131; Allen v. State, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 252; Morebeck v. State, 28 Ind. 86; Rock v. Stinger, 36 Ind. 346; Steinbeck v. State, 38 Ind. 483; Egremont v. Benjamin, 125 Mass. 19; Agawam Nat. Bank v. South Hadley, 128 Mass. 507; Hancock v. Hazard, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 112; 59 Am. Dec. 171; Colerain v. Bell, 9 Met. (Mass.) 99; Albany v. Dorr, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 440; Justice v. Fennimore, 1 N. J. L. 242; New Providence v. McEachron, 33 N. J. L. 339.

Where, however, money of the United States is received by one public agent from another, whether received in an official or private capacity, it is received to the use of the United States, and they may recover it against the receiver. U. S. v. Buford, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 28.

2. Halbert v. State, 22 Ind. 125;

for losses caused by the act of God or the public enemy,¹ or occurring without fault or negligence on his part.² It is within the constitutional power of a legislature to relieve public officers against this extreme liability, and replace moneys lost without their fault by taxation.³

A public officer intrusted with public funds cannot defeat the right of the government to recover them upon the ground of the illegality of the transaction by which they were realized or of the purpose to which they were to be devoted.⁴

XII. LIABILITIES OF PUBLIC OFFICERS.—A breach of public duty by an officer raises a liability on the part of the officer in favor of the public which can be enforced against him only by public prosecution;⁵ but in order to confer a right of action on a pri-Cumberland v. Pennell, 69 Me. 357; 31 Am. Rep. 284; Jefferson Co. v. Lineberger, 3 Mont. 231; 35 Am. Rep. 462.

Compulsory Deposit.—Under the act of Congress of April 18, 1814, which directs that moneys received by officers of the United States courts shall be deposited in bank, etc., the court is authorized to require its officers to pay moneys received by them into court, to be deposited in bank by the clerks of the court. The Laurens and $20,000 in Specie, 1 Abb. Adm. (U. S.) 508.

1. The act of a public enemy in forcibly seizing or destroying property of the government in the hands of a public officer, against his will, and without his fault, is a discharge of his obligation to keep such property safely, and of his official bond, given to secure the faithful performance of that duty, and have the property forthcoming when required. U. S. v. Thomas, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 337. And see U. S. v. Humason, 6 Sawy. (U. S.) 199.

2. Cumberland Co. v. Pennell, 69 Me. 357; 31 Am. Rep. 284; Munphy v. U. S., 3 Ct. of Cl. 212. And see Prime v. U. S., 3 Ct. of Cl. 209; Pattee v. U. S., 3 Ct. of Cl. 397.

A county treasurer is not liable for funds lost through failure of a bank in good standing at the time of deposit. York Co. v. Watson, 15 S. Car. 1; 40 Am. Rep. 675.

A public officer intrusted with the receipt and disbursement of funds is not responsible for money stolen from his office, where there is no default or negligence on his part. Albany Co. v. Dorr, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 440.

3. Board of Education v. McLandsborough, 36 Ohio St. 227; 38 Am. Rep.

582; Hancock Co. v. Bradley, 53 Ind. 422; Mount v. State, 90 Ind. 29; 46 Am. Rep. 192.

The effective words in the act of Congress of May 9, 1866, which authorizes the court of claims to decree relief to a disbursing officer who has lost government funds are "without fault or neglect." And they should not be given a technical but rather a common signification. The degree of care and diligence which the act requires is that which a prudent man would exact of his agent in a like case. Malone v. U. S., 5 Ct. of Cl. 486.

4. Placer Co. v. Astin, 8 Cal. 303; First Nat. Bank v. Leppel, 9 Colo. 594; Snell v. Pells, 113 Ill. 145; Daniels v. Barney, 22 Ind. 207; Reed v. Dougan, 54 Ind. 307; Chinn v. Chinn, 22 La. Ann. 599; Clark v. Moody, 17 Mass. 145; Gelliam v. Brown, 43 Miss. 641; Souhegan Nat. Bank v. Wallace, 61 N. H. 24; Murray v. Vanderbilt, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 140; Hammond v. Christie, 5 Robt. (N. Y.) 160; Galbraith v. Gaines, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 568; Kreivert v. Rindskopf, 46 Wis. 481; Baldwin v. Potter, 46 Vt. 402; Brooks v. Martin, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 70. And see Norton v. Blinn, 39 Ohio St. 145; DeLeon v. Trevino, 49 Tex. 88; 30 Am. Rep. 101.

That the title of the State was defective, cannot be pleaded to defeat its right to recover moneys received by one of its officers for a designated official purpose. People v. Swineford, 77 Mich. 573.

5. Bartlett v. Crozier, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 438; 8 Am. Dec. 428; Conrad v. Ithaca, 16 N. Y. 159; Young v. Comrs., 2 Nott & M. (S. Car.) 537. See also Moss v. Cummings, 44 Mich. 359; New York Code Civ. Proc., §§ 1969, 1976.

vate individual, the officer must fail in the performance of some duty which he owes to that individual specially.¹ The officer is not liable to an action for his conduct in a governmental or political capacity;² and, as a general thing, it is only against ministerial officers that an action will lie for neglect of official duty.³

1. Cooley on Torts 379; Harrington v. Ward, 9 Mass. 251; Learock v. Putnam, 111 Mass. 499; Griffin v. Rising, 11 Met. (Mass.) 330; Raynsford v. Phelps, 43 Mich. 342; 38 Am. Rep. 189; Moss v. Cummings, 44 Mich. 360; Garlinghouse v. Jacobs, 29 N. Y. 297; Conrad v. Ithaca, 16 N. Y. 159; Robinson v. Chamberlain, 34 N. Y. 389; 90 Am. Dec. 713; Bassett v. Fish, 12 Hun (N. Y.) 209; Strong v. Campbell, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 135; Clark v. Miller, 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 38; Bank of Rome v. Mott, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 554; Butler v. Kent, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 223; 10 Am. Dec. 219; Young v. Comrs., 2 Nott & M. (S. Car.) 537.

A county treasurer in levying on property of a mortgagor for taxes failed to levy on personal property, thereby throwing a greater burden on the mortgaged real property of the mortgagor. Held, that the mortgagee could not maintain an action against the treasurer for this failure. State v. Harris, 89 Ind. 363; 46 Am. Rep. 169. Compare Raynsford v. Phelps, 43 Mich. 342; 38 Am. Rep. 189.

The board of trustees of the New York and Brooklyn Bridge, appointed under the act of 1875, ch. 300, were not to be considered as a corporation, but as merely agents for and representatives of the two cities, and as such, they were entitled to all the immunities of public agents. And, therefore, an action to recover damages resulting from the negligence of a laborer engaged in the construction of the bridge was not maintainable either against the trustees of the New York and Brooklyn Bridge as a corporation, or against the trustees individually. Walsh v. Trustees, etc., 96 N. Y. 427.

The mere architect or builder of a public work is answerable only to his employers for any want of care or skill in the execution thereof, and he is not liable to third persons for accidents or injuries which may occur after the completion of such work. Mayor, etc., of Albany v. Cunliff, 2 N. Y. 165.

Contra.—Although the doctrine stated in the text is supported by such an array of authorities and has received the further indorsement of Mr. Mechem in his work on public officers, it has been doubted upon several occasions. And the doctrine that a public officer is liable for injuries sustained by a private individual, occasioned by the officer's neglect of duty, whether the officer owed him such duty specially or not, is sustained by several eminent authorities. See Hayes v. Porter, 22 Me. 371; Connors v. Adams, 13 Hun (N. Y.) 427; Adsit v. Brady, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 630; 40 Am. Dec. 305; Hover v. Barkhoof, 44 N. Y. 113; Johnson v. Belden, 47 N. Y. 130; French v. Donaldson, 5 Lans. (N. Y.) 293.

Although the statute regulating the inspection of beef and pork, imposes a penalty upon the inspector for neglect of duty, one moiety thereof to the use of the town wherein the offense shall have been committed, and the other to the use of the person suing for the same, yet a person injured by the inspector's neglect of official duty may recover damages sustained thereby in an action on the case. Hayes v. Porter, 22 Me. 371. See also Nickerson v. Thompson, 33 Me. 433.

2. Durand v. Hollins, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 451; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137; State v. Warmoth, 22 La. Ann. 1; 2 Am. Rep. 712; People v. Lewis, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 73; 1 Min. Insts. 237; Morrison v. McFarland, 51 Ind. 206.

See MANDAMUS, vol. 14, p. 143.

The authority to decide whether the exigencies contemplated in the Constitution of the United States, and the act of Congress of 1795, ch. 101, in which the President has authority to call forth the militia "to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrections, and repel invasions" have arisen, is exclusively vested in the President, and his decision is conclusive upon all other persons. Marton v. Mott, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 19.

3. Cooley on Torts 376.

The reason generally assigned is, that in the case of other officers, it is inconsistent with the nature of their

1. Legislative Officers.—Public legislative officers are exempt from personal liability for legislative action by them;¹ but where specific ministerial duties are assigned to them by law they are liable to persons sustaining injury because of the non-performance of such duties.² The Constitution of the United States and the constitutions of most of the States provide that members of Congress and of the respective State legislatures shall not be questioned in any other place for any speech or debate in either house, and shall be privileged from arrest in all cases except treason, felony, and breach of the peace, during their attendance at the session of their respective houses, and in going to and returning from the same.³ But an officer is not liable in an action for arresting a privileged person when his writ is regular on its face. It is his duty to serve such writ even though the privilege is claimed.⁴ The privilege of legislators can exist only while the house is in session, but it is considered to be in session notwithstanding adjournments, for short intervals for the functions that they should be made to respond in damages for failure in satisfactory performance. Cooley on Torts, p. 376.

1. Cooley on Torts, 376; Jones v. Loving, 55 Miss. 109; 30 Am. Rep. 508; Baker v. State, 27 Ind. 485; Walker v. Hallock, 32 Ind. 239.

The motives of members of council or the influences under which they acted, cannot be brought to nullify an ordinance within their corporate powers, duly passed in legal form at a meeting regularly convened. Freeport v. Marks, 59 Pa. St. 253. See also Buell v. Ball, 20 Iowa 282.

2. Cooley on Torts, 377. See Amperse v. Winslow, 75 Mich. 234.

3. U. S. Const., art. 1, § 6.

Provisions exempting members of the legislature from arrest and from the service of civil process while in attendance at the seat of government during sessions of the legislature, are found in nearly all the State constitutions, and in many of the States this privilege is extended to the members while traveling to and from the place where the legislature is held. Alabama Const., art. 4, § 14; Arkansas Const., art. 5, § 12; Michigan Const., art. 4, § 7; Missouri Const., art. 4, § 16; Mississippi Const., art. 4, § 19; Nebraska Const., art. 11, § 16; California Const., art. 4, § 11; 16 Am. Dec. 784. See also Cassidy v. Steuart, 2 M. & G. 437.

Construed Liberally.—In Coffin v. Coffin, 4 Mass. 1; 3 Am. Dec. 189, the court, by Parsons, C. J., said: "These privileges are thus secured not with the intention of protecting the members against prosecutions for their own benefit, but to support the rights of the people by enabling their representatives to execute the functions of their office without fear of prosecution, civil or criminal. I therefore think that the article ought not to be construed strictly, but liberally, that the full design of it may be answered." See also Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 168.

Courts do not notice ex officio the privilege granted legislators exempting them from arrest and service of civil process. Advantage must be taken of the same at the proper time and in the proper way, or it will be deemed waived. Prentiss v. Com., 5 Rand. (Va.) 697; 16 Am. Dec. 782; Chase v. Fish, 16 Me. 132; Gyer v. Irwin, 4 Dall. (U. S.) 107.

Giving bail is not a waiver of the privilege from arrest. Washburn v. Phelps, 24 Vt. 506.

The Massachusetts house of representatives has power to expel a member, and on such expulsion his privilege from arrest on mesne process ceases; and a court, in determining whether he was so privileged, cannot inquire into the reasons for expulsion, nor the question whether the member was duly heard before being expelled. Hiss v. Bartlett, 3 Gray (Mass.) 468; 63 Am. Dec. 768.

4. Cooley on Torts, 460; Carle v. Delesdernier, 13 Me. 363; 29 Am. Dec. 508; Chase v. Fish, 16 Me. 132; Sperry v. Willard, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 32; Secor v. Bell, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 52.

convenience of its members.¹ Neither does the privilege extend to the publication of slanderous matter uttered on the floor of the house.² Each house of Congress may punish its members for disorderly behavior, and, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member; and less than a quorum may be authorized to compel the attendance of absent members.³ And it has been held that imprisonment is a proper punishment to inflict either for disorderly behavior or for absence contrary to rules.⁴ The State Legislatures in general have the same powers in this regard as Congress.⁵ Legislative bodies also have the power to compel witnesses to appear and testify, and to compel the production of documents when the evidence is needed in a matter into which those bodies have jurisdiction to inquire.⁶

2. Judicial Officers—(See JUDGE;⁷ JURISDICTION)⁸—a. QUASI JUDICIAL OFFICERS.—It may be laid down as a general rule that a judicial officer acting within his jurisdiction is not liable, in an action for damages, for any judgment he may deliver.⁹ And for the purpose of exemption under this rule, an officer who acts judicially for the time being is considered a judicial officer, although he may also perform ministerial duties.¹⁰

1. Coffin v. Coffin, 4 Mass. 1; 3 Am. Dec. 189.

2. Stockdale v. Hansard, 9 A. & E. 1; 36 E. C. L. 13.

3. U. S. Const., art. 1, § 5.

4. Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 165; Anderson v. Dunn, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 204.

5. Burnham v. Morrissey, 14 Gray (Mass.) 226; 74 Am. Dec. 676; Wickelhausen v. Willett, 10 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 164.

The common council of a city has no power to commit and punish for contempt. Whitcomb's Case, 120 Mass. 118; 21 Am. Rep. 502.

6. See PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS, vol. 19, p. 249; Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 168; Burnham v. Morrissey, 14 Gray (Mass.) 226; 74 Am. Dec. 676; Wickelhausen v. Willett, 10 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 164.

But they cannot be compelled to produce evidence which will tend to criminate themselves. Emery's Case, 107 Mass. 172; 9 Am. Rep. 22. This case was decided with reference to the Massachusetts Bill of Rights. Compare In re Falvey, 7 Wis. 630.

7. Vol. 12, p. 2.

8. Vol. 12, p. 244.

9. See JUDGE, vol. 12, p. 32; Cooley on Torts, p. 408.

10. Wilkes v. Dinsman, 7 How. (U. S.) 89; Kendall v. Stokes, 3 How. (U. S.) 87; Gould v. Hammond, 1 McAll.

(U. S.) 235; Otis v. Watkins, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 339; Downer v. Lent, 6 Cal. 94; 65 Am. Dec. 489; Porter v. Haight, 45 Cal. 631; Green v. Swift, 47 Cal. 536; San José Gas Co. v. January, 57 Cal. 614; Gregory v. Brooks, 37 Conn. 365; Raymond v. Fish, 51 Conn. 80; 50 Am. Rep. 3; Billings v. Lafferty, 31 Ill. 318; McCormick v. Burt, 95 Ill. 263; 35 Am. Rep. 163; Carter v. Harrison, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 138; State v. Robb, 17 Ind. 536; Walker v. Hallock, 32 Ind. 239; McOskey v. Burrell, 55 Ind. 425; Spitznogle v. Ward, 64 Ind. 30; Elmore v. Overton, 104 Ind. 548; 54 Am. Rep. 343; Wasson v. Mitchell, 18 Iowa 153; Muscatine, etc., R. Co. v. Horton, 38 Iowa 33; Jones v. Brown, 54 Iowa 74; 37 Am. Rep. 185; Chamberlain v. Clayton, 56 Iowa 331; 41 Am. Rep. 101; Tiedt v. Carstensen, 64 Iowa 131; Caulfield v. Bullock, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 494; Lillenthal v. Campbell, 22 La. Ann. 600; Donahoe v. Richards, 38 Me. 379; Anderson v. Baker, 23 Md. 531; Oakes v. Hill, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 333; Van Deusen v. Newcomer, 40 Mich. 90; Wall v. Trumbull, 16 Mich. 228; Sage v. Laurain, 19 Mich. 137; Reed v. Conway, 20 Mo. 22; Pike v. Megoun, 44 Mo. 491; Schoettgen v. Wilson, 48 Mo. 253; Dritt v. Snodgrass, 66 Mo. 286; 27 Am. Rep. 343; Edwards v. Ferguson, 73 Mo. 686; Burnham v. Stevens, 33 N. H. 247; Waldron v. Berry, 51 N. H. 136; Edes v. Boardman, 58 N. H. 580; Odiorne v. Rand, 59 N. H. 504; McDaniel v. Tebbetts, 60 N. H. 497; Morris Tp. v. Carey, 27 N. J. L. 377; Seamen v. Patten, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 312; Vail v. Owen, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 22; Jenkins v. Waldron, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 114; 6 Am. Dec. 359; Van Steenberg v. Bigelow, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 42; Easton v. Calendar, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 90; Hill v. Sellick, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 207; Williams v. Weaver, 75 N. Y. 30; East River Gas Light Co. v. Donnelly, 93 N. Y. 557; 2 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 322; Thomas v. Wilton, 40 Ohio St. 516; Yealy v. Fink, 43 Pa. St. 212; Burton v. Fulton, 49 Pa. St. 151; Com. v. Haines, 97 Pa. St. 228; 39 Am. Rep. 805; Keenan v. Cook, 12 R. I. 52; Fenwick v. Gibbes, 2 Desaus. (S. Car.) 629; Rail v. Potts, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 225; Wilson v. Marsh, 34 Vt. 352; Henderson v. Smith, 26 W. Va. 829; 53 Am. Rep. 139; Fausler v. Parsons, 6 W. Va. 486; 20 Am. Rep. 431; Steele v. Dunham, 26 Wis. 393; Garnett v. Ferrand, 6 B. & C. 611; 13 E. C. L. 277.

The powers and duties of a fish inspector to inspect fish offered for sale in the city, and to destroy all such as are unwholesome and unsuitable to be eaten, are judicial in their nature and he cannot be held liable for the careless, improper, or erroneous performance of such duties. Fath v. Keoppel, 72 Wis. 289.

No action is maintainable against school directors by one who withdraws his children from school because such directors erroneously admitted colored children. Stewart v. Southard, 17 Ohio 402; 49 Am. Dec. 463.

This rule has been held to apply to arbitrators. Jones v. Brown, 54 Iowa 74; 37 Am. Rep. 185. And to grand jurors. Turpen v. Booth, 56 Cal. 65; 38 Am. Rep. 48; Hunter v. Mathis, 40 Ind. 356. And to tax assessors. Weaver v. Devendorf, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 117; Barhyte v. Sheperd, 35 N. Y. 238; Edes v. Boardman, 58 N. H. 580; Dillingham v. Snow, 5 Mass. 547; see National Bank v. Elmira, 53 N. Y. 49. Compare Auditor v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 6 Kan. 500; 7 Am. Rep. 575. And to highway commissioners. Sage v. Laurain, 19 Mich. 137; Waldron v. Berry, 51 N. H. 136. But compare Proprietors, etc. v. Champney, 2 N. H. 199.

An assessor is not personally liable for error in judgment in assessing the value of property. Ballerino v. Mason, 83 Cal. 447; but he is personally liable for assessing property of non-residents which is not taxable in that jurisdiction. Ford v. McGregor, 20 Nev. 446.

Allowance by a board of county commissioners, on the advice of able and competent attorneys, of claims which are not strictly legal, will not render them liable to the charge of corruption or forfeiture of office, where the allowance is honestly made upon a mistake or error of law. State v. Scates, 43 Kan. 330.

It is the settled doctrine in New Hampshire that highway surveyors and other town officers are not responsible in a civil suit for damages for acts done by them requiring the exercise of discretion and judgment in the discharge of their official duties, so long as they act in good faith and within the scope of their authority. But they are held to be liable in civil suits for damages done to individuals by their wanton, malicious, or fraudulent acts and for acts beyond their jurisdiction. Waldron v. Berry, 51 N. H. 136; Rowe v. Addison, 34 N. H. 306. See also Adams v. Richardson, 43 N. H. 312.

When selectmen are called upon to determine the amount of assistance furnished to a pauper within ninety days of an election, that he may refund the same in order to have his name inserted in the check list, and they, acting in good faith, determine the amount to be greater than the sum actually expended, and receive the amount so determined and pay it into the town treasury, they are not liable to refund the excess in an action brought by the person relieved. Brown v. Marden, 61 N. H. 15.

It has also been held to apply to overseers of highways in adjudging a person in default for not working as required. Freeman v. Cornwall, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 470; and to judges of elections in refusing to allow a person to vote. Bevard v. Hoffman, 18 Md. 479; 81 Am. Dec. 618; Wheeler v. Patterson, 1 N. H. 88; 8 Am. Dec. 41; Dwight v. Rice, 5 La. Ann. 580; Morgan v. Dudley, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 693; 68 Am. Dec. 735; Gordon v. Farrar, 2 Dougl. (Mich.) 411.

In Chrisman v. Bruce, 1 Duv. (Ky.) 63; 85 Am. Dec. 603, the court, by Duvall, C. J., said: "The courts of Massachusetts, and perhaps of some of

In order to be entitled to this protection, however, the officer must act within his jurisdiction,¹ and in good faith, with-the other States, have adhered to the doctrine of the English case, which decided that an action is maintainable against officers who pre-ide at an election for refusing the vote of a qualified voter, even though they may have exercised an honest and fair judgment on the question before them. This court has, however, adopted a more equitable and consistent rule and which more adequately protects such officers in the faithful discharge of their duties. In passing upon the qualifications of a person offering to vote, the judge of the election acts judicially and is not infrequently called upon to determine legal questions of great difficulty and doubt. To hold him responsible in such cases for a mere error of judgment by which a citizen may have been illegally deprived of his right to vote, would be unjust in principle and unwise in policy, for the natural result would be to deter honest and capable men from accepting an office attended with such hazards."

But in Massachusetts, an action lies against selectmen for refusing to receive the vote of a qualified elector, although they act without malice. Lincoln v. Hapgood, 11 Mass. 350; Bridge v. Lincoln, 14 Mass. 367; Capen v. Foster, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 485; 23 Am. Dec. 632; Larned v. Wheeler, 140 Mass. 390; 54 Am. Rep. 483. Or for omitting to put his name on the list of voters. Blanchard v. Stearns, 5 Met. (Mass.) 298. Or for erasing his name from the list of voters. Harris v. Whitcomb, 4 Gray (Mass.) 433. And the same doctrine is maintained in Ohio. Jeffries v. Ankeny, 11 Ohio 372; Monroe v. Collins, 17 Ohio St. 666.

A surveyor-general is not liable to an action for revoking the commission of a deputy surveyor, annulling a surveying contract, and refusing to receive and examine the field notes, where, without malice and in good faith, he exercises his judgment. Reed v. Conway, 20 Mo. 22.

In deciding on an application for a permit to sell intoxicating liquors, county commissioners act judicially and not ministerially only; therefore, a mandate cannot issue to compel the commissioners to grant such permit. State v. Tippecanoe Co., 45 Ind. 501.

See also Holliday v. Henderson, 67 Ind. 103; State v. Miami Co., 63 Ind. 497.

Quasi Judicial Functions Defined.—Mr. Bishop in his work on non-contract law defines quasi judicial functions to be those functions which lie midway between the judicial and ministerial. He goes on to say that "the lines such as are thus on their two sides are necessarily indistinct; but, in general terms, when the law, in words or by implication, commits to any officer the duty of looking into facts and acting upon them, not in a way which it specifically directs, but after a discretion in its nature judicial, the function is termed quasi judicial." Bishop on Non-Contract law, §§ 785, 786. See also Mechem on Pub. Off., § 637.

In McCord v. High, 24 Iowa 336, the court by Beck, J., said: "It must be borne in mind that the fact of an officer being clothed with discretion in the discharge of a duty as to the manner of its performance, or as to the control of circumstances and attending causes, necessarily arising in the discharge of such duty, will not give to it a judicial character. It is impossible to conceive of any ministerial duty to be performed by an officer that may not be, that is not accompanied by circumstances which require the exercise of judgment and discretion."

1. Gould v. Hammond, 1 McAll. (U. S.) 235; Taylor v. Moffat, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 305; Chamberlain v. Clayton, 56 Iowa 331; 41 Am. Rep. 101; Van Deusen v. Newcomer, 40 Mich. 90; Adams v. Richardson, 43 N. H. 212; Waldron v. Berry, 51 N. H. 136; People v. Chenango Co., 11 N. Y. 563; Mygatt v. Washburn, 15 N. Y. 316; Goetcheus v. Matthewson, 61 N. Y. 420; Williams v. Weaver, 75 N. Y. 30; Suydam v. Keys, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 444; Professor v. Secor, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 607; Van Rensselaer v. Cottrell, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 127; Wade v. Matheson, 4 Lans. (N. Y.) 158; Palmer v. Lawrence, 6 Lans. (N. Y.) 282; Fausler v. Parsons, 6 W. Va. 486; 20 Am. Rep. 431; Milwaukee Iron Co. v. Schubel, 29 Wis. 444; 9 Am. Rep. 591. See Freeman v. Kenney, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 44; Gage v. Currier, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 399; Rowe v.

out fraud or malice;¹ and the burden of proof is on the

Addison, 34 N. H. 306; Sawyer v. Keene, 47 N. H. 173; Barhyte v. Shepherd, 35 N. Y. 238.

Tax assessors who assess non-residents of the assessment district in which the assessor has authority act without jurisdiction and are liable to the party injured in a civil action. Suydam v. Keys, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 444; Mygatt v. Washburn, 15 N. Y. 316; Wade v. Matheson, 4 Lans. (N. Y.) 158; Palmer v. Lawrence, 6 Lans. (N. Y.) 282.

Trespass and not case is the proper form of an action in such cases. Agry v. Young, 11 Mass. 220.

1. Gould v. Hammond, 1 McAll. (U. S.) 234; Green v. Swift, 47 Cal. 536; Porter v. Haight, 45 Cal. 631; Gregory v. Brooks, 37 Conn. 365; McCormick v. Burt, 95 Ill. 263; 35 Am. Rep. 163; Carter v. Harrison, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 138; State v. Robb, 17 Ind. 536; Walker v. Hallock, 32 Ind. 239; McOsker v. Burrell, 55 Ind. 425; Spitznogle v. Ward, 64 Ind. 30; Elmore v. Overton, 104 Ind. 548; 54 Am. Rep. 343; Wasson v. Mitchell, 18 Iowa 153; Muscatine, etc., R. Co. v. Horton, 38 Iowa 33; Caulfield v. Bullock, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 494; Morgan v. Dudley, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 693; 68 Am. Dec. 735; Chrisman v. Bruce, 1 Duv. (Ky.) 63; 85 Am. Dec. 603; Patterson v. D'Auterive, 6 La. Ann. 467; 54 Am. Dec. 564; Bridge v. Oakey, 12 Rob. (La.) 638; Danahoe v. Richards, 38 Me. 379; 61 Am. Dec. 256; Van Deusen v. Newcomer, 40 Mich. 90; Dritt v. Snodgrass, 66 Mo. 256; 27 Am. Rep. 343; Pike v. Megoun, 44 Mo. 491; Reed v. Conway, 20 Mo. 22; Edwards v. Ferguson, 73 Mo. 686; Wheeler v. Patterson, 1 N. H. 88; 8 Am. Dec. 41; Rowe v. Addison, 34 N. H. 306; Waldron v. Berry, 51 N. H. 136; Williams v. Weaver, 75 N. Y. 30; Seamen v. Patten, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 312; Yealy v. Fink, 43 Pa. St. 212; Burton v. Fulton, 49 Pa. St. 151; Keenan v. Cook, 12 R. I. 52; Rail v. Potts, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 225; Wilson v. Marsh, 34 Vt. 352; Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 789.

A judicial officer of one grade must be presumed to have acted from bad motives where he knowingly and willfully renders a decision contrary to law, and proof of the act will, of itself, authorize the jury to presume the motive. Chrisman v. Bruce, 1 Duv. (Ky.) 63; 85 Am. Dec. 603. And in Eben v.

Wilson, 33 Md. 135, it was held that the fact that the inspectors of election differed from the voters, whom they had excluded, in political sentiments, might be considered by the jury.

Arbitrators.—The acts of arbitrators, though irregularly done, in all matters to which their jurisdiction extends, are performed in a judicial capacity, and an arbitrator cannot be held liable in a civil action for damages for an award alleged to have been made by him fraudulently and corruptly. Jones v. Brown, 54 Iowa 74; 37 Am. Rep. 185.

Judge of Elections.—A judge of an election is not liable for refusing to allow a person to vote, under an error of judgment, but is liable only when he acts willfully, fraudulently, or corruptly. Bevard v. Hoffman, 18 Md. 479; 81 Am. Dec. 618; Jenkins v. Waldron, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 114; 6 Am. Dec. 359.

Where the judges of election refused the vote of a male inhabitant maliciously and wantonly, the voter having all the necessary qualifications to vote, it was held that the judges were liable in an action against them, by the party whose vote they refused. Bernier v. Russell, 89 Ill. 60.

When a public officer is warranted and authorized by law in the performance of certain acts the fact that he acted maliciously will not make him liable. His motives cannot be inquired into. Moran v. McClearns, 41 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 289.

Contra.—Though the weight of authority is believed to support the statement in the text, still there are several responsible authorities which maintain that no civil action lies for the neglect of official duty, quasi judicial in its nature, however corrupt or malicious such neglect may be. See Wilson v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 1 Den. (N. Y.) 595; 43 Am. Dec. 719; Weaver v. Devendorf, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 117; East River Gas Light Co. v. Donnelly, 93 N. Y. 557; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 322; Steele v. Dunham, 26 Wis. 393; Turpen v. Booth, 56 Cal. 65; 38 Am. Rep. 48; Mechem on Public Officers, § 640.

Mr. Mechem in his exhaustive work on public officers referring to the cases cited in support of this doctrine, says: "These cases are believed to follow the better and the safer rule. If the action is really judicial, the immunity which adheres to judicial actions should be applied whether the officer sits upon the plaintiff to show that the officer acted maliciously and in bad faith.¹

3. Ministerial Officers.—A ministerial officer, acting within his authority and with due care, is not liable to any person who may be injured by his acts.² He is not liable for executing process regular on its face, though it be issued illegally or without jurisdiction, where the want of jurisdiction is as to persons or place;³

bench of a regularly established court or not. As has been said, if the action can be maintained by the allegation of improper motives, no litigant will fail to allege that they existed, and the public officer may constantly be called upon to defend himself from actions at law brought with motives fully malicious as those which are asserted to have inspired him. Public policy, it is believed, requires that all judicial actions shall be exempt from question in private suits." But the learned author seems to have mistaken the ground of decision in at least one of the cases which he cites as sustaining this point. In the case of Amperse v. Winslow, 75 Mich. 234, cited by him as sustaining this doctrine, the declaration alleged that the defendant willfully, wrongfully, and maliciously, and well knowing his duty therein in that regard, refused to vote, etc. But the court, by Long, J., said: "There is no claim made in the declaration that the defendant acted willfully and maliciously in this regard of his duty, except in that he refused to vote for and influence the other aldermen to vote for the approval of this bond after the same had been reported favorably by the committee, and after the city attorney had instructed the council as to its duty in the premises. And the fact that at the June meeting of the council it again refused to approve the bond without assigning any reason therefor; admitting these facts, it would not constitute a cause of action. The defendant may have acted honestly in refusing to vote for its approval, and it was a matter to be by him judicially determined."

True Rule.—The correct rule, however, is believed to be that laid down by the court by Wagner, J., in Pike v. Megoun, 44 Mo. 491. He says: "An action, then, does not lie against judges or magistrates, or persons acting judicially in a matter within the scope of their jurisdiction however erroneous their judgment, or corrupt and malicious their motives. But there is a limit to this judicial immunity. The civil remedy depends exclusively upon the nature of the duty which has been violated. When duties which are purely ministerial are cast upon officers whose chief functions are judicial and the ministerial duty is violated, the officer, although for most purposes a judge, is still civilly responsible for such misconduct. And the same rule obtains where judicial functions are cast upon a ministerial officer. But to render a judge acting in a ministerial capacity, or a ministerial officer acting in a capacity in its nature judicial, liable, it must be shown that his decisions were not merely erroneous, but that he acted from a spirit of willfulness, corruption, and malice. In other words, that his action was knowingly wrongful, and not according to his honest convictions in respect of his duty."

1. McOsker v. Burrell, 55 Ind. 425; Keenan v. Cook, 12 R. I. 52; Gregory v. Brooks, 37 Conn. 365.

2. Sample v. Broadwell, 87 Ill. 617; Wilmarth v. Burt, 7 Met. (Mass.) 257; Sage v. Laurain, 19 Mich. 137; Eagle Tp. v. Ely, 54 Mich. 173; Orr v. Quimby, 54 N. H. 590; Mechem on Pub. Off., § 661.

See also SHERIFFS—Powers, Duties and Liabilities; REPLEVIN, vol. 20, pp. 1089-1096, as to whether replevin may be maintained for property in the hands of an officer taken by a valid process.

A writ of retorno habendo in the action of replevin will not authorize the officer to take the property from the possession of a third person, who was not a party to the suit; and if the officer does, under color of the writ, take the property from such third person, he will be guilty of a technical trespass, for which an action will lie, but the measure of damages to be recovered against the officer would be simply for the trespass, and not the value of the property taken. Lear v. Montross, 50 Ill. 507.

3. Watson v. Watson, 9 Conn. 140; Cannon v. Sipples, 39 Conn. 505; Osgood v. Carver, 43 Conn. 24; Neth v.

but when jurisdiction over the subject-matter is wanting, the officer is liable,¹ as he also is where the want of jurisdiction

Crofut, 30 Conn. 580; Camp v. Moseley, 2 Fla. 171; Martin v. Walker, 15 Ill. 377; Davis v. Wilson, 65 Ill. 525; Henke v. McCord, 55 Iowa 378; Nowell v. Tripp, 61 Me. 426; 14 Am. Rep. 572; Clarke v. May, 2 Gray (Mass.) 410; 61 Am. Dec. 470; Penniman v. Freeman, 3 Gray (Mass.) 245; Pearce v. Atwood, 13 Mass. 324; Smith v. Shaw, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 257; Gardner v. Bain, 5 Lans. (N. Y.) 256; Savacool v. Boughton, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 170; 21 Am. Dec. 181; Parker v. Walrod, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 514; 30 Am. Dec. 124; Abbot v. Yost, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 86; Sheldon v. Van Buskirk, 2 N. Y. 473; Bradley v. Ward, 58 N. Y. 409; Taylor v. Alexander, 6 Ohio 144; Champaign Co. Bank v. Smith, 7 Ohio St. 42; Sprague v. Birchard, 1 Wis. 458; 60 Am. Dec. 393; Bogert v. Phelps, 14 Wis. 88; McLean v. Cook, 23 Wis. 364; Wilkinson v. Rewey, 59 Wis. 554; Mudrock v. Killips, 65 Wis. 622.

If, however, the officer has knowledge that the process is void he may refuse to execute it. Davis v. Wilson, 65 Ill. 525.

An execution fair upon its face is a protection to the officer in making the levy and sale under it, when nothing appears to indicate a want of jurisdiction in the justice who issued it. Young v. Wise, 7 Wis. 128; Twitchell v. Shaw, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 46; 57 Am. Dec. 80.

An officer who delivers property held by him under attachment to an assignee in insolvency of the debtor upon demand made while the assignment is in force, is not liable therefor to the attaching creditor in case the proceedings in insolvency are subsequently annulled for a want of notice to the debtor of the petition by which they were instituted. Penniman v. Freeman, 3 Gray (Mass.) 245.

In an action against an officer who has seized chattels on an execution by one who claims by previous purchase from the execution defendant, the officer must show the execution to be based on a valid judgment before he can dispute the validity of the alleged purchase on the ground that it was fraudulent as against creditors. Bean v. Loftus, 48 Wis. 371.

Where the action is by a third person who claims title to the property attached under a transfer from the attachment defendant, and that transfer is sought to be impeached as having been made in fraud of creditors, it then becomes necessary for the officer to show not only that he acted under a writ valid on its face, but also that the relation of debtor and creditor existed between the attachment defendant and the plaintiff in the attachment. Bogert v. Phelps, 14 Wis. 88.

An officer against whom an action is brought for forcibly entering the plaintiff's house, assaulting the plaintiff, and carrying away furniture, may show, in mitigation of damages but not to prove the entry lawful, that he entered for the purpose of making, and did, in fact, make, an attachment, although the attachment was unlawful by reason of the writ not having been returned into court. Paine v. Farr, 118 Mass. 74.

1. Smith v. Shaw, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 257; Suydam v. Keys, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 444; Champaign Co. Bank v. Smith, 7 Ohio St. 42; Camp v. Moseley, 2 Fla. 171; Taylor v. Alexander, 6 Ohio 144; Driscoll v. Place, 44 Vt. 252.

In Wilmarth v. Burt, 7 Met. (Mass.) 257, the court, by Shaw, C. J., said: "As a general rule, the officer is bound only to see that the process which he is called upon to execute is in due and regular form and issues from a court having jurisdiction of the subject. In such case, he is justified in obeying his precept, and it is highly necessary to the due, prompt, and energetic execution of the commands of the law that he should be so. See Stephens v. Wilkins, 6 Pa. St. 260. See also Wise v. Withers, 3 Cranch (U. S.) 331; Jones v. Com., 1 Bush (Ky.) 34; 89 Am. Dec. 605.

A deputy provost marshal, directed by his superior officer to arrest and punish persons not connected with the army, for retailing spirituous liquors, at their usual places of doing business, to soldiers, is not protected by such order from liability to the arrested party, for damages on account of such arrest, because such order is illegal. Griffin v. Wilcox, 21 Ind. 370.

When bonds are in the hands of a city comptroller in a shape to be negotiated, it is his official duty to keep them safely until authorized to dispose of them, and an unauthorized disposal is a violation of duty for which his appears upon the face of the warrant.¹ The question whether an officer who has notice aliunde of a defect in the process under which he acts, will be liable for acting thereunder seems to be a doubtful question; but with a preponderance of authority in favor of holding him exempt from liability.² He is also liable for the execution of process void because of the unconstitutionality of the law under which the process was issued.³ He is bondsmen are liable. Stevenson v. Bay City, 26 Mich. 44.

1. Hull v. Blaisdell, 2 Ill. 332; Tefft v. Ashbaugh, 13 Ill. 602; Parker v. Walrod, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 514; 30 Am. Dec. 124.

Trover will lie against an officer for taking chattels under a writ of replevin issued for the replevy of goods attached, when there has been no attachment in fact, and the person from whom the officer takes them holds them not under process but as owner. Driscoll v. Place, 44 Vt. 252.

2. People v. Warren, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 440; Underwood v. Robinson, 106 Mass. 296.

It is the duty of a sheriff to levy an execution regular upon its face, and it is no excuse for his omission that the sum specified in it varies from the amount for which the judgment is rendered. Parmelee v. Hitchcock, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 96.

A constable executing an attachment returnable more than four days after its date, is protected, although he knew the facts limiting the return of the process to four days provided that in other respects the process be good on its face. Webber v. Gay, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 485.

Under § 3732, Rev. Sts. Wisconsin, an action of replevin cannot be maintained in a justices court against an officer for property taken by him by virtue of a tax warrant, regular upon its face, even though he had notice of a defect in the tax proceedings rendering them void. But such action may be maintained against one who purchases the property at a sale made under the tax warrant. Power v. Kindschi, 58 Wis. 539; 46 Am. Rep. 652. See also O'Shaughnessy v. Baxter, 121 Mass. 515; Dunn v. Gilman, 34 Mich. 256; Watson v. Watson, 9 Conn. 140. These cases, however, do not seem to be exactly in point. The facts in these cases, do not disclose an irregularity in the process or want of jurisdiction in the court issuing the process over the subject-matter, but the knowledge which the officer had was merely of facts which evinced the want of a cause of action. See also Carter v. Clark, 28 Conn. 512.

Contra—Illinois.—In Illinois the officer is not protected in the execution of process though regular on its face, if he has knowledge of facts which render it void. McDonald v. Wilkie, 13 Ill. 22; 54 Am. Dec. 423; Guyer v. Andrews, 11 Ill. 494; Barnes v. Barber, 6 Ill. 406; Hill v. Figley, 25 Ill. 143; Leachman v. Dougherty, 81 Ill. 324.

Wisconsin.—The same doctrine is upheld in Wisconsin. Grace v. Mitchell, 31 Wis. 533; 11 Am. Rep. 613; Sprague v. Birchard, 1 Wis. 457; 60 Am. Dec. 393. See also Bogert v. Phelps, 14 Wis. 88.

In Parker v. Walrod, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 514; 30 Am. Dec. 124, the court by Nelson, Ch., said: "It is admitted to be the law that the process of a court of inferior jurisdiction will not protect the officer if the want of jurisdiction to issue the same appears upon the face of the process. And I apprehend, also, the same principle may be applied to a case where the want of jurisdiction arises from a fact of public notoriety which is legally presumed to be within the knowledge of the officer as well as others, and of which he is, therefore, bound to take notice." But this is merely dictum.

An officer is not protected by his process against an action for false imprisonment where the arrest is made after the defendant against whom the warrant is issued had, subsequent to the date of the warrant and prior to the arrest, entered into a recognizance to appear and failed to do so. State v. Queen, 66 N. Car. 615.

3. Astrom v. Hammond, 3 McLean (U. S.) 107; Woolsey v. Dodge, 6 McLean (U. S.) 142; Norton v. Shelby Co., 118 U. S. 425; Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 270; 61 Am. Dec. 381; Sumner v. Beeler, 50 Ind. 341; 19 Am. Rep. 718; Strong v. Daniel, 5 Ind. 348; Fisher v. McGirr, 1 Gray (Mass.) 1; Lynn v.

